1. The 10 facts which we listed previously prove that a record that has never been touched is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's for the passing year, 1924-25.

2. For 1925-26 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with its already famous Quality 52 has established again its superiority.

3. Among the big star names in The Quality 52 are Lilian Gish, Lon Chaney, Marion Davies, John Gilbert, Buster Keaton, Ramon Novarro, Mae Murray, Norma Shearer, Jacki Coogan, Eleanor Boardman, Aileen Pringle, Pauline Starke, Conway Tearle, Claire Windsor, Conrad Nagel, Mae Busch, Lew Cody, and many others.

5. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has one of the most important companies of permanent players in the world, grooming the box-office stars of Tomorrow. Watch for Sally O'Neill, Kathleen Key, George E. Arthur, Paulette Duval, among others.

6. A few celebrated novels among The Quality 52: Blasco Ibanez' "MARÉ NOSTRUM." "THE TEMPO.

9. Showmanship ideas. Erê's breath-taking gowns will soon be the sensation of all audiences. Plus Technicolor Sequences in many of The Quality 52. And other box-office angles.

10. The studio organization, headed by Louis B. Mayer and his associates Irving Thalberg and Harry Rapf, prove again in The Quality 52 a knowledge of what exhibitors want to get the crowds.

Mr. Jesse L. Lasky:

As per your instructions, I showed "Paths to Paradise" to an audience and checked the laughs as shown in the attached.

Incidentally, "Paths to Paradise" is unquestionably the best comedy we ever made, and probably THE WORLD'S GREATEST.

CAREY SERIES
AT BOX-

Here's the real low-down. In the final check-up compiled by Motion Picture News, the Harry Carey series of deluxe action dramas gets highest average rating of 84% over a period of six months. Each one has proved a veritable gold mine for exhibitors. Backed by the keen showmanship of Hunt Stromberg and his unusual ability to gauge the public taste, Harry Carey has been established as one of the two SOFT SHOES: I believe this one made the best hit of the series; has comedy, a good story, good direction and Harry handles the comedy to good advantage. Can recommend this series to any exhibitor. (Have bought the new series).

E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit, Union, Maine (M. P. World)

THE NIGHT HAWK: These Harry Carey pictures are A-1 from every standpoint. Very good entertainment that pleases 95 per cent, and you don’t have to put the second mortgage on your theatre to buy ’em either.

J. E. Ridgway, Lyric Theatre, Coon Rapids, Iowa (Exhibitors Herald)

BEYOND THE BORDER: One of the best that he ever made and went over good here. Has plenty of good comedy in it. Several fights and everything that makes a real snappy picture.

Giles Master, Strand Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico (M. P. World)

ROARING RAILS: Corking good picture. Pleased both young and old. Used toy train in lobby and windows and certainly helped. Use it. It’s good.

Walter Suckno, Regent Theatre, Albany, N. Y. (Exhibitors Herald)

THE LIGHTNING RIDER: These Carey’s Producers are giving us are the real stuff. Keep it up.

Lloyd Hollenback, Colonial Theatre, Paul, Idaho (Exhibitors Herald)

BEYOND THE BORDER: Another knockout for Carey. Story, star and direction are above criticism. These Careys are very dependable and any one can boost them. Appeal ninety per cent.

Frank G. Wotten, Park Theatre, Lebanon, New Hamp. (M. P. World)

SOFT SHOES: Here’s a good picture. Be sure and play it. Let’s have Carey make eight a year instead of four. If it’s a Harry Carey, it’s good.

Harry Van Noy, Riviera Theatre, Anderson, Ind. (Exhibitors Herald)

TIGER THOMPSON: All Carey features from Producers Distributing are very good and can be bought right. This one will please anywhere.

H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre, Alexandria, Minn. (Amusements)

First National

MILTON SILLS in "The MAKING of O'MALLEY"
A Real Box Office. This Earl J. Hudson Production with Dorothy Mackaill—is one of the best audience pictures in months. Editorial direction was by Marion Fairfax and Lambert Hillyer directed. Story by Gerald Beaumont.

CORINNE GRIFFITH in "The MARRIAGE WHIRL"

"THE LADY who LIED" with Lewis Stone—Virginia Valli Nita Naldi
An Edwin Carewe Production adapted from Robert Hitchen's story—"Snake Bite." Adapted by Louis Zellner and Madge Tyrone. A most intense and thrilling romance.
"The SCARLET WEST"
a Frank J. Carroll presentation
A great epic of the West—depicting the white man’s invasion and the conquest of the West. One of the year’s biggest. With Robert Frazen and Clara Bow.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE
"HER SISTER FROM PARIS"
Here’s a Knockout. From the story by HansKraly. This Joseph M. Schenck presentation. A Sidney Franklin Production with Ronald Coleman is a sure fire ticket seller.
WITH the purchase of chain after chain of theatres by Famous Players, and with the ready absorption by the public of a large block of stock, obviously issued for still further purchases, it is easy, without any advice whatever on the subject, to speculate pretty safely as to this concern’s objective. That, apparently, is the ownership of a fleet of theatres so large as to provide readily for production cost.

Selling, then, to these theatres—by Famous Players—becomes automatic; distribution is physical only; the real selling effort of the company’s distributing forces will probably take the form of franchise selling of Famous product to other theatres.

By the same token the independent producer—or whoever he is—of features, comedies, news reel, long and short subjects in general, can also dispose of this product to this large group of theatres—with a stroke of the pen and without selling cost. He can permit Famous or some other distributor to extend the distribution of his pictures to the other theatres.

“Other theatres” is a broad term. It includes theatres owned or controlled by First National, Loew (owning Metro-Goldwyn), Universal, Fox, Warners, and theatres still further to be acquired by these concerns; vaudeville theatres which, by the way, are destined to become more of a factor in the picture field; all the more important houses that may continue to fly the independent flag; and, then, the large army of small theatres in small communities that will, in all likelihood, always be independent and individually owned except insofar as they may join forces locally.

So there’s the situation. It’s a piece of business enterprise. If it isn’t wrong legally—and manufacturers’ chain stores are common in all fields—then it’s waste of breath to argue about it. It’s decidedly sensible to go to work.

Several years ago the producer dominated the picture market; then it was the distributor; today it is the theatre. And, curiously enough, with this new era—of the theatre—it looks like the producer is to come back to his own. He will be able to sell to large masses of theatres—and without that exorbitant distribution cost that has been the severest blow to production enterprise. Which may mean that we will have a large number of production units, independently active instead of being grouped, as they are today, under a few production banners.

Which, if it results in better pictures, will be the salvation of the whole business of motion picture entertainment. And this is the one and great point at issue—for each one of us.

So far as theatres are concerned—motion picture theatres—we don’t believe they are going to stay put. There will be new kinds of them, designed to catch the public eye, right along; and the better kind will put the old style in the shadow. So we can’t believe that control at any one period means continuing control—unless the controlling forces are continuously wide-awake and powerful. Plenty of new theatres are building right now. The theatre maps will change greatly in the next two years.

But at any rate product is the supreme thing. Product makes the show and the show draws the money. It matters not—so much, at least—who owns the theatre—or all the theatres—if the pictures don’t meet the public taste.

Who are the producers of the future to be? That’s the big question.

Milwaukee in British Eyes

The Kinematograph Weekly, London, which printed an extensive cable story on the Milwaukee Convention from its American correspondent, has some interesting comment in a recent issue on the meaning of the meeting.

After pointing out that the convention is likely to "provide some valuable hints" for the C. E. A.—the British exhibitors' association—when that body's delegation returns to England, Kine says:

"The other results of the convention have still to be demonstrated in practice, but they are also noteworthy, as far as they go, as evidences of a tendency on the part of the American exhibitor to make independence something more than a catchword. The test will come when convention theory is to be translated into trade policies and the important thing at the moment is that the American exhibitor seems to have chosen very sound theories.

"The definite establishment of common interests between the independent exhibitor and the independent distributor has the further advantage that it tends to increase the amount of independent production and to raise its standard, and for this reason also the institution of the Play Date Bureau is momentous."

Kine also declares that, when the British visitors return home, "their message to the British trade, founded on what they have heard and observed at Milwaukee, will be of real value in a definitely critical stage of the industry's development."

Newman Sees Radio Value

The following front page article from the Kansas City Star shows, in the opinion of Frank L. Newman, owner of the Newman and Royal theatres, Kansas City, the value of radio tie-ups with newspapers which have broadcasting stations:

"Waring's Pennsylvanias, the Victor record artists appearing this week at the Newman theatre, will be the feature attraction of the Newman Nighthawk program, broadcast by WDAF, the Kansas City Star, from the stage of the theatre tonight. The band will play a jazz program, interspersed with classical and semi-classical numbers. Other performers from various other theatres will assist in the program, which will start at 11:45 o'clock."

Better Projection

In connection with the "Greater Movie Season," a word ought to be said about better projection.

Of course, that division of the operation of a theatre is always deserving of care and attention, be cause all the efforts that go into the making, exploitation and exhibition of pictures are thwarted if the projection booth does not do its duty properly.

First-class projection is all the more important when the industry is engaged in a drive to cement new good-will with the public via better pictures, exploited on a nation-wide scale. We suggest to exhibitors that the putting of their projection equipment in first-class condition is a duty they owe the industry as well as themselves. In fact, it will constitute a valuable contribution to the success of the "Greater Movie Season."

Film in Churches

An interesting development was announced by Will H. Hayes in his speech before the International Rotary Convention at Cleveland last week. It has to do with motion pictures in the churches. Mr. Hayes says:

"Cooperating with a great foundation we are experimenting with motion pictures of a strictly religious nature for use in the churches. This is not ready for announcement, but our representatives have surveyed the entire field of films having to do with these subjects and from several hundred have selected a small group which are being shown in twelve churches in twelve different towns within a radius of 150 miles of New York over a period of twelve consecutive Sundays. The purpose is to learn by this experiment how the programs affect the congregation, whether attendance is increased, how useful a picture may be in religious service. If the results are as anticipated we will organize adequately the demand and the supply."

SMOOTH ENOUGH

B. O. has used no trumpets in presenting "Smooth as Satin," but they could well afford to have gone to such lengths in acquainting the public with the entertainment values of this crook melodrama. It is a corking good number, smooth of plot, smooth of characterization, smooth in its direction and acting. It is a crook story not cut according to the popular style. For one thing romance isn't used to bring redemption. These crooks are much more convincing. They reform when realizing the depths in which one of their ilk has descended. A ragged sneak thief, despondent and broken in health and spirit, shows them the way.

There is a lot of good sound incident here—and much surprise and suspense. The wise thieves play a game of 'cat and mouse' with much wiser thieves. This is one episode which is "different." The players act with conviction—everything they do—every gesture they make, being in perfect key with the plot and characterization. There is a great thrill in the climax—one realistic and exciting to the core.

It's just the kind of picture that appeals to the pulse. No mystery element to bother you. Every bit of action is clearly defined and the ingredients comprise surprise, suspense, humor, heart interest—and thrills. It's a story that never gets out of key. There may be coincidence and dramatic license, but you'll never notice them in the rapid and sustaining plot that is unfolded here. "Smooth as Satin" is the best crook melodrama we've seen this season.

BACK TO THE CAMPUS

ITHACA, the seat of Cornell University, has not figured as a production center since the Whartons made their departure. But the college town is coming back into the picture. George Walsh is going to make a college story and his locations will be shot on and adjacent to the Cornell campus. The grads of a few years back will remember George. As a member of Fordham's football team he distinguished himself by beating Cornell single-handed (or single-footed) with a seventy yard drop kick.
LOOKING THE PART

In order to create the proper impressions of naturalness and realism several directors have gone in for weird attires. Thus when John Ford picked up the megaphone for "The Iron Horse," no one could have distinguished him from one of the section hands among the extras. He wore an old stocking cap, an overseas trench coat, heavy goloshes and mittens. This was necessary because he and his cameraman were compelled to find parking space in a dirt trench or on the cowcatcher of a locomotive.

Rowland V. Lee is another who gets into atmosphere with his clothes. In directing "Havoc" he was called upon to execute several trench scenes. So he chose an impartial sartorial make-up—which was as weird as it was practical. He wore an English steel helmet, German field boots, American goloshes, a sweater from Scotland and French leather gloves.

A NEW ARRIVAL

The News gives its felicitations to Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Grahl of Des Moines, over the birth of a son, Charles Phillips Grahl, on June 10th at the General Hospital in the Iowa city. Mrs. Grahl is the Des Moines correspondent for the News.

BUSINESS OF DIETING

The ladies usually monopolize feature space when it comes to methods of regulating the diet—whether the work is reducing or gaining weight. But here is Larry Kent, just signed to a five-year contract by F. B. O. for the impressions he made in recent pictures, who has a different system entirely. He wants to increase his weight. Because he has evolved a good scheme we intend to give him feature space here. He will regulate his habits of thought, and eat his meals. His will be a mental diet. A list of annoyances which cause worry and which find no abiding place in the grey matter of the actor from now on are:

- Cross word puzzles
- Politicians
- Press Agents
- Keeping his eye on the ball
- Tripes
- Swearing off smoking.

BLARNEY FROM BLARNEY STONE

Colleen Moore has achieved one of her most cherished ambitions—she has kissed the Blarney Stone. During the three days spent in Ireland recently the star visited the Lakes of Killarney and Killarney Castle, kissed the celebrated stone, then went on to Dublin, where her appearance created quite a sensation. The sons and daughters of the Emerald Isle registered good, old-fashioned Irish sentiment in welcoming Colleen. Her husband, John McCormick wasn’t neglected either.
THE SUMMER PICKINGS

IT is generally understood throughout the trade that producers are "scarey" of releasing their top-notchers during the summer—that the best ones are held back until fall. While this is true to some extent producers have become more generous of late in releasing a first class allotment of better pictures. Perhaps the cooling systems being installed in the theatres have eliminated the bugaboo about slack summer business.

At any rate there have been several highly entertaining attractions brought forth this month. And July and August have yet to be paged. Several which have been shown are good enough for the banner month of the year. What about "Don Q.," "Are Parents People," "Smooth as Satin," "I'll Show You the Town," "Siege," "Old Home Week," "The Manicure Girl," "The Desert Flower," "Paths to Paradise," "The Light of Western Stars," and "Beggar on Horseback"?

The National Board of Review has given its asterisks to several of them the last three weeks of June. The week ending the sixth of June favored "The Desert Flower" and "How Baxter Butted In," the week ending June 13 favored "Kentucky Pride," a Fox entry, the sole choice, while the week ending June 20 favored "Night Life in New York." a Paramount picture, and another Fox, "The Fighting Heart."

These are all summer releases. Others are on the way. We hear great things about Metro-Goldwyn's "The Unholy Three," and the Arctic picture, "Kivalina of the Iceland," which comes to the Mark Strand next week. The latter is said to be another "Nanook." It features Eskimos, reindeer, caribou, whale and seal hunts—as well as shots of the Aurora Borealis in natural color and the freezing of the Arctic.

After this array we see no reason for crying "Wolf!" A good picture can draw the crowds in any season—but even if the crowds don't flock by the doorman they cannot be used for argumentative purposes in taking away from the film's merits.

POST-SHRINER TIDINGS

WITH the Shriners Convention in Los Angeles now a matter of historical record and pleasant memory certain features regarding screen people have come to light. Louis B. Mayer, production manager for M-G-M, was given a handsome gold cup for having entered the most magnificent display in the spectacular parade staged by the Shriners. Two electrically lighted floats and three "Ben Hur" chariots were entered and proved such an outstanding feature that the display was awarded first prize.

Over on the Warner lots Irene Rich is registering gladness. She was acclaimed the official queen of the Shriners during the convention and for an entire week was a very busy sovereign, being dined and feted continually. In the grand parade the queen in a gayly-bedecked chariot, received a continuous ovation throughout the line of march.

hen it comes to scooping newspaper space First National need not take a back seat for anyone. They put over the Philadelphi zoo story in which "The Lost World" was shown to the lions to discover the reactions of the jungle king to the prehistoric animals—a story that provided good "copy" for dozens of newspapers. They are at it again this week. The New York dailies carried columns of matter on the explosion of the U. S. Shipping Board vessel, Corvallis, rechristened the Mandalay for the movies. It was exploded the other day 150 miles off Sandy Hook to afford picturegoers a thrill in the new production, "The Half-Way Girl."

The Corvallis was built at a cost of $900,000, though sold to F. N. at a much smaller figure. According to Earl Hudson, the big mogul of production, the vessel and the incidental expenses mounted to $125,000. His motto was—"Darn the expense, go ahead!" So five tons of dynamite were placed in the bow and five tons in the hold of the ship, as well as 1,000 pounds of blasting powder in the superstructure. The Mandalay went the way of all things which are heavily dynamited.

The papers played up the revenue cutter, Seneca, firing a shot across the bows of the F. N. tug for leaving the scene of disaster before all the wreckage had been blown to pieces. The skipper of the tug was forced to stand by for twenty-four hours until the Atlantic was free of the debris.
A MILLIONAIRE EXTRA

Occasionally a son of wealth tired of registering Big Business as it concerns stocks and bonds, or becoming bored with living a life of ease, takes to the movies. A scion of wealth from Philadelphia graced a few pictures a season or two ago—and others have followed him to the studios.

However, Lloyd Pantages, has something in common with amusements—being the son of Alexander Pantages, the owner of the famous Pantages vaudeville circuit. He is seeking fame on the screen, and will make his appearance in support of Rod La Rocque in the star's new picture which is being filmed at the Cecil DeMille studios.

His qualifications? The casting man says he is dark, possesses dramatic ability and is an excellent dancer, having won cups on several occasions at the Cocoanut Grove at the Ambassador Hotel.

POLA CHECKED OUT

POLA NEGRI has checked out, bag and baggage, for Hollywood after spending several weeks in New York, following her arrival from Europe. She has returned to the studios to begin work on the Hergesheimer story—which deals with Mexico and Mexicans. The star with her brunette coloring should be well cast as a senorita of the land south of the Rio Grande. When she is finished with this script she will start screening the Michael Arlen story, "Crossroads of the World."

We hope these stories are vital and moving enough to be compatible with her charm and ability. Certainly the authors know their technique.

CONTAGIOUS ROMANCE

The above caption does not adorn a new photoplay. It is just to explain the fact that Cupid went on a rampage when "The Verdict" was being filmed. All sorts of romantic happenings developed that were not written in the script. First the director, Fred Windemere announced that he had married Belle Bennett, a film star. Then the news leaked out that Lou Telegen, one of the stars of the production admitted that he was married and the proud father of an infant son. Soon after this came the tidings that Paul Weigel, another featured player had married Mrs. Florence Stevens Harvey, a prominent Pasadena society woman.

REGISTERING JAZZ

THE New York Rivoli is going in for jazz. Hugo Riesenfeld, the impresario of the theatre, will call the conductors off their pedestals on July 12th—and order the orchestra to vacate their chairs. Ben Bernie and his band are to supplant them and establish jazz numbers. The orchestra ensemble will consist of twelve jazz musicians. However, the picture policy will not be changed.

Virginia Vance in a scene from an Educational comedy. At first glance one would think it a pantomimic version of the popular ballad "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles."

An intricate move in the Butts army manual, which Director Sedgwick is using to train Norman Kerry for "The Pony Express" (Universal).
Seider Advocates Reforms In Arbitration System

Seider Advocates Reforms In Arbitration System

M. P. T. O. A. Official Gives Views on Subject

S WEEPING reforms in the present Arbitration system are advocated by Joseph M. Seider, President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey and Chairman of the Standard Contract and Arbitration Committee of the M. P. T. O. A.

In an article written exclusively for Motion Picture News, Mr. Seider declares that the present system is litigation and not arbitration. He urges that distributor and exhibitor each be permitted to choose two persons to mediate differences that arise, with an umpire to be chosen if the four cannot agree.

He declares that "the present system must be thrown out in its entirety and a new system created." One of the points he stresses is that the exhibitor should in fact be allowed to name his arbitrators.

Mr. Seider's article, which reviews the history of Arbitration briefly as a preliminary to a discussion of the reforms he advocates, is of importance and interest to the whole industry. It follows:

"When first Arbitration was introduced into this Industry, it had no Exhibitor participation. The F.L.L.M. Club would meet, appoint a committee from among themselves, and this committee would summon the Theatre Owner. For failure to appear, the Exhibitor would be Hoyed, that is, he would receive no film from any F.L.L.M. Club members. If he did appear the committee would hear both sides and would render judgment and enforce the judgment through Hoy. The only recourse the Theatre Owner had was an appeal to the main body of the F.L.L.M. Club.

Then Mr. Hays came into this Industry. He quickly realized the dangers of such a procedure and forthwith set out to correct the same, but he did not go far enough.

"The Hoy System was dropped. I have no quarrel with Mr. Hoy personally—in fact, I think very highly of him. However, the System that bore his name, it seems to me was vicious. In fact, both Distributors and Exhibitors still call being put on a cash deposit as being Hoyed.

Fight For Participation Won

"William Brandt, then President of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, successfully fought for Exhibitor participation on the Arbitration Boards and Bernard Edelhertz, then Chairman of the Board of Directors of that body, successfully championed the elimination of the use of different contracts by each Distributor and the substitution of a contract, substantially the same as to form.

"That this contract is inequitable and too long is obvious.

"If I went into this matter at length in my report at the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America Convention at Milwaukee and will now confine myself to the subject of Arbitration.

"Much as I regret it I am compelled to say that predicated on the present contract, Arbitration in no form can be just or stand.

"And forgetting this one-sided contract, let us see how Arbitration works out.

"First, the Distributor appoints three members on the Arbitration Board, and the Exhibitor's organization in the zone out of which the film is shipped appoints three Exhibitors. If there is no Exhibitor's organization, then the President of the local Chamber of Commerce appoints the Exhibitor's members, and if there is no Chamber of Commerce, then the Mayor of the town or city in which the film exchanges are located makes the appointment.

"When a Board so constituted renders a verdict, it is final and not appealable.

"And if the Board finds for the Exhibitor and the Distributor fails to carry out the award, he loses his right to bring cases before the Arbitration Board. While if the Theatre Owner loses and does not comply with the award, he is practically forced into making payment; otherwise, he gets no film unless he deposits from one hundred to five hundred dollars with each of about twenty-one exchanges.

"Why should the Arbitration Board be both the Judge and the Sheriff? In most States a judgment rendered by an Arbitration Board can be filed with the clerk of the Court of Record and made a judgment of that Court and collectible through the Sheriff or other civil officer.

"In what way does the Exhibitor benefit if the Distributor loses his right to bring cases and the Distributor has failure to abide by the award of the Board in an Arbitration proceeding? On the contrary, the Distributor may be the gainer and the Exhibitor the loser; such as, in a case where an Exhibitor has a case against a Distributor, this Distributor instead of being punished, is helped because the case cannot be brought against him, as the rule works both ways.

"Cites Typical Case

"A case in point is that of the Producers Distributing Corporation when Arbitration under their contracts was refused by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce. Theatre Owners within the T.O.C.C. and outside the T.O.C.C., who had claims against the Producers Distributing Corporation, had to resort to Court or await adjustment of their claims until after the Producers Distributing Corporation was again in good standing.

"Often a Theatre Owner has been summoned to defend a case without merit. He is compelled to expend a large sum of money for railroad fare alone, and yet, even though he successfully defends his case, the cost is not returned to him. How many cases without merit were settled by the Theatre Owner in order to save himself the large expense involved in defending same?

"Yet, much is made of the fact that the Distributor loses his right to bring cases before the Arbitration Board. Let us check it up a bit. What does this mean? Why is the denying of the right of Arbitration to the Distributor considered by the Film Boards of Trade a punishment? Their very argument, that the Distributor must honor the award of the Board because he cannot afford to lose his right to Arbitration, is conclusive proof that the Arbitration Board and the System is a collection agency for the Distributor.

"Jurisdiction Questioned

"Arbitration—I have seen Saul Rogers refuse to arbitrate on the ground that the Board had no jurisdiction. The Board pow-wowed and decided it had no jurisdiction. The Exhibitors representing the Theatre Owner agreed that they had no jurisdiction. The Exhibitor was ready to proceed, he signed the submission (a paper waiving rights to trial by jury, making decision of Board final, etc.); thereafter, the Exhibitor members of the Board had jurisdiction. Through Mr. Rogers objecting for the Fox Exchange, the Distributors alone had no jurisdiction. But let this be—What do you think happened? After the Board decided that it had no jurisdiction. Attorney Rogers requested the Chairman (an Exhibitor appointed to represent the Exhibitor litigant) to make the decision real "Dismissed, because there is no contract," and the Chairman, an Exhibitor, said "Yes."

"How did the Board know there was no contract? They didn’t hear the case, and if they had no jurisdiction, how could they even reach a conclusion and dismiss the case on the merits?"

"Did you ever see Arbitration Boards in action?"

Two Parts—Part One and Part Two—Calendar Inquiries, Default Judgments, Trials, Court Crier and everything.

"The Arbitration Boards mimic a Court of Law. One Board wanted its members to wear black gowns, so that the Exhibitor should have the more respect for the Board.

"I am sure that Mr. Hays, Mr. Hess and Mr. Pettingjohn do not know these conditions."

"From cold figures, submitted by biased employees, these gentlemen are led to believe that the Theatre Owner generally is pleased with the present methods.

Critical Board Structure

"The very manner in which the Board is made up makes it the more improbable. By this statement, please, do not infer that the Arbitrators themselves are not honest. Such is not the case. The New York Territory has the good fortune of having a man of the highest type and character for its Chairman of the T.O.C.C. Arbitration committee. I refer to Sol Raives. Then there are Leon Rosenblatt, M. S. McNamara, Rudolph Sanders, Adolph Barr, and many others, all backed up by three men closely knit, representing the Distributor, who, we are told, discuss each case at their weekly Film Board of Trade meetings.

"Arbitrator—Mr. Webster says it means to act as an arbiter; to settle a dispute, as an umpire; mediate. And Arbitrator—Mr. Webster says—means one chosen by the parties in dispute to settle it; an umpire."

"Therefore, how can the present method which amounts to litigation be called arbitration?"

"Yes, I can agree with you to arbitrate our differences by leaving it to a number of people satisfactory to both of us. In such a case, one of the parties, for instance, says to the other, you and I must be bound and binding.

"But why should I be forced to arbitrate—no, why should I be forced to try a case before a Board appointed by an organization of which I am not a member? Why should the President of the Chamber of Commerce or the Mayor appoint my judges?"

"I don’t want even the organization of which I am a member to appoint my judges unless I specifically consent to it.

Exhibitor Side of System

"If an organization can obtain new members and hold its old ones only through control or domination of the Exhibitor’s side, then the system must be changed then the organization should not obtain new members or hold its old ones. Its method is a menace to every Independent Theatre Owner.

"An organization can get new members and hold its old ones by providing counsel to present in a logical, orderly way its members’ contents, by supervising the Arbitration System, by tabulating disputed issues, and advising its members in relation thereto.

"That splendid organization in the City of New York, the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, of which I am a member in good standing, has done much for the improvement of Arbitration procedure."

"It has definitely established that a Theatre Owner may withdraw his application for a contract at any time before its acceptance by the Distributor. In the event the Distributor would show whether the acceptance was mailed first or the withdrawal was mailed first. The time of mailing and not the time of receipt decides such a dispute. I believe this point should be stressed. I want every Theatre Owner, whether he be in Maryland, Oklahoma, Washington or New York; in fact, every Theatre Owner in the United States, to know this important ruling.

Praises O’Reilly Move

"Charles L. O’Reilly has obtained a 50% control of the Arbitration Board, that is, one month the trials are held in the Film Board of Trade’s Headquarters and one month in the T.O.C.C., when hearings are held in the Exhibitor’s headquarters a Distributor is the Chairman and vice versa. The Secretary of the T.O.C.C. is a Clerk of the Court, with the Secretary of the Film Board of Trade. The same goes for the stenographer. Yet, Mr. O’Reilly, although he is the only one for New York, is not finding a solution for the Theatre Owners of New York or the balance of the country—has not gotten down to the root of the evil.

"Nathan Burkan, counsel for the T.O.C.C., has said that the contract is unfair and too long and I understood that he has also said that if New York Arbitration is a model, then he is sorry for the balance of the country.

"Mr. O’Reilly’s good work is being wasted. You cannot correct conditions by trying to improve on the present system. It must be thrown out in its entirety and a new system created. You cannot use the present contract or Arbitration method as a model.

Right of Trial Sacrificed

"In arbitrating I am giving up orderly procedure in a Court of Law—my right to trial by jury—the reviewing of the facts of my case by a trained and learned judge and, therefore, want in fact to appoint the Arbitrators to represent my side. Film Men, let this sink in—REPRESENT MY SIDE. Members of Arbitration Boards are prone to be biased—you know you are biased and you tell the Exhibitor members not to be biased, there should be biased. The idea is—the exchange and the Exhibitor could not agree. The exchange picks three men and the Exhibitor picks three men to agree for them.

"I don’t want the right to challenge the Distributor’s choice. He should not have the right to challenge mine; but I want the right to choose my men.

"Let us each choose two persons to mediate and settle our disputes, and if they cannot agree, let them choose an umpire whose decision would be binding. Do not confiscate my property. Give me a short, clear, equitable solution.

"Then I will be happy to arbitrate; have confidence in the Arbitration Board, and be satisfied with its decision.

THAT would be Arbitration."
Twenty-Four Cities Organized For Greater Movie Season
Movement for Big August Drive Sweeps Entire Country

From eleven cities announced last week as organized to participate in Greater Movie Season, which movement was launched by the Will Hays organization, the number of cities now in line for the great national event which is scheduled for August has increased to twenty-four. The eleven last week included New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Kansas City, Atlanta, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Denver, Salt Lake City and New Haven. To these are now added Los Angeles, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Atlantic City, St. Louis, Albany, Butte, Memphis, Cleveland, Cincinnatti, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., Buffalo, and Montgomery, Alabama.

Exhibitors’ committees, embarking not only circuits, but single house operators, have been formed to develop campaigns in conformity with the general scheme, yet with such variations as are necessary to meet local requirements and to benefit the outer fields as well as the key centers.

That Greater Movie Season in Los Angeles this year will parallel last year’s success is certain through the whole-hearted cooperation of theatres, studios and every phase of the industry. It is realized that Los Angeles, in the national standard, Jack Retlaw, special representatives of West Coast Theatres, Inc., will be general manager of the campaign, working in conjunction with the Wampus Committee. A huge parade of stars has been arranged. Complete support of commercial interests is assured by the Chamber of Commerce.

It is expected that Greater Movie Season will open in Los Angeles during the last week of July in order that publicity accruing from the stars’ participation may be carried throughout the country in time to influence the coast-to-coast celebration.

Des Moines Drive Under Way

At a meeting of the moving picture interests in Des Moines, A. G. Stolte, Manager of the A. H. Blank enterprises who had been elected general manager of the Greater Movie Season campaign at a previous meeting appointed the following committees to assist him in the campaign: Board of Managers—Harry Hiersteiner, Herbert Grove, Harry Mitchuk, exhibitors, and W. Banford of the Metro Goldwyn exchange.

It was decided to start the advertising campaign actively on July 19th, opening Greater Movie Season on Monday, August 3rd, with a big street parade on Saturday, August 1st.

Because Minneapolis inaugurated the first cooperative drive, Northwest Go-to-Movie Week in 1922, from which the national season developed and exhibitors have learned its box-office value, an extensive campaign is looked for throughout the territory embracing all the Finklestein and Ruben houses and the membership of the Allied States organization, of which W. A. Steffes is chairman. Exhibitors’ meetings are now being set for a discussion of ways and means and the election of a general manager.

Atlantic City Meeting

Atlantic City joined the Greater Movie Season Campaign on Wednesday when every theatre in the city and a great many outlying cities, sent representatives to a meeting held at the Globe Theatre. Edward J. O’Keefe, Manager of the City Square theatre, was elected General Manager of the Atlantic City campaign; Alexander Strauss, Manager of the Colonial, vice chairman; William Ford, manager, Central Theatre, chairman of decoration committee; John Gillepie, chairman, publicity committee.

What is estimated to be a gift of more than $100,000 in bill-board space was presented to the Greater Movie Season Campaign at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Poster Advertising Association at the Hotel Tryon.

This association, headed by W. W. Workman of Richmond, Va., represents 1,600 bill-board plants throughout the United States, investigated thoroughly the plans of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., for Greater Movie Season and adopted a resolution calling upon all its members to contribute bill-board space to the various Greater Movie Season Committees throughout the country.

St. Louis Committees Named

Joe Mogler, President of the local Motion Picture Theatre Owners, was elected General Manager of the St. Louis Greater Movie Season Campaign at an enthusiastic meeting of exhibitors. Fred Brinkmeyer, general manager of the Skouras Circuit, will be assistant General Manager. The Finance Committee is as follows: George McKean, Chairman; Oscar Lehr, assistant manager; Eugene Freund, Henry Shearer, Harry Keplar, Hershel Stuart, Harry Greenman, Tom Wazny, Charles Strug, Fred Woolenber, William Goldman, Fred Cornwell, Mike Nast, John Karzin.

Spyres Skouras is chairman of the newspaper committee with the following associates, J. Hill, assistant chairman; William Goldman, Wm. Saal and H. Stromberg. Publicity Committee—Reeves Espy, chairman; D. Dygart assistant chairman; George Gabriel, Maurice Davis, Al Marks, Motion Picture World; W. H. Reeve, Charles Goldman, Claude McKeen, Harry Neimeyer, Jack Schultz, Chas. W. and Arthur Wade. Parade Committee; Fred Wohlenberg, chairman; Sam Koplar, Assistant Chairman; Harry Weiss, President Bert Hays, Thomas McKeen, J. Koening, Bessie Schuler; Dave Nelson, Wm. Shearer, Benj, Harris, Jos. Wagner, J. D. Hill, Harry Hynes.

Ten thousand dollars was voted for carrying on the campaign.

Albany Zone Active

Tony Veiller, of the Mark Strand-Lincoln Theatre, Troy, N. Y., was appointed general manager of the Greater Movie Season at a meeting of exhibitors from the Albany zone. Mr. Veiller, an ex-newspaper man, is considered the ideal choice. His election means that the campaign will go over one hundred percent. Meyer Schine, of the Schine circuit, and Mr. Smulley of the Smalley circuit were prominent at the meeting.

After a thorough discussion of the Greater Movie Season plan the principal exhibitors of Butte and Anaconda appointed the following committee to handle the drive; William J. Sullivan, Rialto Theatre, chairman and general manager; Merle Davis, Ansonia Theatre; William Woolfall, Peoples Theatre; George Buckmiller, Ansonia Theatre; Albert Nadeau, Blue Bird Theatre, Anaconda, R. C. Burns, Universal Theatre, Frank Murphy, Famous Players, and W. J. Honeman, Warner Brothers. Theatres represented on the general committee have pledged themselves to participate, and at a further meeting an advertising appropriation will be determined to put the season over in vigorous style.

Strong Baking in Memphis

A strong organization has been formed to handle Greater Movie Season in Memphis with Lloyd Dearth, of the Pantages Theatre as chairman and William A. Finney, of Loew’s State Theatre, secretary-treasurer. George Brown, of Loew’s Palace, Walter League, of the Strand, and Bert Jordan of the Majestic, comprise the board of directors, while members of the general committee are Joe McManus, Paul Zerilla, Tom Bahlc, Clark Porter, Tom Richards, and Fred Suzor, all prominent exhibitors in this territory.

A special committee of exchange executives working in Memphis, the exhibitors’ organization consists of A. J. Joyce, Pathe, chairman; W. E. Swpe, Universal, secretary-treasurer; C. E. Haiger, Famous Players, and J. L. Franeoni, F. B. O., directors. Little Rock, Ark., being affiliated with Memphis, a solid campaign is also expected there.

Cinematic work for Greater Movie Season is being done in Cleveland with a view to submitting a concrete campaign to theatre-owners, who will attend a meeting together with exchange managers, exploitation and publicity men. To add weight and prestige to the movement several prominent business men will be made honorary members of the general committee. Contracts have been established with local branches of the national organizations that have endorsed Greater Movie Season in letters to Will H. Hays. A canvass of important exhibitors shows them to be unanimously in favor of the season.

Carrying its slogan line with other key-cities celebrating Greater Movie Season in August, negotiations involving the lion's theatres and membership of the Greater Cincinnati Motion Picture Exhibitors are going forward to bring about an effective campaign. No general manager has yet been named.

San Francisco Optimistic

With profitable experience of previous Greater Movie Seasons, San Francisco theatres anticipate further success this August when the season will have behind it the fall weight of a national drive. Local and national leaders are formulating the subject of discussions when field-representatives of the Will H. Hays organization arrive this week. Meanwhile Herman Wobber, who was largely instrumental in putting over previous seasons is marshaling exhibitors.

$3,500 Budget Voted

A budget of $3,500 was voted for an extensive billboard and newspaper campaign to be started two weeks in advance. A street meeting was held Friday June 26 in the Hotel Sherry and the various committees necessary to put the campaign over were appointed and several western New York cities organized for the movement. H. Hays is getting the Hays office in New York has been in town getting the campaign under way. Buffalo is behind the idea 100 per cent., according to Mr. Michael and an extensive publicity barrage will be held down in this end of the state.

Radio Tells of Warners' Southern Invasion

WARNER BROTHERS are using the radio extensively to let motion picture fans know of their invasion of the southern exhibition field. The taking over of the houses in the south was broadcasted and in some instances the first day's operations under the new management were announced.

The southern theatres recently purchased by Warners include the Pastime, Covington, Ky.; the Lexington at Lexington, N. C., the Broadway, Charlotte, N. C., and the Ideal, Columbia, S. C. The concern also obtained a management option on the Lincoln, a Craver theatre, at Winston-Salem, N. C.

H. C. Farley was named general manager of Greater Movie Season in Montgomery, Alabama.

At the request of the bureau in charge of Greater Movie Season, National Screen Service has undertaken the production of two unusual trailers for exhibitor use as the season grows. Entertainment value has been aimed for and attained to such a degree that the trailers can be regarded as featurettes, one of 200 ft., and the other of 100 ft. Contrasting modern pictures with flashes from early efforts as Vitagraph's "License No. 13 or the Hoodoo Auto," produced in 1906, and Universal's "Going Straight" of 1910, with Mary Pickford and Robert Harron both stars, the presence of pageant and epic art is emphasized; shots of travel put over the idea that films bring the world to a patron's chair, while well-animed titles and cartoons stress the industry's financial importance.

The trailers are finely dressed with art titles, and a big demand has already come for them from key-cities where exhibitors have formed their Greater Movie Season organizations. National Screen Service conforms with other distributors in making their trailer offers available at cost, the 200 ft. trailer being $6.00 and the 100 ft. production, $3.50.

License Reduction Won for Kansas City

As a result of the combined effort of the Kansas-Missouri exhibitors the license tax has been reduced on theatres in Jackson County, in which Kansas City is located. The concessions were brought about by an appeal by the exhibitor body to the county court.

The old license scale called for an annual tax of $100 for all theatres of more than 100 seats and $50 for houses of less than 600 seats. The new order reads as follows:

"Upon each motion picture show in Jackson County, Missouri, given or conducted in a building in an inclosure in said county, the license tax therefore is hereby fixed and imposed in the sum of $5 per year for each $1,000 of value, or for any motion picture theatre shall be $25 per year or pro rata for a shorter period thereof, and that the maximum license tax for any motion picture theatre shall be $90 per year or pro rata for a shorter period thereof."

In and Out of Town

W. J. MORGAN, sales manager of Producers Distributing Corp., left Saturday, June 30, for Chicago and the principal exchange cities of the Middle West.

MAJOR H. C. S. THOMPSON, president and managing-director of H. C. S. Co., has returned to New York after a four weeks' visit to the Coast studios of the company where he has been lining up production plans.

SAM WARNER, of Warner Bros., is making a good many swings around to the various branch offices of the Warner organization in the interest of "get together meetings."

L. K. BRIN of Warner Bros., left last Saturday for his headquarters at Seattle, Wash., after a short visit at the home office.

Head of Canada Association Aids "Open Door" Program

Col. John A. Cooper of Toronto, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Allied Workers of Canada, representing the Hays organization in the Dominion, has just carried out an effective bit of co-operation with the New York Association of the industry in the distribution throughout the whole of Canada of the pamphlet called "The Open Door," which was prepared by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

This booklet deals with the organization of a Department of Public Relations in the New York office of the Will H. Hays body for the purpose of securing co-operation from the general public. In Canada a general invitation has been issued to editors, public men and others to offer criticism or suggestions that would lead to the improvement of the screen.

Brother of Adolphe Osso Dies in Argentina

E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has received word of the death of Joseph Osso, brother of Adolphe Osso, general manager of Paramount's French organization.

The death occurred in Buenos Aires, Argentina, where Osso had been acting as representative of the Society of Authors and Composers of France, of which his father, Oscar Osso, is president.
Customer Given Preference Over Universal's Own House

Dunsmoor Case Cited As Explaining Policy of "U"

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, recently faced with the alternative of withholding Universal product from a regular Universal exhibitor or seeing a newly acquired Universal theatre in the same town go without the Universal product, has come out, it was announced this week, in favor of the exhibitor, C. C. Dunsmoor, proprietor of the Legion Theatre, Marshalltown, Iowa. The Legion Theatre will continue to show Universal Pictures, while the Casino of Marshalltown, recently bought by Mr. Laemmle from Hostetler, must buy outside product.

This is announced by Universal as Mr. Laemmle's answer to queries whether or not his theatre acquisitions would bring hardships to regular Universal customers. Wherever this question comes up, the Laemmle forces have been instructed that "the customer gets the preference," the announcement says.

There are three theatres in Marshalltown: the Casino, the Universal house; the Strand, owned by the Blank-Balaban & Katz interests and the Legion. It was reported this week that A. H. Blank might build a new house in the town.

The Casino Theatre was taken over by Universal as a part of the Hostetler chain. That chain, the storm center of the Omaha territory, was being angled for by several big producers, and Universal bought in "self-defense" in order to keep from being frozen out of that territory altogether, according to statements made at the time of the purchase. Mr. Dunsmoor has been a Universal exhibitor for some time. When he realized that the Casino, his competing house, had become a Universal house, he sat down and wrote to Carl Laemmle, asking what effect the purchase would have on the Legion Theatre. The Universal chief answered as follows:

"To prove that neither you nor any other exhibitor need have any fear that the Universal has any desire or intention of harming you, I am prepared to offer you the Universal product for your house for the 1925-1926 season and I am prepared to say that I will continue to do this as long as you and the Universal remain in business if you are willing to meet me even a part of the way in the matter of price. The fact that Universal may or may not have an interest in an opposition theatre will make no difference. It will not deprive you of Universal pictures.

"I don't want to compete with you or with any other exhibitor who gives me a half-way decent 'break.' Universal has not deliberately invaded your town. The opposition theatre simply happened to be a part of a chain of theatres which I had to buy because Universal was frozen out of some of the towns represented by the chain of theatres. So, even if Universal should harm one of its own theatres, or a theatre in which it has an interest, by giving Universal pictures to you, I am ready to go through with it one hundred percent." As a result of this communication, a Universal representative visited Dunsmoor and arranged a contract for the Second White Picture's 1925-1926 product. Mr. Dunsmoor now says that he did not believe the contract would be approved by the Universal Home Office. True, the prices were somewhat higher than he had paid in the past, but still he was skeptical and questioned whether he would get the Universal product or not.

Upon receiving the contract he wrote a letter to Mr. Laemmle, praising him for his fairness. He also told the story to the local newspaper which printed laudatory stories of the deal.

Here is the letter Dunsmoor wrote to Mr. Laemmle:

"Dear Sir:—The other day I received your approval on your second white list contract I signed. The very day after the news was made public of your buying the Casino your representative called on me. I asked him: 'Why call on me now that Universal has a house here.' He replied that it made no difference, and as long as I had been running the product he would again offer me the '25 and '26 stuff. I, a little skeptical, said 'Sure, offer at a prohibitive price.' But he soon made it plain that the price was quite fair so I signed up, with this of getting an approved contract.

"In due time the contract came back, and, Carl, I want to thank you for your fairness in the matter, and I think I can make money on the price paid. Believe me with the line up I have now your managers will have to go some when I play the Dennys and Hoods."

"It may be of interest to you to read the news item in the local paper, and believe me Carl there is more truth in this paragraph than the picture magnates will admit openly.

"Again thanking you for your fairness and hoping you will prosper as you deserve I am

Sincerely yours,

"C. C. Dunsmoor,

"Marshalltown, Iowa.

"June 19, 1925.

"P. S. You will notice that I paid a very considerable increase over the rental of last year, but I did it for two reasons: I really am expecting a better year next year and I believe your four year national advertising is getting is entitled to an increase, and with absolute confidence that if business fails to increase that you will protect me. I don't care what I pay for service if we both can make money."

Here is the newspaper clipping from the Marshalltown Labor World to which reference is made in Dunsmoor's letter:

"The Universal Picture Corporation, who sometime ago bought the Casino Theatre, has lived up to Carl Laemmle's declaration that it does not discourage or hinder the competition of the independent exhibitor who has run his product by selling his next year's output of pictures to Mr. Dunsmoor of the Legion theatre.

"The situation is all the more interesting as the Universal products for the coming year are of exceptionally high quality and Mr. C. C. Dunsmoor, manager of the Legion theatre is to be congratulated upon his shrewdness in contracting for them. Also Carl Laemmle is to be congratulated for his fairness in allowing his product to the Legion theatre, even though he now will be compelled to run other pictures in his newly acquired house.

"The public may not be aware, but there is now a terrific battle going on in the picture industry, the larger firms trying to get control of the industry all through the country destroying competition and only too late will the masses realize that they will pay later to the trusts.

"For better pictures and fair prices the industry should keep competition alive, and if the small independent exhibitor plays square with the public the public will stand by them."

The following statement was given out at the Universal Home Office in connection with the Dunsmoor case:

"The same answer that Mr. Laemmle gave Dunsmoor, goes for all the other Marshalltowns in America. Universal is not in business in competition with its customers. It never was, it never will be. Mr. Laemmle will sell every theatre he has, as he said at Milwaukee, if he can get a square break in the bookings of those theatres and always assuming that the purchaser will take the team with the fat. He does not propose to sell the good theatres and be saddled with the unprofitable ones.

"If the theatre business is going to resolve itself into a producer-controlled situation, Universal does not propose to be left out in the cold because it did not take heed of the way the wind was blowing. But if independent exhibitors are going to hang on to their theatres; if they are going to fight, Universal will fight with them as it always has done and will spend every last dollar it has to maintain their independence and its own."
SPURGEON JOINS FOX NEWS
In Charge of Editorial Council

JOHN J. SPURGEON, newspaper editor and writer of wide experience, has become Chairman of the Editorial Council of Fox News, Motion picture reel of current events issued by Fox Film Corporation.

Spurgeon’s newspaper career began at the age of sixteen when he became a reporter on the Philadelphia Press, then edited by former Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith. Later he served on the Cleveland World, and returning to New York, became associated with the Mail and Express. Upon retiring from the city desk of that paper, he became telegraph editor of the New York Herald and he left there to join the Joseph Pulitzer staff on The World. He was in turn reporter, copy reader, night City Editor and acting Managing Editor of The World.

Spurgeon in 1915 returned to Philadelphia where for seven years he was Managing Editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and on the first day of January, 1923, became managing editor of the Washington Post.

To Urge Admission Tax Repeal
Removal Will Be Recommended at the Next Session of Congress in December

THE theatre admission tax will be among the levies which Secretary of the Treasury Mellon will urge for repeal before the Ways and Means Committee of the House when that body meets in October to work on the bill which it will introduce at the December session of Congress.

The proposal to repeal this and other taxes which carry the “war taint” is likely to meet with favorable action by the Committee and Congress as well, representatives of both parties having pledged themselves to remove the so-called “war measures” from the revenue bill.

Leaders in Congress are determined to pass a revenue law which will simplify matters for the taxpayer, and among the confusing sections which have been recommended for removal in the process of lightening the burdens of the income taxpayer is the admission tax. It is also among the group which has come into disfavor since it was introduced during the war period and is regarded an unpleasant reminder of war.

Much of the consideration given to the framing of a new bill will be directed toward relief for the individual taxpayer, a source from which bitter complaints over the confusing technicalities of the present measure have proceeded. It is believed in Washington that the removal of the admission and other small taxes will work for the benefit of the country generally, it being contended in some quarters that their repeal would be as welcome as a further lowering of the income tax.

Stars To Attend Jersey Meet
Record Attendance Expected at Convention to Be Held at Asbury Park Next Week

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, president of the State organization, and heads of committees in charge of the convention to be held at Asbury Park on June 29, 30 and July 1, declare that indications point to a record attendance of exhibitors at the sixth annual meeting of the New Jersey body.

Exhibitors from all parts of the state have signified their intention of attending the meeting, which the officers of the organization have planned on a more elaborate scale than anything attempted previously by the Jerseyites.

Among the leading features of the business program are President Seider’s report, National President Woodhull’s address, National Chairman of the Board of Directors Sydney S. Gable’s address, Milwaukee Convention, Bureau of Trade & Commerce, Play Dates, Greater Movie Season, Power Rate reduction, The Report on Arbitration by Leon Rosenblatt, and the elimination of duplication of dues are some of the important business features to be brought up at the business sessions of the convention.

To the entertainment schedule already announced there have been added several outstanding features. Among these will be the appearance of the forty-eight girls and Principals from Earl Carroll’s “Vanities,” and swimming and diving exhibitions by Olive Filer, Pentathlon champion and junior national 100 yard free style champion, and Ruth Thomas, member of the American Olympic team.

Martin J. Starr, who has many motion picture stars under his personal supervision, will present some of the screen’s biggest celebrities at Asbury Park convention. Tom Meighan, Johnnie Walker, Johnny Hines and Dagmar Godowsky have definitely promised to appear.

Among those who have accepted the invitation to be present are United States Senator Edward I. Edwards and Assemblywoman Mae Curty, sponsor of the New Jersey Sunday Opening Bill, and Nathan Burkan, counsel for T. O. C. C.

New Corporations Given New York Charters

Newly incorporated motion picture companies in New York state, filing the necessary papers with the secretary of state during the past week, included the following, the names of directors and the amount of capitalization, when stated, being given: Gramercy Productions, Inc., $1,500, A. Fischer, C. J. Mulligan, P. M. Trebitsch, New York City; Blum Productions, Inc., $25,000, G. Blum, M. Wellin, New York city; H. B. Forbes, Brooklyn.

Plan Winter Campaign on Daylight Saving

With many of the leading cities of New York state at odds when it comes to the question of daylight saving or standard time, motion picture exhibitors are quietly planning a campaign during the coming winter that may bring a resultant saving of thousands of dollars to them next summer.

At the present time seven of the larger cities of the state have daylight saving. Rochester, however, has an standard time, while Syracuse to the east, and Buffalo to the west, are on daylight saving time. It is expected that the exhibitors will organize for this campaign in the early fall and endeavor to bring about the adoption of some uniform law which will clarify the situation.

Policewoman Guests at A. M. P. A. Luncheon

Mrs. Mary Hamilton, New York policewoman, was the guest of honor and chief speaker at the weekly luncheon of the A. M. P. A. at the Cafe Boulevard, New York, last week. She told of other things of what she hoped to accomplish with “Lilies of the Street,” the production she has just finished supervising for F. B. O. Mrs. Hamilton expressed herself as being opposed to censorship in the industry, and advocated changes in the admission of children to the picture houses. She thought the children should be admitted under the supervision of a competent theatre hostess.

Following the luncheon a judo-jitsu exhibition was given by Miss Gourard, also of the Police Department, and her assistants.
Elliott Honor Guest at Luncheon
New Leader of Independents Pledges 100 Per Cent Cooperation With Play Date Bureau

Declaring that the independent organization will wage a hard-hitting, vigorous campaign to compel a square deal for the independent picture producers, exhibitors and exchanges, and pledging 100 per cent cooperation with the Play Date Bureau, Frederick H. Elliott, who recently assumed his duties as executive manager of the L. M. P. O. A., told members of the organization that their cause was bound to win "because we have right and justice on our side as well as the courage to fight," at a luncheon-meeting held in his honor at the Hotel Astor in New York last week.

The meeting ratified a proposal of the new executive to change the title of the organization from "Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association," which he said was unwieldy and not sufficiently broad, to "Independent Motion Picture Association of America."

The members adopted a resolution expressing the deep regret of the Association and its individual members over the death of Harry M. Berman, general manager of Exchanges for F. B. O., who died June 18th, at his home in New York City.

The Elliott welcome luncheon was presided over by Ben Amsterdam, of Philadelphia, as vice-president.

Mr. Elliott was the principal speaker. He declared his intention of conducting a vigorous offensive against the "Big Three" and their allies in the campaign to fight in the cause of the independents.

Paramount Founds Idea-Exchange
Claud Saunders Inventor of System for Exhibitor Co-operation in Planning Exploitation Campaigns

At an "idea-exchange" designed for the purpose of getting exhibitor viewpoints on all exploitation campaigns planned for their productions, has been established the idea-exchange, the invention of Claud Saunders, head of the Paramount Division of Exploitation, and is said to have received the endorsement of leading exhibitors in several territories where the plan is now in operation.

The plan was introduced by Saunders at the Paramount International Convention, when he advanced the opinion that prominent exhibitors in any territory would welcome the opportunity for an open discussion on the subject of exploiting and publicity Paramount pictures.

The idea has been developed and put into effect by having meetings of exhibitors at the exchange cities. The exhibitors are the invited guests of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The sessions last from two to three days, according to the number of exhibitors who attend.

The purpose of this system is to develop exploitation ideas which will apply effectively in all localities, as experience has shown that no iron-bound method of national exploitation can be successfully developed.

According to reports from Paramount the convention plan has worked out perfectly in every instance in which it has been applied. All of the conventions so far called have met with hearty response by the exhibitors invited to attend.

The usual program is to preview the current product, and those pictures in the Greater Forty available for screening. Following this, the convention discusses each picture individually, notes are taken, and when the exhibitors leave each is equipped with a thorough analysis of the pictures he is going to play, and a practical campaign for each picture worked out in detail, representing the combined experience of his and the other best exhibitor brains in the territory.

At the first of these conventions, held in the Paramount Kansas City branch under the direction of Earl Cunningham, local exploitation representative, William H. Wagner, Stanley Chambers, Glen Dickinson, Fred Press, John H. Plum, Fred Green, O. K. Mason, J. Earl Hayes, Harry Kiefer, Milton Feld, William Jacobs, and Frank Newman, Jr., attended. At the conclusion of the meeting the exhibitors sent Claud Saunders the following telegram:

"Please accept our thanks for the exhibition party given undersigned in Kansas City. We feel greatly benefited. We have been able to frame all our Fall campaigns from advance information furnished by you. Congratulations on the wonderful national tie-ups. Paramount has again taken an important step that more firmly than ever established its leadership."

After the meeting held in the Paramount St. Louis branch, R. E. Jarrett, Joe Hewitt, A. H. Whitney, O. E. Simon, C. L. Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. McCutchon, H. B. McFarland, C. E. Lilly, and J. J. Reilly sent the following wire to the Paramount home office:

"Consider exhibitors exploitation convention held here in St. Louis, with Mr. Gambrell, a huge success and of intense interest to the exhibitor. We look forward to next year's convention."

In Detroit the first meeting was so constructive that the exhibitors have asked Kenneth Renaud, exploitation representative, to hold similar meetings every other Wednesday.

One of the points that Claud Saunders has asked the representatives of his department to emphasize during these conventions is "that an exhibitor has an obligation to his public—to publicize his pictures so that the public may buy entertainment with the same assurance that they buy merchandise; knowing that they will get what they have been promised—to the end that public confidence will rest securely on the exhibitor's judgment of entertainment."
Loew Defines M.-G. Foreign Policy

Satisfied With Representation In England and France—Explains Purpose of Schiller’s Mission Abroad

A
X IMPORTANT statement on the the- natre policy of the Loew interests abroad was issued this week by Marcus Loew, president of Loew’s, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn. It follows:

“We recently became associated with the Gaumont Company in the operation of their exchanges and to assist in the management of their theatres in France. It was for this purpose that Mr. Schiller was sent abroad.

“We have no intention of erecting theatres anywhere in the world merely for the purpose of creating a competitive situation.

“Our purpose in this business is to improve it, and not to undermine other interests.

“We have no desire to build or own a theatre in any city which is adequately seated and properly equipped theatrically to present pictures as they reasonably should be exhibited. Indeed, we are not out looking for spots to build theatres at all, but rather to help the European public get the best entertainment if there are facilities for their getting it today.

tion taking an interest in exhibition throughout the world, that this industry can properly develop. That has been the experience in America, and we feel that the expansion of motion pictures abroad will come through progressive methods of presentation in adequate theatres.

“Where a foreign country is devoid of adequate houses, we shall attempt to convince local exhibitors that they ought to build proper theatres and we are ready to lend our resources to help build such theatres.

“Theatre owners abroad are capable of providing this amusement service for the public. We have no intention whatsoever of trespassing.

“I hope there will be no misconstruction of what I am saying. Our spirit is not competitive. Our desire is to keep hands off where things are recognizedly right. And to help with our resources and advice where they are admittedly wrong.”

Ohio Sunday Ruling Is Challenged

Petition in Error Filed with Supreme Court in Chillicothe Sabbath Closing Case

HE long legal battle against the motion picture theater owners of the city of Chillicothe, Ohio, started several months ago when it was decided in that city that Sunday shows must go, has taken a new turn, following the filing of a petition in error in the supreme court of Ohio on the part of the owners of the theaters.

The petition in error, which was filed, is entered in the name of Earl Myers, plaintiff in error, against the State of Ohio. Other grounds set forth in the petition in error are concerns with the warrants issued by the police and others arising in the legal part of the movie cases.

The appeal to the state supreme court was the direct outgrowth of a long fight in the Ross county courts against the showing of Sunday motion pictures in Chillicothe.

The fight was brought about by the ministerial association of the county in an effort to make the old blue laws hold good. The effort failed, following the closing of the city for one Sunday, after which the shows opened and other places were permitted to operate as usual.

The entire affair centers around Earl Myers, John Kaser, and Charles A. Smith, operators of theaters in the city. All were found guilty of violation of the Ohio law that was intended by Judge Hornbeck to read ‘guilty of exhibiting a theatrical performance on Sunday,’ which in the judge’s general charge was that a moving picture show is synonymous with a theatrical performance.

Judge Hornbeck, in his pronouncement, admitted that while the defendants took no part in selling tickets or operating the motion picture machine on the Sunday in question, yet he was present and he felt under these circumstances, the court must indulge in the presumption that he at least aided in the operation of a motion picture.

The men were fined $100.00 and costs in these cases and given suspended sentences of 60 days in jail each for operating their motion picture houses on Sunday. If they continue to operate on Sunday and the supreme court upholds the trial judge, they will be compelled to serve out the jail sentences. If they are given a clean bill of health in their appeal to the supreme court, they will escape other punishment. Indications are that they will take a chance and operate on Sunday.

North Carolina Elects Officers

Craver Made President at Wrightsville Convention—Spirit of Cooperation Prevails in Organization

D. CRAVER, of Charlotte, was elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina at the semi-annual convention held at Wrightsville Beach, June 23-24, and featured by an address from R. F. Woodhill, president of the M. P. T. O. A.

Many names were mentioned for the presidency but the executive committee, which had charge of the nomination of a slate of officers, finally narrowed the choice to two—Mr. Craver and Paul McCabe, of Tarboro, and the former was elected by vote of the delegates. Mr. McCabe was given the office of vice-president and F. A. Abbott was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Affiliation with the national organization was deferred for further consideration by North Carolina’s board of directors. They will hold further conferences with national officers before taking action.

A spirit of general co-operation prevailed throughout the entire convention and expressions of satisfaction were heard on every hand with the outcome of the Mil-waukeenee convention.

President Woodhill was cordially received when he spoke on the final day of the convention and was elected to honorary life membership as a token of appreciation. Sam Warner, of Warner Brothers, made one of the important speeches of the session.

The newly-elected board of directors follows:

Paul McCabe, Tarboro; Capt. C. L. Welch, Salisbury; R. D. Craver, Charlotte; Easier Myers, Wellington; S. S. Stevenson, Henderson; Fuller Sams, Winston-Salem; M. S. Hill, Asheville; Charles Pictquot, Pinehurst; A. B. Huff, High Point; J. A. Estridge, Gastonia; Claude Lee, Hickory; R. T. Wade, Morehead City.

The executive committee is composed of Messrs. Prequet, Stevenson, Sams, Welch and Hill. Pinehurst was elected as the mid-winter meeting place.
FORMATION of a bureau of Fair Play, as part of the M. P. T. O. A. Bureau of Trade and Commerce, was announced by Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Board of Directors, at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut, held at the Hotel Garde, New Haven, June 23.

The Fair Play Bureau, Mr. Cohen said, was effectively adjusting and settlement differences between theatre owners and distributors. The convention was one of the best attended in the history of the organization.

State President Joseph W. Walsh, one of the Regional Vice Presidents of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, presided.

Leaders at Convention
National Treasurer L. M. Sagal, and Mr. Cohen attended the convention together with George P. Aarons, Recording Secretary of the National Organization.

President Walsh rendered a report of the activity of the Connecticut Organization for the past year, reporting particularly on the legislative situation. Also an account of the Music Tax and arbitration matters. He spoke of the many adjustments that had been made for theatre owners by way of film and other service and the splendid cooperation they had given to the Post Office Department in its various campaigns. He told how the Postmaster General had showed the appreciation for this assistance in the recent Connecticut legislative campaign.

State Treasurer C. M. Maxfield read the financial report for the year, showing all obligations and commitments had been taken care of.

Sagal's Address
National Treasurer Sagal addressed his fellow Connecticut theatre owners on the national and state activities and urged the prompt action of both organizations. A committee was appointed to expedite the collection of these moneys in Connecticut.

George Stanton, City Passenger Agent of the New York Central Railroad, appeared at the meeting and spoke of the special tour that is being arranged from New York for the Los Angeles Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in June 1926 and gave a full itinerary of the trip, which met with much favor by those present.

Aarons Talks on Service
Mr. Aarons in his talk stressed the Public Service features of the theatre, showing the great progress that exhibitors had made along this line and urging a continuation and even greater interest in such efforts, pointing out the business dividends that accrued from such work. He spoke at length regarding the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors and pleaded that the strongest kind of support be given to them in the battle for independence.

Mr. Cohen spoke of the progress of the Board of Trade and Commerce inaugurated by the M. P. T. O. A. at the recent Milwaukee Convention and of the development of the Play Date Bureau. The Bureau of

Cohen Announces Fair Play Bureau
Connecticut M. P. T. O. For Adjustment of Exhibitor Complaints: Re-Elects Joseph W. Walsh at Enthusiastic Convention

Fair Play, he said, is doing excellent work in bringing about a better understanding between theatre owners and distributors. Two recent occurrences Mr. Cohen mentioned were of special interest. One, a theatre owner in the Southwest, Mr. Cohen said, was unable to secure any film for his theatre because of the opposition of producer-distributor houses. He communicated with the Board of Trade and Commerce and through the affiliated producing and distributing members, this theatre owner has been offered sufficient quality independent film for his own house. Another theatre owner in the Middle West advised that the prices he was being asked for independent film was so high it was impossible to contract for same. The Bureau of Fair Play took the matter up with the home office of the distributing company, one of their representatives was dispatched to gather the facts in the matter and an adjustment has now been made, one equally fair to the distributor and the theatre owner. Similar situations are being adjusted at this time in different parts of the country.

In this connection Mr. Cohen requested that theatre owners having similar complaints, or complaints on any score, communicate immediately with the M. P. T. O. A. and their grievances will be turned over to the Board of Trade and Commerce so help and assistance of a definite nature can be brought to them. Mr. Cohen urged all theatre owners to bring their matters to the attention of this Bureau as it welcomes the opportunity of serving them. He also discussed the Greater Movie Season asking all theatre owners to cooperate and help in this relation. He suggested that every theatre owner do his bit to make it the Greatest Movie Season for the entire Industry, including himself and the independent producers and distributors.

Every theatre owner present signed a pledge card for Play Dates and agreed to increase his business for the coming season with independents.

HARRY H. BUXBAUM JOINS FOX
In Charge of Metropolitan Sales

HARRY H. BUXBAUM, sales executive formerly associated with First National, has joined the Fox Film Corporation as head of the sales and distribution for the New York and New Jersey Territory. He will succeed Louis Rosenbluh, who will take a vacation before entering upon important executive duties with Fox which will be announced later.

He is a well-known in film sales circles. Before joining First National two years ago he was with Famous. He entered the film business with the old General Film Company. Prior to his connection with pictures he was a banker and was one of the organizers of the Harriman National Bank.

He is the new executive officer on the fourth floor of the Capitol Theatre Building, where the Fox sales force for New York City, Long Island and Northern New Jersey will be installed.

Italian Production At Crisis
Government Aid Sought in Effort to Meet the Foreign Competition

The motion picture industry in Italy, which had developed rapidly and had achieved a considerable measure of success, has, according to Commercial Attaché H. C. MacLean in a recent report to the Department of Commerce, been in the throes of a severe crisis on account of its inability to meet foreign competition, not only abroad, but also in the local market.

Italy possesses not only incomparable scenic advantages but also climatic conditions especially favorable to the production of films and at first had set an artistic standard that was exceptionally high as compared with the production of other countries. However, from the technical standpoint far more progress has been made elsewhere, where money was spent too lavishly which, with the lack of efficient organization that exists, accounts for the present crisis. According to an article recently published in La Tribuna the number of films produced in Italy is decidedly limited and is not more than about twenty per annum.

The same article emphasizes the strength of the competition that is being felt from the American industry which has reached an extraordinary perfection of organization and enjoys ample financial support while, at the same time, its local market is so vast that export business is a side issue and films can be sold abroad at prices which simply cannot be met. Furthermore, it is admitted that American films have a quality of freshness and originality which makes a strong appeal to the masses while, on the other hand, Italian films are somewhat heavy.

The Italians admit that they can only hope to succeed by improving the quality of their films to a point where they can compete, not only in the local market, but also abroad. It is evident that Italy alone does not present a sufficiently wide field to justify large productions, and even if foreign films were entirely excluded, the crisis would not be solved. Other markets must be exploited if the industry is to develop.

The Italian producers are again appealing to the Government to support their efforts, pointing out not only the necessity for protecting those who are dependent upon the motion picture industry, but also the importance of the film as a means of propaganda and of making known to the world what Italy really is. While no indication has been given as to the character of the aid that may be granted, it seems probable that the elements that have brought about the continued crisis will be carefully studied and an attempt will be made to put the motion picture industry in Italy on a sound basis.

Rembusch Heads Indiana Exhibitors

Frank J. Rembusch was elected president of the Indiana M. P. T. O. and member of the National Executive Board at the annual meeting of the organization held at the Clayton Hotel in Indianapolis. M. J. Doody of Indianapolis was elected secretary, and Harry Koch of Indianapolis, treasurer.

Several matters of importance were considered at the meeting. The buying of pictures from independent producers, those who are not acquiring theatres in opposition to their owners, was endorsed. The uniform contract was condemned as being unfair and inequitable, especially the arbitration clause. The meeting recommended the right to cancel pictures of poor merit, asked that producers do not serve non-theatrical performances and endorsed the general idea of Greater Movie Season.

Metro-Goldwyn Pictures for Sol Lesser Houses

One of the biggest individual deals in the history of the industry has been consummated between Sol Lesser, of West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn, whereby the entire Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product for 1925-26 will be played over the West Coast circuit.

There are 110 houses in the chain, and the deal is said to have involved over a million dollars in rentals. Joseph Goldberg, of West Coast, co-operated with Mr. Lesser in closing the contract.

Mr. Lesser, commenting on the deal, said he considered the Metro-Goldwyn output as being among the finest produced, and added that, in his opinion, 10 or 15 out of the 52 are worthy of being played for long runs at $2 top.

In many instances the Metro-Goldwyns will be given week runs in towns like Berkeley, Stockton, San Jose and Fresno. This was stipulated in the contract.

Yeggs Slay Patrolman Aiding Treasurer

Patrolman Patrick McGovern, who was escorting Treasurer George Haney of Loblinder and Frantz Pantheon Theatre, Chicago, was shot down and killed while defying three bandits who escaped with $4,000, two days' receipts of the theatre which the attorney and policeman were taking to the bank.

This is the seventh policeman shot down in the performance of his duty in the last sixteen days and the authorities are making extraordinary efforts to apprehend the murderers. The Pantheon Theatre has suffered from robberies twice before within the last year, once when the safe was blown and once when Treasurer Haney was kidnapped in a taxi and relieved of the money he was conveying to the bank.

Alfred H. Varley Dies After Long Illness

Alfred Herbert Varley, veteran producer and theatre manager, died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., June 22, following an illness extending over seven weeks.

Varley has been prominently identified with the theatre for over forty years. He

$300,000 Suit Filed in Ohio Against Film Board and Others

JOHN RONWEBBER, owner of the State Theatre, Akron, Ohio, has filed suit in the Federal District Court at Cleveland for $300,000 against five distributing companies, charging them with conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Mr. Ronwebber is president of the Trade, Pathe Exchange, Skibboll Gold Seal Prod., Progress Pictures Corp. and the Ohio Educational Exchange. Ronwebber asserts that these companies conspired to cancel film contracts because of his refusal to accept certain pictures.

This is the first suit filed in Ohio as a protest against the operation methods of the Film Board of Trade and the Arbitration Board. Other cases of similar nature are about to be filed in Ohio, it is reported.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Film Board of Trade, stated that he was awaiting the petition from attorneys in Cleveland. After its receipt, he expected to issue a statement.

Lewis Inerarity, of Pathe, said he had no knowledge of the case except from published stories, and therefore would make no comment. At Educational inquiries were referred to Mr. Pettijohn.
ANY motion picture theatre owners in New York state will probably be more or less affected by the new State Standard Building Code, which will become operative on July 1.

Along with the adoption of the new Standard Code, the issuing of the certificates of compliance with the law, which has been done by the state labor department, will fall to the lot of the New York State Troopers after July 1, except in certain specific instances, where the Industrial Commissioner will still be called upon to enforce the Code, make the inspections, and issue the certificates.

While the new Code will probably affect none of the more modern houses in the state, it will probably have a direct reaction upon the smaller theatre that is run by an irresponsible owner. One of the principal features of the new Code provides that on and after July 1, no place of public assembly will be permitted in a building any part of which is used as a garage, dry cleaning establishment or other type of occupancy that may be deemed hazardous by the industrial commission.

Owing to the fact that there are 28 cities in New York state which have their own enforcing authorities, the State Troopers will have nothing to do with the enforcement of the provisions of the Code in those places. The State Industrial Commission, however, will furnish copies of the new Code to these cities at once and will look to the cities themselves to see that the Code is enforced to the letter. These cities are: Amsterdam, Auburn, Beacon, Canandaigua, Cohoes, Cortland, Dunkirk, Fulton, Gloversville, Hornell, Ithaca, Jamestown, Johnstown, Kingston, Lackawanna, Little Falls, Middletown, Norwich, Olean, Oneida, Oneonta, Oswego, Plattsburg, Rensselaer, Rome, Saratoga: Springs, Sherrill, and Watervliet.

In 25 cities in New York state, the building code of the city itself may be said to supersede the state code. This has come about through the enactment of legislation within the past year to exempt such cities from the standard building code. These cities include New York city, Albany, Binghamton, Buffalo, Elmira, Lockport, Long Beach, Mount Vernon, Newburgh, New Rochelle, Niagara Falls, Poughkeepsie, Rochester, Schenectady, Syracuse, Troy, Utica, Watertown, White Plains and Yonkers.

The Industrial Commissioner himself will enforce the new state code in Batavia, Cornwall, Geneva, Olean, Gloversville, Goshen, Hudson, Mechanicville, North Tonawanda, Oneida, Ogdensburg, Port Jervis, Salamanca, and Tonawanda.

The New York State Troopers will enforce the new Code in all towns and villages in the state where there is no authority to enforce a building code.

The provisions and regulations governing projection booths are not changed in the new Code. While considerable space has been given to such matter, the section itself has been taken, unchanged, from the general business law of 1913, and fitted into the Code.

Other provisions specify that exits must be not less than 44 inches in width, and that each floor of a theatre must be provided with the following number of exits: not less than two where the capacity is from 100 to 500 persons, not less than three where the capacity is from 501 to 700, and not less than four where the capacity is 700 persons or more. The aggregate width of exits on any floor must be not less than 36 inches to each 100 persons capacity. Capacity is determined by the number of fixed seats plus allowances of one person for every three square feet where standing room is possible. In case benches without arms between seats are used, their capacity must be figured on the basis of not more than one person to each 18 inches in width. In cases where fixed seats are not provided, such capacity must be based on one person for each six square feet of floor area.

Where exit stairs from any floor terminate on the main floor, then the aggregate width of exits on the main floor shall be increased so as to provide for not less than 100 per cent of the capacity of such stairways.

Not more than 14 seats will be permitted in any row extending from one aisle to another, nor more than seven in any row extending from an aisle to a wall. Theatres using printed programs must print thereon a diagram of each floor showing the location of the exits.

Some latitude is permitted by the code which provides that where strict adherence to the conditions set forth work an unnecessary hardship, the party affected may petition the Industrial Board for a modification as provided in section 30 of the Labor Law.

Copies of the new Code are being printed and will be available soon for general distribution.

FAMOUS Players-Lasky Corporation has paid over $14,300,000 in dividends since 1919.

According to a letter to stockholders:

The greater part of the inventory is composed of negative and positive films. After a picture is finished it is carried on the books at actual production cost, including an allowance for overhead. Of this cost 80% is allocated to the United States and Canada. Within three months after a picture is released 60% of the inventory cost allocated in this country is written off, and at the end of a year 90% is written off. Foreign countries are assigned 20% of cost, a portion of which is written off in first year. The entire cost of a picture is written off by the end of the second year.

At the end of March, 1925, inventory totaled $15,450,000, of which $7,650,000 represented residual value of pictures already released; $5,225,000 represented completed pictures not released; $1,950,000 represented work in process, supplies, etc., and $600,000 represented rights. Against the above item of residual value of pictures released there is an estimated unplayed business of $19,150,000, or a ratio of one to two and a half. A large part of this sum is represented by signed contracts with exhibitors.
F.P.-L. Buys Out Wilmer & Vincent

Large Chain Acquisition Expected to Be Followed by Others—Theatre Map Changing Rapidly

THOUGH official announcement has not yet been made, it is understood on excellent authority that Famous Players-Lasky has purchased the important Wilmer & Vincent theatre chain, comprising 16 houses in Pennsylvania. The consideration involved is placed at $4,500,000.

This is the second large chain purchased by Paramount within recent weeks, the other being the Gordon circuit in New England. It would not be surprising if Famous Players also took over at least one other large circuit shortly—perhaps more.

The Wilmer & Vincent Pennsylvania chain comprises the following theatres: Colonial, Rialto, Lyric and Orpheum, Allentown; Colonial, Bethlehem; Orpheum and Colonial, Enston; Colonial, Victoria, Majestic, Orpheum, Capitol and Strand, Harrisburg; Capitol, Hippodrome and Ralph Temple, Reading.

Negotiations were closed also for the erection of a Paramount theatre in Birmingham, Ala., to cost $1,500,000, with seating capacity of 3,000. The building will include stores and will be located at Third avenue and Eighteenth street.

In New York State, circuit activity continued. The Geneee Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., which operates a chain of seven houses in Western New York, has bought the site of the Community Theatre in Batavia. It is expected the present building will be replaced by a theatre and hotel. The company is negotiating for four more houses upstate.

Nikitas Dipon, president of the Geneee concern, said the Batavia purchase was the first step in a plan to have fifty houses in the circuit by January.

A. H. Schwartz, prominent Brooklyn exhibitor, will, it is reported, build a number of theatres in Long Island towns, Huntington, Freeport and Corona among them. He has already announced new projects for Fluilong and Avenue U. Brooklyn.

The Schwartz chain at present includes the Fourragut, Albornare, Merrick Rialto, New Linden, Kingsway, and Century. He built the Gramatan in Mount Vernon, N. Y., which was later taken over by Loew.

Out in the Middle West, the Gary Theatre Co. is building a 3,000-seat house to be known as the Palace, at Gary, Ind.

The Comerford Amusement Company, whose chain now includes about a hundred theatres, has awarded the contract for the erection of a new theatre in Hazelton, Pa., to seat 2,700. Comerford is also building a 1,600-seat house in Old Forge, a suburb of Scranton.

The sale was announced this week of the Hippodrome Theatre, Williamsport, Pa., at a reported price of $255,000. The purchase was made by a real estate dealer for interests whose identity was not disclosed. It is believed, however, that he was netting for a corporation operating a chain of theatres. The new owner will take possession July 15.

The house seats 1,200.

Considerable building is going on in San Francisco. The newest announcement is of three houses, two of which will be Class C and the other Class A. The latter will be built by Anthony Milani for Gold Leaf-Cari-tasino at Mission and Oliver streets. Rieg Bros. have let the contract for a small theatre on San Bruno avenue. A new $300,000 theatre will be built for Samuel Levin near Polk Street and Broadway. There will be 20 stores and apartments in the structure.

A new theatre of Moorish design will be erected immediately on Polk, north of Green, San Francisco, at a cost of $350,000, it was announced by J. R. Miller and T. L. Pfueger, architects. The owners are T. & D. Junior Enterprises, Inc. Nesser Brothers, associated with T. & D., in the operation of this and other theatres, including the Royal on Polk Street, are owners of the Castro Theatre, one of the principal neighborhood houses, which will celebrate its third anniversary on June 22.

The various associated interests in this enterprise, operating in some districts with another large circuit headed by Robert A. McNell and E. H. Emmick, own altogether close to 50 theatres in Northern California. Occupying a lot of 100 x 150 feet, the theatre will seat 1,750 persons. Its frontage will be taken up by the entrance, flanked by two modern shops.

Many German Producers Active

Ufa, Westi and Other Leading Producers Are Planning More Extensive Programs Than in the Past

By Heinrich Franckel of Berlin.

In my last article I gave all noteworthy particulars about the forthcoming Ufa productions which amount to as many as 33 for the first half of this season. Here are some details about the other German companies’ plans of productions:

Next to Ufa, one of the biggest German concerns and naturally the one enjoying most international (within Europe) connections is Westi Film Co., a company which is well known to be backed by capital of the Stinnes who was by far the richest of the German industrial magnates. Westi has several producing units at work in different European countries. In Berlin Victor Jun sen has been booked on a long term contract. In Paris (where the company operates with Pathé) a film “Virtuоз” (taken from the play by Charles Méré) has just been started, produced by Robert Pequi and starring the well known French character player Nicolas Volin.

This season’s first Pathé-Westi production was “Yokaste,” taken from the famous novel by Anatole France and directed by Chard. The next one will be called “The Cat’s Carrier” (adapted from Jules Verne’s story produced by Viktor Turechansky). The next on the list will be produced by Henri Fes corny, the story having been taken from H. Hugo’s famous novel “Les Misérables.”

As to Westi’s Italian productions, the first one, a Sonya Gallone picture, has been finished already. It will probably be called “Riding Through Flames.” Apart from that, Westi have a producing unit of their own in Sweden. The firm is called “Nordwesti,” and they have just started production of “Jerusalem.” Selma Lagerlöf’s famous story, V. Hemberg is directing the film; Conrad Veidt and Jenny Hasselquist are playing leads.

Another one of the big German film concerns is “Phoebe Films” which handle all Middle European productions in this country and who are lately also strongly going in for the exhibiting side of the business, controlling close to 30 big theatres already in this country. This company too has several production projects at work and they will turn out some twenty pictures within the season. Most of them will be big modern features, such as “Der Leibgardist,” taken from the famous play by Ferenc Mohar. Walter Neumark (producer of Caligari), is directing the film, and Maria Corda (known in the U. S. A. from the Austrian production “Moon of Israel”) is playing lead.—Luciano Albertini, the well known stuntist, who has been connected with Phoebe Pictures for four productions. The producers of the other films are Fred Sauer, Carl Wilhelm and Robert Dinesen, the authors: Walter Jonas and Curt T. Braun.

As to the independent German producers, special mention should be made of Hans Neumann who is adapting “Casanova” on a very lavish scale, and of Carl Grane who has just finished for Stein Films a big modern feature called “Jealousy,” and is now handling Ufa.

One of the best known German stars is Henry Porten, who is starring in three or four big modern productions of his own company.

Another highly renowned German star and stuntist is Harry Piel, who is co-operating with Gaumont of Paris and who is also going to produce the play lead in at least three or four big productions in the course of the year.

The Vienna Pan Film Co. is just embarking on a big adaptation of the famous opera “Der Rosenkavalier,” by Richard Strauss. The film is directed by Robert Wiene, the producer of “Caligari,” who has above been mentioned to be booked for Famous films later on in the season.

Joe May, one of the most famous of the German producers, has finished his biggest and most ambitious production, called “Texas Farmer.” The world rights of the film, although it is an independent, have been sold to Pathé, who furnishes four productions. The producers of the other films are Fred Sauer, Carl Wilhelm and Robert Dinesen, the authors: Walter Jonas and Curt T. Braun.

The picture will, however, not be released before the fall. In the meantime, Joe May will probably go to America to have a general look round.
Jay Marchant Will Make Columbia Series

President Joe Brandt and production manager Harry Cohn of Columbia Pictures have engaged Jay Marchant to make a series of six new Perfection Pictures for them. These six in the order of their release dates will be "Fighting Youth," "The Speed Demon," "The New Champion," "The Great Sensation," "A Fight to a Finish" and "The Handsome Brute."

William Fairbanks will be the star of the series, while the feminine leads will be taken care of by Edith Roberts, Lotus Thompson and Phyllis Haver. Other screen players who will take parts in the pictures are Lloyd Whitlock, Pat Harmon, Tom Carr, Frank Hagney, Johnny Fox, William Norton Bailey, Marion Court, Bob Kortman, George French, Bert Appling, Florence Lee, Tom Ricketts, Robert Bolder, Jack Britton and Al Kaufman.

Wesley Ruggles will direct "When His Love Grew Cold," the first of the Laura Jean Libbey novels to be put on the screen by F. B. O. The script is being prepared by Gertrude Orr and casting will be started as soon as it is finished. It is expected the picture will go into production within the next two weeks. Several others of Miss Libbey's novels are to be filmed by F. B. O.

Whitman Bennett to Make Ten for Arrow

Whitman Bennett will sponsor only ten of the pictures of the Golden Arrow franchise instead of twenty-four, as recently announced in error.

Fox Rebuilds Branch Offices

Increased Business Makes Larger Quarters Necessary in Many Cities

In anticipation of the greatest year in the history of the Organization, Fox Film Corporation is planning the rebuilding and reconstruction on a large scale of many of its branch offices throughout the country. Five new exchange buildings will be opened in a short time, two present offices will be rebuilt entirely and a new building will be erected for the New York exchange.

Fox has acquired a site in 44th street between Eighth and Ninth Avenues for the erection of a modern film building to house the sales and distributing organizations for the New York City, Long Island and Northern New Jersey territory. Plans have been drawn and the actual construction of the building will be rushed so that it will be ready for occupancy by January 1st. The building will be three stories in height and of fireproof construction throughout. New branch buildings which are nearing completion will be opened shortly in Philadelphia, Atlantic, Charlotte and Detroit. Plans are now being drawn for a new exchange building in Albany on a site recently purchased. In Philadelphia the Fox exchange has outgrown its present headquarters at 1815 Vine street and the new building will be located at 2318 Vine Street.

The next Fox exchange to move into its own building will be the Charlotte office, now located at 213 South Church Street. On July 15th Manager B. S. Bryan and his staff will occupy the new exchange at 506 West Fourth Street.

The Atlanta office in charge of George Allison is another exchange that is to be given its own building. The Georgia workers will move from their present location at 111 Walton Street to the new exchange at 114 Walton Street about July the first. The new Detroit exchange, to be located at 66 Sibley Street, is being rushed to completion. Manager Frank Drew will move his office from its present location at 159 East Elizabeth Street to the new building on October 1st.

In Milwaukee, where previously there was only an office for the city salesman, the new exchange opened this year has been completely reconstructed and is now in operation at 721 Wells Street with Manager John Lovin in charge. This office will serve the exhibitors in the vicinity of Milwaukee and also many of the Wisconsin towns formerly handled through the Chicago exchange.

The Cincinnati office, located at 514 Elm Street with Manager Rudolph Kneepkens in charge, has been altered and reconstructed so that the enlarged space will be ample to take care of the increased business in this territory.

Goulding Adapting 'Boheme' for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Edmund Goulding, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director who formerly specialized in writing original scenarios and adaptations for the screen, is writing the photoplay version of "La Boheme," in which Lillian Gish will star for the M-G-M organization.

Goulding recently completed "Sun-Up," one of his first directorial efforts, and has been induced by officials of the studio to lay aside the megaphone long enough to fill the important assignment of writing a scenario for "Boheme," which the company announces is to be made on an elaborate scale.
Charles Beahan Departs for West Coast

Charles Beahan, production manager of Producers Distributing Corporation has left for the west coast where he will spend several weeks conferring with production units now at work on new product for the 1925-26 schedule.

On his way to Los Angeles Beahan will stop off for a visit with the De Mille production forces on location in the Grand Canyon in Colorado, where the opening scenes of “The Road to Yesterday,” De Mille’s first personally directed production under his new independent arrangement with Producers will be taken.

“The Road to Yesterday” is an adaptation by Jeanie Macpherson and Beulah Marie Dix from the stage play by Beulah Marie Dix and E. G. Sutherland. In the cast are Joseph Schiklunka, Jetta Goudal, Vera Reynolds, William Boyd and Julia Faye.

Gertrude Short Signed for Ray Picture

Chadwick Pictures Corporation has engaged Gertrude Short for an important role in the second Charles Ray picture for that company, Jerome Storm who directed “Some Puinkins,” Ray’s first vehicle, will also direct the second, under the supervision of Joseph De Grasse. Gertrude Olmstead has the leading role opposite the star.

Dale Fuller Joins Theda Bara Cast

Dale Fuller has been assigned a character role in “The Unchastened Woman,” in which Theda Bara will return to the screen for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. Miss Fuller gained considerable prominence for the role she played in “Foolish Wives.”

“Sea Beast” to Be First Barrymore Vehicle

A STORY of the whaling industry called “The Sea Beast” will be the first vehicle in which Warner Brothers will present John Barrymore. The story substituted for “Captain Alvarez,” a romance laid in South America and previously announced as the first Barrymore would do under his new contract, is an adaptation of “Moby Dick,” Herman Melville’s celebrated tale of the whaling trade in New England in the period of 1840. The scenario is being prepared by Bess Meredyth. Millard Webb will direct the production, which Warners announce will be staged on an elaborate scale.

Metro-Goldwyn Shift Field Executives

In preparation for the improved handling of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer’s heavy output for the coming season, Metro-Goldwyn has made a number of changes in the personnel of the field executives.

C. E. Almy, former branch manager at Cleveland has been appointed district manager in charge of Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati with headquarters at Cleveland. Walter J. Brandt, Cincinnati manager, has been transferred to Cleveland as branch manager, and E. J. McIver has been appointed manager of the Cincinnati branch.

Chadwick Program Progressing

Four of Seventeen Features for New Season Completed: Four More in Work

With four of the seventeen features which Chadwick Pictures Corporation has announced for next season finished and four more now in production, E. E. Chadwick, head of the company who is supervising the making of the pictures, estimates that the entire schedule will be completed in the late fall. The entire lineup will be made in Los Angeles.

Those pictures which have been completed are "Some Pun'kins," in which Charles Ray is starred; "American Pine," and "Blue Blood," both George Walsh starring vehicles; and Larry Semon's feature comedy "The Wizard of Oz," which was completed some time ago and has already had pre-release runs in several key cities.

Semon is now at work on "The Perfect Clown," which is to be his second feature for Chadwick. It is being directed by Fred Newmeyer, who directed many of Harold Lloyd's comedies. Dorothy Dwan, Oliver Hardy and Kate Price are the players who have been engaged to date for the cast in support of the star.

Thea Bera, who will return to the screen as a Chadwick star in "The Unchaste-ened Woman," from the play by Louis K. Anscombe, is now doing the final scenes on the picture under the direction of James Young. Immediately upon completion of the current work, Young will start production of "The Cats," in which Lionel Barrymore is to be starred. The adaptation will be written by the director.

Charles Ray is now at work on his second vehicle, as yet untitled. It is being directed by Jerome Storm, who made "Some Pun'kins," with Gertrude O'Neil in the role of leading lady.

Five Warner Pictures in Work

Five New Companies Start Production: Eight of the Specials Completed

Five new companies have started production on Warner Brothers pictures so far this month, bringing the total up to seven features in production for the 1925-26 schedule. Eight of the forty specials on the program have already been completed.

"The Easiest Road" is a comedy by Lewis Milestone and has in the cast Marie Prevost, Clive Brook, John Patrick, Charles Conklin and Claude Gillingwater. Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore are the principals in "His Majesty Bunker Bean," and Kenneth Harlan is featured in "The Ranger of the Big Pines."
Lloyd Comedy Release Date Set

HAROLD LLOYD'S latest comedy for Pathe "The Freshman" has been definitely set for National release on September 20th. That date was decided upon as it inaugurates the football season. The Lloyd comedy depends largely upon football sequences for its laughs. The picture is said to be the most personal of Lloyd's work. John Grey, Sam Taylor, Ted Wilde and Tim Whalen prepared the script for "The Freshman" and both Sam Taylor and Fred Newmeyer, who were jointly responsible for such Lloyd successes as "Hot Water," "Girl Spy" and "Safety Last."

F. B. O. Enlarging Studio to House Added Units

The F. B. O. studios in Hollywood are being enlarged to take care of the increased production activity called for in the releasing schedule of 64 features which the company has announced for next season.

Among the alterations which are now being undertaken at the plant are the combining of stages one and two into one large space, added dressing-rooms, new electrical units, and the enlargement of the property and costume departments. It may be necessary to build another large stage, but action on this matter has been delayed until the increased facilities of the present alterations have been tested.

Julian Solomon in Charge of Davis Publicity

Julian Solomon, well known in the film industry, in which he has served as an exhibitor, salesman and advertising specialist, has been appointed director of advertising and publicity for Davis Distributing Division.

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as “Poor.” The second column gives the number who considered it “Fair”; the third the number who considered it “Good”; and the fourth column, those who considered it “Big.” The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of “Poor” is rated at 20%; one of “Fair,” 40%; “Good,” 70%; and “Big,” 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together; and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion, are averaged up and eliminated.

Book and Cosmetic Tie-ups on "The Great Divide"

Charles Glickauf, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, attracted attention to the showing of "The Great Divide" when this picture played recently at the Strand theatre in Evansville, Ind., by tying up three book stores, two drug stores, three music stores and the public library and its nineteen branches with the showing.

Copies of the book were featured in the window displays contributed by the book stores, while cosmetics were featured by the drug stores. Copies of the song "West of the Great Divide" were prominently exhibited by the music stores, and the piece was also featured in the program at the Strand throughout the week. Art cards and stills were posted in the library and its branches.

Four thousand three hundred pay envelopes printed with an announcement of the showing were distributed by thirty factories and three leading department stores, and 1,000 heralds were given away on the streets. Extra space was taken in the papers, and the town was lavishly posted. There was also a special lobby display.

Frankness of "Greed" Told in San Diego Campaign

"Greed" recently played at the Pantages theatre in San Diego, Cal., and was given a brief but vigorous campaign confined to the press and to a special lobby display. The entire campaign exploited the brutal frankness of the picture, and characterized the production in all ads appearing in the press as a photoplay entirely different from the usual run of pictures by reason of its thorough-going realism.

Eight oil paintings were placed on display in the lobby and a twenty-four sheet cutout was mounted above the marquee for the first time in the history of the town.

Three-sheet and six-sheet cut-outs were used inside the lobby, and the town was liberally posted.

Photographs of the audiences which turned out for the opening night were used in the press on the following day.

H. W. Lawrence, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, and Manager J. S. Rice of the Pantages theatre, cooperated on this campaign.

"Dressmaker From Paris" Given Double Display

Prior to the opening of "The Dressmaker From Paris" at the Palace theatre, Fort Worth, Manager Barry Burke had a show window built in the foyer, which was a replica of the window display arranged by the local merchant cooperating on the style show staged in connection with the photoplay. Everything in the theatre display was on a miniature scale, with tiny models dressed in gowns, duplicates of those originally used in the shop windows. Even the hunt painted display cards and cut-outs were copied in miniature. This proved a real novelty, which netted both theatre and merchant valuable publicity.

With the aid of the ladies' ready-to-wear shop, an interesting style show was put on, with three models appearing twice daily, exhibiting the latest in feminine apparel.

In addition to the window display, the merchant's newspaper advertising carried special mention of the style show in connection with the picture, a point played up strongly in the theatre's ads.

Imprinted Paper Napkins for "Charley's Aunt"

Something simple, inexpensive and remarkably effective in the way of exploitation was put over by the Isis theatre in Topeka, Kansas, for their showing of "Charley's Aunt."

In a special arrangement with all of the big popular downtown restaurants, the theatre management furnished their week's supply of crepe paper napkins in the center of which was a regular advertisement for "Charley's Aunt" printed in blue ink, in newspaper style.

This idea may be duplicated anywhere as the restaurant managers will be glad to get a supply of napkins free of charge.

Manager G. P. Banniza of the Strand theatre, Nashville, Tenn., gave "Playing with Souls" (First National) a strong lobby display as illustrated here. Cut-out heads and banners were used to good advantage.
"The Lady" is Campaigned During Mothers' Week

Manager R. Browning of the Olympia theatre, New Haven, booked "The Lady," for showing during Mothers' Day Week, because Miss Talmadge in this production, plays a mother role yet depicted on the screen. He prepared a special program of "Mother's Musical Memories" in connection with the feature. Among the songs rendered were "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "The Old Gray Bonnet," "When You and I Were Young," and "Home Sweet Home," sung by Helen Marek.

He advertised the program as suitable for Mothers' day in his newspaper advertising, in the program and in the official score card for the New Haven Baseball Exhibition Co., Inc., of the Eastern League.

Rowley Gives 'White Moth' Thorough Campaign

Some clever exploitation work was done by Manager Jack Rowley of the Royal theatre, Laredo, Texas, in putting over "The White Moth." Manager Rowley is one of those live and wideawake movie managers who believes in resorting to all kinds of stunts to attract the attention of his patrons and get them into his playhouse.

He did not stop at mere exploitation of the picture through trailers and slides on the screen of the Royal theatre, augmented by lithographs and stands of pictures inside and outside the spacious lobby, but he enlisted the services of a famous Mexican jazz orchestra that was passing through Laredo from Mexico to begin an engagement with the Keith circuit to take a place on the program during the afternoon showing on Sunday, and also a famous Mexican soprano to do the prologue stunt in the evening. These added attractions served to interest the movie-goers in the program at the Royal theatre on the opening date.

Manager Rowley arranged an attractive cut-out of Barbara LaMarr, put a pair of massive white and gold wings on the cut-out and had it connected with a motor taken from an oscillating fan, with the result that the movable wings attracted much attention as the cut-out occupied a place in the large main entrance door of the Royal theatre. Then he made a cut-out from a one-sheet lithograph and placed it in the centre of the attractive display window of "La Moderna" dry goods store of Shapu & Frelich, this cut-out being surrounded by ladies' ready-to-wear and attracting much attention from passersby.

Girls in Runabout Act as "Man and Maid" Ballyhoo

A runabout, appropriately decorated with hearts, banners, pennants, etc., carrying two girls, one of whom was dressed as a boy in Tuxedo evening dress and a high hat, recently appeared on the streets of Los Angeles distributing heralds which exploited the showing of "Man and Maid" at Loew's State theatre. This couple stopped at corners and did a brief loving act in pantomime that attracted sensational attention. On the opening Sunday this couple worked the beaches and the ball game, and spent the rest of the week in the vicinity of the theatre with excellent results. Five thousand heralds were distributed during the week. This tie-up with the automobile concern was achieved by Eddy Eckels and H. W. Lawrence, Metro-Goldwyn exploiters. Ray Coffin, publicity director for the West Coast theatres, co-operated in this drive.

An 18-foot balloon, an exact replica of the regular army observation kite balloons, was flown from the roof of Loew's State every day throughout the showing from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 at night. The balloon and its two banners, one reading "Elinor Glyn's 'Man and Maid,'" and the other "Now, Loew's State," could be seen for blocks and created enormous interest, many people coming down into the busy section to be able to read the banners and discover what it was all about. At night the balloon and its banners were illuminated by a powerful army search light.

Striking Colored Display on "Quo Vadis" Showin

A colored box display that received much comment from his patrons was arranged by the manager of the Strand theatre in Milwaukee for the showing of "Quo Vadis."

The display consisting of a view of a section of the Roman Coliseum, with lions springing up to reach a Christian maiden, while at the other end Nero is seen fiddling while Rome burns, was done in brilliant colors. The box was electrically lighted by concealed lamps and attracted attention.
Old Fashioned Ballyhoos Boost "The Denial"

The screen contest now being conducted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on the Coast in collaboration with the Los Angeles Express is winning a great deal of exploitation, as the entire string of Dixon-Kellog papers, comprising 14 dailies in Los Angeles and the vicinity, are carrying front page publicity on it. The contest has been tied up by Eddie Eckles and H. D. McVirdie, Metro-Goldwyn exploiters, with the showing of "The Denial" at Loew's State.

The old Sears-Rootue auto-buggy used in "The Denial" was used as a street ballyhoo with excellent effect. A banner six feet by three hung from the top of this auto-buggy reading on one side "This horseless carriage may look funny and it is funny in 'The Denial', now at Loew's State," and, on the other, "This horseless carriage is a full-fledged star in support of Claire Winsor in 'The Denial' at Loew's State theatre." The driver distributed 6,000 heralds to the curious crowds that congregated about the car.

A girl dressed in the style of 1897 paraded the street with an umbrella upon which was a sign reading "Come with me to 'The Denial' at Loew's State theatre." Her quaint garb caused much comment and created vast interest on the downtown streets.

A fashion show contrasting the styles featured in the photoplay with modern dress was used as a stage presentation, and proved popular. Slides and trailers were used and fifty 24-sheets were posted. One hundred and fifty photos were displayed with suitable advertising material in windows.

Doormen of Denver Exploit Run of "Last Laugh"

When "The Last Laugh" played the American theatre, Denver, Manager H. E. Long conceived the novel idea of enlisting the doormen of the city in his behalf. Since this production is concerned with an aged doorman in a Berlin hotel, Long figured that the men who open carriage doors in his city would be especially interested in the film.

Consequently he wrote a letter to every hotel in Denver and to every department store or business which had a doorman. The letter requested the management of these establishments to send on a certain day the doorman of their place to a special showing of "The Last Laugh." The letter requested that the doorman be there in uniform too. A picture was taken of these dignitaries in their glory and was run in the newspapers of the city.

In addition to getting a good story on his engagement, he also made sure that the doormen knew of the picture. Then when anyone asked them what show to see in town—as strangers stopping at a hotel often do—they would be likely to recommend "The Last Laugh."

Picturesque Lobby Painted for "Sans Gene" Showing

Realizing the possibilities offered by the background in "Mme. Sans Gene," Manager F. J. Miller conceived a novel and arresting display for the Modjeska lobby, Augusta, Ga.

Against a background painted with trees and shrubbery was depicted the terrace of a French chateau with its approach of stone steps, flanked on either side with low walls. At the head of the steps was a small cut-out of the star as "Mme. Sans Gene," standing between two vases filled with greens. Trees along the stone wall added a touch of beauty to the scene. This miniature display, mounted in a showcase and illuminated by various colored lights had a tremendous drawing power.

In addition to the standard campaign and the distribution of 500 rotos and 500 Swan postcards to special mailing list, including women's clubs and civic organizations, several excellent window displays were secured in which 8x10 stillboards were used.

Juvenile Dog Contest Aids "Lighthouse by the Sea"

Manager Harry Hardy's recent dog contest in connection with his showing of "The Lighthouse By the Sea," at the Alhambra, proved a veritable sensation in Charlotte, N. C.

Dog blankets with lettering "Rin-Tin-Tin in The Lighthouse By the Sea—Alhambra—now!" were given to the contestants in addition to a free ticket to see the picture. Prizes of $1.00 in cash were given for the dog most resembling "Rin-Tin-Tin," the smartest dog, the largest, the smallest, the prettiest and the ugliest dog.

Eighty dogs were entered in the contest, and on the opening day of picture these entrants were paraded throughout the business section each carrying a blanket on the attraction. This stunt brought the title before the public repeatedly in a manner calculated to gain the attention of everyone.

Sixth Annual Announcement
1925 1926

Educational Pictures
"THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM"
Never since motion pictures entered the present era of elaborate productions have Short Subjects occupied a more important position in the building of programs—the presentation of Quality Diversified Entertainment.

Side by side with the reaction against overlong, padded features has come a better appreciation of the public's interest in the comedies and other Short Subjects that constitute such a big part of every Well Balanced Program. There follow as a matter of course more recognition of the true box-office value of good pictures in the briefer lengths and a greater demand for QUALITY SHORT SUBJECTS. Educational, eminently qualified to meet this demand, will do so in the coming season with a program that not only is bigger than any it has presented before, but offers unquestionably the greatest attraction values ever found in any line-up of one and two-reel pictures.

Educational Pictures

"THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM"
The basis of the whole policy of Educational Pictures is the firm conviction that every item on the Showman's program should not only entertain his patrons but make money for him—the Short Subjects as well as the longer features. Educational's offerings for 1925-1926 are replete with names that mean cash at the box-office—stars such as Lupino Lane, Lige Conley, Johnny Arthur, Bobby Vernon, Walter Hiers, Jimmie Adams, Bill Dooley and Neal Burns, under the directorial supervision of such comedy geniuses as Jack White and Al Christie. The amount of "added profit" that Educational Pictures will make for you is limited only by your own efforts in advertising and exploiting them.

E.W. Hammond
One of the world's greatest masters of pantomime, heir to the best talents of a long line of English actors, Lupino Lane is repeating in his screen comedy work the success that has made him so famous on the stages of both Europe and America.

His work, in the words of the New York Evening Post, "touches a high mark in comedy which no screen actor save Chaplin has ever reached."
HAMILTON COMEDIES

The strongest short comedy box-office attractions on the market to-day. The rivals of all but the best features in drawing power for the Showman who exploits them.

Two-Reel Comedies
Lloyd Hamilton's name is better known by far than the names of the great majority of feature stars. Five years of excellent work under the Educational Pictures banner have established him as one of the most popular comedy stars the screen has ever developed.

He will put over a show when the feature is weak. He will make a good show better. He will always make Added Profit for you if you advertise him.
Bobby Vernon has a fan following at the box-office that few short comedy stars can equal. His comedies are notable for their fast action and fine stories.

6 Two-Reel Comedies

Educational Pictures
THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM
One season as a star in short comedies has established Walter Hiers firmly among the most popular of screen comedians. Hiers is not "just fat"—he is funny, an actor of rare talent, a proven box-office attraction.

Two-Reel Comedies
Jimmie Adams has won his way to comedy stardom through consistently excellent work in featured parts in some of the best of Educational's comedies for several seasons. He has a large and enthusiastic following.
MERMAID COMEDIES

JACK WHITE PRODUCTIONS

In their field of broad, fast action, thrill comedy, Mermaid Comedies know no competitor for first place. Lige Conley, the high speed boy, Jack Lloyd, Virginia Vance, Estelle Bradley and other popular fun makers will be in the casts.

Two-Reel Comedies

Educational Pictures
The Spice of the Program
Only Christie has been able to combine such funny stories with so many laugh-gags and such fast, snappy action. Bill Dooley, eccentric comedian from vaudeville, a new Christie "And," and Neal Burns, an old Christie favorite, will play featured parts. Others prominent in the Christie casts will include Jack Duffy, Vera Steadman, Natalie Joyce, Bill Blaisdell, Lincoln Plumer, Rosa Gore, Doris Wynn and Jean Lorraine.

10 Two-Reel Comedies

![Image of a man holding flowers]
Each new Tuxedo Comedy offers a brand new comedy idea and novel treatment. There is never any "sameness" about them. But all show the finest directorial effort and laugh-getting qualities. Johnny Arthur, whose comedy portrayals have won for him predictions of a brilliant future, will be featured, under the direction of William Goodrich.

Two-Reel Comedies
If there is one kind of comedy that is sure to appeal to young and old alike, it is a comedy of kids. The spirit of youth that pervades Juvenile Comedies makes them not only amusing and entertaining, but invigorating and inspiring.

6 Two-Reel Comedies
Maintaining in these short rough and tumble comedies the same high standards of entertainment quality that guide the best two-reel fun features—this explains the splendid record of Cameo Comedies for three seasons and their present widespread popularity. Cliff Bowes continues in featured parts.

24 One-Reel Comedies
The whole wide world, all its peoples, and their myriad interests, form the limitless field from which Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge draws its entertaining features. It is packed with new ideas, often amusing, often instructive, but always entertaining and always treated in an intriguing manner. There is no single-reel subject on the market better suited to put your audience in the best frame of mind to enjoy the rest of your program.

The NEWS REEL
Built like a newspaper

Every news reel must 'tell the news.' Of course, but one news reel may tell it more entertainingly than another. Entertainment should be the test you put to a news reel, just as it is the test for your whole program. How well the fine-trained staff that produces Kino-grams has succeeded in making it an entertaining news reel is shown in the fact that the number of theatres in which it is a regular feature has practically doubled in the last two years.

Released Twice a Week
The advertising support and exploitation cooperation provided on Educational Pictures has never been approached on any other group of Short Subjects. Consistent national advertising in the Saturday Evening Post and publicity in magazines and newspapers everywhere are telling YOUR patrons about Educational Pictures and the people in them. You can tie up with this and cash in on it by local exploitation, especially by making good use of the great assortment of accessories available, including posters, lobby display cards, photos, slides, press sheets, free publicity and advertising mats, and trailers on star comedies.

Never forget that any picture that merits a place on your program merits your best advertising and exploitation efforts.

JIMMIE ADAMS COMEDIES

BOOK THE SERIES—
Stars of New Educational Program

BOBBY VERNON

For years one of the mainstays of the Christie comedy organization, Bobby Vernon has consistently maintained his place among the outstanding personalities of the screen. His position today is assured for he commands a large following among the screen patrons and enjoys the utmost respect of comedy producers as a player having a firm grasp of screen technique and one endowed with exceptional native talents for mimicry and characterization.

Vernon is listed among the leading stars who will contribute to the Educational program for next season. He will make a series of 6 two-reel comedies, all of which are to be produced at the Christie studios under the supervision and direction of the men who developed his talents as a comedy actor.

WALTER HIERS

During the past year Walter Hiers, Educational comedy star, faced one of the most difficult tasks which could be cut out for an actor. He had made a reputation as a feature star, and his acquisition by the producers of short comedies was widely exploited as one of the big events of the year. After an advertising campaign which promised everything, Hiers set out to live up to the reputation and the great expectations engendered by the advance notices. That he was able not only to satisfy the whimsical appetites of exhibitors and screen fans but beyond that to make appreciable advances in popularity is something which must always stand to his credit and glory.

He continued to make new friends among the fans and the success of his films emphasized the value of continuing him in a series of comedies under his own name.

BILLY DOOLEY

Billy Dooley, well known to vaudeville audiences for his amusing capers in a sketch called “The Misfit Sailor,” is a screen “find” of no less an authority on comedy films than Al Christie, who sought him out after witnessing his act on the stage. It was not long before Christie laid Dooley’s signature to a contract to devote himself exclusively to screen comedies, and a short period spent in general stock was all that was necessary to equip Dooley for featured parts.

Dooley will alternate with Neal Burns as the leading funmaker in the series of ten Christie Comedies.

JIMMIE ADAMS

There will be many to applaud the elevation of Jimmie Adams to stardom in a series of six two-reel comedies, which are to form an important part of Educational’s 1925-26 schedule. For over three years Adams has been prominent in Educational comedies produced by Christie. During that time he has been called upon to essay the most difficult sort of comedy roles and in every instance he has scored an individual hit. His work in the last two series of Christie Comedies led to his promotion.

He has started work on the first offering in the series. It is being directed by Harold Beaudine.

NEAL BURNS

Neal Burns is a veteran of the screen and one of the most consistent comedy performers the photoplay has developed. He has appeared in more than one hundred and fifty pictures. He is completing his ninth year with the Christie organization, a most enviable record for any comedian to boast. During this long career Burns has kept himself in the forefront of the comedy stars, working with sincere purpose and exceptional skill in putting over comedy effects.

His assignment for the coming season is the important task of playing star in five of the ten Christie Comedies which Educational will release.

VERA STEADMAN

Vera Steadman is one of the favorite leading ladies of the short comedies. Since entering pictures several seasons ago as a member of the Keystone company, Miss Steadman has played opposite many of the most prominent comedy stars. With the Christie company she has figured importantly for a long time, though the fact is that she is still a young woman, like many other screen players, she is a “veteran” actress.

Miss Steadman will be seen next season as the lead in support of the Educational stars sponsored by Christie.

Five Stores Tie Up to Aid "Oh, Doctor" Campaign

New Haven, Conn., was thoroughly tied-up for a recent showing of "Oh, Doctor!" at the Globe theatre. Between them, Ed Raffile, manager of the house, and Phil Kahn, Universal exploiter, secured the cooperation of Lott's candy store, Liggett's drug store, Shastenberg store, New Haven Union, and New Haven Times-Leader.

Lott's furnished 5,000 packages of "Love Pills" and 5,000 "Oh, Doctor Kisses," which were distributed by dressed girls in nurses' uniforms.

The drug store enclosed 5,000 packages advertising "Oh, Doctor" with packages as they were wrapped up. A window was also used to display the book and medical apparatus.

Of the two newspapers, the Union started a 12-weeks limerick contest with a set of rhymes on "Oh, Doctor," and the Times-Leader ran a prescription contest for the best old-fashioned home remedies.

Cipher Lobby Message for "Marriage in Transit"

In his recent exploitation of "Marriage in Transit," Manager J. H. McLaughlin of the Franklin theatre, Tampa, used a cipher contest which proved a triumph.

With the co-operation of the Citizens Bank & Trust company, a beaverboard poster was placed outside the bank on which was printed the following:

"What did the bride say to the groom while being advertised in transit? Code message—the first 25 people to cipher this message correctly will receive two tickets each to see Edmund Lowe and Carole Lombard in "Marriage in Transit" at the Franklin theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, April 29-30th. Mail answers to Franklin theatre.

The cipher message with its accompanying "key" drew crowds every hour of the day, many people copying the message and key code to work it out in their homes or offices.

"Kiss in the Dark" Lobby Visualizes Title

Manager F. J. Miller's display in the Modjeska lobby, Augusta, Ga., for "A Kiss in the Dark," was an excellent visualization of the title.

Set in a shadow box was a miniature display depicting a garden scene at night with a man and woman sitting on a bench kissing.

A sky of twinkling stars and a large laughing moon shining directly on the lovers added a touch of romance. Perched in one of the trees, an owl blinked knowingly at the couple. The owl's eye was equipped with a flasher socket, while the entire exhibit was illuminated by a dark blue spot, giving an extremely realistic night effect.

A prominently located vacant store window was pressed into service on this attraction, the glass front being entirely painted over with only a small opening in the center for a "peep hole." In this window was placed a silhouette cutout of a couple kissing with an 8 x 10 stillboard, the latter dimly lighted by a baby spot. Directly above the "peep hole" was the wording: "Kiss in the Dark." This window drew crowds and proved a real publicity getter for the picture at the Modjeska.

Novelty Dodger Proves Aid to "Cheaper to Marry"

A feature of Manager D. Roscoe Faunce's campaign on "Cheaper to Marry" at the Strand, Birmingham, was the distribution of a novelty dodger, printed red on white as follows: Wait! Anyone contemplating a plunge into matrimony would do well to visit the STRAND any day next week and see if it is "Cheaper to Marry" for marriage is a game of "Give and Take"—give up your freedom and take the consequences.

The regular newspaper and billing campaign was augmented by teaser ads in the local newspapers a week prior to opening.

Window in the Bohm-Allen Jewelry store in Denver, one of the high-grade stores of the city, for the showing at the Colorado theatre of "Quo Vadis" (First Nat'l). The Roman frieze and bust were borrowed from the public library.
Imprinted Envelopes Boost "Daddy’s Gone a-Hunting"

"Daddy’s Gone a-Hunting" was exploited when it played recently at the American theatre in Evansville, Ind., by the distribution of 4,200 pay envelopes, each printed with a cut and an announcement of the showing. These envelopes were distributed by thirty of the best factories in the city and three of the leading department stores. Charles Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, achieved the tie-up.

Two striking window displays helped exploit the picture also. The first of these tied up the title of the photoplay with a display of sporting goods and the second featured candies specially suited to carrying on hunting trips for nourishment and refreshment. One thousand heralds were distributed and the town was liberally posted.

Slides and trailers were brought into play at the American and at other theatres in the city, and fifty window cards were exhibited in stores throughout the loop district.

A vigorous newspaper campaign supported these, and there was also a special lobby display.

Jockeys on Street Exploit “The Dixie Handicap”

“The Dixie Handicap” was recently exploited in Lorain, Ohio, where this picture played at the Ohio theatre, by the appearance of two young men in jockey costumes on horses on the main streets. Both carried banners announcing the run of the picture and attracted widespread attention.

C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, backed up this feat with a vigorous press campaign, thereby exploiting the engagement effectively.

Printed Balloons Exploit “Rag Man” Showing

Two thousand balloons printed with a cut of Jackie Coogan and an announcement of the showing of “The Rag Man” at the Rivoli theatre in Elyria, Ohio, were recently distributed by C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, among the smaller children of the schools of the city. These balloons were carried by the children into all parts of the city and exploited the showing effectively.

This feat was backed up by advertising in the press and there was, in addition, a special lobby display.

Illuminated Cut-Outs Aid Flash on “The Lady”

An illuminated cut-out display in lamps was used over the marquee of the Strand theatre, Seattle, for “The Lady.” Under the marquee was another cut-out in parchment paper, carrying the name of the star.

Effective use was made of the posters for “The Lady,” eight pictures of the star being used on the theatre front. A large cut-out head was used above a specially decorated card carrying the name of the star and the picture in front of the ticket booth.

Rag Patch Contests Boosts “Rag Man” in Lima

When “The Rag Man” played recently at the Lyric theatre in Lima, Ohio, C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, drew attention effectively to the showing by running a rag patch contest in the leading newspaper, the Lima Daily News. A large mat was used for the contest and five days’ co-operation for the News was achieved by this tie-up. The contest proved exceptionally popular.

Several window displays featuring Jackie Coogan caps and suits helped exploit the showing also, and there was a special lobby display.

Cadets on street Exploit “Classmates” Showing

Two fine looking boys, dressed as West Point Cadets, were recently stationed outside the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, during the run of “Classmates,” their smart appearance creating a world of attention and favorable comment for Manager H. B. Stift.

The regular newspaper and billing campaign was started three weeks in advance with the distribution of ten 24 sheets. Two splendid window displays were also secured on the attraction.
The program was a really brilliant one, made up of the regular five acts of vaudeville at Loew's Grand, the five at Keith's Forsyth, a special act from the Howard (picture house) the orchestra from the Metropolitan theatre with Enrico Leide, conducting; the Howard orchestra with Alex Keesee conducting; several local jazz orchestras, and with City Organist Charles Sheldon opening the bill.

Manager Thomas H. James of Loew's Grand acted as General Chairman with Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Metropolitan as co-chairman; Manager Howard Price Kingsmore of the Howard headed the committee in charge of publicity and advertising.

The complete committee, representing the full managerial talent of Atlanta's theatre fraternity, as is follows: Thos. H. James, Loew's Grand; Willard C. Patterson, Metropolitan; Howard Price Kingsmore, Howard theatre; W. T. Murray, Rialto theatre; Lewis Haasse, Atlanta theatre (legitimate) Martin Semon, Forsyth theatre (Keith house); Thomas G. Coleman, Cameo; James F. Jackson, Tudor; Matt H. Whitham, Alamo No. 2; Sol Samuels, Alpha; W. E. Finch, Alamo No. 1; George Campbell, Bonita (tabloid); Alpha Fowler, Palace (suburban).

If you can get a cameraman, we know of no better business stimulator (and this is a pretty good time of year to put it over) than the making of a home talent motion picture. Done legitimately, with tie-ups with local merchants, clubs, schools and the like, it will have everyone in town talking. The expense is fairly heavy, of course, but split up among several merchants and organizations it is not prohibitive, and the exhibitor will be more than compensated for his share by the interest (and business) which will result. Get everyone in town into the picture, even if only in a mob scene, and they'll all turn out to see how they look “in the movies.”

Down in Chili-cothe, in the southern part of Ohio, the Sherman theatre, operated by manager Johnson, has combined with the retail merchants to put over a stunt of this nature. Backed by the Chamber of Commerce, a four reel film is to be made. This film will include civic scenes, and activities of local interest. Also a short comedy will be made. "Fatty" David Southard has been engaged to play the leading comedy role. All other roles will be portrayed by local talent. The stunt also includes a parade with floats by the retail merchants. Manager Johnson has agreed to run this picture on his screen the week following its completion.

One of the special exploitation stunts recommended in connection with "Introduce Me," was used during the present run of the picture at the Criterion theatre, Los Angeles. This stunt was the formation of a chapter in the "Introduce Me" club, of which Anne Cornwall, who plays opposite the star in the picture, is president. The chapter was sponsored by the University of Southern California, and the complete outline of the working of the club was set forth in the college daily, "The Trojan." The daily said, in part:

"’I'm George Columbus. I'd like to have you meet me. And you are . . . . . . . ?’ This is only a sample of the newest line to be popularized on the U. S. C. campus. It's made possible by the 'Introduce Me' Club, the latest organization.

"Membership in the club is not restricted to the campus, as the organization is for the whole city of Los Angeles. The chief requirements for membership are a sweet disposition, which includes a broad grin, and ability to make the best use of a strong right hand for the extensive handshaking which is a criterion of membership.

"The club buttons are much in evidence on the campus which shows that the Trojans are taking interest in this organization.

"While over 20,000 of the "Introduce Me" Club cards and membership buttons were distributed during the Los Angeles run of the picture this is the first collegiate chapter of the club to be organized. With colleges of the type of the University of Southern California taking up the idea of the "Introduce Me" club, it opens up unusual opportunities for exhibitors to tie-up with a similar plan in colleges and high schools.
EDUCATING PATRONS

If patrons could be educated to shop for good pictures and good entertainment, rather than just a picture featuring So-and-So, many of the problems of this industry would be greatly simplified. There is a chance, now and then, through advertising to put in a little sales talk along this line. The Jackson Theatre News, published by the Jackson theatre at Jackson Heights, L. I., leads off a recent issue with an excellent little editorial headed "Who Is In It?" which reads:

When the telephone rings at the Jackson and some one—who should be receiving the Jackson Theatre News—has failed to send their name in—asks, "What is the picture tonight?" A house attache (who should be attending to other business connected with the theatre) takes time to give the title of the picture, and the producer.

"Who is in it?" is the invariable comeback.

Now, it is impossible to read the entire cast over the phone, so the informant merely gives the name of the best known player.

If the party at the other end of the line likes the "star" they come to see the picture. If they don't, they stay away.

This is a poor standard by which to judge an entertainment.

A good picture is the result of a combination of the following: A good plot, artistic directing, competent acting and adequate settings and photography.

Perhaps the most important single item is the directing. For instance, the fact that James Cruze directed and produced "The Goose Hangs High" is far greater indication that the picture will be excellent than the fact that certain players appear in it.

It is certain that with Cruze directing, the acting and the settings will be all that can be desired. And since the plot is taken from the popular Broadway stage play, it is bound to be interesting.

If you want to choose your picture entertainment with care, the best plan is to have the Jackson Theatre News mailed to you every week and read it thoroughly. In it you will find the complete programs, with illuminating notes on the pictures and other features of the programs, and you will be in a position to pick just exactly what you would like to see. Send your name and address to the manager, or leave a request with any house attache, and you will receive the News every week, free.

SHORT SUBJECT RECOGNITION

The theatre program is one of the finest mediums of publicity which any theatre possesses but remains, in most cases just another of the publicity channels neglected so far as the Short Subject is concerned. One of the exceptions "Sax-o-Grams" a program published by the Milwaukee theatre, Milwaukee, devotes most of a page to "Balto's Race to Nome" an Educational Film Exchange release. It contains an attractive pictorial layout with well written copy surrounding it.

CO-OPERATION WINS

Although it was developed for use at Easter, the stunt recently employed by Joe Greene of the Lafayette theatre, St. Louis, should be good for a display at any time—and the cost is virtually nothing. It was worked in this way.

Greene wanted a special lobby display for his showing of "Fifth Avenue Models," and he thought that a nice floral display would be appropriate in view of the season. So he arranged with a nearby florist to arrange an attractive display in the lobby of the Lafayette, with a card on it crediting the work to the florist.

In addition—and this is the significant point—Green ran a typed radio-mat on his screen stating that the lobby display had been prepared by the florist in question.

In this way, Greene received without cost a lobby display worth around a hundred dollars, on top of which the florist reported that he had sold out every flower in the place as a result of the direct advertising.

Educational Signs Hamilton

Comedian Will Make Series of Six Comedies for Next Season's Program

Educational Film Exchanges has signed Lloyd Hamilton for a fourth series of six Hamilton comedies, the first of which will go into production at once. They will be released on the schedule for the coming season. The comedian will again have Dorothy Senstrom for his leading lady. She appeared with him in many of his successes of the past year.

This will be the sixth year in which Hamilton has participated in the Educational program. For two years he was a featured comedian in Mermaid comedies. Following this the Lloyd Hamilton Corporation was formed and Hamilton comedies starring Hamilton appeared on the program. Three of these series of six comedies have already been released.

During the season just closing Hamilton was starred in six two-reel Hamilton Comedies, "Jonah Jones," "Crushed," "Hooked," "Half a Hero," "King Cotton" and "Waiting." The last named is a July release. At the start of the season he was under the direction of Fred Hibbard, who died early in the year. Since then he has been directed by Stephen Roberts.

This season Hamilton will be directed by William Goodrich, one of the best of the comedy directors. Goodrich is responsible for many of the successful Tuxedo Comedies, notably "Dynamite Doggie," "The Iron Mule" and "Curses."

Production work will start at once on the new Hamilton series at the newly acquired Educational Studio, formerly the Principal Studios. The first of the series will appear on the Educational program as an early Fall release.

Century Establishes New Preview System

A new system under which all Century Comedies will be available for screening for exhibitors in all Universal exchanges in advance of release has been inaugurated by Julius and Abe Stern, heads of the Century company.

The innovation places comedies on the same basis with features, as the Century product may be viewed by the exhibitors long before they are released for public presentation.

In discussing this innovation, H. M. Herbel, sales manager for Century, calls attention to the fact that since this plan was inaugurated several weeks ago, sales on Century Comedies for next season have shown a decided increase, both in volume and in price.

"We are finding out that the exhibitor is just as willing to preview a comedy as a feature, and that in the contracting for a season's output, he wants to know what he is getting. He does not want to buy a cat in a bag on his comedies any more than he wants to buy a block of features sight unseen.

"By unprecedented production activity this spring, and by close cooperation with the Universal laboratories, we have been able to get far ahead on our comedy schedule. We now have Century Comedies in the Universal exchanges as far ahead as the first of the year. In fact we have been that far ahead with sample prints for previewing for the past thirty days. And it is in this thirty days that we have noticed the increased booking most strikingly.

"I look for a big Comedy year. It's in the air. There must be something to it when you realize that many exhibitors actually are getting their short comedies lined up in advance of their feature bookings. We have numerous cases of this kind among our Century bookings. It shows a trend towards comedy. And exhibitors have a sixth sense. They seem to know in advance what is coming."

New Educational Line Up Not Yet Complete

The program of Short Subjects outlined in the Sixth Annual Announcement of Educational Pictures for 1925-1926 running in this issue does not necessarily represent a complete line-up of the subjects to be distributed next season through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., according to a statement by E. W. Hammons, President of Educational.

"Educational's Annual Announcements heretofore have not been issued until late summer," said Mr. Hammons, "but because of the very evident desire of exhibitors to line up their product early this year, it was deemed advisable for us to announce at this time all the series of pictures now definitely lined up. We have not yet had time to complete arrangements for two or three other groups of subjects which it is very probable we will distribute in the coming season. Detailed announcements of these additional pictures will be made to exhibitors just as soon as it is possible."
Exploiting Short Subjects Is Box-Office Tonic

Actual Experience of Exhibitors Are Cited

By S. J. MAURICE.

Special Representative, Serial Dept., Universal

(Editor's Note.—This is the second of a series of four articles by Mr. Maurice. The next will appear in an early issue).

WHEN I was down in Dallas several years ago as general press representative of the Southern Enterprises, a chain of more than one hundred theatres, I had an opportunity of proving the value of playing up short subjects in the advertising, of proving it not only to myself, but to the exhibitors as well. I always had the idea that good short stuff would draw on its own account just as well as a good feature. Managers had been so prone to laying stress on the five reeilers in the advertising and press matter, patrons would not have known there were to be one and two reeilers on the program except that they knew it to be the custom. They just took the little fellows for granted and never knew in advance what they were to be.

Well, in Dallas I expounded my theory to Herschel Stuart, then director of theatres for the Southern Enterprises, and now managing director of the Missouri Theatre, in St. Louis, and incidentally one of the best house managers in the United States. He was interested immediately and said the idea sounded good to him and wondered why he had not thought of it before. He was about to play at his leading theatre a feature that had none too strong a punch despite an alluring title that promised a wallow. And he had a corking good two reeeler, a Larry Semon comedy, which under ordinary circumstances would merely have been mentioned in the advertising in small type, if at all.

"We should play up the comedy on equal terms with the feature," I advised him. "Let's tell the public how good it is. Let them know in advance that there is double treat in store. They will think they are to get twice as much as usual for their money and won't be disappointed.

The psychology of it is simple, in fact, fundamental!

And that is what we did. It worked like a charm. Never before had the Dallas people seen a short subject placed on an advertising equality with the longer picture. The novelty of the thing piqued curiosity and excited comment. The seed was planted in fertile soil and the harvest was all that could have been desired. Business jumped up twenty-five per cent and the patrons enjoyed that short subject twice as much as they would have if they had not gone to the theatre expecting to see it and it had been flashed upon them unawares. It has been that way too long—the short stuff looked upon as a mere filler—in or a side issue. The most gratifying part of the matter was, however, that the sale of that Semon comedy was stimulated among the exhibitors. Seeing it played up in Stuart's advertising immediately enhanced its value in their eyes. "If Herschel Stuart advertises it like that, it must be good," they argued, "so we will buy it and feature it too." They did so with the result that it did better business than any other two reelers of its calibre ever did before in that section of the country.

Policy Remains in Force

And, moreover, the policy thus inaugurated has been in force there ever since, though Mr. Stuart has gone to wider fields where he still maintains this policy which has proven so profitable. Only the other day Mr. Stuart advertised a short subject using as much space for it as he did for the bigger picture. Stuart knows short subjects as sure-fire drawing cards and doesn't hesitate to talk about them in his paid advertising.

But that was not the only experiment we tried successfully in Dallas. The Crystal Theatre in that city was not doing any too well, when the Southern Enterprises took it over and I suggested to Ollie Saal, our booking manager that he book an entire program of short subjects at that house.

"Short Stuff House"

"Make it a short stuff house," was my advice. "Go after the shoppers and business men. Give them a quick, snappy, diversified show where people who are pressed for time can drop in for fifteen minutes, or half an hour and see variety and action. A lot of folks can't sit through a two hour program. If they cannot sit out a feature they would rather not start one. Make a feature of a featureless show."

The idea was radical, but Ollie Saal saw there was much in its favor. So he tried it out. He put together a two reel comedy, a two reel review, a travelogue and a news-reeel, we advertised it heavily and sold it for fifteen cents. The audiences came out saying it was the livest show they had seen in months and the Dallas papers declared that the new kind of motion picture program had come to stay and it had. If I remember correctly the Crystal is playing just such a program to this day. The house is filled and emptied each hour from eleven o'clock in the morning on, so that, at fifteen cents a head, it grosses more money that opposition houses that play a standard two hour bill with a feature at twenty cents.

Exploit the Shorts

Mr. Exhibitor, if you are going to buy short subjects why not exploit them? Why not tell the people what you've got. If they are good enough to buy and exhibit, if they are good enough to see, certainly they are good enough to advertise. Why waste so much good publicity material? No successful merchant confines his advertising to the most expensive goods in his shop. He must sell his notions and his knick-knacks as well as his silks and satins if his business is going to prosper. And he advertises them all, often giving the greatest amount of space to the less expensive things.

Just how important your comedies and serials and travelogues and animated cartoons and news-reeels are would be proved to you very quickly if you tried to get along without them. Just drop your short subjects for a week and try to get through on features alone and see where you would land. Well, if you can't get along without them, if the public must have them, why not try to extract every possible bit of showmanship value out of them?

And it is not only your short photo-plays—the comedies and westerns that deserve such attention. Often there is a shot in the news-reeel that would fill your house for you if you let the people know you were going to show it. Time and again I have played up in the ads, a two minute flash from "current events" when it was something particularly timely or interesting and it proved as potent a drawing card as the feature.

The whole thing resolves itself down to this: make the most of the material in hand. Certainly you cannot neglect your features and their stars. You have paid big money for them and you expect them to bring the money back with interest. BUT, you also paid big money for the short stuff. It should also return dividends and it will, if only you give it the proper chance.

International News Shows U. S. Cavalry Stunts

International Newsreel No. 52 reveals some interesting and exclusive pictures of U. S. Cavalrymen in new and thrilling stunt riding. For the past two months Captain R. W. Sears, who, in addition to holding his commission in the Cavalry, is a staff cameraman for International Newsreel, has been at Fort Riley, Kansas, where the government conducts a Cavalry school under the supervision of Brig. Gen. Edward L. King, Commandant of the Post.

During his stay Captain Sears was given the opportunity of photographing for the first time the thrilling and perilous riding of America's fighting forces. The riders are shown going up and down rocky canyons, over story plateaus and in the various stunts which make up the program of the Post. The pictures, in addition to being shown in the leading theatres, will be made a part of the archives of the War Department.

"Husky" Hanes, Infant Star, Joins "Our Gang"

Hal Roach has added "Husky" Hanes, the infant actor who has won distinction in several recent Roach comedies, to the group of juvenile troupers who make up the "Our Gang" company. Henceforth, "Husky" will appear in all of the Gang comedies along with Mary Kornman, Jackie Coonden, Mickey Daniels, Joe Cobb, Johnny Downs and Furina, all of whom are now regulars with their individual following of fans and admirers.

F. Richard Jones, director-general at the Hal Roach Studios, "discovered" the infant prodigy four or five months ago and "Husky" has played in two Glenn Tryon comedies and several other Roach fun-films. "Husky's" real name is Jack Hanes, Jr.

Franklyn Hanna Added to "Play Ball" Cast

Franklyn Hanna, cousin of the famed Ohio Senator, Mark Hanna, has been added to the cast of the new Pathé serial, "Play Ball," written by John J. McGraw and starring Allen Ray under the direction of Spencer Bennett.

Hanna is a veteran of both the speaking stage and the screen. His screen career dates back to the old Edison days when he played the villain role with Violia Dana in "The Cossack Whip." On the speaking stage he played Senator Murphy in "Potash and Perlmutter" both in New York and London.

The first chapter of "Play Ball," which was adapted for the screen by Frank Leon Smith, will be released on July 19.

"Chronicles" Film Feature of Boone Convention

Two of the "Chronicles of America" photoplays, produced by Yale University Press and distributed by Pathé, were presented as features of the entertainment program offered during the Boone Family Association convention held recently in Kentucky. "Daniel Boone" and "The Declaration of Independence" are the pictures which were shown for the 3,000 descendants of the famous Pathfinder who assembled from all parts of the country to honor Daniel Boone.

Pathe Announces July 25 List

"Stereoscopik" Reel One of Short Features on Diversified Program

The next "Stereoscopik" reel to be offered by Pathé will be included on the program for the week of July 25, which is notable for the variety of subjects on the list announced this week by that company. "Ouch!" is the title of the "Stereoscopik" contribution to the program. It will be the third in the series produced by Ives-Leventhal, and presents a series of spectacular effects by means of third dimension photography.

In addition to this novelty reel there will be two Hal Roach comedies, an episode of "Sunken Silver," the current Pathé serial, an "Aesop's Film Fables," Pathe Review No. 27, a "Topics of the Day," and the regular issues of Pathé News.

"Isn't Life Terrible?" is the title of the Hal Roach two-reel comedy which presents Charley Chase in a series of vacation experiences that are right in season. Katherine Grant appears as Chase's charming wife. Baby Hardy is an invalid brother-in-law, and Lou Poff is another important member of the cast. Leo McCarey directed this one.

"Chasing the Chaser" is a one-reel comedy with Jimmie Finlayson as a husband who has never gone wrong but is constantly skidding. The plot concerns the efforts of a suspicious wife to keep track of her husband with the cooperation of a detective female impersonator. Stan Laurel is the director.

"The Secret Panel" is the latest chapter of the Pathé serial "Sunken Silver" adapted from Albert Payson Terhune's story "Black Caesar's Chan." This is the ninth episode of the George B. Seitz production.

Educational Schedule Started

Christie Plant and the Educational Studio Units Begin Work for 1925-26 Program

The producing units which are to supply comedies for the Educational schedule arranged for the 1925-26 season have started work on the extensive production program mapped out for them. The Christie Studios and the Educational plant in Hollywood are now in full swing on the new line-up.

In the huge new Educational Studio Lloyd Hamilton has commenced work on a recently contracted series of six Educational-Hamilton Comedies. Several Educational Mermaid Comedies have started in production. In the first, which Norman Taurog is shooting, the cast will include Lige Conley, Estelle Bradley, Jack Lloyd and Stan Blystone. The second company, directed by Stephen Roberts, is well under way with a cast headed by Al St. John and including Virginia Vance and Otto Fries.

William Goodrich handles the megaphone on the first Educational-Tuxedo Comedy to get under way. This comedy will present Johnny Arthur as a star. His supporting cast includes Helen Foster, Glen Cavender, George Davis and Joy Winthrop.

Other comedy units for the Educational program being housed in this studio, include the Lupino Lane, Cameo and Juvenile producing companies.

The Christie Studios have already launched production on their three series of star comedies, which will present Bobby Vernon, Walter Hiers and Jimmie Adams, and on the ten Christie Comedies with Neal Burns and Billy Dooley.

Walter Graham is directing the first Bobby Vernon Comedy from a story by Robert Hall. Frances Lee will support Vernon in this series.

The Walter Hiers unit is making its first picture under the direction of Archie Mayo. In the cast with Hiers is Evelyn Francisco, Jack Duffy, Bill Blaisdell and one of Mayo's child prodigy finds, Baby Brown. Duane Thompson and Clara Horton have also been signed and will play opposite Hiers in the new series.

The first of the pictures in which Jimmie Adams is raised to comedy stardom will be directed by Harold Beaudine. Molly Malone has been signed as leading lady, and Eddie Baker and Lincoln Plumer for prominent parts in the casts of the new Adams star series.

William Watson, a newly signed director, starts direction at once with the first Christie Comedy unit. Neal Burns will be featured, with the support of Vera Steadman, Natalie Joyce, Gale Henry and Bill Irving.

Preparations are also under way for the filming of a second Christie Comedy, featuring Billy Dooley.

Christie is rapidly assembling a squad of new beauties and comedians for this series, and the 1925-26 program calls for the most intensive period of production which has yet been undertaken at this famous comedy plant.

Doris Anderson Joins F. B. O. Scenario Staff

F. B. O. has signed Doris Anderson to the scenario staff, where she will assist Fred Myton, scenario editor. Her first assignment will be the continuities for the new two-reel series starring Alberta Vaughn and Larry Kent, titled "The Adventures of Maisie." Miss Anderson is well known as a continuity and title writer and she has also written some successful sketches for the stage.

Famous Painter to Appear in Fox "Varieties" Reel

"With Pencill, Brush and Chisel" will be the title of a Fox "Varieties" reel which is to be produced in the New York studio of Emil Fuchs, one of America's leading artists and illustrators. The pictures will be based on the articles of the same title which were written by Fuchs and published in Saturday Evening Post. The scenes will show the artist at work as a painter, sculptor and finally as an etcher, creating a work called "A Modern June."

Other "Varieties" subjects in preparation deal with life along the Nile; points of interest in Cuba; and scenes taken in Australia.

Dooley to Use Sailor Make Up in Christie Comedies

Billy Dooley, vaudeville actor who played the big circuits in a sketch called "The Misfit Sailor," is to appear on the screen in his sailor characterization, it has been announced by Al Christie, who has signed the comedian to play featured roles in pictures for the Educational program.

Scott Darling to Supervise Universal Comedies

Spott Darling, author of popular screen stories, has been appointed as supervisor of comedy units at Universal City. Darling will have charge of the companies which will film fifty-two comedies for Universal next season.

"Don't" is the title of a new Rupert Hughes story filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The scenes above are taken from the picture.

Motion Picture News

Three-column newspaper ad used by the Garden Theatre, Baltimore, for the showing of "The Air Hawk." (F. B. O.)
What the Big Houses Say

Soul-Fire—Just an average week's attendance with this one. (Middle West.)

Dick Barthelmess "comes back" and really acts again in an entertaining picture which brought in good audiences. (East.)

The Necessary Evil—A picture with a big thought back of it. Something worth while. Business was very good. (Middle West.)

Chickee—A 100 per cent audience picture. Broke all previous attendance records. (Middle West.)

Due to newspaper serial story they were all anxious to see this one. (Middle West.)

Her Husband's Heart—They liked this story. Drew average houses. (West.)

I Want—Good picture that draws well. (Middle West.)

Business was brisk all week. (Middle West.)

Learning to Love—Constance has done better work, but it should please her followers. Did fair business with it. (Middle West.)

The Talkers—Rather lengthy. An average production from entertainment viewpoint. (Middle West.)

The Lost World—Business was brisk all week. (Middle West.)

F. B. O.

Smooth as Satin—The reception of this one was as smooth as the title indicates. Evelyn Brent gives good performance. (West.)

Lilies of the Street—One of the season's best of its type. Redlights held up despite hot weather. (Middle West.)

White Fang—Dog houses will find this to hold their interest. Business excellent. (Middle West.)

A good drawing card. Hot weather didn't interfere. (Middle West.)

—VITAGRAPH—

Wildfire—Good entertainment. Racing shots are fine. Fair business weather considered. (Middle West.)

PARAMOUNT

Old Home Week—Went over great and made money for a week. (Middle West.)

Star has done better work.

FOR A MOMENT OF ROMANCE

The Became a Volunteer of Society

Corinne Griffith

Declassé

Lloyd Hughes

Sally

(With Colleen Moore)

Three-columns ad on "Declassé" (First Nat'l) by the Capitol theatre, Detroit.

Patrons liked it however and did nice business. (Middle West.)

Tom Meighan's latest hit the right spot. Very popular in this town. (West.)

Popularity of Thomas Meighan was saving factor here as story was nothing extra. Business good. (East.)

Pleasing production but not a big box office attraction. A fair business. (Middle West.)

The Crowded Hour—Brought Bebe Daniels forward in a pleasing manner. (East.)

Shock Punch—The picture was entertaining and did a fair business. (Middle West.)

Quite a number of thrills in this one but it failed to draw. (West.)

Too Many Kisses—Business was poor during the run of this feature. Patrons didn't care for star in this role. (South.)

The Little French Girl—Patrons liked this one and it drew good attendance. (Middle West.)

Did nice business with this one. Miss Brian won much praise for her work. (Middle West.)

Well produced and acted picture. (West.)

Any Woman—Got a fair reception from the patrons. Fair business. (West.)

Adventure—This Jack London tale has been adapted in an attractive form. Highly praised by the press and given a good attendance throughout the week. (Middle West.)

Just an average week's attendance with this one. (Middle West.)

Patton to Paradise—Interesting picture with universal appeal. Played to big houses. High class mystery story. (Middle West.)

ASSOC. EXHIB.

Barriers Burned Away—Some of the best fire scenes ever filmed. Box office receipts good. (Middle West.)

Introduce Me—Funniest comedy this star has made to date. They laughed their heads off at his antics. (South.)

Percy—Patrons like it. Business held up during the run. (Middle West.)

Fans welcomed the return of Charles Ray to this type of role. Pleased the majority. (West.)

METRO-GOLDWYN

Lady of the Night—Much favorable comment on Miss Shearer's work in this production. Business was excellent. (Middle West.)

Babe— Went over pretty well but lots didn't understand the title. (Middle West.)

Proud Flesh—Business off all week. They didn't seem to cotton to this one at all. (Middle West.)

Good story and cast. It aroused considerable comment. Average business. (West.)

The Denial—Just another eternal triangle picture with nothing new in the way of plot. Acting and mounting fair. Business fair. (East.)

Confessions of a Queen—Seemed to lack snap. Wasn't the thing for hot weather. (East.)

Stars helped it over. Interesting and not too heavy. (Middle West.)

Man and Maid—Another one of the Elinor Glyn pictures, drawing fairly average attendance. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Mad Whirl—Big east-big picture and a good one. (East.)

Powder River—Good settings and acting put this one over. We did average houses. (South.)

The Age of Innocence—Drew average patronage for the run. Pleased production. (Middle West.)

I'll Show You the Town—Benchshad Deny Scenes amusingly funny in this production which was held for a second week because of remarkable business. (Middle West.)

Fifth Avenue Model—Good attraction. (Middle West.)

Up the Ladder—West over great and made money for a week. (Middle West.)

PROD. DIST. CORP.

The Awful Truth—A fair program picture with a rather hackneyed theme. Fairly well acted by a well known group of players. Business off account warm weather. (East.)

Friendly Enemies—Did well and went across very nice in our house. No complaint. (Middle West.)

Entertaining production with a mingling of humor and pathos. Business was good. (Middle West.)

Very amusing comedy with Weber and Fields. The screen adaptation has lost nothing of the humor of the stage play. (West.)

Private Affairs—An excellent feature. Did a good week. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROS.

Eye's Lover—Didn't do as well as expected. Good program production. (West.)

Tracked in the Snow Country—One of the best dog pictures. Screen is delightful at this season. Nice business. (Middle West.)

Recompense—A good drawing card. Hot weather didn't interfere. (Middle West.)

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

Chasing the Chaser
(Pathe—One Reel)

JIMMY FINLAYSON is featured as a remarkable little killer who has been on the Ranch studios. The action is concerned with the efforts of a detective retained by the ranch husband who has "the wife, blonde or brunette." The detective is a female impersonator, and putting himself off as the new maid, succeeds in having the ranch husband, who is a vaudeville actor, change his wife looks on from behind a curtain.
The action honors go to the chap, unman-nel in the cast, who does the female impersonation.
It is a larger part than any of the others, and, its seems to us, the performers overshadow the other members of the company. Possibly, it is one of the most skillful female impersonations we have ever seen on the screen.
"Chasing the Chaser" strains for effects, which, even if achieved, fail to make it less its finest quality, could not be much better than mediocre.
The material is a much coarser flavor than that usually employed in comedies from the Ranch studios, which now and then fail to be funny but seldom fail to show better taste than is evident in the general tone and make-up of this film.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Beauty and the Bandit
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

THERE'S a pleasing story about this western which features George Larkin.
It is well directed and has many exciting incidents and considerable suspense. The tale reveals a government gambler, and his niece, a seeking a precious mineral. They encounter Jerry Burke of the Northwest Mounted Police who is on the trail of "The Snake," wanted for burglary.
"The Snake" is revealed as the long missing brother of Madge, who is captured by Jerry is left under the guard of Madge. She promptly releases him and he makes his getaway. Later the "Snake" saves Jerry from death and reveals the true culprit, for whose crime Madge's brother was in full sympathy. The usual
the average for the two-reel western.—
CHESTER J. SMITH.

Bobby Bumps & Company
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS Earl Hurd picture of the animated cartoon series is much the same as the others that have gone before. The cartoons show the various numbers on a vaudeville program. They are well done and quite humorous in spots. On this program Bobby Bumps & Company go through some humorous antics, as do the great magician and the swan dancer. This provides fair entertainment as a program filler.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Isn't Life Terrible?
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WHILE this is not up to the best which Charley Chase has done since starting his series with Hal Roach, the picture is a step up above the average two-reeler in general quality and somejumped in point of originality. Chase and his director, Leo McCarey are keeping up their good work of one-upping rather than any of their competitors and they are scoring with as much consistency as can be expected. They introduce a new opening which is, and just for a moment of subtility now and then, but they never seem to forget that the public likes action and broad treatment, even obviousness, in its screen comedies. In a word, like all of the screen artists who have gone to the top, they are artists just as far as good showmanship will permit.
"Isn't Life Terrible?" is a timely play about a family man who must take the wife and son on a vacation. There is no money, so he enters a fountain-pen selling contest to win a free trip across the sea. He is declared one of the winners and the trip is made on an antiquated ship, where the boat, life-belts which sink immediately, and which develops leaks at the slightest provocation.
The child falls overboard, the cat is climbing the rigging and had to be shot.
Katherine Grant is pleasing as the wife, and Bea Hardy and Lou Poff do good work in support. "Isn't Life Terrible?" is not a sidesplitting comedy, but it is never dull, and that, in view of the treatment of good comedies on the current market, makes it good enough for the best of programs.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Married Neighbors
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

BILLY ENGLE and Beth Darlington are featured in this two-reel Century, which tells a lively but not unusual story. It is of the off-reel type and so is the last part before he takes the marriage vow. Some of his young married neighbors go on a wild tear that ends when they take possession of a handsome bachelor.
The usual incidents mark the cab ride when the horse refuses to go any further. Some of the party are hitched to the shafts, while others assume undignified attitudes within the cab. It ends when the cab goes over a bridge and Billy falls into the seat of Beth's auto.
He is eventually forgiven and the marriage ceremony is proceeded with. It's just a fair comedy whose stunts have been many times repeated but are still good for some laughs.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Below Zero
(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

LIGE CONLEY has a vehicle well above the average in this comedy, which in spots is early a fairly good story. It is a tale of the North woods with real snow scenes and Lige as a pinch hitter in the North west sports.
Lige craves adventure and is sent by his father to his friend, the head of the Northwest mounted police to be cured. He is given the dec-tal to bring in the hardest character in the district. He succeeds after some thrilling adventures, in which he is first foiled by the outlaw, cheated by a bear and subjected to numerous hardships. His negro valet also shares in all the action with him and provides a good share of the fun. There is a lot of good hokum in this one and it should go well where they like the short comedy.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Pathé Review No. 25
(One Reel)

THE so-called "process-camera" has been used to make an interesting subject to bring this Pathé Review to a close. These features are of an expert gymnast, and by the use of duplicate images, stop motion, slow and nor-motion used for contrast, the article proves highly entertaining and somewhat astonishing.
There is an industrial feature showing the manufacturing of pins. This is interesting and will be of permanent interest to go forth and talk authoritatively about how the little pins are made from long strands of wire, and so-forth etc. cetera. The scenic presentation contributes views of an ancient French town on the Loire.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Plenty of Nerve (Universal-Century—One Reel)

EDNA MARIAN has a pretty good vehicle in this one to display her comedy talents. She is well supported by a good company and a passable story. Superstition plays an important part in furnishing the comedy. Edna is wooed by an extremely superstitious sheik, who has the misfortune to have a black cat cross his path on Friday the 13th, the day he proposes to and is accepted by Edna.
One misfortune after another befalls him and he becomes further involved when Edna's mother inherits an insane asylum. Edna and mother escape to take up life of the sheik, but the wily manager plunges them into a padded cell, from which the lover uses every ruse to extricate them. With the aid of a kicking mat he heartily appreciates his purpose. There is some fast action in this one and some comedy situations that should be good for many laughs.—
CHESTER J. SMITH.

Strangler Lewis vs. Wayne Munn
(Educational—Two Reels)

These are the official motion pictures of the recent world championship match in which Lewis defeated Munn in two out of three falls. Wrestling pictures are somewhat of a novelty and perhaps no better ones were shown on the scene than these. After showing the regular action in the three falls the pictures are slowed up and every detail of the falls is covered by the camera. There are some exceptionally good shots showing the intricate holds of this strenuous sport.
The picture shows not only the action in the battle with each hold of the championship through their training stunts, the crowds gathering for the bout at Michigan City and the numerous other details of a sporting and friendship series. Every shot is clear and the picture should be interesting to every follower of sport.—
CHESTER J. SMITH.

Heart Trouble
(Universal-Bulls Eye—One Reel)

THIS is one of the Sweet Sixteen series featuring Arthur Lake and Marceline Day. It is a better vehicle than some of the other late ones. The action is laid around a masquerade party given by Marceline, from which Arthur is barred by her parents because he has just broken an expensive vase.
The two youngsters plan a disguise which gives him entry, but it is discovered by Eddie, the rival. Eddie, disguised as a shifty handcuffs Arthur to the girl and Eddie is trying to get did, but her caveman sweetheart halts the plot by handhelding Arthur and taking together.
Arthur is eventually ejected by Marceline's parents and takes Eddie along with him. They are released from their shackles only after they have spent the night in the same box. There is some fairly good comedy mixed up with this tale.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Mexican Melody" Title for Hodge-Podge

"Mexican Melody" has been selected as the title of the Lyman H. Hodge-Podge to be released on their new program, during the week starting June 14.
Grounds for Divorce
(Paramount—Seven Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is the tale of a young wife whose husband, a prominent divorce lawyer, neglects her to defend wives whose "meal tickets" he thinks are more attractive. He even forgets his first wedding anniversary in his zeal to win a divorce for an actress, who uses all her powers to grab off the lawyer for her own which action, of course, is objected to by the wife and there is a separation. The wife weds again, but lo, and behold, soon engages her former husband to get her a divorce from her latest spouse. In the end we find the couple reunited.

We have usually thought that Florence Vidor could save most any picture, but in this instance, her efforts to pull through an uninteresting series of sequences, have been unsuccessful. It is a vessel unworthy of her talent. But at that her work stands out head and shoulders above all the other characterizations. Matt Moore does not look the part of a Parisian lawyer, nor does Harry Myers convince as a French count. Louise Fazenda is satisfactory in the role of Marianne, the actress, and gets a few laughs with her work. George Beranger, who did a novel bit as the movie star in "Are Parents People?" has another bit o' foolishness here— that of an aviator who is continually pursuing the heroine.

There are a few "moments" in the action, the first coming when the wife, inviting friends in to celebrate their first wedding anniversary, finds her husband overlooking the anniversary as he listens to the actress' new client, and George Beranger and Louise Fazenda, his former wife and husband depart. There is some comedy in the sequence in which the aviator takes up Myers in the role of the count and after a series of loop the loops forces him to sign a note releasing his wife. There is much padding in the picture which is decidedly too long for the story. Miss Vidor wears some stunning gowns and, of course, is very attractive. The picture is well mounted but will probably go better in foreign climes.

THEME. A comedy drama of marital mixups laid against a Parisian background.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The trial scene in which Louise Fazenda injects some comedy. The sequence in which the wife leaves her husband who is devoting his time to the actress on his own wedding anniversary.

DIRECTIONS. Paul Bern has done much better things than this, but he has been handicapped here with weak material. Has injected some comedy and a few thrills in the airplane sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Sell Florence Vidor. She is your best bet here. Radio theme may be used to advantage with photo of Harry Myers and his wireless apparatus. Use title in teaser ads week in advance.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of Miss Vidor may pull this one over in some houses with exploitation. O. K. for community houses and the towns.

SUMMARY. A comedy drama with a foreign locale, which is not especially popular with American audiences but which will probably go big in other lands. Florence Vidor is the saving grace and your best bet when selling the picture to your public. The comedy injected by Miss Fazenda may also help put it over.

THE CAST

Alice Sorbier

SYNOPSIS. Maurice Sorbier, noted divorce lawyer, so neglects his wife of a year that she divorces him when he pays more attention to Marianne, an actress. The wife weds Count Zapata, an aviator, who is in love with Alice plots to take Zapata into the air to write him a note freeing Alice. The Count signs, but Sorbier, summoned to aid Alice divorce Zapata, dashes away with Alice himself and remarries her.

Everyman's Wife
(Fox—4365 Feet)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A LIKELY little yarn has been fashioned into a pleasing picture. It unfolds a plot which will be appreciated as running pretty close to life—in that it features a domestic quarrel started by a jealous wife who allows petty worries to make her suspicious. We cannot remember of having seen such a story revolving around insignificant trifles. Usually the husband and wife have their misunderstanding around some ardent rival—whose cards are played face-up on the table. Here the entire plot hinges upon the jealousy of the bride—proving how her suspicions are fed by the fires of circumstantial evidence.

The whole trouble starts over a cat. The husband disagrees with his wife over this feline animal—and soon after the disappearance of their pet he chased a cat next door—and the attractive neighbor comes into the plot by living in the house which the other woman's husband makes love to her, mistaking her for the jealous heroine. Of course a reconciliation is effected when the wife admits her suspicions have no foundation.

The picture contains enough of the human incident to carry it but the type of film is not a favorite with any type of patron. It is acted in realistic fashion by Ethel Hammond, Herbert Rawlinson, Robert Cain and Dorothy Phillips. It is pleasingly mounted and the footage is just the right length to sustain it.

THEME. Domestic drama involving quarrel of couple over mere trifles—the wife being unduly suspicious. In generously admitting her foolish suspicions, they are reconciled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The human touches. The life-like characterizations. Scene when wife starts her strategy to prove her husband false. Scene of other man making love in the dark—to his own wife.

DIRECTION. Has kept it logical most of the way. Has seasoned it with some accurate touches of life. Gets result from players. Errs only in stressing climax—which hardly registers as real.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Certainly affords weaker possibilities in title—which can be exploited in many ways—tie-ups with stores, etc. Might interest young married couples—giving special matinees. Might provoke interest with copy written around easy habit of married couples to jump at conclusions.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the average trade. A good bet for neighborhood houses. Should interest adults in most any locality.

SUMMARY. The first part of this picture runs pretty true to life—the scenes being balanced with lifelike touches of domestic strife. It is pretty well acted, too. The human highlights keep it interesting.

THE CAST

By Ethel Hill and Enid Hibbard. Scenario by Lillie Hayward. Directed by Maurice Elvey.

SYNOPSIS. Young wife allows herself to become unduly suspicious of her husband. The smallest trifles worry her into fits of jealousy. In chasing the cat he broadcasts the woman next door—and the acquaintance ripens into friendship. The jealous bride stages a party to prove her husband false. After realizing his innocence she confesses her foolish suspicions and reconciliation follows.
A Man of Iron
(Chadwick—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE’S a good characterization here for Lionel Barrymore. It permits him to enact one of those strong, silent men roles. No actor is better equipped to do this than the Chadwick star. He lends a rugged quality to his portrayal which is perfectly in key with the plot. This particularly self-made man (true to type) appreciates his failure as a lover. That’s why he has never married—that’s why he becomes frightened when placed in the company of the fair sex. He is all wrapped up in business—the business being the management of an iron foundry. The plot gets under way by introducing the “iron man’s” sister endeavoring to act as a marriage broker. She would like to see him wedded to the aristocratic Bowdoin girl.

As there must be conflict in this type of story the hero has a rival in a titled foreigner who is a fortune hunter. The latter is as spineless, as loveless, and as indif- ferent as the average foreigner. This added friction makes the story more plausible to the average spectator.

The “man of iron” marries the girl of his heart who feels no affection for her husband. But he wins respect for aiding her mother in her fortune without the laughter being advised of his generosity—and he wins sympathy for meeting with failure in romance after waiting so many years for domestic happiness. He draws within himself—and allows his wife to find contentment in her own way. Naturally she becomes interested in him because of his indifference.

After a European journey in which the prince renews his pursuit of her the husband takes a hand, punishes the interloper, and becomes reconciled to his wife. The climax has dramatic tension since it features a duel. Had the plot been treated more compactly—well, let the experts make experiments and exist it would have been more spontaneous and sustaining.

THEME. Domestic drama of self-made man of wealth who makes a failure of marriage but whose strength of character arouses wife’s love and respect.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Lionel Barrymore’s performance. The reception. The settings and atmosphere. The manner in which husband and wife drift apart.

DIRECTION. Brings out good characterization and shows results in manner masculine figures are contrasted. Might have shown less movement by characters and held some of the feminine players in check as a few of them overact. Builds plot convincingly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Use the campaign book for angles on exploitation. Feature Barrymore. Play up the loveless marriage with a teaser campaign showing how husband can win his wife if he steels himself in matters of love as he does with business problems.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses, neighborhoods, community theatres and small towns. Star is well known and talented enough to draw them. Title has appeal.

SUMMARY. Here is a domestic drama which carries a lot of sound characterization and which points a deal of truth. It is well told in the manner in which the central figures are established, though the plot could have been more compact.

THE CAST
Philip Durban.............Lionel Barrymore
Claudia Bowdoin...........Mildred Harris
Martha Durban.............Wendy De Leon
Mrs. Edith Bowdoin........Dorothy Kingdon
Hugh Bowdoin.............Alfred Mack
Donald Trent.............Joan Marston
Maybel Callahan...........Isobel De Leon
Prince Novakian...........Jean De Val

SYNOPSIS. Self-made man manufacturer approaches middle-aged woman. Longs to meet right girl, but realizes his failure as a lover. Marries society girl and aids her mother to recover financial losses. The wife drifts away from him and he permits her the freedom of her pre-marital life. A European prince disappointed in his own romance, seeks an affair with her, but the husband renewing interest in his wife, punishes the interloper. Reconciliation follows.

Shattered Lives
(Gotham Production—Lumas—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliot)

AIDED by a cast of well-known players, Henry McCarty has turned out a fair program picture in this offering from the independent field. While the plot is rather hackneyed, it possesses some novel angles and a few thrills, while the human interest scenes stand out thick here and there. As the title infers the theme deals with lives shattered by fate.

Many years before the tale opens “Mumsie” Trent’s husband had left her, taking with him their baby son. The husband had figured in a railroad wreck, escaping uninjured but losing the child who had been rescued by a conductor. After several years, this child had been adopted by “Mumsie,” who did not know it was her real son. This fact was not known by Spencer Foules and “Red” Myers who plan to introduce “Red” as the long missing son and supplant Donald, the adopted son. They succeed in doing this and also in kidnapping John Trent, the father, who has returned from Alaska with much coin of the realm. However, Donald, leaving home bitterly disappointed with this new turn in his life, teams up with “Chick” Connors and the two aid in a thrilling rescue of Trent, Sr., from the gang of crooks.

This rescue is one of the thrills of the picture and another comes in the suspense-packed scene in which father and son are speedling to the old homestead and the auto bearing a half dozen underworld characters. The crooks overtake the fleeing car, but they are not prepared for the occupants—a few detectives who have been picked up at a garage. All is cleared up when Trent discovers that his adopted son is a real hero.

Ethel Wales is convincing as well as appealing as “Mumsie,” while Edith Roberts is a very acceptable heroine. Robert Gordon has the principal male role and does well in it. The heavy roles are well taken care of by Eddie Phillips and Bernard Randall. The picture is fairly well mounted although the plot does not call for any elaborate sets.

THEME. Melodrama in which a family is reunited after the plot of a gang of crooks to grab the father’s fortune and split the family by introducing a bogus son is foiled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The introduction of “Red” as the son in “Mumsie”’s home. The scene in which “Mumsie” informs her adopted son that the other is his mother. The kidnaping of the father. The rescue by Donald and “Chick.” The auto chase.

DIRECTION. A fair bit of megaphone work. Has kept the action moving along smoothly. Has introduced a good climax and a few thrills. Has brought out some good acting. Has given the picture a fair mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Ethel Roberts. Tell the folks that this is a clean “meller” of the well-mannered type good for the whole family. Emphasize the auto chase. Might advertise it as a story of mother love.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller downtown houses, some community theatres and the towns.

SUMMARY. There is nothing in this one that lifts it out of a well-beaten path, but the acting is good and the cast is made up of a few talented players, notably Robert Gordon and Ethid Roberts. There are some thrills and the climax packs a punch. There is also an adequate mounting.

THE CAST
Donald Trent................Robert Gordon
Sally Barker....................Edith Roberts
“Mumsie” Trent..............Ethid Wales
“Red” Myers....................Eddie Phillips
Enos Dayton....................Charles W. Mack Spencer Foules................Bernard Randall
“Irwin” Marks................Newton House

SYNOPSIS. “Mumsie” Trent is living alone on a farm with Donald Trent, who has reached maturity not knowing that he was adopted by “Mumsie,” after her husband had taken her real son 20 years before. Ten years ago a stranger had come to the farm and demanded John Trent, who had been adopted by “Mumsie,” who did not know he was her real son. This is all developed after a shyster lawyer plants “Red” Myers in the Trent home as the “real” son and kidnaps John Trent, hoping to get his fortune through plot, which fails. Donald is reunited with his parents and weds Sally Barker, his sweetheart.
Smooth as Satin
(Gothic-F. B. O.—6003 Feet)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

VERY thrilling crook melodrama has been put across by F. B. O.—one which tells its action with good logic—and which moves vigorously from the opening scene through the climax. Its the most convincing we've ever seen of a gangster redemption and the carrying-on of a gang of outlaws. In order to build up a convincing atmosphere he has over-stressed several scenes and holds many of them far too long. Thus the suspense loses its punch when it is needed the most. But it is no "hit or miss" direction. He has chosen the character to jump about at breakneck speed, but gives them sufficient time to be natural.

Bayard Veiller's story contains plenty of human highlights which have been appreciated by Ralph Ince, the director. The latter has sensed the fact that the tension of the melodramatic episodes must be balanced with humor. The episode is, nearly dovetailed, acts as a safety element, and this is the problem. There are other factors, too, which make this a quality melodrama. You are given considerable surprise in wondering just how the crooks will extricate themselves. And this suspense is just as keen as when it follows some tense episode.

The manner in which the crooks are introduced offers variety. The feminine Raffles is doubling as a maid in a wealthy dowager's home when she surprises a second-story man. He gives himself up to save her, and out of gratitude she aids him in escaping from prison with a high-speed roadster, rented for the occasion. They might have shown how he made his exit. The pursuit by the gendarmes is handled with suspense and humor. The crooks find refuge in a farmhouse and are married off by a lick justice who thinks them elopers. Eventually they set up housekeeping and are fleeced by an older pair of crooks. Here is some first-rate stuff—entirely new—and paves the way for a thrilling climax when they are tracked down. The husband back to Sing Sing is wrecked by a caving in while passing through the tunnel. A graphic scene, that—and which brings a fitting conclusion to a compact melodrama. The detective is rescued from the debris and the crooks are given their liberty.

Evelyn Brent makes an absorbing bandit, both in her character and is pure intelligence. Bruce Gordon, as her co-worker in crime, acts convincingly. The supporting cast is excellent. It's a corking good melodrama anyway you look at it.

THEME. Crook melodrama of a fair thief who surprisingly is good and has his redemption through marriage.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The surprise incident. The constant suspense. The fine characterization by Miss Brent and Mr. Gordon. Scene of marriage. Scene when couple are outwitted by older crooks. The train wreck. The humor and pathos. The titles.

DIRECTION. Has brought forth a well-balanced crook melodrama, keeping it at an even pace and enlivening it with tense action. Doovetils it with human touches and keeps it in perfect harmony with the melodrama.

EXPOSITION ANGLES. You can tell them that this is a different crook story—one which offers suspense action, realities, humanities, humor and pathos. Play up Evelyn Brent—and exploit the title.

DRAWING POWER. Good enough for first runs or any type of house. It should appeal in any locality.

SUMMARY. This picture has the stuff which appeals, neatly balanced as it is with all the dramatic elements. Has thrills in abundance the climax brings it all together. Much better than the average.

SYNOPSIS. Girl crook masquerading as a servant surprises burglary trying two times. She is thought to have gone mad, but is saved by herself, and she, out of gratitude, aids him in escaping from prison. They find refuge in farmhouse where justice of the peace thinking them elopers, marries them. They are tracked down and deciding to go straight they are fleeced of their stolen loot and the husband is discovered and taken back to prison. A train wreck enables him to escape and the detective gives him his liberty.

The Light of Western Stars
(Paramount—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WILLIAM K. HOWARD, one of the most experienced directors of westerns—and who was responsible for "The Thundering Herd"—has fashioned a fairly exciting melodrama from a story by Zane Grey. Lot of the material is taken from the book. The characterizations are convincing and the carrying-on of a gang of outlaws. In order to build up a convincing atmosphere he has over-stressed several scenes and holds many of them far too long. Thus the suspense loses its punch when it is needed the most. But it is no "hit or miss" direction. He has chosen the characters to jump about at breakneck speed, but gives them sufficient time to be natural.

Grey's story is no different from dozens of others which have been turned into celluloid drama. He has merely shaken up a few ingredients—and Howard has brought them forth against a rich array of backgrounds. The story did so much for "Wanderer of the Wasteland" are well cast here. Jack Holt, enacting the waster, compels the fair visitor from the East to marry him before you can say "Bronco Billy." Being intoxicated at the time he suffers remorse afterward. The girl, played with considerable charm if not much feeling by Billie Dove, realizing that he has a spark of manhood effects his regeneration by declaring her faith in him. Where does Noah Beery figure? Well, he is the leader of the bandits—and gets the girl's fugitive brother (who had killed one of his men) the girl, herself, and the hero in his clutches—and then proceeds to torment them.

The story does much of the unexpected in which the villain allows the trio to discuss their plans for escape. The brother is delegated to collect a ransom, yet he is permitted to talk things over with the other prisoners in the presence of his captor. The latter is sure of himself, but oh, how Beery colors the role! He steals an automobile with us passengers, a study of Western man as we've seen in a half-dozen years. Just when it looks black for the hero who has taken his "walk of death" in the courtyard, the rescuers arrive and save them.

Howard makes the villains meet death with plenty of abandon They have been menaced by the hero but not shot. They stand for a brief moment—then topple over. The scenes help sustain the story—which while conventional manages to carry a full line of melodramatic highlights. Certainly the gunplay is neat enough.

THEME. Western melodrama of a waster who is redeemed by girl who comes into his life. He willingly sacrifices himself for her, but is saved by rescuers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Noah Beery's characterization. The scene when villain has captives in his power. The final climax when they are rescued.

DIRECTION. Surely makes characters convincing by holding scenes long enough to permit them to get everything out of them. Might have quickened up the climaxes and brought more conviction to episode where characters discuss their rescue. Gives it excellent mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Another Zane Grey story. Make tie-ups with book-dealers. Author has a folktwine to his name. Art department—a study of Westerns. Also play up Noah Beery, Jack Holt and Billie Dove.

DRAWING POWER. Should go well in houses catering to westerns. Lovers of outdoor dramas will respond to it. Suitable for any type of house.

SUMMARY. While carrying an obvious story which builds to its conventional finish, the picture has a lot of good stuff in it. The scenes are shaped to get everything possible from them, although some of them are held too long—so that the action loses its pace. Affords Beery with an excellent role. He gives a great performance.

Night Life of New York
(Allan Dwan-Paramount—Eight Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

This is the first of Paramount’s “Golden Forty,” and a real novelty it is. Edgar Selwyn has taken the things that really happen along the Gay White Way and woven them into an entertaining tale which Allan Dwan has transplanted to the screen in vivid and colorful manner.

Never before has the night life been more thoroughly “shot” by the cameraman. The night clubs, the after-theatre crowds, the jazz parties, the hotel life, etc., even one of those fashionable robberies of a bejeweled Broadway dowager as she returns from an all-night round of the clubs with her escort, a taxi chase, Follios gold diggers—all these phases of metropolitan existence and more—have been placed on the silver sheet in a fast-moving manner.

There are some remarkably fine shots of New York and its famous “sights,” especially Broadway at night and then the audience is taken on a tour of the new Gotham institutions—the night clubs with much of the important action taking place in Texas Guinan’s El Fey Club with Texas herself on the job as hostess. These night club scenes are packed with jazz. There is also much action in the Hotel Commodore and it is here that Rod LaRoeque as the wild lad from Clay City, Iowa, meets his future wife, the telephone girl, played expertly by Dorothy Gish.

The plot has to do with the decision of a wealthy Iowan to send his son to New York and get him into so much trouble that he’ll be glad to come home and settle down. The dad plots with his New York manager but the plan is not needed for the son gets into trouble and loses his job and then he becomes mixed up in a hold-up. Rod La Roeque is a good selection for the role of the son. Miss Gish is immense as his switchboard operator sweetheart. Helen Lee Worthing, of course, is the Follios girl to a capital T, while Ernest Torrence comes into his own in a comedy role.

The plot of John Bentley, New York later, is a happy marriage, and Arthur Housman do well in their roles of hold-up men. The picture is lavishly staged and should be a box office picture because of its real novelty.

THEME.—A dramatic comedy romance of life along Broadway in which a western cut-up is cured of his desire to paint things red and returns to Iowa with a telephone girl as his wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS.—The scenes of life in New York’s famous night clubs. The night shots along Broadway. The views of Gotham’s “sights.” The sequence in which Ronald is forced to drive bandits to the scene of a hold up and then is arrested himself for the job. The capture of the crook. The acting of the entire cast.

DIRECTION. Allan Dwan knows Broadway and he has painted its life on the screen in realistic and entertaining manner. He has kept things pepped up from beginning to end and packed in a good quota of “sidelights.” Has given the feature a rich mounting.

EXPOSITION ANGLES. The title is a good one. Plasser the town with it. Play up the names of the stars. Put on a prologue patterned after one of the Night Club scenes.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the large and small houses and especially fine for the towns where pictures of New York life always fascinate and arouse interest.

SUMMARY. A true picture of doings in the metropolis, excellently acted and lavishly mounted with some fine shots of Broadway and other parts of New York and a great sequence dealing with the new night clubs. A good story and lots of action, pretty girls and a fine cast to top it off.

THE CAST.

Ronald Bentley... Rod La Roeque
John Bentley... Ernest Torrence
Morgan Roper... Helen Lee Worthing
Peggy Reed... William Riley Hatch
William Workman... George Hackathorne
Jimmy... Arthur Housman
Jen... By Edgar Selwyn. Scenario by Paul Schofield. Directed by Allan Dwan. Photographed by George Webster.

SYNOPSIS. Discouraged with the antics of his n’er do well son, Ronald, a New Englander, sends him to New York and it is planned to get him into as much trouble as possible so that he will soon want to leave the metropolis. Ronald arrives, gets mixed up in a jewel robbery, fights in a night club, is arrested, figures in a thrilling capture of a yeggman and then, being found innocent, returns to Iowa—with his new-found telephone girl bride.

The Sporting Chance
(Tiffany Production—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

They’re off! When the horses break the tape for the Nassau Handicap and the Southern gentleman’s fast stepper, Kentucky Boy, comes through a winner, thus clearing up his debts and saving his sweethearts’ father from going to prison, there is added the high spot of this picture. The climax is the redeeming feature. It shows some first rate local color—a well photographed race, and a fair amount of suspense—which compensate for a stereotyped story that doesn’t hang together very well.

There isn’t much variety to the plot—even though there is a little surprise in the “about face” the Northern lover makes when he would compromise the heroine for refusing to marry him. It is planted that he is a man of wealth, but the point is somewhat hazy concerning the hero’s debt to him. The owner of Kentucky Boy has renewed his friendship with the heroine upon his arrival in New York—and she gladly takes up her engagement with him. Yet when her father gets involved with financial losses the girl rejects him coldly and becomes engaged to the man of wealth. This plotting is too convenient to ring true—and it spoils the characterization.

There is one sequence which introduces a lavish party being given the heroine by the Northerner. Some of this action bears evidence of being padded, though it is necessary to lead up to the climax. The hero has gained admittance to find out why his rival over there has shrew to attach his horse. But while he is in the house his romantic worries are dispelled by the heroine’s confession for treating him so coldly. While the minion of the law is guarding the stable door, the stable boys tear down the boards on the opposite side and take the horse to her home, hiding him upstairs in her boudoir. It is an easy matter to get the horse on the track by telling him to an ‘even’ wager.

What follows is the race. The director has shot the real thing and has evidently used a few cameras to capture close-ups. It is an obvious story, but it has its moments of interest. The players get fair results.

THEME. Melodrama of race-track revolving around Southerner who owes fast stepper. He is in debt to rival who has sheriff attach the horse. The girl—to save her father, consents to marry the Northerner. The Southerner wins the race and the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The horse race. The color and atmosphere of the stables and track. Scene of party. Moment when hero saves heroine from being compromised. The acting by Dorothy Phillips and George Fawcett. Humor when horse is quartered in boudoir and is driven to track.

DIRECTION. Gets good incident and atmosphere from track episodes. Fails to make story logical all the way—and pads out some of the action. All in all obtains fair results.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Dorothy Phillips’ return to screen after a long absence. Mention Lou Tellegen and George Fawcett. Bill as a colorful melodrama of race-track.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses, neighborhood and community theatres. Also suitable for small towns. Cast might attract them.

SUMMARY. This is as obvious as any other race-track story, and plot doesn’t hold up very well—the characters jumping at too many conclusions. Yet it contains some first rate incident and atmosphere—and a climax which is colorful.

THE CAST.

Darrell Thornton... Lou Tellegen
Caleb Winthrop... Dorothy Phillips
Robert Selby... Caleb Winthrop
WilliamColby... Theodore Von Eltz
Melodie Cole... Andrew Clark
Jockey... Kentucky Boy

By John Philip Bernard. Directed by Oscar Apfel.

SYNOPSIS. New York girl refuses to entertain marital ideas of wealthy admirer. Encounters Southerner who brings famous race horse North. The other man has his horse attached by sheriff over some debt. The girl after vowing her love for Southerner rejects him because of her father’s financial losses. To save him from jail she consents to marry the Northerner. Eventually she turns to the Southerner when he wins the race with Kentucky Boy.
The Making of O'Malley
(First National—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A LL the elements of hokum (the kind of hokum that appeals to the audience) have been woven together to make a heart interest picture. While much of the plot is preposterous still it contains enough sentiment, romance and action to hold the attention. The characterization is here exemplary. Milton Sills making his first appearance as a star has the role of a New York policeman. His acting is creditable even though he carries out the law in terms that you will have to stretch your imagination to accept.

Stories whose central characters are cops are invariably full of action and color. The hero's work is hazardous enough to fill a serial. This particular blue-coat is one of the most ruggedly honest men of the force. His duty guides him to help school-children across the street and to capture a desperate gang of bootleggers. His sense of justice is strong enough to make the man he railroaded to prison—and his sense of fairness to the girl he loves leads him to sacrifice his honor to protect the man engaged to her. With such sure-fire qualities indicating the kind of man the hero is, there can be no doubt of the sympathy and admiration extended him by the audience.

Where the story doesn't hold up is in presenting the heroine as a society girl who hobnobs around with a bootlegger—and in the manner in which the clouds are erased and the sunshine turned on for the happy ending. The cop has been humiliated by his captain before the girl. He is stripped of his shields and in leaving the house where he has permitted the heroine's fiancé to kill him he shot by the child's father, paroled from prison. Yet in the twinkle of an eye, the convict has no charge pressed against him, the shields are returned to the cop when the paroled man gives the name of the man higher up, and the heroine shows her affection for the officer.

The picture, nevertheless, has audience appeal—and Sills has a following. So this new venture of his will doubtless register at the box-office. It is well pieced together and directed with an eye upon the emotional emotions. Dorothy Mackaill has a rapid role as the society-schoolteacher. It is a thankless part at best, but she makes the most of it.

THEME. Heart interest drama of cop's adventures while patrolling his beat. Has romance, helps children in distress and sacrifices his honor to save the girl he loves from scandal.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Sills' convincing performance. The local color. The railroading of the crook. The incident. The capture of the bootleggers. The scene when officer is stripped of his shields. The pathos.

DIRECTION. Extracts all the elements to make this story tug at the emotions. Doesn't overdo the sentiment until the climax, when he piles it on too thick. Injects sure-fire hokum, keeps it moving and mounts it well.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with police force. Dress up quartette as bluecoats to render vocal numbers. Exploit Milton Sills making first appearance as a star.

DRAWING POWER. Has sure-fire qualities which should draw patronage. Title and fact of Sills making appearance as star should get them. Suitable for any house.

SUMMARY. While this is a preposterous story in the way the characters are shunted about it nevertheless packs away a lot of sure-fire hokum—and never fails to tug at the heart strings. Milton Sills plays a New York cop and acquits himself in an able manner.

THE CAST:

O'Malley . . . . Milton Sills
Lucille Thayer . . . . Dorothy Mackaill
Margie . . . . Helen Rowland
Danny . . . . Warner Richmond
Herbert Browne . . . . Thomas J. Cassigan
Capt. Collins . . . . Claude King
The District Attorney . . . . Allen Brander

By Gerard Beaumon. Directed by Lambert Hillyer.

SYNOPSIS. New York policemen not permitted to beat which is heavily traveled by school-children. He aids the child of crook whom he has sent to prison and develops romance with schoolteacher. Captures bootleggers, but allows ringleader to go as the schoolteacher is engaged to him. Stripped of his shields and under suspicion he wins back respect of his superiors and the love of the girl when his self-sacrifice is appreciated.

The White Monkey
(Sawyer-Lubin Production—First National—6121 Feet)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

JOHN GALSWORTHY would have a difficult time recognizing his novel in the screen version. A work primarily of a deeply psychological nature it shot home a powerful moral which the pietistic fails to do. Instead we have nothing more interesting than a "triangle" feature, a wandering continuity and much meaningless comedy.

The picture gets its title from a painting of a white monkey symbolizing the modern moral code. Fleur Forsyte, a London beauty, weds Michael Mont, but continues her clandestine meetings with an artist. Bicket causes stealing books is "fired," from Michael's firm. Victorine, his wife, to aid the family budget, consents to pose in the nude for Desert. Bicket recognizes the finished painting and seeks Michael's advice. Michael to prove there is nothing wrong need only appeal to the girl, signs the picture which shows the action and has nothing whatever to do with the plot.

The film is too long for the story it tells, in fact the first few reels are packed with unessentials. There is some drama in the scene in which the artist confesses his love to the husband for the first time and elections to his own house in which the husband, seeking the wife of Bicket, finds his own spouse with the artist. The picture is also marred with subtitles.

THEME. A modern society drama revolving around the eternal triangle.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The confession of the artist to the husband that he is in love with his wife. The scene in which Michael finds Fleur with the artist, when he expects to find his former employer's wife in the studio. The gowns worn by Miss LaMarr.

DIRECTION. Has permitted checking of the action by insertions of cheap comedy. Has not succeeded in making his characters very convincing, except in one or two instances. Has given the picture an attractive mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Barbara LaMarr and the title. Tieup on Galworthy's book. Fashion display by using stills of star, as well as window tieups on hair, dresses, toilet articles and perfumes.

SAVING POWER. Will satisfy admirers of Barbara LaMarr but may not appeal to the general public. Suitable for second class downtown theatres, some community houses and the towns.

SUMMARY. Don't promise your patrons too much on this one. While it is an adaptation of a very excellent novel by a noted author, it does not follow that tale very closely. However Barbara LaMarr has many admirers and many of them may overlook any shortcomings in story to see their favorite. The picture is well mounted.

THE CAST:

Fleur Forsyte . . . . Barbara LaMarr
Michael Mont . . . . Thomas Holding Wilfrid Desert . . . . Henry Victor
Soames Forsyte . . . . George Marion
Ethelbert Danby . . . . Colin Campbell

The Orpheum theatre, which suspended vaudeville for the summer in line with the regular Orpheum policy last week, closed Tuesday. It is not known as yet whether the shutdown is temporary or permanent. The theatre will remain dark until the next vaudeville season which opens in August. The policy of the theatre for the summer season was two changes of first run productions a week. It is said that a misunderstanding over the renewal of the lease is the cause of the closing and good authority has it that the regular movie program will be resumed within a short time.

The selling force at the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange is more enthused than ever over the outlook here since the visit last week of Felix Feist, general sales manager, and the men are all hammering at their territories with determination to run up a record season on contracts. George L. Cloward, exchange manager is making a swing to the district offices of Idaho, consuming about two week's time.

Clyde Messinger, manager of the local house, which has not yet been returned the latter part of this week from the convention in New York City.

Reginald Denny, Universal star, was the guest of Salt Lake City Monday and Tuesday, he having come in to make personal appearances at the Victory theatre in connection with the showing of the film in which he starred. He drew heavily at the theatre making short talks to capacity audiences both days. Samuel Henley, manager of the Universal exchange here, introduced Denny at each appearance. A banquet was given in the star's honor at the Newhouse Hotel Monday.

Harry T. Nolan, Mountain District Manager for Associated First National, was here this week conferring with W. F. Gordon, exchange manager. He returned to Denver upon the completion of his business here.

Regional News from Correspondents
Theater and airdoe cashiers continue popular with the banditry of St. Louis, Mo., and during the past week several pretty misses were added to the long string of victimization by the young chaps who point their pistols promiscuously.

Miss Marian Collins, cashier of the Queens Air-dome, Maffitt and Marcus avenues, dreamed that she had been held up by a thief and shot with the many similar robberies in recent weeks. On Sunday night, June 14, her dream came true when four armed men, all young and roughly dressed and holding handkerchiefs over their faces rushed into the air-dome. They robbed Miss Collins of $273.

When Miss Collins sought to appease her bedroom companion over this small change one of them forced her to open the door of her cage so they could obtain all the cash in sight. So quickly did the quartette work, Manager Tom Curley who was conversing with a patron a short distance away was unaware that a robbery was in progress.

On the night of June 16 the Liberty Music Hall, 3627 Dorchester boulevard, held the Missed Air-dome, Sarah street and West Pine boulevard were held-up. Three youths for several days from Miss Catherine McCrinn, cashier of the Liberty, which is a combination moving picture and musical fare house, were held up. A trio of bandits, suspected of being the same as those who robbed Miss McCrinn, held the Missed Haze Wood, cashier of the Air-dome. That robbery netted the bandits $72.

On the night of June 18 a trio of robbers held up the Compton Air-dome, 3107 Easton avenue, taking $10 in cash and theatre tickets. Miss Bess Beich, cashier, tricked the trio into believing that a bag containing the tickets was filled with money. A short time before the robbery was staged Jack Shea, manager, departed with the bulk of the night’s receipts.

Later in the week the police arrested a young man who they claim has been identified by Miss Wood and another employee of the Arcade Air-dome as one of the trio who held her up. The police are looking for the other bandits who were with the suspect on the night of the crime.

SAN FRANCISCO firemen, who are to be placed in all city theatres as soon as the 1925-26 budget becomes available in July, may be created special policemen for the enforcement of safety regulations. This was the concession granted by the supervisors' building committee to more than 100 protestors, representing organizations with a total membership of 90,000 who appeared at the City Hall to urge more safety in San Francisco amusement houses. Overcrowding of aisles will be strictly prohibited, according to a statement made at the meeting by Chief of Police Dan O'Brien. Firemen have not been required to be in theatres during the past year as theatres are no longer forced to pay for the services of the officers. The new budget makes provisions for fifteen firemen to supervise safety conditions.

San Francisco theatre-goers got to bed at an early hour June 12. There was no grumblng among them over loss of sleep. They had attended the midnight show staged at the California Theatre by famous actresses and actors, who stretched their working day by some three hours in order to do their bit in the American Legion endowment fund drive.

A large number of the Charlotte exchanges have turned to express shipments, as they find the express is much more satisfactory than Parcel post. In shipping by express, the film can be traced at all times, as there is a complete record of the same from the time it leaves the exchange until its delivery to the exhibitor, as each man handling the same signs it. In shipping by parcel post this cannot be done, and it is impossible to trace or fine film that has been lost. By shipping express the exhibitor is assured of more efficient service than by parcel post.

It has just been announced that the Film Exchange Managers are going to attend the Convention of Exhibitors at Wilmington Beach, June 21st and 22nd. The managers will be accompanied by their sales force. This is unusual as for the past several years the exchange managers and salesmen have not attended these conventions.

Harry K. Lucas arrived in the city this week to arrange for the re-modeling of the Ideal Theatre, the lease on which his brother Arthur Lucas has taken over. Baltimore

O f the most interesting features of the condition of business in the Monumental City and an almost sure sign as to which way the business weather vane is turning is that the advertising space taken by the various playhouses in the newspapers. Up to the present time there has been no cut in the advertising allotment for the summer period and with the exception of the terrible hot spell which lasted for about eight days, and which gave a black eye to the box office receipts to all the theatres, the patronage has been holding up very well.

Efforts are being made by the management of Richard Deplein, Jr. having ice water served to patrons during the performances when it is very hot—the weather—not the water.

Extensive improvements are being made in the Garden Theatre, here, controlled and operated by the Combined Whitehurst Interests, while the playhouse continues to give its regular schedule of performances each day. The interior is being entirely redecorated with a new color scheme and the air washing and cooling system has been improved and enlarged. Recently about 200 chairs were added to the seating capacity and the whole house had new chairs installed. William E. Stumpf manages the Garden.

The Parkway Theatre, North Avenue at Charles St., another theatre operated by the Combined Whitehurst Interests, of which H. M. Messiter is manager, has just had the front washed and cleaned and presents a spic and span appearance.

Madeline Hoff, on the office staff of the Century Theatre, announces that she is now Mrs. G. W. Mergler, having been married on May 23 at St. Elizabeth’s parish by Father Sebastian. This was quite a surprise to her many friends who wish her lots of happiness.

A very well earned vacation is now being enjoyed by U. S. Brummel manager of the Century Theatre. During his vacation Howard S. Jefferson, of the Whitehurst staff, is managing the playhouse.

W. A. Miller, advertising manager of the Jewish Times, who was recently moving the picture theatre accounts and reading notices for that paper, recently suffered a serious injury when he accidentally ran a knife into the palm of his hand.

George C. Wilson, Tyrone, Pa., president of the Wilson Amusement Company, operating the Rivoli Theatre, here, and Guy L. Wonders, manager of that playhouse returned to their respective homes after having participated in the golf tournament for film men at Briar Lodge Club, New York City. Mr. Wilson took down one of the prizes.

A unique method of giving moving picture news to its patrons is being used by the Garden Theatre. Besides using the unused space for new pertaining to the players and plays, short items are used between the vaudeville numbers printed on the program.

Joe Hornstein, vice president and general manager of Hoyvells Cine Equipment Co., is celebrating his 22nd year in the supply business and has received many congratulations from leading exhibitors throughout this territory. Joe has recently appointed M. A. Krug, formerly with the Sibley-Pitman Electric Co, manager of his lamp department. As usual, Joe is managing to get his equipment installations, a recent one being all of Bratter & Pollocks new theatre under construction in New Jersey.

Nat Marcus who was formerly with the Pathé Branch in Albany, has returned to the chairmanship of the Woodbridge theatre at Woodbridge, N. J. Mr. Marcus recently received a popular young lady, also named Marcus. Mrs. Marcus was formerly connected with the Jans Pictures Corp. Ed Carroll, the “Prize Winner” of Associated Exhibitors, has won another prize and this time it is a baby girl. Ed has just bought a new home at Avon by the Sea. Here is an example of what a number of years of service with one company and consistent salesmanship will accomplish.

Charles Tangeman has taken over the Roxana theatre at Linden, N. J. from Dr. Frank Riche and will continue to operate through the summer months.

Prominent New York exhibitors on the lookout for new exchanges this week were Louis Heiman of Rahway, Alexander O. Cranford and Hilde, and Sam Perry of Englewood. The controversy between Mr. Olin and Ed Carroll concerning the aur 1 ton moustache is still on. Mr. Olin states that it will stay on.

They are telling a good one on Louis Heiman, Recently, Louis and his gang from the New Empires, at Rahway, N. J, all followers of the famous sport of I. Walton, went out to snare the fancy cl tute. Louis took along a big block of ice so that there would be no need to worry about keeping the theatre cool during the hot weather. No one caught a fish.

Herman Lee, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, is back from his vacation. Benjamin Stern, assistant manager of the Troy theatre, is also back, having spent a week in Atlantic City. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Roberts, of the Troy theatre, are in New York for a week, where Mr. Roberts is putting in each afternoon, following his usual custom, at the baseball field. Mr. Roberts is manager of the Troy theatre.

Another change has taken place along Film Row with Charles Walberg, who has been acting as manager of the Associated Exhibitors' branch in the city, going with Fox, succeeding O. R. Riefel who came here to handle the Fox exchange about eight months ago, and who has now returned to Buffalo where he will continue with the same company. Charles F. Boyd, a former sales manager of the Associated Exhibitors, has been promoted to the management. The first exhibitor to greet Mr. Walberg in his new capacity was Albert St. John, who runs the Auburn Hill and Delaware theatres in Albany.

The crowd at the Pathé exchange had good luck in connection with the recent yachting party which had been the one subject of conversation for almost a week. When the party boarded the yacht in the Albany basin, everything looked as if it was going to be a pleasant evening, with dancing on board and other entertainment. When it came to starting the boat, however, it was all cut short. A gag boat, as the bird were simply would not budge. After waiting around for an hour or more the party of forty or more passengers dispersed, going to a Chinese restaurant for supper, while others sought the nearest available transportation. Leon Medem, manager of the Pathé exchange in Albany, was in New York city the past week, attending a sales meeting, and then remained over for the home office pictures.

During the remainder of the summer, the Albany Film Board will have a busy month. The same holds good with the Arbitration Board.

The Empire theatre in Glens Falls, which is run by C. H. Buckley, of Albany, entertained the members of the G.A.R. and their wives, of that city on the night of June 16. All patrons were presented with a small American flag as they entered the theatre, according to Oscar Perrin, managing director of the Buckley chain, nearly 3,000 of the flags were given away.

William Smalley, who was driving a car, Sam Hochstir, one time film salesman in this city, but now producer of a couple of large houses, is looking like a million dollars these days, and according to all reports, is proving most successful as an exhibitor.

Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, who was in this city last week for a day or so, continued on to New York city.

Jack Bellman, general manager for Renown out of New York city, and Sidney Katz, special representative for F.B.O., were both in town during the week.

William Smalley has just purchased an old stage coach which some fifty-odd years ago traveled between Richfield Springs and Albany. With a couple of jet black horses drawing it, the coach is being used by Mr. Smalley in making a tour of 421 miles between the various theatres in the Smalley circuit, a trip that will consume 34 days. Mr. Smalley, who makes headquarters in the theatre where he is said to be considering the building of four new theatres in as many places.

Law Fisk of Fort Edward, announced that he will drop his house in Chatham to three days a week from now on and that the one in Fort Edward will run but four days a week until next fall. Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan, of Schuyler- ville, who were also in town during the week, announced that they had dropped to three days a week. Friday Saturday and Sunday, but that the Sunday business was the only one that was really profitable.

Mrs. Milligan further said that the wall paper company had decided not to rebuild the mill in Schuyer- ville that was burned a few months ago. Mrs. Milligan is a public spirited individual and will furnish free motion pictures at a church lawn festival on July 2.

When it comes to having an able manager, Charles Sosenks, who runs the Grand, in Johnstown, claims that Edwin F. Russell is second to none. Russell is connected with the Paramount agency for several years in Boston. Mr. Russell looks after the theatre a good part of the time, leaving Mr. Sosenks to the handling of vaudeville bookings.

The Buckleys, a known exhibitor in Kingston, belongs to a fishing club which does not permit any of its members to angle other than with a fly. Mr. Lazan- rus, who looks as brown as the proverbial berry, from his many fishing trips, has exceptionally good luck this spring with rainbow and brown trout. In fact every time he comes to Albany he is in a hurry to get back to keep a fishing engagement for the next day.

Back from his honeymoon, a portion of which was spent in Atlantic City, John Garry, is once more looking after the management of the Empire theatre in Glens Falls. During his absence, the details of the house were handled by Alec Sayles, of Albany.

Troy local 285 Motion Picture Machine Operators, meets on the third Sunday in July, for the nomination of election of officers. In all probability the present ones will be re-elected, these being Har- ry Culver, president, John Run- dall, vice-president; Harry Corps, recording secretary; and Al Le- man, treasurer-secretary.

Elmer Crownsnield on June 16, observed two important dates, for the day marked his birthday anniversary, and likewise marked his twenty-fourth year in repairing motion picture projection machines for the local exhibitors. Mr. Crow- nishield, who has a place in Al- bany started in years ago with Edison. During the 24 years he has handled theatres on and off, his last venture being the Bijou in Troy, which is now run by Rose and Studentini. Mr. Crow- nishield covers about 24 counties in the state.

Tony Veiller, manager of the Lincoln, Troy, observed his birthday anniversary during the past week, and was presented with an attractive watch and box. Tony's mother spent several days in Albany last week and will sail for Europe the fore part of July.

Frederick J. Cuneo, who has been handling the Rialto and Park theatres in Glens Falls for the last year or so, has gone to Amster- dam, where he is associated with J. A. Hutchen, in handling the four Keith houses in that city. Before leaving Glens Falls, Mr. Cuneo was given a farewell dinner at Fitzgerald's Hotel by a number of his friends in that city. James Conlon is the new manager of the Park theatre.

With the exception of the Rose theatre in Troy, all other motion picture houses have cut their uneliminated amateur nights for the summer season. Harmanus-Bleck- er Hall, in Albany, which drew the largest attendance of any such attractions along with pictures, also has cut out the home talent nights.

Canada

Canada has been seen the spec- tacle recently of one association leader handing a verbal bouquet to an officer of a rival organization for work performed in connection with an important legislative matter.

The one who received the trib- ute was Mr. W. J. Wilson, and the secretary of the Canadian Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association, and president of the organization, in John A. Cooper of Toronto, pres- ident of the Motion Picture Dis- tributors and Exhibitors of Can- ada. The occasion was a meeting in connection with the opposing of a bill from E. R. E. Chevrier, mem- ber of the Canadian-parliamentary committee investigating Ottawa East, to amend the Canadian Copyright Act where- by theatres would be called upon to pay a fee for the play- ing of copyrighted music by theatri- tre orchestras or otherwise. The proposed law has practically died a 'natural death' in the committee stage at Ottawa and this result was obtained largely by Col. Coop- er and the officers of the two Canadian associations.

Charles A. Meade, manager of the Lyceum Theatre, one of the large theatres of Montreal, was going right after business despite the weather. After making special preparations for the summer season, Manager Meade decided to have a statement sent to the people of his city to let them know what he had.

H. Walmsley, formerly of Van- couver, B. C., and recently ap- pointed manager of the College Theatre, Winnipeg, has also adopt- ed a special summer policy for the theatre in changing programmes three times weekly instead of weekly.

The Princess Theatre, Rudeau Street, Ottawa, Ontario, was again threatened by fire on June 16 when flames were discovered two feet al- ter midnight in the premises above the theatre. The fire, which was caused by defective wiring, did not damage the theatre itself and it was doing business next day as usual. Last fall, the Princess, which is owned by A. H. Coplan, was forced to close for a week, during which a serious fire occurred out in the upper floor of the build- ing.

The Fern Theatre, Bank Street, Ottawa, opened with much suc- cess by Herbert C. Benson, has blossomed forth with a new front and new paint finish as a result of extensive overhauling. The thea- tre was not closed for the remodel- ing.

George H. Valiquette, Fox News cameraman at Ottawa, Ontario, is accompanying the official Canadian Government expedition to the Arctic under the official camera- man of the party. Every summer for some years past Mr. Vali- quette has been on the Far North with the expedition.

One of those who took an ac- tive part in the Civic Jubile Cele- bration, at Ottawa, June 10 to 16, commemorating the 125th Anniversary of the founding of the city was Donat Paquin, proprie- tor of the Laurier and the Eden Theatres, Mr. Paquin has taken a personal in- terest in community projects for some years. He is an officer of the Rotary Club of Hull.
Cincinnati

The local Paramount Exploitation Conference was held at the Hotel Gibson on Monday and Tuesday, June 14 and 15. The meeting was opened by C. E. Peppiatt branch manager for Famous Players with Bill Danzinger explaining his outlook for the coming month. After the preliminary welcome the meeting really got under way and some very good plans for putting pictures over with a bang were formulated and all those present pledged to do all in their power to give their attractions wider publicity. Those attending were: Fred Campbell, supervisor for the Keith Theatres in Louisville, Ky.; Fred Myers, manager of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, O.; C. F. McGovern, of the Majestic Theatre, Findlay; C. George Ray of the Colonial Theatre, Washington, C. H. O.; Varley Young press representative for the Lithson Theatres in Dayton, O.; John V. F. J. Ferguson of the Avondale Theatre, Columbus, O., was seen around the film buildings for a few days.

Johnny Jones, manager of the Majestic Theatre, Columbus, O., is the proud possessor of a baseball with all of the Red players’ names autographed on it. Johnny received his great treasure last week when he attended a game between the Reds and Giants at Cincinnati in which Luque was the winning pitcher over Bentley in a one to nothing game. The Cuban is a great friend of Ray Frankel one of the owners of the Majestic and after the game he had the players autograph the winning ball with which he struck out three men in a row to end the game. Johnny now has the ball on display in a glass case in front of the Majestic and all Columbus is congratulating him for being so fortunate.

Ed. McIvor has been appointed branch manager for the local Metro Goldwyn exchange.

Seattle

An ANNOUNCEMENT was made on Film Row last week to the effect that R. E. Charles had been awarded the general management of the Star Amusement Company in Everett, operating the four leading motion picture and legitimate houses in that city. Mr. Charles was formerly manager of the Columbia Theatre in Portland and was also for a time associated with the Jensen-VonHerberg circuit in the auditing department of the Portland office. He was expected to take active charge of the Everett houses before the first of July.

Famous Players received a wire from Sioux Falls stating that Manager Mendenhall had been operated on for appendicitis.

Business and business only” has been the motto of Manager Fred G. Slifer’s local First National office for the last several weeks, with no appearance of any chance for a let-up. The reason has been the Play Date Drive which First National has been conducting, and which has seen the Seattle office in the lead for the first eight weeks. R. C. Hill, former associated with L. K. Brin’s Kwalitey Pictures Exchange in a sales capacity, last week was named as a new member of the Film Booking Offices staff by Manager A. H. Peck. Mr. Hill will cover the state of Washington for F.B.O., specializing on the larger cities in the territory.
In celebration of the fifty-first birthday of N. E. Field, general manager for Jones, Linick & Schaefer, his five cronies dined with him last Tuesday. The six of them represented one hundred and twenty-nine years of service with the one firm, which is rather a wholesome record in the show business. In point of service, the record is as follows: Sigmund Faller, general auditor, twenty-six years; Norman E. Field, general manager, twenty-five years; William Rosenblum, manager of the Rialto theatre, twenty-three years; George Moore, manager of the Orpheum, twenty-two years; John G. The New Victory, is closed three days a week; the Cedar is closed 5 days, operating only on Saturday and Sunday; The Market Square, owned by Sam Parke, is also running only Saturday and Sunday; the Old Broadway, managed by J. R. Wilkinson, is open four days a week; The Camera and Columbia theatres are closed three days a week; the Empress, the Lark and Happy Hour are open Saturday and Sunday only. The Park National is closed altogether for the summer.

Mike Mastrodon, who owns and runs the Mayfield theatre, Cleveland, is reported recuperating from a long illness which has kept him away from the theatre world for many months.

Mrs. Edna Bearse has recently purchased the Kalamata theatre, Toledo.

Fred Clemen has recently purchased the Pleasant Hour Theatre at Woodfield, and now calls it the Alpine.

The Film Exchange Bldg. registrar contained the names of the following who visited the building during the past week: H. B. Betz, Dreamland, Minerva; H. L. Tracy, Temple, Willard; J. A. Beidler, Eastwood and East Auditorium, Toledo; W. L. Beckham, Artcraft, Toledo; Max Schagrin, Strand, Youngstown; Jack Stein, Ret- gent, Youngstown; F. W. Crosby, of the Smith Enterprises, Warren; H. B. Deckey, Libertus, Vermilion; H. L. Moranz, Grand Lisbon; J. R. Freeman, Academy, Canton; C. W. Goodrich, Char- don Theatre, Chardon, and the rapid Hoffman of the Star Theatre, Amsterdam, Star Theatre, Lyons, and the Senator, Canton.

It is reported that the Pastime Theatre, Akron, closes this week to open again on August 15th.

Will H. Hayes was in Cleveland last Friday. He came to address the members of International Ro- tary in convention here. His sub- ject was “Building Public Con- fidence.” Mr. Hayes is an honorary member of the Sullivan, Indiana, Rotary Club.

W. C. Bachmeyer was in town last week. This was Mr. Bach- meyer’s first visit here as central division manager for Fox. For the ten years he was central division manager for Metro-Gold- wyn.

F. C. Quimby, Fox short subject sales manager, spent the last week in the Cleveland Fox exchange. Mr. Quimby is making a humane trip to the west coast with limited stop-overs at key points.

J. E. Beck, manager of the local Vitagraph exchange, announces a change in territorial arrangements which will become effective July 1st. At that time the following counties in Ohio that have been served by the Cleve- land Vitagraph office will be served by the Cincinnati Vitagraph of- fice: Warren, Trumbull, Allen, Aug- usta, Shelby, Union, Fostoria, FairFeld, Perry, Morgan, Noble, Monroe and Washington.

Condolence from all members of the theatre go to Father R. F. Bishop, city salesman for the local Vitagraph exchange, who lost his little over four-year-old son last week. The child died of pneumo- nia after a very brief illness.

J. S. Jossey, of Progress Pic- tures, spent the week in New York shopping for new product for independent distribution in the state. Milton Simon of Rayart Pictures, was a visitor in Cleveland last week.

The local F. B. O. office was closed last Friday afternoon from 2 to 4 o’clock out of respect for Harry Berman, general manager.

Walter Brandt has been named manager of the Cleveland Metro-Goldwyn exchange filling a vacancy caused by the promotion of former Manager C. E. Almy to central di- vision manager. Walter is a Cleveland product and his return- ing to the fold was enthusias- tically greeted by his many exchange managers and many exhibitors throughout the territory. Mrs. Brandt has been manager of the Metro-Goldwyn office in Cin- cinnati for the past year.

Edmund J. Melvor has been named manager of the Cincinnati Metro-Goldwyn office to succeed Walter Brandt. Mr. Melvor was with Metro-Goldwyn in the west as special sales representative on the trackless train.

Nat Baruch, well known local exhibitor, was on his way to Florida. Baruch says he wants to cash in on the Florida gold rush.

S. N. Burger, who has been in command of the local Metro-Gold- wyn office in the interim of the promotion of Clifford Beidler to di- vision manager and the appoint- ment of Walter Brandt as local exchange manager, has been made special representative and constant to Felix Feist. Burger has left Cleveland, and is now making New York headquarters.

George Kirby, booker in the Cincinnati Metro-Goldwyn exchange, stopped off in Cleveland last Friday on his return from a trip up the lakes.

The Metro-Goldwyn trackless train was in town last Wednesday. Thursday and Friday, and grabbed off first honors in the International Rotary pageant which was staged during the Rotary convention. For the first time the train has started on its trip across the country, it wore an insignia other than the Metro-Goldwyn sign. Here it car- ried a Rotary seal conspicuously placed, so as to attract the thou- sands of people attending the con- vention. The train was also used by the Rotarians as a taxi for its members. From Cleveland the train went to Akron, Canton, and then on to other points in the ter- ritory.

Rose Levine, for the past four years associated with the local First National exchange, has given notice that she has a new job await- ing her. The job is that of being the wife of Louis Sattler, not a recruit from the motion picture business. Congratulations both to Mr. Sattler and Miss Levine.

Norman Moray, manager of the local First National exchange, started out the other day in his car for Pittsburgh. He came back with a stack of contracts, but no car. Some days later the car was reported found, having been sold to some drog-pollers. No evidence of contraband was left in the car—worse luck.
J. L. Marentette, whose resignation as manager of the local exchange of Associated Exhibitors became effective today, left last evening for Sanford, Florida, where he will immediately take over the duties of management. Marentette, Inc., controlling the Milane and Princess theaters. He was accompanied by Mrs. Marentette and their school-girl daughter, Helen.

Three local exchanges are to move into new quarters next month. Pathe, Fox, and Paramount are planning to get into the new building located on Walton and Bartow streets, just as quickly as they can, following its completion and arrangement in their respective offices which must be made before the change can be made effective.

Thomas A. Kilfoil, special representative of R. S. Kent, who came to Atlanta some days ago, is still here, planning and putting in effect his plans, for Paramount's move in July into the new building. Mr. Kilfoil is of the opinion that it will be July 20th before the Famous Players-Lasky force will be able to move. The new offices will be in the standardized way of all the Paramount offices.

Pathe is planning to move into their new quarters about June 27th. The building is absolutely fire proof, and contains, as does the Paramount place, every convenience.

Fox is planning also, on moving in about July 1st. The new building will have complete equipment and will be in operation next month.

Kingsmore, who managed the Howard theater, has been transferred from Columbus, Ga., to Greenville, S. C.; J. L. Cartwright, from the Rialto theater, Chattanooga, Tenn., to the Strand, Knoxville, and W. F. Brock from the Strand, Knoxville, to the Grand and Rio theater in Cumberland. This completes the series of shifts in this territory, for Southern Enterprises.

And speaking of sports, comes a report that Barney Bristol of Stillman's Theaters, Inc., bowled three hundred the other day. He did not mention, however, how many games he played to make this score or what day this all happened.

R. R. Dodero has bought out C. L. King at Florence, Wisconsin, according to report.

On June 19th the Milwaukee F. B. O. closed its offices from 2 to 4 o'clock. H. M. Berman, general sales manager of F. B. O. were being held.

Jack Hickey, theatre magnate in Milwaukee, Wis., has been notified by the Mer Mac and Opera House, was a visitor in Milwaukee this week.

Local Itinerant Management.

The management of the Lorraine Theatre in Milwaukee in addition to his regular duties at the Gem theater, has established quiet a reputation for himself putting over a number of style shows, stags, minstrels and topical comedies.

Lyle Webster, formerly associated with George Miner at the Unique theatre in Ladysmith and the Majestic at Rice Lake, is recently to open the Wiggwam theatre, which by the way is under canvas, at Iron Mountain, Mich.

Carl Ebert, formerly sales representative for First National, now traveling southern Wisconsin for Metro and Sam Stoll who has taken over the Universal in Omaha where he was manager, will also travel in a section of the Wisconsin territory for Metro.

Eddie Gavins, salesman for Universal in northern Wisconsin, now drives over his territory with a new 1926 model Model T.

E. G. Tussell, Warner Bros. franchise holder in Wisconsin, has resigned as vice president of the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade, according to latest reports and no successor as yet has been named.

S. A. Shirley, Metro-Goldwyn divisional sales manager, is in Milwaukee visiting with Sam Sherman, local Metro manager. It is understood that Shirley is here in connection with the first run situation prevailing in this city at the present time.

United Theatres Co. at Janesville recently opened the Rialto theatre in Iron Wood, Mich., have announced that Mr. Picker, who operates the Rex theatre in that town and since Picker has become manager, has resigned as vice president of the United Theatres Company.

Harold Koehler, for some time connected as booker at the Pathe Exchange, will on July 1 take over similar duties in the new Fox Exchange which will open about that time.

Miss McGee of the Opera House in Evansville, Wis., is making a trip to Long Branch, Calif., where she will visit with friends.
SEVENTY-FIVE children, pupils in the fancy dancing classes conducted by the Community Service Bureau maintained by the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company in HARRISBURG, appeared in special costume dances at the matinee and evening performances at the Colonial motion picture theatre in that city throughout the week of June 2. It was the children’s second annual program of the kind to be given in public. The entertainment was given under the direction of Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, head of the bureau, assisted by Miss Xelie Ard and Miss Berie Lesher, teachers of the classes.

Manager Jack O’Rear, of the Colonial theatre, Bethlehem, which has closed for the summer, after a vacation of several weeks, will act as substitute for managers of other Wilmer & Vincent theatres in the Pennsylvania circuit, while they are taking vacation trips.

Motion picture performances that are given each Monday night in the basement of Grace Methodist church, Harrisburg, have been suspended until fall.

An option to buy the Strand theatre, Shenandoah, has been obtained by Lewis L. Berman, of the Independent Film Corporation, who recently leased the theatre from Al. Gottesman. He is said to be seeking to purchase several other theatres in that vicinity. The Strand is a combination vaudeville and picture house with a Keith franchise.

The Pergola theatre, said to be the oldest in Allentown, has been bought by a syndicate which proposes to erect a hotel on the site, at Ninth and Hamilton streets. Daniel E. Knorr was manager of the theatre which was owned by the Bowen estate.

John Newkirk, manager of one of the largest Wilmer & Vincent pictures theatres in Allentown, and formerly manager of the Victoria, in Harrisburg, accompanied by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Newkirk, of the latter city, and other members of the family, left Harrisburg on June 15, for a vacation trip to Akron, Ohio. Mr. Charles Newkirk is a scenery artist employed by the Wilmer & Vincent theatres.

A “standing room only” crowd attended the formal opening of the new Kingston theatre, at Kingston, a suburb of Wilkes-Barre, on the night of June 8. The theatre was erected by the West Side Amusement Company, which is controlled by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton. A feature of the opening ceremonies was an address by C. Murray Turpin, burgess of Kingston. L. B. Comerford, head of the Comerford company, and Dr. Morris, also of the Comerford home office, were in attendance.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the Wilmer & Vincent theatre interests in Harrisburg, has been appointed vice-chairman of the committee for the annual “Good Fellowship Cruise,” of the Harrisburg Yacht Club, which will be launched, September 8.

Twenty thousand dollars is to be spent in remodeling and enlarging the Gettysburg theatre, with base in Schuylkill county, which was recently purchased for $18,000 from A. Henry by Hawk & Evans. The house is closed to permit the repairs but will reopen in August. The seating capacity of the enlarged theatre will be increased, and the Lower City is in a prosperous hard coal mining district.

C. A. Tharp is preparing to erect a motion picture theatre on a site, 55 by 150 feet, in the business section of Shamokin, W. H. Lee, of Philadelphia, is the architect.

The Casino theatre, at Pocomo, in a mountain summer resort section of Pennsylvania, was reopened on June 10 after having been closed and improved under the management of Mr. Hollerran. The theatre has adopted the policy of showing motion pictures every week-day night. The seating capacity is now 600.

A baseball team has been organized from the best talent among the employes of the Carr & Schubert, Inc., theatres in Reading. The Rajah, a large motion picture and vaudeville house, of the Wilmer & Vincent chain in Reading, has closed for the summer months.

To stimulate interest in the performances in the several theatres in York, the manager of the Nathan Appell interests, during the period of warm weather, the policy has been inaugurated of装饰ating scores in the theatres. In the Wizard theatre, one of the Appell houses, weather for a pair of weeks.

A movement to eliminate all theatrical and other sign boards "that may constitute traffic hazards and block out panoramic views along the highways" of Pennsylvania, will be given impetus at the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Outdoor Advertising Association to be held in the Alto Hotel, Johnstown, on June 29 and 30. J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic Association; W. A. Van Dusen, of the State Highway Department; and W. B. Bigges, of the General Outdoor Advertising Company, New York, and representatives of women's clubs, motor clubs, advertising clubs and other organizations opposed to indiscriminate use of billboard advertising along the improved highways, will be in attendance.

A prominent feature of Brown & Sellesons' Temple Theatre at Kane, Pa., is a new Wurlitzer organ.

Philadelphia

JULES E. MASTBAUM, president of the Stanley Company of America, will sail early in July for a two months’ vacation in Europe. He will be accompanied by his family and Hall, manager of the Philadelphia City Council.

Work is now being completed on the Stanley Company’s new $3,000,000 theatre in Atlantic City and arrangements are being made for formal opening to take place as near the Fourth of July as possible. This theatre will be the finest at the shore resort and will equal in beauty and appointments any theatre found in the East.

Employees of the First National and Pathe Exchanges are making tentative plans for their annual picnics and outings, which will be held this year the later part of August when the personnel of both offices have taken their vacations. Outings are arranged late in the year in order to make it possible to have a hundred per cent attendance.

The Fox Film Exchange has moved its office from 1331 Vine Street to 1220 Vineage, Harry and Gene Marcus, proprietors, formerly located at 254 N. 15th St., has moved into its new quarters at 1331 Vine street.

The new Wurlitzer organ equipment of the Regis Theatre, Philadelphia, operated by Perrey & Steifel, has just been placed in use.
Architectural Design and Modern Theatres

Outlying Districts Now Can Have Attractive Houses
at Moderate Cost

The many announcements that have been made in these columns regarding the record breaking number of new theatres being built this year and the vast investment that they represent brings to attention a very interesting fact regarding the type of house that appears to be in the majority, though not representing a major portion of the total investment in theatre building. The type of theatre referred to is the modern small town and suburban house of modest seating capacity and investment.

The remarkable features of these houses lie in their attractiveness of design and thoroughness in appointments and equipment. Architecturally, these modest theatres, in many ways, appeal to their patrons as strongly as do the larger theatres to their city clientele.

While these smaller theatres are constructed, in general, along these highly commendable lines, yet in most instances the investment they represent is in no way proportional to the impression one would glean from a casual inspection; for it appears that theatre construction and design has developed into a fine art of its own, and that during this development, which has been under way ever since the first motion picture houses were conceived, the secret of effective simplicity in interior decoration and appointment as well as pleasing architectural arrangement has been learned and applied to perfection.

It is indeed fortunate that this development has taken place at a time when it has, for better theatres in outlying districts have added a much needed stimulus to the popularity of motion pictures. These small model houses are now in a position to cultivate the patronage of a great potential clientele that previously was practically without the realms of the picture sphere.

Of the many new theatres that have been described in detail in this department of Motion Picture News, more or less prominence has been exhibited by owners when supplying descriptive material, of the hundreds of thousands of dollars that were expended in construction. The tendency of the times in the building of smaller houses should change this attitude entirely; the pride of accomplishment should now lie in the excellence of the construction and attractiveness of design of the theatre in proportion to the investment represented.

As an example of the type of theatre discussed above, the Temple Theatre, Kane, Pa., which was recently opened, offers a good illustration. This house, which is shown in the accompanying illustration, follows a simple though effective architectural design and is thoroughly equipped to insure the comfort of discriminating patrons.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 1200; 750 on the lower floor and 440 on the mezzanine or balcony. The retiring rooms are located on the mezzanine and main floors, while on the mezzanine a portion of the floor space is devoted to a rest room which is provided for a meeting place for theatre parties. Comfortable chairs have been provided for the patrons' convenience.

The loges located in the front of the balcony are a distinctive and charming feature of the theatre. They are furnished with comfortable velour chairs and are especially designed to accommodate theatre parties.

Splendid decorative effects have been executed and the whole interior pleases and rests the eye with a color scheme; that while approaching the gorgeous, is at the same time so delicate in harmony that there is no clashing, and a most beautiful effect is achieved.

The projection room is thoroughly equipped to insure excellent presentation.

The lobby is floored with a noiseless tile of a neat and pleasing design. The box office opens directly on the lobby.

Special provisions have been made for the safe guarding of theatre patrons by the utilization of unusually wide aisles, numerous exits and the latest fire preventive appliances.

From foundation to roof the theatre is thoroughly modern and its size and beauty are unusual for the town the size of Kane.
Operators Attend Canadian Workers' Convention

Delegates of Moving Picture Operators' unions and of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees from all Eastern Provinces of Canada attended the annual convention of District No. 11 of the organized workers which was held at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, Ontario, on June 19 and 20, some 25 representatives being in attendance. The Provinces represented included Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Important addresses were given by E. Andrews, representing the Ottawa Moving Picture Operators' Local; J. Roberts, president of the Ottawa Musicians Union; Tom Moore, president of the Dominion Trades Congress, Ottawa; Captain J. A. P. Haydon, president of the Ottawa Trades and Labor Council; Mayor J. P. Balharry of Ottawa and others.

International officers present included—

President W. Canavan of the I. A. T. S. E., Secretary-Treasurer R. J. Green of New York and W. F. Covert of Toronto, who is the International vice-president representing Canada.

Entertainment features included a drive around the Government parks and driveways of the Canadian Capital, visits to Government Buildings and a dinner at Aylmer, Quebec, across the river from Ottawa where a fine repast of catables and beverages was finished off.

Jensen & Von Herberg Open Theatre in Astoria, Oregon

The Liberty, handsome new picture house in Italian Renaissance design built by Jensen and Von Herberg has just been opened in Astoria, Oregon. Three other theatres are under construction in Astoria, which is extensively rebuilding its downtown district which was destroyed by fire two years ago.

This theatre is reported to be the first in the state which has its organ on a hydraulic elevator, permitting it to be raised to the stage level for the concert and lowered into the pit during the showing of the picture.

Exterior and interior walls of the auditorium are finished in natural caenstone. Walls of the foyer are tiffanied. The auditorium is intended to give the effect of a Roman arena. Above the caenstone side on the level with the balcony a series of Italian scenes have been painted corresponding to the glimpse of the world outside one might get over the top of the arena wall. The paintings were done by Joe Knowles.

The Italian architectural detail has been worked out in the elaborate plaster columns of the organ chambers and in ornamental bas relief designs. Arches, one of the characteristic features of the Italian Renaissance period have been profusely used in the new structure. Furnishings further carry out the Italian design in detail. Poles supporting the box curtains are wrought iron with spear tips. Wrought iron benches take the place of chairs and seats in the foyer. Electric fixtures are wrought iron and silk and wrought iron railings enclose the orchestra pit and ornament the railing of the ramp which leads to the balcony.

Furnishings are in black and gold. Handsome black velvet curtains ornamented in gold applique designs, copies from a sixteenth century Italian cathedral, hang in the archways which divide the auditorium from the foyer. The main curtain is black velvet with upper sections in alternating black and gold velvet. The carpet is dark red with large medallions in black, gold and blue.

Blue and gold has been used in decorating the women's rest room. Furnishings here are in wicker. The men's smoking room in the basement has tiled floor, lounging chairs and smoking stands.

Lights have been placed in a cove which goes entirely around the ceiling. They are on four different circuits and four colors of bulbs are used.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 1200 and the foyer is considerable larger in proportion to the size of the auditorium than that of any other theatre in Oregon.

Eastman Cooling System Increases Patronage

The efficiency of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, cooling system was demonstrated in remarkable fashion during the recent hot wave. On two days when the official weather report showed a temperature of 90 outside, the thermometers in the theatre auditorium recorded only 72, a difference of 18 degrees. Superintendent of Maintenance Clarence Livingston has been making frequent tests because this year a refrigerating equipment has been added to the air-washing process which was established when the theatre was built. Now, clean, fresh air is forced through ice-water. The other day Manager Clark placed a large poster depicting an iceberg on the side of which was the invitation to "Come inside and cool off," in front of the theatre and attracted the attention of hundreds of sweltering citizens. The poster was the work of Baptist Madalena of the Eastman poster department.

In this concluding article on the history of the Power's Projector we trace the final steps leading up to the perfection of the professional projector. Considerations of safety, convenience and improved operation were the motives impelling the new improvements, step by step.

When comparing the old with the new, it is a far cry from the "machines" with their cloth bag magazines to the present projectors with their safety containers, yet the difference in time is actually very small.

A scant 25 years. Almost within the memory of every one in the motion picture profession.

It represents one of an already long list of tributes to modern ingenuity and inventiveness.

Model No. 3

This model was the first to have the adjustable intermittent movement. The adjustment consisted of two small eccentric bronze bushings which had a slot on either end so that they could be turned readily with a screw driver. Model No. 3 also had the first lower take-up sprocket and pulley attached to same to rewind the film on a reel hanger which was attached to a table board instead of using a bag as formerly.

In this type (Fig. 3) Nicholas Power returned to the method of framing used in model No. 1, that is the framing was done by moving the entire mechanism instead of using a separate framing carriage as in model No. 2. The framing device consisted merely of a spiral spring on a vertical rod attached to the guide rod of the machine. This projector also had the lower take-up bracket consisting of a brass bracket and roller which was adjustable to act as far from or as near to the sprocket as desired.

The intermittent roller was attached to the gate instead of using a bracket attached directly to the mechanism. In this model we find the first stamped aperture plate which is screwed on to the frame and can be moved or replaced. This aperture plate is practically the same as used in the present day projector. In the earlier models and especially in No. 2 the aperture plate was part of the front of the mechanism, simply having the space for the aperture stamped out.

(Fig. 3) Model number 3, the first to have an intermittent movement.

(Fig. 4) Model number 4, which did away with the interference of the fly wheel during threading.

In Model No. 3 the gears were reduced from 25, as in No. 2, to 15 and further reductions were made in later models. We also find a return to the metal strips wound around the gate as used in model No. 1. The fire shutter was omitted. In these two points it is evident that no progress was made and in fact some ground had been lost in returning to the methods used on model No. 1. Ground had also been lost by returning to the framing of the entire mechanism used in No. 1 instead of using a separate framing carriage as used in No. 2.

Real progress was made, however, in the following instances:
- The lower take up feed sprocket.
- The separate stamped aperture plate.

The biggest improvement on this model was the lower take up sprocket which enabled the running of film on to a reel thus dispensing with the use of a bag. The great reduction in gears was also a very decided improvement.

(Fig. 4) Model number 4. The most important improvement was the attachment of the automatic friction fire shutter.

Model No. 4

At this stage in the development of its projector Nicholas Power returned to the separate framing carriage instead of framing by means of entire mechanism. The intermittent movement was placed on the left hand side instead of on the right as in all previous models. (Fig. 4). This represented a very decided improvement because it did away with the interference which the fly wheel offered in threading the machine. The fly wheel was also on the right side of the machine.

While changing the fly wheel and gears from the right hand to the left hand side facilitated threading, it also must have been a considerable mechanical improvement because it also permitted of a more direct drive thus reducing the number of gears.

In this model we find a return to the use of the fire shutter with the addition of a cooling plate. This marked a decided step forward. The upper fire shield was also introduced for the first time.

Other improvements consisted of a stamped gate and a metal stand for attaching this mechanism. In model No. 4 there was a special cast iron top so made that the upper magazine could be screwed to the mechanism. This is the first model in which the upper and lower magazines were used.

Power’s No. 1, 2 and 3 were comparatively crude and simple devices and in No. 4

The final safeguard for success—

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

To make the most of a picture from the box office viewpoint you carefully plan the publicity notices, newspaper advertisements, lobby displays, tie-ups.

But one more safeguard for success remains—photographic quality. Look in the film margin for the black-lettered identification “Eastman” and “Kodak” and you know that the screen will show all the quality of the negative.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Requisites of Effective Lobby Advertising Displays

By Samuel Weinstein, Pres., Menger, Ring & Weinstein, Inc.

NOT long ago, the writer had occasion to call on a theatre that had but recently been built. From a point of appearance, it represented the last word in architecture. The lobby was about 75 ft. deep, covered with marble to a height of about 8 ft., with marble columns placed at every 10 ft., and fine electric fixtures evenly hung between them. It was magnificent, but did it tell what was playing? Did it tell what attractions were coming? No—not a bit of it. It would have made a fine entrance to a public library, or a town hall, but as a theatre lobby, as a means of attracting people’s attention to your wares, it utterly failed of its purpose. There had apparently been given no thought whatsoever to the idea that the front and lobby are the exhibitor’s show-windows. The prevailing thought in the minds of those who planned it apparently was to make a beautiful structure, and to that extent, ungrudging credit must be given—they have succeeded. After the first thrill was over, after the admiring exclamations from the first-nighters had subsided, people began to look at the walls from right to left, with inquiring glances. What are you playing tonight? What are you going to play tomorrow? was plainly written on their faces, but the cold marble gave no response, as though in its haughty grandeur, it would not stoop to talk to the common folks. It lacked warmth; it did not have the melodrama atmosphere which is so essential to a moving picture theatre.

The owner saw something was lacking, but could not put his finger on it. The writer suggested that he needed some lobby frames—some wall cases; not one or two small pieces grudgingly put up, but a generous display of plush, mirrors, photographs and show cards. “That will cover all my beautiful marble,” he rejoined plaintively, but it had to be done.

By the time the sketches and plans were ready, it was quite clear that one-half of the marble would be covered. Being of a practical turn of mind, the owner sat down, pencil in hand, and began to figure. After considerable figuring, he dryly remarked, Had you come a little sooner, I would have saved about 500 sq. ft. of marble, at $3.50 per sq. ft. In fact, had I thought of this before, I would not have spent so much on the walls altogether, because there is not enough of it left after your cases go up to make it worth while elaborating on so much; a couple of coats of paint, and a few electric fixtures might have done the work.”

What is true of the lobby, is true of the outside, only much more fatal in its effects on the box office receipts. How often have you seen a beautiful theatre with a terra cotta, or marble, front, and a tiny little hole in the wall about 1½ x 2 ft., in which to show coming attractions. Indeed, unless the passerby is of a very inquisitive turn of mind, he will have a hard time finding out what it is, whether it’s a dispensary, a post office, or a movie.

The writer is on his way now to an enterprising theatre owner, who writes: “I have window ledges on my outside piers, but believe I will have to tear them down so that I can put up a good frame.” Yes, tear it down, but how much did it cost to put it up and how much will it cost to tear down?

It may not be commonly known, but lobby building or wall cases can be put up at relatively small cost. It is self-evident that one can save enough on the marble man and decorator to more than cover the cost of his lobby frame bill, providing it is taken in consideration when in the initial stages of placing the contracts.

“Colonel” Selected as Name for New Crandall House

The newest link in the chain of Crandall theatres in Washington, to be constructed this fall, will be the Colony theatre, that name having been selected as the most suitable of the more than 35,000 titles offered in the prize contest run by the Crandall Amusement Company. The name was submitted by four contestants who will divide the $100 prize money between them.

The Colony Theatre will occupy part of a building which will also contain a number of stores and apartments.
Ghost of the Past

we begin to see the present Power's Projector taking shape. While improvements have been made, the appearance of the Power's No. 4 mechanism closely resembles the one now in use.

Model No. 5
This model (Fig. 5) closely resembled its immediate predecessor, No. 4.

The most important improvement made was the attachment of the automatic friction fire shutter as used in present day projectors. The lower fire shield was also introduced on No. 5. The chain of gears was changed from straight to spiral and although the automatic fire device constitutes the only patented improvement there was a decided improvement in the construction of the projector as a whole.

The Geneva movement was retained up until No. 5 model after which the Power's Roller Pin Intermittent Movement was evolved and applied to the succeeding models, No. 6 and No. 6B.

The germ of the last two mechanisms was contained in Models No. 4 and No. 5 which these models closely resemble in a number of ways. Indeed, the improvements from there on can be said to consist of refinements serving to bring the projector nearer to a state of perfection.

The Future Projector
This brief history of the professional motion picture projector leads one to wonder what the next change in its form will be... if any there will be.

The projector of today is, generally speaking, a perfected model of that invented years ago by C. Francis Jenkins; then a clerk in the Patent Office at Washington.

It consists essentially of an upper magazine for holding the film; a top sprocket for feeding the film to the intermittent sprocket; an intermittent movement for securing the proper optical liaison between the individually projected picture frames; a lower sprocket for feeding the spent film into a lower magazine. These elements, in one form or another are present in practically every type of motion picture projector. The improvements which have been made were directed toward receiving a convenient and smooth operation of the parts just named.

With one possible exception it is doubtful whether any radical improvements can be made on these elements since they apparently do all that is required of them in a satisfactory manner.

The intermittent movement, however, has been attacked with the object of removing it since certain marked advantages would result therefrom. In the first place, wear and tear on the film would be considerably reduced which would result in the saving of thousands of dollars annually. In the second place the screen illumination would be increased by fully one hundred percent which would again result in an annual saving of thousands of dollars in the form of reduced power bills.

Whether or not the continuous projector is practicable is still an open question. It has been tried and found to work but such complicated mechanism is required at this stage of the game as to render it unfeasible.

It is entirely within the realm of practical imagination that the future may bring forth a satisfactory continuous projector with its inherent economical advantages over the present intermittent type.

Calliaphone Proving Successful Advertising Stunt

What is claimed to be one of the most effective advertising device used by theatres is the combination Automobil-Calliaphone outfit, which consists of a Calliaphone mounted on an automobile and used for street advertising as well as outlying territory.

The Calliaphone is a new toned musical instrument made in modes with low volume for inside theatre use, giving a pipe organ effect. The same instrument is made in loud volume that can be heard for nearly a mile, it is claimed, and is used for outside advertising purposes, or mounted in the balustrades of theatres. The Tangley Company at Muscatine, Iowa, manufacturers of the Calliaphone recently advises that theatres have been using these instruments extensively. It is also noted that in cities where mechanically played instruments have been prohibited, upon hearing the Calliaphone, a permit has been issued for its use.

Three theatres which have been using these instruments to excellent advantage, it is reported are:

The Santa Barbara Theatre, owner, Abner Kline; Wells Theatre, Va., manager, Jake Wells; Celoran Park, Jamestown, Geo. Carr.
Cooling Sign Announces 100 Per Cent Price Increase

Jake Rosenthal, who runs a ten-cent theatre in Troy, N. Y., installed a couple of ventilating fans a week or so ago, and finding his house much cooler, decided to advertise the fact. He put a large sign out in front which was worded "100% cooler inside." Instead of getting more business, Mr. Rosenthal's receipts promptly took a slump. He could not understand the reason and then decided to place one of his men outside of the theatre to see if he could learn the trouble.

It might be said that Mr. Rosenthal's patronage is made up largely of foreign born, or those who can not boast of any great amount of education. No sooner was Mr. Rosenthal's sign stationed in front of the theatre than two Italians who had always patronized the house, came along. They took one look at the sign which read to them as follows: "20 cents, cooler inside." The Italians did not care particularly how cool it was, but they did care about what appeared to them as a 100 per cent boost in admission prices. Mummoring to themselves, they proceeded on down the street in the direction of another ten cent theatre. Mr. Rosenthal lost no time in yanking the offending sign from in front of the theatre and business immediately responded.

Two New Marr & Colton Organs for Cleveland

The Marr & Colton Co. installed an organ in the West Park theatre, operated by Ledkovitz & Polymer. This beautiful theatre was recently opened and is attracting excellent crowds.

The Euclid Theatre in Cleveland, operated by the Ivandoe Theatre Co., was opened May 22nd and this theatre also uses a Marr & Colton organ.

Plans for $100,000 House for St. Louis

St. Louis, Missouri, is to have a new $100,-000 motion picture theatre, the plans of which are being drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw, which is to be erected at the corner of Midwest and Southwest Avenues. The owner of the new theatre is G. Skouras.

Equipment for Sale

Including cameras, apparatus, etc., complete. A modern film library and studio used successfully in the production of films of a scientific, industrial and educational character. Must be sold at once. Also finished films of same nature.

For particulars address, P. J. Leahon, Atty., 7 E. 42nd St., N. Y. C., Tel. Van. 2092.

"Smooth as Satin"—F. B. O.

Capitol, New York

Telegram: "Smooth as Satin" cleverly written, and a genuinely amusing crock drama, well directed, adroitly put together, with humorous and virous twists of plot. It is unquestionably a good audience picture.

American: "Smooth as Satin" is far away the average crock plays. A most unusual train wreck adds more excitement to the screen than the handiwork could be credited. As the train rushes into a tunnel, an entire mountain collapses on it. There's a lot to enjoy in this picture.

Telegram: "Smooth as Satin" is a good movie, it is excellently in the climax, when a lot of suspense is worked up by a gradually widening hole in the roof of a tunnel and a speeding express, bearing our principal performers, shooting into the tunnel just in time for the crash. It is one of the most convincing wrecks seen in a long time, and a distinct gasp from the audience could be heard as the roof of the tunnel fell on the train.

Evening World: "There's a very fast moving melodrama at the Capitol, with plenty of thrills in it. And for the most part its story is cleverly written. Bert Brent takes the lead in this picture and puts over her crock character in great shape. She is at all times comical and amusing, and holds the sympathetic interest of the audience. There is a thrilling wreck with a hole in the ceiling into the tunnel it is traversing. Feature is breath-taking. Movie fans who like their melodrama will have a real treat watching 'Smooth as Satin.' And there's a double treat for admirers of Evelyn Brent. Graphic: "Smooth as Satin" based on the play by Bayard Veller, the offering at the Capitol Theatre, is the best crock story we have ever seen in pictures. In fact it is one of the best films we have seen on Broadway in many a week. If this is the regular summer fare, it's rather a pity summer doesn't last the year round."

"Recompense"—Warner Bros. Liberty, Kansas City, Mo.

"The Boomerang"—B. P. Schulberg, Criterion, Los Angeles

Times: "Bert Lytell and Anita Stewart do the best work of their two careers, Donald Keith holds great promise in the juvenile role."

Examiner: "Many of the episodes are highly amusing. With Bert Lytell and Anita Stewart in the leading roles the picture is well acted and the romance attractive."

Journal: "The sparkle and pep of this scintillating comedy are admirably sustained by the cast. New frills and clever situations are added in the adaptation."

Record: "Bert Lytell as the doctor does excellently in a light spoof. Anita Stewart is prettier than ever, swings from the melodramatic aspect of the play to its comedy with great versatility."

"Lost—A Wife"—Paramount, Rivoli, New York

Herald-Tribune.—The work of Greta Nissen was a revelation. Miss Nissen is by all odds the screen's most captivating recent acquisition.

The Times.—"Miss Nissen is a Scandinavian with a Parisian cachet. It is fair, and the dressing of her blonde hair impresses one as having an influence born between the poles. Miss Nissen is sure, natural and graceful in her expressions and movements. Each of her smiles every one scene to perfection and is never awkward or out of character. No matter how frivolous the scene may be, she gives it sincerity and earnest portrayal, always obtaining excellent results with an originality rarely beheld on the screen."

World: "Miss Nissen is the glamorous young blonde who added so much devasting beauty to the pantomime of 'A Beggar on Horseback.' Her radiant good looks survive on the screen. She shows some indications of intelli- gient acting, though all this role requires of her are languishing glances, which she achieves with fatal results."

TO YOU theatre men who know that good projection is as important as good pictures—who know that a good light source in a good machine will draw patronage to any theatre regardless of its size or location—to you who want to improve your projection, we recommend a new high intensity arc—the “HC” lamp.

The “HC” lamp is the Sperry high intensity arc lamp, used for high powered searchlights, redesigned and adapted to motion picture projection service.

The Sperry lamp was chosen by government experts for army and navy searchlights because of its brilliancy, whiteness and steadiness. These most desirable characteristics are outstanding features of the “HC” lamp.

Twice the Light From Current Consumed

The “HC” lamp shoots a snow white beam of searchlight intensity on the screen. It brings out all the beauty of a picture. It presents pictures in a manner that patrons appreciate and enjoy. It justifies the fine arts of picture making. It is a vast improvement over an ordinary arc—gives more than twice as much light on the screen, yet consumes no more current.

Simple to Operate

The mechanism of the “HC” lamp is so simple and the parts so accessible that any Projectionist can operate and care for it without preliminary instructions.

There are no coils, magnets or third electrodes used with the automatic feeding mechanism.

The rate of feeding of either carbon can be regulated independently of the others and these adjustments are so graduated as to give an infinite number of rates of speed.

The lamp is equipped with an arc controller that need not be hand fed, during the running of an entire double reel.

An Ideal Set Up

The “HC” lamp is a light source that merits use in the best projection machines.

That’s why it is endorsed by the builders of Simplex.

A Simplex projector, equipped with an “HC” arc, ensures high quality projection,—better patronage—greater profits.

You are interested in new developments and improvements. Mail the coupon and get full information on the “HC” lamp. There is no obligation.

Precision Machine Company, 317 East 34th St., New York City.

Please send me full description and prices of the “HC” lamp with □ without □ the projector.

Albany Los Angeles New York Chicago

Entered as second-class matter January 15, 1925, at the Post Office at Albany, New York, under the act of March 3, 1879
Published Weekly—50 cents a year

PRICE, 20 CENTS
The beautiful tone quality and exceptional volume of the Wurlitzer Grand Piano makes it particularly adapted to the needs of the theatre orchestra. Special catalog on request.
5 Questions — you should ask every film salesman —

1. If I contract for your service, what real help will you give me in putting over the pictures with the public?

2. Will all your pictures play first run, so that I can cash in on the publicity and advertising placed by the big theatres?

3. Is your product backed consistently by national advertising? What mediums do you use and how frequently? Let me see copies of forthcoming ads.

4. Does your company maintain a good live exploitation department working for my benefit?

5. What is your company doing, aside from pushing your own product, to increase the public's liking and respect for motion pictures in general?

Paramount Pictures
Big Chance to Smash All Summer Records!

PARAMOUNT offers you in "THE MANICURE GIRL," starring Bebe Daniels, a practical and easy method for boosting summer-time receipts sky-high.

In the first place, the picture is THERE. It's a breezy, refreshing comedy of Broadway's beauty parlors, with Bebe playing the cutie who cuts your cuticle with all her accustomed dash and allure. The cast includes also Edmund Burns, Hale Hamilton, Charlotte Walker and Victor Moore. Frank Tuttle, who made the very successful "Miss Bluebeard," is the director. Story by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, authors of "Upstairs and Down" and many other stage hits. Screen play by Townsend Martin.

Read how on the page opposite.
MANICURE GIRL
this Big Tie-up!

Tie Up Druggists and Toilet Goods Buyers

OVER 30,000 drug stores and department stores handle nationally advertised GLAZO LIQUID NAIL POLISH and most of them already have the new GLAZO CUTICLE MASSAGE CREAM, articles which fit in perfectly with “THE MANICURE GIRL.” As soon as you get your dates for the picture, see the local Glazo distributors about window displays, newspaper advertising, herald distribution, sampling, etc.

Note above the miniature reproduction of the window hanger tying up with your show and distributed by The Glazo Company to their dealers. In addition, they will furnish dealers with 1-column Tie-up Ad Mats. These window hangers and mats will be furnished to theatre managers on request.

Fill in the Coupon on this Page!

Send The Glazo Co. with this coupon a list of the stores in your locality whom you have interviewed on this proposition and who are willing to cooperate. They will send them the window material and, in addition, the regular Paramount heralds bearing tie-up copy. You can provide the stores with scene photographs, date cards, etc., for their windows.

You can get advertising material into windows you couldn't touch before. You can better mid-winter records in the summer time. Tie up with GLAZO dealers and cash in with “THE MANICURE GIRL”!

A great dramatic story that grew greater in the making.

A story so big in showmanship possibilities that Hunt Stromberg was literally compelled to produce it on a more lavish scale than was originally planned. Characters that demand the superlative in histrionic ability—with a cast that meets these requirements.

These considerations have made it necessary to adjust the sales quota to meet the increased new negative cost—an increase more than justified by the amplification of original production plans.

The thousands of exhibitors who have already booked the picture are in the fortunate position of being able to profit by this enhancement of production plans, and clean up many extra dollars at the original contract price.

THIS IS AN ENRICHMENT IN PRODUCTION PLANS THAT MEANS MORE DOLLARS TO EXHIBITORS

BUYS
F.B.O.'s 1925-6 Product

What greater tribute could be paid to any film company than to have one of America's smartest showmen buy that company's product for an entire season in advance?

Here is a sample of Ed Fay's shrewd business genius that has made him one of the outstanding and one of the most successful exhibitors in the industry.

Mr. Fay's contract with F. B. O. guarantees, assures, and underwrites for his theatres in Rochester, Providence, and West Philadelphia.

F. B. O.'s twelve wonderful Gold Bond Pictures including such big winners as "DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION" plus our other sure fire star productions featuring such box office stars as FRED THOMSON, EVELYN BRENT and others.

Any and every exhibitor in this country can rest his judgment in the judgment of such a showman as Ed Fay.

Mr. Fay's success is the one best answer to that. See your nearest F. B. O. Exchange today, or do business with the F. B. O. salesman when he calls on you. Note the wonderful list of the Box Office winners listed and described on the opposite page. Save this page and hold it for your guidance.
"FLAMING WATERS"
Associated Arts next big time Gold Bond Special for F. B. O. based on B. Lloyd Sheldon's famous story of a "he" man in the great golden oil fields of the far west. Thrills, chills, drama, punch, power.

"THE ISLE OF RETRIBUTION"
Edison Marshall's thrilling book brought to the screen at last. A story of great courage, great honor, and a greater love. One of the best sellers of the season.

"A POOR GIRL'S ROMANCE"

Don't Buy Just Lamps

All lamps of the same size (wattage) consume the same amount of current. But all lamps of the same wattage do not give the same amount of light. The amount of light given by any lamp depends on its quality. Some lamps give less and less light the longer they burn. Others maintain their initial lighting power over a long period of service. To get full value from the current you buy, use lamps that give maximum light from current consumed.

Edison Mazda Lamps are the product of years of research and development in one of the world's greatest research laboratories. Every new achievement in the science of lamp-making is incorporated in Edison Mazda Lamps. Put Edison Mazda Lamps in your sockets and get maximum light from the current you buy.

Edison Mazda Lamps are made in a variety of styles and sizes to meet every requirement of the theatre, i.e., auditoriums, signs, marquee, lobby, stage, stereopticon and projection. For decorative lighting a wide selection of colored lamps is available.

Save 15% on your Lamp Cost

To theatres whose annual lamp requirements do not exceed $75.00 a discount of 15% will be given by any electrical store or theatre supply dealer selling Edison Mazda Lamps. Additional discounts will be allowed on larger contracts.

Smooth as Satin

Story by Bayard Veiller

READ WHAT THE CRITICS SAID

New York Evening Graphic—SMOOTH AS SATIN starring Evelyn Brent at the Capitol has "Alias Jimmy Valentine" backed off the boards for thrills and incitement. It is the best crook story we’ve ever seen in pictures... in fact one of the best films we’ve seen on Broadway in months.

Miss Brent’s characterization of Gertie Jones is one of the best performances we’ve ever seen... the action moves fast and furious, thrill follows thrill, surprise follows surprise... all we can say is DON’T MISS IT.

New York Daily Mirror—Yes sir—SMOOTH AS SATIN is ace high entertainment with Evelyn Brent contributing a crackerjack characterization.

New York Evening Post—Evelyn Brent in SMOOTH AS SATIN is a corking crook star. Don’t miss it at the Capitol this week.

New York American—SMOOTH AS SATIN starring Evelyn Brent is far above the average crook play.

New York Evening Telegram—SMOOTH AS SATIN at the Capitol is excellent, the faces of the good people who looked at the Capitol’s first showing were positively gripped with fascination.

New York Evening World—There is a fast moving melodrama at the Capitol this week with plenty of thrills in it... It is SMOOTH AS SATIN starring Evelyn Brent... the story is enthralling... Evelyn Brent plays the lead in the picture and puts it over in great shape.

and Many More
The most important place in the world is the town where you live!

They can put up a half-dozen Woolworth buildings on Broadway, and nobody pays any attention to them.

But let somebody start something on "Main Street" and everybody stops to look, listen, knock or boost.

A rose festival, trotting meet, or county fair in your town is worth more to you on the screen than your feature!

KINOGRAMS gets the important happenings on Main Street as well as Broadway.

It is the only news reel giving constant, efficient, and truly co-operative service to the exhibitor.

And KINOGRAMS HAS BEEN DOING IT FOR SIX WHOLE YEARS!

If you are one of the Doubting Thomases—if you are not yet convinced that good Short Subjects give you your best weapon for protecting your business—if you still do not feel sure that Short Subjects will make Added Profits for you when properly advertised and exploited—pick up any of the big trade publications and read what others are doing with them.

The editors of the big trade papers, men of broad vision, trained observers of the industry, study this question from all angles and give you an unbiased opinion. The trend of the whole industry, the best thought of the leading exhibitors, are presented in their columns.

Read what they say about the importance of the Short Subject today!

By DANNY in Film Daily
Do not overlook the proper protection to your programs which short subjects give. See to it that you protect yourself with the right kind of short subject material which will not only insure your program when your feature happens to be good, or unusually good, but make certain that your supply includes sufficient unusually good short subjects to bolster those programs where you know you are going to need a lot of help. Real help.
There are exhibitors who, even today, are continuing the double feature program. Many have abandoned this ill-advised idea. In New England particularly they like double features. But the wise showman who would not tire his audience might well appreciate what other exhibitors have long since learned: that a good short subject program run with a weak sister feature will send a patron out feeling much better than two of these weak ones thrown together just to make a big bill.

From Exhibitors Herald
That there is a genuine public demand for short subjects is evident in the weekly experience of any box-office. It is most strikingly evident, perhaps, in the great attendance that marks the rare occasion when a short subject really is exploited. The astounding aspect of the whole proposition lies in the fact that, despite these everywhere visible evidences of the public demand for short subjects, exhibitors continue blandly to buy them, exhibit them, and KEEP IT A SECRET!

From Moving Picture World
We can't for the life of us understand the exhibitor attitude towards his short subjects.
We have been long enough in editorial harness to be able to see two sides to almost any question. But here is one that stumps us.

It seems so obvious
If an exhibitor places a subject on his screen—whether it be a thousand feet or ten thousand—he does so with the feeling that it is going to please the majority of those sitting out front.

Doesn't it stand to reason then that there are many who ARE NOT OUT FRONT who might have been there had they known of the subject on the screen?

I'm getting so that I can't argue about it any more. It's like trying to convince a drowning man that water is wet.

ROBERT E. WELSH

From Exhibitors Trade Review
But over and above everything else, when it comes to the exhibitor's advertising and exploitation of pictures, care should be taken to emphasize and advertise varied entertainment.
Stop long enough to consider this question: How would you go about laying out a dinner that would appeal to the tastes of the majority of your customers? How would you arrange a picnic for their entertainment? How would you make up a newspaper for them to read?

You would give them variety in every case. Otherwise they would just walk on out.

That's the inevitable answer. More variety. Less stress on a single item of the program that is apt to prove a flop with half your crowd. Feature pictures, of course. But plenty of short subjects, well selected, heavily stressed in advertising and publicity.

Are You, Mr. Exchangeman, Looking for Pictures Which You Can Put Into Competition With the Finest Efforts of Any Producer-Distributor—and Bank on the Result?

Do You, Mr. Exhibitor, Seek Product With Which, in the Face of All Opposition, You Can Build Prestige and Profit—and Still Retain Your Independence?

The Answer is Found in the Golden Arrow Franchise,—Twenty-Four First-Run Pictures,—Pictures of the Highest Calibre That Money and Skill Can Create.
The Productions Include Such Out-Standing "Showman" Properties As

"SCANDAL STREET"
A. W. E. Shallenberger Special Attraction
Directed by WHITMAN BENNETT
From the "Cosmopolitan" Magazine story by FRANK R. ADAMS. MADGE KENNEDY and NILES WELCH head the all-star cast, which includes Coit Albertson, Edwin August and Louise Carter.

"THE SUBSTITUTE WIFE"
A Whitman Bennett Production
Directed by WILFRED NOY
KATHARINE SMITH'S remarkable novelette furnishes a splendid vehicle for alluring JANE NOVAK. NILES WELCH has a prominent role. Mr. Noy, who directed "The Lost Chord" and "The Midnight Girl," promises in this a still greater picture than either of these successful subjects.

"THE CLEANER FLAME"
A Whitman Bennett Production
Directed by MR. BENNETT
"THE CLEANER FLAME" is an original story written by CLARA BERANGER, head of the Scenario Department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and FORREST HALSEY, who has created most of Rudolph Valentino's recent vehicles. Mr. Bennett will select his players from the leading luminaries of the cinema world.

"CHILDREN OF THE WHIRLWIND"
A Whitman Bennett Production
Directed by MR. BENNETT
LE ROY SCOTT'S engrossing novel has been made into a massive production by a great director. LIONEL BARRYMORE, JOHNNIE WALKER and MARGUERITE DE LA MOTTE are the featured players.

"THE MYSTERIOUS PINES"
A Whitman Bennett Production
Directed by MR. BENNETT
ANNA KATHERINE GREEN'S world-known novel, "The House of the Whispering Pines," will be made into a society melodrama and will have the additional weight of an all-star cast.

"TESSIE"
A Dallas M. FitzGerald Production
Directed by MR. FITZGERALD
Lovely MAY MCAVOY, fresh from her triumphs in "Ben Hur," will have the leading role in this typical American story written by SEWELL FORD and published originally in "Saturday Evening Post." Miss Mcavoy's support includes ROBERT AGNEW, ETHEL GRAY TERRY and LEE MORAN.

"THE PRIMROSE PATH"
An ARTHUR F. BECK Production
Directed by HARRY O. HOYT
The man who made "The Lost World" is putting forth his best efforts in this production, working with a cast that includes CLARA BOW, WALLACE MacDONALD, STUART HOLMES, GEORGE IRVING, TOM SANTSCHI, TEMPLAR Saxe and MIKE DONLIN.

"THE UN-NAMED WOMAN"
An ARTHUR F. BECK Production
Directed by HARRY O. HOYT
CHARLES E. BLANEY'S great stage success with a powerful cast that includes HERBERT RAWLINSON, KATHERINE MacDONALD and WANDA HAWLEY.

"LED ASTRAY"
A Whitman Bennett Production
Directed by WILFRED NOY
This, JANE NOVAK'S second starring vehicle, is the screen version of A L F O N S E DAUDET'S powerful novel, "The Little Parish Church." Daudet is best known as the author of "Sappho." "LED ASTRAY" contains every element which contributed to "Sappho's" success.

Illustrated below is the Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp equipped with automatic arc control and showing the arrangement of the specially designed stereopticon attachment, which is a part of the lamp house itself.

Twice the Light

Intense Brilliance

Twice your present screen brilliancy will be obtained when you install Peerless Reflector Lamps, for these lamps project more light at 25 amperes than other types of arc lamps do at 100 amperes and more. In addition, a white evenly illuminated screen, which materially improves the quality of your picture is at all times before your audience.

The great saving in current and carbon consumption by Peerless Lamps more than pays for their cost during the first year. This remarkable economy of operation along with its unparalleled projection results makes Peerless Lamps an indispensable equipment for all progressive theatres.

You can have this remarkable apparatus demonstrated to you in your own theatre without cost or obligation. Just fill out and mail the attached coupon.

The J. E. McAuley Mfg. Co.
552 W. Adams St.,
Chicago

The great increase of light projected by the Peerless Lamp is accomplished by the use of a scientifically designed reflector and a large diameter condenser lens.
The name of Lubitsch is box office magic! His past Warner pictures are classics of entertainment that will last forever. His new Warner pictures—two in 1925-26—will be the best that his genius, plus stellar Warner casts, plus Warner studio facilities, plus highly popular stories, can make.
No producer will offer a more diversified program in 1925-26 than Warner Bros. It gives the exhibitor a variety of pictures that means more and better-pleased patrons for his theatres. There will be a sure and certain appeal to any class or type of audience.

For instance—John Barrymore productions; Lubitch's society comedies; Syd Chaplin's feature comedies; Irene Rich in emotional dramas; the Matt Moore-Dorothy Devore team in romantic comedies; Monte Blue in action stories; Marie Prevost, with her chic appeal; Lowell Sherman, in society dramas; Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller in romances; Rin-Tin-Tin in dog pictures that are different.

And each picture adapted from a popular story by a successful author, built by skilled directors who know showmanship and the box office's needs!

Wanted: Showmen

AFTER all, what we need most and lack most in this business are—showmen.

Whatever this intangible thing called showmanship is, it is the spark for the whole industrial machine. And even the ablest man can’t go far without it—in this business.

Commonly, we speak of producers and exhibitors—successful ones, as good showmen, but the term is more democratic than that, much more.

Just recently an actor, Douglas Fairbanks, was acclaimed a great showman, the occasion being his splendid box office attraction, “Don Q.” Well, he is. And so is Mary Pickford; and so are Chaplin and Lloyd. But they are really producers, you say. True, in that they conceive and execute their productions; but this quality of showmanship is also apparent in other successful screen players, some of whom are not classified as producers.

We would cite as clever showmen: Norma Talmadge, Adolph Menjou, Raymond Griffith, Emil Jannings, Tom Mix, Lewis Stone, Corinne Griffith, and others.

D. W. Griffith and Ernst Lubitsch make electric light names of unknown players. Lubitsch has set new standards of production finesse. Griffith, despite some odd mistakes in production judgment, has made most of the great shows of the screen. James Cruze can tell a story and a great one, like “The Covered Wagon,” with a camera. They are showmen—producers if you like, but producers because they are showmen, not because they run producing organizations.

And of how many so-called producers can we say that they are showmen? Too few.

Then there’s the writing man. One, like Harold Bell Wright, who can write a book which a million or more people will buy, is a showman. And so is the playwright and also the adaptor who scores a dramatic success.

When we say the story is the thing we mean that the writer is a showman.

And there’s the advertising man. He makes many a picture’s success. In any field your successful publicist is essentially a showman; he succeeds in proportion to his showmanship; the coiners of “The Spotless Town,” “Sunny Jim,” “Phoebe Snow” and the like were showmen of first rank. But in this field of the show business itself your advertising man is either a good showman or a mere rubber stamp.

In distribution, in the building of theatre circuits, in the planning of franchises, etc., it is not the mere organizer who wins out; it is the man with show-vision, the man who visualized and with sheer enthusiasm built the structure; he counts heavily, even if another showman must come along and run the works.

J. J. Kennedy, builder of the General Film Company, was the greatest handler of men and films the business has ever known; but he wasn’t a showman and his power ceased when films became shows. And I can cite many another film man of business genius along other lines who has progressed only as far as his limitations as a showman would let him.

Adolph Zukor is generally reckoned as a business strategist. If I’m not a hopeless judge, he is still more a man of show-vision and enthusiasm, in fact a genuine impresario.

* * * * *

Good business judgment is highly essential in this or any other field. But with your genuine showman the commercial end is not the only urge. He’s a man who has really got something to express and who really wants to express it, and knows how the public will like to have it expressed.
SOL LESSER, in New York on a whirlwind business trip booked a million dollars worth of film from one company in one day. Which indicates pretty well how the young industry is geared up these days.

"Was the M. P. NEWS of service in so large a transaction?" we asked.

"Yes, of course. A good trade paper is always indispensable."

The air is thick with rumors about the sale of West Coast Theatres to various producers. A New York paper carried a story—a baseless one—last week. The rumors have favored Paramount as a purchaser. A half dozen interests—all prominent and including the vaudeville people have been after the big circuit.

The low-down—to date, on the situation is as follows: Sol Lesser and Gore Brothers will probably sell their interests; Ramish may not. The purchaser will not be Paramount, our guess is that it is Fox.

The sale of the Lesser-Gore interests will not disturb the First National franchise for the California territory, which also carries with it an interest in the First National New York franchise.

Sol Lesser will not leave the picture business. We opine not, but that he will continue—not so strenuously, but prominently as ever in its constructive progress. A keen, able young man, and a credit in every way to any field of business.

West Coast Theatres, by the way, just announce the completion of two new and big houses: At San Bernardino, 1600 seats and at Long Beach, 2300 seats; large stages, costly draperies and furnishings, lighting effects, ventilating systems, Wurlitzer organ, opera chairs, etc.

* * *

WITH "Don Q" "The Gold Rush" and "Little Annie Rooney", United Artists starts off the season with a rush. Reports from the coast on "Little Annie Rooney"—in advance of any public presentation, are most favorable; as for "Don Q" and "The Gold Rush" the consensus of opinion is that these are the best box-office pictures from Fairbanks and Chaplin to date. It will be interesting to compare figures at the Strand theatre on "The Gold Rush" as against "The Kid" which so far holds the record there.

* * *

CITING "Don Q", "Beggar on Horseback", "I'll Show You The Town", "Lost—A Wife", "Siege" and "Smooth as Satin" as outstanding pictures, a New York newspaper critic says that a reviewer's life in dog days is not so bad after all. But what about all the other pictures, he asks? And what can be done to cure mediocrity and sameness? If no prescription will work why not revive some of the older but better offerings? He concludes with the surmise that New York has more good picture theatres than good pictures. Which somewhat demolishes the trade belief that good pictures are knocking at the theatre door and can't get in. Looking in from the outside carries generally a clearer vision than the reverse process. Maybe, no, probably—he's right.

HAL ROACH—a showman, by the way—had some interesting things to say across the luncheon table on his last hurried visit to New York. He plans to make feature comedies this year—with the word feature underlined; and since Roach is a doer, not a talker, we look for results.

In that amiable parting of the ways that took place between Harold Lloyd and Hal Roach, the latter took the stand that two reels was the proper length for a comedy.

"But I can make them in eight reels," said Lloyd.

"Yes, you can," said Roach, "But it's a wizard's job. And, anyway, to make the one right one you've got to make half a dozen at the same time and select the best. That isn't my idea of comedy production."

"Well, good luck to you," said Lloyd.

"And good luck to you," said Roach.

And it appears that both were right.

BRIEFLY, Roach proposes to put money and stars and stories and high class acting into his two reel comedies—to such an extent that they will be featured in the theatres' electric lights and newspaper advertising. Features that will be featured.

And this is his showman's viewpoint of the thing: "Let us say," he explained, "that you and I are contemplating the movies tonight. There are, say, three theatres to choose from. One has A star in a feature, another B star, and the third C star. At least that's the order in which they attract us. But suppose that, at the theatre playing the C star—the one we like the least—there appears the name, in equal prominence, of a feature comedy star—are we really apt to dismiss uncertainty and buy that admission? I think so."

And Hal Roach thinks pretty clearly. "Our Gang" comedies are now contracted for by over eleven thousand theatres. There's a record! And the first ones, released three years ago, are still bringing in a tidy sum each month.

* * *

LORD LEE now joins the round table of British objectors to American films. They misrepresent American life, he asserts, and give wrong and harmful notions abroad of our social and moral standards. And The New York Times points out that his words are to be seriously weighed here, since "no Englishman knows America better or is a firmer friend of this country."

Everyone will agree that the makers of American films, supplying as they do the wants of the theatres of the world, bear a responsibility the seriousness of which can hardly be reckoned—certainly by any comparison. Every American director ought either to realize this or quit fooling with dynamite.

It's a mighty serious problem; fact is, it's a governmental problem. But we would like to convey the word abroad that much is being done to safeguard the American picture, and that the situation—right now, at least—is not as bad as Lord Lee paints it.

For one thing Will Hays has laid the matter directly and definitely before the producers, and has then gone that necessary step further and put it right up to the directors themselves and their official organization. Secondly, the most misrepresentative of our films were those that emanated from a brief epidemic of sex stuff, pictures filmed from current novels or plays that emanated from youthful or senile brainstorms but nevertheless designed to catch the dollars. This is the one thing that must never be done again—the putting forth on the screens of the world the salacious book or play that would in its own limited environment do much less harm and live but a brief while.

WHILE calling at Universal City last Spring, Carl Laemmle asked me what I thought of "The Homemakers" as a film story, and when I enthused over the book he said: "Very well, you help me select a director." We decided upon King Baggot—to give, among other things, the sound masculine treatment needed by such a tale of triumphant femininity.

It is gratifying, now, to read a preview of the picture by Tamar Lane. He says: "Here is one of the finest picturizations of American life ever presented on the screen . . . refreshing and enjoyable as a cool west wind in midsummer . . . this is the finest film that King Baggot has directed in years."

WHICH reminds me to speak of "Siege," a recent Universal release at the Capitol Theatre, New York, and one of the finest pieces of direction we have had on Broadway in some time; and, again, of another Capitol picture, "Smooth as Satin," because B. P. Fineman is scoring as a producer and is bringing Evelyn Brent to the fore steadily and surely. Universal, by the way, has recently had five pictures—and F. B. O. four—at the big Broadway houses.

FOR the past ten years we have always been sure of a call from one exhibitor every time he came to New York; and each time we were also sure of some good sound ideas on exhibiting pictures. Frank Newman now goes to manage Paramount's big houses in Los Angeles, and the Kansas City Star cites him as a successful American having, at forty years of age, made a fortune and a salary contract that most any man would envy. The figures are not as important as the fact that he began life in a foundry at a meagre wage, that he worked hard, steadily, straightforwardly, and to-day has the name of one of the best business showmen in the country and the respect and confidence of everyone who knows him.

OF all the editorials on the mooted subject of "Independence"—and including our own—the most interesting is by Wil Gunning in his June issue of Hil's, under the title "What Is an Independent?" Here are some paragraphs:

"If we are going to decide that the independents are only the little fellows, we won't get very far. Never in the tumultuous years of this game's activity has there been anyone to come forth with a very definite description of what is an independent. For a long time an independent was anybody who was not hooked up with the General Film. Then for a long time an independent was anyone who was not hooked up with Paramount. This year the general discussion seems to indicate that an independent is anyone who is not hooked up with the Big Three, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Famous-Players-Lasky and First National.

"The big laugh about all this to me is the fact that Metro, Goldwyn and Mayer have been three of our greatest independents. Not so many years ago Famous Players an Lasky as separate units were independent leaders. Certainly First National will still explain to you that they are the most independent of the independents.

"If I were running a theatre today and someone came to me with the request that I turn over the playing time of my theatre, which is, after all, the same as turning over my theatre, I would certainly register a quiet smile while I inquired as to just who was to be the master mind that would do better for me than I might do for myself. I don't care what conversation goes with the effort to gather play dates together, the actual activity resolves itself down to a simple attempt to formulate a method of group buying. Such a movement is nothing whatever except the very thing which most of the exhibitor politicians yell about, the so-called menace of the producer who owns many theatres or the theatre chain which dominates a section of the country.

"As a theatre owner I would give very serious thought to the fact that there is a decided difference between an organization controlling many theatres where the organization itself actually owns all of the theatres and an attempt to formulate a similar buying power wherein the theatres are owned by many individuals and a politically inclined leader wishes to take charge of the destiny of these individual theatres by controlling the one thing which means life or death, which is play dates.

"Odd as it may seem, I feel that the Milwaukee commotion actually helped the Big Three more than (Continued on next page)" anyone else. I have been through many conventions where there has been much yelling about rally to the support of the independents. -Always it has evolved that following the convention the theatre owners went back to their brick and mortar in which their money was tied up and proceeded promptly to wire, telephone or personally visit the sales organizations of the muchly-cussed dominant producers for the purpose of securing the product of the big companies before their competitors might tie it up.

"Today more than ever before this business has resolved itself down to a question of making good entertainment and selling it intelligently. Today the selling element has an added angle in that the public must be sold and consequently the producer willing and able to back up quality product with good selling to the public naturally has an edge in the matter of interesting the theatre owner.

"Just pictures will not make any theatre owner a fortune today. He must have good pictures and he must sell them intelligently. The fact that his pictures are made by an independent or by a so-called trust company means nothing to the public. The guy whose quarters make the cash register happy is only concerned with the one element of good entertainment and today the theatre owner knows that so well that he is not concerned so much with buying film because he can get it cheap, as he is with getting good pictures, because they will attract the crowds.
Cheaply bought films that cannot attract are in the long run much more costly than expensively bought films properly advertised. Films with good adversising possibilities prove a sufficient magnet to the public to bring in enough dollars to not only pay the expensive cost but show a handsome profit besides.

"When all is said and done, have we any honest-to-goodness independents? If so, who, where and why?"

Educational's Announcement

SHORT subjects are very much to the fore these days. In Europe they are growing faster in popularity than any other kind of entertainment; in this country the proper exploitation of them by the exhibitor—that is the recognition, at last, that when they are the true features of the program they should be truly featured in his advertising, in fact placing them in their proper place in the show world. The shortening of the long subjects —the elimination generally of mere padding—has helped to an extent.

When people go to the theatre as often as they do to see motion pictures, diversified entertainment is the one sound policy of the showman. There is no question about that.

The advance of the briefer feature is well indicated in the announcement of Educational Pictures, by far the largest and most important of the company's six years of seasonal programs. Seventy two-reel comedies are listed, featuring Lupino Lane, an international favorite, and such well-known names as Walter Hiers, Bobby Vernon, Lloyd Hamilton, Neal Burns, Jimmie Adams, Billy Dooley, Lige
Conley, Vera Steadman and others; six of these two-reel subjects are juvenile comedies. There are twenty-four of the Cameo one-reel comedies; twelve novelties from the interesting workshop of Lyman
H. Howe; twenty-six of the unusually popular Felix
The Cat subjects; and Kinograms, whose list of houses has practically doubled within the last two years.

In all, one hundred and thirty-two subjects are offered. It is an ambitious and well arranged program.

Hot Weather Idea

HUGO REISENFELD announces an interesting inovation at the Rivoli Theatre beginning at once. At approximately 6 o'clock every evening there will be a short intermission, and ushers will serve ice water to all the patrons.
Immediately after, Frank Stewart Adams, organist, will render a solo at the Wurlitzer for about three minutes. Following which the regular show will continue. This is to be a regular feature of the Rivoli program for an indefinite period.

OH. KIVALINA

STRAIGHT from the Arctic comes Kivalina—who while not as vivid a figure as Nanook, is nevertheless welcome as a new screen personality. One thing about her—she is natural. She patiently sits in the igloo awaiting the return of her lover, a mighty hunter—who must bring back some fifty fat seals and a silver fox before the medicine man will permit him to marry her. You see the young man’s father died owing the m. m. a heavy debt. Thus is the heart interest story woven into this pictorial and enlightening account of Eskimo life.

Earl Rosman is the sponsor. He left civilization two years ago to collect vistas of the far frozen North—and to give us a further education in the habits and customs of the Eskimos. What we glean from it all is the tremendous will to live—the first instinct of self-preservation. These hardy people are eternally in conflict with the elements. They must endure terrific hardships and privations to find shelter and food. They accept their burden with stoic abandon.

The picture carries a variety of appeal. There are the natural color shots of the Northern Lights—there is a reindeer race, a shot of a caribou being skinned, a snow house being erected in jigger-time, and several scenes devoted to the spearing of seals and walruses. The camera has been apparently set up on dangerous ice flosse—an all shows painstaking effort on Rosman’s part to record life in the raw bleak wastes.

The film captures the imagination not only through the play of Nature’s elements, but in the theme of self-preservation so courageously carried out by the Eskimos. The pictorial values are immense, though occasionally the leaden skies blend too perfectly with the white frozen sea—lending gray tints which stagger you with the vastness—the overwhelming silence and isolation of it all.

We would play this picture. It is a novelty. It is something off the beaten track. And it records stark, moving drama. Besides, the bleak chilly atmosphere, which covers it, seems to radiate all around you—making you feel cooler and more comfortable during these dog days.

Hail to Rosman and his realistic reels.

Extra! Extra! They’re goin’ to have a jass band at the Rivoli, New York, starting July 12th. Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the theatre, and Ben Bernie, director of the orchestra were snapped while signing the papers.

The “Peter Pan” girl, Betty Bronson, is seen in this quaint costume in “Not So Long Ago” (Paramount). Quite a difference in her role in this latest production.

Doreen Turner, Pete the dog, and Arthur Trimble who play in Universal’s comedy releases evidently believe in a noisy ‘Fourth’.

Ruth Taylor, the Mack Sennett player in Pathé releases, hereby serves pictorial notice that the Fourth of July is at hand. Ruth plays leads opposite Harry Langdon and Ralph Graves.

We present the latest Marshal Neilan discovery—Sally O’Neil, the young lady pictured above as a farmerette. Sally is appearing in “Mike” and “Don’t” two Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions.

Arthur Somers Roche, famous novelist, who has just signed a contract with Warner Bros. for all his works.

Rah! Rah! Sis Boom Bah—“Freshman” “Freshman”—this by way of introducing Harold Lloyd’s latest and last Pathé release which, using our imagination, is what Harold is shouting through the megaphone.
REAL HORSE FLESH

JOHN FORD surely gathered together the fastest bunch of actors ever grouped before a camera when he corralled Man O' War, Fair Play, Negofol, The Finn and Morvich for the Blue Grass romance, "Kentucky Pride." There's real horse flesh for you. They've thrilled thousands. They've brought prosperity to more than one bookie—and more than one race-track follower. And in this picture they should bring prosperity to exhibitors—for great things are being said about it.

It isn't exactly Man O' War's screen debut, nor Morvich's either. Both have been caught rarin' to go by news cameramen. Perhaps one of all the steppers Man O' War is the easiest to photograph. He enjoys publicity. He's a publicity hound you might say—and loves to bask in the spotlight. They call him "Red" down there on the stud farm—and he saw "red" until he sensed the fact that he was being photographed. The great stepper's dad, Fair Play, beamed with pride in watching him take his scenes.

As for Negofol he took a great shine to George Schneiderman, the head cameraman. He followed George all around the lot evidently seeking introduction to more American dams. He is French—is Negofol and won the French Derby not so long ago. He seems to have a particularly winning way with American ladies for his colts by American dams have done especially well on the track.

As for Morvich he has become the most temperamental of the bunch. He wouldn't register a single emotion until Schneiderman was gone. The photographer had walked out on him in disgust. But when Jack Ford walked over Morvich knew that here was a man who had known and directed horses—even an Iron Horse—so he did his stuff.

CHAPLIN GETS 'EM

HOLLYWOOD's acting fraternity swears allegiance to Chaplin. When the comedian has a premiere no one takes the event lightly. It is a serious matter for all the players.

Harry Carey is perhaps the only actor in Hollywood who had never been inside Sid Grauman's Egyptian Theatre—that is, he was, until the premiere of Chaplin in "The Gold Rush." Between making pictures and attending to his new trading post, Carey rarely has time to go to the theatre. When there is some particular picture he wants to see he has a print shipped out to his ranch at Saugus, California, and shows it in his own little theatre. But the premiere of "The Gold Rush" proved too great an inducement and with his wife and youngster he made the forty-mile pilgrimage from his ranch to attend the opening. "I wouldn't miss the premiere of a new Chaplin picture, if I had to walk the whole distance," was the way Carey explained his presence. All of which sort of proves how the people within the industry regard the Comedy King.

WANTED—LEADING LADY

DOUGLAS MACLEAN is not burning up the want ad department of the newspapers in quest of a leading lady. He is not going about it that way. He simply states through his exploiters that he wants to get busy immediately on his new picture and that a leading woman is as essential to the production as a camera. But she must be pretty—and she must have ability. She may be blonde or brunette, medium height or petite, slim or pleasingly plump. At present MacLean is looking over screen tests of eligible young actresses. Unlike Harold Lloyd who retains the same leading woman for several successive pictures, the new Paramount star is a believer in variety. Marjorie Daw, Patsy Ruth Miller, Lillian Rich and Anne Cornwall have supported him on past occasions.

THROWING A PARTY

THE studio associates of Irving Thalberg, associate executive at the M-G-M studio, threw him a surprise party last Friday. He has been convalescing from an attack of influenza, so his friends decided to cheer him up. Louis B. Mayer, production executive, Harry Rapf, associate executive, Edward Mannix, studio manager, Marshall Neilan, Monta Bell, Jack Conway, Pete Smith and Joe Cohen were among the party—not forgetting Mickey Neilan's orchestra.

Everyone registered enthusiasm and good humor. The next day Thalberg left for Coronado where under the instructions of the doctor he must play golf for a week before resuming his duties at Culver City.

Undersheriff Eugene W. Bischoff of Los Angeles presents Harold Lloyd with the solid gold trophy won by the comedian's display in the recent Shriners' Electrical Pageant in Los Angeles.

Theda Bara, star of Chadwick's "The Unchastened Woman" with the F. B. O. Studios' Float which was one of the features of the recent Shriners' parade in Los Angeles. "The Unchastened Woman" was made at the F. B. O. studios.
WELCOME HOME

Among the passengers who will step down the gangplank of the Berengaria when the big Cunarder docks this Friday is Colleen Moore. The F. N. star has completed the filming of the major portion of the London scenes for "We Moderns," an adaptation of Israel Zangwill's stage play.

Reports seeping in from the w. k. continent have it that Colleen was feted and dined wherever she visited. Her popularity was appreciated by distinguished notables and exhibitors in Paris, Switzerland, London and Dublin. In the Irish city the police reserves were called out to preserve law and order so great was the frenzy of the mob to welcome her. The Erin exhibitors weren't so slow either. They played "So Big" and "Sally" to tremendous business.

Speaking about the Zangwill story the Moore party captured some typical English atmosphere. All the famous landmarks are in the picture—such as Buckingham Palace, the London residence of the royal family, Westminster Abbey, the House's of Parliament, the Tower of London, Trafalgar Square, the jolly old Strand, and the equally jolly old Picadilly Circus.

ON TO ONTARIO

Roxy and his Gang checked out of the Capital Tuesday night and checked their baggage to points in Ontario. The well known broadcasters are off on a three weeks' tour of the Canadian Province as guests of the Ontario government. The visit of the Gang in Canada will be two-fold and is one of the most ambitious undertakings of its kind ever conducted by the Province. Under the auspices of the Province of Ontario Pictures, of which G. E. Patton is the Director, the Ontario government will make a series of twelve motion pictures centering about the legends and traditions of Canada and picturing many of the natural scenic beauties and historic spots of the Province. The three weeks' tour will include visits to Toronto, Ottawa, Muskoka Lakes, Lake of Bays and Nipigon.

The second feature of the trip will be the broadcasting programs of Roxy and the Gang from Toronto. These will take place on Sunday evenings and will be relayed by W. E. A. F.

We would add a third feature of the trip. It will further cement the friendly relations of the United States and Canada. Roxy can compose a new march entitled "Hands Across the Border."

QUITE A CROWD

Almost as many soldiers as fought under Washington have been called to arms by General King Vidor while he produces "The Big Parade." The generalissimo is at Fort Sam Houston at San Ton' and over 7,500 men have enlisted under his command. That there will be real war atmosphere you can judge for yourself since these men are regular soldiers of the U. S. A. They will bring 350 trucks and numerous units of field artillery and tanks into action for the action.

"And he learned about make-up from her" to paraphrase the poet, is our suggestion for a caption for the above off-stage photo showing Conway Tearle looking on as Aileen Pringle makes up for the role of Zara in "The Mystic" (Metro-Goldwyn).

HOW COME?

According to Commissioner Courtland Starnes of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police the famous slogan of the Mounted — "Get Your Man!" — is the bunk insofar as it concerns his men. The commissioner stated in Ottawa recently, with reference to an interview of his in New York, when attending the International Police Convention there, that the famous slogan was purely an appellation of the movies. "Thus smash goes the popular conception of the mounted." With romantic license the cinema producer had given the Mounted Police picturesque apparel, customs and duties in their films, he said, with the result that any dapper star who could ride a horse was the ideal to the public.

Pleading the cause of the producers who capitalized the slogan, the Mounted would not be such a heroic body of men as they are if the movies had not glorified them. Through the publicity of the screen story, the R. N. W. M. P. have become famous in every quarter of the globe. They may lead very colorless lives up there in the North country in carrying out the law of the Dominon, but the screen has taken the liberty to write into their lives. And it is romance which colors existence. Honest, persevering men that they are, they could not help being guided to perform their best, if only for the sake of convincing the world that the movie conception is right after all.

All the theatrical and screen types that are concerned with heroics must needs be colored for the sake of dramatic illusion.

Members of the "Winds of Chance" (First National) unit are vaccinated before leaving for location in Canada. From the determined look on Robert Bosworth's face we surmise that he intends to see that Anna Q. Nilsson gets her share even though he has to use the hook.
MARION FAIRFAX REWARDED

MARION FAIRFAX has been rewarded by Richard A. Rowland for her efforts in supervising the Sam Rork screen production of her Broadway play, "The Talker." The genial general manager of F. N. has discovered that Miss Fairfax, as editorial supervisor of the Earl Hudson units, has been working only fourteen hours a day.

"Let me see," says Rowland, "that doesn't take into account the other ten hours."

"Well, I sleep five of those hours," replied the industrious playwright.

Then you have five hours left," was the retort courteous from Richard A.

"What about it?" inquired Marion.

"Well, well, well, I'll see that you are rewarded," Dick replied.

"I'll loan your leisure time to Sam Rork so you can prepare the script for his new production, 'Clothes Make the Pirate.'"

"You know," he continued, "you made such a fine job of adapting, supervising, editing and titling the film, that Sam, Earl Hudson and myself were much impressed and when Sam wanted your services again we just couldn't refuse him."

BUSTER'S BOMBSHELLS

With statistics coming out every little while showing figures that prove this, that or the other thing about the supply and demand and the season's product, it has been left for Buster Keaton to wear his most frozen expression and declare to an anxious public that: 525,345 custard pies were used in the making of comedies during the year 1924, with but two of them good enough to eat—that 1,210 high silk hats were runed during the making of comedies—of which five were paid for—that 1,765,254,310 comedy scenarios were sent to screen comics of which one was accepted, but not paid for, the company having failed—that 126,798 mothers in Hollywood have daughters who bear striking resemblance to Mary Pickford—of whom more than half are brunettes—that there are 792 comics in moviedom of whom three stated under cross-examination that Charlie Chaplin was good, too—that there are 1,987 philanthropists in California, none of whom sign the actors' checks—that 56,983 mothers in America have sons who look exactly like Jackie Coogan, of whom more than three-quarters have yet to show their first tooth.

ANOTHER BARRIE FOR BETTY

Since Betty Bronson climbed into the spotlight of fame and popularity in a Barrie play, "Peter Pan," it is only natural that she should return to another product from the pen of Sir James. Catching all the Barriessque moods in her debut as the 'Peter of Never-Never Land she reasons it would be just as easy to catch them again in 'A Kiss for Cinderella.'

"You 'pug' me or I'll gag you"—so says Colleen Moore, First National star, to Merlyn LeRoy her official jester and comedy creator. If we were Merlyn we'd deem it a pleasure to be the "pagger!"

The "Laurel" of "Stella Dallas" will be played by Lois Moran who was snapped in a pensive mood. "Stella Dallas" is a Samuel Goldwyn-Henry King production.

Louise Fazenda, one of the screen's best comediettes now playing in Warner Bros. productions, poses with Pal, Warner Bros. dog actor, in between scenes of her latest picture.
Deal Is On For Sale of West Coast Theatres, Inc.

First National and Fox Are Chief Bidders

ANNOUNCEMENT of the biggest theatre deal in film history is expected momentarily. Control of West Coast Theatres, Inc., operating 110 houses on the Pacific Coast, will be acquired by one of the big concerns in the industry.

The deal is now being negotiated. It can be authoritatively stated that the purchaser will not be Famous Players-Lasky. The best information obtainable is that it will be either Fox Film Corporation or First National.

Motion Picture News learned this week that no less than six picture companies have made offers for the chain within recent weeks. In addition, certain vaudeville interests entered the bidding.

According to reliable information, Sol Lesser, the leading factor in West Coast, will dispose of his holdings, and it appears probable that the Gore Brothers will join him in selling. It is possible that Adolph Ramish, the other factor in West Coast, may not sell. Mr. Ramish and A. L. Gore arrived in New York this week. Mr. Lesser has been here for several weeks. A. C. Blumenthal, prominent Coast real estate man, is also here.

In connection with the West Coast deal, Paramount’s recent California activities attracted attention. It became known this week that Famous has acquired the Rothchild interests in the big first-run houses in San Francisco—the California, Granada, Imperial, and Portola, in which Famous Players had had a substantial interest for years.

Observers pointed out that the Paramount action was probably directly influenced by the impending sale of the West Coast chain to another producer-distributor and could be figured as a counter-move to strengthen his position in the Far West.

All the indications are that Sol Lesser is retiring from the theatre field to devote himself entirely to production and distribution. He is, of course, an important factor in First National and has large state rights interests.

With the acquisition of the West Coast chain, Fox, already a large operator of theatres, would advance to a still more important position and would become, without doubt, the outstanding theatre operator on the Coast. Information that Fox is probably to acquire the chain will come as a surprise to most persons in the industry. The company had not been mentioned at all in reports concerning the sale of the West Coast circuit.

West Coast Theatre, Inc., is now engaged upon a big building program. Two houses have recently been completed in San Bernardino and Long Beach, and announcement was made this week of a $100,000 project for Fresno. Sites for the latter house are being investigated. Other theatres are under way.

In the space of a few years Sol Lesser and his associates built up their theatre interests until they came to be universally regarded in the industry as the foremost in the Far West.

While the news of the West Coast deal overshadowed all other events on the theatre checkerboard this week, other developments were reported. It was learned in Baltimore that Marcus Loew will build a theatre there, to seat 4,000 as soon as he succeeds in obtaining the desired site. For a number of years, Loew operated the Hippodrome theatre, which is now run by Keith.

Still another deal of importance was reported from California. Two theatres conducted by Ackerman & Harris have been purchased by the Golden State Theatre and Realty Corporation, through the East Bay Theatre Company, a subsidiary. In the transaction, including long term leases, the amount involved will exceed $500,000.

A new theatre under construction at Hayward, and the Palace, recently completed at San Leandro, were the two purchased.

Stanley Co. Active In East

In the East, the Stanley Company of America purchased a plot of ground at Atlantic and Missouri avenues, Atlantic City, for a recorded price of $500,000. Plans are being drawn for a million dollar theatre.

Chain expansion in New York State continues. The Schine Circuit is the largest, numbering some 65 houses. William Smalley has fifteen or sixteen theatres. The latest chain acquisitions were made by James Rose, who has taken over the King theatre in Troy, which has long been operated by Benjamine Apple. Mr. Rose will take over a house in Victory Mills on September 1, and in addition to houses which he is operating in Troy, Rensselaer and Kinderhook, he also has one in Nassau.

Fred M. Zimmerman, president of Western New York Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., announces that his company has taken over the operation of the Slocum and Allen theatres in Medina, N. Y. These two motion picture houses have been operated for a decade or so by Sidney C. Allen, one of the best known exhibitors in the Buffalo territory. The company recently acquired the Family theatre in LeRoy, N. Y. and a house in Brockport and has also leased the new Lafayette theatre, soon to open in Batavia.

Rochester House Changes Hands

The Victoria theatre, Clinton avenue south, Rochester, has been sold by the Auditorium theatre company to Herbert C. Kelly, treasurer of the Rochester Theatre company, which has leased and operated the theatre for about thirteen years. The price involved is reported to be more than $500,000. The announcement of the sale was made by Frederick W. Cot, attorney, and president of the Auditorium company, who acted as agent in the transaction. The other officers of the company are in California.

Mr. Kelly, who was represented in the deal by C. C. Day, of the East Side Savings Bank, has taken title to the property and will continue to operate it. The lease of the Rochester Theatre company would expire in March, 1927, but it will be renewed at expiration. John J. Farren who has managed the theatre for many years, will continue as manager.

A company known as William M. Shirley Enterprises, Inc., has been formed in Schenectady with offices in the Strand theatre building and which has resulted in rumors being circulated to the effect that Shirley intends to re-enter some phase of the business. Mr. Shirley sold out his holdings recently in the Farah Theatre company to W. W. Farley, and it was understood at that time that while he would continue to reside in Schenectady, that he would probably enter some other line of business.

Lesser to Produce for United Artists

UNITED ARTISTS will release Sol Lesser’s production of "The Winning of Barbara Worth," from the Harold Bell Wright novel, according to an announcement made by Hiram Abrams, Lesser expects to start production around the first of August. Lesser estimates the production will cost not less than $500,000.

The exact location called for in the book will be used in the production of the story, which is said to be the author’s favorite work. Wright has agreed to work with Lesser in the preparation of his story for the screen.

Warner Lease Orpheum in Chicago

ARON JONES, of Jones, Linick & Schafer, states that his company had the Orpheum Theatre on State Street, near the corner of Monroe Street, Chicago, to Warner Brothers, for a period of eleven years, from November 1st, 1925.

The Orpheum Theatre is an eight hundred seat house which, for many years, during the summer, is engaged under a pre-release and long run policy, and gives Warner Brothers the loop outlet in Chicago, as forecast in Motion Picture News recently.

Warners Lease Orpheum in Chicago

ARON JONES, of Jones, Linick & Schafer, states that his company had the Orpheum Theatre on State Street, near the corner of Monroe Street, Chicago, to Warner Brothers, for a period of eleven years, from November 1st, 1925.

The Orpheum Theatre is an eight hundred seat house which, for many years, during the summer, is engaged under a pre-release and long run policy, and gives Warner Brothers the loop outlet in Chicago, as forecast in Motion Picture News recently.

The new law, which became effective July 1st makes it necessary to register every picture coming into the state and to pay a tax of $10 on every reel of 1,000 feet or less and an additional tax of 50 cents on each hundred feet of film in excess of 1,000 feet on each reel.

The bill, presented by Representative Pasquin of North Cannon, was signed by Governor Trumbull last week and became effective July 1st. It aroused a storm of protest from distributors and exhibitors alike, with the result that immediate action was taken to temporarily restrain the state from collecting the tax.

The Connecticut interests retained Attorneys Lucien Robinson and Ben Holden of Hartford, and the Hays organization engaged Ex-Attorney-General George W. Wickersham and Edwin P. Grovenor of the firm of Cudwander, Wickersham and Taft, 40 Wall Street, New York City, to arrange the necessary details seeking the temporary injunction.

The complaint to be submitted to the judges will charge that the tax is confiscatory, that it violates interstate commerce and that the censorship features are illegal in that the right of appeal is not embodied in the measure.

The new law gives Tax Commissioner Bodgett of Connecticut supreme power in the matter of censorship of pictures. It even goes to the extent of permitting him to retain the license fee in the event he deems the picture or any part of it improper for showing in the state of Connecticut.

According to the terms of the law no picture can be shown in the state without first having been registered and the tax paid.

It provides that the tax commissioner may appoint an agent who shall perform the duties of the commissioner as required by the provisions of the bill and that the agent's compensation shall be not more than $4,500 a year. In addition it provides for all necessary assistants whose salaries shall be fixed by the state Board of Finance.

The commissioner has the right to revoke his license if he deems immoral or of a character to offend racial or religious sensibilities or any element of society, and to retain the tax paid.

The penalty for delivering film without first registering it and paying the tax called for is a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment of not more than sixty days, or both. The offender also forfeits the right to operate a moving picture machine for a period not exceeding six months.

A penalty is also provided for an exhibitor showing a picture not registered or on which the tax is not paid. The punishment is $100 or imprisonment of not more than thirty days, or both.

New films are exempt, according to the conditions of the new law. Among other exemptions also, are reels of a stately scientific character and intended for the use of learned professions, also for promotion of educational, charitable, religious and patriotic purposes.

Report Greime is Forming Seattle Booking Group

Reports received in Seattle last week indicated that Charles Greime, owner and manager of the Rivoli Theatre, was at the present time organizing a circuit of theatres among the smaller towns in his neighboring territory.

Ice Plants Boost Summer Attendance
Harold B. Frankin Says Artificial Cooling Makes Hot-Weather Jinx a Thing of the Past

THAT the summer slump which hitherto has devastated the box office returns of motion picture theatres has been banished by the introduction of efficient cooling plants is the assertion of Harold B. Frankin, head of the Paramount theatre division, in an article in which he discusses the results obtained in Paramount houses which have been equipped with artificial cooling apparatus.

"There is no box office problem in theatres that are equipped in this way," he says. "The success of a recent installation of weather conditioning apparatus in the Rivoli shows clearly that the summer can be banished as far as the box office is concerned. Similar apparatus is now in operation at the Missouri, St. Louis, Metropolitan, Los Angeles, and Palace, Dallas."

"It is the opinion of the writer that within five years, no important theatre will operate without some apparatus that actually provides such seasonal comfort for its patrons. Such theatres will look forward to the summer months, and because of the air conditioning machinery will bring about, they will attract a new patronage to motion pictures, through the relief they offer from uncomfortable weather."

"Modern engineering has made possible the manufacture of ideal weather under scientific conditions. For over three years famous players have assigned engineers to study the problem. After much research and experimentation, these engineers have contributed towards the perfection of apparatus that actually manufactures weather. Mere refrigeration was not a difficult problem—the real problem was to eliminate the damp atmosphere brought about through refrigeration, and success was finally achieved in the air conditioning apparatus installed in the Rivoli, New York, and the other theatres mentioned above, where the air is never over 70 degrees and is yet sweet and dry. This apparatus will prove a great boon to exhibitors everywhere."

"The greater showmanship of the future will demand a theater that is really cool in the summer, and this apparatus will save a lot of money by eliminating the worst objection to the theatre that is ever indulged in."

"Hot-weather Jinx will be the order of the day in the future, and the sign in the ads will read: 'Twenty-five and thirty degrees cooler inside,' and the signs will be backed up by facts, and not wishes."

"There will be no summer slump!"

Tiffany Casting "Souls for Sables"

Among the several well known players who have been cast for "Souls for Sables," a forthcoming Tiffany production based on David Graham Phillips' novel "Garland & Co," are Eugene O'Brien, Ethel Clayton, Anders Randolph, George Fawcett and Taylor Holmes.

Grand Canyon Locale for DeMille Production

Cecil B. De Mille has added William Boyd to the cast he will direct in "The Road to Yesterday," the opening scenes of which are to be produced at Grand Canyon. Besides Mr. Boyd, those who have been engaged for the picture, which Producers Distributing Corp. will release, are Jetta Gendal, Joseph Schildkraut, Vera Reynolds and Julia Faye.
Jersey Theatre Owners to Try Regional Movie Season

M.P.T.O. of New Jersey Convention at Asbury Park

With the same business efficiency that has characterized its transactions in the past, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey's 6th Annual Convention held June 29th-30th and July 1st, at Asbury Park, functioned according to schedule in every detail and can be truthfully stated to be a most successful event.

The business results achieved and the entertainment features, which included a water carnival, vaudeville bill and banquet, met with the complete approval of the three hundred exhibitors and their families who were in attendance.

The election of officers, held Wednesday at the last business session resulted as follows:

President, Joseph M. Seider; Vice Presidents, Charles Hildinger (Southern District), Peter Adams (Northern District); Louis Rosenthal (Essex County), Joseph Bernstein (Hudson County); Secretary, Leon Rosenblatt; Treasurer, William Keegan; Directors, W. C. Hunt (three years), Leo Justkowitz (three years), L. A. Roth (three years), Jacob Fox (one year— to fill vacancy), and Harry P. Nelson (one year).

The outstanding bit of action taken was the rejection of the National Movie Season in the form that it had been outlined and the substitution of what has been unofficially dubbed "Regional Movie Week."

The objection to the regular form of Movie Season procedure was based on the contention of the assembled theatre owners, that the dates in August selected for the National event were unsuitable for many sections of the state.

The entertainment feature of the convention was the banquet, Wednesday night, held in the dining room of the Monterey Hotel.

Robert E. Welsh, editor of the Moving Picture World was toastmaster at this function, and the speakers were R. F. Woodhull, National, M. P. T. O. A. president, Joseph M. Seider, New Jersey, President; Senator Edward I. Edwards; Governor Silzer of New Jersey and Ray Lewis, editor of the Spot-Light.

The first business session of the convention was called to order by President Joseph M. Seider Monday morning promptly on schedule. The period was devoted very largely to the submission of reports and the delivery of speeches by notables both in and outside the industry. Among the speakers were National M. P. T. O. A. President R. F. Woodhull, ex-president Sydney S. Cohen and Frederick W. Elliot, newly chosen general manager of the Independent Motion Picture Association, President Woodhull, who was enthusiastically welcomed by his home state brother exhibitors, said among other things of interest that the "hold your play dates" idea originated at Milwaukee has become more than a slogan and that the plans formulated are to be entirely successful and practical. Continuing on the subject of play dates Mr. Woodhull made some important explanations.

"It has never been the intention of your National President or the National Board of Directors," he said, "to advise any theatre owner to stop buying pictures from any particular concern. We have simply emphasized the thought that you do not buy yourself into a position where your play dates are entirely consumed by two or three producers and distributors. We have also suggested that you review the entire market carefully before buying your next season's product, not making the idiotic mistake of forgetting the Independent exchanges and purchasing the very best and wholesome pictures for retailing at your theatre."

Some idea of what the national organization is expecting from the Independent product available in the near future was indicated by the speaker's direct reference to the Independent market. "I have, with the best care within my limited powers of discernment, scanned this vast list of prospective product and cannot help but once more reiterate the advice to look over the Independent market before making your Fall purcises," he said.

Announcement was made to the Jersey Convention concerning the newly-organized department of the M. P. T. O. A., the fair play bureau. Concerning this bureau Mr. Woodhull had the following to say:

"After watching its activities during its short existence, I can truthfully say to you that it is the most constructive move that I have observed during my several years of organization activity. Its purpose is very plain, its intentions honest, and its name most appropriate. You will discover its usefulness the very first time you have any difficulty in securing product or being compelled to buy bloop of pictures or pay exorbitant film rentals, providing you bring such troubles to the attention of your fair play bureau. In the several disputes settled so far we have found all the home offices ready and anxious to straighten out any trouble existing between exhibitors and branch managers who are over zealous or who do not feel they have the power to make reductions without the approval of the executives."

Toward the close of his address the president graced the Jersey M. P. T. O. what might easily be accepted as sound advice when he said: "Based upon observations of other state organizations, I desire to impress this, perhaps intruding, advice to your executive association: stop advising exhibitors in arbitration and other difficulties who do not and will not contribute of their time and money to your organization. There have been several cases in this state in the past year that have resulted, through the efforts of this human dynamo that you are fortunate to have for your President, Joseph Seider, in the saving of hundreds of dollars to certain theatre owners who upon initial advice did not even pay the small dues requested, or by looking around I do not even see them here helping you to solve the problems common to us all. This is personal advice, not national intrusion, and comes from one who has served your state president for three years and endeavored to make good organization material out of men of this caliber by using Joe's formula of 'killing them with kindness.'"

Ex-President Cohen spoke briefly using as his subject the efficiency of the Jersey organization and the tendency to overbuild theatres in various cities and towns of the United States.

He pointed out that overbuilding was a real menace and expressed fears that great harm might come from it unless some means of combating the evil was not found soon.

A short address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Hetrick of Asbury Park. His Honors, in the course of his remarks was caustic in his condemnation of the so-called Jersey blue laws which among other things prohibit the showing of motion pictures on Sunday and advised the assembled theatre owners to wage a constructive legislative campaign at Trenton until the obsolete statutes are repealed.

Mr. Elliott's address referred to the program of the Independent Association in connection with the Play Date "Bureau" established by the M. P. T. O. A. He stated that he brought a pledge for "better pictures, that those theatres who support our members will have an equal chance with the 'million-dollar' bally-hoo subjects of opposition.

Closer co-operation between producers and distributors, distributors and exchanges, exchanges and theatres.

Improved service.

Conciliation instead of contention.

Modern business methods, eliminating extravagance and waste motion.

Protective Legislation and public support.

President Seider's report reviewed the accomplishments of the organization for the year and was unanimously accepted.

Mr. Seider stated that the state could benefit $25,000 per year by doing this, but that he would be modest—and only call it 94%.

In connection with the constructive work done during the year, Mr. Seider spoke as follows:

"I was interested in the Operators' Union in behalf of the Essex County Theatre Owners with a nominal measure of success.

"But, as a result we created there theatre owners into a branch of this organization, known as the Essex County Unit. We installed our officers, presented a gavel to their efficient and energetic President, Louis Rosenthal, and although we did not interfere with their local efforts but the slightest sign of need we extended the helping hand and cumulative strength of the entire State organization.

"We retained on a yearly basis for the protection of our members in a legal way Attorneys Joseph Varbalow of Camden, New J., and Norman Samuelson of New York, N.Y."

"We have kept our members advised as to changes in the Uniform Contract.

"We brought about the elimination of the duplication of dues and organization membership has been worked out.

"We stepped in and took hold of the Massie Tax tangle and adjusted some forty odd cases.

"There is a good possibility of enacting into a law a Daylight Savings Bill, reducing the period two weeks from both ends."

"Your full board at their individual expense has traveled to Washington on your business. The result was highly satisfactory.

"Our entire legislative activities have resulted in our gaining the respect of the Legislators, and in other ways we are making progress.

"We have instituted campaigns for the reduction of Basic Rates in Insurance and Electric Current and refunds of overcharge on electric current charge since 1914."

The report of Sidney S. Samuelson, chairman of the board of directors was read and accepted as shown above.

Mr. Samuelson's report said in part:

"Your board met twelve times in accordance with recommendation submitted by our President and adopted by our Board of Directors at its first meeting as follows: July, New York, as guests of J. M. Seider; August, Atlantic City; September, Toms River, as guests of J. M. Hirschblond; October, Salem, as guests of Arthur B. Smith; November, New York, as members of the Essex County Unit of the Motion Picture Theatres of New Jersey; December, Trenton, as guests of Charles Hildinger and William Keegan; January, Paterson, as guests of

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in its consolidated statements (which includes earnings of subsidiary companies) reports net profits of $1,355,080.10 for the three months ending March 28, 1925 after deduction of charges and reserves for Federal income and other taxes.

After allowing for payment of dividends on the preferred and the common the earnings amount to $4,875 per share for the three months on the common stock outstanding.

Big Theatre Deal Pending in Chicago

NEGOTIATIONS are in progress between Lubliner & Trinz and Lynch Theatres, Inc., whereby the former will receive an interest in the theatres operated by the Lynch circuit.

The houses involved are all located in Chicago and include the Manor, 2,000 seats; New Crystal, 1,900 seats; and others. Balaban & Katz recently secured an interest in Lubliner & Trinz and this is considerable speculation as to the booking arrangement for Lynch Theatres, Inc., if the pending deal is consummated.

Reports of the negotiations which were current in Chicago this week, are thought to have had something to do with the sharp rise in Balaban & Katz stock.

Peter Adams; February, Camden, as guests of Benjamin Schindler; March, Newton, as guests of Sidney E. Samuelson; April, Jersey City, as guests of M. Seider; May, Asbury Park, as guests of the new Monterey Hotel; June, Asbury Park.

Several changes in the composition of the Board have taken place since the con-vention. At that time the following directors were elected to serve one year: Juszkowitz, Hirshblond, and Fabian, to serve for two years; Smith, Schindler, and Rosenthal to serve for three years; Woodhill, Hennessey and Samulson. Mr. Hennessey resigned and the board of Directors made the following changes in accepting the resignation. Schindler was elected to fill Hennessey's unexpired term; and W. C. Hunt was elected to serve until this convention. After several meetings non-attendance, Mr. Fabian was dropped and Leon Rosenthal was elected to serve until this convention.

Later in the year Arthur Smith retired from the business when he leased his theatre and he promptly tendered his resignation. In view of Arthur's past activities and his loyalty, it was felt that it would be a good move for the business the Board of Directors deferred on his resignation until this convention.

The Tuesday morning session of the convention was devoted to business. It was at this meeting that the motion relative to the National Movie Week program was agreed upon by a long roll call of the theatre owners present.

This was made official by resolution Wednesday, June 5.

At Tuesday afternoon's meeting Leon Rosenthal submitted his report as chairman of a committee on arbitration. The report stated in part, that the committee was "definitely opposed to the present system", meaning that the rules in team and an alleged handicap of prov-isions of the contract made the operation of the board unsatisfactory to them.

Reference to a new form of standard contract being prepared by Nathan Bur- kon was made. It was pointed out that to its contents was denied on the ground that it had not as yet been submitted.

Colby Harriman addressed the convention on presentation as applied to the smaller theatres.

M. J. O'Toole, ex-national president was present Tuesday afternoon, as well as a number of other New York notables.

The last business meeting of the convention was held Wednesday morning.

The matter of dues came up at this time and were finally fixed at 5 cents per seat for each theatre.

The report of Norman Samuelson, attorney for the Jersey theatre owners, in connection with arbitration was read and accepted. Mr. Samuelson's views similar to those related above in connection with arbitration as applied at present and for the same reason.

He was followed by Sol Raives, chairman of the Arbitration Board of New York, who defended the operation and expressed the belief that it is functioning satisfactorily in all things considered.

Officers of the Jersey Board presented Joseph M. Seider, president, with a diamond ring in token of their appreciation for his work on behalf of the organization.

A resolution expressing thanks to the trade press for cooperation was adopted and a rising vote of thanks to Henry F. Nelson, the retiring secretary of the theatre owners.

Strand Interests to Build New $100,000 Albany Theatre

In a deal that involved more than $100,000 in the purchase of the site alone, the Strand interests of Moe Mark, of New York City, president, and Walter Hays, of Buffalo, is vice-president, took the first steps this week towards the construction of a new $500,000 motion picture theatre in Albany, N. Y.

The theatre will be located in the business center of the city and on the present site of what is known as the Old Municipal Building.

San Francisco to Have New 4,000 Seat House

San Francisco is to have a new 4,000 seat house, with which the name of Warner Brothers has been persistently linked. It will be located at Market and Eighth streets and the investment cost, including the theatre, office building and lot will be in the neighborhood of $4,000,000. The aggregate rental of the property, reported leased for fifty years is said to be $8,000,000.

Eastman Employees Draw Big Wage Dividend

Employees of the Eastman Kodak Company, with headquarters in Rochester, shared in the annual wage dividend during the week amounting to $2,806,850, the largest ever paid. This was the fourteenth annual wage dividend, a total of $14,581,384 having been distributed among employees since 1912.

Ask Screen Publicity for New Air Mail Service

THE U. S. Post Office Department and the Department of Commerce and Labor is forwarding a legislative bill to request the cooperation of theatre owners in acquiring the popular cooperation given to the new air mail system inaugurated on July 1 between New York and Chicago. The letter expresses the gratitude of the department for previous helpful cooperation given by the theatre owners.

The M. F. T. O. A. is forwarding copies of the Department's letter to the M. F.

T. O. A. requesting the cooperation of theatre owners in acquiring the popular cooperation given to the new air mail system inaugurated on July 1 between New York and Chicago. The letter expresses the gratitude of the department for previous helpful cooperation given by the theatre owners.
American Film Exports Reach New High Mark

$75,000,000 Year, Says Wall Street Journal

Exports of American films to foreign countries will make a new record this year, according to The Wall Street Journal, recognized financial authority, which recently printed an article containing interesting figures on the export trade. The total value of American film export business this year is estimated at $75,000,000, according to the Journal.

"Export of American film in 1925 will reach the highest point in history," says the article. "Famous Players-Lasky Corp. export business is running around $1,000,000 a month or at the rate of $12,000,000 a year. This is 25 per cent over the 1923 period and more than double the exports in 1921 which showed a large increase over exports in the preceding years. First National did over $6,000,000 exports last year. Export business is now larger than total domestic business was only a few years ago."

"Originally, profits from films sold abroad were regarded as a sort of side line, a picture was supposed to pay for itself from exhibition in the United States and any profit from foreign sales was so much "gravy,"" the article continues. "Today the export business of the largest American producers ranges from 30% to 35% of their total sales volume and cost of pictures is allocated between American and foreign sales.

"The success of American pictures is not based on superior technical skill so much as on the fact that the size of our market enables American producers to spend much more on their pictures and therefore to make them more elaborate and more spectacular than European producers.

"Americans acquired great technical skill during the war and after but German producers are quite as skillful and many German productions are thought to be more artistic than American films. English and French producers as a whole are not as good craftsmen.

"The American producer, however, has the whole of the American market in which to sell his picture and get back his cost and depends on foreign markets for only about 20% of his gross income. Consequently to take a concrete example an American producer can spend $300,000 on a film, while his foreign competitor, not knowing the American temperament and market has only the foreign markets to be certain of and can therefore spend with assurance only a fifth as much, or say $60,000 on his average picture.

"Americans Superior Showmen"

"In addition to this Americans although perhaps not as artistic as their European rivals, are the greatest showmen in the world and know what appeals to the masses, and can make pictures that bring the money to the box office.

"Moving pictures appeal to the public primarily as an escape from every day life, and the unvarying optimism and ever present happy ending of the American film, together with the luxury and splendor of American studio settings make an all powerful appeal.

"American 'Wild West' films with their rapid action are even more popular on the other side than in this country. An outstanding example was Famous Players-Lasky's 'Covered Wagon' which cost approximately $800,000 and has grossed over $5,000,000, a new high record for film income.

Costly Productions Succeed"

"Another important film is the 'Sea Hawk' made by First National from the Sahaini story which cost about $700,000 and will gross about $3,000,000. First National's 'Lost World' also cost about $700,000 and is meeting with remarkable response abroad, especially in England.

"The 'Ten Commandments' also made by Famous Players is the biggest picture ever made for foreign as well as domestic consumption. This remarkable film actually cost about $1,000,000 to make largely on account of the elaborate settings and large numbers employed in the cast. This is more than double the cost of any film ever made and predictions were broadcast that it would never bring back its producers the money spent. Foreign sales alone will more than cover its cost.

"The wide spread popularity of the American film is arousing considerable recentment and alarm among European business men. It is claimed not without justice that films of American life are the most potent advertising for American goods that could be devised. Dandies and belles in Buenos Aires and Calcutta aim to dress like American movie stars and ask and get American merchandise of all kinds to fulfill their ambition. The old saying that 'trade follows the flag' has been superseded by 'trade follows the film.'

Develop Foreign Markets"

"All important American producers have an elaborate staff and equipment for handling foreign business. Films to be exported are carefully retimed and retitled by experts in the language of the country of their destination. Any features that might be objectionable are eliminated.

"Famous Players which used to distribute through agents now has its own offices all over the world. Distribution is made in 64 different countries and films are titled in 37 different languages.

"Government figures of film exports show extraordinary gains in exports in 1924 over 1923 and there is every indication that 1925 will show continued increases.

"Department of Commerce figures show 170,347,342 linear feet of positives, valued at $6,181,917 exported last year against 138,656,880 linear feet valued at $5,417,745 in 1923, an increase of nearly $2,000,000 feet. Valuations do not indicate real size of film export business since they represent only the cost of the actual positive prints shipped and not the income from the rentals accruing to the producer.

Big Increase in 1924"

"The most notable feature of last year's exports was the increase of exports to Europe which amounted to 45,000,000 feet in 1923. Eleven European countries more than doubled their imports of positives. Great Britain is the largest market for American films in Europe followed by France, Sweden and Germany.

"Exports to Latin America increased from 45,000,000 feet to 47,000,000 in 1924 and the Far East consumed about 45,000,000 feet against 40,000,000 in the preceding year.

"Unusual efforts are being made by American film producers to make 1925 the biggest export year on record and judging by the current volume of the larger companies this goal will be achieved. Export business of the film trade has been rapidly growing in importance until now it is an essential department of the business, responsible for a large part of the profit of producers."

Eight Perish in Fire and Explosion in Kansas City Theatre

THE Gillis theatre, one of the old landmarks of Kansas City, was destroyed late Thursday night by an explosion and fire which burned an unknown number of people to death. Early estimates were that four or five persons were injured in the theatre, but that estimate was lowered to seven or eight late the next afternoon. The house was a combination motion picture and tabloid show, located at Brush and Walnut streets. Scores of persons were injured. The estimated loss was $150,000.

The explosion was followed almost instantly by flames, the roof of the 5-story building tumbling in, leaving the old walls stark and ragged in the firelight sky. It was near 11 o'clock and those who escaped did so miraculously, according to witnesses. The house was equipped with a front and rear exit and a main entrance. The front exit was a circuitous route. It led from the theatre through a long hall down under the steps, a route that their confusion became a puzzle. A mid-point of steps. Added to the irregular way of the exit was the ever-breaking boards, sending men sprawling pelmell. The rear exit was cut off. The tragedy came with terrific swiftness. The midnight show was just beginning. A picture was on the screen. Only a comparative few were in the audience, as the stage numbers were not to start until midnight. When the entire section of the theatre collapsed it sent bricks and debris into surrounding streets, breaking windows in buildings. A man, fleeing as a huss away. Police and firemen began taking the injured to hospitals, one fireman losing his life. The streets were littered with bleeding and crying men and women. Scores were dragged from the ruins and given emergency treatment. Many persons in restaurants and buildings near the theatre also were injured.

The cause of the explosion remains a mystery, although there is an investigation under way by the police.

Beatty Discusses Jersey's Stand

Director of Greater Movie Campaign Says Exhibitor Organization Does Not Understand Plan

JEROME BEATTY, Director of the Greater Movie Season Campaign, sponsored by the Hays organization, issued a statement on Wednesday regarding the decision of the M.P.T.O. of New Jersey not to participate. Mr. Beatty said:

"I notice that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey have decided not to join in the Greater Movie Season Campaign because they objected to 'paying one percent of August profits to the Hays office for expense.'

"Evidently the New Jersey exhibitors do not understand the Greater Movie Season plan. "No money is paid to the Hays office. An exploitation service is given free to those exhibitors who want to use it. It is a plan that has proved itself. It will increase August business from ten to fifty per cent and its effect is felt in increased business throughout the following months.

"Exhibitors decide what they want to spend on their campaign and spend it. An exhibitor in a small town can put on a Greater Movie Season Campaign for a dollar, by buying ten one-sheets, some slides and a few pennants. In larger cities the exhibitors get together and name a committee of their own to collect whatever they want to spend, and that committee spends it." As to the date of starting—there is nothing to prevent them from opening their Greater Movie Season campaign on September 1st, or on Christmas Day if they choose. "But unless they join in the national celebration, which is during August, they lose the advantage of the many national tie-ups that will cause the whole country to be talking and thinking about going to see motion pictures during August.

"Last year in the hottest August California has ever known, the Greater Movie Season Campaign gave the West Coast Theatres an increase of 20 per cent in profit over the previous August, and the business kept on building. Which would tend to prove that the public was satisfied with the pictures that they saw in second run, as well as main features. "There can be no war on the Greater Movie Season Campaign. It is an exploitation idea offered to exhibitors. Several thousand theatres already have accepted the idea. We naturally have never expected all exhibitors to adopt it the first year.

"A number of exhibitors in California did not join in the campaign last year. This year they are all in, because they know now that the idea is sound. "If a distributor offers an exhibitor a press book on a production, and exploitation service that has proved efficient in making that production bring business at the box office, and the exhibitor says he doesn't want that service, that hardly is a declaration of war. "In offering this practical idea to exhibitors, in making National Tie-ups of great value to all exhibitors, in preparing advertising material and arranging for it to be sold at cost, in furnishing a service so complete that the smallest exhibitor can take advantage of it as well as the largest, we feel that our obligation is ended. "If a few exhibitors reject it, we can only accept their decision with regret in the knowledge that they are the ones who would benefit by it and that certainly the loss is theirs."

Butterworth Increases Michigan Holdings

W. S. Butterworth has increased his theatre interests in Grand Rapids, Michigan, by the purchase of a controlling interest in the Consolidated Theatre Corporation, which owns the Alvin, Orpheum, Strand, Isin and Powers. With the late purchases made by Consolidated there are now thirty-three houses in the Butterworth circuit.

Rosenberg Wins Northwest Film Golf Championship

Louis Rosenberg, representative of the De Luxe Feature Film Exchange of Seattle, last week won the First Annual Northwest Film Golf Championship, defeating several star residents of Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho film men in a three-day match at the Eastlake golf course in Seattle. Paul R. Aust, of Associated Exhibitors, was the runner-up.

Winners of special prizes were: L. A. Samuels, of Portland, the "Imperial Metropoly" trophy donated by Douglas MacLean; W. K. Beckwith, of Warner-Vitagraph, won the third flight final; W. McNeil, Tacoma exhibitor, won medal honors with a card of 80; C. Whitby, winning the long-driving competition, and Lou and Jack Rosenberg tied for the approaching and putting prize. Nearly seventy-five contestants started off on the qualifying round of the tournament.

Newman Given Farewell at Kansas City

A crowd of about 200 persons, consisting of exhibitors, exchange officials and civic leaders, gathered at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, as a farewell tribute to Frank L. Newman, who left for Los Angeles this week, where he will manage two Paramount theatres, having disposed of his Newman and Royal theatres in Kansas City to Paramount. Samuel J. Whitmore, chairman of the board of Mid-Continent Hotels Corporation, was the toastmaster.

The speakers: The Rev. Burris A. Jenkins, pastor of the Linwood Christian Church; R. C. Bierle, President of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri; Walter S. McLoeas, president of the Commerce Trust Company, and John D. Clark, central division manager for Paramount.

Fitzpatrick and McElroy Get Indiana Circuit

Fitzpatrick & McElroy have taken over the Wallerstein Circuit of Theatres at Michigan City, Indiana, comprising the Tivoli, Starland, Dreamland and Willard.

The transaction is regarded as of unusual importance, as both companies are to the best of our knowledge, the only important organization of this firm and giving them, as it does, strong representation in Northern Indiana.

Paul C. Mooney Head of Alliance Producing

PAUL C. MOONEY, former vice-president of Producers Distributing Corporation, is to head the Alliance Producing Corporation, a company recently organized under the laws of the State of New York. The new company plans to establish a chain of dramatic stock theatres throughout the United States and Canada, produce stage plays, and engage in the production and distribution of motion pictures.

Tentative plans for the formation of several stock theatres during the coming season and for the production of several stage attractions designed for Broadway engagements have already been made, it is said.

It is stated that negotiations by the members of the organization are still under consideration.
Chicago Pledges $50,000 For Greater Movie Season
Forty-Five Cities Organized for Campaign

WITH an advertising appropriation of $500,000 for its Greater Movie Season campaign, Chicago commands the attention of the entire industry and many commercial associations. That sum, to be expended within a few weeks, establishes a record not only for Motion Picture drives but for general business campaigns as well. Following a stirring address by Barney Balaban, treasurer and chairman of the finance committee, $7,000 was pledged in seven minutes by exhibitors at the general meeting; and according to reports from Chicago $33,000 cash is already in hand.

"I believe the benefits that will come for the next eleven months will greatly overshadow the benefits derived from August alone," Mr. Balaban declared. "This is the first time the small houses will have an opportunity of doing for themselves in institutional advertising what we have done for all our houses."

To be sure that small exhibitors will derive the greatest possible benefit it was agreed to place in all newspaper ads and on all outdoor advertising a caption reading "Attend the Motion Picture Theatre NEAREST Your Home." Assessments were made on the basis of 10 cents a seat for theatres with less than 400 capacity, and 20 cents a seat for theatres of more than 400. Important commercial co-operation has been extended by Chicago Concerns. The General Outdoor Advertising Company has donated 150 billboards and with what the exchanges will use, the season will have a representation of more than 300 twenty-four sheet stands. The Chicago Gas and Light Company has agreed to insert Greater Movie Season material in all mailing matter, thus reaching more than 3,000,000 homes in Chicago and its vicinity. Five railroads have pledged their support to Ralph Kertering, greater movie season poster general manager of the campaign, by displaying posters at their own expense at all stations within a 200 miles radius.

Dining-car menus and other selling organs distributed by railroads will also carry the message. Every Chicago newspaper has been quick to cooperate already. The motion picture page of the Evening American carries a box, "Where to Go and What to See. Greater Movie Calendar." The American will also distribute free box-office stickers reading, "A Greater Movie Season Theatre."

Minneapolis, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Pittsburgh, Portland, Ore., Seattle, and Tulsa all swung into line this week making a total of forty-five important centers conducting territorial drives that will include several hundred smaller towns.

In Pittsburgh representatives of leading exhibitor and exchange factors have endorsed the campaign and elected the following executive committee: Dennis Harris of Harris-Davis Theatres, Milton Cran dall of Newland and Clark, Louis K. Sidner of Loew's Aldine, J. Galilgizer of the Casaex, and William Kester, representing the second-run and independent exhibitors.

New Orleans appointed Maurice F. Barr, of the Saenger Amusement Co., general manager of the campaign and an executive committee of B. F. Brennan, Suburban Theatres, Rodney Toms, Loew's Crescent, Marion Ferrara, Triumon Theatre, and A. E. Chadwick, Strand Theatre. The New Orleans season conforming with the national idea, will include a spectacular opening-day parade on August 3rd.

As originator of the successful Northwest Go-to-Movie Week and a staunch advocate of a country-wide drive, William A. Stifles has been the unanimous choice of Minneapolis, Minn., for the general managership there.

According to telegraphic reports from Oklahoma City, George A. McDermit of the Capitol Theatre has been appointed local general manager. Seven other towns will be linked to the campaign that Oklahoma City and Tulsa will conduct. Ralph Talbert of the Majestic Theatre, has taken charge of Tulsa activities, supported by William M. Smith, Orpheum Theatre, J. W. Clark, Majestic Theatre, W. C. Campbell, Empress and J. Brown, Lyric, who will control publicity; Miss Hazel McCoy of the Strand Theatre, finance; Harry F. Castle, Palace Theatre, F. Johnson, Wonderland Theatre, and Roy Jackson, Cozy Theatre, parades.

Extensive celebrations, embracing both a parade, a movie-ball to which ten stars have been invited, are under way in Seattle. General Manager J. Von Herberg of the Liberty has Robert Bender of the Columbia theatre as Chief Lieutenant and Frank Edwards, of the Wintergarden, as Chairman of the Portland Finance Committee. They have decided upon a campaign along the same lines and negotiations are on to link Spokane into the season.

Exhibitors in Little Rock, Ark., have taken concerted action to put the season across. R. T. Newton, Capitol Theatre, is chairman of the executive board whose members are W. A. May, Royal Theatre, T. W. Sharp, New Theatre, W. J. Prunzy, Princess Theatre, W. M. Reeves, Highland Theatre, and Henry Pipin, Palace Theatre. In New York City only the announcement of the general manager remains to complete plans that have been discussed at several meetings of nationally known exhibitors. This is expected during the week.

The manner in which independent theatre circuits are adopting the national plan devised by Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., Will H. Hays president, is demonstrated by contacts established directly with the New York service bureau. M. E. Comerford has called on the managers of the newly complete co-operation of his circuit throughout Northern Pennsylvania. Forty-five houses of the Schine Circuit, operating from Gloversville, N. Y. with Ben Davis as comptroller, will cooperate in the converted houses. The fifteen houses of the United Theatre Enterprises, A. B. Myhan, president, whose headquarters are Huntington, W. Va.

Preliminary organization having been accomplished, general managers are now directing their efforts towards Greater Movie Season newspaper contest, that has a trip for two around the world on the Red Star liner Belgenland, and trips for two to Miami and Los Angeles as first prizes. A special press-sheet containing stories, advertisements and illustrations to cover the affair from start to finish, has been issued. A one-sheet for free distribution to newspapers is ready, together with letters and other accessories calculated to generate the maximum public interest.

"What the motion picture means to me" or "What the motion picture means to my community" are the alternative subjects set for three-hundred word essays, from which only professional writers, theatre and newspaper employees and their families have been debarred. Indications are that the list of participative newspapers when complete will prove the most influential yet connected with a motion picture contest.

Up-to-date reports of Greater Movie Season activities throughout the country show forty-five important centers now in full swing. The list together with the general managers controlling operations is as follows:

-Bowery, N. Y., Tony Veiler; Atlantic, Ga., Willard C. Patterson; Atlantic City, N. J., Edward J. O'Keeffe; Boston, Mass., Buddy Stewart; Buffalo, N. Y., Jules Michael; Butte, Mont., William J. Sullivan; Camden, N. J., W. Wilson; Chicago, Ill., Ralph Kertering; Cleveland, Ohio, Fred Desberg; Clinton, Iowa, H. S. Ward; Dallas, Texas, Si Charmisky; Denver, Colo., Harry Long; Des Moines, Iowa, A. G. Stolte; Gloves-

Theatres Escape Damage In Quake
Santa Barbara’s Three Picture Houses Believed Unharmed—West Coast Co. Reports Granada Withstood Shocks

Los Angeles, June 30.

Motion picture theatres escaped damage in the Santa Barbara earthquake, according to latest reports from the stricken city. The Granada theatre, owned by West Coast, stood the shocks and was unjured, while buildings on every side were virtually wrecked.

The Granada is an eighteen hundred seat house and considered the finest structure in town. It is eight stories high and built of steel and reinforced concrete, and located on State Street in the business center. It was in this location that the greatest damage was done.

Directly opposite the Granada was the San Marcos office building, a modern structure, but now a complete ruin. The Arlington Hotel, near the Granada, was nearly demolished and several persons were killed in its collapse. It was a famous hostelry and was hardly ever without a showing of the picture company but no picture people are reported to have been in the city at the time of the quake and nobody connected with the industry has been reported injured.

Jack Retlaw, exploitation director of West Coast Theatres, said considerable anxiety had been felt for the safety of the Granada and their other two affiliated houses, the California and the Mission.

A definite report was received on the Granada that all was well and while no specific news was received on the other two, it appears quite certain that they are unjured.

C. W. Churchill, manager, and Ed Johnson, director, West Coast houses in Santa Barbara and their families are reported safe.

The news reels were on the job early following the earthquake, and pictures of the disaster were shown as early as Wednesday night in the Broadway houses. Other companies aided in the rescue work.

In answer to an appeal from Mayor Andrews of Santa Barbara for power wagons and powerful lights to aid rescue workers digging through earthquake debris, Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, promptly ordered portable studio electric equipment to be rushed to the stricken city. Within ten hours two electric generating plants and fifty or more thousand Watt lamps were installed in the ruined area of the city by studio electricians under the direction of James Bardy an electrical engineer in the employ of the film company, which gave illumination for eight blocks where rescue crews were working.

Laura La Plante, Universal Jewel star, and Josie Sedgwick, Universal western star, were among the first members of the Hollywood film colony to start activities in aid of destitute victims of the Santa Barbara earthquake. Their pictures of aid were eagerly accepted by the American Red Cross and by the American Legion.

News weeklies were on the job early and rushed pictures of the disaster to distribution points. Pathe claimed its films were the first to reach Broadway.

As the result of speedy and efficient service on the part of the International Newsreel representatives in Los Angeles and San Francisco, who chartered aeroplanes and flew to the scene of the great Santa Barbara earthquake and back to where their film could be developed and printed, the theatres in the West Coast cities showed pictures of the quakes destruction as soon as twelve hours after it happened.

The quake negatives also were speeded to Salt Lake City, in special airplanes where they caught the East-bound Air Mail to New York.

As soon as word of the Santa Barbara earthquake reached Los Angeles on Monday morning came word from C. Haupt and A. B. Knetchlet that they were immediately on an airplane for the stricken city and soon had their cameras grinding upon the scenes of destruction.

Feist Sees Spirit of Confidence
Says Progressive Exhibitors Cooperate With Producers and Distributors for Future Good of the Entire Industry

The birth of a rose brought Felix Feist to the motion picture industry. The general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, was, several years ago, invited to witness a screening of a Kinemaolor subject showing the gradual development of a rose bud into a full grown rose and from that time on was “sold” as far as motion pictures were concerned.

By degrees Felix Feist became associated with National, World, Goldwyn, Joseph M. Schenck Enterprises and then was appointed general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn.

He has recently returned from a trip covering the Western part of the United States and his observations on conditions as they exist today as compared to ten, or even four years ago, are interesting to say the least.

“What impresses me most,” said Mr. Feist, “is the wonderful spirit of confidence that has come to be a part of the motion picture business. Times certainly have changed since I first toured the country selling film and they have changed for the better, decidedly so. To me it is really a beautiful thing to feel the spirit of square dealing, high business ideals and the confidence that now exists between the exhibitor and the producer in motion pictures.”

“The progressive exhibitor, the theatre man who has grown up with the business, learned it thoroughly and really progressed now works in a spirit of cooperation with the distributor and producer in a concen-
Warners Appoint Nat L. Royster to Direct Their Southern Theatres

N AT L. ROYSTER, well-known Southern exhibitor, has been appointed Managing Director of Warner Brothers Southern Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Charlotte, N. C. Selection of Mr. Royster was made last week by Sam Warner, who went to Charlotte to inspect the theatres recently purchased by his organization and to attend the M. P. T. O. convention at Wrightsville Beach.

Mr. Royster has been manager of the New Broadway, Charlotte, since its opening last March. This theatre was recently taken over by the Warners, in addition to The Capitol, Concord; The Lexington; Lexington; the Lincoln, Winston-Salem and the Broadway, Columbia. S. C. Mr. Royster will do the buying for the entire circuit.

Before going to Charlotte, Mr. Royster had been for eight months publicity and advertising director of the Temple Theatre, Birmingham, Ala. For two years prior he was general manager of the Marvin Wise Circuit in Alabama, with seven houses under his management.

He has also had wide experience in the distribution end. He served about a year as manager of the Hallmark Exchange in Atlanta, and for some time was southeastern advertising and publicity manager for Goldwyn.

Independents Select Captains

Association Names Zone Leaders for Building of National Organization

Regional directors will serve as field captains in the building of the national organization of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America. This was decided upon at the meeting of the organization held at the Astor Hotel in New York last week with Frederick H. Elliott, general manager, presiding.

The regional directors will work in conjunction with the agents of the M. P. T. O. A. Play Date Bureau and will be charged with the duty of guarding independent interests, passing upon eligibility of applicants for membership and conducting membership campaigns.

This plan of campaign, suggested by General Manager Elliott provides for an immediate and active drive in behalf of the members of the organization, the country divided into 26 zones. More than half of the field representatives have already been chosen. Those selected are:

Lester S. Tobias, Yale Film Exchange,

It was decided at the meeting to create an association membership division to include manufacturers and others who do business with the members. This division will be divided into three classes, A, B and C. Class A will embrace film raw stock manufacturers, laboratories and engravers. Class B will be made up of lobby display and mat makers and class C will comprise printing, publishing and engraving concerns.

Send Letter on Block Booking

M. P. T. O. A. Solicits Stand of Producers and Distributors on Group Selling

R. F. WOODHULL, president of the M. P. T. O. A., has sent a circular letter to producers and distributors requesting information as to whether they will adopt a block selling policy in marketing their product for next season.

Following is the text of the letter:

"Inquiries are coming to us from theatre owners throughout the country seeking information as to whether the various distributing companies are going to attempt a compulsory block selling policy of their product for the coming film season.

"One of the major producing companies has advised us that while in the past their company has asked theatre owners to buy on this basis, this year no theatre owner would be compelled to purchase all of their pictures in this way and has asked us to so advise the theatre owners of the country. "We are writing you and the other distributing companies seeking an expression of opinion from you in this matter, and we would be glad to have word from you as to the policy you intend to pursue or are pursuing in this regard, together with any explanatory statement you may wish to make with relation thereto, as the matter is of special interest to the theatre owners of the country and it is our purpose to convey the information received in answer to this letter." We believe that the volume of quality pictures of real box office merit available in the market today, makes the compulsory purchasing of pictures in large blocks at the commencement of a season a hardship as well as unfair to theatre owners.

Mrs. Richardson, Secretary of Atlanta Review Board

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, retiring president of the Atlanta Better Films Committee, has been named Secretary of the Atlanta Board of Review. In her speech of acceptance at a meeting attended by members of the board and local managers, Mrs. Richardson reiterated her position as being opposed to censorship and favoring a friendly policy of cooperation.

Mrs. Richardson succeeds J. W. Peaseck, who had been secretary of the Board for many years. Mr. Peaseck was arbitrarily dropped from the Board when he moved his residence outside the city limits.

The personnel of the Board of Review is as follows: W. D. Hall, chairman; Charles Church, vice-chairman; J. L. Warmen, now serving as chairman; H. C. Blake and W. N. Mote.

A. M. P. A. Entertained by Radio Artists

The A. M. P. A. gave a radio party at the meeting held Thursday, June 25, at the Cafe Boulevard, New York. The event brought out a record attendance of members, whose numbers were swelled by several guests from the trade journals and New York dailies. Nils Granlund of the Mares Loew organization and the WHN broadcasting station organized the large agglomeration of radio and stage stars who entertained the assemblage.

Southern Enterprises Names New Managers

Southern Enterprises has named two managers in Anniston, Alabama, to succeed Roy L. Snider, who resigned. The company controls the Savoy, Noble and Thaeto Theatres in that city.

Hugh J. Smart has been named manager of the Noble and will serve in the same capacity at the Thaeto. Roy Smart, the resigning manager will depart in a few days for Palm Beach, Florida, where he will make his home.

Woodhull Returns From Conventions

R. F. WOODHULL, president of the M. P. T. O. A., returned from the convention of North Carolina exhibitors and the outing of the Maryland Theatre owners, at Havre de Grace in time to be on hand for the Jersey convention during the week.

At the North Carolina convention, held at Wrightsville Beach, President Woodhull was honored with a life membership in the state organization. In his address before the convention he told of the practical business service the M. P. T. O. A. was rendering theatre owners in the way of film adjustments. The outing of the Maryland organization at the Hotel Bayou, Havre de Grace was a most enjoyable affair, the banquet being held in the evening. Woodhull complimented the exhibitors on the cooperation Maryland had always given the National organization.
Marcus Named F.B.O. Sales Manager
Fills Vacancy Caused by Berman's Death—Colvin Brown Made Vice President Under Executive Readjustment

Lee Marcus, appointed sales manager of F. B. O.

Marcus, for the last four and a half years assistant sales manager of F. B. O., has been promoted to the position of Sales Manager, to replace the late Harry M. Berman, and Colvin W. Brown, who has been a member of the executive committee for some time, has been made a vice-president and will supervise the distributing departments. It was announced this week by Major H. C. S. Thomson, president and general manager of the company.

Major Thomson stated that the readjustment of the executive personnel would in no way affect Mr. J. I. Schneiter, first vice-president, who under the new arrangement, Thomson said, would be relieved of routine duties and in a position to devote more time and attention to production activities, studio management and the company's relations with independent producers.

D. A. Poucher, treasurer, will, as heretofore, be in charge of finance and accounts and the personnel of the various offices.

Mr. Marcus demonstrated his qualifications for the position he will occupy, the announcement stated, during the late Mr. Berman's illness, which extended over a period of a year and a half. As Mr. Berman's assistant, Marcus assumed many of the duties and responsibilities of sales manager, and handled a multitude of important problems connected with the sales of the product distributed by F. B. O.

In commenting on Mr. Marcus' promotion, Major Thomson said: "Mr. Marcus' broad experience in the sales department of this and other companies, making him ideally fitted for the position of sales manager."

Colvin Brown's elevation to a vice-presidency with the company is also announced to be a reward for the abilities and capacity which he has shown since joining the

Marked Decline in Film Imports
1924 Positive Imports 40% Under Previous Year—Slight Increase in Negatives, Commerce Report Shows

Imports of motion picture films into the United States for the year 1924 showed a considerable falling off from film imports for 1923 according to figures just issued by the Department of Commerce. For while 2,288,660 linear feet of negatives valued at $942,807 came into the country in 1924 as compared with 2,664,390 valued at $657,506 in 1923, imports of positives for 1924 amounted only to 4,502,031 valued at $241,065 in comparison with 7,053,232 linear feet in value $323,403 for the previous year.

How small a comparative total these figures really represent is aptly illustrated by the fact that American exports of positives were in 1924 nearly 180,000,000 feet or approximately 40 times as great as our imports of these, while our 8,000,000 feet of negatives imported in 1924 were nearly four times the amount of negatives imported.

Of the 4,502,031 feet of positives imported in 1924, 3,733,760 feet of positives or well over 80 per cent came from Europe. Of this about 3,350,000 feet came from four countries—United Kingdom, France, Germany and Italy. France led with about 1,600,000 feet; the United Kingdom was second with about 850,000 feet, while Germany and Italy followed in that order with totals of approximately 712,000 feet and 223,000 feet, respectively. The first three countries mentioned were incidentally our largest sources of supply, though in the case of France and the United Kingdom our imports were in the case of the former nearly 2,000,000 feet and in the case of the latter about 100,000 feet below the figures. Imports of positives from Germany on the other hand, increased about 30,000 feet over 1923 and from Italy about 40,000 feet.

Imports of positives from countries outside of Europe were with two exceptions, negligible. These were Japan from which we imported about 320,000 feet of positives in 1924 as against 301,000 feet in 1923, and Canada which showed figures of a little over 223,000 feet as against 271,000 feet approximately for the two periods. The whole of Latin America furnished us with only 66,959 feet for 1924, the Far East with only about 75,000 feet—exclusive of Japan—and Africa and the Near East with something over 30,000 feet over 20,000 feet of which originated in Egypt.

The situation as regards imports of negatives in 1924 was virtually the same. Out of 2,228,000 feet imported, 1,656,000 feet or nearly 90 per cent came from Europe, and of these about 1,530,000 came from the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Italy. France—as in the case of positives—led with about 530,000 feet as against 279,000 feet in 1923. Italy, however, was second with 404,000 feet in round numbers as compared with approximately 287,000 feet the previous year, while the United Kingdom showed only 394,000 feet—a decrease of about 115,000 feet over the 1923 figures.

Imports from Germany, the fourth country, stood about the same in 1924 as in 1923 with about 201,000 feet.

Few negatives were imported from regions outside of Europe. Canada with about 113,000 feet—as against 172,000 feet last year—was the only country to go over the 100,000 mark. All of Latin America sent us only 182,438 feet of negatives in 1924 as compared with 125,000 feet in 1923—this being greater in footage, however, than our imports of positives from there. The Far East furnished us with 192,000 feet of negatives—243,000 feet in 1923—and Africa and the Near East about 83,000 feet.
Edna Marian Given Role in Universal Jewel

Edna Marian, who made her picture debut a little over a year ago, and who for the past year has been featured in Century Comedies for Universal, is soon to make her bow in feature productions. She has been signed to play the second feminine lead in the Universal Jewel, “The Still Alarm,” adapted from the old stage melodrama and now being directed by Edward Laemmle, Helene Chadwick and William Russell have the feature roles in the picture. Miss Marian’s work in “The Still Alarm” is not expected to interfere with her work in Century Comedies. She is slated to make twelve of the two-reeler during the coming season. Several of these are already completed and in the exchanges.

Lois Hutchinson to Write for Preferred Pictures

B. P. Schulberg has engaged Lois Hutchinson to write scenarios for his organization during the next year. Miss Hutchinson has been a prominent newspaper woman and was recently associated with the John M. Stahl producing unit. Her first assignment for Mr. Schulberg was as title writer for “White Merry-Go-Round,” his Preferred Picture, this work was followed by adaptation of “Parisian Love” and “The Girl Who Wouldn’t Work,” which are now in production at the Schulberg studios.

Weiss to Distribute New Maloney Series

Weiss Brothers have concluded a deal with William Steiner whereby they will distribute the new 1926 series of five reel Western dramas featuring Leo Maloney. Appearing with the star will be his highly trained horse Pio and his terrier dog Bullets.

The stories for this series will be written by Ford Beebe, who has worked with Maloney on all the pictures in the series just completed.

“Prince of Broadway” for George Walsh

“The Prince of Broadway” has been purchased by Chadwick Pictures Corporation as the third feature vehicle for George Walsh, who has already completed the first two of the series. The star will again be seen in an athletic role. The production will get under way within the next few days, though the director and cast have not yet been announced.

New York Trade Show of Lloyd Comedy July 9

A motion picture trade showing of Harold Lloyd’s new comedy “The Freshman” will be given at the New York Roof theatre at one thirty P. M., Thursday, July ninth. The screening has been arranged by Pathé and is open to exhibitors in the New York territory and those visiting in the city. “The Freshman” will be Lloyd’s last feature for Pathé. It is scheduled for release in the fall.

English Plan Huge Studio and Theatre Project

A NATIONAL Film project involving a budget of seven and a half million dollars for the establishment of studios and the acquisition of a theatre in the principal cities of the world was discussed at the National Kinematograph Exhibitors’ Conference at Glasco, July 1, according to a London wireless despatch to the New York Times.

The movement looks toward the placing of Britain’s film industry on a competitive basis with that of the United States.

The plan was outlined by T. A. Welsh, managing director of Welsh, Pearson & Co., Ltd., and received considerable attention from film men.

Welsh said that the sooner all the British film studios were scrapped the better, because they were totally inadequate for big productions.

He suggested the building of a vast studio thirty miles outside London, wherein all British companies could produce their films administered by a cabinet council of the British film industry.

Theatres should then be acquired in the chief cities of the world to insure profitable distribution for British films, he added.

It was intimated that the money in whole or in part might be obtained through a Government subsidy.

Lord Beaverbrook Visits His Canada Holdings

The announcement has been made at Ottawa that Lord Beaverbrook of London, Will, sail for Canada on July 26 to look into various enterprises in which he is concerned in the Dominion, including the Famous Players Canadian Corporation. It is stated that Lord Beaverbrook will remain in Eastern Canada for about a month.

Late in May N. L. Nathanson of Toronto, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp. sailed for England via New York, to hold a special conference with Lord Beaverbrook, it was declared, and also to spend some weeks in Europe for pleasure. Canadian film fans are looking forward to important announcements.

Fox Philadelphia Exchange Building Ready Soon

The exchange staff of Fox Film Corporation, Philadelphia is waiting the final stages of construction to move into the new exchange quarters in the building at 1238 Vine street. Edgar Moss and his staff have outgrown their present quarters at 1315 Vine constriction business contracted for next season could not be efficiently handled without the additional space in the new Fox building. The new quarters will be ready within the next few weeks.

“On Dress Parade” Will Be Griffith Star Vehicle

Paramount has selected “On Dress Parade” as the first starring vehicle for Raymond Griffith. The picture will be made under the direction of Edward Sutherland. Mary Brian is to have the role of leading lady.

Directors Assigned for Nine Schulberg Films

B. B. Schulberg has assigned the directors who will make the first nine of the eighteen Preferred Pictures by his corporation during 1925-26 by his organization. The work has been distributed among three directors, Rasnier, Marcel De Sano and Fred Windemere.

Gasnier will make “Parisian Love,” “The Other Woman’s Story” and “Eden’s Fruit.” De Sano, who is now filming “The Girl Who Wouldn’t Work,” will also direct “Law of the Wild” and “The Vanishing Man,” “This Ring,” “The Plastic Age” and “Horses and Women” are to be directed by Fred Windemere.

Evelyn Brent to Essay New Type of Role in Next Film

A role sharply contrasting with those which she has played in her recent features, is to be essayed by Evelyn Brent in “Lady Robinhood,” her next vehicle for F. B. O. In the new film Miss Brent will be seen as a sly Spanish girl participating in several emotional scenes and many moments which are in the high comedy vein. In her last five or six success-es, Miss Brent has been cast in crook roles of the melodramatic variety.

Jackie Coogan to Start Work in July

Jackie Coogan will start work July 15th on the first of the two productions he signed to make within the next year for Metro-Goldwyn. It will be a sequel to “The Rag Man” and is titled, “Old Clothes.” The story is again by Willard Mack and is being continuous by Kenneth Clark. The release date on this production is set for November 22d. The picture is to be made at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plant in Culver City.

Stromberg Signs Val Paul as Production Manager

Hunt Stromberg has engaged Val Paul, who was a director before entering upon a career as a studio business executive, to act as production manager for several of the units which are making pictures for Producers Distributing Corp., at the Stromberg studios.

Columbia Announces Its New Policy

JOE BRANDT, president of Columbia Pictures Corporation, now touring the key cities, announces a new Columbia policy for the coming season. Prints of pictures will be shipped to all exchanges in order that exhibitors may look over before contracting for them.

The company has had a number of the Columbia, Waldorf and Perfection series cut, titled and ready for showing before the close of the season. Prints of the first few of each of these series are now ready for the exchanges.

The first pictures for release in each of these series are “The Danger Signal,” a Columbia production; “Fighting Youth;” “Perfection,” and “Enemy of Men,” Waldorf.
Cody Suffers Broken Jaw in Stunt Ride

Bill Cody, Western star, making the first of a new series of pictures for Independent Pictures Corporation suffered a broken jaw and an injured eye while attempting the "drunken ride" stunt. He will be laid up for a period of at least four weeks. Cody attempted to jump from the back of his own horse going full speed to the back of a rider of another horse. His own animal shied just as he was about to make the jump, hurting him violently to the ground. Production on the picture, which was being directed by William James Craft, will be suspended until the star's recovery.

Deitch Joins Ginsberg Sales Forces

Joseph Deitch, one of the popular sales executives in the motion picture industry, has become affiliated with the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation. During the absence of Ginsberg, who is in California supervising the season's production, Deitch will be in charge of sales.

Within a week or two, Deitch will visit the zone cities in order to familiarize himself with every angle of the sales situation.

Universal Export Manager Recovers From Illness

N. L. Manheim, Export Manager for Universal, has returned to his duties at the company's Home Offices after a week's illness due to a minor operation on his neck. Manheim has held his present position for several years, following James V. Bryson, as export manager.

Lasky at Hollywood Studios Will Supervise Big Production Boom Announced To Start Soon

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky, arrived in Hollywood last week from New York to initiate a season of great production activity which will be launched soon by his organization. The company at present has under contract and ready to start work probably the largest number of players assembled by any one company on the West Coast.

"Within the next thirty days," Mr. Lasky said on his arrival in the west, "we will have ten feature productions starting here; among them some of the greatest pictures we have ever attempted."

There are seven companies either out of the studio on location, or just preparing to go.

James Cruze's next historical picture of the west, the story of the pony express, will be taken at Sacramento, California, and Cheyenne, Wyoming. The company, numbering several hundred people, will leave in a few days.

Another production of equal importance is Zane Grey's "The Vanishing American," on which shooting will begin this week. More than 10,000 Indians from the reservation will appear in the picture, which features Richard Dix, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery and Malcolm McGregor.

Clarence Badger and his company making "The Golden Princess," Betty Bronson's starring picture for Paramount, are on location in Owens Valley, where they will remain for several weeks.

Malcolm St. Clair making "The Trouble with Wives" took his company to Catalina Island for the week. The picture features Florence Eldridge, Tom Moore, Esther Ralston and Ford Sterling.

Irvin Willat has taken a portion of his company, which is making "The Ancient Highway," to Oregon. Jack Holt and Florence Vidor are the featured players selected to date.

Paul Bern is en route west to direct the filming of Pola Negri's next starring picture, "Flower of Night," from the original story of Joseph Hergesheimer dramatized by Willis Goldbeck.

Raymond Griffith and his comedy company, under Edward Sutherland's direction, now making "On Dress Parade," are scheduled to go on location shortly.

Three other companies will start work within a month, according to Mr. Lasky's announcement, but these three will work largely in the studio. William de Mille will return shortly from New York to produce "New Brooms." Adolphe Menjou will start July 6 on "The Grand Duchess and the Waif" under Malcolm St. Clair's direction. On the same date Raoul Walsh will begin work on his next production for Paramount.

"The Masked Bride" to Be Next Mae Murray Vehicle

"The Masked Bride," by Leon Abrams, will be the next starring production which Mae Murray will make for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.
Warner Brothers Sign Bonns
Will Direct Big Exploitation Department in the Interest of New Pictures

As the first step of a national organization of exploitation men to handle their pictures, Warner Brothers have engaged Eddie Bonns, late of Metro-Goldwyn to serve as director of the department. Bonns will recruit a staff that eventually will extend to all important districts for the proper exploitation of Warner pictures on the 1925-26 program.

Bonns has long been regarded one of the foremost exploitation directors in the picture industry. He has put the big punch behind many outstanding successes of the past five years. This is not his first engagement with the Warner organization. He was with this firm in the early days of their ascending career. He was behind the campaigns that put over "The Lost City," "Why Girls Leave Home," "School Days" and other Warner successes.

After leaving Warner Brothers Bonns went with Goldwyn, where, among other exploits, he put over the "Brothers Under the Skin" stunt that gained much publicity. He went with Metro-Goldwyn when the firms merged. His last stunt for that concern was the launching of the trackless train, now crossing the continent.

Bonns assumed his new duties with Warners this week and until his exploitation force is organized will devote his time to preparing special national exploitation for the pictures on the 1925-26 program.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Buys Rights to Stewart Book

Donald Ogden Stewart's humorous book "The Crazy Fool" has been purchased for the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The book was recently published by Albert and Charles Boni and is reported to be among the present best-sellers.

The author is under contract to collaborate with the production of "The Crazy Fool." Stewart, who is now in Europe, is expected at the West Coast studios in October to prepare for the filming of his book.

Kane Signs Al Santell to Direct Features

Al Santell has been engaged by Robert Kane to direct productions which the Kane organization will contribute to the First National schedule. Santell's most recent directorial effort was "The Marriage Whirl," in which Corinne Griffith is starred. Santell started his picture career as a scenario writer for the old Gaumont company. Since then he has been associated with Pathe, Mack Sennett, and with several large feature producing companies.

Chadwick Completes Cast for Ray Feature

Chadwick Pictures Corporation has completed the cast for the next Charles Ray production, which will have in the principal roles, in addition to the star, Gertrude Omsted, as leading lady, Gertrude Short and Jack Clifford. In the cast also are Ida Lewis, J. P. Lockley, Frank Austin and Syble Johnson. The picture will be directed by Jerome Storm under the supervision of Joseph de Grasse.

Lucille Upton Engaged for "Pace That Thrills" Cast

Lucille Upton, young sister of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, has been cast for a flapper role in "Pace That Thrills," which is being produced in the east by First National with Ben Lyon and Mary Astor in the co-featured parts.

Weiss Bros. To Open Exchanges
Will Have Offices in Renown Branches in New York, Buffalo and Chicago

LOUIS Weiss, managing director of Weiss Brothers' Artelass Pictures Corp., this week announced that his company would distribute its pictures direct to exhibitors in certain territories. The announcement of this change of policy was made following conferences with M. H. Hoffman; vice-president and general manager of Renown Pictures, Inc., operating exchanges in New York, Buffalo and Chicago. Under the arrangement with Renown, the Weiss organization will establish sales offices in each of that company's exchanges. Another exchange will be opened within a month in Indianapolis to cover the Indiana territory.

Weiss Brothers have announced a schedule of thirty-two features for the coming season, the program being made up of three series of five reel western dramas in which Buddy Roosevelt, Buffalo Bill, Jr., and Wally Wales will be starred, and a series of eight starring Leo Maloney. The latter group will be released under the Clarron Photoplays, Inc., trademark.

In announcing the move Mr. Weiss said that the arrangement under which Artelass would establish exchange offices in the Renown branches would permit his company greater opportunity in the future to handle a more extensive and varied program, going through one exchange in a given territory instead of having several exchanges in the same territory handling pictures of different classes.

"Gold Rush" Opens Run in Hollywood

The premiere of Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush," his newest feature comedy for United Artists, was held at Grauman's Egyptian Hollywood theatre on the evening of June 26. The presentation was accompanied by a special music score and an elaborate prologue. It was enthusiastically received by a brilliant first-night audience which numbered the leading lights of the film colony in the West Coast. Los Angeles newspaper critics pronounced it an "epic comedy," and used superlatives in praising the form as the comedian's greatest screen effort.

"The Gold Rush" is to have its New York premiere at the Mark Strand Theatre sometime in August. Negotiations were concluded this week by Moe Mark and Hiram Abrams of United Artists, and Arthur Kelly, personal representative of Chaplin. The definite opening date is to be announced soon by Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Mark Strand.
Macfadden Signs Constance Bennet and Owen Moore
Owen Moore and Constance Bennet have been engaged by Bernarr Macfadden for leading roles in forthcoming features to be made by True Story Film Company and released on the independent market by Astor Distributing Corporation. The vehicles in which these two players will appear for the Macfadden organization have not been announced as yet.

The first offering from the newly organized producing company will be released August first under the title "The Wrongdoers," in which Lionel Barrymore will be starred. Anne Cornwall and Henry Hull have principal roles in the supporting cast.

Davis Increases Staff and Space of New York Office

Irving Cummings to Direct "Dance Madness"
Irving Cummings has been placed under contract to direct "Dance Madness," a story by S. Jay Kaufman and Max Marcin, for Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer. Allen Pringle and Lew Cody have the leading roles.

Warners Buy Rights to Roche Stories
WARNER BROS. have acquired the screen rights to the novels and short stories written by Arthur Somers Roche, author of numerous popular works published in book form and in leading fiction magazines. Under the contract which Warners have signed with the author part of his time will be devoted to writing for the screen. The agreement gives Warners the rights to all of Roche's completed works and first call on all of his future writings for some time to come.

Roche is believed to have received flattering offers from several big production companies but withheld his writings from the pictures until the Warners proposal were made to him. The company is now making "The Pleasure Buyers," one of his latest novels, with Irene Rich and Clive Brook in the leading roles.

Chet Withey is directing the film.

New First National Stories
Twenty-Four Are Added to Program of Releases for the Coming Season
FIRST NATIONAL and its allied producers have added twenty-four additional stories since the original announcement, for release during the coming season. The four Robert T. Kane productions will be "Invisible Wounds" from Frederick Palmer's novel, with Blanche Sweet; "Bluebeard's Seven Wives," "Hell's Kitchen," a Robert Stowers story, and "Just a Husband," a Dunn Burnett story.

In the list are two C. C. Barr-Johnny Blues productions, "The Live Wire" and "The Game of Light." The first picture with Leon Errol under his long term contract will be "Cocktails Make the Pirate." This is from Holman Day's comedy story and will be produced by Sam Rork.

Edwin Carewe has already started production on "The Sea Woman," from the Willard Robertson stage play. Blanche Sweet, Dorothy Sebastian and Robert Frazer have the leading roles. The newspapers are "Joanna," by H. L. Gates is another of the new ones.

First National has acquired rights to "Mile Modiste," the successful musical comedy. "The Dangerous Mrs. Denham" is another of the new ones. The story is by V. E. Powell. "The Savage" by Ernest Pascal is soon to go into production, as is "The Just Steward," by Richard Behan, "Puppets" is to be made into a picture by First National, as is "The Love Link." The former is an adaptation from the successful stage play. Others on the new list are "Nazarine," the Clarene Balfington Kelland story; "Misunions," the stage play by Myron C. Fagan; "Jail Birds, Inc.," a new story by W. H. Clifford; "The Golden Mummy," by George W. Sutton, Jr., "The Crystal Cup," by Gertrude Atherton; "Tarnished Gold," by Frederick Claipin; "The Tidal Wave," from Huthcheson Boyd's play; "Isles of Romance," by Richard Connell, and "Memory Lane," a John M. Stahl production.

Noah Beery Added to Cast of "Vanishing American"
Noah Beery will play the role of the white trader in the Paramount screen production of Zane Grey's "The Vanishing American." The picture, which will be filmed in the West, has been announced as one of the most important productions which Paramount will essay this year.

Montague Love Chosen for "Ancient Highway" Cast
Montague Love is to play the role of "Alan Hunt" in Paramount's production of "The Ancient Highway," a James Oliver Curwood story to be directed by Irving Willat. Jack Holt is to play the male lead in the picture.
Independent Sales Activities

Many Important Deals Closed—Associated Exhibitors Sell Product for United Kingdom

Several important independent sales deals were concluded within the past week, reports from various companies announcing the closing of territory, both foreign and domestic, on new programs.

Among the bigger transactions was the contract signed between Oxford Film Exchange, New York, and Astor Distributing Corp. Under the agreement the entire Astor product, including the eight Bernard Macfadden True Story Film Company's pictures, are to be distributed in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey.

Foreign sales include a deal in which the Ideal Films, Ltd., acquired the entire output of Associated Exhibitors for the United Kingdom. This sale was concluded by Inter-Globe Export Corp., and is said to involve almost a half million dollars.

Another foreign transaction was that between Louis Auerback of Export and Import Film Company and Warner Brothers which gives the Auerback organization the Warner product for the Japan territory.

Among the recent Payart sales are the following: To Midwest Film Company, "Battling Brewer" for the Kansas City territory; Kent Film Co., of Detroit, "Battling Brewer" for Michigan; Security Pictures, "Battling Brewer" and "Secret Service Sanders" for Northern Illinois and Indiana; Big Feature Rights Corp., for Kentucky; "Winning A Woman" and "Street of Tears" to Supreme Pictures of Boston; "Winning A Woman" to Oxford Film Exchange of New York City; the Graphic Pictures of Buffalo; "For Another Woman" for Eastern Pennsylvania to Liberty Film Corporation; and western Pennsylvania to Supreme Photoplays; and for Iowa and Nebraska the same picture and the Hayart Butterfly comedies to Fontenelle Feature Film Company, while Independent Film Company of Omaha secured "Secret Service Sanders" for Iowa and Nebraska; and Masterpiece Film Attractions of Philadelphia bought the Billy Sullivan series for their territory.

A contract, involving over $700,000 has been closed between the Tiffany Productions, Inc., and the British Exhibitors Films of London, who have taken the Tiffany Big Twelve. This deal was terminated last week. The Tiffany productions will be handled in the United Kingdom under the trade name of Bernhard-Tiffany Productions with offices in London at 99a Charing Cross Road, Cambridge Circus, W. C. 2, and with New York Offices at 1540 Broadway, New York.

M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of Rennown Pictures, Inc., announced this week that he had bought the rights for upper New York for product of Astor Distributing Corporation. Hoffman, whose company has offices in Albany and Buffalo, will have the eight Bernard Macfadden True Story Film Company productions.

Jeffrey Bernard, European representative for Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation, left last week for England with contracts under which Wardour Films Limited, of London, takes over the entire output of the Ginsberg company for England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Charles Goetz of Dependable Exchange signed contracts whereby his organization will take over the Gotham product for the entire state of New York exclusive of New York City.

Skouras Brothers and Harry Hynes have acquired the Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois territorial rights to all of the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation films, which include Banner and Royal films.

Lotus Thompson Signed for Feature Role

Perfection Pictures has signed Lotus Thompson for a featured role in "The New Champion," in which William Fairbanks and Edith Roberts will have the leading parts. The picture will be the third in the six 1925-26 Perfection features which Columbia Pictures will release. Other members of the cast are Lloyd Whitlock, Frank Hagen, Marion Court, Bert Appling and Al Kaufman. Reeves Eason is to direct the production.

Bill Hart Ready For Comeback

Western Star Starts First Picture for United Artists in Two Weeks

BILL HART is all set to start his motion picture comeback within the next two weeks. C. Gardner Sullivan has been signed to prepare the continuity for this first picture of the Western star to be released in September through United Artists Corporation, and King Baggot has been engaged to direct.

This will be Hart's first work before the camera in two years. The picture will be made as a Joseph M. Schenck production and Barbara Bedford will have the leading feminine role opposite the star. The picture is titled "Tumbleweeds" and is characterized as an epic of the west, centering around the celebrated Cherokee Strip Land Rush.

Hart quit the screen two years ago at the height of his career declaring he would not again appear before the camera in another picture until he had vindicated himself of charges made in his divorce suit. Hart made good. For more than two years he lived in comparative idleness, spending most of his time on his ranch in the San Fernando valley. Then came the vindication for which he was waiting, and at once he started preparations for his comeback picture.

"Tumbleweeds" will be one of the early fall releases of United Artists' schedule. Schenck is now in New York arranging an expansion program that will have a definite effect on Hart's future plans.

Brand Exploitation Head of United Artists

HARRY BRAND, president of the Wampas and director of the Joseph M. Schenck publicity activities in Hollywood, has been appointed to organize and direct an exploitation department for United Artists Corporation.

Drum Abrams, president of United Artists, who made the appointment, has also enlarged the publicity and advertising department under Charles E. Meyer. Brand has been associated with the Schenck organization for the past five years as director of publicity for Norma and Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton. Nathan S. Synkes, recently with the First National organization, will be associated with Mr. Brand in exploiting the United Artists productions.
Warners to Send Units to Java for Scenes

Warner Brothers will send a whaling expedition to the coast of Java to film scenes for "The Sea Beast," the John Barrymore starring vehicle which the company announces will be produced as the most elaborate offering so far attempted by the organization. Two ships have been chartered and when arrangements are completed a company of about 250 persons will sail from Los Angeles for the fishing grounds where the sea mammoths are most plentiful. The expedition will ultimately join the great whaling fleet off the coast of Africa.

Priscilla Bonner has been chosen as Barrymore's leading lady in this picture, which will be made from a scenario adapted by Bess Meredith from "Moby Dick." Miss Bonner will accompany the expedition, in which there will be a number of veteran fishermen recruited from New Bedford, the home of the whaling industry with which "Moby Dick" deals.

Mae Busch Completes Two for Associated

Having completed starring roles in two Associated Exhibitors pictures, Mae Busch has returned to California to resume work with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, by whom she was loaned to Associated. Her two new pictures are "The Miracle of Life" and "Cannille of the Barbary Coast."

"Cannille of the Barbary Coast" is founded on a story by Forrest Halsey and was produced by Becton Pictures, Inc. Hugh Dierker directed. Owen Moore plays opposite Miss Busch, while the balance of the cast is made up of Burr McIntosh, Harry T. Morey, Dorothy King, Fritzie Brunette and Tammany Young.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors’ Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair;" the third the number who considered it "Good;" and the fourth, those who considered it "Big.

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Girl on Street Advertised
“Lady of the Night”
When “Lady of the Night” played at the Riviera theatre in Knoxville, Tenn., C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, attracted attention to the showing by putting a girl on the street dressed up as the tough girl Molly in the picture. This girl was procured by advertising in the local dailies for a young woman to impersonate Miss Shearer. Over fifty applicants applied. The girl selected was provided with a lamp post made of light pine, and posed against it as a tough nut. This stunt proved a knock-out. Such crowds were attracted that it was necessary for her to move her post from time to time from one block to another to prevent congestion of traffic.

Twenty-five 1-sheets were posted, with fifteen 3-sheets, five 6-sheets and seven 24-sheets. Two large illuminated boxes containing 6-sheets above the lobby provided a splendid flash on the picture. Five thousand heralds were distributed.

Active co-operation was received by Exploiter Haug throughout the campaign from W. E. Drumbar, enterprising manager of the Riviera.

Kingsmore Gives “Charley’s Aunt” a Push
Making the most of the varied possibilities for exploitation offered by the title and story of “Charley’s Aunt,” Howard Price Kingsmore, manager of the Howard theatre, Atlanta, gave the picture a first rate campaign.

One of the best features of his exploitation was the replica of Charley’s aunt-wig, cap, dress and all—who was seen on the streets of Atlanta during the week before the picture was screened, riding slowly along in an old fashioned surrey, driven by a negro coachman. On the back of the surrey hung a large banner, proclaiming in glaring letters, “Charley’s Aunt, from Brazil where the Nuts come from, Visiting at Howard theatre all next week.” This quaint equipage, drawn by two handsome horses, attracted attention wherever it went.

The second publicity stunt designed by Kingsmore in connection with the picture was a special Mothers’ Day matinee held on the Monday morning following Mothers’ Day to which all mothers over forty years were invited free of charge. Part of this plan included a tie-up with the Atlanta Constitution, which printed admission coupons for the mothers.

“Last Laugh” Given Strong Campaign in Frisco
One of the most effective campaigns yet devised for “The Last Laugh” was worked out by W. C. Getty, Universal exploiteer in San Francisco, in co-operation with the Union Square theatre.

First a preview was held to which several hundred prominent San Franciscans were invited. At the close of the showing, “Jury” slips were passed out on which the guests might record their opinions and the next day found such papers as the Examiner quoting these jurymen to the extent of nearly a column of publicity. The Examiner, in playing up the society angle of the affair, also ran a 9-inch two column original sketch of a prominent San Francisco matron who was present.

Two contests were arranged which proved unusually successful. One, with the Daily News, was for stories of when the writers had enjoyed the “Last Laugh,” and the other, with the Illustrated Daily Herald, was for answers to the question: “Should Movies End Happily or Truly?” “The Last Laugh,” as will be recalled, had two endings—one logical and sad, and the other illogical and happy.

A doorman is the central figure of the film, and so the Union Square had a doorman who was made up as almost a perfect duplicate of Jannings’ famous character. He was J. Aldrich Libby, a former headliner on the Keith Circuit.

Radio Broadcast Stunt for “Zander” in Akron, Ohio
C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, recently aided the showing of “Zander the Great” at the Allen theatre in Akron, O., by announcing the run daily over the radio from station WADC, and by taking extra space in all the local dailies.
Varied Store Tie-ups for "The Great Divide"

A chain of seven drug stores were recently tied up by Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, when "The Great Divide" played at the Princess theatre in Fairmont, W. Va. A ticket to see this picture was offered free to every purchaser of Krank's Toilet Preparations, and this circumstance was liberally advertised in the press. Seven windows were placed at Pyle's disposal, who used them to exploit the showing with exceptionally good effect.

An arithmetical contest suggested by the exhibitor's service book was planted in the Fairmont Times, and ran in the Sunday and Monday editions. Tickets were offered as prizes, and the competition proved popular beyond expectations. The names of the winners were duly printed in The Times. Extra space was taken in all the local dailies and the town was well posted.

Varied "Way of a Girl" Ads in Evansville Drive

When "The Way of a Girl" played recently at the American theatre in Evansville, Ind., Charles Glickauf, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, aroused considerable interest in the showing by arranging a peephole window on the main thoroughfare which attracted attention throughout the week preceding the premiere. Above the peephole Glickauf put the caption "For Women Only." Inside was a 3-sheet cutout with other advertising matter, including the name of the theatre and the date.

A motorcyclist traveled through the main streets of Evansville carrying a sign on his back reading "Don't Speed! If you must have excitement see 'The Way of a Girl' at the American theatre." This bal- lyhoo exploited the showing effectively.

"Crimson Runner" Showing Thoroughly Heralded

Heralded by an avalanche of publicity which served to let all Cleveland know that a motion picture star was coming to town, Priscilla Dean's new personal appearance act with "The Crimson Runner," opened at Keith's 105th Street theatre in the big Ohio city recently.

Perhaps the stunt most productive of results was a tie-up arranged with the Cleveland News whereby Priscilla Dean sold autographed copies of "Joanna," a new song hit by a Cleveland composer, which the News was sponsoring, at a down-town store for one hour on a specified morning. Announcement of the stunt was made with a two-column cut and story on the front page, followed by a full column length story on page one the next day. The following day the News ran a four-column cut and story, and followed up on the following Sunday by a scene taken in the store which they published in the rotogravure section.

The Cleveland Press was inaugurating its annual marble contest, and when Miss Dean offered a trophy to the winner, the Press reciprocated by using stories and pictures of the star being taught to shoot by the previous year's champion. Motion pictures were also made of this and shown in a local news reel distributed in the Cleveland territory.

At the N. V. A. ball in Cleveland, Prisci lla Dean was made official hostess. An elaborate dinner was given in her honor at the Statler hotel and during her stay she attended a number of civic and social affairs.

While in Cleveland, national tie-ups were made with the Chandler automobile, with Dr. Kahler's shoes, with the World-Kite Radio company, with a new make of knitted capes, and with "Secrets," a periodical published in Cleveland.
"Gang" Make Movies in New Comedy for Pathé

"Bigger and Better Pictures" is the title of the "Our Gang" comedy which is now in production at the Hal Roach studios under the direction of Robert McGowan. All members of the popular gang of juvenile comedians will appear in this film, which deals with the experience of youngsters who decide to make their own movies.

Another unit at present active at the Roach lot is the Charlie Chase company, now filming a two-reeler in which the action shifts from the seashore to the mountain peaks in rapid fashion. Chase is supported by Katherine Grant in the picture, which is being directed by Leo McCarey.

James W. Horne has just completed "Somewhere in Somewhere," in which Charley Murray and Lucien Littlefield play the leading roles. The comedy is based on the adventures of two buddies in "no man's land."

Educational Units Start at New Studios

Educational has started two comedy units at the studios recently acquired from Principal, in which most of the company's productions activity of the future will be housed. The two units are under the direction of Norman Taurog and Stephen Roberts.

With the exception of the Christie units, producing Christie comedies, Bobby Vernon comedies, Walter Hiers comedies and Jimmie Adams comedies, all productions on the Educational program, including Mermaid, Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Cameo, Tuxedo and Juvenile Comedies, will be housed at the new studios.

More than $100,000 is being spent to improve the studios. Two new stages 100 by 100 feet and 57 by 120 feet will supplement the present 80 by 120 feet stage. New electrical equipment and mechanical devices are now being installed.

Announce Titles for Three Andy Gump Comedies

Titles have been selected for three of the new series of twelve Andy Gump comedies now being produced at Universal City for the Fall season. The titles are "Andy Takes a Flyer," "California Here We Come" and "The Found World."

The comedies are being made in two-reel lengths with Joe Murphy in the title role. Ivy Livingston as "Min" and Jackie Morgan as "Little Chester."

Ivy Livingston Signs as Min in Gump Series

Sam Van Ronkle, producer of Gump Comedies for Universal release, has signed Ivy Livingston to a long term contract to play the role of "Min" in these Gump comedies. A second series of twelve of these comedies is now being produced. In the next of the series the action takes place in a Pullman car. Joe Murphy plays Andy Gump and Jack Morgan is Chester.

"Sunken Silver" Serial Ends

Final Chapter is Among Features of Pathé Program for Week of July 12th

The last chapter of the serial, "Sunken Silver" is included among the features of the Pathé program for the week of July 12th. The concluding chapter of "Sunken Silver" is titled "The End of the Trail" with Allene Ray and Walter Miller in the leading roles. The serial was directed by Spencer Bennet.

The comedy featuring Arthur Stone is titled "Sherlock Sleuth" and has in the cast Noah Young, Martha Sleeper, Marjorie Whites, William Golestie, Helen Gilmore and Jack Gavin. Ralph Celer directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones.

Harry Langdon's second comedy of a series of two made by Principal Pictures Corporation is titled "The White Wing's Bride." Alf Goulding directed.

"Learning How" is the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" produced by J. L. Hawkins. This subject shows that the beginning of all sports is "learning how." Some of the sports covered are lariat throwing, golf, rowing, archery, baseball, football and tennis.

Century To Release 5 In July
Wanda Wiley and Edna Marion Vehicles Included in Comedy Group Announced

CENTURY will release five comedies during the month of July through Universal exchanges, it was announced this week.

"Plenty of Nerve" deals with the mix-ups resulting when the heroine falls heir to a sanitarium for the feeble-minded. Her fiancee, played by Billy Enoule, is there for treatment because of susceptibility to superstitions.

"A Rough Party," is a kid-cut up comedy in which the grown-ups dress as youngsters. Al Alt, the hero, is supported by Constance Darling in the leading feminine role.

"Just in Time," the new Wanda Wiley comedy, is a comedy of "hustlers," in which Wanda does some detective work as a reporter for a newspaper. Joe Bonner is her leading man. Edward Luddy directed.

"The Polo Kid" shows the contortionist-comedian as a comic polo player. He really game. Constance Darling has the chief supporting role, with Larry Richardson as the "heavy." Jess Robbins directed.

"Dry Up," is the last Century release of the month. The action is complicated by a bevy of "heavies" who lead the hero and heroine a fast and nerve racking half-hour. The direction is by Al Herman.

Educational Releases Planned
Five Two-Reel Comedies and Seven Single-Reelers Set for July and August

FIVE two-reel comedies and seven single reelers will be released by Educational Film Exchanges during the hot months of July and early August. Of the two-reelers three are in the Mermaid series and all are Jack White productions.

Of the Mermaids, Lige Conley will first be seen on July 12th in "Below Zero," which was directed by Norman Taurog. "Hot and Heavy," second of the series, with Eddie Nelson, will be released July 26th, and "Beware," with Lige Conley on August 9th.

Walter Hiers in his latest Educational-Wanda Wiley comedy, "Oh Bridget" will be released July 5th. It was directed by Archie Mayo. "Waiting," an Educational-Lloyd Hamilton comedy, featuring Lloyd Hamilton, will also be a July release.

Single reelers announced for July and early August release include three of the Sambo series and two Earl Harus, as well as two of the Lyman H. Howe "Hodge-Podge" series. Another subject released June 28th is the official motion pictures of the world's championship wrestling match between Ed "Strangler" Lewis and Wayne "Big" Munn.

Pathe News Shows Films of French-Riff War
Pictures of the French offensive against the Riff tribesmen in Morocco are a feature of Pathe News No. 52. The war in Morocco is being covered by Pathe News' by Andre Glattli of the Paris staff of the organization. Glattli has shown great daring and resource in obtaining first-hand views of the hostilities, frequently facing the greatest dangers to make photographs of the clashes between the armed forces.

Among the views which are shown in this issue of Pathe News are the following:

Troops advance to launch fierce attack upon Riff tribesmen in Astar village; the French artillery opens up with full force to shell the nest of the Moors; as the bombing of Astar continues; Scenes of wounded—one at the cameraman's very side—the Red Cross workers give heroic aid; some of the desperately injured are rushed to ambulances in the rear by airplane; behind the lines at Fez, Marshal Launet, in charge of war against the Riffs consults with General Hoecht, his chief of staff.

Larry Kent Lead for Miss Vaughn in New Series
B. P. Fineman, general manager of the F. B. O. Studios, has announced the selection of Larry Kent for the lead opposite Alberta Vaughn in the "Adventures of Maisie" series of two-reel plays which are to be based on the stories of that title written by Nell Martin and published in a popular fiction magazine.
Play Up Short Subjects For Box Office Results

Value of Exploiting Short Reels is Told

By S. J. Maurice, Special Representative, Serial Dept., Universal

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the third of a series of articles by Mr. Maurice. The concluding article will appear next week.)

In previous articles I gave the result of my interviews with representative newspaper men in many big cities on the question of short subjects, and told of the happy experience of exhibitors in some parts of the country who were long-headed enough to advertise the short stuff on a par with their features.

But in many other sections I found managers who were not awake to the publicity value of the one and two reeler. In fact the majority of them were still absolutely blind to the possibilities of this important half of their program. They were "hyped" by the names of big stars and the fancy "box office titles" that so many producers give their pictures, irrespective of the actual value of the pictures as entertainment. And it was no surprise to me to hear from most of these men that business was "not so good." They complained about the quality of the five reeler, saying that their patrons often openly expressed disappointment and not one of them realized that he had missed a big trick to cover up this deficiency in his subject angle. What did I tell 'em?

"If you are using a hundred line ad give the 'shorts' almost an even break in the space. Let the feature and its star or stars have sixty lines if you think they are worth it, but never devote less than forty of the hundred lines to the remainder of your program. If you have a Century or a Bull's Eye or a Sennett comedy, it is surely worth twenty per cent of your newspaper space, the news-reel or serial is certainly worth ten per cent and the other ten per cent should be given over to your musical features."

Exhibitors seem to forget that Charlie Chaplin, Reginald Denny, Harold Lloyd, Buster Keaton, Tom Mix, Hoot Gibson and other stars who are making features now and specials began in the one and two reelers. Sixteen pictures ten years had been treated like the short subjects are today. These stars, among the biggest money getters now, would never have reached their present dignity, opulence and eminence. We all remember when a two reel Charlie Chaplin meant capacity business to any theatre that played it. If a Chaplin was on the bill the patrons did not ask, or care, what the five reel picture was. In those days the exhibitor played up the short stuff because he realized its value.

Well, there is just as much value in the same department today. There are embryo stars of the first magnitude in comedies right now. Young men and women who in a few years—maybe sooner—are going to be as well known and draw as much money as any of the above mentioned. Mr. Exhibitor, why not be the one to "discover" them in your town? Tell the people half good they are and you will begin to cash in on them while you still can buy them at a modest figure, before they, too, graduate into high priced features and specials.

Every company has some great young talent that is sure coming to the front. Take Universal, for instance, with its recently developed talent. This firm has several youngsters who are of "special calibre" right now, but who are doing the short stuff and can be had at two reel prices. So have Pathé. So have the F. R. O. and the Fox people. The Educational, too, have many. It won't be long before you will be paying much more for the Puffys, the Wanda Wyleys and the Arthur Lakes. The astute Manager will see what is ahead or he never would have placed them under long term contracts.

"There's a reason" for everything that Mr. Laemmle does — and it is always a business reason. This applies to his revival of the famous Buster Brown and his dog Tige. These comedies are short subjects, worth twenty per cent of any exhibitor's advertising, no matter what his feature may be.

Ten years ago people are going stronger than ever with their Hal Roach stuff, their Mack Sennett product; their "Stereoscopics," their news-reel, the Grantland Rice "Sportlights" and serials. This applies to the Educational and Fox, too.

Why hide such entertainment? Why not advertise it when you are playing it? It ought to be of significance that the producers of short subjects heavily advertise their product in order to let it to exhibitors. Should it not follow that exhibitors who buy it as a result of such advertising would see the wisdom of advertising it to sell to their customers? Any other course seems the height of business folly.

Did you ever notice the way the Universal and Pathé and Educational and Fox advertise their short subjects? Examine their displays in the trade journals and see the proportion of space they devote to this part of their output—just about the same proportion that the exhibitor should give it in his advertising after he buys it. It is no secret that a very big part of the huge 255 per cent dividend declared by Fox was due to the drive on short subjects.

The serial comes under this head also, its chapter forming short subjects on a program. Have you noticed the nation-wide tie-ups that the Universal has made with the leading dailies in the United States and Canada on its serials, the biggest things of its kind ever pulled off in motion picture history? The greatest papers in 44 cities— the Times in Buffalo, the Press in Pittsburgh, the Star in Indianapolis, the News in Dallas, the Herald in San Francisco, the News in Los Angeles, for instance—are printing stories of these serials, each carrying ten thousand lines of advertising and giving fifty columns of publicity. Why?

The publishers of these papers know the value of thrilling western stories and adventurous mystery tales. Their readers, being red-blooded and romance loving, fairly eat up such stuff! They want it! Therefore, the newspapers give it to them and advertise the fact that they are going to do so. Result? A big boom in circulation.

What is the lesson in this to the exhibitor? When he plays this kind of a picture, he, too, should advertise it heavily, and give his patrons, his patronage. If the printing of a serial will jump the circulation of a newspaper 50,000 copies, advertising it by a theatre certainly will increase the theatre's business proportionately.

Play up the Short Stuff!

There's Millions in It!

Langdon Comedy for Pathé
Completed by Sennett

"Lucky Stars," Harry Langdon's first two-reel comedy since finishing his feature-length production for Sennett, and "A Sweet Pickle," in which Alice Day will be featured, have been completed at the Sennett studios and will be early releases on the Pathé program.

In "Lucky Stars" Langdon is supported by Vernon Dent and Natalie Kingston. It was directed by Harry Edwards.

The Alice Day vehicle will present Ernest Wood, Alma Bennett, Jack Richardson and Barney Hallum in principal roles. Art Rosson directed the picture.

The Sennett Studios have installed a research department consisting of 3800 volumes, an innovation for a comedy plant.

New "Stereoscopics" Film for Release July 5

"Ouch," the latest contribution to the Ives-Leventhal "Stereoscopics" films which Pathé is presenting, will be released July 5th. It will be the third offering in this group of three-dimensional films, and is said to be even more thrilling than the startling effects which attracted attention to "Zowie!" and "Luna-Cy!"

One incident which is to be especially thrilling shows a pirate who glances at the spectator and slowly takes out a pistol, reaches out his hand until the firearm appears to touch the very faces of the witnesses and fires.

Fox Selects Marion Harlan
Will Have Leading Role in O. Henry Series. With Daniel Keefe Directing

FOX FILM CORPORATION has selected Marion Harlan, daughter of Dr. Robert P. Harlan of Swamps, Mass., to play the leading role in each of the series of eight two-reel pictures to be made by that company from the O. Henry stories. Miss Harlan was chosen after screen tests for the role had been made of over 1,000 girls.

With the announcement of selection of Miss Harlan, also comes the announcement that Daniel Keefe will direct the series. For the past five years Keefe has been assistant director on various films. Miss Harlan should be well qualified for the leading role. She started her stage career when she was a baby and for a number of years played juvenile roles. Later for three years she was a feature dancer in the big ensembles with the Metropolitan Opera Company. For some time past she has been essaying flapper roles in the screen. She enacted roles of this type in the two re- cent Fox releases, "Wings of Youth" and "The Kiss Barrier. She has just completed the role of "Shoes, the first episode in the O. Henry series, in the near future.

Spitzer-Jones Feature for Pathe Release

SPITZER-JONES Productions have contracted to release their feature length comedy-drama titled "Heir- L'ons," through Pathe. It is now being produced at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood with a cast made up of Wallace MacDonald, Stuart Holmes, Snitz Edwards, Frank Campeau, Martha Mattox, Emily Gerdes, Edith Roberts, Cecile Evans, Sam De Grasse, Ralph Lewis and Max Asher.

Nat H. Spitzer and Grover Jones of the producing firm have long been identified with the picture industry. Jones has won recognition as a scenarist and direc- tor. He is handling the megaphone on the present production. With the excep- tion of a few years he has spent with other interests, Spitzer has been in the indus- try in various capacities since its earliest days.
“The White Wing’s Bride”
Pathé—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

Harry Langdon’s rise to fame throws a new light on an old picture—"vamp."—in the sense that it was made before Langdon’s rise to fame and started to display the extraordinary abilities which have made him one of the most talked of comedians acting before the camera today. The "new light" is something corresponding to an interest and absorption in the work of the featured player which has not been seen before. The distinctive manners which are his own were part of his equipment when he essayed the inconsequential role of the white wing who suddenly is projected into a plot concerning the theft of a valuable jewel. His make-up, too, is much the same, the main features being over-sized coats and undersized hats.

"The White Wing’s Bride" will not bring the laughter which is now expected of Harry Langdon comedies. It is a conventional gag stick, including almost a plot merely for the purpose of supplying here and there an excuse for action, action and more action. There is the ever-present "chase" and it does not seem different from many others which have been done time out of mind in the two-reelers. The story is set up by a pair of fearsome-looking Orientals, who are in pursuit of the jewel which has been stolen from the idol. The jewel has been purchased by the father of the heroine, who is courting, so his interests lie not only in the direction of eluding the Orientals, he must outsmart the police as well, and thus he takes the jewel, if he is to win the proud beauty.

The players who support the star provide all the assistance that is possible under the circumstances.

The Cast
The White Wing.............Harry Langdon
The Story—A poor but honest boy is in love with the daughter of a rich banker. He works faithfully at his street sweeper, and when a strange twist of circumstance drops him into the very midst of a deep-dyed plot. Aboard an ocean liner two crafty Orientals seek to recover a valuable jewel stolen originally from an idol in their country. It is possessed and prized by the rich banker and by a mistake comes into the hands of the hero, who is clained by the Orientals. He escapes them, but again meets his pursuers at a masked ball, where they try to cast suspicion upon the hero for the theft of the jewel. But he triumphs, mostly by running away from danger, and wins the girl as a reward for returning the jewel to her father.

Production Highlights—The presence of Harry Langdon in the cast and the staging given the film.

Summary—Compared with later works featuring Harry Langdon, this is disappointing, though the star displays many of the characteristics which have won him wide popularity as a screen comedian. The picture lacks more in gag material than in quality of performance and production. It has some amusing moments, and may rise along to fair success on the reputation and appeal of the star.

"Sherlock Sleuth”
Pathé—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

Arthur S. Strom’s second two-reeler from the Roach studios. It is a comedy specializing in horse-play and conceits, as the doings in a hotel where a super-burglar plies his trade while the elaborate sleuthing of a house detective who is "so good that he wears two badges." The picture is amusing only in spots. It depends too much upon the easy formulas of presenting only movement based on familiar gags. There is one fresh gag in the plot. This owns to the plot in which Miss Goulding, with the girl dressed in hoop-skirts acting as a parachute to retard the descent. That seems rather funny, and much cleverer than anything else to be discovered in this.

Stone, whose career in the pictures has not met with the success which his stage work promised, and yet, it is evident that he has done in his previous comedies. He effects a make-up and a pose which is perhaps not the most original. The alabaster face and the jerky movements do not fare so well in pictures as they do on the comedy stage, and perhaps the fact that Stone has merely carried his stage antics from the stage to pictures instead of adapting them to the new medium has something to do with the unfavorable reception which greeted his screen efforts.

The star is supported by some of the most able secondaries in the Roach stock company. Martha Sleeper, for instance, is prominent as a hella-girl who is in love with the house detective. Miss Sleeper is a comedian who is bound to be pleasing, and the opportunities are scant as they are in this offering.
"Just in Time"

Universal-Century—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

WANDA WILEY has a dandy story in this two-reel Century in which humor, action and thrills are about equally divided and serve to make a splendid vehicle for this clever comedienne. Strange as it may seem it is a good newspaper story, which is rare in any type of picture.

The plot: Wanda is a feature writer on the Daily Milk and is doing a series of feature stories on a mysterious band that has haunted the city for many years. When Wanda unwittingly reveals the headquarters of the gang, she is rescued by the editor's son and delivers her capers to the editorial rooms.

There is much about this picture to recommend it. There are incidents about it akin to Harold Lloyd's "Safety Last," for the heroine does not hesitate to climb water pipes on high buildings or to negotiate cornicles on straight walls. She climbs to some dizzy heights which she should set alight in a gape. Drain pipes collapse with her and she hangs suspended until one wonders how she is ever going to get safely through with it all.

By the simple process of waylaying a girl accomplice of the mystic band, changing clothes with her and drowning her which reveals the headquarters she gains access to the abductors' den and securing a key releases the youth held for ransom. The comedy is strong enough into the story by the manner in which Wanda stands off her many foes. She runs them dizzy through the deadly traps set for her by the editor while the editor serves them with fees for police aid. The battle continues at length in the den until Wanda makes her getaway with the papers and leads the men and women of the band to a merry chase which takes them through the side window of the newspaper shop just as the police arrive.

"The Knockout Man"

Universal-Mustang—Two Reels

FRED WILLIAMS wrote a fair story in this Western. Unlike most of them the incidents are grossly exaggerated and made fairly impossible. It is based on the doctrine of "Love Thy Enemy," and as a consequence Jack Perrin, who plays the role of the hero gets himself boxed in. In fact he is forced from pillow to post to such an extent as to make him appear ridiculous.

Louise Lorraine and Perrin are the featured players, and the fact that Perrin, a reformed gambler falls in love with her is responsible for most of his difficulties. Miss Lorraine is the daughter of a Minister who comes to the town called up by the minister to do so. Then he reveals his old fighting proclivities and wins his way back into the good graces of the girl he loves.

There is some fairly good comedy in the picture and some rather lively fights with all of the western atmosphere that characterizes these two reel westerns. Miss Lorraine makes an attractive heroine, but unfortunately Perrin is seen at his best only in spots. It's rather a tough and impossible role for a hero to have to assume.

The Cast

Dick Conlon............ Jack Perrin
R "B" Barrett............ Jim Corey
Parson Rhodes......... Charles Herzinger
Molly................... Louise Lorraine
The Rival................. Edward Laemmle
Harry Oswald, cameraman
Story by Fred V. Williams.

"Waiting"

Educational-Hamilton—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THEY have mixed up another concoction of cream puff, custard pie, slapstick and hokum for Lloyd Hamilton. He assumes the role, first of dishwasher in a restaurant and then as waiter. The comedian is world famous with a new story line from this, which abounds in everything that has been seen in these comedies in the past.

The picture is not without its attractiveness, and those who like the slapstick comedies will be highly delighted. It will be productive of laughs, as these old well known stunts always are. There is the laugh that follows the waiter who falls down with the tray full of dishes, which are spilled on the head of his rival, who is entertaining the "girl" in the restaurant. There is the dummy that explodes in the face of the comedian.

And there are a few stunts that are not so hackneyed. For instance Lloyd drives his flower through the side door of an electric train, calmly pays fare for both the auto and himself and then as calmly disembarks through the other side door at the height of a very treble.

There is an extremely ludicrous scene in which the comedian tackles his dishwashing job. There is an absurdity that a dishwasher the dishes have been piled to the points that Lloyd starts taking them one at a time from the top, then reverses the order and decides to take them from the bottom of the pile. The resultant clash scatters crockery over all parts of the washroom.

When Lloyd is promoted to waiter the action gets a little lighter. He fairly reels with Welsh rarebit and other edibles that apparently are prepared for anything but eating, and is quite a treasure. As the end of the picture entangles a good part of the diners, and those who escape this mess are victims of other Hamilton indiscretions as a waiter, with the rival the only victim.

The Cast

The Waiter................. Lloyd Hamilton
The Girl................... Ruth Hunt
The Rival.................. Glen Lavender
The Proprietor............. William Beauchamp
The Comic................. Fred Friis

The Story—Lloyd, broke and out of a job gets employment as a dishwasher and is promoted to waiter in a fashionable restaurant when a rival restaurant closes. The rival, Lloyd, hallucinated and embarrassed stills much of the edibles on the rival and eventually walks off with girl.

Classification—A slapstick comedy of the custard pie variety replete with hokum, the majority of which is old, but some new.

Summary—Almost entirely lacking in story, this one will be good for many laughs because of its fast action and the number of ludicrous stunts, with which it abounds. The comedian is seen to the usual good advantage and will add to the prestige with the followers of the short comedies.

"Permit Me"

( Educational—One Reel)

THIS is typical of the single reels in which Cliff Beaudine is featured. It is fairly fast comedy which moves along at a good clip without too much time being spent on the usual details. There are a few humorous episodes, all of which go to make for laughs.

Cliff decides the best thing for his bride to do is to get back to his work in order that his taxi bills may be paid. Eventually both wind up at the same party, where Cliff is in arrears for a taxi bill. The driver descends upon the party with his gang and there is a general melee which results in the wrecking of the ball room and most of the occupants thereof.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Eve's Lover—A rather tiresome production with Irene Rich seeking to impersonate a successful business woman by the wearing of a camp girl outfit. Business was slightly below average. (Middle West.)

This Woman—A fair production that did fairly well. (Middle West.)

On Thin Ice—Cashed in on some favorable publicity. An average picture of its type. (Middle West.)

Kiss Me Again—Didn't do so well the first part of the week but picked up the last half. (South.)

The title helped this one play to good crowds for a week. (Middle West.)

FOX

Everyman's Wife—More triangle stuff which brought in fair returns. Fairly well acted and mounted. (East.)

PROD. DIST. CORP.

Her Market Value—Same old story but dressy settings put it over. (South.)

Stop Flirting—High class comedy. Real entertainment. (Middle West.)

PRINCIPAL PICT.

Listen Lester—A fairly entertaining comedy that pleased the majority. (South.)

STATE RIGHTS

A Fight for Honor—Fairly interesting picture. Fair business. (West.)

Unmarried Women—This one got a poor reception. Attendance fell off during last half of the week. (West.)

PARAMOUNT

The Night Club—Raymond Griffith steals this one. He is great. They laughed through it. (West.)

The Goose Hangs High—Those that saw it liked it but the title is poor. Drew fairly good houses. (West.)

The Little French Girl—Very good for the entire week. They talked about it. (South.)

Especially adapted from the Sedgefield novel, Miss Joyce almost too delightful to impersonate the immoral French mother. All existing house records were broken by several thousands of dollars, due almost entirely to presence of Gilda Gray on stage. (Middle West.)

The Crowded Hour—Bebe Daniels very good in this picture. She draws well here anyway. (West.)

Old Home Week—Generally conceded to be one of Tom Meighan's best vehicles. Widely liked with result that business was excellent throughout week. (Middle West.)

Arctic Peoples—Fits in well with hot weather programs. Not too heavy and patrons liked it. (Middle West.)

LOOK-A-LIKE—This is pretty comic, with Adolphe Menjou carrying the play. Business was good. (Middle West.)

Poor picture, public did not like it. (South.)

Pleased generally. Well balanced and excellently produced. (Middle West.)

METRO-GOLDWYN

The Sporting Venus—Not so good. A disappointment. (Middle West.)

The Denial—Heavy stuff for summer consumption but managed to pull through. (West.)

Heavy stuff that just got by with our patrons. (South.)

The Monster—An excellent burlesque on the melodramatic stuff. Lon Chaney does good bit as does the comedian. (Middle West.)

ASSOC. EXHIB.

The Adventurous Sex—A very funny picture that seemed to hit the popular fancy. Fine business. (West.)

Is Love Everything—This one was very nicely received. Good reports from the box office. (South.)

Rex—King of Wild Horses—Unusual production that proved a novel offering. Good business. (West.)
The Awful Truth
(Peninsula-Producers Dist. Corp.—5917 Feet)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a unstinting effort, so frail of plot and gentle of action that it has a hard time sustaining itself through its footage. It is one of those pictures which leaves no definite impression. You either take it or you don't. On the stage it might have sparked with dialogue, but transferred to the screen it is too transparent to hold up. Perhaps had it been treated in the picture of a New England village, with a blizzard or a snowbank to give it some charm. As it is the footage is too lengthy to offer such a slight marital misunderstanding—and a great volume of titles are used to cover the ground.

The idea centers around a jealous husband who, lacking a sense of humor, mistrusts his wife. Her girl friend says a husband must register jealousy or he would cease to love his wife. These characters are supplemented by a pair of persistent lovers who would break up the romance if possible. That's the plot. The summary is written a few lines of verse—some of which become silly in the way the characters play tag or the other popular garden pastime—you chase me and I'll chase you.

The plot doesn't seem to serve any purpose. The husband comes home unexpectedly from a western trip and catches his wife with an elderly suitor. They both safely get away without being shot or turned into a snowbank. These scenes also give the players a chance to sport winter togs. Otherwise their acting opportunities are nil.

THEME. Romance of marital misunderstanding founded upon a jealous husband refusing to trust his wife. A reconciliation follows when his suspicions prove of no consequence.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The lighting and photography. The snow scenes. Moment when husband surprises his wife with rival. The naturalness with which feminine players act.

DIRECTION. Has frail subject and is unable to make anything substantial from it. Relies upon many titles to piece episodes together. Relies upon many titles to piece episodes together. Relieves of some of its emotional worth by the hero's thrusting into a snowbank. These scenes also give the players a chance to sport winter togs. Otherwise their acting opportunities are nil.

Kivalina of the Ice Lands
(Rossman-B. C. R. Productions—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

Well here is something different—something unusual. It may not be another "Nanook," but there is no denying that it offers fine entertainment summed up in terms of educational and pictorial values. Earl Rossman, who went up to the northernmost tip of the continent to photograph the privations, hardships and struggles of the Eskimos eking out an existence against a bleak background, has come back after two years in the Arctic belt with a true and vivid picture of Eskimo life as it exists today. It comprises some awe-inspiring shots—the best ones featuring the Aurora Borealis in natural colors—and carries enough variety to offset any suggestion of tedium.

The leaden skies match the white spaces of the frozen sea too often—yet some of these scenes contain indescribable charm and wonder. It is the land of Santa Claus and the land of Amundsen, too. The despatches of the famous explorer, lately returned from the Arctic, should stimulate interest in the picture. In our snug seat at the Strand we grasped the will of self-preservation of the Eskimos—who have to struggle against terrific perils to exist.

The action shifts constantly. Here is a shot of hundreds of reindeer being driven by the Eskimos who change their environment according to the seasons; there is a shot of the hunters caught on a mighty ice floe. There are scenes of seal hunting and the spearing of walrus—scenes of a deer being killed before your eyes and an igloo being constructed with quickness and despatch. These people of the frozen wastes make no wasteful gestures. The relentless sea, the rigors of the North have made them a primitive, elemental race who somehow manage to live by practising economy. There isn't any humor—such as "Nanook" carried, nor are there such dominant personalities present in this picture. But the natives are natural and the lives they lead are rugged and picturesque.

THEME. Heart interest drama revolving around the life of the Eskimos—who have to endure terrific hardships and privations. A mighty hunter wins his sweetheart against tremendous obstacles.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The picturesque scenery. The educational values. The natural color shots of the Northern Lights. The incident in the everyday life of the Eskimos. The reindeer race. The dance.

DIRECTION. Mostly a series of exteriors pieced together showing habits and customs of the Eskimos—the whole comprising a heart interest story. Gets remarkable scenic effects.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put up as a hot weather picture. Bill as something different. Tell that it affords a glimpse of life in the northernmost reaches of the continent. Tie up with the Amundsen story.

DRAWING POWER. Has plenty of unusual features to please anyone tired of the stereotyped picture. Good for any house, first runs or otherwise.

SUMMARY. Really something unusual—showing the life of the Eskimos—who endure terrific hardships to exist. Scenes picturesque and awe-inspiring—the whole comprising a heart interest story of Eskimo love and courage. Well titled and photographed.

THE CAST
Kivalina....Agnes Ayres
Aguavuk....The Hero, Kivalina's Sweetheart
Nashukik....The Witch Doctor
Tokatoo....Kivalina's Brother
Dubray....Stranger, The Master Hunter

Photographed and produced by Earl Rossman. Titles by Katherine Hilliker.

SYNOPSIS. Kivalina is betrothed to Aguavuk, a mighty hunter. Before he can claim her as his wife he must pay his father's debts. It is forced to bring in fifty seals and a silver fox. Goes through terrific hardships to win the girl, but accomplishes his tasks with fine courage. Side-lights of romance show Eskimos in their never-ending search of food.
Faint Perfume
(Schulberg—6228 Feet)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT isn’t the plot so much as it is the character drawings that provide the points of interest of this picture, an adaptation of a story by Zona Gale. The theme seems to be a side issue in planting a background for it. While it tells of a divorced couple who are constantly quarreling over the custody of the child and introduces a love-sick heroine who has worshipped the husband ever since he married her cousin, this angle of the story never seems to get anywhere. It is a rather dull development.

The director has done the only thing possible. He has emphasized the vulgar qualities of the heroine’s small town relatives—people given to ungodly tempers and noisy bickerings. The name of the family is Crumb—and each member is catalogued accordingly. Grandpa Crumb is the wiliest, another the laughing kynca—so on for all six members of the household. It is planted that the environment of this family is so sordid that the oldest girl, who had married—refused to have anything to do with them. However, she returns home with the trouping of a new and a lover. And the relatives proceed to register all their vulgar traits.

A lot of quaint humor is released in the incident pertaining to this happy? family life—and the manner in which the characters are sketched it would seem as if the players enjoyed the work. It is mostly slapstick unfolded in these episodes. Even Dan Mason is in the picture as an aged messenger boy—looking for all the world like the compagnon to the Toonerville trolley. Comedy wisecracks are used for the subtitles in several instances.

It is when the wife comes on the scene with her mischievous youngster and the philanderer that we catch some idea of what is all about. The husband naturally follows and wins the custody of the child after a few scenes of bickering with his wife. And he takes the heroine whose secret romance is finally crowned with happiness. There is suspense when the child nearly loses his life on several occasions. But the youngster’s wisecracks in escaping death are too sophisticated even for a precocious kid. The acting is fairly competent. It’s a fairly true story, but more realistic in its incident than in its animalism, and an amusing film.

THEME. Domestic drama revolving around divorced couple fighting for custody of the child with happiness coming to broken-hearted girl when husband gives her his love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The character sketches of the Crumb family. The suspense in escapades of youngster. Scene when Crumbs surprise the lovers. The moment when husband wins custody of child.

DIRECTION. Points it for atmosphere and to show contrasts of quarrelsome characters, neglecting to develop the dramatic possibilities of plot. Shows good appreciation of family bickerings. Gives it enough color.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up author whose story is most entertaining. "Miss Lulu Bett" in its revelation of family life. Play up cast.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses. Suitable for neighborhood, community and small town houses.

SUMMARY. A combination of ingredients shaken up to point a lot of truth—but this element is not shown any too well. Shows family bickerings and colorful sketches, but plot evaporates to emphasize the hokum incident.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. Cultured cousin is compelled to accept charity from her country cousins—a family given to constant bickering and jangling. She has carried a flower of the bride’s bouquet for several years—the oldest girl of the family having married the man she loved. However a divorce has followed this marriage—and the husband comes back into the life of the heroine. They find happiness in their romance and the husband wins custody of his child.

Passionate Youth
(Goldstone-Truart—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is another flapper picture which tells a preposterous story—one in which never gets down to any real human values. It guides its characters through scenes which have been constructed more for the sake of dramatic punctures than to point any truths. It is obviously plotted, so much so, that you can spot the happy ending from the moment that the wife upon leaving her husband, tells him that a separation is best as they can remarry at a later time.

One sees here the flapper daughter as the pivotal figure of the plot. Her father had given up the practice of law to teach the ways of salvation as a clergyman. The mother is a graduate of a law school and the early scenes show her harasseing the husband because he cannot provide a decent living for his family. Her argument is that the girl must be given the benefit of a fat income so that she may be educated and clothed to fit her environment. So the parents decide to separate—and during the separation the husband drops, more or less, out of the story.

A year has gone and this woman maintains a sumptuously appointed home. She loses sympathy for the manner in which she conducts herself with her partner. But he is more interested in the flapper daughter and the result brings the girl to the court for trial as his assassin. The mother having been elected district attorney refuses to prosecute, but an assistant carries on the duty of the office. The father offers himself as a defense attorney and by introducing an eye-witness of the crime brings enough evidence to free her. The reconciliation follows.

The picture is handsomely mounted and offers some interesting scenes. Where it fails is in the manner the central characters conduct themselves. The moral of the piece isn’t sound because of the mother’s conduct. It’s a haphazard plot which seldom hits the bull’s-eye of sound, logical treatment. Frank Mayo is the struggling minister, but his chances are few to extract anything new. Beverly Bayne makes the wife a creature of depressed moods. Pauline Garon is more in character as the flapper, but the best work is done by Carmelita Geraghty as the gold-digging flirt who saves the daughter.

THEME. Domestic drama of parents who separate in order that daughter may be benefited. Latter leads hectic career as flapper, but in saving her from conviction parents are reconciled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The jazz parties. The photography. The scene when villain is killed. The reconciliation. The acting by Frank Mayo.

DIRECTION. Doesn’t point any truths here and allows several scenes to become conventional. Obvious plotting all the way. As far as mechanics are concerned he has treated it well.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Use the title for a teaser campaign. Tell of the search for thrills by the youth of the day. Play up return of Beverly Bayne.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for average houses, small towns and neighborhoods. Title and cast should have drawing power in certain localities.

SUMMARY. Not much logic in this story—which caters to the thrills sought after by a flapper. Plot not well constructed in that characters are moved about without much motivation. Separation of parents and reconciliation worked out too abruptly. Fairly well acted.

SYNOPSIS. Struggling minister accepts wife’s offer that they should separate for the sake of their daughter—the wife taking up practise of law in which she becomes successful. Is elected district attorney and neglects the girl—with result that latter is tried for murder. She is saved from conviction. Parents are reconciled.
How Baxter Butted In (Warner Bros.—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

It's a smart little picture which graces the silversheet here. Adapted by Owen Davis from Harold Titus' novel, "Stuff of Heroes," it affords an amusing hour in the way it has been seasoned with bright incident, comedy and pathos. The central idea built around a hero-worshiping clerk in the "want ad" department of a newspaper who imagines himself executing all sorts of adventures gives Matt Moore fine opportunity to display his talent as a light comedian. No actor graceful the screen could have carried out the part any better. It is a "fat" role—one which might have been written for the movies with Moore in mind. And he is thoroughly in character. It is similar to the other character sketches which have brought the actor into the spotlight of popularity.

As the dreamy, wishful hero he longs to get on in the world and make a "go" out of it. So while working as a wage slave he dreams and the director using a variety of fade-ins and fade-outs capitalizes the illusions of the youth. While looking at a plate of soup the incident fades in on a shot of Baxter on a raft saving the heroine while shoving the villain overboard. The "boys in blue" steam up in time to rescue the sweethearts. Of such stuff is this picture made. While he is holding up his job his imagination takes him through one exciting adventure after another. The incident, the humor—and the ever-present pathos are nicely balanced by the director who never gets out of key with his subject matter. A few scenes he has gaggled with the aid of the title writer, but the piece never beclouds the character. The hero is easily misunderstood and considered a perfect butt by most everyone except the girl. But in the end he is rewarded by the benevolent managing editor. He becomes a real hero when he rushes from a banquet to his home (which is afar) and rescues his sister-in-law's children and a litter of pups. The action never loses its spontaneity and the central figures never lose sympathy. When it is finished you will admit it is a bright little number. It is well acted and mounted in good style.

THEME. Light comedy of wage slave who dreams of doing heroic things. Misunderstood by everyone he makes good and proves himself a real hero. Is rewarded with love and advancement.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The variety of fade-ins and fade-outs. The humor in the scenes as hero imagines himself a hero. The human note. The pathos. The acting by Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore. The titles. The climax.

DIRECTION. Has shown deft treatment in taking slight story and sustaining it with neatly balanced scenes of pathos and humor. Shows some clever mechanical tricks and gets good results all the way.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title makes good material for teasing picture through program readers and newspaper paragraphs. Play up Matt Moore as acting an ideal role. Play up theme—how of dreams carry on to accomplish big things, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Good enough for first runs. Suitable for any type of house as plot and characters are easily understood.

SUMMARY. A very enjoyable light comedy, made so by its well balanced humor and pathos. Is pointed with human touches which have been well thought out by director and players. Titles are bright and mounting is good. Has a good idea which has been finely treated.

THE CAST

By Harold Titus. Adapted by Owen Davis. Directed by William Beaudine.

KNOWNSAYS. Clerk in "want ad" department of newspaper dreams of performing great heroes. He is much misunderstood—and because of his quixot personality is made something of a "goat." However, he has a chance to be a real hero. Is rewarded by his boss and girl declares her faith in him.

American Pluck
(Challwick—Five Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

There is no doubt about this being one of those "up and going" action pictures. There isn't a single pause from the moment that George Walsh comes on the scene as the reckless son of an indulgent parent and proceeds to show a lot of high-pressure dynamics. The role is a good one for the athletic stunt man. Walsh since he must go through plenty of adventurous excitement before he can make good with his dad. The plot isn't so new. It's that old favorite of the young scamp who is cast off by an irate father until he makes good. If the youth can return inside of a year with $5,000 he has earned he will be rewarded with a couple of extra ciphers added to the amount. There's the idea. Make the most of it.

Walsh is introduced as a college boy who gets into one tight scrape after another. When he has rescued a dazzling beauty from a cabaret which has been raided, the authorities expel him. He speeds like an Oldfield to reach his dad's western ranch—and certainly steps on it when making his departure. There are some exciting shots here as Walsh skids around corners on two wheels.

It is pure fiction all the way and naturally is filled with hokum. But because of its snappy incident and action—to say nothing of its speed and suspense—can be no doubt about its holding the interest. The youth has two objectives—one is to earn the $5,000—the other is to renew acquaintance with the girl. So hopping a side-door Pullman he bobs up in Galveston where he doubles for some local "pug" and wins the $5,000. He puts his rival to sleep with a crushing haymaker and nearly takes the count himself when he spies the heroine among the spectators.

To keep the plot going the sponsors introduced the unconscious "pug" as dying from the blow, which compels the hero to make his escape with the aid of the heroine. Her identity is established. She is the princess of a southern kingdom and the next seen of the young man is saving her from various intrigues. Romantic follows and so does the reconciliation with the father. The action covers a lot of ground, is well photographed and should please patrons not identified with the hard-boiled minority.

THEME. Romantic melodrama of youth who must earn stipulated sum of money in a year in order to be reconciled to his father. Makes good, wins a princess for a wife—and adds to his bank account.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The high-pressure incident, disclosing a lot of fast action with Walsh stepping on the gas, employing his fists and executing various stunts. The prize-fight. The motor car sequence. The cabaret scene. The atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Certainly keeps it keyed up at high pitch—never allowing action to lose momentum. Covers up gaps in plot with speed—and suspense in the action. Mounts it in pleasing style.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell about Walsh as one of the foremost stunt actors. Bill as fast-moving adventure story of ingenious American youth who always beats his opponents. Play up the pep and dash of action.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses. Suitable for downtown trade and small towns.

SUMMARY. A high-speed adventure story, chock-full of lively incident and action. Unreal of course but you won't mind that in view of the high jinks put over. Shows plenty of heroic stuff. Titles are bright and pithy—production is well mounted—and the players get everything out of it.

THE CAST
Blaze Derringer ..................... George Walsh
Princess Alice ..................... Wanda Hawley
Count Birkhart ..................... Sidney DeGray
Count Leaky ......................... Frank Leigh
Jefferson Lee ...................... Tom Wilson
Lord Raleigh ....................... Leo White
Aunt Mason ......................... Mary Mason

SYNOPSIS. College youth is expelled from college for cutting up high jinks. Rescues beautiful girl from cabaret and falls in love with her. His father casts him out advising him not to return inside of a year unless he has earned $5,000. He makes good, meets the girl again—who proves to be a princess, saves her from various intrigues, and is reconciled by his father who rewards him.
The Love Gamble

(Banner—Five Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

Here is a story from the novel, "Peggy of Beacon Hill," well adapted to the screen by Harry D. Hoyt with a cast that could hardly have been improved upon. In the main many incidents of the story have been seen on the screen before, but in addition there are a number of new angles that brighten it up considerably and make of it a picture that can be well recommended. There is a number of unique angles and twists to that make for suspense and hold the interest throughout.

Lillian Rich has the role of the Beacon Hill girl, who at the height of her depression having to live with a domineering father, who does not understand her, inherits a thousand dollars, which she invests with success in a Boston Bohemian ten shop. There she falls in love with a visitor who keeps from her the fact that he is already married.

Their love develops and the girl is persuaded to go with him to his cabin in the mountains, where he reveals to her the fact that he is bound to an unfaithful wife. She spurns his further attentions and unknown to him makes her escape through a window at the height of a storm.

The same night his wife is found murdered in a hotel where she has registered for herself an other husband. He is accused of the crime and the trial is held, unknown to the girl, who is ill through exposure in the storm and cared for in a cabin in the woods by a former sweetheart of his mother. She learns of the trial only as the evidence is being heard at the courtroom only in time to prove a complete alibi for him.

There are some highly interesting scenes as the plot develops, with every role played to the best possible advantage. Robert Frazer plays opposite Miss Rich as the young husband who falls in love with her. It is a role that might easily be overplayed and the hero made to appear somewhat ridiculous in less capable hands. Brooks Benedict also does some clever work as the disappointed lover of Peggy.

Theme. Romantic melodrama of girl who sacrifices her own good name to save the man she loves from being found guilty of the crime of murder.

Production Highlights. The scenes about the tea shop in Boston's Bohemian district. The sequence in which Frazer reveals to Miss Rich the fact that he is already a married man. The storm in which Miss Rich emerges into the night.

Direction. The story was exceptionally well directed. At no time does the plot slacken and the most is had out of every sequence.

Exploitation Angles. The exceptionally well balanced cast and the extremely fast moving story. The Bohemian atmosphere of the tea room. A teaser campaign as to what any person would do under the same conditions Miss Rich finds herself.

Drawing Power. Should please patrons in all types of houses. The story is one that will always have an appeal to all.

Summary. An exceptionally good story with an equally good cast, well directed and acted in a manner that could hardly be improved upon. It has an abundance of action, humor and suspense.

Synopsis—Poor girl inheriting $1,000 invests it in a tea shop, where she falls in love with unhappily married man. He reveals to her the fact he is married and she spurns him, later to find he is accused of murdering his wife. She sacrifices her own name as the trial reaches a climax and proves a complete alibi for him.

Fighting Courage

(Davis Dist. Div.—Five Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

This Western is one of the series of eight Maynard productions starring Ken Maynard. If the others of the eight are of the same standard it should be a very interesting series. Maynard is seen to splendid advantage in this one, which has much fast action, good suspense, several thrills and enough of the comedy element to carry it along nicely.

Maynard could just about carry the picture himself, but he is hampered by a good supporting cast, each member of which does his part well. In addition he has a story that is well above the average for these westerns, and he has a horse, Tarzan, that serves him well through many tough situations.

Maynard is the son of a wealthy easterner and incurs the displeasure of his father by too frequent hilarious escapades. The result is that father ships him off to the west, where to prove his worth by locating a lost mine whose whereabouts have been unsuccessfully sought for many years.

Arrived near his destination Maynard makes a swap with a stranger for the latters horse. It develops that this stranger is a much sought bandit, closely resembling Maynard in appearance. As he nears the town in which he is to make his headquarters he is discovered by a sheriff's posse and the bandit decides to make his escape. He is subjected to all sorts of thrilling episodes thereafter and is made to do some hazardous riding and other stunts to keep from being taken as the bandit. Even the father of the girl he loves recognizes him as the bandit and forbids the daughter having any communication with him.

Eventually Maynard succeeds in rounding up the real bandit and proving his entire innocence much to the satisfaction of all concerned. The map to the lost mine is also discovered in the bandit's clothes by the hero, so he succeeds in his mission.

Theme. Western melodrama in which the son of a wealthy easterner is ordered by his father to find a long lost mine, and thereby prove his worth. He is mistaken for a bandit, forced through many hardships, but eventually wins the girl he loves and succeeds in locating the mine.

Production Highlights. The thrilling riding of Maynard and the exploits of his wonderfully trained horse, Tarzan. The wild chase of the pursuing posse. The holdups and the appearance of the Hollywood Beauty Sextette.

Direction. Clifford S. Elfullt has done a good piece of directing and gets full value of a story that is somewhat out of the ordinary.

Exploitation Angles. The best bet in the exploitation line is the star and his horse, Tarzan. The many thrills provided in the picture. The Hollywood Beauty Sextette. The splendid all-around work of the competent cast.

Drawing Power. This should prove an exceptional attraction in any city where the picture theatre goers are partial to the western. There is enough action to keep them aroused from start to finish.

Summary. A fast moving western very well acted, with thrills from start to finish and a touch of romance that makes for an extremely good story, well directed.

Synopsis. Young easterner is sent west by his father to discover a lost mine. He is mistaken for a bandit, hounded by a sheriff's posse, but eventually turns up the real culprit, discovers the mine and wins the girl he loves.
A NOTHER theatre has decided to shorten its week during the summer season the Greater Movie Season in the Albany Zone, met with the exhibitors of other theatres last Wednesday, to find about everything attending to the business. There was nothing for Mr. Sonsens to do but to follow suit and make up a party which included Leon Medem, Edward Hochstum and Jack Stuah, all connected with the Pathé exchange, and Walter Schluen, owner of the Albany and Reeney theatres, Mr. Sonesens journeyed out to the big tent where the party drank a gallon or more of pink lemonade, fed the elephants and had the time of their lives.

James Rosse has no intention of shortening his weeks. In fact, according to Mr. Rose, his house will remain open as long as he has a dime, and as Mr. Rose is generally conceded to have several dimes, his theatres will keep right on operating seven days a week.

All exhibitors in the Albany Zone will receive letters this week from the headquarters in this calling attention to the fact that the office is being run for the convenience of the exhibitors, and asks them to hold to the service of the many advantages offered. The Film Board of Trade is planning to hold an outing in the near future, the arrangements being in the hands of J. H. Machtney, local manager for Pathe Players. Tickets will be on sale through the summer. The Board will meet once a month on the Monday nearest to the fifteenth of the month. The Arbitration Board will meet monthly on the Monday nearest to the twenty-second of the month.

Frank Hickey, who served as auditor for Farash Theatres, Inc., has been installed as the new manager of the Strand theatre in Schenectady. W. W. Farley has named Mr. Gildersleeve of Kingston to handle his Community theatre in Catskill. Mr. Farley has decided to run both houses in Catskill this summer, but in Schenectady he will be guided by the weather in regard to closing one of the three theatres there for the summer, as a means of diverting more business to the other two. Mr. Farley will maintain his headquarters in Albany.

Workmen have started redecorating and another improvement the American theatre in Troy, which is now included in the grand group of houses, of which Uptown is managing. No one has yet been selected to handle the American and it is quite possible that on account of its proximity to the Troy theatre that no one will be named manager, but that the house will be looked after by Walter Roberts and Benjamin Stern, with Mr. Hill supervising.

Tony Veiller, manager of the Lincoln theatre in Troy, and who is managing the campaign, the Greater Movie Season in the Albany Zone, met with the exhibitors of other theatres last Wednesday morning, and discussed the proposition, outlining his plans. He held a similar meeting with the Troy exhibitors on Monday afternoon and on Tuesday morning met with the exhibitors in Schenectady. Mr. Veiller plans to send a form letter to the 40 or more exhibitors in the Albany Zone, setting forth what exhibitors are planning to do in the bigger cities and suggesting to exhibitors in the smaller places that they do the same.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan, of Schuylerville, well known exhibitors, a new pitcher for the Baltimore Orioles, enjoying the distinction of having broken into League ball immediately after the war, has developed.

After having been closed for several weeks, the Pember theatre in Granville has reopened with Frank Hickey and New York city as its manager. Considerable money has been spent in recent weeks on the installation of new projection machines and other equipment. The theatre will operate on Wednesdays and Sundays during the summer months.

Hot or cold, it's the old story of Robert Denton, owner of the Capitol theatre in Elizabeth town, for Mr. Denton runs an ice business as well as the theatre, and where the business is not one he gains on the other.

Victor Warren, of Massena, one of the best known exhibitors along the northern border, recently purchased the site of a block that had been destroyed by a recent fire. He plans to erect a block of business buildings in the near future.
THE Paramount Pep Club of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation gave its annual outing Saturday at Indian Point on the Hudson River which was at- tended by over five hundred club members and their families. The features of the outing were the chartering of the Hudson River steam- steamer Chauceney M. Depew, and the athletic games and prize awards following the supper served in the pavilion.

Colesman Bros, of New Jersey, operating the Regent at East Orange and the Scenario at Newark, are constructing two new theatres on Long Island. They are building a $173,000 house at St. Albans which will seat 1,200, and expect to have it ready for business in December. The other theatre is located at Springfield and will seat 800. This house will cost at least $90,000 and will be ready in September. Coleman Bros. were former owners of the Lafayette in New York and the Academy of Music, Newburgh, N.Y.

Ground was recently broken in Trenton for a handsome new 2,000 seat theatre at Olden and Walnut Aves. It will be called the Ten Eyck Gaiety and will be owned solely by George B. Ten Eyck and John V. Boyd. The architects are W. W. Slack and Son. The con- tractor, W. C. Ehret, has guaran- tized to have the building completed and ready for business on Saturday, September the 5th. The Gaiety will be similar in construc- tion to the Ten Eyck Orpheum and will have all the modern im- provements, such as rest rooms, smoking room and reception lobby. There will also be an ade- quate provision made for vaudeville which in conjunction with motion picture pic- tures, will form the entertainment of the house. Every seat will have an electric sign pattered after the one now in front of the Orpheum.

Local entrepreneurs have opened up the Rex theatre at 579 Prospect Ave., Bronx, and has changed the name to the Prospect Palace. Ex- tensive improvements have been made.

Mr. Blake theatre at 838 Blake Ave., Brooklyn, formerly owned by Sam Zahler has been sold to A. Sherman.

Local theatres continue to close for the summer months and to go on a "three-a-week" schedule. The Eden, at 409 5th Ave., Brook- lyn, and the Cadillac, on 2nd St. and Grand, will be closed in September. Also, the Al- lenwarle, owned by A. H. Schwartz, on Lexington St. and the Grand, and St. and the National Winter Garden have also closed for the summer.

The Loew - Metro - Goldwyn Baseball team is going along in great shape. On Saturday they trimmed the strong Universal outfit by the score of 12 to 6, the game being played at the Catholic Protectory Oval in the Bronx. Previously the Loew- Metro-Goldwyn team took the decision from Pathe and Warner Brothers. Willie Borack pitched all three games and did much to bring victory to his team. Arthur Loew has proved the "Babe Ruth" of the Metro-Goldwyn team and on Saturday's game poked a smashing two-bagger to deep right that scored two runs. He whaled a homer against Pathé. On Saturday, July 4, at the same ground, the Loew-Metro- Goldwyn team hooks up with the Famous Players circuit. A great battle is anticipated.

Brooklyn is to have a new 2,500 seat theatre and roof garden to be located at Knickerbocker Ave. and Star St. The Star-Kine Reality Corp. is behind the project and Louis Geller and Arthur Hirsch, local exhibitors are also interested. Stores and offices will be included in the building. Berk and Moross were the brokers in the deal.

It is reported that Mayer and Schneider, who operate a chain of local theatres, have taken over the Mr. Harris theatre at 116th St. and 5th Ave.

The Rivoli theatre at Roosevelt, L. I., has been taken over by the owners of the Freeport, Freeport, N. Y. It will be re-opened on the 15th of August.

The Prudential Film Delivery will move into the new building on the northeast corner of 49th St. and 7th Ave. during the month of August.

Baltimore

THE Moose came to Baltimore many thousand strong to at- tend their convention which was held in that city during the week beginning Monday, June 22, and consequently all the movie play- houses were decorated for the oc- casion.

One tie-up with the convention was arranged by Harry Van Ho- ven, Advertising and Publicity manager of the Combined White- hurst Interests, who had special tickets printed that admitted one to the Century provided another ticket was purchased.

The Patrons Theatre, a neigh- borhood theatre in East Baltimore under the management of Harry Reddich, has closed for the summer. The Rivoli Theatre, City Hall Plaza, one of Baltimore's leading first run theatres, will close for two weeks on Saturday night, July 4. This house is managed by Guy L. Wonders, who has just had a flag pole erected on the City Hall Plaza outside of the playhouse on the roof and at night Old Glory is seen waving in the breeze in the light thrown on it by two strong spot lights.

The use of window cards has been discontinued during the Sum- mer. The Patrons, Alto, Apollo, Broad- way and Capitol Theatres of which J. Louis Rome is general manager, are working with theers, formerly in charge of the art department of the Combined Whitehurst Interests, has resigned from that position to become a free lance writer. A BB SILVERBERG, manager of the Crown theatre, has closed a deal last Saturday with A. Crowd and associates, owners of the new Folly theatre, and the Crown management will assume complete control of the Folly theatre next week. The theatre is located on Congress Avenue just off Fannin St. It is a new theatre, having been open about seven weeks. It is equipped throughout with new equipment and has a seating capacity of 400.

This is the second time the Crown management bought a theatre from A. Crown and associates. In 1914 the same company bought the Crown

Theatre which they now operate. It was built by A. Crown and he was manager of it until its purchase by the present owners of the Crown Theatre.

Mr. Silverberg is now in Dallas to arrange his booking for the new theatre and has announced that high-class western pictures will be booked exclusively at the theatre.

The price will be 15c.

Wm. Underwood and Jack old showman having been connected with the theatre in Oklahoma City for more than eight years.

Jerry Islet house manager at the Isis theatre left July 1st for a month's vacation. Mr. Islet will visit California for several weeks.

In response to the great popularity recently achieved in his Sunday noon "Nationality Concerts," Manager Frank Steffy has recently issued a second series of these programs at his Olympic Theatre in this city. Under the direction of Sam K. Wineland, the Coliseum Concert Orchestra, each Sunday noon features a program of music composed by the musicians of different nations.

Manager Jack Sullivan of the Fox Film exchange was looking forward to the arrival this week of Jimmy K. Graham, general sales manager of the Fox organization, who left New York recently on a general tour of inspection. From this city it was expected that Mr. Grainger would proceed to California, where he plans to remain for a number of weeks.

Herbert Sobottka, manager of Jensen's 'On Herberg's, Chicago Theatre, last week announced a four-change-a-week policy for that house. New programs will be offered each week—Monday; Tuesday-Wednesday; and Thursday-Friday. The house will continue to show pictures to be run pictures, very shortly after their first run showings in the downtown houses.

Jack Schellinger, former manager of the Universal Film Exchange, and recently appointed Western division manager for that company, left here last week for his new office in San Francisco, prior to his first business trip around his new territory. It was announced that L. O. Lukau, at present manager of Universal's exchange in Milwaukee, will take over the management of Universal's exchange in this city.

Lukau was formerly associated with First National in this city, and after that was connected with Mr. George Blue's Blue Mountain Theatre circuit for a number of months, in the capacity of general manager. Reports to the effect that the Warners' Theatre in Aberdeen has been bought by the Warner organization were emphatically denied last week by Mr. R. E. Connell, owner and manager of the house. Rumors for some time have indicated that Warner Brothers planned to take possession on August 1, but Mr. Connell denies that any negotiations have been entered into with any other persons or organization.

J. A. Gage, manager of the Edu- cational Theatre in Idaho, will return to his office this week after an absence of several weeks, during which time he attended the national convention of Educational branch managers in New York City. Mr. Gage was very highly complimented upon his excellent showing in the Educational sales contest, in which the Seattle office has consistently held a very high position. It is understood that Wallace Rucker, Mr. Gage's demon salesmen who was left in charge of the office during the former's absence, came in from the gold links long enough to give his boss upon his return, although this fact has been confirmed by Bell.

Reports received on Film Row last week indicated that the American Theatre in Spokane, recently taken over by the management of John Dantz of this city, has been closed for the summer. A dropping off of business due to the warm weather, and further troubles with organized labor, as a result of Mr. Dantz's non-union policies, were said to be responsible for the closing.

A number of changes in the personnel of the Producers' Distributing Corporation office were announced recently by Manager Charles E. Feldman. Dave Barnholz, formerly associated with the Vitagraph exchange in San Francisco, will now represent the local P.O.C. office in the Eastern Washington-Oregon territory. A. W. Parmeter, formerly a member of the Famous Players-Lasky sales staff in Eastern territory, has been sent to the Oregon territory for Producers.

Frank Graham, representative of the Twin Cities Theatre Company of Centralia and Chehalis, spent a short time on Film Row last week buying and looking a number of pictures for the string of houses operated by his company in the Southern Washington territory.

George P. Endert, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange, returned last week from a short jaunt around the Western Washington territory, visiting Ellin- graham and a number of the other small towns of this locality.

Paul K. Aust, Western division manager for Associated Exhibitors, returned to this city last week after an absence of a number of weeks during which he visited the exchanges of the Pacific Northwest under his jurisdiction.

Dutch Colber, accompanied by Mrs. Rosenberg, spent several days here recently, having come up from Portland's De Luxe Feature Film Exchange on a combined business and pleasure trip. During his stay here, Louis and Al Rosenberg, and our friends, were discussing the coming season's distribution of their State Right films.

Announcements were made public last week to the effect that the Pantages Theatre in this city was to be closed shortly after July 4 and that the future of this house will be determined after the coming season's distribution of their remodeling according to present indications.

Salt Lake City

The entire personnel of the local Metro-Goldwyn office will celebrate the annual outing Sunday in upper Provo canyon, forty miles south of Salt Lake City. The guests will attend the Princess Theatre at Bingham Canyon, Utah, has a beautiful summer home in the canyon and he graciously consented to the use of it. They will leave here Saturday night by automobile and return Sunday afternoon. The boys are preparing to supply enough mountain trout for the Sunday dinner. Charles Diller, office manager, and president of the employee's association, has charge of the affair.

George L. Croward, resident manager for Metro-Goldwyn is covering the high spots of Idaho on the new season productions. He will return Saturday morning to get in on the outing.

The employees of the Paramount Empress and Victory theatre are spending a week at the present time, with each one getting a week at full pay. This is a decided advantage in moving picture theatre circles, and the boys are making the most of the opportunity.

Charles Hamel, salesman out of the local Universal exchange, is in for a few days after spending the last four weeks in the Idaho territory. He returned to the same section upon the completion of his business here. R. D. Boomer, short subject salesman, is stirring things up in Nevada for Pathe productions.

Ed C. Mix, manager of the Associated Exhibitors exchange in this city is making a trip through the Utah territory this week. L. Abel Davis, general manager here of the F. B. O. exchange, has gone west with him. He is busy, and slipped it over on the rest of the boys along the film row. The lady was Miss Mary Mead and she has a new trip to Texas. The ceremony took place Monday, and the pair are honey- mooning quietly at the Newhouse Hotel. Mr. Abel leaves for Idaho next week, with his bride accompanying him. All the boys with them much success and happiness.

R. S. Stackhouse, Warner Brothers exchange manager, has just come in from southern Utah, and hits the trail again for Idaho. Dave T. McElhiney is Fording through Idaho and Georgia is working the Utah territory temporarily before his return to his regular stamping grounds in Montana.

Ben Winzler, proprietor of the Liberty Theatre at Tremonton, Utah: John Rugar, manager of the Century Theatre at Ogden, Utah; Ed Ryan, who operates the Liberty and Alberta Theatres at Bingham Canyon, Utah: T. W. Chesser, owner of the Princess Theatre, Bingham Canyon, Utah: J. P. Gillette, owner of the Strand Theatre at Tooele, Utah: and W. Johnson, operating the Iris Theatre at Midvale, Utah, comprised the list of out of town exhibitors this week who were on the local marquee.

F. Gordon, manager of the local Associated First National exchange is making a short trip to Idaho in the interest of the new productions.

Miss May Pearson, cashier of the local F. B. O. exchange, is spending her vacation in California.

Jack Connors is still working in Southern Utah for the United Artists productions.

C. F. Parr, manager in this territory for Producers Distributing Corporation, is making a quick trip to the Butte, Montana section. He will be back in the first of the month. Glenn H. Allen, booker, is in charge of the destinies of the office during the absence of his chief.

Sam Levin, genial owner of the Salt Lake Theatre Supply Company, is wearing a very smile that takes in the whole of his good natural physiognomy. He is therefore being a husky newcomer, the first of importance of a nine-pound boy. Sam says that he is going to teach the famous playing Cheeky Charlie in the theatre supply business immediately, so we will not be surprised to see him working away in the swaddling around his daddy's office.

Louis Strike opened his Gem Theatre at Bingham Canyon, Utah, this week and reports business as starting with a hum. He is well pleased with the opening week's reception. He also owns the Star Theatre in this city.

Samuel Henley, resident manager in this city for Universal, leaves for a busy tour throughout Idaho. Milt Cohn is covering southern Utah and Kid McElhiney, with the Boys from Delaware, is with Lou Hersch working in Idaho.

The Film Club, consisting of the employees at the local Universal exchange, enjoyed an outing at Como Springs, in eastern Utah last week. They made the trip in autos. Swimming, dining and fishing furnished the motive for pleasure, with Charles W. Peck, Jr., assistant manager, being the ablest Ike Walton of the crowd, gaining the distinction of catching the most and largest fish, catching one more than his nearest competitor, E. A. Winward, booker, who managed to hook one trout.

Fred P. Creswell, retiring district manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was presented a very handsome gift by the employees which he has held, until this week, under his jurisdiction for over two years, as a token of the esteem in which they regard their former chief. The occasion of the presentation was the picnic given at Mr. Creswell's home.

The gift, a handsome Italian made clock, standing six feet high, with the musical Canterbury chimes, was presented by Scotty Chesnut, head, in behalf of the exchanges.

Claus D. Forsyth, traveling salesman for the Theatre Supply Company in Atlanta, was killed almost instantly Monday of this week when the automobile in which he was riding crashed into a guard rail on the National highway near Greenville, S. C. A plank from the rail pierced his side and caused almost instant death.

Mr. Forsyth who lived in Greenville, was well known throughout this territory, having been an inspector for the Film Board of Trade prior to his going with the Theatre Supply Company, where he has been connected for the past six months.

H. G. Rosebaum, division manager of the Dallas territory for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Philadelphia manager, which is to be launched all over the country July 1st, came into Atlanta, Friday of this week.

Accompanying Mr. Rosebaum on his tour of the Paramount exchanges, is James Clark, division sales manager for the West Coast, working out of Los Angeles.

A new regime was inaugurated at division headquarters of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at 51 Luckie street this week, when Harry G. Ballance, former division sales manager for Famous at the New York executive office, took over the Southern territory which has been for the past two years under the jurisdiction of Fred P. Creswell. Mr. Ballance resigned his position from the home office in order to get back into the field and the actual selling end of the game, in which capacity he has had a world of valuable experience. It was in his own request that he was transferred to the Southern district which comprises Atlanta, New Orleans, Charlotte and Jacksonville.

Since Atlanta is the headquarters of the Southern District Mr. and Mrs. Ballance will make their home here. At present they are stopping at the Henry Grady hotel and in a few weeks they will have established a permanent residence in the city.

The local staff of First National Pictures had a picnic last Sunday afternoon, at the home of George Powell, on Roswell road. Mr. Bell, executive branch manager, hosted to his employees and associates, all of whom were present with their families. Swimming, fishing, and barbecue were enjoyed throughout the afternoon.

W. E. Fields, formerly of Stateville and Kingsmount, North Carolina, where he operated several theatres, has leased the Rylander, in Americus, Ga., from R. A. Herring. He will take possession about July 1st.

The Cameo Theatre, in Atlanta, which has not been in operation very long, has already undergone the process of redecoration. The walls, which were very plain at first, have been done over and are artistically finished in a soft cream and dull blue effect, which is unusually attractive. New wall lamps, with parchment shades have been put in, and ten 16 inch wall fans are cooling the atmosphere noticeably.

The Alabama theatre, owned and operated by the Dothan Amusement Company, opened in Dothan, Alabama, last week.

The new house, which is managed by J. C. Waddington, who is president of the Dothan Amusement company, is modern in every respect, and completely equipped with two latest type Powers machines. The seating capacity of the theatre is 600. On the night of the opening a large and representative crowd gathered, and a prominent citizen of Dothan made the opening address. Flowers and congratulatory telegrams marked the opening.

V A V A theatre, as yet, unnamed, is now under construction by Wood and Owens, in Abbeville, N. C. It will be, when completed, a very modern and well equipped little theatre, seating about 200, July 1st has been set as the date of the opening.

Earle E. Griggs, who handles exploitation for Universal in this territory, left Atlanta Saturday evening for Florida. Mr. Griggs assures the local film fraternity that he will return in ample time to give all his time to Greater Movie Season plans.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Atkinson, of Panama City, departed for Atlanta, arriving last week for a short stay. Mr. Atkinson operates the Panama Theatre in Panama City. They returned early this week.

Oscar Oblenkov, general manager of Liberty Film Distributing corporation is in New York for a week. He left Sunday and is expected back to Atlanta again Monday of next week.

C. T. Jordan, popularly known as "Shag," who represents University in South Georgia and North Carolina, has been sent last week that all his exhibitors found the fishing good, by personal contact. There was not one exhibitor at home in that territory, and in every case the vacation was a fishing trip.

W. M. Smith, manager of the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service, arrived in Atlanta Saturday, to spend this week selecting pictures to be shown throughout his territory, which extends from Maryland to Florida, in the various summer training camps now opening.

Amna Aiken Patterson (Mrs. Willard C. Patterson), editor and publisher of Weekly Film Review, Atlanta, Ga., and the AMERICAN FILM REVIEW NEWS, who sails July 11th for a three months' tour of Europe.

FOR the month of July, and perhaps longer, the Majestic Theatre, Harrisburg, devoted to pictures and vaudeville, has adopted the policy that was followed last summer of substituting musical comedy stock shows for the vaudeville part of the program, at the same time retaining the motion picture feature. Manager Gibble stated that it was demonstrated last summer that the musical comedy stock shows drew more pulling power than straight vaudeville in the very hot weather and that his act made it possible last year to keep the house open all summer instead of shutting down in the heated period as had been the theatre's practice in previous years.

To assist him in his travels while distributing first National film products in the Harrisburg, York and Lancaster territory, F. J. Leonard has recently acquired a new new Cadillac coupe, owned by Ennaebaugh, manager of the Colonial Theatre, of the Wilmer & Vincent Company, in Allentown, has bought himself a new Kissel sedan.

Following the closing of the Weidman Opera House, Portland, as a motion picture Paramount theatre, the only one in the town, it has been announced that a new theatre will be built there, which will be operated by Costis Vrountitis, who owns the Palace theatre in Pen Argyll.

Manager Samuel A. Keubler of the Colonial, one of the leading Wilmer & Vincent picture houses in Harrisburg, announced that the interior of the house is shortly to undergo extensive redecorations. While the exact details of the plans have not yet been disclosed it is likely that the work will be done in July or August and in a way to result in the least possible interference with the regular performances.

A number of managers of theatres in the Wilmer & Vincent circuit in Pennsylvania were temporarily transferred at the start of the warm weather, to permit other managers to take their annual vacations. When the Rajah, Reading's largest theatre, was closed for the summer, Frank S. Mickley, the manager, and several of his subordinates, were sent to the Hippodrome in the same city. Mr. Mickley relieved Walter J. Hurley, who has been serving there temporarily and who was sent back to his permanent post at the Orpheum, in Allentown. Walter J. Freas, who was the permanent manager of the Reading Hippodrome, was sent to manage the Orpheum and Mishler theatres in Altoona.

Thirteen mural paintings, of high artistic merit, by the artist, Willy Pogany, of New York City are being installed in the new Strand theatre in York, owned by the Nathan Appell interests. The group of citizen's original works include a number of ovals designed to occupy panels in the side walls.

The Comerford Amusement Company of theatres in and about Scranton, have appointed R. A. Robillard as manager of the Roosevelt theatre, in that city. Mr. Robillard was formerly manager of the State, also a Comerford house, in Scranton, but recently had been residing in New England.
St. Louis

West Coast Theatres Opens Picture Palace

Long Beach, Cal., House Has 2,300 Seating Capacity; Beautiful in Design and Appointment

A MAGNIFICENT motion picture theatre has recently been opened by the West Coast Theatres, Inc., at Long Beach, Cal. This new show place, which is one of the latest additions to the West Coast Theatres' rapidly increasing circuit, has a seating capacity of 2,300 and has facilities of the most modern type in every department.

Among the prominent features in this house are a Wurlitzer three-manual orchestral pipe organ; expensive opera chairs and large leather loge-divans; projection equipment of the very latest type; stage equipment that is claimed to be without peer in any theatre in the country; a modern ventilating system; lighting effects that can be operated both from the stage and the booth, on many circuit dimmers, giving any desired effect; and a decorative scheme which is pronounced by critics as one of the most beautiful in any Western theatre.

The theatre is under the resident management of Frank L. Browne, widely-known Long Beach theatrical executive, who, prior to assuming charge of the new house, operated the Liberty Theatre in that city for several years for the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and who will continue to manage both houses. The Long Beach houses are under the direct personal supervision of A. M. Bowles, General Manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc.

A fourteen-piece orchestra will be a part of the regular staff, and the policy calls for a split-week change, with the fore part of the week being devoted to big pictures and elaborate stage presentations produced by Fanchon and Marco, widely known Pacific Coast stage producers, who have charge of the Production Department of the West Coast Theatres, Inc. The latter part of the week will be devoted to standard big-time Orpheum Vaudeville, and pictures.

Long Beach is a city of 125,000 inhabitants, and the new West Coast Theatre is the finest playhouse in the city, as well as one of the most beautiful on the Pacific Coast. It will be noted in the accompanying photographs that the furnishings, tapestries, carpeting, and other similar accoutrements are exceedingly attractive.

The architectural treatment of this theatre incorporates several innovations in theatrical design and decoration. It offers an additional example of the architectural achievements that are being continuously made in the construction of motion picture theatres.

Seven thousand people attended the gala opening, and among the prominent visitors present were all of the high officials of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., as well as prominent Long Beach citizens, headed by Mayor Clark, who was the principal speaker on the program.
G. E. Designs New Switch for Motion Picture Theatres

A new throw-over switch, which has been given the designation CR-7896-M1, is now being marketed by the General Electric Company for use in automatically transferring lighting circuits to an emergency source. Such a switch would find its principal use in theatres, motion picture houses and other public gathering places where an emergency lighting system for exit lights is required for use when the normal lighting supply fails.

It is impossible, with this switch, for alternating current to be thrown on the battery usually employed as the emergency source of supply. In designing the switch to prevent this, exceptional, wide gaps were arranged between the contact tips, thus preventing the arc from holding over and throwing alternating and direct current together.

The new switch has a tip capacity of 30 amperes and may be used on circuits as high as 440 volts. It is mounted on a compound base and enclosed in a sheet metal case for wall mounting. The approximate overall dimensions of the enclosing case are 14 inches high, 8 1/2 inches wide and 7 1/2 inches deep. Knock-outs are provided at the top and bottom for conduit wiring.

Plans Being Drawn for Theatre in Binghamton, N. Y.

Plans are now being drawn for the erection of a motion picture theatre to be erected on the vacant lot in the rear of the Crandall hotel property, Binghamton, N. Y. The theatre is to have a seating capacity of 1500. Guy Harrington Players will lease the new theatre for a 10 year period from Levine Brothers.

Plans Completed for Warwick Theatre, St. Louis

The architectural firm of Boller Brothers, Kansas City, has completed plans for the new Warwick theatre, Kansas City, to be built on the site of the present theatre. Construction should begin about July 1, the architects now being ready to take bids. The new theatre will be an ultra modern structure, covering all the present frontage and a block deep, having a seating capacity of 2,200. Night and day shifts probably will be employed in the construction work to minimize the period over which the house will be dark. It is estimated that five months will be required to raze the present structure and erect the new one. E. W. Werner, owner, obtained a 99 year lease on the site.

Philadelphia to Have Large Modern Theatre

Hoffman-Henon Company, Finance Building, Philadelphia, have completed plans for the erection of a $250,000 Motion Picture Theatre to be erected at 1253 F. Chelten Ave. The owner of this structure is Henry B. Jaminson, Real Est., Tr. Building.

Suspension of Operators Discussed at Canada Convention

THE arbitrary suspension of motion picture operators came up for lengthy discussion before the recent annual convention of District No. 11 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees which was held in the Chateau Laurier at Ottawa. It was pointed out that one union projectionist was suspended by a Government inspector because he had reading matter in the projection room. On another occasion an operator was chewed the butt of an unlighted cigarette when the government inspector made a call and the operator was summarily suspended regardless of explanations.

The outcome of the discussion was the adoption of a resolution asking the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress to secure legislation in the various Canadian Provinces providing for stiff requirements in the qualifications for theatre inspectors, a definite standard of experience and knowledge to be designated.

W. P. Covert of Toronto, International vice-president of the I.A.T.S.E., was re-elected president of District No. 11 while P. J. Ryan of Montreal was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Every organized theatre centre in Ontario and Quebec had projection machine operator representatives at the convention with the exception of Fort William and Brantford, Ontario. The cities represented included Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, London, Hamilton, Quebec, Kingston, Peterboro, Brockville, Windsor, Sudbury, and others.

The delegates held a big dinner at Aylmer, Quebec, as a feature of the convention. It was more than usually enjoyable for the simple reason that no one speech was permitted.

Marr & Colton Installed in New So. California Theatre

Fullerton, California has something else to be proud of now besides climate, Valencia oranges, and beautiful homes. Southern California was given a gasp of surprise when it attended the opening of the Chapman Theatre. To begin with, its new theatre is located on Spadina Road just north of Chapman Avenue. It is a huge building, as fireproof as modern construction can provide, with a main auditorium and a balcony with a seating capacity for 1200 persons.

The proscenium arch and stage are examples of the highest in art and efficiency. On either side of the stage is a highly decorative theme, including the shuttered opening of the Marr & Colton organ chambers. This has been treated with the utmost care and originality and embraces not only the Italian motif but rare color and lighting effects.

The foyer and mezzanine lounge are also very striking. One enters the foyer from the main court, through massive, quaint doors of olivion. Genuine oriental rugs take the place of the usual padded carpets.

The Marr & Colton organ is one of the feature attractions. This organ is being played by the well known musician, Julius Johnson,—a master organist.

The organ is of the modern orchestral type, played from the 3 Manual Console.

Compact Portable Generating Outfit

One day in the moving picture industry, as typified by the traveling show, with its one-night stands, and the "nickelodeon" with its more pretentious quarters in a made-over barroom, bring back fond memories of such things as hand-cranked projectors with the "film" piling out in a waste paper basket or on the floor of the booths, the one and only "silver sheet," the gum-chewing pianist with enthralled gaze riveted on the screen, the many broken promises of features to come and the time-worn excuse, made at the last minute to a packed house, that the feature of the evening had been "delayed in transit" and would surely be presented "tomorrow."

Because we can remember such things it is easier to comprehend the progress which has been made in the past few years.

The traveling show and the nickelodeon differed in practically only one respect. The latter had a reasonably certain supply of "juice" whereas the former never knew what it would have to use next. Indeed, it was frequently necessary in the more sparsely settled communities to resort to calcium to put the picture across.

The nickelodeon has been replaced by more pretentious structures of a permanent nature but the traveling show is still necessary to provide the isolated communities with entertainment.

The pioneer days, however, have witnessed the demise of the old methods and the substitution of more convenient and reliable ones of presenting the show. No longer need the "Juice" be taken as it comes — "A.U." here, D.C. there —110 in one place, 220 in the next—with the chance on the side of having none at all.

Portable power plants of sufficient capacity to supply the needs of one projector are now available which eliminate this possibility. There are many such plants in existence, all of which possess merits in their own way. Too meet the requirements of the traveling show, however, an outfit of this type must be portable in the broadest sense of the word and yet possess sufficient capacity to do the work.

It is fortunate that the capacity need not be uncommonly great since the traveling show, as a rule, caters to small audiences and is staged in small auditoriums where the throw is relatively short and the picture small. Compactness then becomes the primary requisite in the portable plant.

Such a compact outfit is admirably represented by the Homelite generating plant, made and marketed by the Homelite Corporation of America. It is illustrated in Fig. 1 which shows the complete generating unit minus storage batteries, exhaust line and muffler.

This outfit consists essentially of a six pole shunt wound, 32 volt, D-C generator driven by a two cycle, one cylinder gas engine, direct connected to the armature shaft. The entire outfit weighs about 100 lbs and is provided with a hand grip for carrying it short distances. While a weight of 100 lbs. is not to be lightly tossed about or lagged like a suitcase for many miles at a time, still it can be easily placed in the smallest automobile and carried in and out of the building where the pictures are to be projected.

600-Watt Capacity

The capacity of this machine, while nominally rated at 500 watts, is capable of delivering from 600 to 700 watts continuously without overheating. Such a capacity (aside from the voltage) would practically preclude the use of any arc, even the reflector type but it is sufficient to meet the requirements of the 600 watt, 20 amper, 30 volt incandescent lamp for motion picture service.

This lamp was especially designed for semiprofessional service where the throw is short (30-70 ft.) and the picture is small (0-12 ft. wide). When using the 600 watt lamp with the Homelite outfit it will be necessary to use a small hand-controlled resistance to keep the lamp at 20 amperes.

It is possible, however, in an emergency to throw the lamp directly across the generator terminals, using an extra length of feeder wire to take up the excess voltage and so run the lamp at approximately 30 volts directly from the generator.

Automatic Voltage Control

Better still, the unit is equipped with an automatic voltage control, in the form of a solenoid which operates on the spark control of the gas engine and so regulates the speed of the generator, which in turn controls its terminal voltage.

This control is fairly effective and can be set for any value between 30 and 40 volts by means of a simple adjustment on the solenoid.

Compactness in the machine is secured by using a magneto, instead of a battery for ignition, and by having the gas engine air-cooled instead of water-cooled.

Uses Gasoline, Kerosene or Furnace Oil

An important feature with this unit is the fact that either gasoline, kerosene or furnace oil can be used with equal success as a fuel. Operation on furnace oil, is naturally quite inexpensive, the cost per KW.-H. being in the neighborhood of 5 or 6 cents. Furthermore, where furnace oil is used as a fuel no additional oil is required for lubrication purposes since the machine is then self-oiling.

When using the other fuels, however, the manufacturers recommend placing 6 oz. of motor oil in the gasoline tank after which the machine does the rest.

The capacity of the fuel tank (in the base of the machine) is one gallon which is sufficient to operate the engine for about 3 hours. A fine mesh screen is placed in the mouth of the tube leading to the carburetor and the manufacturers say that it is possible to fill the tank one-quarter with water and three-quarters with fuel without affecting the operation of the unit.

Four spiral springs, acting as a base for the machine, take up all vibration so that it is possible to place it on a table without causing the table to vibrate, or the machine to creep.

When cleaning the combustion chamber of carbon it is not necessary to take down the engine since the chumber can be cleaned through the exhaust and spark plug ports with the aid of special tools supplied. This requires five minutes.

In cranking the engine, a short piece of "eleven" cord is wound around a grooved pulley at one end of the shaft and the cord is then pulled quickly, thus turning over the engine. This operation is similar to winding a cord on a top, preparatory to spinning it.

According to the manufacturers, the machine is practically fool-proof and will stand much abuse. Other than filling the tank with fuel, it will run without attention for long periods.

Liberty Theatre in Spokane Undergoing Remodeling

Approximately $25,000 will be spent on the Liberty Theatre in Spokane, Wash., this spring in the remodeling and renovating of the house, according to announcements made last week by Manager Ray Grombacher. Included among the plans of remodeling are the installation of a beautiful Italian theatre interior, with an Italian garden at the stage and a similar effect in the foyer of the house, as well as the redecorating and renovating of all walls, drapes and lounging rooms. The new interior work is being done under the direction of Madame LaDaVeze, well-known Washington decorator and designer.

Mr. Grombacher has just completed the remodeling of his Casino Theatre in that city, at a cost of several thousand dollars. The repairs in that house included the furnishing of the theatre with entirely new hangings, draperies, stage drapes and carpets, as well as the redecorating and renovating of the interior of the theatre and its equipment.

Plans Laid for Theatre and Stores in Ohio

Plans are being completed by William A. Bingham for the erection of a motion picture theatre and stores at West 55th Street.

"Black Cyclone"—Pathe, Rialto, Los Angeles

Express: "If you have a hankering for a picture that is out of the ordinary and one that is packed with romance and thrills, you must see 'Black Cyclone' at the Rialto. It is a truly remarkable film. Rex, who performed so creditably as the equine hero of 'King of Wild Horses,' is cast as the principal character in 'Black Cyclone' and he carries the honors with the aplomb of a matinee idol.

Times: "Rex, the wild horse, runs away with film honors on the screen at the Rialto this week. 'Black Cyclone' is a new thrill for the tired picturegoer. 'Wild Horses,' provides no different entertainment. One, never for a moment sees the human guiding hand. Marvelously built creatures (and just the sight of a horse is a treat nowadays anyway) battle for the love of the woman in the film. The storm and stress of animal conflict run all through the picture."

Herald: "'Black Cyclone' at the Rialto this week. An interesting study in the extent of intelligence a dumb animal will manifest without the aid of human guidance. Of course there were trainers on the sidelines, giving instructions to Rex. Lady and the other, the three beautiful horses featured in the film but to all appearances, they were acting of their own volition. Sufiice it to say, the production is well put together, and any criticism is far and away the most adventurous feature that I have ever seen."

Herald: "Whether fantasy or freak, 'The Lost World' is astonishingly fascinating. The picture had the grand illusion of a story that has been ever shown. The Lost World discloses the cleverst film technical device and the most imposing spectacles that the eye has ever seen."

Express: "An exceptional fantasy. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's story of the lost tribes in a land of prehistoric creatures has been turned into celluloid. 'The Lost World' has thrilling dramatic action in abundance and clever moments of comedy. Too much praise cannot be given to Harry O. Hoyt, director, and Willis O'Brien, who invented the scenes which appear so lifelike on the screen."

Daily News: "'The Lost World' is a remarkable photograph. Of course the tricks of the camera have been resorted to, to make the picture, but these tricks defy detection and so marvelously are the animals constructed that to all appearances they are alive. In fact, so well is the picture done, it is only by an effort of the mind that one realizes the animals are artificial."

The Express: "The Lost World, a goldmine for First National. The Daily Chronicle: 'A great popular success.'"

The Sunday Express: "It is certainly the most completely satisfying entertainments ever shown."

The final safeguard for success—

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

To make the most of a picture from the box office viewpoint you carefully plan the publicity notices, newspaper advertisements, lobby displays, tie-ups.

But one more safeguard for success remains—photographic quality. Look in the film margin for the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" and you know that the screen will show all the quality of the negative.

CLEVELAND, O.
Greta Nissen is handsome, capable and understanding. She is a real “find” both as to looks and to acting ability.—N.Y. Sun.

Miss Nissen is an exquisite and vibrant young creature, half the childlike ingenue and half the wise, sophisticated continental. The combination is irresistible. She is by all odds the screen’s most captivating recent acquisition.—N.Y. Herald Tribune.

She is a Scandinavian with a Parisian cachet. She is fair, sure, natural and graceful. She is alert and seemingly gives as much attention to her hands and feet as she does to her constantly changing gaze. She has a decided and delightful personality. No matter how frivolous the scenes may be, Miss Nissen gives a sincere and earnest portrayal, always obtaining excellent results with an originality rarely beheld on the screen.—N.Y. Times.

Miss Nissen is a glamorous young blonde whose radiant good looks survive on the screen. Certainly she is the most decorative thing in many months of super-spectacles.—N.Y. World.

Miss Nissen is what Webster must have thought of when he put that word “beautiful” in his dictionary. As an actress and as an optical treat, she is probably as big an acquisition as the screen has made this year. She deports herself attractively. She has an expressive face, and not the dumb-doll appearance of some other screen beauties. And she can wear clothes as well as any other woman on the screen.—Variety.

Miss Nissen has caused nothing short of a furore in the film world. The consensus seems to be that she is the most colorful and interesting beauty that has appeared on the picture horizon in many moons.—Motion Pictures Today.
It Might Be Interesting

There has been such tall talk about coming product from the film studios that adjectives have gone on strike. Paramount now has a statement to make that it would like to enforce on the minds of exhibitors. It concerns the first six pictures of the Greater 40 — pictures that have been completed and screened. They are:

"The Lucky Devil"
"Wild Wild Susan"
"WILD HORSE MESA"
"The COAST OF FOLLY"
"The Street of Forgotten Men"
"NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK"

About these six pictures you can set this down as true:

The industry has never been provided with better entertainment

Richard Dix in "The Lucky Devil" begins where other auto-race dramas left off. He's a lucky devil not to have been killed. If you can see it and not gasp, you're thrill-deaf. If you can see it and not enjoy it, you're cuckoo.

Member Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.—Will H. Hays, President.
To Read This All through

Allan Dwan’s direction of Rod La Rocque, Ernest Torrence, Dorothy Gish in “Night Life,” his manipulation of the camera, his flair for getting the true essence of New Yorkitis into a fast, funny, appealing every-foot-an-entertainment picture will not be surpassed this year.

“The Street of Forgotten Men.” How shall we describe it and what Herbert Brenon has made in this picture? You can offer money back to any one who can see this picture and not feel the thrill of it, the so-hard-to-catch heart tug of it, the powerful punch of its story and scenes. And if you want to hear of a new real star, remember the name Mary Brian.

“Wild Horse Mesa” was shown at a preview. Often it has been said of previews that “the audience cheered.” But here is a case where they really did, not once but in many places during the picture. There has never been a better Zane Grey. The picture is a mop-up and when you see it, you’ll admit it.

“Wild Wild Susan” offers the speedy comedy romance that makes this sextette of hits one of infinite variety. It’s funny, it appeals to all classes, it is entertainment, it has a great plot and Bebe Daniels is in a part she simply eats alive — with Rod La Rocque as great support.

“The Coast of Folly.” And now, how can this Swanson epic be described? How can we convince you that you have never seen a better Swanson picture—more luxury, more gowns, more romance, more beauty, more marvelous acting? The surest way is to wait until you see it yourself. In the meantime, set this down: you can mop-up with Gloria Swanson in “The Coast of Folly” beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The woods are full of tall talk — so many titles, so many claims, so many would-be stars, so much extravagance, so many adjectives.

BUT OUT OF THE SMOKE AND THE CAMOUFLAGE AND THE HEAVY ARTILLERY ADVERTISING COMES THIS FACT:

The Greater Forty will make more money and please more people for you than any pictures ever produced, and that’s the truth!

Paramount Pictures
THE AMERICAN PEOPLE HATE MONOPOLY AND monopolists.

THEY HAVE FOUGHT, BLED AND DIED TO DO AWAY with oppression in all of its forms. They have fought for liberty in every war this country has entered since the Revolution.

FROM SCHOOLDAYS EVERY AMERICAN HAS BEEN taught fair play, liberty, freedom. It is the basic structure of their lives and their characters.

THEY WILL JOIN YOU IN A WAR TO THE DEATH against unfairness, trickiness, threats, bluffs, oppression and greed.

BUT YOU’VE GOT TO TELL THEM WHAT’S GOING ON before they will know of the necessity of a fight.

TELL THEM.

TELL THEM ON SLIDES. TELL THEM ON YOUR PRO- grams, if you use any. Tell them through the columns of your local newspapers. Tell them by word of mouth. Tell them in every possible and conceivable manner.

TELL THEM OF THE DESPERATE ATTEMPT THAT IS being made to crush the theatre owner. If you have ever been threatened by any producer, tell them about it. If someone has threatened to build a theatre to compete with you because you refused to pay ruinous prices for his pictures, tell them.

TELL THEM WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THEIR MOST popular form of entertainment if it ever falls into the hands of a limited number of producers. Tell them what kind of pictures they would get if the ideas for pictures were to come from a small group of men who had no competition to spur them on.

TELL THEM HOW YOU HAVE WORKED AND SLAVED and schemed to give them the greatest possible show for their money. Tell them of the actions of the Monopoly Twins who openly and boastfully state that they have untold millions of dollars with which to lick the Independents.

TELL THEM THAT NOT A SINGLE FORWARD STEP HAS been made in this industry except under the lash of keen but open and honest competition. They know these things as a general principle but they don’t know that an attempt is being made to monopolize their favorite entertainment.

SINCE THE DAY I STARTED IN THIS BUSINESS ABOUT 19 years ago, I have made it a point to tell you the truth about everything that was going on in the industry. It has been a good thing for you and it has paid me. It has made a strong bond between us. Build up that same kind of a bond between yourself and your people. And begin NOW.
"I selected this firm’s pictures because I believe that they have on their 1925-26 program one of the finest line-ups of attractions it ever has been my good fortune to look over. The forthcoming Warner productions are in every way equal, if not better, than those found on the lists of any other producing company, in story character, players, and directors. I feel that in them the patrons of this theatre will find an unending and satisfactory variety of real worth-while entertainment during the months to come."

O HENRY SERIES

MARION HARLAN has been selected as the "O. Henry Girl" and will appear in the eight comedies to be released this season.

"Shoes"

Directed by Daniel Keefe, the first of the series, is based on one of O. Henry's best known stories—of O. Henry's best known stories—with a tropical background and a veritable O. Henry knockout in the climax. Casts of excellence and real comedies will feature the series. They're the "Class of the Comedies"—book them—feature them!

The MARRIED LIFE of HELEN and WARREN

YOU'VE got a ready-made audience waiting to see these popular two-reel comedies. For fifteen years these stories of marital joys and tribulations by Mabel Herbert Urner have been published in more than 500 newspapers throughout the country.

"A Business Engagement" with Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley as the Bride and as the Groom is the first of the series of eight to be released this season. Directed by Albert Ray.

EARLE FOXE IN NEW SERIES OF VAN BIBBER SOCIETY COMEDIES

If you've played the first eight Van Bibber comedies you already know the value of these two-reel knockouts at the box-office! Each is a complete story with drama, suspense, and real comedy. Earle Foxe being the chief funmaker throughout.

Eight in the series; the first four to be released are:

THE BIG GAME HUNTER
THE SKY JUMPER
THE WRESTLER
A PARISIAN KNIGHT

From stories written by Richard Harding Davis, directed by George Marshall and Robert P. Kerr.

“Just tell him I’m from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.”
"We've got a line-up of pictures for 1925-26 that even beats our record of this year. If you'll let me show you some of our money winners I think you'll agree that we've done it again!"

"You bet I'm interested in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. You fellows certainly delivered the goods this year. I've read a lot about Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Quality 52 and it sounds good to me."
“We’ve got the stars that stand them up. And they’re directed by the men who make the big box-office successes.

For instance: Rex Ingram, Fred Niblo, Victor Seastrom, Marshall Neilan, Erich von Stroheim, Tod Browning, Hobart
Henley, Frank Borzage, King Vidor, Rupert Hughes, Monta Bell,

Those boys know what brings in the crowds. And when you figure that Louis B. Mayer and his lieutenants Irving Thalberg and Harry Rapf head the studio organization you’re sure of business pictures.

And then there’s Erte, the most famous fashion designer in the world, giving ‘em knock-out gowns and Technicolor as added attraction in many pictures and other showmanship ideas up our sleeve. And when it comes to promotion our Transcontinental Trackless Train, now a sensation on its way across country, is just one of the big ideas we’ve got.

I’m going to show you what’s in this book!”

“The Iron Mule”

One of only two two-reel comedies to play the big Capitol Theatre, New York, in two years.

If judged by the applause of the audience, however, first honors of the Old Mill bill go to “The Iron Mule,” an Al St. John comedy which burlesques the operation of a passenger train in 1830. From the moment the engineer shooes away the chickens that have gone to roost on the locomotive to the final episode, where the monocled Englishman’s deadly aim with a golf ball repels the scalp-hunting Red-skins, the picture is one of the funniest ever presented in Dallas.

"Putting It Over"

Some figures have recently come to mé on the losses taken in the forced runs of certain big pictures at legitimate theatres in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston.

The figures are scandalous. From every angle of consideration, it seems to me, they ought to sweep finally this scheme into the discard and bury it beyond any hope of resurrection.

The idea back of this method of presentation is—we assume—advertising. It is designed to create newspaper publicity, to impress heavily all the picture houses of the country from whom, later on, must come the rentals that pay the heavy cost of production and the heavy loss of the Broadway premiere.

Let us take one of these pictures. It is admittedly one of the best of all recent productions.

Well, this one picture lost so much in the Eastern cities—in its legitimate theatre runs, that without indicating the exact amount we can make these significant comparisons:

The loss was more, much more, than one-third of the whole year's national advertising campaign in magazines and newspapers of a prominent picture company. Just think of it! A forced run of one picture in four cities (and the resultant publicity, whatever it was) as against the continuous and prominent advertising in every city and town of the country of a brand name and a whole year's output.

Let us make some more advertising comparisons, selecting two great advertising successes whose national appropriations are close to the top of the list of the big national advertisers.

The loss (or, if you wish, the preliminary advertising expense) on the one picture was nearly one-third of the amount spent in the nation's newspapers last year by the Ford Motor Company. It was more than one-third as great as the entire year's newspaper campaign of Proctor and Gamble, whose products are household words.* * *

The plain truth is that it is utterly unscientific—from an advertising standpoint—and prodigally wasteful. Consider what could be done with this large amount of money in straight newspaper advertising.

Full pages, if desired, but at any rate the heaviest kind of advertising could be run for an ample length of time in all the key cities of the country. Timed with the showing of the picture in picture theatres with large seating capacities and popular prices, the picture would cash in on the advertising for both exhibitor and producer; and advertising would at the same time prevail for all subsequent runs throughout each territory. In other words, here's your whole national advertising campaign on a big picture, ample in amount, scientifically expended, profitable in results. As against a dead loss, most of it going out in theatre rental.

Occasionally a picture will make money in its legitimate theatre run. But, how rarely! If so, it is good business and good advertising. But surely, by this time we know that it is only a super-attraction for which the public will pack a house at high prices.

The idea seems to be a persistent fetish, bred in the days of "Quo Vadis" and "Birth of a Nation," and when such pictures were marvels to the public mind.

We are getting picture advertising closer and closer to the point where it will rank with the well considered and conducted campaigns used for other commodities. Even the bosses today are keeping their hands off and letting specialists attend to it. So, there's hope: but not until we stop this wild, hysterical effort to "put it over" regardless of money, good taste, good judgment or any consequences and cost whatever.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.
Beating the Summer Slump

SOME timely suggestions are given by Harold B. Franklin, head of the Famous Players theatre department, on ways to beat the summer slump. The article appeared in "The Close-Up," and follows in part:

"Experience has proved that the summer theatre can be put over if the manager maps out a plan to beat the summer competition and carries out that plan with determination. At this time of the year the theatre should be most comfortable, and that means the ventilating system should operate with 100 per cent efficiency. Cleanliness must be apparent, in every nook and corner of the theatre and in the personal appearance of the entire staff. Summer uniforms as adopted for the Class A theatres carry out the idea of summer coolness and cleanliness. Lighting is an important factor in making the theatre cool and attractive. Avoid warm and glaring lights. A very light green or blue can do wonders towards suggesting an atmosphere of comfort and coolness.

"Seasonal comfort can be suggested in the colors that are used by the sign painter. The basic idea is that color can influence through suggestion a very definite emotional state. Some colors bring comfort, others cause irritation. It is important for modern theatre managers to learn how to use some colors and how to avoid others. Experience has proved that red, orange or yellow are warm colors, while yellow-green, green and blue-green are cool colors which are quieting.

"For your musical program it is wise to avoid heavy and depressing numbers. Light, rapturous, flowing melodies are more suitable especially during the summer season."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

ONE OF EUROPE'S BEST

There is a picture which has come out of Europe that compares favorably with anything produced here or over there. And it didn't come from Germany either. It is "Cyrano De Bergerac"—and was made in the studios of Italy and France by the Unione Cinematographica Italiana. The play by Rostand has endured ever since it was first produced. The title role affords the actor portraying it one of the greatest characterizations ever written. Mansfield, Coquelin and Walter Hampden have enacted "Cyrano"—the last-mentioned only last season. It took courage to make a picture of this heroic romance. It is a most faithful transcription—one approached with reverence, feeling and imagination. No attempt has been made to improve on the play. Nothing movieish has been written into it. A great deal of the dialogue has been transferred to the screen—and these sub titles, expressing a fine romantic mood and seasoned with wit and sentiment, add much in capturing the charm and appeal of the play.

The picture has been produced on a lavish scale. It carries rich colors and is animated with vivid scenes—glorifying the Paris of 1640. The strutting, pompous Cyrano is a play-fellow. Way down in his heart he is humble, but he strikes a pose to counteract the impression given by his gross features. He is a master hand at love-making, but he keeps the secret of his romance in his heart. He loves by proxy for he feels himself too much a monstrosity to imagine himself an object of romance. Such sacrifice always strikes deep.

The story is woven around this figure. And how magnificently it is played by Pierre Magnier of the Comedie Francaise. He captures all the pathos—all the humanity and humility of the sorrowful lover who smiles and struts to hide his real emotions. It is a scene charged with real feeling when Cyrano manages to keep his engagement with his beloved though he has suffered a mortal injury. He dies on his feet—a glorious death. The intimate episodes carry tremendous appeal, yet there are moments which are pictorially fine too. Take notice of the Parisian atmosphere—and the scene before the battle of Arras.

Three cheers for Matrimony," shouts Maurice B. "Lefty" Flynn, F. B. O. star, who recently became the husband of dainty Viola Dana.

Lil' Junior Coughlan has an important part in "Mike" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) which Marshall Neilan is producing on the coast.

Ford Sterling listens in while Malcolm St. Clair, director, discusses "The Trouble With Wives" (Paramount) with Ricardo Cortez who has hopped over from the "Not So Long Ago" (also Paramount) set.

Evidently dicing or "craps" as some people call it is a much older game than we had suspected for here are members of the cast of "The Wanderer" (Paramount) hard at it. Reading from the left the law violators are Ernest Torrence, William Collier, Jr., Director Raoul Walsh and Greta Nissen.

The newest United Artists Producer, John W. Considine, and his star, Peter the Great, pose in one of the beautiful spots of the United Studios in Hollywood.

And this entrancing vision is Lina Basquette, Follies Dancer, who became the bride of Sam Warner, of Warner Bros., on Independence Day. Gosh, some fellows have all the luck.

Blanche Sweet visits her girl friend, Colleen Moore, on "The Desert Flower" (First National) set. We guess Blanche was as curious as we are as to what a desert flower looked like.
A great form the You can't know, the concept of "costume" drama. The drama is too moving and the characters too vivid for such a thought.

TAKING THE MEDAL

All Hollywood turned out the other night at a reception in the Ambassador Hotel when the Valentino medal for the best screen performance of 1924 was given to John Barrymore for his work in "Beau Brummel." Rupert Hughes was master of ceremonies and the social and movie circles of Los Angeles attended. Mr. Barrymore in replying to Mr. Hughes' speech of presentation paid a neat tribute to Hollywood and the picture industry. There were informal remarks by others in attendance—and the entire affair was broadcast over KFWB, the Warner's studio station.

Among those who sat in on the ceremonies were Marion Davies, Louise Fazenda, Robert Z. Leonard, Lew Cody, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Monte Blue, Marie Prevost, Irene Rich, Richard Dix, Alice Joyce, Lois Wilson, Jack Warner, Bennie Ziedman, Ernst Lubitsch, Millard Webb and a host of others.

ENTERTAINING THE COPS

Richard A. Rowland, the big mogul of First National, and Earl Hudson, the big chief of F. N's productions, did some entertaining last week. Having a police picture in their possession, "The Making of O'Malley," they invited forty police officials from New York and surrounding towns—all members of the Metropolitan Police Association to have dinner in the studios and look over the film. As Misses. Rowland and Hudson always entertain on a lavish scale they entrusted the preparation of the dinner to the chefs from Sherry's. Following the repast the picture was run off with a musical accompaniment by the studio orchestra. Then came the speeches. Milton Sills joined the sponsors with an oration.

Samuel Goldwyn, producer, and George Sidney, actor, greet Montague Glass, the creator of the "Potash and Perlmutter" character upon his arrival in Hollywood after a trip to Europe. Number three of the series, about to be produced by Goldwyn, will be adapted from the stage play "Partners Again."

My stenographer and dictated a telegram. And the result was a stilted, conventional expression which read like a form letter. And that, I'll venture to say, is just what Billie's father and every other busy man does under similar circumstances.

"Busy men. That's the trouble. We're busy, we're hurried, we're worried. But a boy of nine has inspired me to a decision never again to be so busy that I can't take the time and the thought to write a real letter to a friend in distress. I shan't be able to write without feeling that Billie showed (nor will Billie when he's as old as I am); but at least my friend shall know that I have written from the heart."

Here's the letter written in a childish scrawl.

Dear James:

It's too bad old man but you can't help it. You have to take life as it comes. God knows what's good for us you know that. He gives and he takes. Right now is the saddest time you'll have in your life. To have your old dad pardner die. Good-by, your best friend and pardner, Bill.

YOUTH AND SINCERITY

One of the greatest expressions of heart-felt emotion that we've read in a long, long time is quoted by Ray Long, the vice-president and editor of Hearst's International and Cosmopolitan Magazine, in the August issue of the magazine. He elaborates as follows: "We reproduce here a letter which is one of the finest expressions of sympathy I have ever read. It was written as you will have guessed by a young man. It is the story of a young man's experience with a miner's family; and is entitled, naturally, to the attention of the reader."

"I've learned from a Boy of Nine" Billie Hays, son of Will Hays, head of the motion picture industry. It was to Billie's chum, Jimmie Collins, whose father had been killed in a mine disaster in their home town of Sullivan, Indiana.

You will have guessed it came from the pen of a youngster, because you know as I know that no grown-up expresses sympathy with such direct, spontaneous, heart-felt sympathy.

As I read Billie Hays' letter I contrasted it with the wire I sent recently to a friend who had lost one dear to him. I felt sympathy, but instead of taking the time to think out and write a letter, I called...
Though a director in his own right, Frank Borzage still takes direction from his original director as evidenced by the scene above. Borzage, Sr., instructs wife and son while taking screen tests of Mrs. Borzage on one of the set's for "Lazybones" (Fox) which Frank has just finished.

A CHAMP SKEIK

They may talk of modern sheiks, but back in the matinee idol days our mothers and aunts saw some love-making that would make the present crop of screen lovers look like amateurs. There was Henry DIXEY and Kyrle Belwe, E. H. Sothern and William Faversham, James K. Hackett and Robert Edeson.

The last-mentioned is appearing in the movies now—playing character roles. But he might have been the original matinee idol when you consider the large group of leading ladies he made love to in such romantic fashion.

As a stage sheik he wooed Virginia Harned, Cora Tanner, Ellen Burg, Flora Juliette Bowley, Amelia Bingham, Edna Wallace Hopper, Annie Russell, Elsie DeWolfe, Rose Coghlan, Isabelle Irving, Effie Shannon, Olive Wyndham, Ann Murdoch, Clara Bloodgood, Mme. Kalich, Adrienne Morrison, Katherine Grey, Henrietta Crosman, Viola Allen, Ida Conquest, Agnes Miller, Effie Ellser, Bijou Fernandez, Lolita Robertson, Alice Brady, Mary Boland, Violet Kemble Cooper and Maude Adams. Added to this list are a score of picture stars. Just at present Edeson is now wooing Leatrice Joy in Cecil DeMille's newest picture.

BY ORDER OF THE COURT

PORTLAND, Oregon judge ordered a motion picture in his court not long ago for the first time in the history of the State. The room was full of couples seeking divorces and the picture shown was "Are Parents People?" from the story by Alice Duer Miller. The jurist had a notion the film might cause some of the couples to become reconciled instead of seeking different paths. Maybe it did. The notice doesn't say.

However, it may be that the judge decided these couples were determined to cut their marital knots. If so it is quite likely that he ordered the other Paramount picture to be shown. Perhaps he showed them "Grounds for Divorce."

BUILDING A HOTEL

Before beginning activities in the new Christie feature, Julian Eltinge is combining business with pleasure by starting preliminary work on the hotel which he is building at Alpine in Southern California—where he has a ranch and considerable property. It is the actor's plan to develop this property extensively and make his permanent home here after retiring from the footlights and the kliegs. Meanwhile he is dividing his time between the ranch and his Los Angeles home. Eltinge has had so much experience with hotels during the years of stage career that he should know how to double as "Mine Host." In his tourist hotel there will be many features which the weary traveler has longed for and never found.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

The above title will adorn the special reel which Short Films Syndicate will present for the Greater Movie Season. If for no other reason than it shows how the screen has advanced it is worth anyone's time to look it over. Besides it will bring up memories of the early days when the movies were trying so hard to interest the public.

It is a one-reel subject and offers snatches of film history that were recorded between 1895 and 1903. You will glimpse the erstwhile stage comedienne, May Irwin, registering emotion as it concerns the kiss. There is a shot of a storm at sea which was the first attempt to capture the action of the waves. After several other antique sketches are shown the reel concludes with (can you guess it?—You're right) "The Great Train Robbery." This was the first effort at recording a narrative. It paved the way for all our screen stories—for it showed that a complete picture could be made from a plot and characterization. The narrative was only twelve minutes long—but it certainly made an impression. The New York Times gave it a two-column review back in 1903. Hark to the excerpts from the review.

"It is a source of unending wonder. . . There is an immense amount of shooting. . . The smoke of the pistols is plainly seen. . . While witnessing the exhibition, women put their fingers in their ears to shut out the noise of the firing! That is pure realism. . . More than 5,000,000 persons, it is estimated, have looked at these pictures. . . During the hold-up of the passengers of the robbed train it looks as though more than a hundred persons leave the several cars and form in line to be

LUNCHEON FOR GRIFFITH

In honor of his starting work on "That Royle Girl," his first picture under his new contract with Famous Players, a luncheon was given to D. W. Griffith at the Long Island studio Wednesday noon which was attended by the motion picture scribes of the New York dailies, fan magazines and trade papers. In addition to Mr. Griffith and the leading players of the cast, Carol Dempster, James Kirkwood, Harrison Ford and George Rigas, those present from the dailies included Rose Pelswick, C. B. Davis, Harriet Underhill, Richard Watts, Jr., John Cohen, W. L. Waldorf, George Gerhard, Quinna Martin, Mildred Spain, Irene Thirer, Dorothy Herzog, Regina Cannon, Martin Dickstein, Eugene Kelcey Allen, Tom Kennedy, Motion Picture News; John Spargo, Exhibitors’ Herald; Robert E. Welsh, Moving Picture World; Abe Bernstein, Ex. Trade Review; Joe Dannenberg, Film Daily—and several others.

"That Royle Girl" will be a picturization of the Cosmopolitan magazine story written by Edwin Balmer. It is a drama of today in the Chicago jazz-zone.

MOVIES FROM THE ZOO

The Bronx Zoo is going in for movies. The authorities up there will present a series of exhibitions and daylight motion pictures showing portraying animal life for the benefit of children who remain in the city during the summer. The entertainments will be held in a tent to be erected in the southern part of the Zoo grounds. The series will be held under the supervision of Dr. W. Reid Blair, acting director of the Zoo. Animals that are docile enough to be handled will appear in person before the children, and there will be moving pictures of the others. The exhibitions will continue throughout the vacation season.

GATHERING THE TRIBES

Not since the Indian tribes swooped down on the Little Big Horn and massacred General Custer’s soldiers have there been so many Indians in one place as those gathered together by William K. Howard for the Paramount production, "The Vanishing American." The location is Kayenta, the Indian trading post on the Navajo reservation in Arizona. Ten thousand members of the Apache, Navajo, Hopi, Supuas, Havasupais and Wallapais tribes are facing the setting sun—rarin’ to go. It’s a certainty that Howard isn’t overlooking a single bet to record the life of the red man as Zane Grey wrote it.

searched. The desperadoes are cowboys picked up in the streets of New York. The men are good riders. In most of the stirring features of the drama the action is too quick. Men drop dead too suddenly when shot. All this is the result of poor acting, but the results are certainly astounding.
First National Gets Control of West Coast Theatres

Buys 70% Interest from Lesser and Gore Bros.

FIRST NATIONAL has acquired the controlling interest in West Coast Theatres, Inc., according to information obtained by Motion Picture News on Wednesday. The deal was finally settled at a meeting of First National officials with officials of West Coast in New York Tuesday night, July 7.

This means that First National, as a corporation, definitely enters the exhibition field, and foreshadows one of the most important developments in the history of the industry. Control of West Coast was obtained by the acquisition of the stock of Sol Lesser and Gore Brothers, which amounts to about seventy per cent.

It was reported that Adolph Ramish, the other principal partner, had sold his interest, approximately 30 per cent., to William Fox, but in some quarters it was said that this deal had not been consummated and might not be.

Purchase of the controlling interest in West Coast by First National was made, according to authority which Motion Picture News considers in every way reliable, by the levying of an assessment on the franchise holders, in the same manner in which pictures used to be purchased by the organization.

One of the developments, as a result of the West Coast deal, will be, it appears, the formation of a subsidiary corporation by First National for the acquisition of theatres.

While this has not been definitely determined upon, it would seem to be a logical outcome.

Some years ago, it will be recalled, Associated First National Theatres, Inc., was chartered for the same purpose, but this corporation, it is understood, was never actively employed in theatre acquisition.

In last week's issue Motion Picture News exclusively forecast the fact that First National was bidding for West Coast chain in competition with Fox. It was apparent then that strong pressure was being brought to bear on Sol Lesser by First National officials.

The First National viewpoint, it is understood, is this: in order to assure outlet for its product in the important West Coast territory, it was considered vitally necessary not to permit the West Coast chain control to go outside the First National ranks.

In other words, the competition among producer-distributors for strategic chains has now reached the point where First National considers it must enter directly, as a corporation, into the battle for theatre circuits.

Much the same situation was presented, it will be recalled, in the instance of the Gordon circuit in New England which was sold to Famous Players-Lasky. Nathan H. Gordon was an original First National franchise holder. The theatres went to Famous, although the New England franchise did not, but was absorbed by First National.

The entry of First National into theatre acquisition will obviously have a far-reaching effect on the exhibition situation. The producer-distributor was engaged in the theatre war are Famous Players-Lasky, First National, Metro-Goldwyn through Loew, Inc., Universal, Fox, and Warner Brothers.

The West Coast chain is dominant in Southern California. There are now 110 houses in the circuit and others are being added. This week, for example, Motion Picture News received the announcement of two real estate deals, consummated by West Coast and involving over $750,000, and the letting of contracts for two theatres in important suburban communities of Los Angeles.

One of these structures will rise at Mesa and Slanon, representing an investment of $550,000, divided as follows: $300,000 representing the cost of the building; ground value at $150,000, and building equipment representing $100,000. There will be large stores on the street level of this building, with commodious offices, apartments, and halls on the second floor. The theatre itself will be one of the most elaborate suburban show palaces in Southern California, with a 2,000 seating capacity, and the decorative motif, as well as the fixtures and other appointments, will be of the most modern design and construction. A stage capable of housing the largest variety and road attractions will be a feature of the playhouse. A huge orchestral organ will also be installed. Luxurious log seats is but another item of the costly equipment to be provided.

The contract for this building was let to Bartley and Gold.

At the intersection of Vermont and 87th Streets, a building with many splendid stores, as well as a large theatre, will be erected. This will be of semi-Spanish design, representing a total cost of approximately $250,000, and the contract for this structure was let to the Weso Construction Company. The theatre portion of the building calls for a 1,500 seating capacity, with luxurious loges, a modern orchestral pipe organ of tremendous volume, and a decorative scheme as elaborate as any house of its size on the Pacific Coast. This theatre will also have an enormous stage with capacity for presenting large road and vaudeville attractions, and the balance of the equipment will be of the most modern and latest improved type.

The negotiations call for the erection, equipment and operation of this edifice jointly by the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and the Southside Theatres, Inc., and the completed theatre will be under the personal local management of Ralph B. Grunauer, general manager of the latter organization, which also is now erecting a beautiful theatre at the intersection of Monta

Four Believed Dead in Kansas City Explosion

With the recovery of only three bodies from the ruins of the Gillis theatre, Kansas City, which was wrecked by an explosion last week, it is believed now that the total loss of life will be four, including a fireman who was killed in attempting to rescue others. Had the explosion occurred an hour later, when the midnight show would have started, the loss of life would have run into the hundreds.

Various theories are being investigated as to the cause of the explosion, one being that recent blasting on "Hobo" Hill near the theatre might have weakened the gas mains which entered the house. It has been rumored that gas was smelled in an adjoining restaurant basement on the afternoon of the explosion that night. Labor trouble also was advanced as a possible cause, but nothing logical has yet been run to earth.

In the meantime lawyers have flocked to court with suits, representing the victims of the disaster, the suits being filed against the city.

Rebuilding Berlin Theatre Destroyed by Fire

Work has been started on the construction of the Stern theatre in Berlin, a Ufa house destroyed by fire some time ago. The new building is to have a seating capacity of 1,600, almost double the size of the original theatre. It is planned to open the house in September.

Legal Battle Starts in Connecticut
Constitutionality of Tax Law Attacked at Hearing Being Held Before Three Federal Judges in New Haven

Independent Testimonial for Woodhull

PRESIDENT R. F. WOODHULL of the M. P. T. O. A. was tendered a testimonial in the form of a resolution at the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey last week that was highly pleasing to him. It was presented by Frederick H. Elliott, general manager of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America in behalf of that organization.

The resolution beautifully engrossed on parchment and bound in a gold-engraved, leather portfolio was a pledge of loyalty and cooperation to Woodhull and his organization by the independent producers, distributors and exchanges.

The document carried the seals of the Independent Association and the M. P. T. O. A. artistically done in water colors and was signed by the officers of the association. It also bore a list of the entire membership of the organization.

(1) That shipment of film is interstate and therefore not subject to taxation by a State.
(2) That the statute, it is contended, deprives a citizen of property without due process of law. It is also set forth in the complaints that certain powers given the Tax Commissioner do not constitute censorship enforceable by the state police power. The United States Supreme Court ruled some years ago that film censorship was a legitimate exercise of police power. In the Connecticut case, however, the industry contends that the law does not provide censorship in conformity with the Supreme Court decision, but is wholly arbitrary. No censorship standards are provided.

The Tax Commissioner, under the law, has the right to revoke the license of any film which he deems improper for showing in the State, but he does not review the film when it enters the State. Instead it is registered, then licensed and the fee paid after the film can then be shown, thereafter the license may be revoked and the fee retained by the State.

(3) It is further set forth in the complaint that the tax charged bears no reasonable relation to the value of the property taxed, which therefore constitutes undue discrimination. Regardless of the cost of the picture, a tax of $10 a reel on every reel of 1,000 feet or less and an additional tax of 50 cents on each hundred feet in excess of 1,000, are charged.

Editorial opinion in Connecticut newspapers is opposed to the law, according to officials of the Hays organization, who told trade press representatives that editorialists in twenty different newspapers had already been received, and not one was favorable to the law.

Thought is being given by the Hays organization to withdrawing from film distribution in Connecticut in case the law is sustained in the courts. In this connection, it was pointed out that Connecticut represents less than two per cent of the gross intake of the industry.

The industry's contentsions in the Connecticut case were outlined to the trade press men at the Monday conference in the Hays offices by Gabriel L. Hess and Charles C. Petito, of the M. P. T. O. A. legal staff.

June Charters Establish Record

Amount of Capital Invested is Believed to Exceed That of Any Other Month

New York State again leads in the number of companies chartered, and, as usual, Delaware heads the list with regard to the amount of capital. The New York charters numbered 57, a decrease of 40 over May. The Delaware charters, totaling 25, listed $26,555,000. Below will be found a complete analysis of corporate activity for the month past, by States:

units second and distribution third. There were 66 theater companies chartered, 30 to produce, 11 distributing organizations and 26 miscellaneous. The latter group includes a comingman’s club, music companies, really corporate holding companies, supply dealers, exporters, camera brokers, publicity agents, program dealers, booking agents, financing organizations and other lines. The following table shows how the three largest branches of the industry were represented in the June incorporation list:

Quotes Exhibitors In Praise Of Arbitration

Files Open To Justice Dept., Says Pettijohn

CHARLES C. PETTJIJOHN, general counsel of the Film Boards of Trade, this week virtually threw down the gauntlet to the critics of the Arbitration System. In a conference with trade paper representatives, held on Monday at the Hays offices in New York, Mr. Pettijohn announced that the files of the Hays offices, as well as those of six Film Boards, had been thrown open to the Department of Justice in the investigation which the latter is conducting into the operation of the Boards.

It was also made known to the trade paper men that Mr. Pettijohn recently sent a letter to the Film Boards instructing them to get the unbiased opinions of three or four representative exhibitors in each of the 32 zones on what they thought of Arbitration and the workings of the Film Boards.

Responses had already been received from 75 or 80 of these exhibitors, which Hays ors, and only a small minority were unfavorable to Arbitration as it now exists. The letter was sent out, Mr. Pettijohn stated, with the full knowledge and approval of the Department of Justice.

The originals of the exhibitor letters were shown to the trade paper reporters, and they were permitted to make excerpts from them. The names of the exhibitors are withheld because officials of the Hays organization thought it would not be fair to publish them, as the exhibitors had not been informed that the letters were for publication.

The reporters examined the letters in detail however, and were invited to ask any questions they pleased. The excerpts printed below were copied from the originals shown to the reporters.

Present at the Monday conference, which is being held weekly by the Hays organization for the convenience of the trade press in obtaining authentic news of the M. P. P. D. A.'s activities, were Courtland Smith, secretary of the organization; Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the Film Boards; Burt New, of the Exhibitor Statistical Bureau, recently formed by the Hays organization; Joseph J. O'Neill, of the Hays staff; Mr. Pettijohn, and the trade paper men.

Discussing the matter generally, and in reply to questions, Mr. Pettijohn declared that 95% of the exhibitors think the arbitration system is "a great institution." He produced the letters from theatre owners to substantiate his remarks.

He also said that while 50 vacancies had occurred in the distributor membership of the Arbitration Boards for various causes, not one exhibitor in the United States had ever resigned from an Arbitration Board. He cited this in proof of his assertion that exhibitors, by an overwhelming majority, are for the present arbitration system.

It was also announced that an Arbitration Board had been set up in Charleston, Va., for the convenience of exhibitors, despite the fact that Charleston is not an exchange center. This was done at the request of theatre owners, it was stated.

Arbitration hearings are also being alternated between Memphis and Little Rock in that territory, for convenience of exhibitors.

Further expansion of the Film Boards is being planned in Canada, Mexico and Cuba. In the Dominion, there are now two Boards in operation, one at Montreal and the other at Toronto. Four more will be established, so that the six Canadian film zones will be completely covered.

Excerpts from the exhibitor letters on Arbitration and the Film Boards, copies of which have been sent to the Department of Justice by Mr. Pettijohn, follow:

"In all the cases that were taken up before the Board while I was a member, while 95 per cent of the cases were decided in favor of the distributor, I feel that the exhibitors were also very fair in deciding these cases impartially. There are so many angles to our business and so many controversies that come up from time to time between exhibitor and distributor that this is the only known method that I know of, where these matters can be taken care of."

"I will say that I don't think a hell of a lot of it. It seems to me, from my personal observation, that it is becoming an enforcement, as well as a collective agency.

"Where a man is oversold on price or quantity, the Arbitration Board should have the privilege of adjusting prices and sealing the number of pictures down to what is reasonable and fair."

"1. How has it affected the exchanges? It has put their work upon a definite basis which enables them to count upon the playing of all pictures for which they have the proper contracts with the exhibitors. It has led to the prompt playing of pictures bought for the reason that exhibitors have felt that they must live up to their agreements. It has given the exchanges a force which can be applied to the unfair exhibitors in that a great many exhibitors do not desire the publicity of being brought before their brother exhibitors for unfair methods and breaches of contract. It has also called to the attention of exchange managers, the unethical and sometimes dishonest method used by salesmen with the result that there is a better class of salesmen in this territory than before the coming of the Board.

"2. How has it affected the exhibitors? The greatest benefit I have noted is that it has ended the practice of so many exhibitors of over-buying either through ignorance or the desire to sew up the product in a particular town. It has led to more business-like methods upon the part of exhibitors in keeping their contracts and important papers and in keeping some idea as to their obligations and responsibilities. It has enabled the small exhibitor, who formerly had little redress against a large producer or distributor, to have his complaints heard and adjusted as the equities and justice of the case required. In the past this would have meant expensive and long-delayed legal action for him.

"3. How has it affected the industry as a whole in this territory? I believe that it has been of great good in smoothing out all sorts of difficulties and in the promotion of better feeling between exhibitors and exchanges. As I understand it, it has been a good thing from many angles and I favor its continuance."

"I do not hesitate to give my unqualified approval to the work that has been and is being done by our efficient organization. I am sure that this medium of solving the exhibitors and distributors problems is the only feasible and fair method of arbitration.

"It is my opinion that the Arbitration Board of Film Board is just this Judge and jury—setting all cases to their own satisfaction. It is an illegal combine in restraint of trade and should be handled as any other violation of the law, both criminally and civilly.

"Personally I think it is a Godsend to the Film Industry and the fight is gradually breaking in on those who yet have to realize that times have changed, and that fairness in the Film business is coming into its own through the medium of the Arbitration Boards.

"The members of the Joint Boards of Arbitration have been very fair-minded and have been a real help in adjusting what otherwise might have proved to be a serious situation.

"It is a real pleasure for me to reply to your letter and assure you that my experience with the above mentioned Board has absolutely convinced me that they are acting without any partiality between exhibitor and film Exchanges, and with an absence of any political influence to govern their service in any way.

"On Arbitration in this zone, will say that I believe that it has been for some time past, and is now being carried out fairly, impartially and successfully and functioning to the best interest of the majority.

"It has been the opinion of the organization every since these Boards were established that they had filled a long felt want, and had brought about a feeling of friendliness and good will between the exhibitor and the distributor, which was sadly lacking for many years.

"From what I hear from the other exhibitors who have attended the board meetings it is my impression that the board functions with great success locally at least.

"I believe that the Arbitration Board in this district has been working for the good of both the exhibitors and exchanges, and that the work of this board has saved money for both interests. This idea is based on my knowledge that litigation in court is very expensive and very tedious, and practically all of the troubles in our trade have been and can be settled before the Board of Arbitration.

"Arbitration is in my opinion one of the great steps in the advancement of the moving picture industry.

"It is my opinion that the Joint Board of Arbitration is a real, concrete, real work in the industry in this State and from my experience and observation it is my opinion that all representatives on this Board have been conscientious and fair in their decisions on claims presented to them.

"As you know, I have been a member of the Arbitration Board since its birth, and I can truthfully say that every case has been handled in an honest and just manner by the arbitrators. This Board has its drawbacks, but with the cooperation of the Film Board of Trade I am sure that these difficulties can be ironed out to everyone's satisfaction.

"You will no doubt recall your requesting my opinion as to what I think of the functioning of the Film Board of Trade and the Joint Board of Arbitration.

"Both of these organizations have been a great help in alleviating some very trying situations which the writer had thought were due to remain with the film business forever, inasmuch as all previous attempts to put matters on a business-like basis had failed.

"The spirit of cooperation and a desire to do some real, constructive work for both the Exchanges and the theatre owners, I am happy to say, seems to be the controlling factor in both of the above organizations.

"The Joint Board of Arbitration has been functioning very effectively and satisfactorily and is doing a great work in adjusting the relations between the distributors and exhibitors at a tremendous financial saving in avoiding the law courts as well as effecting more amicable settlements of disputes between the distributors and exhibitors.

"It has been my experience, and I have served on the Arbitration Board occasionally, that every facility is offered for fair adjustment of disputes between distributors and exhibitors, and that in cases in which exhibitors complained against appear in person the Board's value is inestimable in bettering the relationship between the contending parties.

"I believe that the Arbitration Board of the Film Board of Trade, from my personal experience and observation during the time it has been functioning in this territory, has done more to bring the distributor and exhibitor closer together and settling many grievances without going to court and saving considerable expense to all parties concerned.

"The functioning of the Board of Arbitration in this territory is an absolute necessity. Conserving time, expense, good will, with its findings generally promptly accepted, and not to my knowledge has there been an appeal to a Court of Law in the past year.

"The Film Board of Arbitration is now in step with like practice in other big business.

"It has been a pleasure indeed to have sacrificed from business whatever time has been necessary at these joint meetings and it has been the source of considerable information as well. If there has been any adverse criticism of the actions or decisions of the local board, I feel quite safe in saying that it has been made by those who are misinformed.

"In reply to your request for my opinion of the Film Board of Arbitration, I wish to state that I believe it is fulfilling a good purpose. I believe that Exchangesmen as well as exhibitors serving on this Board have given fair and impartial decisions on all questions brought before them.

"Let me congratulate the Arbitration Board in the theatre work that they are doing by bringing together a more pleasant as well as a business like feeling between exhibitor and exchange man.

"Having served four years, I am pleased to say that my associates on the Arbitration Board were fair, capable and conscientious in the decisions rendered to both exhibitor and exchange.

"The exchangesmen, in my opinion, have been more than fair in giving the exhibitors a square deal. As a whole, the Arbitration Board is constructive and an evolution and step for higher business ethics and better understanding and relationship between the exhibitors, producers and exchange men, independent or otherwise.

"The cost of the Board is paid by the exchanges voluntarily with none asked from the exhibitor. Exchanges push creations of these boards. Therefore, it would be to the benefit of all and benefit them and be worth the cost. Few, very few, of the exhibitor complaints, many just and right, ever come before the boards, as the distance and trouble and the natural personal inclinations prevent this. Exchanges do not use the Board as much as they do the bluff of getting an exhibitor on the carpet and it is an expense to have to go before them. Therefore, the Exhibitor usually across in fine shape and the Board never hears of it.

"My candid judgment is that the whole matter is a farce, and ought to be abolished, letting each man fight his own battle. If we had a State organization it might be otherwise. I have never been up or threatened, and so my opinion is unbiased. I have every respect for you and your associates, but I cannot see the real need for your board.

"First, I believe that it is a poor man's court, an exhibitor's court, where justice is done between the parties in which each is equally represented.

"Second, It is the most inexpensive way of settling disputes of which I know and has saved the exhibitor many hundreds of dollars when considered from the standpoint of what it might have cost him to take these matters to court and to have them decided in any other manner.

"Third, It has never been necessary to call in a seventh arbitrator although both sides are equally represented.

"Fourth, At no time has an unfair advantage been taken of either party with reference to the particular dispute they have submitted their sides in a manner at which they can set forth all of the facts without employing outside assistance such as attorneys or other.

"I have been in the exhibiting end of the moving picture business for a period covering over nine years and have seen it in all of its stages, and I can truthfully state, from a private capacity, and also as exhibitor member of the Board of Arbitration that it has been a means of salvation for both.
Greater Movie Season Spirit Spreads Over Country

$50,000 Is Assured for New York Campaign

Fifty thousand dollars for the New York Greater Movie Season campaign.

Marens Loew elected chairman of the executive committee with Joseph Plunkett, managing-director of the Mark Strand Theatre, and Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, as his principal aides.

Wells Hawks appointed general manager in charge of local activities. These were the salient results of the final meeting between nationally important figures in the exhibiting field and Will H. Hays, president of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., who inaugurated the August drive. Greater Movie Season will be celebrated enthusiastically throughout Greater New York beginning August 2nd.

By the middle of July the New York campaign will be in full swing, building by billboards, newspapers and commercial cooperation into August when the largest parade the motion picture industry has yet staged is planned as a monster demonstration of film activities not only as applied to general amusement but also in their relation to civic and industrial welfare. As a first step Mr. Hawks has summoned a meeting of publicity men and theatre executives to departmentalize his campaign, while Messrs. Loew, Plunkett and O'Reilly of the executive committee attend to the necessary budgetting and financing, which will be on a prorate basis in accordance with theatre capacity and admission charges.

Working on the foundation of the Hays office has established during the past three months, and with the tide of the civic, industrial and social organizations that have endorsed the movement centrally located in New York, the Greater New York campaign is looked to as an outstanding feature of the national season.

Four hundred theatres throughout Michigan are embraced in the drive that H. M. Richey, general manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., is conducting. When the national movement was considered originally, Mr. Richey proposed a campaign under which his organization would have 100% active participation. That Mr. Richey has more than fulfilled his promise is evidenced by the proportions the Michigan drive has reached, through the efforts he has put behind it.

The Greater Movie Season contest is being made a statewide affair; full newspaper cooperation has been secured; while general business concerns, joining in, have given Greater Movie Season the significance of a Michigan trade exposition. Proclamations from the Mayor of Detroit and mayors of other important cities will commend the season to the public.

The Fabian circuit in New Jersey stands aligned with the national plan, A. M. Fabian has informed Mr. Hays.

The Fabian circuit consists of fifteen important houses, including the Branford Theatre, Newark and the Regent Theatre, Patterson. The campaign will cover Newark, Patterson, Passaic, Elizabeth, Ridgewood, Popont Lakes and Butler.

An active campaign is progressing in Atlantic City under the general-manership of Edward J. O'Keefe; while Camden and Trenton, with their zones, are embraced in the Philadelphia operations.

Meanwhile reports from many centers show a widening scope of the national drive.

Syracuse exhibitors unanimously endorsed and accepted the plan at a meeting that appointed the following officials:

Walter McDowell, Strand Theatre, general manager; Dave Harrison, Empire Theatre, treasurer, to work in conjunction with Mr. McDowell in collecting the assessments levied on the many theatres; Cliff Lewis, Strand interests, and Mitchel Fitz, Rivoli, to handle publicity and advertising.

The city will be divided into zones, each in charge of a captain to collect the allotments in his respective territory. A budget of $2,000 was passed at the first meeting and $1,200 was immediately raised among those present. This money to be spent in billboards, newspaper advertising and novelties, will allow local exhibitors a campaign of far reaching possibilities.

The Orpheum Theatre, Scottsbluff, Nebraska, and its five allied theatres will pool resources for the drive, according to a communication from John C. Ingram of the Orpheum; while Jake Wells and Harry Bernstein of Richmond, Va., are outlining newspapers and the various civic community clubs to carry the movement successfully through the state of Virginia.

C. S. Jensen, who has been elected general manager of the Portland, Oregon, season is working in cooperation with J. Von Herberg, conducting the Seattle drive, to link both cities and share costs of the major features that include the attendance of screen stars at movie balls to be held in Portland and Seattle.

With Boston to set the pace, a dozen other New England centers have inaugurated local drives. The Connecticut River, Miss. has Nate Vannin of the Rialto Theatre, as general manager; Lawrence J. Dinenc of the Modern Theatre, Haverhill; A. C. Bouge of the Strand Theatre, Lowell; San Torgan, Strand Theatre, Providence; Theodore B. Baylies, Worcester; Elmer Daniels, Olympia Theatre. In Rhode Island A. C. Emery of the Majestic Theatre, will conduct the Providence campaign, with Harry Horgan of the Opera House, Newport, and Ben Durbin of the Park Theatre, Woonsocket, as general managers in their respective zones.

A complete survey of the field shows that 70 cooperative campaigns are in active operation with 2,745 theatres cooperating.

A budget of $5,000 for preliminary expenses of the Greater Movie Season campaign in Kansas and Missouri has been arranged by R. R. Biechele, president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas-Missouri; Bruce Fowler, manager of the Newman theatre; Jack Roth, manager of the Isis theatre, and Dave Biechele, manager of the Capitol theatre.

An extensive poster display, which will be followed by newspaper advertising, has been planned. A merchant cooperative campaign is planned for Kansas City, under the direction of Jay Means, vice-president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas-Missouri.

Members of the Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O., of New York, following the refusal of local exchanges to defray one third of the cost of putting over the Greater Movie Season project, have turned down the plan, so that the organization will not become the Movie Season. At the recent meeting of the Zone it was decided to get behind the plan if the distributors will come through with a third of the costs and a communication was sent to the exchanges asking if they would be willing to do this. The exchanges refused.

However most of the leading downtown exhibitors held a meeting and decided to go ahead with the campaign themselves. A. Beckerich, manager of the Loew State, was named chairman. The following are among the exhibitors and houses which signed up at the meeting: Walter Hays, Victoria; Vincent R. Macaul, Shea's Hippodrome; M. Schinkin and Fred M. Shaffer, Lafayette Square; William Dillenmuth, Broadway Lyceum; J. H. Michael, Regent; F. Novak, Lincoln; Barney Vonwinkle, Oriole; Jake Rappaport, Lovejoy, and X. Vasiliadis, Clinton Strand. The exhibitors subscribed liberally to the fund.

Mayor William E. Dever and Governor Len Small will be asked by a committee of Chicago motion picture exhibitors, business men, ministers, civic and welfare leaders, to promote the month of August, "Chicagov Movie Season Month," to help bring before the public the value of the screen as an instrument of uplift and education, as well as its worth as an agency of building business in general.

This was decided upon at a mass meeting
Greater Movie Season Spirit Spreads

of Chicago exhibitors, called by Ralph T. Kettering, general manager of the Chicago campaign, at Ridge Hall, 7th street and Wabash avenue, where plans to celebrate the twenty-ninth anniversary of motion pictures were outlined.

Under present plans, an industrial parade showing the various commodities manufactured and distributed in Chicago, will be held on Aug. 1. To delight the hearts of the exhibitors, there will be shown patriotic music, animated advertisements and floats. The parade will be headed by the "King and Queen" of the movies, who will be chosen by a popular contest from men and women living in Chicago.

That Seattle motion picture patrons will be offered the finest entertainment in the history of the city during the Greater Movie Season, beginning on August 1, was indicated last week following the first meeting of the exhibitors of that territory to make plans for the observance of this national occasion. In addition to the finest films, motion picture houses both downtown in the city and in the outlying districts will offer elaborate programs consisting of entertainment and musical specialties. Publicity for the Season has already begun in Seattle newspapers.

Under the direction of Mr. John G. Von Herberg of the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit, a number of committees have already begun work on plans for the celebration of the event. These committees include the following: Finance, Frank Edwards, Winter Garden Theatre, chairman; Publicity and advertising, H. C. Raleigh, First National Pictures Corporation, chairman; Outdoor committee, E. C. Bostick, Pantages Theatre, chairman; Decorations, Charles W. McKee, Hellsing Theatre, chairman; General committee, John Hamrick, president of the M. P. O. W., Blue Mouse circuit of theatres, chairman.

Further assurance that local exhibitors will put over a brilliant Greater Movie Season was given at the first regular meeting of the Atlanta committee held Tuesday afternoon. At every other meeting the program was repeated, and those representatives came with cash in hand, totaling nearly $3,000, subscribed at preliminary meetings.

Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Metropolitan theater and chairman of the Atlanta committee presided. Present at the meeting were Howard Wangh, manager of the Howard theater and chairman of the committee's board of directors; George W. Allison, manager of the Fox Film Corporation; the treasurer; Alpha Fowler, manager of the Palace theater, J. L. Man Park, the secretary; Earl Griffin, Universal publicity director, who is in charge of publicity for the committee; J. J. Franklin, district supervisor for the Motion Picture Exchange, Inc.; Ralph B. Willhite, manager of the Universal exchange; Dave Prince, manager of the Paramount exchange; W. T. Murray, manager of the Rialto theatre; James Jackson, manager of the Tudor theatre; Thomas H. James, manager of Loew's Grand theatre, Thomas G. Coleman, manager of the Cameo theatre; Sol Samuels, proprietor of the Alpha theatre; E. L. Cole, secretary of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade; and Matt Whitham, manager of the Aloma No. 2.

Berlin's 317 Film Theatres Seat 123,902

The 317 motion picture theatres now operating in the city of Berlin provide a total seating capacity of 123,902, and it is estimated that this number will be greatly increased during the year, when it is expected several new big theatres will be constructed. Among these will be the 2,000 seat house which Phoebus will open in the Neukoln district. This company through its consolidation with the B. S. P. C., now controls 16 theatres in Germany.

Of the theatres now operating 69 have a capacity of 150 to 200; 200 have a capacity of 200 to 250; and 14 have 1,000 or more seats.

Michigan Body to Elect New President This Week

Following a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, during the past week, it was voted to elect the present manager to succeed Henderson M. Richey, until this week. Richey leaves to become manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America with offices in New York. W. S. McLean of Jackson has been mentioned as a possible successor.

Famous Players Has 358 Theatres in United States, 10 Abroad, Says Shauer

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY now owns or has a controlling interest in 358 theatres in the United States and ten abroad, according to E. E. Shauer, head of the Paramount foreign department, who recently sailed on the Aquitania. Mr. Shauer's statement was made to THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, which quoted him as follows:

"Famous Players is doing an excellent business. We now either own or have a controlling interest in 358 theatres scattered throughout the United States. This gives us an enormous distribution field. We have ten theatres abroad and are constantly adding to that number. We recently bought the Vaudeville Theatre in Paris, which is one of the most famous in the world. It is one block from the Opera and costs us about $25,000 francs. It will be changed so that it is very much like the best class of American movie theatres. We are building two theatres in London, one called the Paramount Theatre, which will be ready in the fall. That is near Piccadilly Circus, and is costing us about $250,000.

"There is a tremendous increase in film distribution throughout the world, and we are now supplying films in increasing volume to practically every country in the world."
Samuel Goldwyn Joins United Artists

Fitzmaurice and King Productions Will Add $2,000,000 to Program for the Coming Season

Gleichman Files Appeal in Suit Against Famous

PHIL GLEICHMAN has filed suit for appeal in the supreme court at Lansing in his suit against Famous Players for breach of contract, which was lost by him in a lower court several weeks ago. It is not expected that the case will be heard before January, 1926.

"With Samuel Goldwyn's prestige in the industry and his experience in all the phases and problems of film production, I am happy to welcome him into the United Artists Corporation organization."

Samuel Goldwyn took occasion to voice his satisfaction with the new arrangement in confirming the announcement of his entrance under the United Artists Corporation banner.

"My production program for the coming year will be the greatest of my career as a producer, and will measure up in every way to the high standard set by United Artists Corporation in the past," said Goldwyn.

"If I were not certain of their standing on their own merits as individual successes, I would not have joined."

"We will spend over $2,000,000 this year in George Fitzmaurice and Henry King productions. My first two selections, 'Stella Dallas' and 'The Garden of Allah,' are indications of the pretentiousness of the others to follow. Both in expenditure and production scope the coming year's program will be the biggest of my career as an independent producer."

Rapid Changes In Theatre Circuits

New York Neighborhood Theatres Make Shift—Famous Players Leases House in South and West—New Corporation in San Diego—Emery Amusement Company Becomes Controlling Interest in Rhode Island

One of the largest shifts in theatre circuits in New York City, affecting approximately thirty motion picture theatres, took place this week when Rosenweig and Katz sold a third interest in ten of their Brooklyn houses, to Mayer & Schneider. Mayer & Schneider have also purchased outright the Florence and a third interest in the New Delanay, both of the Allwon circuit.

Booking for the twenty theatres under Mayer and Schneider and Rosenweig and Katz will be done jointly by Al Goldberg of the M. & S. circuit and Dave Rosenweig of R. & K., Mr. Rosenweig handling the Brooklyn end and Mr. Goldberg taking care of New York.

Dave Rosenweig is also the authority for a statement that they will close a deal this week for four more theatres in New York City and that they will soon announce the purchase of a piece of property in Harlem in the neighborhood of 110th Street, where they will erect a 2,500 seat theatre. By the end of the year it is predicted that forty local theatres will be controlled by this combination.

Jعالnach as Mayer & Schneider will come in on the executive board of the Allwon circuit, it is further predicted that Allwon will in all probability combine their booking with the M. & S. and R. & K. circuits.

The theatres affected are the Clinton, Royal, Odeon, Palace, Waco, Majestic, New Law, Delanay, and New Strand, under M. & S.; in New York, the Beverly, Levittors, City Line, Sheridan, Ozone Park, Culver, Adelphi, Concord, Norwood, Our Civic and Kinema (near completion) under R. & S., in Brooklyn. The remaining theatres in the Allwon circuit are the Atlantic Gardens, Golden Rule, Sunshine, Avenue A, New 14th St., and Casino.

Famous-Players’ activities in the acquisition of theatres continues, having taken a twenty year lease on a $250,000 theatre to be immediately constructed on the corner of North Tryon and Sixth Sts., Charlotte, N. C. The seating capacity will be about 1,700. It is also reported that Famous-Players will take over the Alhambra at Ogden, Utah, Abe Glassman is the present owner.

At San Diego, Calif., Bush Theatres, Inc., is the title of a new corporation whose papers have been filed, with G. A. Bush, Ken. Bush, and E. W. S. Debur, all of whom have been connected with the Bush Theatres for some years. The capital of the corporation is placed at $250,000.00. The corporation is operating the Kinema Theatre in Escondido, the Silver Strand in Coronado and the Vista in East San Diego. The Superba, heretofore controlled by the Bush interests, is now being operated by the National Theatres.

The Emery Amusement Company of Providence, R. I., owner of three theatres in that city, has increased its holdings, it has bought the Modern and Capital theatres, thereby becoming the dominating theatrical interest in Rhode Island.

Max Nathanson, whose entire theatre holdings pass into the hands of the Emery combine, will retire permanently from the local field. In addition to closing out his interests in the two houses, Mr. Nathanson also disposes to the company of all the interest he held as a stockholder in the Emery Amusement Company. He will maintain however, interests in other theatres he owns about the State.

The Modern theatre will undergo extensive alterations during the summer. It is understood that the life of the house so far as pictures is concerned is over. It will be devoted to the legitimate.

In the acquisition of the two houses, A. C. Emery, general manager of the Emery Amusement Company, plans to raise the standard of at least one of the houses. The Emery, devoted to second run pictures and vaudeville, will run first run pictures of the highest order.

The present policy of exhibiting second run pictures at popular prices will continue at the Capitol.

Only one change will take place in the personnel of the Emery Company, Matthew J. Reilly, now manager of the Emery-Majestic, will take over the management of the Modern, and Sol Bramig, manager of the Modern since Mr. Nathanson acquired it, will join the Emery company staff and manage the Emery-Majestic. Martin R. Toohey, assistant treasurer of the company, will be production manager and have charge of the Emery theatre. He will continue also, to represent the Emery interests in the Leroy at Pawtucket. William J. Mahoney will remain in charge of the Rialto and Walter Part in the managership of the Capitol.

Roger Ferris will continue to direct the publicity of the five houses.
Seider Replies to Beatty
Head of Jersey M. P. T. O. Discusses Rejection of "Greater Movie Season"

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey, this week issued a statement in reply to comments made last week by Jerome Beatty on the organization's decision not to participate in "Greater Movie Season." Mr. Seider said: "Mr. Jerome Beatty misunderstands the action taken by this organization in relation to the Greater Movie Season as proposed by the Hoyts organization. We are not opposed to the Greater Movie Season idea. We maintain, however, that it would be inadvisable for the theatre owner to participate in the plan as proposed and at the present time.

"In order to have a Greater Movie Season we must have the goods. The pictures must meet the expectations of the public. "We feel a production, such as this, involving the patronage of the movie-going public, should be handled, from its inception, by the theatre owner—the man in contact with the patron.

"To start theatre owners only the good pictures of next year's release will be available. And yet the theatre must take all the financial risk. He will pay big picture prices with only a depleted population to draw from. It cannot be disputed that a good portion of a city's population migrates in the summer to cooler climes. "We do understand that the theatre owner is not expected to pay one per cent of his receipts in the form of lease to the Hoyts organization. The proposition as presented to us involved our joining a group for a concerted effort in promoting this movement. We were to individually undertake the expense involved, to be met by our contributing one per cent of our receipts during the month of August. The money thus raised to pay for posters, slides, newspaper advertising, publicity stunts and the publicity staff engaged by the Hoyts Organization.

"Since we have to pay the freight, New Jersey has decided to carry out the Greater Movie Season Idea in its own way—"in zones—and in seasons best suited for the zones. The theatre owner is fundamentally a showman. Exploitation is the business of the exhibitor. Greater Movie Season is nothing more than an exploitation idea, to be carried by the theatre owner to the public. The producer advertises and publicizes. The exhibitor exploits. The theatre is best qualified to promote this movement, with the assistance of all distributors and their publicity staffs so as to obtain the desired result for all concerned, the public—the producer and distributor—the theatre owner.

"It is to be regretted that Mr. Beatty did not attend our convention. Had he done so he would have afforded the opportunity to address us. He would have heard, first hand, our objections. "A vote was taken only after every theatre owner in the Convention Hall spoke on the subject, and when the vote was taken the roll was called and each member voted either yes, no, or passed. The vote was unanimous in rejecting the Greater Movie Season plan as submitted."

New Jersey Officers to Meet July 28th
Following the convention at Asbury Park, the first meeting of the newly elected officers and directors of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey, will be held aboard a boat leaving Tom's River, N. J., on July 28th. On the night of the 27th they will be entertained by the Kiwanis Club of Tom's River and President Joseph Seider will make an address. Of their stay at Tom's River, Director I. M. Hirschblond will be their host.

No M-G Theatres for Britain, Says Jury; Warner Discusses Plans

TWO important pronouncements were made in London recently on the subject of American film extension abroad by American concerns. The first was from Sir William Jury, head of Jury-Metro-Goldwyn, Ltd., and endorsed by J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn and now in Europe. The second came from Albert Warner, of Warner Brothers.

Sir William, at a luncheon given in London in honor of Mr. Rubin and E. B. Hatrick, of Cosmopolitan Productions, is quoted as having said: "You have my assurance that we are not building or acquiring any theatres in London. I will be no party to building, but if anyone else does it in the country, we shall have to protect ourselves. My aim and work is distribution and not theatres."

"Mr. Rubin declared that Metro-Goldwyn stood back of Sir William's statement. "We do not want to enter into any competition with you," said Mr. Rubin, "We only want an outlet for our product and have no intention whatever of acquiring theatres in this country."

The statement issued in London by Mr. Warner declared that theatres planned by him for London, Paris and Berlin, future "shop-windows". He continued: "By shop windows, I mean a theatre in London, one in Paris and another in Berlin for instance, for the proper popularizing of the Warner productions. It won't be for profits in the theatres, and it won't mean competing with the exhibitors. "If Warners ever enter the theatre field in Europe, their activities will be confined solely to such big centres, and they will run theatres for the exhibitor not against him. If you have a high-class product that runs into say, fifty pictures a year, you must do something to sell them to the public. These 'shop windows' theatres may, on paper, lose money because of heavy advertising and exploitation overhead costs."

Wisconsin to Discuss Arbitration
NE of the main issues that will come up at the annual convention of the Wisconsin M.P.T.O. in August will be the Wisconsin arbitration system, recently attacked as being unfair to the small exhibitors.

Fred Seegert, state unit president, has admitted that a number of complaints have been received from exhibitors regarding the present working of the arbitration board.

The arbitration question and a proposed convention contract and officers' elections are arousing keen interest in the convention, which is set for August 25th and 26th at Milwaukee.

New Companies Chartered for New York Business
This week's motion picture companies, chartered by the secretary of state, included the following, the names of the directors and the amount of capitalization, where specified, being given: Capital Producers Exporting Co., Inc., $10,000, with Helen Abrams, Joseph Schron, Louis Agost, New York city; G. R. Film Co., Inc., $10,000, Thora M. Slaner, Ruth Handres, Samuel Sopelmin, New York city.

Shone Amendment Co., Inc., $35,000, Joseph and L. A. Buona, F. Straniere, Brooklyn; Family Theatre, Inc., $5,000, I. C. Flint, J. Angello, Abraham Mailman, Utica. In addition to these, the Paramount Theatre Managers Training School incorporated with Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and Harold B. Franklin as directors and with Charles E. Hawthorne, Ralph A. Kohn and Aldly Reichenbach, all of New York city as stockholders.

Hansen Made President of Detroit Film Board
Oscar W. Hansen of Pathe's Detroit branch, has been elected president of Detroit Film Board of Trade for the coming year. Jack Saxe of the Favorite Film company is the new vice president, while David Palffyman was re-elected secretary. Art Elliott, F. B. O., is treasurer. Frank Drew, Fred North and Jack Young will comprise the new arbitration board while Drew and Otto Bolle will serve as directors with the newly elected officers.

Arrested Eighth Time for Blue Law Violation
Mrs. Mae Zimmerman, exhibitor of Cumberland, Wis., continuing her attack against the reformers of her town, has been arrested for the eighth time for violation of the Sunday closing law. Appealing from a Supreme Court ruling, Mrs. Zimmerman has asked Governor Blaine that the "blue law" be repealed or modified or impartially enforced throughout the state.

Keith Cleveland House Books Pictures
The Keith Palace, a 3,000 seat house of Cleveland, formerly devoted exclusively to vaudeville has changed its policy, effective July 5th, to include pictures. This is the first time pictures have ever been played in the house.
Errol and Rork the Honor Guests of A. M. P. A.

A number of celebrities were in attendance at the regular weekly luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers held at the White Horse Tavern last Thursday, with Leon Errol, musical comedy and picture star, and Sam Rork, producer, as the guests of honor. Errol is now making "Clothes Make the Pirate," being produced by Rork.

The comedian was at his best when called upon for a talk by Walter Ebershardt, secretary of the A. M. P. A. Rork made it a condition of his appearance there he would not be called upon for a speech.

MISS LINA BASQUETTE, premier dancer of the Ziegfeld Follies, and Samuel L. Warner, vice-president of the Bros., were married Saturday night, July 4th, at the home of Rev. Dr. Nathan Drass, in New York. Matley T. Plint was Mr. Warner’s best man. Only a few intimate friends, including Mr. and Mrs. Robert Katz, L. Asher and Barney Sobel, were present at the wedding.

Mrs. Warner was born in San Mateo, Cal., and received her training as a dancer from her step-father, Ernest Belcher. For more than five years she was a child star in Universal Pictures, appearing in "The Caravan," "Romany Rose," "A Dream of Egypt," and other features. She made her debut in the "Follies" in New York two years ago.

Hays Organization Creates Exhibitor Statistical Bureau

The creation of an important new department devoted to Exhibitor Statistical Information was announced this week by the Hays organization. Burt New, of Indiana, who has had wide experience in handling organization matters in other fields, has been added to the Hays staff to head the department.

Statistical work on the number of picture theatres is being gathered through the Secretaries of the Film Boards of Trade. It was stated that lists already received contain the names of 12,000 theatres and officials of the Hays organization believe the number will run over 16,000.

A thorough compilation of exhibitor statistics is a vital necessity in the industry," Courtland Smith, secretary of the Hays organization, explained to representatives of the trade press. "We must know the facts and have them available in defensive work and in the interest of exhibitors themselves."

The survey directed by Mr. New is designed to be comprehensive in every way. Information will be gathered not only on the number of theatres, but on seating capacity, admission prices, and other items of importance.

It is scheduled to keep the lists up-to-date by having the Film Board secretaries send in new lists every month.

William A. Johnson, editor of Motion Picture News, who was present at the conference of trade paper men with officials of the Hays organization pointed out that much more important than the number of theatres was the number of playing days throughout the country. He also suggested that statistics on censorship be made international in character, and the Hays officials indicated that both of these points would be taken care of in the survey.

Mr. Smith made it very clear that the survey was being conducted in the interest of the whole industry and would be available to everybody, including exhibitor organizations and the trade press, as well as producers and distributors.

The Department of Commerce at Washington is cooperating in the compilation of the figures.

One of the important uses to which the statistics will be put is in the coming campaign for complete abolition of the admission tax. It was pointed out that the industry hitherto has been handicapped by absence of authoritative figures in campaigns for its legislative rights.

Urge Postal Increase Defeat

Woodhull Asks Exhibitor Cooperation for a Special Hearing on the Measure

R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., has launched his campaign in an endeavor to defeat the Postal Increase Bill, which is now a temporary measure and will be permanent, altered or rejected entirely when Congress convenes next December. The bill, which affects parcel post service in the delivery and shipment of prints is in the hands of a special committee of the United States Senate with Senator George H. Moore as chairman. This committee will report on the measure to the Congress.

In an effort to bring every influence and argument to bear, President Woodhull has forwarded a communication to every theatre owner asking his cooperation and has also communicated with the Hon. George H. Moses asking a special hearing for the purpose of offering objections of the exhibitors to the measure.

In his letter to exhibitors Woodhull urges that they write immediately offering their objections and giving all data possible as to additional costs. These arguments will be presented in a brief to the special committee. Exhibitors are also asked to write their objections to their Senators and Congressmen.

The letter to Senator Moses urging a special hearing calls attention to the hardships the increased postal rates will incur on the thousands of neighborhood exhibitors throughout the United States, who have cooperated so valiantly with the Government on all problems of public interest.

It points out the fact that Postmaster General New at the sixth annual convention of the M. P. T. O. A. stated that no other unit of business enterprise had given to the Post Office Service of the United States as has the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

West Productions Enter Field

Billy West and Brother Will Produce the Feature Comedies Starring Billy

West Productions, Inc., was organized in New York this week to produce a series of feature length comedies starring Billy West. Production activities will be carried on in the West coast and release of the pictures will be through Bayart Pictures Corporation.

The company is headed by George West, the comedian’s brother in the office of president, and Billy will act as vice-president and general manager. Work will be started at once in Hollywood on four feature length comedies. The supporting players are now being assembled.

Billy West has long been known in the short comedy field. In the past few years he has starred in no less than 165 two reelers. In discussing his plans he said:

"From all parts of the country I have had letters from my fans asking me to go in for the high type of clean fast action fun loving feature comedies that have endeared other comedians to their hearts."
Pledge 3,000 Independent Dates
Quebec Theatre Owners at Montreal Meeting Promise to Increase Independent Bookings

A TOTAL of 3,000 play dates for independent productions was pledged by Quebec exhibitors at the luncheon rally of the Quebec Division of the M. P. T. O., held at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, on June 24th. Every exhibitor present at the meeting promised play dates for the independents.

The convention was presided over by A. D. Den's of Montreal, president of the Canadian M. P. T. O., who presented reports of the National convention. The meeting was attended by members from Montreal, Sherbrooke, Three Rivers, St. Hyacinthe, Westmount, Victoriaville, Joliette, Lachine, Ste. Anne de Vaudreuil and other Quebec towns.

Forty independent theatres in and around Montreal were represented at the convention, which the official of film exchanges attended as guests. The latter withdrew following the luncheon when the strictly M. P. T. O. business was discussed by the exhibitor-members.

Maurice West of Montreal, secretary of the Canadian M. P. T. O., gave a general report of the Milwaukee happenings and also spoke on organization while Mr. Burpee of the St. Johns and Farnham Theatres discussed the arbitration question thoroughly. Manager Levy of the Allen Theatre, Westmount, told how grievances had been settled in Western Canada where he had been formerly located.

Billy Allen, Montreal manager of the F. B. O., spoke briefly during the early portion of the meeting, declaring that there was no truth in the rumors that F. B. O. would become identified with certain other producers or distributors.

W. C. Gehring, Montreal manager of the Fox Film Corp., was called upon to explain the details of the new Montreal Film Board of Trade, of which he is the chairman, A. Gorman of First National, vice-president, and C. R. Osborn of Vitagraph, Inc., secretary-treasurer.

One of the prominent men present was T. D. Bouchar, Member of the Canadian Parliament from St. Hyacinthe, who is owner of the Corona Theatre in that Quebec centre.

The decision was reached to hold a monthly meeting of M. P. T. O. members at Montreal, arrangements to be made by the Quebec executive. President A. D. Den's of Montreal, was chairman; Maurice West was secretary; A. Spersdakos of Montreal, the treasurer.

George Arthur's Mother in Cast With Him

The mother of George K. Arthur will appear in the cast with him in "I'll Tell the World," which William Wellman is producing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It is her first screen appearance. Gertrude Olmstead plays opposite Arthur in the picture, while the balance of the cast includes Charles Murray, Antonio Danly, Effie Ellsler, Joseph McRae, Floyd Sheffield, Jack Holbrook, Harvey Perry, Red Thompson and John Arden.

Lilayan Tashman Signed to Schulberg Contract

Lilayan Tashman has signed a long-term contract with B. P. Schulberg. It was announced this week. Her first part under the new agreement will be in a prominent role in "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," to be directed for Schulberg by Marcel De Sano. Miss Tashman is a graduate of the Ziegfeld Follies beauty chorus. She played in "The Gold Diggers" and "Lilies of the Field" before entering pictures some time ago.

Vera Lewis Added to Cast for "Stella Dallas"

Vera Lewis is the latest addition to the cast which Henry King will direct in "Stella Dallas," the Samuel Goldwyn production to be distributed by United Artists. Miss Lewis will appear in the role of Miss Tibbetts. In addition to Miss Lewis, the cast to date includes Ronald Colman, Belle Bennett, Alice Joyce, Lois Moran, Lee, Morgan Fairbanks, Jr., and Jean Hersholt.

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer Get More Stories

METRO-GOLDBYN-MAYER have acquired two additional stories for the coming season's program. They are "The College Widow," the George Ade Story which has been a stage success for many years past, and "In Praise of James Carabine," by Donn Byrne. "The College Widow" is a stage success of many years ago and is still being played in studios; "In Praise of James Carabine" is a recent short story, whose locale is New York's old Bowery and whose action revolves around the prize ring of 1880.
Star Authors Represented in DeMille Properties

The works of six prominent writers of the day are included in the literary properties which Cecil B. DeMille has acquired for screen production. These are William J. Locke, Octavius Roy Cohen, Ernest Pascal, Konrad Bercovici, Ethel Watts Minnold, and J. J. Stuart, who, respectively, are the authors of “The Coming of Amos,” “Red Dust,” “Hell’s Highroad,” “The Volga Boatman,” “The Wedding Song,” and “The Valiant Gentleman,” all to be filmed by De Mille for Producers Distributing Corporation’s program.

Melford Completes Cast for “Without Mercy”

George Melford has completed the cast for “Without Mercy,” which he will produce for release through Producers Distributing Corporation. Those assigned the leading roles include, Lionel Belmore, Sidney D’Albrook, Tempie Pigott, Stanhope Whentcroft. Rockliffe Fellowes, Eugene Pallette, Dorothy Phillips, Gino Corrado, Fred Malatesta, Robert Ames, Patricia Palmer, and Vera Reynolds.

Keith and Alyce Mills in Schulberg Featured Cast

Donald Keith and Alyce Mills will be members of the featured cast which will be presented by B. P. Schulberg in “Parisian Love,” which Gascier is directing. Both players were brought forward this year as star material which the producer plans to develop as future box office attractions.

Set Release For “Wrongdoers”

August 5th is Date Announced for First Bernarr Macfadden Production

Harry Rathner, president of Astor Distributing Corporation, has announced that his company will release “The Wrongdoers,” starring Lionel Barrymore and produced by Bernarr Macfadden True Story Film Company, on August 5th.

The picture is the first in a series of eight features which the Macfadden organization will make for distribution by Astor. The pictures are being made in association with the True Story Magazine, which will publish serially the stories of the photo-plays.

The company has taken space in the Cosmopolitan studio in New York and will probably make all of the remaining pictures in the group in the cast. Two units are to be formed soon to produce stories now in preparation by Lewis Allen Browne, who is writing the scenarios for “Rogues Riches” and “False Bride.”

These productions will be followed by “The Harem Girl,” “The Danger Line,” “Wives at Auction,” “Bad Habits,” and “Broken Homes,” in the order named.

“The Wrongdoers” was completed recently under the direction of Hugh Dierker. The cast supporting Lionel Barrymore includes Anna Cornwall and Henry Hull. The picture will be one of four which Astor will release during August, the others being “A Lover’s Oath,” starring Ramon Novarro; “The Shining Adventure,” starring Percy Marmont and directed by Hugo Ballin; and “The Business of Love,” a Jesse RBIs production co-starring Edward Everett Horton and Madge Bellamy.

Cast Completed for “Part Time Wife”

The cast has been completed for “The Part Time Wife,” fifth of a series of twelve Gotham productions for the coming season. Alice Calhoun has the title role, with Robert Ellis in the leading male role. In the supporting cast are Arthur Hoyt, Edmund Davis, Freeman Wood, Patricia Palmer and Janice Peters. The picture is scheduled for early Fall release.

Marian Nixon Opposite Bert Lytell

Marian Nixon, Wampas baby star of 1924, will have her biggest role when she plays opposite Bert Lytell in “Sporting Life,” Maurice Tourneur’s production for Universal, which is now under way. Miss Nixon recently signed a long term contract with Universal.

Davis Changes Title on Herrick Picture

Davis Distributing Division has changed the title of the first of its Herrick “Fragments of Life” series. This two-reeler produced as “It Might Happen to You,” has gone to the exchanges as “Sympathy.” It is ready for immediate release.
Announcing Motion Picture News—Mid-Week Edition

It is our pleasure and privilege to announce that effective this week Motion Picture News will publish a Mid-Week Edition, to be issued each Wednesday.

The publication of this new edition, in addition to the regular weekly News, is an extension of trade service. It is undertaken after a great deal of research and after a most careful study of the small town field and is designed to meet the needs and demands of the theatre owners in the very smallest communities. Its contents follow out, so far as possible, the suggestions of over 500 small town exhibitors, who have told us by questionnaire and in many cases, verbally, the kind of a paper they prefer.

To these suggestions we have added our own ideas, born of many years publishing experience in this highly specialized field. We have given much study to the problem. We think we know what the small town man can use and must have, if he is to be successful.

The casual observer in the industry, may inquire why we consider it necessary to publish two papers to serve one field.

Our answer is briefly this: There are two fields in the exhibiting end of motion pictures today—not one and it is our conviction that no publication can shoot at two marks and hit either of them.

So briefly, without many details that could be given if space permitted, this is the reason for the new edition of the News.

Do not consider the Mid-Week Edition a new publication, but rather, as we said in the beginning, an extension of an old one—Motion Picture News—established in 1913 and since its inception dedicated to the welfare of the motion picture industry in all its branches and that includes the several thousand little theatres in the several thousand little towns, scattered from one end of the land to the other.

Hattrick Back From Europe; Outlines Newsrel Plans

Edgar B. Hattrick, general manager of International Newsrel and vice-president of Cosmopolitan Productions, returned last week from a six weeks' tour of Europe in the interest of those organizations.

While in Europe Mr. Hattrick made arrangements for the force of International Newsrel cameramen there, and also arranged for a more complete service for International Newsrel from the Far East.

Mr. Hattrick said that European exhibitors are keenly alive to the value of news reel films but that they are somewhat handicapped by the failure of producers of the reels there to supply a service which meets the demands of the public.

He was entertained at a banquet in London given by Sir William Jury, head of Jury, Ltd., and also was guest at dinners given in his honor in Berlin and Paris.

Pathé to Distribute “Kivalina of the Ice Lands”

Pathé has acquired distribution rights to the Earl Rossman photo-drama of the Arctic “Kivalina of the Ice Lands,” which recently was highly praised during its showing at the Mark Strand Theatre on Broadway, New York. The release date has been set for August 9th.

The picture is enacted by native Eskimos against a background of igloos, the Aurora Borealis and endless expanses of snow and ice. Producer Rossman spent two years in the Arctic region in the making of the picture.

Dustin Farnum Returns With Universal

Dustin Farnum, after a year’s absence from the stage and screen this week signed a contract with Universal to play a featured role in “On the Frontier,” which is to be produced on a huge scale. Farnum will be one of more than thirty well-known players included in the cast.

In and Out of Town

MR. AND Mrs. Walter Irwin will sail on the Mauretania, July 15th, on their regular European vacation, returning to America about September 1st.

FREDERICK WYNNE-JONES, managing director of UFA Films in the U. S. A., will return to New York on the Homeric, July 14th.

C. ARL. LAEMMLE sailed Wednesday on the Bremenaria on his annual summer visit to Europe.

SAM SAX, president of Lumas Film Corp., is again enroute to the West Coast and will also stop at various exchange centers, on the way.

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational Film Exchanges, left New York last Monday for Los Angeles, in the interest of production.

GUS SCHLESINGER, manager of the foreign department of Warner Bros., left the 5th Ave. hospital a few days ago, after a long siege of illness.

HARRY RATHNER, president of Astor Distributing Corp., left New York last week on a business trip to Milwaukee, St. Louis and Los Angeles.

J. CHARLES DAVIS, II, president of the Davis Distributing Division, has returned to New York from the West Coast where he has been overseeing production.

D. WIGHT C. LEEPER, vice-president of Richmond Pictures, distributors for Rayart in the foreign market, sailed this week for London on the George Washington.

E. E. SHAUER, director of the foreign department of Famous-Players, sailed for Europe, Wednesday. He will return about September 1st.

EDGAR B. HATTRICK, general manager of International Newsrel and vice-president of Cosmopolitan Productions, has returned from a six weeks trip to Europe.

I. M. P. A. to Draft Contract with M. P. T. O. A.

The Independent Motion Picture Association at a meeting on July 8th unanimously endorsed the plan of its General Manager, Frederick H. Elliott, for negotiations with the M. P. T. O. A. on the drafting of an equitable contract. A committee will be appointed by the association to confer with M. P. T. O. A. officials in the near future.

The Independent Association also decided to back up the efforts of the M. P. T. O. A. in the Connecticut tax fight. Mr. Elliott went to New Haven on Thursday to meet with exhibitor officials.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Sign Gillen to Contract

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have signed Ernest Gillen to a long term contract.

Frederick H. Elliott, General Manager of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America, presents to R. F. Woodbull, National President of the M.P.T.O.A., a testimonial resolution by his organization pledging its cooperation to him and the theatre organization. Joseph M. Seider, president of the N. J. M. P. T. O. A. at the left.
The exhibitors’ box-office reports which follow are from theatre owners who reside in towns and cities of over 3,000 population. Names of the contributors are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors’ Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Essay Contest in Houston on "Madame Sans Gene"

One of the highlights of Manager Harry VanDemark's splendid campaign on "Miss Sans Gene" at the Queen theatre, was the Essay Contest, "Why Is Gloria Swanson Your Favorite Movie Star," run in the Houston Chronicle a week before opening date. Letters had to be addressed to "Gloria Swanson Contest Editor," car Chronicle, and were limited to 100 words. Each letter drew a Sans Gene Gold Coin. Every tenth letter drew a souvenir program in addition to the coin, and a grand prize of a large framed photograph of Miss Swanson was awarded to the writer of the essay acclaimed the best by the judges.

The distribution of Gold Coins in this manner greatly enhanced their value, and the stunt in general gained valuable publicity for the attraction at minimum expense.

1,000 Souvenir programs were distributed in a unique manner calculated to increase their advertising value. To the first 500 ladies purchasing tickets on Saturday morning (opening day) Manager Van Demark gave a program. This stunt was most successful, all programs being disposed of by three o'clock. Night prices prevailing Saturday made this performance doubly valuable from a box-office standpoint. The remaining hundred programs were used in connection with the Essay Contest and for presentation to city officials, etc.

2,000 Swanson post cards were distributed to women and girls in the Queen the week preceding the "Sans Gene," run. These were eagerly accepted by the fans, in fact another 1,000 could have been used to good advantage. In contrast to the distribution of post cards at the Queen, 2,000 Swanson heralds were given away at the Capitol the week before showing. That not a herald was wasted is due to the fact that it is an unusual fine piece of literature with a strong appeal to fans as a souvenir.

1,000 rotoes were also given to the ladies attending the Queen a few days prior to opening date.

Seven of the large 14 x 17 photographs of the star were used as the basis for window cards, which were placed in prominent Main Street windows. These very excellent locations were secured at the cost of two theatre tickets each to the seven merchants, an expenditure well justified by publicity gained.

A tie-up with Carnegie Library proved a valuable advertising medium. Theatre Close-Up carried an announcement that books on "Madame Sans Gene." Napoleon and other notables of that period were available at the Houston Public Library. In return, the librarian placed a notice on the library bulletin board telling where the picture was showing.

"Thief in Paradise" Aided By Brilliant Display

Exploitation of "A Thief in Paradise" in Owensboro, Ky., at the Empress theatre, began a week before the three-day showing. Manager G. M. Pedley of the Strand Amusement Company's interests in that city started the campaign by festooning the lobby with hearts and masks, which remained up as teasers until the showing. Then a big heart made of leather board, as high as the entrance to the lobby, was placed on the curbing in front of the theatre daily—one side, toward the street, being bright red with the name of the play and the dates, with a mask at the base. On the other side was placed an eight-sheet cut-out with the stars outlined, with a smaller heart and a mask at the base. These were interchanged during the whole week of the showing.

Saturday before the showing a tie-up with McKee, Lyddane & Ray, one of the leading dry goods stores of the town, was effected. A draped one-sheet with the dates of the showing occupied central space in the draping of a cutting-out window for this occasion.

Seattle Strand's "My Son" Presentation Attractive

A very beautiful set was arranged by the management of the Strand theatre, Seattle, for "My Son" by a combination of colors against a gauze background. The name of Nazimova, the star, was done in white, outlined in blue on both sides of the box office, above the doors into the theatre. The scenic effect of a banner clear across the lobby, the doors, was produced with small cut-outs behind which were lamps of different colors casting a sort of silhouette effect over the setting which was a coast scene with ships in the background. The transparent banner was illuminated at night.

A cut-out in the lobby was made from the three-sheet with photo mounted on one side. Both panels of the exterior ship effect were done in natural colors.

Window tie-up with the Federal Bakery on "The Goose Hangs High" (Paramount) arranged by Manager Guy O. Kealmer of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville.
Knife Stuck Through Many “Spaniard” Heralds

Much of “The Spaniard’s” success at the Imperial, Charlotte, was due to two novel ideas conceived by Manager Geo. E. Brown. One, was the distribution of 1,000 heralds, 100 of which were placed throughout the main business section, each with a ‘knife’ stuck through the middle of it with “The Spaniard” showing beneath. Being posted in locations where hundreds pass hourly, these ‘knife-heralds’ proved excellent exploitation mediums. The ‘knives,’ which stood the theatre 9 cents a piece, gave ‘punch’ to the stunt.

The other, was a direct tie-up with the local radio broadcasting station, which made an announcement that six single theatre tickets would be given to six persons listening in on the night before the opening of “The Spaniard” at the Imperial. The announcement also added his personal endorsement, having previously reviewed the picture. The six free tickets brought in a like number of paid admissions, with the radio reaching 2,000 potential patrons, all of which was reflected in the opening day’s attendance and receipts, which were the best in weeks with the exception of “Madame Sans Gene.”

The standard paper and newspaper advertising was used, with special marquee and lobby displays, expressive of the Spanish atmosphere of the photoplay. Illuminated by red and yellow lights, these exhibits made quite a flash.

Varied Stunts for “Lost World”

Unusually Good Campaign Staged by W. K. Hollander at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago

The Chicago run of “The Lost World,” was ushered in at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, by an unusually brilliant exploitation campaign staged by W. K. Hollander, publicity director for Balaban & Katz. Hollander was particularly fortunate in obtaining a co-operative arrangement with the Chicago Daily News. Three weeks before the opening of the picture, the newspaper began the serial publication of “The Lost World” which had appeared in its columns about twelve years ago. The illustrations then used were reproduced for the present serialization. Upward of half a page was given daily to the story.

To advertise the serial, the Daily News used 560 24-sheets and 1,600 3-sheets in and around Chicago. In addition, the serial was advertised in page advertisements in the Daily News and in about fifty suburban newspapers; also in announcements on the first page of the Daily News.

About half a million reprints of the first six installments were run by the Daily News. One hundred thousand of these were distributed by Balaban & Katz in its chain of theatres, and the rest were mailed by the Daily News to its subscribers and through its news dealers. Each of these reprints carried the information that a very remarkable production had been made of “The Lost World” by First National and W. W. Rothacker and that it was to be shown at the Roosevelt theatre soon.

The Daily News used the pictorial paper of First National for its 24 and 3-sheets to advertise the serial story, substituting its own reading matter for First National’s text.

A week before the opening of the picture, the Daily News gave the theatre management 175 of its boards which were covered with 24-sheets, the paper being of a different character from that which the Daily News used to advertise the serial story. In return for the courtesy and co-operation of the Daily News, the Balaban and Katz theatres, in announcing on the screen of its various theatres the coming of “The Lost World!” to the Roosevelt, asked their patrons to read the serialization of the story in the columns of the Daily News.

“The Lost World” was shown to Cardinal Mundelein. A review appeared in “The New World,” a Catholic publication of 70,000 circulation.

A prize contest was arranged through the Military Commander of the High Schools by which the various military battalions competed in marksmanship. The prize for the best shooters were theatre tickets to “The Lost World.” A dinosaur was outlined with chalk as the target at which the boys and girls shot. To announce the contest, First National’s rotogravure section on “The Lost World” was used as a supplement to the official paper printed and distributed by this school organization.

The Chicago Public Library distributed “The Lost World” heralds and had printed cards 12x14, suspended in the street cars advertising books of prehistoric nature. On these cards “The Lost World” was displayed in good size type. This street car tie-up with the Public Library, was gratis as was a 14x22 card advertising the showing of the picture at the Roosevelt which was placed in every station along the elevated line.

Cash prizes and free tickets to the theatre while “The Lost World” was being shown were prizes offered for a drawing contest in the Chicago Journal and an essay contest in the Evening Post. A radio was used to broadcast the information about the picture through a song called “The Lost World.” A “Lost World Night” was planned in one of the cabarets in Chicago.
Wrecked Flivver in Garing
"Oh, Doctor" Lobby

The engagement of "Oh Doctor" at the Garing, Greenville, played to the best business this house has enjoyed for some time. Manager Chas. H. Amoss's exploitation was greatly responsible for its success, the highlight of which was the special lobby display.

An old wreck of a Ford car was placed in the center of the lobby with a cut-out of Reginald Denny in the driver's seat, showing him being hurled in the air. Directly in line with this figure was a cut-out of a nurse standing against the side of the lobby wall with arms outstretched as if waiting to receive him. A large card attached to the car carried the message:

IF YOUR PRETTY NURSE IS LEAVING BECAUSE YOU ARE WELL—GET SMASHED UP AGAIN—"OH DOCTOR"

A huge banner with scenes from the photoplay and wording—Reginald Denny in "Oh Doctor" extended across the entire top of the lobby front.

An excellent window display with a local drug store showed Denny in bed attended by a nurse. The entire window was filled with hospital supplies and attracted no little attention. This window was put in four days in advance of opening and remained throughout attraction's run.

Striking Lobby Display for "Dante's Inferno"

Manager W. F. Brock's lobby on "Dante's Inferno" at the Strand, was one of the most attractive displays ever arranged for any picture playing Knoxville.

The entire front of the theater was decorated with display paper on the attraction with streamers of red crepe paper. The exhibit was uniquely lighted by special red fuses, loaned the theater by a railroad friend, which were placed behind the sets on each side of the lobby. With the remaining lobby lights changed to red, the effect was startling.

The display was brought to the attention of the people of Knoxville in a most striking manner. On Sunday night before the opening, the exhibit was kept illuminated long past midnight, after all the city lights were extinguished. The red glow in the total darkness enhanced the weird, uncanny atmosphere and drew the eye irresistingly.

A week before opening, three double sheets made from "stills" were placed conspicuously in the lobby where they were seen by patrons as they passed in and out. Several days before showing of picture, three oil paintings were placed in store windows, one in the city's leading silk shop and the remaining two in vacant windows in prominent locations in the downtown section.

The regular campaign started two weeks in advance with the usual newspaper advertising, increased billing with 15 extra one's, 3 three's, 1 six, slides, 3,000 heralds, etc.

Fashion Book Souvenirs for "Dressmaker From Paris"

An important factor of Manager E. D. Turner's campaign on "The Dressmaker From Paris" at the Imperial, Asheville, was the distribution of 100 special Fashion Books on this attraction to the first 100 ladies attending the Saturday matinee, two days before play date. The appeal of these books was reflected in the favorable comments of the lucky ladies who received same.

Several excellent window tie-ups were effected in connection with shops dealing in women's attire. These windows displayed 22 x 28 still boards carrying scenes from the picture. Thirty small window boards with stills were placed in prominent windows in the shopping districts.

A special banner was made for the arch underneath the marquee. A huge still-board, used inside the theatre a week prior to opening, was moved to the office lobby during the run.

The usual billing was employed with the distribution of 5,000 theatre Close-Ups, 8,000 Magazine Programs, etc. Newspaper advertising was along regular lines with special "art ads" as an added feature.

Tie-Up With Drug Company for "Sally" on Coast

An unusual tie-up was made on the showing of First National's Colleen Moore picture, "Sally," at Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles, and F. M. Head, sales merchandise manager of southern California for the Owl Drug Company.

The Drug Company prepared a special "Sally" Sundae while the picture was being shown. Its three hundred soda dispensers in Los Angeles and its suburbs wore a little badge—a piece of green ribbon about one inch wide and four inches long, on which was printed in black, "Try a Sally Sundae, 20c, as delicious as the production is good. See Miss Colleen Moore in "Sally," Loew's State Theatre."

The Sally Sundae was also advertised on cards and on the mirrors of the drug store.

The Strand theatre, Nashville, arranged this window display with a drug store for the showing of "Playing With Souls" (First National).
Syracuse Scene of Strong “Declasse” Campaign

A newspaper publicity tie-up for a motion picture that is far out of the ordinary was used by Cliff Lewis, publicity director of the Strand theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., for “Declasse.” The tie-up was made with the Syracuse Journal.

A week ahead of the showing of “Declasse,” the Journal published the fac-simile of a telegram from Miss Griffith in which the star requested the Journal to act as sponsor at a theatre party at the Strand during the showing of latest release. She requested the Journal to invite 100 women and girls of Syracuse to attend this party as her guests.

Lewis and the advertising manager of the Journal worked out a scheme which benefited the classified advertising columns of the newspaper at the same time gave “Declasse” an unusual amount of publicity in its columns.

The Journal announced in daily stories that it would on the Friday before the showing print in its classified advertising columns the names of the hundred women and girls whom it was going to invite. An advertisement of the picture, carrying an announcement of Miss Griffith’s theatre party, was run on the classified ad page of the paper in addition to the publicity stories.

The paper’s advertising manager sent out at his own expense a letter to 2,500 prospective advertisers explaining that those who took a classified ad during this campaign would not only be sure of an unusually large number of readers for their advertisements, but would be permitted to send in the names of two or three women or girls to be invited to the party. Fifty of those to be invited were to be selected by the Journal itself. As the date for the announcement of the names approached, the advertising manager sent out another bunch of 2,000 letters reminding possible advertisers of the opportunity.

A story was also run in the paper announcing that any advertiser who placed a classified ad for six insertions might give the name of one person to be invited to the party.

The campaign was a success, not only for the Strand but for the Journal also, the classified ads being greatly increased during this publicity campaign. The names of the women and girls invited were published among the classified real estate ads in the issue of Friday. Mr. Lewis’ idea proved one of the best that has been worked in Syracuse of late for any picture, and is one that can be used by exhibitors in any town. Manager Walter D. McDowell goes behind the campaign.

Telephone Operators Boost “Daughters of Night”

Edward J. O’Keefe, director of the City Square theatre, Atlantic City, N. J., secured the co-operation of the Bell Telephone company in exploiting “Daughters of the Night” by inviting all the telephone operators, about three hundred in number, to review the picture, which is based on the romance of a telephone girl.

The result of this stunt was that it gave the theatre an unusual medium of publicity, for it had the three hundred operators talking to their acquaintances everywhere about the film. A concrete evidence of this was at the time of the special showing, when every girl brought one or more friends who paid for their admissions. The average showed there were two paid admissions accompanying the operator to the show, besides the regular patronage of the theatre.

Candy Kisses Advertise on “Kiss in the Dark” Run

Several days in advance of his showing of “A Kiss In The Dark,” at the Strand, Birmingham, Manager Faunce distributed 5,000 special boxes containing two candy kisses each. These were given away on the streets by three young ladies, carrying attractively decorated crepe paper baskets, effectively tied with colored ribbon bows. The boxes carried a picture of Adolphe Menjou, title, cast, theatre and play dates. This stunt was achieved at a nominal cost and was far reaching in effect.

The lighthouse in the lobby display was equipped with a flasher socket. The opening was covered with orange silk with a 150 watt light in back acting as a reflector, the beam of orange light being visible even in the daytime. The portholes of the ship were also cut-out and backed with lights, while the word “dark” in the title was blocked out on a piece of white glass. The special lighting added much to the exhibition attention value.

When “Seven Chances” (Metro-Goldwyn) played the Capitol theatre, Little Rock, Manager R. T. Newton arranged this front consisting of art ads and catch-lines.
Strong Opening Campaign
Given “Excuse Me”

A strong exploitation campaign was recently waged by C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, in connection with the opening of Loew’s new Temple theatre in Birmingham, with “Excuse Me.” This playhouse, completely remodeled and reconstructed, is now among the most luxuriously appointed theatres in the South, and its opening became, in consequence of the campaign which Haug conducted in collaboration with E. A. Vinson, enterprising manager of this playhouse, an event of the first importance to the community.

Three weeks in advance of the opening two hundred 3-sheets were posted all over town announcing the opening. Fire hundred 1-sheets were posted at the same time, and 500 special window cards were distributed. Two weeks before the premiere 500 specially printed 1-sheets were posted and 50 window cards were exhibited in gold bronze frames in the heart of the city.

Permission was secured from the City Commission to erect ten cloth banners in the busiest section of Birmingham. These banners were 8 by 12 feet long. One hundred street car dash signs were carried by cars two weeks in advance, and 21 Yellow Cabs carried banners also. Fifteen Red Top Cabs were decorated with banners announcing the showing and 8 Nu-Grape trucks carried large size banners also.

Merchants were vigorously solicited with the result that every advertisement in the Birmingham News carried, on the Sunday preceding the opening, lines congratulating Mr. Loew on opening the most beautiful theatre in the South. Special stories and photographs were printed in this issue.

A miniature train, captioned the “Excuse Me” Special, was on exhibition in the lobby for one week in advance of the premiere and throughout the showing.

Two pretty young girls, about 12 years old, and an old man carrying an ear trumpet, exploited the picture effectively by boarding cars and discussing the picture and the opening of the theatre. Most of the conversation was carried on by the young girls, who talked very loudly into the ear trumpet carried by their aged companion. This stunt caused enormous interest and was the talk of the town.

An immense banner hanging next to the City Hall, which burned down shortly before the opening, was observed by 40,000 people who attended the fire by other thousands who afterward visited the ruins of the building.

Good Millinery Tie-up for “The Night Club” Run

In exploiting “The Night Club,” Manager John J. Friedl and Publicity Director Raymond B. Jones, of the Palace theatre, arranged a splendid tieup with Fields Millinery store in Dallas.

Cut-Out Heads on “Playing with Souls” in Lobby

Manager G. P. Banniza, of the Strand theatre, Nashville, Tenn., assisted by W. R. Arnold, exploiter, gave “Playing With Souls,” a campaign that strongly directed the attention of the public to the picture.

The lobby display was one of the most striking the Strand has had. A large cut-out head of Jacqueline Logan was placed in the centre of the entrance, underneath a banner clear across the width of the lobby carrying in white letters the title of the film.

At one side of the lobby, high up, were the cut-out heads of “Buster” Collier and Clive Brook. On the other side, still higher, was a cut-out bust of the devil, with a string running from his hand to the cut-out heads of Miss Logan, Collier and Brook.

The customary slide and trailer, newspaper advertising and billing were done. Three thousand heralds were distributed in parked automobiles, in business offices and private dwellings.

Steffy Gives “Learning to Love” Strong Display

A unique display was used by Manager Steffy of the Coliseum theatre, Seattle, on “Learning to Love.”

In the shell over the marquee was placed a cut-out of the star kissing one of the men in the east. Directly under this cut-out was the name of the star with a chasing border of frosted lamps.

The star’s name and title used over the box office were of the same design. All of these lamps were used on the chasing border flasher which was sure to attract the attention of the passer-by.

Cut-outs from the posters were placed in every nook and corner of the lobby. The color combination was orange and black.
Dress Designing Contest on "Dressmaker From Paris"

Inspired by the fashion review in "The Dressmaker From Paris," Manager F. J. Roberts conceived the ingenious idea of conducting a Dress-Designing contest in connection with his showing of that attraction at the Majestic theatre, Austin, Texas.

The contest was started two weeks in advance of play date with the cooperation of the Adam-Johnson Company and the Austin-Statesman. A blank figure of a woman was printed in the newspaper daily, along with the announcement that for the best design sketched over this figure, preferably of a "party" frock, the Statesman would give an order to the Adam-Johnson company for a $25.50 dress to be selected by the winner. For the next ten best designs offered, the award would be two tickets to the Majestic to see "The Dressmaker From Paris." The next 20 best models would receive one ticket each, good for a performance at the Majestic. To aid contestants, a special pamphlet of new Paris styles, based on those shown in the photo-play, was compiled by the Statesman. This booklet could be obtained upon application from Monitor, Roberts' herald office. Adams-Johnson's, and also the judge of the contest.

The tie-up was netted 600 drawings, the winning design being printed in the Statesman with designer's name and a description of the gown. A list of the other prize winners' names also appeared in the columns of this newspaper.

The contest with its decided feminine appeal was a tremendous success as a publicity builder for the picture, and more than justified the nominal expense attached to putting it over. In this instance, the Adam-Johnson company gave the theatre the dress offered as first prize at cost, and also stood half the expense attached to the printing of the 400 fashion programs on "The Dressmaker From Paris," distributed through their store.

Considerable valuable publicity was given the theatre by a front page article regarding the special orchestra engaged for the three days' run of the photo-play, featuring the song, "The Flapper Wife," dedicated to the heroine of a serial being run in the afternoon paper.

Swanke Has Striking Front on "Flirting with Love"

Arthur Swanke, publicity and advertising man for the Mission theatre, El Dorado, Ark., obtained a very striking theatre front for "Flirting With Love."

A banner, the imitation of a parted theatre curtain, was used above the entrance to the lobby. The field was yellow, the top caption in red while the cut-out letters of the title were in black. Foliage of both bottom corners were in black. In the centre of the display was a three-sheet cut-out with cut-out strips around, backed by lavender crepe paper.

Reduced Taxi Rates Given for "The Last Laugh"

Through a tie-up with the Seattle Taxi-Cab Co., Robert Bender, manager of the Columbia theatre, Seattle, secured house paint and doors of all Yellow cabs in town. He secured their agreement to display the theatre, the booking of "The Last Laugh," and advertising in the company's paper, "The Yellowgram," which was used to advertise patrons' announcing his showing of "The Last Laugh." The banner read: "25c off on all Yellow car fares to "The Last Laugh" at the Columbia." When a cab deposited its passengers at the Columbia, the doorman gave them a coupon good for 25 cents on the meter charges. When they departed, another coupon was given them which was similarly honored by their chauffeur.

Florist Exploit Showing of "The Beauty Prize"

The leading florist of Evansville, Ind., was recently induced to exploit the appearance of "The Beauty Prize" at the Strand theatre by devoting an entire window to the cause. This display was built up around a central section featuring American Beauties, besides which appeared announcements of the showing and other advertising material. This window attracted much attention, being in the busiest part of the retail district.

Charles Glickauf, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, supplemented this feat by achieving a second tie-up with a prominent music store, which contributed a display of Victrolas and other musical instruments. Tie-up cards were placed in two beauty shops and in two restaurants. Three oil paintings were exhibited in other windows of the retail district, and 4,500 pay envelopes printed with an announcement of the run were distributed by factories and department stores of the town. One thousand heralds were given away and the town was lavishly posted as well. There was, in addition, a special lobby display.
YOUR IDEA

Carefully prepared notes were written to all the leading city editors who were addressed as "Manager of Reporters." These letters laid stress on the fact that Fifth Avenue Models were being mis-represented in the news—that they did not smoke or drink or marry millionaires, but were home-loving girls. The letters were hand-written on violet paper and a bottle of perfume was spilled over them. The letters informed the editors that a meeting would be held at the Breslin Hotel to organize the girls. Miss Dorothy Pensel headed an aggregation of Universal girls at the meeting at which there were twelve girls present, one dozen reporters and ten photographers. The newspaper response was wonderful. All the New York papers, without exception, carried stories on the Fifth Avenue Models Association the next day and the day after. Roto-gravure sections flashed the pictures. Columnists kidded the models. The NEA Service, United, Universal and other syndicates covered it.

Weil tied up the publicity by a card flash in front of the Piccadilly lobby and also by snipping the town with novel window cards reading:

MASS MEETING! Bring Your Friends—FIFTH AVENUE MODELS—Piccadilly Theatre—Saturday, May 9th.

This was further tied-up by a pretty "ballyhoo-ess" who paraded the streets with a miniature sandwich sign outlined in flowers, carrying the above message. Accompanying photographs of the lobby display and the ballyhoo may be seen at the bottom of this page.

A WORKING UP LOCAL INTEREST

Clever example of the art of capitalizing "local interest" for the exploitation of a film play was given when Stanley J. Gates, manager of Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., contrived to have Mrs. Helen R. Martin, of that city—author of the novel, "The Snob," on which the screen production of that name is based—give an interview to the home newspapers just before "The Snob" was shown in this theatre on June 22, 23 and 24.

The Harrisburg Evening News printed an especially chatty story in which Mrs. Martin gave her estimate of the play, starting her enthusiastic approval of the accuracy with which her book was interpreted in the screen version. The newspaper made the comment, in its own behalf, that "it is rarely that an author is found who is pleased with the motion picture adaptation of her own novel, for so often the picture producers take great liberties in changing the plots of the stories."

Mrs. Martin appeared in person at one of the showings of "The Snob" in Harrisburg—another detail that Manager Gates contrived to arrange—and made a brief address from the stage which the audience received enthusiastically.

"PLUGGING" MUSIC

HEN you have a musical number of merit closely tied up with a picture you are playing, don't be content with merely playing the number during the showing of the picture. Make it the outstanding musical hit of the town for the moment. You can do it if you give it the same concentrated exploitation you would put back of a picture. We have an example before us of how this was done at little cost by Frank Burns, the exploitation director of the Beacham theatre, Orlando, Fla. Burns describes the campaign as follows:

"A month before 'Sally,' was due to play at the Beacham theatre, Orlando, I got out a postcard to a thousand names. Card asked the question 'I Wonder What's Become of Sally,' and advising that the Beacham would announce the answer at a later date. Five thousand small cards with the same copy proved an excellent follow-up when given away on the streets. On the given date the Beacham soloist, duly advertised, sang the answer to the question, namely 'Sally's in the Movies Now,' with a special stage setting as a background and slides for both songs thrown on a silk curtain behind him.

"Three nights of packed houses heard this answer. Another thousand postcards were sent to the same people with the new copy. Five thousand more small cards were given away on the streets carrying the new question and answer copy. The connection was made and everyone in Orlando was singing, whistling and playing 'Sally.' The leading music store gave us a window display and plugged 'Sally' hard for us. The biggest department store used approximately forty inches in the newspapers to advertise the song and the fact that they would instal a loud speaker in the lobby to be used during the engagement. A neatly arranged lobby of lithographs plus the loud speaker stopped hundreds.

"Suffice to say, 'Sally,' is the most popular piece in Orlando at this time due to this plugging, and sheet music and records are selling like hot cakes."

INTERESTING THE NEWSPAPERS

OCE every so often some exploitation stunt, engineered by a scheming press-agent, catches the eye of the city editors on the leading metropolitan newspapers. It awakens their news interest and brings a host of eager reporters hot-footing it to the scenes of "battle" to unconsciously spread the word about the new motion picture which makes its bow to the public a few days later.

"Fifth Avenue Models" was the picture responsible for the latest "break" in newspaperdom. Joe Weil, the Big U exploiter, New York, engineered the stunt which caught on and made papers like the Herald-Tribune, the New York Times, and World, open their columns generously to the idea.

It all came about because "Fifth Avenue Models" was booked into the Piccadilly Theatre on very short notice. It was impossible to line up the proper kind of fashion show in a few days so that Weil was forced to seek other channels of publicity. He hit upon the idea of arousing talk about models by forming a Fifth Avenue Models Association to protect the poor little working girl who show the latest in What-this-is to the admiring throngs of shoppers. As time was very pressing he had to enlist the young ladies of the Universal home office to aid the idea.

AND OURS

MORNING MATINEE PLAN

T HE U. C. theatre of Berkeley, one of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., circuit, recently inaugurated a series of "De Luxe Kiddies Matines" under the auspices of the Berkeley P. T. A. federation, Mrs. M. T. Hevey, president. These programs take place every Saturday morning from 10 a.m. to 12 m. Groups of mothers and educators from the federation assist Manager Frank C. Burbans in the selection of the programs.

The ideals followed in the selection of these programs are that only such films be run as are educational and produce the proper emotional reaction; preferably films that send the youngsters home with new ideas and thoughts. The stage features are rendered only by child performers, sometimes by Berkeley children when they can be secured. No element of jazz is allowed to creep into any part of the program. Fairy stories are told by a charming young woman known as "Aunt Polly," who has already endeared herself to the children.

The films that have been run thus far are the first few episodes in the Chronicles of America, a historical film produced under the auspices of Yale University. There are thirty-three episodes in all, which will, therefore, cover thirty-three weeks. Animal pictures are always interesting to youngsters, and each week a nature picture is run, for instance, on the "Life of Bears," or "Salmon Fishing," or "Dogs." Whenever it is possible a story film is run when the subject is suitable for children. Recently "Hans and Gretel" was run.

Dancing and singing and the playing of musical instruments make up the stage features. Occasionally a novel act is secured, such as the personal appearance of King D., the Belgian police dog with his trainer. The dog performed and his master told the youngsters in the audience how to make their household canines do "tricks" and how to care for their pets.

It is gratifying to note the response that has been shown to this novel effort. Even the first week found the line of youngsters waiting for admittance a block long and every week following has found the theatre auditorium more nearly filled. It is estimated that fifteen hundred Berkeley youngsters attend these matinees each week.

Groups of mothers from the Parent-Teachers associations act as chaperones and see that no younger goes astray and that all reach the proper hands after the matinee. The youngsters themselves show intense interest in every feature that is put on and applaud loudly as evidence of their enthusiasm. When the last few minutes arrive for community singing, their enthusiasm is spent in singing well selected songs.

This effort on the part of the Berkeley Federation of Parent-Teacher Association, with the whole-hearted cooperation of Manager Frank C. Burbans of the U. C. theatre, should stimulate other communities in their direction of better pictures for children. Only in this way is it really possible to segregate "grown-up" shows from those suitable for youngsters. The proceeds received from these matinees, after the actual expense of the U. C. theatre have been deducted, go to charity under the direction of a committee appointed from the federation, and each week sees a substantial check go to some worthy charitable organization.

S HAVE YOU A LITTLE HOSTESS?

OMETHING of an innovation for Broadway houses has been installed at B. S. Moss' Colony theatre in the form of a hostess. Miss Maude Willis, a petite blonde has been engaged for this position with her headquarters on the mezzanine floor of the Colony.

Miss Willis, in addition to conducting visitors on an inspection tour of the theatre, will also assist patrons, particularly women and out-of-towners, in preparing shopping tours and pleasure trips throughout the city.

Incidentally, this service is provided gratis and represents but one of the many features for patrons' comfort in vogue at B. S. Moss' Colony.

What the Big Houses Say

PARAMOUNT
The Shock Punch—
RicharD Dix great in this picture of thrill. Business slightly better than usual, despite warm weather. (Middle West.)

Did very nicely with it. Good entertainment. (South.)

Quite a number of thrills in this. Star is popular here. Fine business. (South.)

Paths to Paradise—
Raymond Griffith steals this picture; great comedian. Average business for the week. (Middle West.)

Eve’s Secret—
Business about normal for a week’s run. (Middle West.)

Good story with good acting. Business was good. (South.)

Zander the Great—
One of the best pictures Marion Davies has ever made. Box office receipts good. (West.)

The Little French Girl—
Entertaining little picture that did a fair business. (West.)

The Ten Commandments—
Packed houses all week. Great pictures. (West.)

Are Parents People?—
Played to good business throughout the run. (West.)

Light of Western Stars—
It’s a good western full of action and well played. Did fair business. (Middle West.)

Just a fair business. People are tiring of western pictures. (Middle West.)

Devil’s Cargo—
Attracted good crowds. (South.)

The Manicure Girl—
Very mediocre picture that didn’t do well and didn’t deserve to do well. (Middle West.)

CHADWICK PICT.
The Wizard of Oz—
Quite an amusing comedy. Went over well. (West.)

RAFFLES—
The Amateur Cracksman—
MONDAY AND TUESDAY
2:15-7.15-9:00

FOX
In Love With Love—
The attendance was a little above the average for the week. (Middle West.)

Riders of the Purple Sage—
This one got a fine reception from our audiences. (West.)

Everyman’s Wife—
A trite plot, with only fair acting and mediocre directing, which did fair business. (Middle West.)

The Hunted Woman—
Fairly entertaining picture with fair business. (South.)

STATE RIGHTS
The Midnight Express—
Great summer picture. Went over with a bang in this town. (South.)

The Silent Pat—
Another dog picture that averaged fair business for the week. (West)

Women and Gold—
An entertaining picture which averaged fair houses. (West.)

METRO-GOLDwyn
Pretty Ladies—
Just a fair production with average business. (West.)

Marry Me—
This one failed to register either as a picture or at the box office. (West.)

The Sporting Venus—
Remarkable direction helps to overcome a rather poor story.

Cast is also interesting. Business average. (Middle West.)

Not much of a story but settings and acting carried it. Business pretty good. (Middle West.)

Man and Maid—
Played to good crowds in very hot week. Author has big following here. (Middle West.)

Zander the Great—
Good business, partly due to the fact that it closely followed the play here. (Middle West.)

Proud Flesh—
Wonderful picture. Great stuff. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL
Fifth Avenue Models—
Picture played to fair business for the week. Nothing out of the ordinary. (South.)

The Man in Blue—
Managed to get by with our patronage. Just a program picture. (Middle West)

Wine—
Did a poor week with this one. Somewhat of a disappointment. (Middle West)

Up the Ladder—
A good picture and business held during run. Patrons seemed to like it. (Middle West.)

Head Winds—
Went over big. (South.)

I’ll Show You the Town—
Excellent entertainment which pleased large crowds. Business good. (Middle West.)

Considered very good picture and public liked it. (South.)

RAFFLES—
Good attendance all week, despite hot weather. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS
Girls Men Forget—
Excellent summer entertainment. Average summer business. (Middle West.)

PATHE
Black Cyclone—
Rather a novelty in pictures as it stars a horse. They liked it out here. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL
I Want My Man—
Picture not remarkable in any way but took fairly well with audience. Usual business. (Middle West.)

Soul Fire—
Good entertainment featured by the work of Barthelmess and Bessie Love. Business good. (Middle West.)

Barthelmeas is acting again after a few mediocre pictures. This one registered well at the box office. (West.)

The White Monkey—
Latest Barbara La Marr picture did pretty fair week for us. (South.)

The Making of O’Malley—
Good melodrama, well worth seeing. Business was satisfactory. (Middle West.)

The Desert flower—
Not as sparkling as “Sally,” but a good drawing card. Colleen Moore amusing in the role of a desert nomad. Business good. (Middle West.)

A fine picture for hot weather. Did fair business. (Middle West.)

Lend Me Your Husband—
Doris Kenyon offers an interesting characterization in a not especially attractive production. Coupled with a Gloria Swanson resurrection, this one drew well. (Middle West.)

Chickie—
Something disappointing to those who had read the story. Business fair. (Middle West.)

An average week’s attendance, but patrons were well pleased. (Middle West.)

The Talker—
Liked very well. Very good movie. (Middle West.)

ASSOC. EXHIB.
The Price of a Party—
Not much of a success in this town. They’re getting tired of this type of picture. (Middle West.)

School for Wives—
Fairly good entertainment. (Middle West.)

Introduce Me—
Doris Kenyon’s funniest thing that Maclen has yet appeared in. Crowds filled the theatre throughout the week laughing at his adventures as a mountain climber. (Middle West.)

PROD. DIST CORP.
Stop Flirting—
A comedy which has very little humor. Business bad. (Middle West)
What The Short Subject Means To The Exhibitor

Vaudeville Sets Example for Picture Men

By S. J. Maurice, Special Representative Serial Dept., Universal

(Editor’s Note.—This is the concluding article in the series dealing with the proper presentation and exploitation of short subjects written especially for this publication by Mr. Maurice.)

What the value of short subjects is to the exhibitor, and how this value may be increased enormously by giving them a big flash in newspaper advertising has been pretty well demonstrated in the preceding articles of this series. I showed how some exhibitors’ business was actually saved and that of others doubled by devoting at least forty per cent of the advertising space to the comedies, the short westerns, the serials, the striking phases of the news-reels and the cartoons.

If house managers who have read these articles still are not awake to the potentialities of this splendid material, they might learn something from vaudeville. They may not be aware that there is hardly a big or little vaudeville theatre in the country that does not use short pictures to strengthen its bills and put in a laugh or a punch that otherwise would be lacking. And they are no longer used merely as “chasers” or to open a show, but are given important positions on the bill, being considered as much of a draw as the standard acts on the program.

I talked with vaudeville managers in every city I visited in my recent swing around the circle. Without exception they declared they could not get along without the “fillums.” Some of them used two reel westerns or serials, others pinned their faith to comedies and animated cartoons like “The Gumps,” Aesops Fables or Max Fleischer’s “Out of the Inkwell”; some favored the Literary Digest, the Stereopticks or the Bluebirds; others swore by Hal Roach’s “Our Gang,” all of them consider a snappy news-reel like the International as absolutely essential.

What interested me particularly was that many of these vaudeville managers advertised their pictures just as they did their human acts. Now, if the vaudeville people recognize the value of these subjects, how is it that so many picture exhibitors, who are supposed to be alive to the value of everything in films do not? Mr. Exhibitor, you should be ashamed to let somebody who is really not in your game beat you at that game!

One of the surest indications that short subjects are to play a bigger part than ever in pictures is the fact that every company makes them or is going to make them and will produce more of them next year than ever before. Universal is going to make an especially great play with its short stuff next season. Its comedy program, its serial, its two reel westerns with Edmund Cobb, Fred Humes, “Peevee” Holmes and Jack Mower will set a pace that never have been struck before. The Buster Brown series as planned is sure to be a knock-out. Universal has always been famous for its serials, but will out-do itself in this respect this year. The tie-ups already accomplished with the great newspapers all over the country to advertise and play up these chapter adventure stories are unprecedented. Leading newspapers in 44 of the big cities and 1000 smaller ones are printing novelized versions of the serials and are giving them great display space.

Fox has a short subject campaign outstanding anything of the kind this company has ever undertook before. Pathe and Eduational, specialists in the line, are redoubling their efforts. F. B. O. is extending its field enormously. Following up their “Fighting Blood” and “Go-Getters” and “The Pacificers” this firm is now at work on “The Adventures of Maisie” with Alberta Vaughn that has unusually attractive aspects.

There are short subject stars now coming to the front who will soon be in the feature class. Look at Charlie Puffy, Carl Lachme’s most recent importation, Harry Langdon, Wanda Wiley, Edna Marian and Clyde Cook. They are a hit on any bill and right now are worth almost as big type in the advertising as the stars with whom they are programmed. The exhibitor who bays and does not play them up is simply throwing away an opportunity to increase his receipts. Blind—or rather “dumb” is what I call an exhibitor who fails to grab all the beacon possible from what he thus has in his hands.

Picture history proves that short subjects are the training ground of the most profitable and popular stars. It is there that real talent is discovered and developed. There are a dozen other comedians, comedesses and real actors than those mentioned above who are in two reeders that exhibitors are showing today who are going to be famous in the next two or three years. The wise exhibitor will capitalize this talent right now. He will watch his own shows and when he sees a “short” go over with a smash, the next time he plays one of that same and with those actors, he will tell his patrons about it in his newspaper advertising.

Why does he advertise Valentino, Denny, Gibson and Swanson? Because he knows his people like them and will come to see them. Does not this same thing apply to Langdon, Desmond, Daughter’s, Art Aecord, Wanda Wiley, Our Gang, the Pacificers or Clyde Cook? If your patrons long or sigh at them today, tell them in your advertising when you are going to give them this opportunity again. Two years ago exhibitors recognized this very patent fact with Bill Hart, Charlie Chaplin, Ben Turpin and later with Harold Lloyd and Buster Keaton. Well, there are Harris, Chaplin, Turpins, Lloyds and Keatones in the rough right now and the exhibitor who is on the job will look for them and make them.

Their success is your success—don’t forget that Mr. Exhibitor.

In concluding I would say again to the exhibitor—the short stuff is almost half your show; give it half of your advertising space. You’ve got to have it, you can’t get along without it. Your patrons demand it, so why not tell them in advance what it is to be? They may not be attracted by your feature—they may prefer the feature at the opposition house but your short stuff may pull them up into your place if you will only wise them up to it in your advertising.

So once again, PLAY UP THE SHORT STUFF!

Mack Sennett Completes
Two for Pathé

The Pathé home office has received completed prints of two new Mack Sennett comedies. They are, “From Rags to Britches” and “Isn’t Love Cuckoo.” The former is a fashion show burlesque, directed by Del Lord, with Billy Bevan and Madeline Hurlock as the featured players. “ Isn’t Love Cuckoo” was directed by Lloyd Bacon, Raymond McKe, Marvin Lobach, Ruth Taylor, Eugenia Gilbert, Sunshine Hart and Irving Bacon have the principal parts.

Completing the First Hiers Comedy for New Season

Production on the first Walter Hiers comedy for the Educational 1925-26 program is in the final stages at the Christie studios under the direction of Archie Mayo. The comedy is based on a story by Earl Rodney and presents the comedian as a trifle officer unoffically detailed to take care of a stranded baby.

The role of the infant is played by Baby Brown and other important parts are enacted by Jack Duffy, Evelyn Francisco and Bill Blaisdell.

Pathe Will Start New Serial Story by John J. McGraw Tops List of Releases for Week of July 19th

Pathe will start a new serial as one of the features of the releases for the week of July 19th. It is titled “Play Ball!” an original story by John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants.

In addition to the serial there will be a two reel Mack Sennett comedy, a two reel Hal Roach comedy, a Roach one-reeler, and the regular weekly features. Allene Roy and Walter Miller head the cast of the serial which was directed by Spencer Bennett. The title of the initial chapter is “To the Rescue.” The serial is in ten chapters.

“Sneezing Beavers” is the two-reel Sennett comedy and has in its cast Andy Clyde, Madeline Hurlock, John J. Richardson, Kewpie Morgan and Billy Bevan.

“Daddy Goes a Granting” is the Roach two-reeler directed by James W. Horne, with Glenn Tyron as the star. Chief in support are “Husky” Hanes, the baby, and Kathleen Collins.

“Yes, Yes, Nanette” is a one-reel Roach comedy featuring Jimmy Finlayson.

Pathe Review No. 29 presents the following subjects: “Animal Appetites”, one of the secrets of nature series; “Submarine Salvage”, showing how the under-water torch reveals sunken ships and “San Francisco, the Golden Gate City”, one of the American cities in Pathecolor.

Other subjects on the schedule for the week of July 19th are “For Love of a Gal”, one of the “Aesop’s Film Fables”; Topics of the Day, and two issues of Pathé News.

Desmond Starts Universal Serial Next Week

William Desmond starts work next week for Universal in a ten-episode picture titled, “The Winking Idol.” This adventure picture is one of a group of serials which Universal is offering under the name of “The Lucky Six.” In addition to Desmond Universal will star Jack Daugherty and Joe Bonomo in these serials.

Among the players supporting Desmond are, Eileen Seigwitz, Grace Cunard, Helen Broneau, Jack Richardson, Bert Sutel and Les Sailor. Francis Ford will direct.

Clements and Dillon Signed by Hal Roach

Hal Roach has added Eddie Dillon and Roy Clements to his directorial staff. Dillon has long been known as a director of features and comedies. Clements, also a veteran director, has been assigned by Roach to co-direct with Fred Wood Jackman the new feature production starring Rex, the wild horse star.
"Shoes" to be the First of O. Henry Series

Fox Film Corporation has selected "Shoes" as the first story to be filmed by the company in the series of O. Henry stories which will be brought to the screen in two-reel form. "Shoes" is a typical O. Henry humorous tale about a young American cussel who perpetrates a practical joke on his prospective father-in-law in order to secure the affections of his sweetheart.

Harold Goodwin will play the leading role opposite Marion Harlan, whom Fox has engaged to play the feminine leads in the series. Brooks Benedict, Charles French and Harvey Clark are others who will appear in the cast of "Shoes."

Roach Signs Amateur for Three Year Term

Suzanne O'Neill, a Bayonne, New Jersey girl sixteen years old has been signed to a three year contract by Hal Roach though she has never before appeared on the screen. She is a sister of Sally O'Neill who recently completed her first picture under a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract.

Suzanne sought work in Hollywood and the Roach studio was the first she visited. She is said to have been signed to a contract before leaving the premises. Her first screen work was in a comedy with Jimmy Finlayson, which Pathe will release.

Kinograms Staff Reorganized

J. V. FitzGerald and Herbert Hancock Join Company as Associate Editors

J. V. FITZGERALD and Herbert E. Hancock have been appointed associate editors of Kinograms news reel, which is distributed by Educational, it was announced this week. Forrest Izard, for the past five years managing editor of Kinograms, will remain at that post.

The announcement stated that the appointments of FitzGerald and Hancock to the editorial staff was the first step in a program of expansion and reorganization which will be carried out by the company.

FitzGerald is a newcomer in the film field, but brings with him a brilliant record as newspaper editor and writer. For ten years he was connected in various editorial capacities with the New York Morning World, leaving about seven years ago to accept the position of the Washington Post. After serving in this capacity for three years he was made editorial writer for a year, and was then promoted to the City Editorship, which he held for three years more, until joining Kinograms. Mr. FitzGerald is a native of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and was educated in New York University.

Hancock is well known to the news reel world, having organized Fox News six years ago. For four years Hancock was director of Fox News, and then he organized and headed the Fox educational department. Previously he had been connected with the International Film Service in various editorial and directorial capacities. This experience followed a newspaper career of more than fifteen years. He was educated in Canterbury, England, and is a member of the Author's League of America.

Mr. Izard, who is one of the best known executives in the news reel field to-day, has steadily built up Kinograms to its present position among news reels. Born in Chicago, Mr. Izard completed his education in Harvard University. After his graduation he went into newspaper and magazine work, being connected with the Boston Transcript for many years.

Mr. Izard entered the film field shortly before the war and has continued in it ever since. Five years ago he joined Kinograms and in a short while was given full charge, which he has held ever since.

Allyn Batterfield, pioneer enter of news reels, will continue to occupy the position he has held since the inception of the reel. The remainder of the personnel has not been changed.

Fox Organizes Special Staff

Will Sell Short Subjects Exclusively Under the Direction of Fred Quimby

FOX Film Corporation has organized a special sales department to function independently in the disposal of its short subject product. Fred Quimby is at the head of the department and has as his assistant O. A. Hill. They have organized a special staff of field men to concentrate solely on the short film output. This staff will have nothing to do with the selling of the dramatic offerings of the company.

Through Quimby's field men the exhibitor will be fully informed of every phase of little features and therefore will know before hand just what he is booking. This change came about because of the increasing demand for short comedies. In discussing the change in policy Quimby said:

"The exhibitors have come to realize that good short subjects and a well balanced program are just as essential to success as good feature offerings and they are just as careful about booking their short subjects as they are about their features. In many cases I have found exhibitors paying more attention to short subjects.

"Recently there has been a most pronounced demand for the higher class two-reel comedies. Exhibitors eagerly ask for them and contracts are signed at good figures.

"So pronounced is this quick awakening I am going to travel a number of miles to find the reason and all the demand."

Displays Frozen Fish to Exploit “Balto” Film

A display of frozen fish, encased in huge cakes of ice which were shown in the lobby of the Victoria theatre, proved a novel and arresting stunt to exploit “Balto’s Race to Nome,” the Principal Pictures three-reel production offered by Educational, in Harrisburg, Pa. The display was designed by C. Floyd Hopkins, general manager of the Wilmer and Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and Reading.

Twenty-four different species of fish were frozen in the ice cakes and the theatre offered a prize of a season’s pass to the patron who identified the largest number of species represented in the display.

The stunt, which was part of a vigorous campaign to exploit “Balto’s Race to Nome,” received wide publicity in the columns of the newspapers. As a gauge to the efficacy of the stunt it is reported that the short film received 6'5 column inches of “reader” space as against 11 column inches actually paid for by the theatre in advertising.

Renow Acquires Rights for “Romance Road”

Truart Film Corporation announces the acquisition of the United States and world rights for “Romance Road,” in which Raymond McKee is featured. The picture will bring the list of Truart productions to be released by Renow Pictures, Inc., during 1925-26 up to seventeen.
"Daddy Goes A Grunting"
Pathé—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

ANCHORED "domestic difficulties" force Glenn Hanes and his wife to turn to vaudeville work in "Daddy Goes A Grunting". The Hal Roach team, directed by James W. Horne, provides a pleasing and amusing presentation of a domestic comedy. The picture should score well in theatres of all classes.

"Hot and Heavy"
Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

EDDIE NELSON is featured in this slapstick comedy which depends for its laughs on the usual hokum situation that arises in a cafe. There is the spilling of soup and the promiscuous tossing of food that make a mess of the place and everyone in it. But there is also an added twist to this one which, to a certain extent, is a little different from the usual run of slapstick. Nelson has the role of a broken down vaudeville artist who wanders into town out of luck and out of a job. He incurs the wrath of the husky bouncer of the Blue Bird cafe and the latter is held out in the chase when a telegraph pole falls upon him. The proprietor of the cafe sees his bouncer prone to the floor but he later manages to pull his bouncer to his feet and gives Eddie credit for having rendered him horizontal. Therefore Eddie falls heir to the job of bouncer.

In his new job he serves in various capacities and is called upon to execute all of his skill when a slumming party arrives at the cafe. Various stunts are pulled with the arrival of the party. The dancers become entangled with each other as well as with the customers of the cafe. A turtle is permitted to walk into the soup and eventually becomes pinned to the rear of the pulchritudinous matron of the slumming party, amid the wildest conflagration. Of course, the turtle succeeds in getting away, however, with the return of the deposed bouncer as soon as he regains his feet and goes back to the cafe, with his gang and orders them to get the first guy he throws out. Said bouncer is, himself, the first to make his exit and he does so in turn through some new stuff which is each time his own henchmen further add to his humiliation. The story ends with the general melee at its height.

"Sneezing Beezers"
Pathé—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS Mack Sennett production is designed for summer entertainment. The suggestion of coolness entering in the form of some elaborately done snow scenes. It is a decidedly slap-stick affair with a basic idea of two taxi drivers out in the frigid regions of the big snows there is a constant parade of comedy items of the tried and proven sort as well as a dash here and there of something a bit clever in the way of a gag.

Billy Bevan appears as the taxi driver who steals a bouncer's distribution is forced to drive the king and the princess to Necko-Shavio, Andy Clyde is the king, and every inch a comedy king in this part. The striking Madeline Hurlock is seen as the princess, appearing to especial advantage in the costume left in the northern cabin by "Gay Eskimo chorus girl." Kerpie Morgan and John J. Richardson are other prominent contributors to the comedy action.

"Sneezing Beezers" is a bit extreme in Its efforts to amuse but it does amuse and therefore there can be no quibbling about this or that or the other thing. It is irresponsible for anyone to be present in the opening scenes in which the dethroned king of Necko-Shavio is shown as the proprietor of a chili con carne emporium in an American city until the taxi driver lands in the frigid regions of the big snows there is a constant parade of comedy items of the tried and proven sort, as well as a dash here and there of something a bit clever in the way of a gag.

The Story—An exiled king supports himself and his daughter by serving genuine chili con carne at a rapid-service lunch counter. He receives word that he will be crowned if he returns to Necko-Shavio and engages a taxi driver to take him there. Upon arriving in the country he is set upon by a group of crooks and the three adventurers are set out in the taxi to fle the schemers. They are followed to a land where the snow-fall is heavy and there the conflict is on in earnest. Skils furnish a form of locomotion that is both speedy and stirring. The villains kidnap the princess and sail away with her in their aeroplane. But Billy, the taxi driver, daringly negotiates a high jump on his skis and overtakes the plane in mid-air, thus effecting a thrilling rescue.

Classification—Slapstick comedy elaborately produced and capably acted.

Summary—While nothing strikingly new in the way of gags appears, this is a speedy and well presented slapstick offering. The play burlesques the romantic melodramas about mythical kingdoms. While the material for much good satire is present this is subordinated somewhat to straight comedy of action. The director has aimed at the "sure fire" effects and is successful in achieving them.
“The Polo Kid”
Universal-Century—Two Reels
Eddie Gordon is the star of this two-reel Century that is chock full of horseplay and alleged humorous incidents. There is nothing they have forgotten to put into the picture in an effort to get laughs. That they will get many of them is assured, but the funny gags are too many and ridiculous incidents that are too far-fetched to be funny. A condensation of the story, which is not a bad one, would make the picture more effective, particularly if some of the overdone comedy was eliminated.

The opening shots of the polo game give promise of better things that do not follow. In fact the polo game has no connection with the balance of the story, which has to do with a street cleaner and his persecution by a fat policeman.

The trouble starts when the street cleaner casually sweeps a pile of papers to the side of the road just as a big touring car pulls up with a party of pretty girls from the polo game. The policeman attempts a flirtation just as the exhaust from the auto scatters the papers about his head.

Then the horse-play starts fast and furiously. Teddy Ramsay gives chase to the street cleaner and runs himself into the lake, from where he is extricated by the street cleaner with the aid of a harpoon projected with unerring aim to that part of the anatomy such implements invariably find.

Later, when Rod, the hero rescues a pretty girl and sweeps a pile of papers to the side of the road just as a big touring car pulls up with a party of pretty girls from the polo game, the policeman attempts a flirtation just as the exhaust from the auto scatters the papers about his head.

Cyrano de Bergerac
(Unions Cinematografica Italiana-Atlas—10 Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

The film production of Rostand's heroic drama has been magnificently achieved. Any one who has seen Hampden in the play or read the text might naturally turn thumbs down on the film. But if they go to see this picture they will not be disappointed. It is a sincere, faithful transcription—one that catches the true spirit of romance. For fear of arousing criticism the sponsors have made almost a literal adaptation—for there is one scene after another just as Rostand wrote it. This may act against it for it makes a platitude out of a play instead of being a film conception of it. But anyway you take it, you must admit that it rides on a high road of romance.

Nothing is changed to make something different from the play. The sponsors have kept faith with Rostand. Yet, arguing from the standpoint of “box-office” it is a picture which must not be exploited. The vast army of picturegoers are not acquainted with the play—not having seen Hampden play the role. But they have a treat in store for them. The moods of the story are admirably caught by Pierre Magnier who, in the title role, gives a magnificent performance. The mannekes in his face go to the wishful Roxanne by sacrificing everything is something which always appeals to the heart. He is sensitive—is Cyrano—sensitive about his enormous nose. Very few actors could have brought out this character with such grasp upon the emotions. Roxanne is finely portrayed by Linda Moglia. The Nug in the convent garden wherein Bergerac dies is beautifully expressed.

As for the production it is excellently mounted. The atmosphere of Paris of 1640 is well suggested. There is a wealth of detail and background—and the plot builds steadily to its climax without getting away from the subject matter.

THEME. Romantic drama of a celebrated swordsman whose gross features make him sacrifice his overpowering love for a girl—his romance being worked out by proxy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The sympathetic and colorful performance by Pierre Magnier in title role. The duels. The comedy. The prelude to the battle. The convent garden scenes. The atmosphere of Paris of 1640.

The death of Cyrano. The color and movement.

DIRECTION. Has approached Rostand's great work with fine reverence. Keeps characterization ever dominant. Executes drama with feeling. Gets fine detail and shows painstaking care with atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Use trailers. Exploit as film version of dramatic masterpiece. Play up the color and movement. Might put on a prologue with people attired as in picture. Get out the best people in your town. DRAWING POWER. The word of revolver holds this should draw. It has fine color and movement and is splendidly acted. Has heart appeal and good enough for finest houses—yet its story will be understood by every type of picturegoer.

SUMMARY. A magnificent costume picture carrying away from the beaten path through its comedic incident. Several new twists have been added—which take it out of the familiar rut. Not much to plot, but it succeeds in sustaining interest.

The Texas Trail
(Stromberg-Producers Dist. Corp.—Five Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

Harry Carey has a likely western here. It doesn't follow the orthodox plan showing a villainous foreman rustling cattle—with the cowpuncher being suspected for the crime. None of this stuff is written into the picture. The star has taken a tip from Mix and Gibson—that what westerns need nowadays is a saving grace of humor. And this particular horse "opera" gallops along with a pleasant vein of comedy. The melodramatics are non-pithy, excepted when a more or less tight situation develops. The director and the players enact a laugh if off as it were.

The central figures are a cowboy and an Eastern girl. The latter has made her first trip to the West and colors it with romance. Her idea of cowboys has been gathered from seeing them in the movies. So when she is insulted by a villain who gets the drop on the hero her illusions are shattered. The heroine proves to get a "kick" out of it all by masquerading as a highwayman. Along with the incident featuring her capture there is an episode dealing with the robbery of the hero bringing home the money which will lift the mortgage. First the villain is imprisoned, then the hero—and the comedy moments here carry quite a measure of laughs.

Really the plot has practically nothing to stand on. But it manages to keep going because of the new twists given the orthodox incident. The heroine is the victim of a few practical jokes before she has her romance. Then the minute he dresses up in chaps, sombrero, et al, her heart goes right out to him. And her opinion of him changes when he rescues her from the orneriest bad man. Everything works out O.K. here. The girl had recovered the stolen money—and the hero had saved the girl. There is first the atmosphere to create the story a proper background. The acting is good—with Carey keeping himself in restraint—a habit with him. Yet this mood is perfectly applicable for such a story. Ethel Shannon plays the heroine with spirit and charm.

THEME. Western romantic melodrama of cowboy and Eastern girl—the latter being disillusioned over the West. Masquerades as highwayman, recovers loot from villain and is rescued by cowboy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The comedy incident. The scene on train as heroine becomes enraptured with the great open spaces. Scene when hero is held up and robbed of the money. Scene when girl is captured in her highwayman disguise. The jail episode.

DIRECTION. Keeps it moving along with bright incident. Doesn't take it too seriously—and injects a good comedy relief. Refrains from loading it down with heavy melodramatics. Frames it against appropriate settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a different western—one with humor as well as action. Play up Carey as being ideal for the role of present-day cowboy—not the movie type. Play up the idea of Eastern girl trying to pep up the West.

DRAWING POWER. Among Carey fans this should do business. O.K. for average houses.

SUMMARY. A bright little number—which gets something away from the beaten path through its comedic incident. Several new twists have been added—which take it out of the familiar rut. Not much to plot, but it succeeds in sustaining interest.

By Edmund Rostand. Directed by Augusto Genina.

SYNOPSIS. Celebrated poet and soldier wins fear and respect because of his swordsmanship. But because of his sensitiveness over his enormous nose he feels himself an outcast in matters of romance. Has a great, abiding love for beautiful girl and loves her by proxy. In the end she realizes the secret in his heart. The knowledge comes too late for he dies a glorious death.
The Lady Who Lied
(First National—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

Here is a conventional picture running true to form with its recreational plot. The settings and actress is excellent as a background for a triangle story by Robert Hichens, which was originally known as "Snake Bite." The pres-cent title has a world of meaning—as well as punch. It will probelly lure good patronage to the picture aside from the fact that the actresses are Misses Lewis and Lewis Stone and the other im-ternal players have their following.

The story tells nothing new and the way it is developed the plot lacks motivation. The heroine surprises a woman of questionable character in her fiancé's apartment and naturally being piqued tells him. It is easy to spot the subsequent action. There isn't any suspense because you know what is coming all the time, but Lewis Stone gives his scenes a certain amount of color. He is one actor who makes any story interesting no matter if it lacks substance and movement. Here he plays a sophisticated man of the world—a portrayal which no one else can approach with such easy grace and charm.

The scene shifts from Venice to the African desert until the finish. We find the heroine dashing off to the dark continent where she marries a doctor who was once interested in her. Her erstwhile fiancé follows and enlists the help of his wife to accompany him on an expedition in the desert. In the subsequent action the hero is bitten by a viper (hence the title of the original story) which gives the doctor the opportunity to declare himself. He will not treat the patient unless the other man's relations with his wife have been wiped off the record.

In the end his humanity and the ethics of his profession lead him to cure his rival.

There isn't much drama in this picture—and there are several dull pauses which are covered up with descriptive subtitles. It is only moderately interesting. When Stone has his moments you pay strict attention. Virginia Valli and Nita Naldi are the two women in the case. The latter hasn't very many scenes, but she certainly works fast while on the set.

THEME. Triangle drama of lovers quarrel—the girl rejecting her fiancé when surprising him with another woman. She marries a former admirer but is eventually reunited to the hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The settings and atmosphere. Scene when heroine surprises fiancé with an other woman. The vamp incident put over by Nita Naldi.
The manly, convincing performance by Lewis Stone.
The snake-bite sequence. The work of supporting players.
DIRECTION. Conventional all the way. Might have made it less obvious. Shows restraint in handling the characters. Tacks on an unconvincing ending. Mounts it well.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Author has a large lowing. Play him up—and exploit original story known as "Snake Bite." Feature Lewis Stone, Edward Earle, Nita Naldi and Virginia Valli.
Exploit the title.
DRAWG POWER. The cast is well known—and Stone has built up a fine popularity. Well exploited it should do business. O. K. for average houses.
SUMMARY. While this is obvious and commonplace in its development it manages to present interesting moments in the sincere and convincing acting by Lewis Stone—and the excellent mounting given the picture. Too many subtitles—and these give away too much of the plot.

The Happy Warrior
(Vitagraph—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

With the success attending upon the filming of A. S. M.
Hutchinson's stories, "If Winter Comes," and "The Clean Heart," Vitagraph has turned to one of his earlier novels, "The Happy Warrior," and all things considered have made a fair-tomiddlin' picture from it. There isn't the same simplicity—or depth of character as in the author's early ventures—and because this film fails to carry these qualities it doesn't contain the excellent humanities which marked the production of his later stories.

J. Stuart Blackton has treated it pretty faithfully. But there are so many characters that getting down to the treatment of the main plot becomes difficult. As if a half-dozen figures are introduced who are given too much prominence. At least the motivation isn't very clear.

The central idea has the hero, a "happy warrior"—a man born to conquer. He is the rightful inheritor of a rich estate, but his father's secret marriage is not accepted by an imposter. The story builds to prove this chap remaining rich to be faithful to his friend who has innocently usurped his place. There's a lot of colorful incident showing the boy growing to manhood—and his joining a circus in which he becomes a prizefighter. In fact no cause for complaint can be registered against the color of the various scenes. It is well played, too. Malcolm McGregor in the central role plays with fine spirit and conviction, though there are too many close-ups of him. The cast has been well picked with an eye toward true English representation. Mary Allen, Anders Randolph, Alice, Zachary Scott, Otto Margrave, Wilfred North, Oliver Borden and Gardner James are thoroughly in character. It's a first rate picture even if the story is somewhat detached—and the figures manipulated too actively.

THEME. Romantic drama of youth who is groomed by his father to take his place as a nobleman. The boy having been cheated out of his inheritance. He renounces riches for the sake of a loyal friendship.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The detail and incident. Scene when servant kills his oppressor and his trial in court. The fight between the boys. The circus scenes—the fight and the wrestling of the show. The acting.

DIRECTION. Has done a first rate job even if story gets away from him here and there. Certainly adds a lot of color—keeps pretty faithful to novel—and shows some fine treatment in presenting characters.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Here you have the fam-umous author who wrote "If Winter Comes" and "The Clean Heart." These made great pictures. Play up the new picture as typical of the author's style. Play up the cast—and exploit the central idea—that fame and riches count for nothing if you can't have what you want. Stunt the boy

DRAWING POWER. Good exploitation should help considerably. Suitable for better class houses.

SUMMARY. Presenting a rather detached story and characters who are manipulated around a great deal, thus destroying unity of plot, the picture does not always sus-tain itself. But it carries charm, sufficient incident and some fine character studies. It is a clean story—carrying humor and sentiment. Not compact enough.

SYNOPSIS. You have cheated out of his inheritance because his father has married secretly. His aunt grooms him to take the place of his usurpers for the title and estate. He joins a circus in order to tough it and develop his strength. Overwhelms his boyish enemies and wins lasting friendship with son of usurpers. His feeling for the son makes him renounce all claim to the estate. Has romance with circus-owner's daughter.
The White Desert
(Metro-Goldwyn—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE'S a good attraction for the dog days. The title indicates the great open spaces where snow is snow—and plenty of it. It's a story of a man's courage against tremendous odds—of his titanic fight with the elements. There are fine moments of suspense especially when the assistant engineer takes his life in his hands and battles through the drifts to seek relief for the little camp of fugitives. They had been railroading—building a tunnel, but when the chief engineer tries to push the work too quickly the charges of dynamite wrenched the ledge and released an avalanche.

The plot—as plots go—doesn't amount to much. It's a slight yarn which the director has touched up to gain melodramatic effects. The climax comes early when the hero tells the girl he will try and get through after the others have failed. This expression of courage makes her declare her love for him. What follows is the shuffling through the snow, the tapping of wires far out in the white spaces, and the hero helping fire a snow plow on the way back. Meanwhile a few of the boys have become victims of scattered nerves—and a vicious trouble-maker has failed to capture the heroine when she blinds him with a pan of boiling water.

There is good action all the way—action punctuated with stray bits of humor and sentiment—Smit Edwards taking care of the humor—and a baby looking after the sentiment. The infant is saved in the nick of time when the relief train arrives with the provisions. The camp had gone without food for three days. But as the snow plow scenes are flashed time and again they get somewhat monotonous—and the suspense here spends itself.

However, there is no doubt of its appeal. The exteriors—the atmosphere—these carry pictorial appeal. The acting is also in competent hands. Pat O'Malley and the others.

THEME. Melodrama of white open spaces showing a man's courage in fighting the elements and bringing relief to an isolated camp which has nearly been exterminated by an avalanche.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The avalanche episodes—and the thrill and suspense in them. The shuffling through the snow. The scenes featuring snow plow breaking through the drifts. Scene when hero tells the girl he will try and get through after the others have failed. Repetition of following scenes lose some of their suspense. However, he has made a good melodrama.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Certainly make a play on this picture's coolness—it being a melodrama of the great white spaces. Play up the avalanche and the other highlights. Bill as a picture of a man's great fight against the elements.

DRAWING POWER. Certainly should do business in summer months if properly exploited. Play up Pat O'Malley, Robert Frazer and Claire Windsor. Good enough for first runs and other types of houses.

SUMMARY. A good melodrama is offered here. It has a simple plot which can be understood by a child. Affords plenty of action, a fair amount of suspense, moments of heart interest and humor. It also presents a fine pictorial appeal. Climax comes too early which shows weak construction. But it has plenty of power.

By Courtney Riley Cooper. Directed by Reginald Barker.

SYNOPSIS. Engineer upbraids his chief for pushing tunneling job on him and quits. Taking over the job in his stead he bursts through, taps the wires calling for food and supplies—and fires the boiler of the snow plow. The camp is saved. The hero wins the race against death—and also wins the girl.

The Lucky Devil
(Paramount—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH Byron Morgan dashing off one of his smart little stories of a chap down in his luck who manages through his colossal nerve—and a fair amount of ingenuity to enter a car in a race and win the stakes and the girl to boot, you can rest assured that the author is keeping the pace pretty well—a pace which was started when he wrote stories for Walter Reid. Richard Dix is the entry here. His easy way of carrying out the plot of this romantic comedy makes his a good bet for the lighter pieces. It is a rather topsy-turvy story—and you'll have to overlook gags and conventions in order to enjoy.

The hero is demonstrating a driving outfit in a department store and luckily wins a sporting raffle in a raffe. It is a hoodoo car given up by the owner's son who has had enough trouble with cops and women. But no sooner does the clerk step on the gas than his troubles return. He is pinched several times, runs out of gas, has a few of the accumulated elements. The hero, rather than the devil, is mistaken for the wealthy bounder who owned the car and, therefore, is rejected by the girl and her suspicious aunt who believe him a perfect devil, and ends up by running out on his board bill. Yes, and he has to fight a "yuck" and take a beating in order to get enough money to enter the race. His object is to ail the girl whose finances have also run low very.

The racing episode is the high spot of the picture and it easily takes three reels. To keep it from becoming monotonous the director has gagged it with slapstick incidents. The rube stuff is injected here and there, but is treated so funny as to be amusing. The sherif, a perfect "witch" with his "spadnich," trying to keep an eye on the car, is asked to accompany the driver—and he rides the entire race. The hair-pin curves, the obstacles, the thrills in reaching through mud and escaping death, or injury in one form or another help you along. It's all rather unconvincingly by Esther Ralston, and Edna May Oliver's work stands out.

THEME. Romantic comedy of chap who wins a hoodoo car in a raffe and runs into all kinds of trouble before he cops the race and the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The incident in the store and at camp. The troubles which piled on the hero in evading arrest. The race. The local color and atmosphere. The thrills. The easy acting by star and Esther Ralston.

DIRECTION. Keeps slight plot enlivened through providing a lot of incident. You know how it's going to end, but there are surprises in the assortment of episodes. Stresses comedy hokum too much, but does a good job by story.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with auto dealers or an auto race that might be run off in your locality. Bill it as a dashing picture of romance and adventure.

DRAWING POWER. The star should draw them. Playing up stills and billing its high spots should attract them. Certainly suitable for summer business.

SUMMARY. This is a fairly lively picture of a chap who runs into lots of trouble with his racing car. Manages to keep going with its incident and the manner in which hero tries to win girl. Has plenty of thrills and incident, but comedy hokum is not so good. However, it is light and entertaining. Played with dash and charm.

SYNOPSIS. Department store clerk wins racing car in raffe and starts to pursue pretty girl in Ford. Encounters trouble immediately. Is pinched for speeding, runs out of gas, is scorned by girl and her aunt who believe him an impostor, and nearly loses his car. However, he wins enough money in a raffe to enter the race and after some thrilling experience cops first prize. Also captures the girl.
Central Penn

days arranging various exploitation and publicly stunt on some of the new first National releases to play Portland theatres during the early part of July. Proudly carrying his recently achieved trophy prominently among his favored possessions, Lou Rosenberg, Pacific Northwest Film Golf Champion, left last week for Portland, where he will attempt to settle down to business again and carry on the sale of pictures for Al Rosenberg’s De Luxe Feature Film Exchange. It is rumoured that Lou has already turned down several offers to appear in educational films showing golf in all its finer points. Ed. Dolan of the D. & R. Theatre in Aberdeen was a recent visitor on Film Row. Among other out-of-town places that lookers eagerly tried to corral were Charles Greime of the Ivan L. Theatre in Blaine and H. C. Moore, of the Moore Theatrical Enterprises in Tacoma and Olympia.

Warm weather struck Seattle ales a vengeance last week, swinging the mercury up to 98, a hot weather record for this city. Needless to mention, throngs remained away from the city’s downtown district as much as possible, and theatre business suffered accordingly. Picture houses have trotted out their “Cool as Ice” and similarly-worded signs and advertising signatures, and have been offering warm weather entertainment to those who remain in the city. A fall in temperature has already been forecast, and was being looked forward to eagerly by local managers.

The Seattle Fire Department one last day last week averted what might have been serious damage on Film Row. A blaze broke out in the basement of the Moore Ho el, directly across a fifteen-foot alley from the F. B. O. house, and United Artists exchanges, but speedy firefighting kept the flames from crossing the alley and creating serious consequences.
NORTHERN New York exhibitors will have an opportunity of welcoming one of the best managers in the country, as Lester Wolf, who was connected with the Universal exchange here back in 1913, has returned to town from Rochester, and will henceforth handle the Metro-Goldwyn product to the north.

The theatre in Bollon Landing will not operate this summer as will also be the case with the one at Long Lake. The theatre in Lake George, however, which is run by Mrs. Carpenter, assisted by her son-in-law during the summer, opened up full-blast during the week as the well known resort began to fill with summer people. M. B. Riddell, who has the Gem in Luzerne, another resort town, is taking his vacation in the west.

Wedding bells rang for Ernest Tetrault, owner of the Grand theatre in Watervliet, one day last week. Mr. Tetrault has a host of friends along Film Row who extend their congratulations through the columns of the News.

Louis Schine, of Gloversville, who with his brother has some sixty-one theatres in New York state, has returned from Atlantic City, where he spent his vacation, remaining there the Fourth. It is said that it is the first vacation Mr. Schine has indulged in, in many years.

When Ted Hayes, a salesman in the First National exchange, went over to his car in Kingston the other day, he found it adorned with a ticket. Of course Mr. Hayes showed up in court and after explaining things managed to get off without paying a fine by assuring the judge that he would never, never violate another law, at least in Kingston.

Julius Singer, who was manager of the Universal exchange in Albany for several months, and who is now located in New York city, dropped in at the local exchange last week, and at the same time called on his many friends along Film Row. Things look good for the Albany office in connection with a sales contest as the local exchange now heads Group C.

Alphonse LeMay, projectionist at the Lincoln, in Troy, has just purchased a new automobile with the increased business which has accumulated during the past season. It is said that the exchange man was on good business last week.

Don't ever attempt to out-run Edward Hochstimm, film salesman for Pathe out of this city. That last and second transferred last week to salesmen and exchange managers. When Mr. Hochstimm was a star at his high school gym, he covered the 100 yards in 10 flat and can do almost as good these days. Leave it to William Smalley, of Columbia exchange, in New York, where transactions are well advertised in his fifteen or sixteen theatres. Bearing in mind that people travel long distances these days in automobiles, with a slight excuse, he advertises in the Oneonta papers his theatres in Cooperstown, Sidney, Stamford and Worcester, as well as his dancing pavilion in Cooperstown.

The office of Uly S. Hill, manager directing the Strand houses in Troy and Albany, submitted to an operation at one of the Albany houses during the week. The operation was a success and the boy is now on the road to recovery.

Samuel Moroze, of Albany, has acquired the Delaware theatre from Abe Stone, and will assume operation on September 6th. When Mr. Stone's lease expires. Mr. Stone, who bought a new home in Albany during the past week, will probably come to run the Arbor Hill theatre.

Walter Suckno, a peer among the exploitation exhibitors of Albany, and who has put the Albany theatre on the map during the last few months, has been named to look after the exploitation connection with the Greater Movie Season in the Albany Zone.

Harry Lazarus, of the Auditorium in Kingston, was a caller in Albany last Friday afternoon and on the Massachusetts line, on a trout fishing expedition. Mrs. Lazarus accompanied him. In commenting upon the situation in Kingston, Mr. Lazarus said that while business naturally slumped during the hot spell, that it came back last week strong. Mr. Lazarus will erect a new theatre in Kingston this year.

Harold Hahn, who has been connected with the local Fox exchange for some time past, and who was transferred last week to Denver, was tendered a party by several of his friends among the exhibitors and exchanges last Saturday evening at the Old Chares. Later, the new local manager for Fox, was in New York city during the past week. W. J. Mahoney, former supervisor of Buffalo, is now connected with the Fox exchange here, and covering the southern tier.

Joseph A. Hanley, a traveling agent for First National out of New York, was in town during the week. Miss Renee Craven, who is connected with the local First National exchange, is spending a portion of her vacation in Toronto.

The past week brought to the Bollon theatre both Julius Byek, a dealer with houses in Tannersville and Hunter, and Barnett Levy, who handles Mr. Byek's theatre in Hunter. Mr. Byek sported a tie that could be heard at least a block. He is always a welcome figure along Film Row, and while a close buyer nevertheless does a good business and is always on the lookout for pictures that draw. His houses at both Hunter and Tannersville are named "The Rudolf," after his father. Business has picked up generally throughout the entire Catskill region and during the past week a pianist as well as a violinist have been added to the Tannersville house.

The Rialto, in Monticello, run by Fred H. Starck, has become one of the best moneymaking theatres in the Catskill mountain region. When Mr. Starck took over the Rialto, which incidentally is one of the greatest theatres in that part of the state, the house was generally regarded as a white elephant. With plenty of exploitation and through the showing of good pictures, Mr. Starck has now built up a business that is the envy of other exhibitors.

The Gateway theatre in Little Falls, which was recently acquired by the Schine brothers, has been closed for the summer, during which time alterations and repairs will take place. It will reopen in the early fall.

The Star in Newburgh, seeking to overcome the regular Monday slump that so often prevails, has hit upon the plan of offering "Bargain Mondays" to the residents of that city. Admission runs from 10 to 15 cents at a time charge that is a flat tire. Just as Mr. Veiller started to change tires, it began to rain. From now on, Mr. Veiller declares that he will pin no faith to the old adage that every cloud has a silver lining.
Cleveland

H. A. BANDY, central division manager for First National, sails on the Mauretania on July 15th for England. Mr. Bandy will become British special representative for First National with headquarters in London. He has been active in the picture business in this territory for the past ten consecutive years, first as exchange manager for Tribune then in a similar capacity for Goldwyn and Associated Producers, and has been division manager for First National for the past three years. During these ten years, Mr. Bandy, more than anyone else, has established a spirit of confidence between the various branches of the industry, and has helped to add dignity to the industry. His going is felt as a distinct loss to the central division and he takes with him the good wishes of the entire territory for success in his new venture.

Tom Colby, exchange manager for Associated Exhibitors, has just returned from a visit to the key points in the territory and says that the exhibitors are optimistic about the coming season and are looking for big business.

Joe Trunk of Youngstown was in town last week with architect Howard Crane of Detroit who is building the new 1000-seat picture house in Youngstown. They are now ready for the structure and it looks as if the house would be ready to open early in the season.

Martin Printz closes his Circle theatre, Cleveland, this week for July and August. Extensive repairs will also be made during this time, including the addition of seats in the balcony.

W. J. Banks, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, was married last Friday to Miss Nell Shelling of that city. Congratulations and best wishes.

F. Reynard, who is associated with Judge Foster in owning and operating a string of motion picture theatres in Marion, paid the local exchanges a visit in person last week, and reports business good for this time of the year.

George Moore separated himself from his theatres in Bellevue and Bucyrus long enough to call on his exchange friends and swap hard luck stories.

George Sharp, former owner of the Southern theatre, Cleveland, has been heard from. He's in Mi- ami, buying and selling land. And doing it advantageously, according to a letter just received by Paul Gundanovic.

W. M. Hatch has purchased the Opera House at Prospect, Ohio. Bill Mendelsohn, who has been in charge of Paramount publicity in this territory for the past several years, is going to Philadelphia to handle Paramount publicity out of that office. His successor for the Cleveland office has not been announced.

Northern Ohio motion picture exhibitors met with members of the local Famous Players Lasky exchange for a two-day session last week, to discuss exploitation possibilities for the forthcoming Paramount pictures. At the meeting which took place at the Statler Hotel there were present Joe Cal- la, Strand theatre, Canton; Art Innemein, Plaza, Sandusky; Stanley Brown, Toledo; F. A. Kelly, Massillon; Fred Kenny, Delta, Ohio; William Tallman, East Liverpool, and William Men- delsohn, Mark Cummings, M. A. Maline, Milton Korach and J. E. Fontaine of Cleveland. This meet- ing was one of many being held in all regional key points for the purpose of gathering publicity material from the exhibitor viewpoint.

J. E. Beck, manager of the local Warner Brothers Vitaphone exchange spent the week calling on the exhibitors in their home lairs.

Milwaukee

A. SCHMUTZ, formerly with the Ladislav, has returned to Milwaukee after a successful fishing trip to the Northern Wisconsin and Upper Michigan lake regions. Frank claims to have landed a 22 pound muskie as the prize catch of his trip, and while he failed to bring back the evi- dence, the boys who have seen him prove the prowess don't have a moment doubt his word.

The Milwaukee office of F. B. O. has been buzzing with activity during the past week. M. J. Westfeldt, district manager, spent several days here in closing several contracts in co-operation with S. H. Abrams, Milwaukee manager. Art Rob-}

Reservations have been made by the Saxe Amusement Enterprises to have the Wisconsin Theatre represented in the airplane race to be sponsored by The Wisconsin News during the latter part of July. Ten planes representing local advertisers are to be entered in the race which will be around the terri-} ory of the region. Excellent publicity will be gained by all firms listed among the entrants, while the winner will have a veritable publicity gold-mine for its backers.

Sam Stoll, formerly representing Universal out of Kansas City, and Carl Ebert, who formerly traveled this state for First National, have joined the sales force of Metro-Goldwyn at Mil-} waukee. Considerable improve-} ment in the appearance of the Metro-Goldwyn offices here has been achieved by repainting and redecorating the walls, and by rearranging the layout of desks and furniture for greater space econ-} omy and efficiency.

Henry Goldman, operator of the Colonial and Grand Theatres at Green Bay, has left for Wash-} ington, D. C., where he has taken a job in the film distributing business with pleasure for a while.

"Cool and inviting" very aptly de-} ture, terraces, and a coat of fresh paint on lamp stands and the like. Clearly visible from the street, the atmosphere of the lobby makes it hard to walk the hot pavements without dropping in for a few hours comfort.

O. L. Zeise, manager of the}

MANAGER DONAT PA-
TINOT of the Laurier Theatre, Hull, Quebec, has closed that house for a thorough overhauling both inside and out and for the installation of new seats and projection equipment.
The Laurier will reopen in August.
Mr. Pasquini is in the fortunate position of being able to direct direct theatre fans to his other well-known house in Hull, the Eden Theatre.
The Eden and the Laurier are the only theatres in Hull.

John T. Fiddes, one of the oldest exhibitors in Canada, is giving out a double-header arrangement for the summer months at Winnipeg, Manitoba, to see that he cashes in on the amusement needs of the people during the hot weather.
He is the manager of the Playhouse Theatre at Winnipeg and, in addition, he is now the director of amusements at Winnipeg Beach, the popular summer resort, where he is providing various entertainment features.
The Winnipeg Beach programmes are carried out by Frank Wade as per-sic representative of Mr. Fiddes.

Morris Davis, manager of the Montreal Film Exchange Ltd, Canadian distributors for Metro-Goldwyn, Warner Bros., Pathe and other release companies, got a great send-off for March 18 on June 30 when friends and business audiences gathered together to show how much they thought of him.
The Montreal staff of Regal Films gave him a piano player as a a wedding gift while the United Artists, Ltd., paid for a chain of high class theatres in Montreal, presented him with a huge chest of table cutlery and she gave him other gifts as substantial.

J. M. Franklin, manager of
B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa,
Ontario, played host to upwards of 100 farm boys who had been colclected from various farms in the Ottawa Valley for the purpose of attending a dinner given by the city under the auspices of the Rotary Club of Ottawa, of which
Mr. Franklin is a active member.
The party had been brought over from England under a country settlement plan and a part of the programme consisted of providing periodic treats for the lads.
Mr. Franklin gave them a treat on June 30 by having them as his guests in the Keith house.

One of the real veterans of Canadian theatredom is Peter Gorman of Ottawa, Ontario, who celebrated his 60th birthday on July 2. Mr. Gorman, who is now leading a semi-active life, was showered with good wishes and tokens of esteem from all parts of the Dominion, thus showing the favor in which he is held by a legion of friends.
Pete was born in London, England, and has made his first stage appearance in Ottawa in 1876, later becoming a dancing star. He was first identified with the late Ambrose J.
Small of Toronto, being manager of the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, for Mr. Small.
Mr. Gorman is also well known as a Canadian horseman, owning a string of race horses.

A large and representative gathering of theatre and film exchange men met on the stage of the Capitol theatre on Saturday and offered congratulations to K. M. Leach, who was recently presented by
Mrs. Leach with a baby daughter.
During the evening there entered Tommy Backus, of the Strand Theatre, the well-known impersonator appeared as a nurse, and pushed a baby carriage.
In behalf of the theatre men this was presented to Mr. Leach, a condition being that Mr. Leach push the baby down Eighth avenue.
This condition he later fulfilled.
After some general harmony by the singing members of the company, the party dispersed shortly after midnight.

Ed. B., the "Chinese Salesman," the Oriental distinction being placed upon him due to the latter part of his nomenclature, who covers much of the state from out of the local Famous Players-Lasky exchange is back on his territory following a trip to Denver.

You and the inhabitants of the East who are forced to endure the hardship of a continuous stretch of paved highways for a week or two, will understand the painful experience of jumping aboard an electric train for a few hours ride to reach your furthest exhibitor, give ear to what the boys out here meet up with while making their territories. F. S. Gutbrann, stellar salesman in Eastern Idaho for Famous Players-Lasky was driving through the mountains this week through a succession of cloud bursts which made the mountains pass things of lakes and whirlpools forever. Desert lands became inundated in several minutes. Driving down one mountain pass out of Leadvale, Idaho, Frank tried to outrun one cloud burst, but the downpour caught up with him, and in a few moments the water was up to the floor boards of his car.

Under the direction of Harry Pickering, manager of exploitation in this territory for Famous Players-Lasky, a trip of this territory will be in this city Thursday and Friday, July 9-10 for a conference. This is in accordance with the national plan being carried out by this company all over the country of calling exhibitors to conference with the company representatives on exploitation and publicity.

George L. Coward, Metro-Goldwyn resident manager will leave next week for a swing over the Montana territory in the interest of the new product releases. Charles Differd, office manager for the local Metro-Goldwyn theatre a few days in the vicinity of Helper, Utah on the new productions.

The Metro-Goldwyn local exchange employs spent an enjoyable outing Saturday and Sunday in Upper Provo canyon 40 miles south of this city. They drove up to the cabin owned by Ted Chesser, owner of the Prince theater at North Ogden, and finished the fun at the Hot Pots at Heber, Utah, and a dance at Charleston.

Ben Fish, special representative of Harold Lloyd productions, was in this city this week.

A sales conference was held at the local theatre office, with all men being present. Mr. Fish left for Butte, Montana, after completing his work.

H. R. McDonald, representative of Timely Films and Aesop's Fables, was in this week confering with W. G. Setch, local manager for Pathe. He is making a tour of the key centers of the United States.

R. D. Boomer, short subject salesman for Pathe here where driving through his territory in Nevada, got stuck in the mud and was forced to walk eighteen miles for help. Ever try walking over a desert in the summer time?

The distributor of the local Warner Brothers exchange will take a swing over the Idaho and Montana sections next week.

George Jensen who has been working in Utah for Warner Brothers is in this city in jumping days prior to deserting for his regular territory Montana.

Tye, People theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo.; Stanley Chambers, Miller theatre, Wichita, Kan.; Charles W. Nevada, Mo.; W. H. Webber, Echo theatre, Great Bend, Kas.

It was a hot and active week among Kansas City exchanges last week. T. O. Byerle, First National branch manager, returned from the Kansas territory and was forced to do a lot of bailing, due to a badly swollen jaw, which, he said, was just an old fashioned tooth ache.

Louis Reichert, P. D. C. branch manager, left for a trip to Topeka, Kans., Atchison, Kas., and other key towns, as did C. F. Sennin, Educational branch manager, and C. E. Gregory, Metropolitan, Kansas City, branch manager.

Charles Russell now is representing Midwest Film Distributors, Chicago, to other distributors, branch manager, R. H. Jones, who resigned as booker for Midwest Film Distributors, has been succeeded by Speed Spook Thompson.

Henry Ginsberg, president of Henry Ginsberg Corporation, was visiting the independent offices in behalf of his product.

M. A. Kahn of Preferred Pictures has been on the road for four weeks and there is no let-up in sight. It is reported that his brother Al Kahn, formerly of Kansas City, is hitting the real estate game in Florida, since deserting the film business in Kansas City. At the Standard exchange every one appears just keeping over the outlook for the coming season.

Jack L. Newman, jr. left last week for Peoria, Ill., where he will assume charge of the advertising sales department of the Paramount branch office.

S. A. "Dad" Davidson, Neodasha, Kan., exhibitor, finally found his way to Kansas City for a movie row after a long absence.

And he brought with him the same old smile which has won him wide acquittance. Paramount has given the free drinks and a photographer called. A flash photograph was necessary. Seeing the flash from the powder used in taking the photograph, a small boy rushed into the balcony and shouted "Arrest the murderer." Immediately many persons rushed from the theatre. No one was hurt. The boy who left the theatre returned to their seats.

N. W. Huston, owner of the Columbia Theatre, at Columbus, Kansas, has recently purchased the Reel Theatre, at Oswego, Kansas. This theatre has done a great deal of business in the automobile industry.

One of the two theatres, the Lyric, at Scanamon, Kans., has closed, as has also one of the two at Neosho, Mo.

The Rex Theatre, at Joplin, Mo., has changed hands and is now under a new management.

N. W. Huston, of Columbus, Kans., owner of the Southeastern Kansas, Theatre Circuit, has closed the Columbia Theatre, at Columbus, and the Reel Theatre, at Oswego, Kansas, for three days on account of tent shows being at both towns.

The seat capacity of the Columbia Theatre, is five hundred and is cooled by the exhaust fan cool air system.

The coal mining situation in district 21, Arkansas continues in a dead lock between the operators and the miners, the latter holding out for the 1924 scale and the former refusing to meet their demands, claiming they can operate their mines, under only the 1917 scale of wages. On the outbreak of the labor situation J. S. Latimer is running the Merit Theatre Hartford, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. He leaves the town for the first three days of each week, the state of Arkansas not permitting Sunday shows.

Baltimore

Baltimore is still talking about the successful second annual outing and picnic held by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, at the Hotel Baoçu, Havre de Grace, Md., on Thursday, June 25.

Many events of interest to the men took place during the afternoon. For the ladies a card game ensued.

The baseball game almost turned into a mud game before the second inning was finished due to the ground being so soft and the participants were forced to stop playing.

The score stood 7-2 for the exchanges and none for the exhibitors.

During the bag race, Nate Souber, of the Washington, D. C. office of Universal, fell and dislocated his shoulder.

At night dancing was enjoyed by the assembled guests and during the evening one of the young ladies present were over from excitement.

Nine committees were appointed to take care of the various events and arrangements for the affair, and the general committee being: J. Louis Rome, chairman; Frank Durkee and Harry Reddish.

The other committees were:
--- Reception—Walter D. Pacy, chairman; Morris Klein, J. H. Whitehurst and William E. Stumpf.
--- Entertainment—Frank H. Durkee, chairman; William M. Whitehurst.
--- Out-of-town guests—Max Clus, manager; the offices of Julius Goodman, and Eugene B. McCurdy.

Arthur Price, Jr., son of Arthur Price, manager of the Aurora and Blue Bell theatres, accidently broke his left arm elbow while wrestling with a friend on Thursday, June 25. The doctors say according to Mr. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Price were both at the movie outing when it happened.

The offices of the Associated Theatres Company, of which J. Louis Rome is general manager, have been moved from the Equitable building, to the second floor of the Rialto Theatre, North Avenue, where Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln one of the picture houses operated by that company. Other theatres controlled by that company have been given to the theatre owners for use.

Arthur Price, Jr., son of Arthur Price, manager of the Aurora and Blue Bell theatres, accidently broke his right arm elbow while wrestling with a friend on Thursday, June 25. The doctors say according to Mr. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Price were both at the movie outing when it happened.

Extensive alterations will be made in the stage of the Rivoli Theatre, and it is dark so as to have a large assortment of drops and special scenic effects may be stored in the flies and held ready to be used in individual pieces. Special acts will be given on the program during the season with the regular programs of moving pictures.

The Rivoli will reopen to the public on Monday July 20. Mr. Manager of the New Theatre enjoyed a vacation during the week of June 29 and 30. On his return Mr. Jefferson, Mr. person, of the Whitehurst staff managed the playhouse during his absence.

Upton S. Brunsmill, manager of the Century Theatre, celebrated his fifth wedding anniversary on Wednesday, July 1, at his home and over 100 friends including many of his fellow employees at the Century were his guests for the occasion. All had a fine time.

Julius Goodman manager of the Ideal theatre, Hampden, was busy on Thursday, July 2 getting everything ready for his little son to go away to a summer camp. The sturdy little fellow looked ticked pink.

Bernard Depkin, jr., manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, spent a couple of days in New York last week.

The first part of the week began cloudy and cool—just right for the fans to come out in force. At the Century Theatre on that night it looked like the opening of a good week in winter time. At the Hippodrome, the attendance was excellent also.
Thomas A. Kilfoil, who is in Atlanta supervising the equipping of the new Paramount Exchange at 116 Walton Street, will remain here throughout July after which he has been decided by Harry G. Ballance, head of Famous Players’ distribution department in the Southeastern States, to Kilfoil will cover the entire division, systematising all Paramount offices to a 100 per cent conformity with national offices methods of this organization. This will be the first time that this has been undertaken in the southeastern division since these offices were taken over by Famous from S. A. Lynch.

Jacksonville, Charlotte and New Orleans exchanges will occupy Mr. Kilfoil’s attention immediately after completing the work now in progress in Atlanta and it is anticipated by Mr. Ballance that it will be necessary for Mr. Kilfoil to remain in this territory until at least the end of September.

In celebration of the Glorious Fourth, the local Better Films Committee is arranging a special programme of entertainment to be shown on a Friday afternoon at the Howard theatre at the regular Saturday Morning Children’s Matinee. Howard W. Watson, who is chairman of the committee, will make a short talk, following which Alex Keese, conductor of the State Street orchestra, will present several artists.

Next week the Metropolitan theatre will celebrate its fourth anniversary with a gala program, each feature of which has been selected with the utmost care.

The local force of Producers Distributing Corporation is no longer to be seen at 100 Walton street. Immediately upon the completion of the new quarters at 127 Walton street, Mrs. Anna H. Sessions, manager, moved on the evening of Tuesday, June 30th. Miss Sessions is delighted with her new surroundings.

The Elks Theatre in Huntsville, Alabama, which was formerly operated by C. L. Hackworth, who controls the Jefferson and the Grand theatres there, has been taken over by Al Welsey. Mr. Hackworth continues in charge of his other two houses. The Elks Theatre has a policy providing for the running of musical comedy tabs and vaudeville.

A new theatre, the Capitol, is under construction in Sheffield, Alabama, and will be ready for openings in a short time. The man Harris, who owns and will operate the Capitol, is very enthusiastic about his theatre, which is his first. It will be a pretty, well equipped and entirely modern house, with a seating capacity of 500.

W. A. Sanges, of Progress Pictures, has received his first communication from Arthur C. Bromberg, president of the company, who has been spending the past two weeks on the West Coast, lining up product for next season. The wire reassured Mr. Sanges, who has been worried about Mr. Bromberg since the earthquake occurred in Los Angeles, that Mr. Bromberg has been ill. He is much better now, and will soon return to Atlanta.

W. I. Heywood, formerly connected with Fox in Charlotte, N. C., has been with Progress, working out of the Atlanta office. Mr. Heywood’s family is located here, which is one reason for his change. He will travel the Georgia territory temporarily, and has already gone out on his first trip.

Herbert C. Wales, Florida representative for Progress, is back from a two weeks’ vacation spent in the mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Hearne, who are on their wedding trip in North Carolina, are expected to return to Atlanta by Tuesday of next week. They were married last Saturday, at 7 o’clock in the morning and left immediately for a ten day tour. Mr. Hearne is sales and office manager for Lasky.

James B. Buchanan, Pathe cameraman, has returned from St. Simon’s, where he has been spending a vacation. Mr. Buchanan is remaining for a longer stay.

Oscar Oldknow, vice-president of Metro Film Distributing corporation is spending this week-end with his wife and Oscar, Jr., who are in Asheville, N. C., for the summer vacation.

H. F. Laseter, formerly manager of Ketter’s theatre in Palm Beach, Fla., now in the real estate business, spent this week in Atlanta, and took occasion to visit his old friends on Film Row. Before his connection with Ketter’s theatre, Mr. Laseter was on the sales force of Progress Pictures, and worked out of the Atlanta office.

Thomas G. Coleman, manager of the Cameo theatre, went to Florence in July during his mother, Mrs. C. R. Coleman, and his sister, Miss Elsie Coleman, to Atlanta, where they will stay for some time.

Jack Chertok, who left Atlanta a little more than two weeks ago for New York, now working on the Metro-Goldwyn lot as assistant cameraman. This is his first step toward the ultimate goal of his ambition—direction. Jack will be remembered as the young nephew of Dr. Louis C. Roughtlin, well known in local film circles.

Fire caused by defective wiring, broke out Monday evening at 10 o’clock in the local Pathe exchange and totally destroyed the poster and advertising departments. It was discovered by a passerby, and the fire engines arrived in time to check the flames before any of the thousands of feet of film stored in the Pathe exchange, was touched.

Had they not arrived, there have been a mean disaster, not only for Pathe but for the entire block. The building was completely burned in any way was by water. About 100 feet were water soaked, but this was quickly dried out. No records were lost, and due to the energy of the Pathe force the routine went on the next day without a single show being missed out.

Pathe is now installed in new offices, and is in the process of drying out, with books and records spread water soaked about. Work continued steadily, in spite of difficulties, and W. W. Anderson, branch manager, and his force are to be congratulated.

AND now the movies have invaded the Wellington Country Club links, the principal frontier of outdoor sports.

The invasion took place on July Fourth in the form of a Colonial Theatre Handicap, in which the principal trophy was a lovely cup offered by George Rea, purveyor of screen fare and ardent bunker-crawler. The Colonial Theatre Handicap was a one bite affair, the cup to be awarded for all time to the golfer turning in the lowest net score.

An added novelty had also been prepared by Mr. Rea, in conjunction with Bill Danzer, representative of Paramount Pictures, who has been a local visitor. Scores of the three lowest men in the Colonial Theatre Handicap are to be forwarded to Hollywood to glorify both the glamour and the roster of aspirants including many of the Club’s premier golfers.

Frank Murphy, of the Murphy Theatre Wilmington, Ohio, paid his usual visit to Film Row right before the Fourth. Besides booking several pictures he also purchased a supply of fireworks which he set off on the evening of the fourth for the entertainment of his patrons.

M. Devore of the Palace Theatre, Sabina, Ohio, was another of the exhibitors to pay a visit to the exchanges during the extreme hot spell.

Jack Tierney, who up until now has been carrying the contracts for F.B.O. has severed his connections with this firm and allied himself as salesman with Producers.

Cy Stewart who recently resigned as city salesman for Standard is now connected with the local Warner office.

Dave Helbig, for many years city salesman for Metro Goldwyn, has resigned and will devote the next few weeks vacationing in some quite resort where he can relax his health. Joe Mayer, Metro Goldwyn salesman has given up the road and assumed the city territory for the firm in place of Helbig.

Margaret Wilson, of the F.B.O. office force has been asked to enter the bathing beauty contest at Atlantic City. But so far Miss Wilson has declined all invitations preferring a quiet life to one of fame and publicity for she would be a sure winner were she an entrant.

Jules Frankel, left on a hurried trip for Miami, Florida, where he is connected with his father in some real estate transactions.

Paul Hayo of the Morris Theatre, Cincinnati is away on his vacation on the great lakes where he intends to spend most of his time fishing.

Frances Brown broker for Paramount is spending her vacation with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Behlen in Lexington, Ky. Incidentally she will still be in touch with Famous Players as Charlie is Paramount salesman in that part of Kentucky.

Another devotee of golf or one whom the golf bug has bitten lately is Mildred Boclage, private secretary to Chas. Keegan, Paramount district manager.

Fabian of the Fabian Circuit was over, also Bill Meschese of the Walter Reade Theatres, George Matter of the U. B. O. office, S. Sobelson of Jersey City, Louis Rosenthal, Lee Newberry of South Jersey, Louis Heiman of Rahway, Sam Perry of Englewood were also shopping around.

It is reported that the Strand at Jersey City, owned by Taunhauser and Sobelson has been sold to an un-named party who will increase the seating capacity 1200.

From New Brunswick comes the news that Dave Snapper of the Strand, Michael Jelin of the Opera House and Sol Kelsey and Phil Kivlan of the Wilbur Amusement Co., have purchased a piece of property in South River on which they are planning to erect a new motion picture theatre.

The tendency towards finer and smaller theatres is indicated by the few firms equipped by the increasing orders for equipment being placed by the houses of smaller size. For instance, the Tompkinsville Amusement Corp. has just inaugurated a new Wurlitzer Unit organ in their Turkey Hall, at Tompkinsville, Staten Island.

Middle Village, L. I. also has a new Wurlitzer Unit Organ. One has been purchased for the Gilrose Amusement Company for their Arion Theatre.

Denver

The Empress Theatre, one of the Curtis Street houses of Denver has reopened after a two weeks suspension of business. The Empress is a vaudeville and first run picture theatre. Its closing down was in accordance with its customary policy during the summer, affording the management an opportunity to make the necessary improvements and redecorating before the opening of the new session. The theatre is managed by Louis Levand, who, by the way has just been made the treasurer of the Greater Movie Season campaign.

Charles R. Gilmore manager of Warner Bros.' Vitagraph is almost committed to the territory these days. Charlie just returned from an extended trip into the Western territory. He is installing the new Wurlitzer Organ in the Glencoe. Glencoe and all other key cities in that part of the country. Thomas Berta, who with his brother owns and manages the Rialto theatre, Rock Springs, Wyoming stopped over in Denver for a short visit. He is going to Colorado where he will spend his vacation visiting relatives.

The Park Theatre of Eves Park, Colorado is filling a very important part in the lives of the summer tourists visiting the resort this year. The theatre is running every day in the week. Up there they climb mountains and fish during the day and attend the theatre at night. W. C. Gwynn is managing the theatre this year. Down in Pueblo, Colorado, just before you start the climb up Pike's Peak the summer vacationists are being entertained by the Cameo and Manhattan theatres. These theatres are closed during the winter but make up for lost time during the summer.

Mel Wilson, former manager of the local office of Famous Players-Lasky and later special representative for Producers has accepted the managerial duties of the local branch of the Fox Film Corporation. Mr. Wilson succeeds Harry Cassidy who resigned two weeks ago. Exhibitors and exchanges alike are delighted to see Mr. Wilson definitely located in the territory again.

Great preparations are being made Monday night for a picture of film exchange employees. Mr. Morrison is the selected spot this year. The date is Wednesday July 15th. Ed Schollkopf of Idaho Springs, Colorado, and Millard Peterson of Plager Col., are among the exhibitors visiting Denver during the past week.

J. J. Goldstein has come and gone. He left for Philadelphia yesterday in his new Cadillac sedan the day he arrived he announced that his company had definitely taken over the Isis Theatre of Longmont Colo. Mr. Goldstein also indicates that the Longmont theatre is in that city. Ed Marquand, former owner and Manager of S. Goldstein was recently ordered to manage both theatres for Mr. Goldstein. After several years of affiliation with West Coast in Los Angeles, as house manager of Loew’s State Theatre, and also Riverside and Buriank Theatres, M. E. Fulton, well known theatre man, has pur-chased the Strand Theatre in Santa Rosa.

Through erroneous reports it was stated that the recent Paramount fire in their vault was caused by an electric drill, this naturally giving the unwarranted impression of negligence. The local office has asked that we correct this statement since the real cause was from a short circuit in the electric wiring.

Albert Huntley has equipped his Starland Theatre at Sebastopol, Cal. with a new Wurlitzer Unit Organ.

Florida

MANAGER John B. Carroll, of the Victory, Tampa, pulled a good one on Father’s Day. He arranged things so that he wished all fathers over the age of 60 to be his guests on that day, and that he would give a prize to the oldest father. Nearly a hundred attended and they had a jolly reunion. The prize was awarded to Mr. John McCracken who was 96 years old. In addition to this prize Mr. Carroll gave each of the others a necktie.

John S. Jackson, owner of the Palms at New Port Richey, was a visitor in Tampa last Sunday. He is looking up some equipment for a house he is building in a big saw mill settlement near his city. Mr. Jackson says there are nearly 2,000 at work in these mills and they have no amusement, so he pro-poses to supply that need.

Dowd and B. H. Palmer, Jr., who operate the High-lands in Frost Proof, are arrang-ing to open another house in West Frost Proof.

N. V. Darley, manager of the Rivoli in Ybor City, was married last Thursday. After the honey- moon Mrs. Darley will act as his assistant.

B. H. Trumbull, manager of the Liberty, St. Petersburg, visited in Tampa yesterday. Mr. Trum-bull says that business is good with him and that he is planning to open another theatre there.

One night last week vandalism broke into the Hyde Park Theatre, Tampa, and broke up the screen and other fixtures. They tore the machines from the booth and threw them in the river. D. A. Stewart, the owner, is at a loss as to the reason for all this wrecking, as he is a new comer to Tampa and can’t figure out who should have it in for him. The house is located in the residential section of the city.

Jno. B. Carroll, City Manager for the Consolidated Amusement Co., Tampa, has placed David Ginsburg in charge of the pub-licating for the Strand and Grand theatres. Mr. Ginsburg was for-merly connected with the Tampa Times.

St. Petersburg’s newest theatre, the Patio, located at 19th street and Central avenue, will open its doors on Monday night, July 13th.

The house is unique through the fact that the entire roof can be mechanically opened or closed at will, so that in clear weather the house can be converted into an air-dome. The building is of hollow tile and is fireproof. There is a balcony and main floor which will seat 1,250. Anthony Skimbo is the owner and builder, and he stated that the building would cost approximately $30,000.

George B. Peck, manager of the Strand, Tampa, left last Thursday for Hollywood, where he will spend his vacation with his folks. O. G. Finly, his assistant manager is keeping the home fires burning.

Buffalo

JACOB FARBER, Batavia, clothing dealer and owner of the new Lafayette theatre in the town, has turned the building over to Fred M. Zimmerman, president of Western New York Theatrical Association, who previously con-structed the theatre for a term of 15 years. The theatre is complete in every detail. James Kelly, formerly at the Afton and North Tonawanda has been appointed manager of the Lafayette.

Arthur L. Skinner, manager of the Victoria theatre, a popular Buffalo community theatre, is on his vacation at his summer home at Point Abino, near Crystal Beach, Ontario. He is spending most of his time chasing the elusive perch in the waters of Lake Erie. And the funny part of it, Art is catching ‘em.

Roy Crandall, former Buffalo newspaperman and now one of the publicity staff of the Fox Film corporation in New York, was in town last week end greeting old friends and conferring with local branch manager, Bill Rowell.

Elmer Winegar and John Kim-berley put over a trip with the Crystal Beach company this week through which tickets were dis tributed at the theatres good for Movie Day at the beach. On this day a two reeler was made showing a couple enjoying the amusements at the resort. This film will be shown next week at the theatres which gave out the tickets.

The new Freedom Film corpora-tion at Watervliet is being furnished and fully equipped and Richard C. Fox, general mana-ger, is soon to stage a formal opening celebration. The managers are now installing shipping room equipment and a screening room is being built. Freedom is the for-mer Rochester concern which was consolidated with Golden Rule Pic-tures corporation. The name of the former company is being re-tained under the reorganization plan.

Jake Rappaport of the Lovejoy, a popular Buffalo East Side commu-nity house, says he remembers way back when it used to be a top house to get ‘em in out of the theatre while now it’s a harder job to get ‘em in. Jake operated a store that used to come in at a nickel a throw and brought their lunch and bedding with them and when, having seen the same picture the previous evening— asked him if that was all.

A. Edmund Lee of the Lock City Theatres, Inc. has just com-pleted installation of a new Wur litzer Unit Organ.

New Color Effects for Stage Presentation

Eastman Theatre and Kodak Co. Develop Method Giving Remarkable Results That Are Easily Obtainable

By Thomas F. Murray, Jr.

To satisfy the desire for color in the motion picture theatre the public looks, and does not look in vain, to the man who in the first place made motion pictures possible, to George Eastman, and through him to the personnel and facilities of the Research Laboratories of the Eastman Kodak Company and the Eastman Theatre. It was through the cooperation and combined effort of the men of these two organizations that the color lighting effects to be described, were perfected, and it is worthy of note, in passing, that the color effects thus obtained are easily produced, have a large sphere of applicability, and are decidedly pleasing to the spectators.

Let us go up into the projection room of the Eastman Theatre and learn how these color effects are produced. When new effects are being tried out, which is every week, we will find Lewis M. Townsend, projection engineer for the Eastman interests in Rochester taking direct charge. It was Mr. Townsend, in collaboration with Loyd A. Jones, head of the physics department of the Research Laboratories of the Eastman Kodak Company, who devised and developed this type of color lighting, greatly assisted in the work by William Hemmey of the Eastman Theatre staff whose agile brush and clever mind are responsible for the designs used.

The equipment for producing these color effects at the Eastman Theatre consists of four flood lights, to each of which has been added an eight inch plano-convex lens and an optical bed, or rigid metal support, on which is mounted an objective lens, additional iris diaphragms, and a rack of slots for holding masks, designs, and color filters.

Lloyd A. Jones, head of Physics department of the Eastman Research Laboratories and Lewis M. Townsend, projection engineer for the Eastman Theatre and other Eastman interests in Rochester. It was Mr. Jones in collaboration with Mr. Townsend who devised and developed the type of colored lighting described in the accompanying article.

There is also in the added equipment a place for mounting a color wheel. The optical bed and additional lens equipment changes the flood light into a mammoth stereopticon. The equipment includes also a double dissolving stereopticon, with its two color wheels, and slide holders arranged so that one or both plates carrying the designs may be rotated in the same direction or in opposite directions.

The color filters used are made by mounting appropriate sized sheets of colored gelatin in the metal slides supplied by the manufacturers of the flood lights for this purpose. The masks or slides used are of metal cut to fit the slots in the rack on the optical bed. Each mask has an opening in its center of such a size and shape that the light passing through illuminates the stage or the stage and the orchestra pit, but no other part of the house. The designs, depending on the original drawing and the results desired, are either photographed in the regular way and printed on five by seven inch sheets of cine positive film on acetate base, or are photographed directly on one positive film on acetate base. That the design used in the stereopticons should be on cellulose acetate base is important, because the heat of the arc will crack glass plates and ignite nitro cellulose or celluloid base.

The method for producing what Loyd A. Jones calls "static" color introductions may be divided into four general classifications. (A) Those in which no design is used. (B) Those in which one drawn design is used, whether or without a supplementary photograph. (C) Those in which two drawn designs are used. (D) Those in which two photographs are used.

In the first of these methods pleasing color effects are obtained by combining on the screen the colors produced by allowing the light to pass through appropriate filters using only a plain mask in each stereopticon to confine the light to the stage, or to the stage and orchestra pit. In this way very delightful effects have been obtained by using two different shades of red. At another time red was used with the iris half closed and a full flood of blue. Again the combination was one shade of blue iris off 1 4; red iris on 1 2; and a second shade of blue full flood. By choice of the iris diaphragms and a judicious use of the size of the opening on each, various types of color effects are to be had. The partial irising down of some of the colors take... these colors out of the region of the screen corresponding to the amount the iris is closed. By using a diaphragm that is in focus, the colors are cut sharply and distinct bands of color are produced, giving an effect similar to that of the rainbow. If, on the other hand, a diaphragm is used that is not in focus, the colors blend and there is an easy color transition across the whole curtain.

By far the largest number of static color effects used at the Eastman Theatre so far have been produced by the method designated (B). In general, in this class, an attempt is made to link the color scheme and the design with a prominent feature or personality in the picture to follow. As an example of such an instance might be the use of the drawing of the old time boat as an introduction to the picture “The Sea Hawk”. In this case the drawing, (Fig. 1) was photographed in the usual way on standard film and a print was made on cine positive film on acetate base. This was mounted on a metal support and projected through a filter giving a background of blended colors on which floated a black ship. The curtain was then flooded with light from another stereopticon using a violet-blue filter so selected that it gave color to the vessel without destroying its contrast with the background. The blended color filter used with the figure of the boat was made at the Eastman Theatre by mounting strips of colored gelatin in a filter slide. The colors ranged from blue over the surface of the water, through violet-blue and violet and on into rose for the reflection from the rising sun. In order that the colors would blend gracefully, the filter was placed in a special holder close to the objective lens.

In the photoplay, “A Thief in Paradise”, the dance representing the tragedy of the pearl fisher furnished the motif for the introduction. Here a conventional drawing of a large shell (Fig. 2A) was used with a red filter. From another lamp Figure 2B was projected through a flesh colored filter showing Aileen Pringle in the dance. This print was reduced and blocked out so that it fit conveniently into the shell. A similar idea was employed in connection with the showing of “He Who Gets Slapped”. In this instance Figure 3A was used with a green filter and a photograph of Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer (Fig. 3B) was projected through a flesh colored filter, while a blue flood played over the whole stage. With “The Golden Bed”, the drawing ing of the peacocks (Fig. 4) was projected through a green filter while the curtain was flooded with magenta. During Easter week, as an introduction to the news reel, there was used a drawing of calla lilies (Fig. 5). The negative was used in this instance and it was hand colored; therefore, no filter was used with it, but from another source a soft green flooded the stage.

The instances illustrated were some of the more pretentious efforts in this class and they serve to show that a real effort is being made, where possible, to use a color introduction that is in keeping with the season, or with the spirit of the production. There are, of course, several less ambitious designs which have their place and which give surprisingly delightful effects. Some of these consist of dense areas in the form of rectangles, discs, hearts, shamrocks and the like having bands of lesser and lesser density following the original contour, or there might be alternate clear and dense areas. Such designs are usually used in connection with a picture of the actor or actress taking the leading part. One instance of this was the use of a circle “gradation film” as this type of design has come to be called at the Eastman, using a red filter, a picture of “Farina” through a yellow filter, and a flood through a blue filter. As you suspect, the introduction was to an “Our Gang” comedy.

The method designated as (C) does not differ greatly from (B), but with it and the judicious use of the iris diaphragm some very interesting results can be obtained. In one instance the curtain was flooded with violet-blue and the design of the cattails and butterflies (Fig. 6A) was slowly iris-ed on through a green filter. When this diaphragm was completely open, the diaphragm on the third machine, in which was the design of the butterflies alone (Fig. 6B) and an orange filter was slowly opened. This caused the orange butterflies to appear one by one over the cattails. The designs are then slowly iris-ed off in the reverse order. In this case, as with the calla lilies, negatives of the drawings are made on acetate base film and these negatives are used in the stereopticons.

Method (D) is used to reproduce in colors, designs which are in colors in the original. This method requires a little more technique in its production, but the results justify the extra effort. Nearly any design in colors may be used as the basis of this work, but it is advisable to select something whose colors are bright and contrasty and whose design is comparatively free from detail. A few suggestions might include pebbled paper such as is sometimes used for catalogue covers, wall paper, cloth having flower designs, or the border of a Navajo blanket. Figure 7 (348) shows a simple design that gave a very artistic effect. The little “shamrocks” or “propellers” were colored red, green, yellow, purple, orange, and blue.

The design selected is photographed on two panchromatic plates, one photograph being made through a red color filter and one through a cine green filter. Prints of each of these negatives are made on cine positive film coated on cellulose acetate base and the positives are mounted on metal slides. The two designs are then thrown onto the curtain in register with each other through filters similar to those used in photographing the original. When pleasing effects are desired in colors other than those of the original design, different filters from the red

Evolution of Daffin Theatre, Tallahassee, Fla., Since Origin in 1912

Although the paint is hardly dry on his new and modern-to-the-minute motion picture theatre, Charles E. Daffin, of Tallahassee, Florida, already has purchased one of the best corners on Monroe street and College avenue, near his present location, plans have been drawn and steel is on the ground ready for even greater expansion. His new location is one of the most ideally situated corners of the city where the new building will be erected when the time arrives that larger quarters will be required.

Mr. Daffin began his career in the moving picture field at Marianna, Fla., his home town, 17 years ago. Adopting at the beginning the slogan of service to his patrons, his success has been little short of phenomenal, not only in his home town, but in the larger field he sought at the state Capital. Here he established himself in the year of 1912 in his present location, the quarters of which have been modernized to meet changing conditions.

His progressive policies of giving his patrons the best pictures available increased his business to such an extent that he soon found it necessary to enlarge the seating capacity of the theatre. The growth of his show house may be seen in the accompanying pictures.

The first picture on the left of the illustration shown on this page is the Daffin Theatre in 1912; the house in the center shows the remodeled Daffin, in which Otis Skinner's screen version of "Kismet" played in 1921. The four young ladies, in front, in Turkish harem garb, served as usherettes. The present view is the Daffin Theatre as it is today, following extensive improvements that have just been completed. The 1925 model is generally conceded by patrons of motion picture houses to be the equal of those in much larger cities, and such as few places the size of Tallahassee can boast.

Not only does Mr. Daffin own the improved building but he has it equipped with apparatus of the most modern type, including a ventilating system. The building is lighted with four flood lights. The stage is ample for any road attraction. It can be easily seen from any part of the auditorium and is fitted with velvet draperies, with French windows on each side, baskets of flowers. Music for the show is furnished by an organ.

Of Spanish architecture, the Daffin Theatre presents an appearance that adds beauty to its surroundings. It is finished in twelve-color chip-glass as the dash where pebble is commonly used. The structure is three stories high above ground with basement for dressing rooms. The upper floors, after providing commodious space for balcony purposes, leaves room for two apartments. Entrance to the theatre is denoted by an electric flash advertising sign of 350 lights, hung above the marquee, which also has 32 lights with an encircling flex-lume sign.

The theatre is located in the heart of the business district of Tallahassee, where ground is at the highest value. On the West side of the entrance are located the administrative offices of the theatre.

During his residence in Tallahassee and throughout his entire career in the motion picture exhibiting business Mr. Daffin has formed valuable contracts in his state and made friends for the industry by his own splendid example as a worthy factor in community life.

Evolution of the Daffin theatre, Tallahassee, Fla. The picture on the left shows the first Daffin theatre in 1912; in the center is the remodelled house in which Otis Skinner's screen version of "Kismet" played in 1921; the right view is the newly opened Daffin which it is claimed vies with the better theatres in larger centers.
Low First Cost—Low Operating Expense with Incandescent Projection

G-E Incandescent Lamp Projectors have increased profits for many exhibitors who have kept abreast of modern developments in motion picture equipment.

Recent improvements have broadened the field for incandescent projection—perhaps your theatre could now use this method and secure material savings in overhead and operating expense.

G-E engineers, experienced in the application of both arc and incandescent systems, will be glad to give unprejudiced advice to theatre owners. Apply to the nearest G-E office.
Inquiries and Comments

The New York office of First National Pictures, Inc., informs us that the English Company of that name with offices in Oxford Street, London, has apparently solved the difficulty of non-standardized projector spindles in the United Kingdom, by the simple expedient of using a reel with a hub which will fit the spindles of the various projectors. In order to appreciate the difficulty which exists along these lines it should be mentioned that no fewer than ten makes of projectors, using three sizes of spindles, are in use in England. They are as follows:

3/32" spindle Ermeman, Kalee, Kamm.
38/32" spindle Omnia, Powers, Pathé Motograph, Ross.
1/2" spindle Gaumont.
5/16" spindle Simplex.

This difference in spindle size had been the main obstacle to the adoption of the method universally employed in the United States of sending out film on reels or "spools," as the English call them.

Inter-Changeable Reel

At a recent First National Convention, the advent of a patented inter-changeable reel was announced and the statement was made that this company would adopt the invention with a view toward solving the problem of shipping film on reels which could be used on all projectors.

A large order for Hog Patented Spools, as these reels are called, was placed with the intentions of putting them into use as soon as possible.

Before the adoption of this reel, however, it was decided to test the practicability of Mr. Hogg's invention prior to actually placing the reels in service in the field. For eight months a number of sample reels have been in continuous service, and First National are more than satisfied that the mechanism is not only sound, but what is more important, that the purpose of the Hogg reel which is to prolong the life of a copy and insure better service of good-condition prints to the exhibitor is fully accomplished.

The advantages which the Hogg reel offers, it is claimed, to both renters and exhibitors is obvious. The shipping of film on reels which is made possible by the inter-changeable core means protection and support of the reels in transit cases, the scrapping of individual film containers, minimum re-winding and handling, prevention against scratching caused by pulling and loosening the coils of the reel, protection of sprocket holes against the damaging effect of thumping to get the reels level and so on.

There is no doubt that an enormous amount of damage to film which reflects both on the exchange and of course, on the exhibitor, is caused either through tightening up reels or through thumping them to get them level, in one ease bad scratching of edges being caused, and in the other serious injury to the sprocket holes.

It should be noted that owing to the elimination of film tins, and owing to the fact that the Hogg mechanical spool is only an ounce or two heavier than the ordinary spool that the additional carriage is negligible. An instruction sheet to projectionists shows the simplicity of the mechanism and the ease with which it may be adjusted to suit any projector.

How It Works

The Hogg Spool, as this interchangeable reel is called, is shown in Fig. 1. It is used as follows:

The dimension marked against the hole in which the locking pin (A) is engaged, represents the size of spindle bearing (B) which is in position. This may be either 5 16”, 13 32” or ½” according to which make of projector is used.

To bring any desired spool bearing is position insert any sharp pointed instrument into the counter sunk end of locking pin (A), depress and wedge it sideways under flange towards the locking pin hole marked with the size of spindle bearing (B) desired. Then insert the pointed instrument into spindle bearing (B) and rotate in the same direction until locking pin (A) reaches hole and engages with a sharp "click." The "spool" is now ready for use.

To Promote Its Use

It is the intention to induce each exhibitor to purchase one spare Hogg spool for each of their projectors. Although this is not essential, this small expenditure will avoid re-winding the last reel off the local reel on to the Hogg spool following the last performance. The possession of the spare reel will enable the last part of the copy to be taken straight from the lower magazine and placed in transit cases for despatch without delay, the first reel having been picked up in the morning and replaced by the spool spool. There is also the hope that other exchanges will adopt the idea as a money saving adjunct to their service, and with a view to eliminating the poor condition of prints which is fairly general throughout the trade.

They wish to point out, however, that the Hogg spool is in no wise exclusive to First National, nor are they deriving from those ordered by other exchanges any financial benefit. The only person benefiting financially, who is connected with the firm, being Mr. Hogg, the inventor to whom a small royalty will accrue.

One feels it incumbent to express satisfaction on the adoption of an invention which can but prove for the general good of the print service in this country. There is no doubt that the Hogg device should prove vastly helpful, and the value of it has already been proved by the eight months' trial which has taken place.

Theatre to Be Erected in Ludlow Section, New York City

The Ludlow section of New York is to have a new $150,000 theatre to be erected on Riverdale Ave., near Morris Street on a plot 100 x 200 ft. The theatre is to have every modern convenience. It is to have a seating capacity of 1,000, and will be under the management of Guy Graves, Vice-president of Yonkers Street and Realty Corp. The architect who is drawing the plans is H. Lansing Quick.

Third St. Louis House is Planned by R. Levine

A third St. Louis house is planned by Reuben Levine of R. Levine & Company, Inc., Chicago. Levine recently purchased 647 feet on Gravois avenue near Meramec Street from C. W. Beck for $187,000 and will erect on a plot 147 by 213 feet a theatre seating 2,500 persons, also seven stores and forty apartments. It will be ready about February, 1926. It will be three stories and constructed of reinforced concrete and brick and terra cotta trim.

Detroit Co. Plans Ownership of Seven Theatres

Seven motion picture houses are to be owned by the James N. Robertson Theatrical Enterprises, Detroit, according to the latest reports. This company now has the Cinderella and the Delrex and will open the new Roosevelt in August. In addition a new theatre, seating 2,000 will be built at Charlevoix and Mt. Elliott streets.
Making Good Pictures Better

THE perfect combination of good pictures and proper projection makes good pictures better.

With a reliable source of direct current for proper projection, the appeal of a good picture is greatly strengthened.

Westinghouse Motion Picture Motor-Generators, because of their excellent electrical characteristics, provide this reliable source of direct current and assure perfect projection of a good picture.

Westinghouse Motion Picture Motor-Generators have ample overload capacity and the mechanical construction to give continuous, trouble-free service for years. The experience of forty years in building electrical machinery is embodied in every Westinghouse Motor-Generator.

Westinghouse Distributors can supply you with complete information about all electrical equipment for better projection.

Australia Equipment Dealer in New York on Trip Around World

JOHN HARRINGTON who with his wife and son left their home in Australia last March, arriving in California sixteen days later, finally reached New York several weeks ago and will leave in a few days for England on a world tour which they believe will bring them home about Christmas of this year.

Mr. Harrington is founder and managing director of the firm of Harringtons, Ltd., Australia and New Zealand. The company carries on a very extensive business in both wholesaleing and retailing in every state of the Commonwealth of Australia and the Dominion of New Zealand, and, it is claimed, is the largest motion picture theatre supply house in that part of the world, and is distributor of Power's Projectors.

Harrington, Ltd., has large and up-to-date warehouses in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide, Katoomba, Auckland, N. Z., and Wellington, N. Z. The company has been building up a dealer clientele for 36 years.

It is 38 years since Mr. Harrington last visited this country and, of course, noticed marked changes and improvements when visiting the leading movie studios in California. He was greatly impressed with the splendid advances made in equipment, methods and setting.

Mr. Harrington states that motion pictures are becoming more and more popular in Australia and New Zealand. In fact it is now the usual thing for many families to attend the movies at least two or three times a week and this may offer an example to the motion picture industry in this country.

Mr. Harrington speaks very favorably of American motion picture projectors and says that they have a wonderful reputation in Australia and New Zealand for wearing qualities. Although higher in price than foreign make they are popular among those who want the best. Mr. Harrington makes the interesting note in connection with this statement that the Commonwealth Film Censors have used the same two Power's GB projectors for many years and every film which has entered the great Australian continent from the United States has passed through those two projectors.

Film Standardizer to Help Make Better Pictures

Selection of movie films, camera plates, and printing papers suitable to the work in hand is to be aided by an instrument for the testing and standardizing of light sensitive emulsions developed by Raymond Davis, Chief of the Photographic Laboratory of the Bureau of Standards, of the Commerce Department, and known as a sensitometer.

The emulsions of which plates, films, and papers are coated vary considerably in speed and contrast, and in sensitiveness to light of different colors. All of these properties affect the use to which the product can be put. A fast plate or film is needed for recording swiftly moving objects, a contrasty plate for use on cloudy days, a soft place in brilliant sunshine. Brilliantly colored objects are rendered best by a plate and color filter combination giving the same color sensitiveness as the eye, while in photographing distant mountains or making airplane maps a greater sensitiveness to red is needed.

The Davis sensitometer will permit the exact measurement of all these factors, and the setting up of standards for them. It is, in effect, an instrument for giving a precisely known set of exposures to a strip of the emulsion, and for making these exposures with a light of known intensity and color. The darkness of the exposed strips is measured by means of a photometer to obtain values for plotting curves of the densities.

A large disc having a multiple of different apertures cut in it forms the shutter which gives the graduated exposure. The opening is so shaped as to give a series of exposures varying by a constant ratio and forming on the plate a row of small rectangles, each a little darker than the one preceding it. The disc must be driven at constant speed, and for this purpose an electric motor is provided, having ingenious devices to make it run at constant speed and to keep it in step with a clock. There is an electric shutter, also, which is set to remain open during one revolution of the disc.

An electric light of carefully measured candlepower is used, together with a special light filter.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

To make the most of a picture from the box office view point you carefully plan the publicity notices, newspaper advertisements, lobby displays, tie-ups.

But one more safeguard for success remains—photographic quality. Look in the film margin for the black-lettered identification “Eastman” and “Kodak” and you know that the screen will show all the quality of the negative.

“The Gold Rush”—United Artists

Egyptian, Hollywood

Expressed in its reviews, "The Gold Rush," outstanding even the powerful glare of the studio light which turned night into day, film stars of the first magnitude and their satellites filled Gramman’s Egyptian theatre to pay tribute to Charlie Chaplin in his long-awaited "Gold Rush," his first comedy in several years. The Comedy King’s picture is his largest and his greatest. It is constructed with more technical finish and builds its loughs more definitively than ever before and is not in the least bit dishonest, as some have charged.

Hollywood News: "The Gold Rush" is a masterpiece of life. It is the crowning achievement of the master comedian—no, the master artist. In "The Gold Rush" the little man with the mustache would walk no more. In his place has sprung a genius of human understanding a man who knows life and loves it.

The Gold Rush marks a new and significant step in Chaplin’s development as a comedian. He is the best in the world, and the world is now the best. The picture is a triumph of his art. It is a masterpiece of the kind that makes a hero of the man, and not of the man who makes a hero.

"Gold Rush" reaches the pinnacle of his career in "The Gold Rush" with more than the usual amount of pyramiding. His latest and possibly greatest contribution to the screen was the making of the Egyptian Theatre before an audience of Los Angeles notables and screen celebrities that packed the theatre to its doors. There are really two Chaplins in this epic of the Klondike gold pilgrimage. There is first Chaplin the clown as we have heretofore seen him, and then there is Charlie Chaplin in what is a dramatic role that plays tenderly upon the heartstrings.

Herald: "The Gold Rush" is an epic comedy, and the star’s best. Seldom has there been such unanimity of opinion on the artistic and financial merits of a film as there is with a rush in the "Gold Rush." At Gruman’s Egyptian theatre one of the greatest demonstrations in history was witnessed. The film, which caused a tremendous discussion in the film world, was played to capacity houses. It was given a standing ovation.

"Gold Rush" is a masterpiece of its kind. It is a work of art, and a work of love. It is a moving picture that will make you laugh and cry at the same time. It is a picture that will make you think and feel. It is a picture that will make you appreciate the beauty of life.

Telegram: "This is the best repair work on a racing car so far this season. It is a great and thrilling picture, and a great success."

Evening World: "A thrill in every picture of the new movie. It is a great picture of the day."

Mirror: "The Sporting Chance" is a master piece of its kind. It is a work of art, and a work of love. It is a moving picture that will make you laugh and cry at the same time. It is a picture that will make you think and feel. It is a picture that will make you appreciate the beauty of life.

Study Your Theatre

From The Public’s Standpoint

Study your theatre from the public’s standpoint and your projection should be your first consideration.

To have good projection you must have good machines. Poorly designed or worn out projectors will spoil your whole show and besides are more expensive in the long run. No investment will pay you better profits than an investment in better projection. There is no better guarantee of perfect projection than a Simplex Projector.

The Simplex Projector can be depended upon for unaltering performance over a long period of service. The improvement it makes in the presentation of pictures is readily noted and appreciated by any audience. It will pay for itself in a short time. And it may be purchased on very liberal terms.

What Simplex Service Means

Every Simplex distributor maintains a service organization consisting of a group of experienced men. These men make it their business to assist theatre owners in all matters pertaining to better projection so necessary to the successful operation of any theatre large or small.

The benefit of their experience is available to you without charge or obligation. If your projection is not satisfactory, call in a Simplex Service man. There is one in your district now.

Have you sent for your copy of this magnificent new catalog of Wurlitzer Unit Organs? It is a text book of modern theatre design.

How to fill this most important spot in the theatre is a settled question with the leading exhibitors. They merely place an order for another Mighty Wurlitzer.

These men know that in large theatres and in small theatres that there is no substitute for Wurlitzer tone, box office power, program adaptability, and dependable service.

They know that when they announce the installation of a Mighty Wurlitzer they have at one stroke conveyed to their public a convincing message that the utmost has been done to provide the best musical features.

A Great Favorite in a Supreme Drama

at NEW YORK'S PICCADILLY THEATRE week of July 18th
What Cecil B.

With brilliant directorial, scenario and production staffs working as a unit under his direct supervision—with stars of proved box-office value ideally cast in great stories by world-famous authors—Cecil B. De Mille is working out a group of twelve master productions that, individually or as a unit, surpass any productions ever offered to motion picture exhibitors in the history of the industry.

First rumblings of a mighty avalanche of entertainment

Released by Producers Distributing

DE MILLE is going to do!

The tremendous scope and superlative quality of the Cecil B. De Mille product for the coming year are forecast in the showmanship calibre of his first three attractions for 1925-26.

"THE ROAD TO YESTERDAY," the first of two big Specials directed by Cecil B. De Mille, is a production to which the word stupendous can be fittingly applied. Big in theme, spectacular in action, rich in scenic investiture, with a cast of extraordinary distinction, this picture will equal anything Cecil B. De Mille has ever done.

This big personally directed Special, with the first two personally supervised productions, will serve as a criterion by which the entire product can be gauged.

"HELL'S HIGHROAD," the initial production starring Leatrice Joy, with Edmund Burns, Julia Faye and Robert Edeson heading a brilliant cast, directed by Rupert Julian, is a smashing drama of the New York "gold coast," with all the spectacular thrill of "The Ten Commandments" and with a story that out-romances "Male and Female."

"THE COMING OF AMOS." stars Rod La Rocque in the first of his four pictures. It is a graphic picturization of the world-famous William J. Locke's most popular novel, sales of which have already reached six figures. It is a melodramatic comedy—swift in action—with the festive Monte Carlo and the Riviera as background. Paul Sloane directs.

These three attractions are typical of the super-excellence of the Cecil B. De Mille product—a product that has consistently led the industry in box-office successes.

Attention Mr. W. T. Fieldman, Sales Manager.

By Dear Mr. Fieldman:

Kindly be advised we are securing wonderful results with the Arctic Nu-Air Ventilating System which you installed in our Colonial Theatre in this city. It is far surpassing our expectations and is delivering a greater volume of air than we anticipated. The outfit is so satisfactory that we are now planning a similar system in the Jefferson, which is one of our largest houses, and have also arranged for a similar installation for the Allen Theatre. Indestructibly, we are taking out a system in the Jefferson which cost us several thousand dollars and replacing same with yours.

We feel perfectly free to recommend your apparatus to anyone interested in securing maximum results with a minimum expenditure.

Assuring you we appreciate the personal interest you have shown in our orders and wishing you continued success, I am

Very truly yours,

Never Such Advance Praise!

“The Unholy Three” is already predicted to be one of the greatest hits in history

“I would not be at all surprised to find that ‘The Unholy Three’ becomes the best American motion picture of the year. Best underworld drama since ‘The Miracle Man’ and much more compelling. Superbly played especially by Lon Chaney. By all means see ‘The Unholy Three.’” —Frederick James Smith in Motion Picture Classic.

“Be sure to see this. It is one of the finest pictures ever made. From the very beginning the story grips you. Lon Chaney gives a perfect performance.” —Photoplay Magazine.

“This is the greatest picture I have seen to date. Anyone anywhere will get a kick out of it.” —Wid’s, Los Angeles, Calif.

“Perfect picture. Tremendous hit. Audience burst into salvos of applause. Genuine masterpiece. Whatever you do, don’t fail to see ‘The Unholy Three.’” —San Francisco Call.

“Moments when audience is almost out of the seats, so tense are the situations. If ‘The Unholy Three’ is not the outstanding feature of the year it will surely be among the topnotchers.” —San Francisco Bulletin.

“ ‘The Unholy Three’ a classic of screen literature. In this masterpiece Lon Chaney creates a new standard in interpretative art of screen.” —San Francisco Daily News.

Greater Movie Season Bulletins

BECAUSE we construe the Greater Movie Season to mean a Greater Business Season for the entire motion picture industry, we are contributing this page for the cause. For the remaining weeks preceding the season’s opening date of August third, this page will carry the important bulletins to be issued to the various branches of the industry.

W.M. A. JOHNSTON.

The exhibitors of the United States will owe a great deal to the 200 or 250 upstanding, hard-hitting men who are the brains and brawn of the various Greater Movie Season Campaigns.

Each Greater Movie Season drive has a General Manager—a theatre manager or a theatre publicity man—and he is the man who is carrying the load and doing the work that is putting over the campaign in his city. Each manager has been elected by the local exhibitors because they knew he was the kind of man who would neglect his own business to do a worth-while job for the good of everybody. And that confidence is not misplaced.

* * *

The Greater Movie Season Campaigns, like all such co-operative movements, depend for their success upon a hard-working leader. When the drive is over, the cities that have received the most benefit from it will not necessarily be those in which the most money is spent, or those in which are to be found the biggest and finest theatres. They will be those cities in which the exhibitors were so fortunate as to select for their General Manager a man who was unselfish enough to throw his heart and soul into the movement and to work night and day for the good of motion pictures in his community.

* * *

The General Outdoor Advertising Company is leading the way with contributions of billboard space throughout the country for the campaigns. They’re not the only contributors, however. The smaller plant owners are helping out also.

It is estimated that about 16,000 boards will be given by the poster advertising companies throughout the United States.

* * *

The punch behind the Greater Movie Season campaign lies in the fact that it is a co-operative movement. Take advantage of this fact.

Your Mayor, your Governor, your Civic Bodies, your Rotary Clubs, your Women’s Clubs, your Chamber of Commerce will back a co-operative movement of this kind, where they never could be induced to join in a movement for the benefit of only one theatre or for any particular production.

* * *

Nearly every city has received permission from the city authorities to stencil streets, to decorate lamp posts, and in many cases they’re even going to hang cards on the “Stop” and “Go” traffic signs.

* * *

The Texas exhibitors are in. The M. P. T. O. of Texas have requested that a Campaign Book be sent to each of the members.

* * *

H. M. RICHEY, General Manager of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan is touring his state helping exhibitors get under way with their campaigns. That’s real service.

* * *

Thirty-eight hundred theatres now in the campaign.
WILLIAM R. FRASER, General Manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation, believes that "in the motion picture comedy lies the main hope for the advancement of the cinematographic art."

This is a most interesting subject. Mr. Fraser’s views are of course those of a real expert.

"The greatest progress of any branch of the motion picture profession has been made in the field of comedies," continues Mr. Fraser. "It was just about five years ago that the old fashioned slapstick comedy started on the down trail in public fancy. In its place came the type of screen comedy exemplified by Harold Lloyd’s ‘Grandma’s Boy,’ comedies with a thought, one might call them. This type of fun creator has reached such an appeal with the public that the slapstick brand of comedy has been almost figuratively driven off the map. Of course, there always will be a field for the slapstick comedy, certain types of audiences that will support the broad mirth making. But that audience will grow smaller all the time.

"There unquestionably is more thought, more genius behind the comedies of the screen, than in any other type of picture making. The motion picture comedian must have a more intelligent outlook on the screen art than other stars. His ingenuity is brought into greater play. Why? In the first place, the average dramatic star does what he is told to do by a director. The average director has a script to follow, and the script writer usually has a high powered novel, stage play or a good original story to work from.

"The comedian, or anyway in the case of Harold Lloyd, usually has a staff of assistants to co-operate with him but his decision is final in all cases. It is folly for him to attempt to produce an outsider’s idea, for there is not one high grade writer in a hundred, or maybe in a thousand, who can write and gag motion picture comedies. That is an art all its own.

"FROM the workshop of the comedian comes the true representation of what the motion picture was intended for. They turn out ideas that are purely cinematographic, and which would be impossible to reproduce on the legitimate stage. The best examples of this are ‘Safety Last,’ ‘Girl Shy,’ and now ‘The Freshman’ which is Harold’s latest work. The building climb in ‘Safety Last,’ could not possibly be done except in real life or on celluloid. The great chase which marked the climax of ‘Girl Shy’ never could be produced on the biggest stage in the world, and with the best stage technicians handling the idea. And for that matter it would be an utter impossibility for the stage to repeat the football performance which stands as a highlight of ‘The Freshman.’ Virtually any of the so-called society dramas, and some of the thrillers of the dramatic field could, and have been, done on the stage. Consequently, in my estimation the motion picture comedy stands representative of the motion picture art at its best.

"The skill of the individual is given a freer rein in the comic field, than in the dramatic. The comedian must be an expert at construction, direction, acting, cutting, in fact of every other division of the production. The stars in the dramatic line need know only how to act, except of course in a few cases where the stars are their own producers.

"I LOOK for the comedy to make just as much progress in the next five years as it has in the last five. New ideas are being created every day. Pictorially the comedy has progressed very rapidly. Stories in Lloyd comedies stand comparison with the best in the dramatic. And one of the main points about successful comedy making, which many dramatic producers have yet to learn, is that a picture is best ended when its story is told. Many big pictures have been ruined by being dragged out interminably, because the producer insisted on keeping in his film scenes that were ‘pretty’ or cost a lot of money to shoot, and which handicapped rather than enhanced the value of the story. You can take any Harold Lloyd production, and find that it is cut right down to the meat. There is not an excess foot included. I have seen an entire reel thrown away after a preview, in order that the action which followed might be strengthened, and because the reel slowed up the action more than was expected by Harold and his staff.

"Producers have much to learn from the comedy makers, and this is certainly going to be true in the days to come. Comedies are progressing, while many of the leaders in the production of dramatic offerings have reached the stagnant stage.”

* * *

"THERE is a natural ebb and flood of motion picture employes from one company to another, which is a phenomenon of any big business which has had such a sudden and mammoth growth as the film industry. It is a stage in the evolution and stabilization of the companies themselves from the more or less chaotic experimental state at their inception.

It is therefore natural that there should be a certain flux in the personnel of the producing and distributing companies. But in some instances of late this natural change has become a predatory foray of the trained and specialized force of companies which have, through months and even years of highly specialized training, built up a personnel that has accomplished highly gratifying results.

E. A. Eschmann of First National who is the type of executive that builds up his own strong and highly effective selling organization, recruits his men almost entirely from within his own force and moulds them into a compact body that stands at the head of field organization. In the course of a conversation on this tendency of certain companies he had several things of interest to say.

* * *

"THERE are always certain companies and certain executives who lack the ability to build up and organize a force of their own," said Mr. Eschmann. "These companies have made, are now making, and will continue to make overtures to members of the force of any company which has become highly efficient through careful training and compact and highly specialized organization. They have been in the business long enough to have created and developed a field force of their own. That they have not done so is proof of their lack of organizing ability. They attempt to make up for their lack by turning their effort to weaning men from companies which have built up a productive force, through the offer of more money. They believe that a productive field force can be acquired through the expenditure of money instead of through the long and patient training which creates loyalty and esprit de corps along with selling ability.

"Their reasoning, from their own point of view, may be good. It is only too apt to prove harmful, in the long run, to the men whom it thus recruits. In the first place it is not good reasoning to presume that an outsider is a better judge of a man’s earning power than is his own official family. Flattery is their usual method of approach. They tell the man they want that he is not being paid what he is worth. In some instances they may be right. But if it is true, it is the man’s own fault for not proving his worth to his company by the outstanding results he obtains. The only way any company can determine a man’s worth is by his performance. No outsider can know a man’s performance with his own company better than that company. His own, the people he is constantly in contact with, know him better than can any outsider.

"THE outsider who can't build up his own force, is seldom able to keep together one that is recruited from other companies. When the special purpose for which they were wanted is accomplished, they are the first to be let go. Not appreciating loyalty in others, they have no loyalty to their own force. Not having trained and built up their own force, they do not understand the problems which confront them, and drop them like a hot poker when they fall down—probably through no fault of their own.

"The Trojans had an old saying, ‘Beware of Greeks bearing gifts.’ It was through the gift of the wooden horse, concealing armed Greeks, that Troy fell. That is a saying which trained and highly paid employees should carefully consider when offered more money by an outsider."

* * *

"THE summer patronage may have fallen off to some extent with the Broadway picture theatres, but it is worth anyone’s time to look over the various programs offered at the Capitol, Strand, Rivoli, Rialto and Colony. The features at these respective theatres are all marked by exceptionally fine acting. There is ZaSu Pitts playing a loveless heroine in “Pretty Ladies” at the Capitol and sounding all the depths of a forlorn romance seeker. At the Strand Corinne Griffith rises to new emotional heights in a difficult role. We’ve never seen her more charming and expressive than in “The Marriage Whirl.” The Rialto, presenting “Marry Me!” gives its patrons the chance to sympathize with Florence Vidor who, like ZaSu Pitts, longs to meet her man and marry him. Miss Vidor humanizes the character with splendid feeling. The Rivoli is carrying “Night Life of New York” this week—and its patrons are assured of good acting from Dorothy Gish, Rod La Rocque and Ernest Torrence. The Colony is presenting “Cyrano DeBergerac”—the French-Italian picture—holding it over for the second week. And no wonder. It is only a pictorial achievement, but it offers some of the best pantomime ever revealed. Pierre Magnier, in the title role, gives one of the screen’s great performances."
As Others See Us

The report made by the British exhibitor delegation to America, and submitted to the recent Summer Conference of the C. E. A. at Glasgow, is quite a document. Some of it is rare reading. Much of it is straight-out criticism; a little of it is praise, and all of it is interesting.

The topics discussed are these: Theatres and Classes of Entertainment; Admission Prices; Hours of Opening and Closing; Price of Films; Equipment and Presentation; Censorship; Trade-Showings; The Producer-Exhibitor; The Independent Producer and Exhibitor; and the M. P. T. O. A. Convention at Milwaukee.

The delegation was amazed at the frankness of exhibitors in giving details of their business. Says report: "This information was given with an openness and frankness as to the most intimate details of their houses as it may be doubted are given by the British proprietor even to their own auditors and certainly never to the income tax commissioners. They told their takings, their overhead expenses, their building costs, mortgage interest, the price they paid for films, even their profits, and there is little doubt that with small encouragement they might have lent the delegation the keys of their safes."

Britain is superior to America in projection, the delegation thinks. Some of the other observations follow:

"There is little or no criticism of films such as we have in this country, but there is a superabundant amount of press notice."

"The people of America must have entertainment. It is as imperative as iced water, and more imperative than alcohol. They are not a people critical. Almost any picture will get over somewhere. In that sense there are really no bad films in America. Like beer in England, some are better than others, but so long as they are films they will have patrons of some kind or another."

"Not the best entertainment offered in British cinemas can compare favorably with the best in America."

As to film rentals, the delegation found: "All the evidence obtained from widely scattered areas points to one conclusion with respect to the prices paid for film hire. Proportionately, film hire is just about half the amount which renters obtain from this country."

Regarding the salaries of players: "Investigation proved that although some of the publicity men's figures were, like the report of Mark Twain's death—"grossly exaggerated"—the substratum of truth is sufficiently serious to justify the not unnatural alarm experienced by exhibitors who realize that in the long run they pay the piper. The frantic competition by studios to secure all the stars is probably more to blame than the artists themselves. Who will not sell in a rising market?"

And on the producer-exhibitor question, the delegation "is of the opinion that the domination of the producer-exhibitor is a distinct menace to the American independent exhibitor; that it is steadily growing, and that its effects must ultimately react upon the industry in this country."

In its discussion of the Milwaukee Convention, the report says among other things: "The fact that your delegation was not invited to speak, either as a chorus or soloists, was a noticeable though not depressing circumstance."

The report concludes with this parting shot: "America is a great country—perhaps not quite so great as it thinks it is, but great. Its population potentialities are enormous. If it has more mountains and deserts than it can conveniently use or export at the moment, there is no limit to the uses they can ultimately be put—and it does love the film."

All of which should be read in the light of Britain's departed glory as the world film center, and with a due sense of humor.

DOUBLING FOR IZAAC WALTON

Hub... Whoo... Whoo... Whoo..."	And the Southwestern Limited carried Bill Johnston far away from the heat wave, the milling crowds of Broadway, the cries of "Wustry,"—and the editorial sanctum. He chose the heart of the summer to get away from it all. Weighed down with enough piscatorial paraphernalia for an expedition up the Nile which necessitated the porter, suh, to use a couple of compartments to store the flies, poles, tackle, boots—and what not, Bill looked the picture of a happy vacationist as he stepped aboard the train.

It is off to the deep-tangled wildwood for him—a wildwood dotted with dozens of lakes swarming with fish. The speckled trout, the spotted bass and that fine upstanding specie, the musccla-longe, are unaware they're flitting with danger. But Bill is armed with every kind of fishing implement, except a harpoon, to lift them out of Davy Jones' Locker.

There will be times when the fish will refuse to bite. Then in imitation of the youthful nimrod on the banks of a creek, he will prop himself against a convenient tree, put the line between his toes, pull the straw bonnet over his eyes and dream sweet dreams of aquariums.

The open sky, the wide horizon will be his world. And to catch the marvelous vistas Bill will set up his Pathex camera. Then when the long winter night closes in at Great Neck he can retire to a soft divan, recline in the darkness—punctuated only by the glow of his Corona Perfecto, and be wafted away on the tides of a perfect summer as the scenes reveal his vacation spot—the Nipigon Regions of Northern Ontario.

As a fisherman's tales are never believed, Bill has fortified himself with the Pathex and a Kodak. These will bring mute evidence of his skill. He has gone to a sportsman's paradise—and something tells us that he will come back with enough fish to open one of those restaurants carrying the sign—Sea Food.

Shorty" Bon Matroch, Arab mascot of the Rex Ingram company filming "More Nostrum" (Metro-Goldwyn) at Nice, stage-whispers his opinion of his new outfit of 'civies' to Rex Ingram.

Richard Dix and Lois Wilson who appear in "The Vanishing American" (Paramount). Lois appears to be reading "bad-time" stories to Richard judging from his attitude of concentration.

Kivalina, Jr., of "Kivalina of the Icebergs" (Pathe) masticating northern baby food (looks like whale blubber). He or she (we're stumped) seems to thrive on it.

"You may be big, but when I speak, you mind, declares Alf Martin, Canadian ranger to John Philip Kolb "heavy" in "The Knockout" (First National).
A UNIQUE PARTY

LAST Wednesday found Hope Hampton staging a unique party at the Fort Lee studios where she is engaged on the production of “The Unfair Sex.” When the representatives of the press arrived they registered complete surprise. The expressions on their faces might have suggested—“What—Christmas here so soon?” And they had walked in out of reach of a scorching July sun. Yet there was the Christmas tree as one of the principal attractions. You see Miss Hampton is too busy around the Holidays to celebrate and having missed an Xmas celebration last year due to her legitimate engagements she decided to hold her Yule-Tide party in July.

The “getaway station” was the Algonquin Hotel and when the autos deposited the guests at the studio everyone was anticipating an afternoon and evening of real jollification. Miss Hampton made a splendid host in her role of Lady Santa Claus. Her July Xmas Party in which the merrymakers danced and dined and gave expression to Holiday greetings will go down in the book as a Most Happy Occasion.

ATTA BOY

W e are shouting “Atta Boy!” at Lou Marangella, the demon publicity writer. The expression is one of Lou’s favorites. Full of breezy enthusiasm he would walk into the office and shout “Atta Boy!” when we told him—“Yes, Lou, we’ll run it for you.” As every romance needs an introduction—the characters to be planted, et cetera, we’ll begin by telling the world that Lou press-agented the “Ben Hur” production in Italy. He was taken to the land of the Caesars to act as interpreter and to see to it that editors were fed reams upon reams of publicity about the picture.

Now the story swings into its romance. The pulse quickens—the heart interest leads its appeal. It was while Lou was staying in Paris during the continental journey that he met HER. His boundless enthusiasm carried him to the heights of ecstasy. With all the alacrity that he places copy on an editor’s desk he found himself engaged. Last May he hopped back to the city on the Seine and on the fourteenth of the month the engagement culminated in marriage.

The heroine—or rather the bride was Olga Calve (Countess Goubaray) who has a fine record of achievement. She was a member of the Russian nobility and fought in the World War as a lieutenant of the Russian Black Army. She has had considerable stage and screen experience on her native steppes and in France—having played leads in French films the past two years. She also appeared in “A Son of the Sahara,” which was made in Algeria by Edwin Carewe for First National.

Lou has brought a twist to the familiar plot. It is usually the American girl who marries a title. In this case it is the American man. We offer the Marangellas our sincere felicitations.

EYES ON TENNESSEE

The whole world has its eyes on the State of Tennessee. A big array of legal talent has swooped down on the little town of Dayton to defend Professor Scopes in his trial. The defendant having come out for evolution is being tried for teaching the Darwinian theory. There’s a big scare being registered out in California, too. The leading luminaries are keeping an anxious eye on Napoleon, Josephine and Joe Martin. If it is established that we once lived in the tree tops these monsks will have a big laugh. As it is they are thinking of starting their own production units. It has taken centuries of publicity to put them in the limelight and they refuse to take a back seat among the top-most branches. Joe Martin has already been interviewed on the question. Like a politician or a court witness, or both, he refuses to answer on advice of Counsel. There’s a good monk, too.

HARLAN CONValesCING

The followers of Kenneth Harlan (there’s a legion of them) will be glad to know that he is rapidly recovering from an operation for appendicitis with which he was stricken while on location. He was rushed to St. Vincent’s hospital in Hollywood following an acute attack of the ailment last Saturday—and it is believed that prompt action by the surgeons saved his life.
I LAUGHED so hard my sides ache.” That was the comment we heard from three different persons after the private showing of Harold Lloyd’s newest comedy, “The Freshman.” It is a correct indication of what this gem of a picture has in store for you. We’ve never seen a funnier piece—than this take-off on college life which the comedian and his clever assistants have concocted. We’ve had college stories—and college stories—but we’ve never had one that showed life on the campus with half the spirit, sympathy, humor and accuracy.

There is a place for everything here—and everything is in place. The ground is thoroughly planted with incident and gags which sprout with the fullest expression. Harold starts off for Tate—determined to be the college idol—its greatest hero. But he is a perfect boob and doesn’t realize that he is a joke.

The early scenes build up the sympathy for this boy who would make good. He is so sure of himself—and yet everything he does is absolutely all wrong. He would make the team, but they use him for a tackling dummy. He would give a dance for the sake of popularity. And his tuxedo is merely basted together. As it falls apart the laughs come straight from the diaphragm.

But the most hilarious comedy is contained in the climax when Harold pleads to be sent in as the last substitute. The boys, fighting hard for good old Tate, are up against a strong team. Harold has been allowed to join the team as a water boy though they don’t try to humiliate him on that count. So he rushes in—and not knowing what position to play dashes in anywhere—sometimes on the opposite side—and is thrown, tossed—and pummeled to a fare-you-well. But he picks up a fumble and scores a touchdown. He has made good for Tate and the girl.

The new invention of these scenes spells ingenious work on the part of the Lloyd outfit. To enumerate every laugh would occupy too much space. But it seems to us as if the piece contained hundreds of them.

As for the atmosphere it is accurate. The campus is painted in true colors—and the relaxation side of college life has been brought out with fine zest and background. It surely looks like a sell-out. Why not? Lloyd’s pictures mean something. And this tops them all as a laugh producer. Wait ‘til you see that football game. Harold does everything with that football but make it talk.

SALUTATIONS

CONGRATULATIONS are being showered upon Mr. and Mrs. Jack Alicoate over the new addition to the family. As a tribute to the birth of this nation—as a fine gesture in favor of 100 per cent patriotism, the youngster—who has been given the monicker of Mary Patricia—made her debut on the Fourth of July. The infant by selecting Fire-Cracker Day to say “Howdy” to the world joins a pair of our best champions of Old Glory, Calvin Coolidge and George M. Cohen.

THE RIESENFELD LUNCHEON

HUGO RIESENFELD, the impresario of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion, tendered a luncheon to the motion picture editors and critics last Friday at the Astor Roof in honor of Ben Bernie. It was to introduce the popular jazz band leader whose melody boys have supplanted the symphony orchestra at the Rivoli—the Bernie band making their debut this week.

Dr. Riesenfeld said one of the reasons which promoted him to take out the symphony orchestra and present the jazz band in its place was that he discovered that all six of the Broadway houses were playing the overture from “William Tell” during one and the same week.

AUTHOR! AUTHOR!!

IT is with a cry of “Author! Author!!” that we page Bob Dexter, erstwhile advertising manager for First National. Bob has always been a gifted story-writer—and he can weave words with all the art of a Jack London—and write just as vividly. Under the name of Gayne Dexter he has a story in the August issue of Hearst’s International and Cosmopolitan Magazine—a story of a Heathen Chinese entitled “Serpent of Lies.”

Members of the cast and technical staff of the Earl Hudson unit filming “The Half Way Girl” (First National) snapped between scenes. Seated in the foreground are John Francis Dillon, director, and Doris Kenyon, featured player.
VERY "DOGGY"

THEY are very "doggy" in Loew's State theatre, New York, this week. Trying it on the dog as it were. Balto, the lead dog of Gunnar Kasson's team, which carried the diphtheria serum into Nome—and put over the best human interest story the newspapers have featured in a decade—is on the vaudeville program, supported by his master and several other huskies. The picture feature is "Wild Justice" starring Strongheart.

We don't know whether Balto registered jealousy over the famous screen canine who wished to please the husky by trying it out on the dog. But we have learned that Balto is indifferent toward New York. He refuses to take an ice-wagon seriously and confetti strewn around the floor of his dressing room is not the kind of "snow" to tempt him. He is rarin' to get back in Al-ska where dogs are dogs.

FINIS

I AM writing my last line for Motion Picture News—writing with a lump in my throat. It's the attachments—the associations—the friendships that endure. Time makes its marks and these are never erased. But as we march along with Time we pause and pay our tribute to the things that count. It may be a fond leave-taking of someone very dear to us; it may be the ineffable charm of some glorious vista we've viewed; it may be some token treasured through the years. The memory of it all lights up and we dwell upon it with misty eyes.

I feel as if all the boys in this office were at a small railroad station and I were aboard the train which would take me around the bend and out of sight. Words don't count for much on such an occasion. The little tinkly bell at the crossing has grown fainter and fainter. A moment more and it is silenced. And the parting is over.

Catching a train pounding through the dusk of a quiet night and bidding the boys good-by is the way I feel in leaving the News. The friendships formed here are ineffaceable. The morning salutations, the nightly "So Long! See You Tomorrow," the constant associations with the staff—the good fellowship that fairly saturates this office—these are the things that count—and these are the things that make it so difficult to leave.

It's been a pleasure to work for Bill Johnston. Just a gentleman's agreement to express yourself according to your viewpoint. That's Bill's way. It's the fair way, too. No wonder the boys work conscientiously to sell the News. There's a goal you see—and that is self-expression.

To leave this office and all that its atmosphere stands for is something that can't be expressed in words. It strikes deeper than that. Words, after all, can only give voice to your true feelings. And six years of pleasant relations cannot be effaced with a mere handshake and a "Wish you the best of luck." You can't erase a memory.

I leave the News with real regret. I leave the magazine wishing it continued success and prosperity—I leave it trusting I have served its readers and established lasting friendships for it. Hail and Farewell.

Mid-Week Edition of M. P. News Scores A Great Hit

A

X enthusiastic welcome from the industry greeted the appearance of the first issue of the Mid-Week Edition of Motion Picture News last week. On every hand, it was hailed as an important innovation in trade paper journalism, and marking a distinct step forward in service to the industry.

Recognition of the necessity for a medium which is devoted exclusively to the needs of the big, little exhibitor was widespread, and comments were heard everywhere in the trade that "The News has again hit the mark."

Among the many expressions of approval, addressed to William A. Johnston, are these:

Hiram Abrams, President. United Artists:

I want to congratulate you on your Midweek Edition of Motion Picture News, and particularly on the idea back of this new form of service to "The Big Little Exhibitor," as you so aptly characterize the motion picture theatre man in the small city.

The small exhibitor in the small town undoubtedly is an enormous factor in the film industry. This is the man who most needs and who will benefit most from the kind of service you are rendering through this new edition and I believe you are as well offering a great service to the industry in general. I wish you every success in this step.

Richard A. Rowland, General Manager, First National:

Congratulations on the first issue of the new Mid-Week edition. It is a knock-out—just the thing for the small town exhibitor. I am sure that both producers and distributors will welcome the service you are giving these big-little-theatres.

R. H. Cochrane, Vice-President, Universal:

You are to be commended for undertaking to supply the small exhibitor with news, reviews and reports on pictures prepared from the small theatre point of view. The new Mid Week Edition of the Motion Picture News seems to be ideal in that respect.

Universal has always been a staunch supporter of the small theatre man and has consistently guided its policies so as to help him. I am sure that the small exhibitor will welcome and support this move on the part of the News to look at film conditions from his side of the fence. The best of luck.

Joseph M. Seider, President of M. P. T. O. of New Jersey:

I have read with interest your editorial anent the new edition of the Motion Picture News—designed for the exhibitor in the small town.

As you know, we tried at our convention to show our members how to "Bring Broadway to Main Street," and we feel that you are carrying this idea out through the medium of your new mid-week edition of the News.

We recognize the vital influence which the theatre in the small town or neighborhood bears to the progress of this industry of ours, and feel that they are entitled to the same consideration, giving them every help and advantage, as is enjoyed by the large theatres in the metropolis and larger centers. Such a purpose must meet with our approval.

Wishing you the success you merit.

E. A. Eschmann, Manager of Distribution, First National:

In my opinion the Mid-Week edition of the News fills an important need. Too frequently there has been a tendency to concentrate on big theatres. As you point out, they are important, but the smaller exhibitor is important, too, and it is gratifying to find a publication devoted primarily to his needs.

With best wishes for the success of the Mid-Week News.

A. M. Botsford, Advertising Manager, Famous Players-Lasky:

The small town exhibitor has many of the problems that confront the big city theatres but he gets them later and a lot of new problems besides.

No filing system of trade papers has ever been devised whereby the small town exhibitor will be able to go back over weeks past and dig up things in the trade papers that will help him.

In the new magazine you are giving him something timed just right. If it is correctly edited and the small town problems rightly understood by your editors, there is no question of its value to the trade. Best wishes for success.

Nat G. Rothstein, Advertising Director for F. B. O.:

I think your idea of a mid-week edition is a great idea. It will undoubtedly reach many exhibitors that Motion Picture News never reached before.

It's reasonable price enables any and every exhibitor both big and little throughout the country to subscribe for it.

My compliments on your idea. I wish you every success with your new "baby." Kindest regards.

Samuel Spring, Secretary-Treasurer, First National:

I think you ought to be complimented on your enterprise in starting a Mid-Week edition of the News particularly designed for small towns. You should receive the support of all enterprising exhibitors.

C. C. Burr, Managing Director, B. & H. Enterprises:

Just looked over the copy of the "Midweek" edition of the Motion Picture News. This is a great idea—cannot understand why no one ever thought of it before.

It would seem that the News really fulfills its mission and the whole idea is in line with the leadership of thought and in action which you have ever maintained in your field. Congratulations and best wishes.

J. G. Bachmann, Schuler Productions:

Let me congratulate you upon the step you have taken in starting the Mid-Week edition of the News. The first number is interesting and useful from cover to cover and fills, I believe, a very definitely felt want for a trade medium to interest the smaller theatre. It is sure to be a success both for producer and exhibitor.

Good luck to the "Midweek"!

W. Ray Johnston, Rayart:

I was very much interested in receiving the copy of your Midweek Edition of Motion Picture News, first issue dated July 11th. I want to congratulate you on this additional service to your subscribers. With best wishes for your publication.

Thomas Hamlin, Editor, New York Film Curb:

"Your new Mid-Week edition of Motion Picture News just arrived and it interested me so keenly that I immediately dropped all work on my own publication and proceeded to read your new idea thoroughly from start to finish."

"I cheerfully brand it a big time winner for the small town exhibitor and a valuable aid to those theatre-owners operating in towns of less than two-thousand population."

"May the new Mid-Week Motion Picture News grow and prosper."
Laurence Reid Resigns From News to Head Movie Monthly

Laurence Reid, for six years the distinguished photoplay critic of Motion Picture News, is resigning this week to take an important post with the Brewster publications.

Mr. Reid becomes Editor of Movie Monthly, and a member of the editorial staffs of Motion Picture Classic and Motion Picture Magazine.

In the industry the name of Laurence Reid is a symbol for painstaking, intelligent reviews, presenting the reactions of an expert to hundreds of pictures a year.

He began his career as a reviewer in 1914 on the Evening Mail, continued it with the New York Review and the Dramatic Mirror.

Besides contributing reviews to The News, Mr. Reid has done notable work as a special writer. Each year he has written a critical resume of the outstanding pictures of the year for the News Holiday Editions. Each week he has written "Pictures and People," the only department of its kind in the trade publication field, and recognized for its clever comments on personalities in the industry.

With real regret, Motion Picture News accepts Mr. Reid's resignation. He has been an exceptionally valued and versatile member of the staff. Larger opportunities and bigger achievement are ahead of him, and in his new work every member of the News family wishes him all success and Godspeed.

Announcement of Mr. Reid's successor will be made next week.

Vote For Free Casting Bureau

A. M. P. P. Directors Move to Operate "Extra" Agency Without Cost to Players

The proposed casting bureau for extra or day employees which is to be organized by the Association of Motion Picture Producers in Los Angeles will be operated without fee costs to the players obtaining employment through this agency, it was unanimously decided at a Directors' Meeting held in Hollywood, July 13.

Herefore the extra has paid ten per cent and upward daily to an agency for securing his position. Under this new arrangement the full amount of the voucher will go to the employee. The decision to maintain an absolutely free bureau is the result of a long thorough study by the Association, a cooperative survey and helpful suggestions from the Russell Sage Foundation, and with the approval of the California State Labor Commission.

The economic results of establishing this bureau will be more far-reaching than anything yet done in relation to employes. It will automatically wipe out of existence all questionable employment agencies, make-up schools, scenario schools and other pretended agencies preying on a gullible public and giving nothing in return.

The records in the office of the Labor Commission show that in the past ten years eighty-five agencies have been closed because of their questionable methods or have gone out of business through lack of support.

This entire matter is in the hands of the executive committee of the association for execution, and in the near future they will arrange for the financing of this bureau and the establishment of its offices.

It is interesting to note that annually this industry has over two hundred thousand placements of casual labor, the largest number of casual labor placements of any industry, and these are divided among approximately thirty thousand people.

High School Tax is Paid by Harrisburg Theatres

Three picture theatres are listed among the twenty properties paying the highest school tax in Harrisburg, Pa., according to the Evening News of that city. Twenty per cent of the total school tax is paid by the twenty properties in which the Colonial, the Orpheum, and the Majestic figure prominently. While these twenty properties are not the highest taxed in the city, they are among the highest, the newspaper explains.

The Colonial pays a tax of $5,685; the Majestic, which shows vaudeville and pictures, pays $2,520; and the Orpheum pays $2,100.

U. S. Exports of Films in May Nearly 32,000,000

Nearly 32,000,000 feet of moving picture film, with a value of well over a million dollars, were exported from the United States during the month of May, according to figures compiled by the Department of Commerce.

Exports of positive film aggregated 18,376,514 feet, with a value of $541,033, of which 3,962,538 feet, valued at $107,767, went to the United Kingdom; 2,679,110 feet, worth $80,201, to Australia; 1,914,810 feet, valued at $77,021, to Canada; and 1,677,019 feet, valued at $54,129, to Argentina.

Negatives exported aggregated 1,968,824 feet, with a value of $261,981, our most important market being the United Kingdom to which 902,180 feet, valued at $238,509, were exported. Exports of raw stock amounted to 12,335,815 feet, valued at $255,949, of which the United Kingdom alone took 10,666,792 feet, with a value of $271,524.

H. Wayne Pierson Will Export Film

H. Wayne Pierson, until recently General Manager in the Far East for the United Artists Corporation, has opened an office at 807 Longacre Building, New York, to handle films for export to Japan, China, the Philippines, Indo-China, Straits Settlements and the Kingdom of Ceylon.

Pierson Has spent the past three years in the Far East, is intimately acquainted with the important buyers of that section and has a first-hand knowledge of the motion pictures suitable for distribution in each country he represents.

Ogdon Alabamba Looted by Thieves

Thieves made away with $1,000 at the Alabamba Theatre in Ogden, Utah, last Monday morning, after rendering the night watchman unconscious and looting the safe. The loot would have been much greater had not the Vaudeville artists on the bill been able to get out of the theatre in time.

The police have not yet unearthed a clue to the robbery.

Plan Public Tribute to Sydney S. Cohen

A public tribute, which will probably take the form of a banquet, to Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. A., is being planned by a group of Independent producers and distributors in New York, in recognition of Mr. Cohen's accomplishments in creating a favorable exhibitor opinion toward the independent branch of the industry.

The arrangements committee is as follows:

Chairman, Samuel Zierler, president of Commonwealth Film Corporation; Whitman, Bennett; B. P. Schulberg, head of the company bearing his name; J. C. Bachman, treasurer of the same company; Fred H. Elliott, executive secretary of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America and Ben Amsterdam, of Philadelphia, vice-president of that organization.
Country Waits Greater Movie Season August Campaign
Perfected Organization Assures Event's Success

The entire country from New York to Los Angeles stands organized for the national Greater Movie Season, beginning in August. Field representatives of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president, have developed, in conjunction with exhibitors and exchange executives, ninety co-operative campaigns all territorial in scope.

Cincinnati, Baltimore, Spokane, Schemecady, Akron, Houston, and Birmingham, Ala., adopted the national plan last week, with William A. Clark of the Palace Theatre, general manager for Cincinnati; Sam R. Abrams of the Rialto Theatre, for Houston; James Roach of the State Theatre for Schemecady; Ray Grombach, Liberty Theatre, for Spokane; and L. J. Callinan, Assistant-secretary of the Akron Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association for Akron.

Officers and committee-men elected at a meeting of theatre owners in Birmingham are: B. H. Morney, Triation Theatre, chairman; R. M. Kennedy, Capitol Theatre, Secretary; D. B. Faunce, Strand Theatre, finance; E. A. Vinson, Loew's Temple Theatre, director of publicity with the duties of general manager.

In almost every center parades will announce the opening of the season. Besides the exhibitors the principal producing and distributing companies will be represented by floats built in accordance with standard designs that the New York offices are sending to each exchange. Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Chicago and Salt Lake City are among the cities that will hold movie-balls.

Governors and mayors in many centers have given the season official recognition by proclamation; while the e's tew to which business concerns generally desire representation in the drive is indicated by the donation of $100,000 in prizes by Chicago manufacturers for the Greater Movie Season newspaper contest there. Also in Chicago the number of co-operative advertising is estimated at $500,000 only about the $50,000 constituting the exhibitors' campaign fund. In localities where exhibitors showed an inclination to hang back there now appears a desire to get aboard the band-wagon as the drive reaches its peak, according to field reports.

Under present plans the Chicago parade will be an industrial exhibition of local manufacturers. The parade will be headed by the King and Queen of Movie Patrons, to be chosen by a popular voting contest from men and women living in Chicago.

Similar activities mark the New York campaign where Wells Hawkes has appointed Bessie Maek of the Capitol and George Morris of the Piccadilly in charge of radio work; Terry Turner of Loew's and Edw. Olmstead of the Rialto, to look after parade organization; Fred Hamlin, of the Strand Theatre to assist in the advertising and Glen Allvine of the Criterion to control publicity. Other committees will be named later.

Through arrangements effected by the Hays office, the National Jewellers Publicity Association has linked that industry into the movement. Special bulletins from the Publicity Association have placed the plans fully before retail jewelers throughout the country and endorsed the drive as a business stimulant, thus paving the way for window displays and local prize donations for the newspaper contest.

Kalamazoo and Pontiac have embarked on vigorous campaigns under the leadership of H. L. Dean of the Orpheum Theatre, Kalamazoo, and A. J. Kleist of the Rialto, Pontiac.

A review of budgets forwarded from several centers to the Hays office shows that out of every $1,000 about $100 is being spent for newspaper space, $400 necessary, while the balance of $200 meets contingent expenses, parades, billboard and posting costs. The sixteen-thousand stands donated by the Poster Advertising Association are being sold by committee members at the rate of $2,000 boards will support Greater Movie Season nationally.

Supplementary exploitation that has gone to campaign managers includes newspaper contributions by Rex Bensch, George Ahe, Wallace Irwin, Rita Weinman, Temple Bailey, Richard Connell, Meredith Nicholson, John Emerson, Anita Loos, Elmer Davis, Terry Ramsaye and Emea Wyman.

Particular interest attaches to Mr. Bensch's description of his emotions on seeing his first story screened at a St. Louis nickelodeon, where "the room was darker than the inside of a cow and we fell over a drunken tenpenny who had parked near a conspirator. He cursed a little and I had to hold my nose. A piano was being outraged by one of the proprietors; the other partner was engaged outside ballyhooing dimes. There was no smoking but a lot of spitting. No one saw us go in or come out of the place. For the mere use of the story I had received and squandered in riotous living the sum of one hundred dollars. How the producer could pay that amount and spend a dollar or two to make the negative and still achieve a return exceeding out of it, was a mystery. It didn't look like a sound business."

Special Greater Movie Season numbers of the principal fan-magazines are concentrating their readers' interest upon August activities.

Atlantic City, through Edward J. O'Keefe, its general chairman, has hurled the following deft at other cities: "In view of the widespread interest among exhibitors in the forthcoming National Campaign in the interest of the Photoplay industry, the Motion Picture Theatre Manager of Atlantic City—"The World's Playground"—hereby issues a challenge to the bona fide managers of any other city community in the country to equal the efforts of Atlantic City in the effectiveness of the Campaign."

"Atlantic City Theatres are 100 per cent of the project. With nearly 3,000,000 visitors here from every section of the country, the cities of this resort promise the most outstanding demonstration of the Nation. What we shall do is now secret. Is there any community of exhibitors in the country willing to accept our challenge? If so, write or wire, and you're on it!"

M. L. Coyne, advertising representative from the office of Will Hay's has been in Houston, Texas, for several days making arrangements with local theatre owners regarding Greater Movie Season which will open in Houston about the first of August.

Plans are going rapidly ahead to put Greater Movie Season over first-class style in Salt Lake, although it appears at the present time as if there will be but four theatres behind the move. These are the Paramount Emporium, Victory, Kinema and Palaces houses. The other houses have signified their intention of not joining in the movement. However, the four actively interested have pooled their subscriptions and are going ahead to make a big thing of the event. Frank Becker has been appointed publicity director and has started the ball rolling.

Atlanta newspapers pledged full support to Greater Movie Season and placed every resource at their command at the disposal of the theatres included in the Greater Movie Season organization, following a visit to the managing editors of each paper on Monday, July 6th, paid by a committee headed by William C. Victory, Kinema and managing editors visited were W. M. Baskerville, of the Georgian-American; John Paschal, of the Atlanta Journal; and Francis Clarke, of the Constitution. The committee from the Greater Movie Season organization included also T. B. Griggs, special exploitation manager for the Greater Movie Season; Matt Whitman, of the Alamo No. 2 theatre; Sol Cannards, proprietor of the Alpha Theatre; Howard Waugh, manager of the Howard Theatre, and Thomas H. James, manager of Loew's Grand Theatre.
Referendum Bill on Daylight Saving Likely in New York

The first step toward what may be the introduction of a bill in the New York State Legislature next January by Senator George R. Fearon, of Syracuse, authorizing a statewide referendum on the question of daylight saving was taken during the past week in Syracuse, when Senator Fearon was asked to sponsor a bill calling for a referendum applicable to Syracuse alone.

If the New York State M. P. T. O. shows sufficient interest to back a statewide bill, that will settle the question of daylight saving for New York state, making it uniform or else doing away with it entirely, there is no question but that Senator Fearon could be induced to introduce and get back of a bill of this sort.

In Syracuse, the common council of that city recently passed an ordinance favoring daylight saving over a certain given period, and which is now in effect. As the daylight saving movement gains ground, the question of extension to the question of daylight saving than was first thought. It is believed that it would be better to let the voters of the city as a whole decide the question at a referendum, rather than to put the matter in the hands of a few men constituting the council.

130 Australia Theatres Merged

Big Consolidation of Antipodes Film Interests Enters the Production Field

The merger of film interests operating in Australia and New Zealand, reported last month, involves a total of 130 theatres and the consolidated organizations will launch a film production enterprise on a large scale, according to recent reports reaching this country.

The theatres now controlled by the merged companies comprise 100 in Australia and 30 in New Zealand, in addition to studio properties and equipment for making phonographs. These are the properties of Union Theatres and its associated Australian companies, Hayward's Pictures, Ltd., and New Zealand Picture Supplies, Ltd., and Fuller's Theatres, Ltd., all of New Zealand.

The company has already started a big film production according to a statement issued by Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of Union Theatres, who, in discussing this phase of the enterprise said:

"Production in New Zealand has already started. The current undertaking is an elaborate Maori war picture in which more than 8000 natives take part. Our plans for Australia are not so well defined, but there will certainly be increased activity here both as regards building and producing. It is proposed to finish this project in the next four or five years to complete a chain of additional theatres in New Zealand."

The directors of the corporation are W. A. Gibson, O. B. E., who was recently in America, representing Australian Films; Stuart F. Doyle, representing Union Theaters, Sir Benjamin Fuller, Henry Hayward, John Fuller, E. J. Righton, G. T. Balance and F. J. McDonald.

"Kine," London, current issue quotes E. R. Gourdie of Australasian Films' London office, as saying that in addition to the countries mentioned the company has distributing offices and theatres in the Dutch East Indies and the Straits Settlements.

Conference On Copyright Bill

Woodhall and Cohen Offer Recommendations to Be Included in New Measure

National President R. F. Woodhall and Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Board of Directors represented the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at the conferences of the General Committee on the Copyright Revision Bill the Bar Association Asg., 42 West 44th held Wednesday, July 8th, at 10 A. M. at Street, New York City, and arranged to file with the Sub Committee of the Patent Committee of the House of Representatives at Washington, recommendations to be incorporated into the new copyright bill which will be presented to the next Congress when it convenes in December 1925.

Two of the recommendations to be included are as follows:

"That when any author or composer of his or her administrator, executor, or assigns shall publish or cause to be published for sale to the public copies of any copyrighted musical composition or song, the sale of any such copy shall free the same from further contribution by the holder thereof, to the author or composer or his or her administrator, executors or assigns in case of public performances for profit."

Also an amendment was submitted that will prevent the pooling of copyrights or performing rights as is the practise now.

Other amendments and recommendations are being prepared at this time and will be included in those filed with the above Committee.

"Theatre owners in all parts of the Country are urged to get in touch with their Congressmen and United States Senators now," said the M. P. T. O. A. statement. "Many of these representatives are at home now and exhibitors should approach them as their Constituents, presenting the facts to them and asking that relief be afforded them. This direct communicating with their representatives in Congress is a most effective means of bringing to their attention the matters in which theatre owners are interested and in which they need relief.

"We also request that theatre owners send us on to National Headquarters any facts or information they may have that will be of help to us in the fight, together with any word or message they may receive from their Congressional representative."

"U" Earnings For First 6 Months Show Increase

Universal Pictures Co., Inc., reports net earnings of $1,071,000 for the six months ended May 6 last. This is an increase of 32 per cent over net earnings for the predecessor company for the first six months of 1924. The new company was organized on January 10, 1925.

After deduction of preferred dividends, the balance was equivalent to $3.25 for the half year on the outstanding common stock.

On the basis of the company's second half, the year, the company earned, after all charges and Federal taxes, at the annual rate of $71.40 on its first preferred and $7.04 per share on its common stock. These figures compared with earnings on the preferred stock of $59.50 a share for 1924, $30.83 for 1922 and $21.15 for 1921, and on the common stock they compared with $7.62 a share in 1924, $3.54 in 1928, $2.18 in 1922 and $1.02 in 1921.

New Companies Chartered for New York State

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York state during the past week were granted charters by the secretary of state showing the following directors and amount of capitalization where specified:

Clearfilm Corporation, Pelham Manor, $10,000, with Leon Wagner, Sigmund Alter and B. Salsman, New York city; Associated Animators, Inc., $10,000, Burton F. Gillett, Edgewater, N. J.; Richard M. Haeuer, Stamford, Conn.; Emanuel Goldberg, New York. The World of Wonder, Inc., $25,000, T. Harold Kay, New York City; Joseph Lacetere, Brooklyn; Dominick Paparuto, Newark, N. J.

Committees to Confer on Uniform Contract

Frederick H. Elliott, general manager of the I. M. P. A. of A. has advised R. F. Woodhall, president of the M. P. T. O. A. that his organization has appointed a committee of three to confer with a similar committee of the M. P. T. O. A. on the question of a new uniform contract.

The I. M. P. A. of A. committee consists of Oscar Neufeldt, De Luce Films, Philadelphia; Jack Bellman, Renown Pictures, New York; and Joe Klein, Chesterfield Motion Picture Corporation, New York. A conference between the two committees will be held in New York in the near future at a date to be decided upon.
A MILLION dollar theatre, with restaurant and dance hall features, will be built in Omaha by A. H. Blank, in affiliation with the Balaban & Katz interests. Mr. Blank this week signed a ninety-nine year lease for a corner at Twenty-first and Farnam streets, the total value of the lease being placed at $3,755,000.

Work on the theatre will begin in 90 days.

The new theatre is to be the best in that part of the country, with seating capacity of 3,500, of Spanish design, with patios and fountains, and with no store or office rental space. A renaissance restaurant is to be a feature.

The Blank interests already operate the Strand and Rialto theatres in Omaha.

There have been rumors that the World Realty company and George Brandels, head of Omaha's largest mercantile establishment, contemplate the erection of a motion picture theatre at Sixteenth and Douglas streets, at a cost of $1,000,000. If this deal should go through, it would involve tearing down the Empire theatre, now operated by the World Realty company, for which it was constructed.

According to the announcement of William M. James, of Columbus, Ohio, president of the James Amusement Enterprises, neighborhood patrons in Columbus are to be served with three new James theatres.

At Main street and Berlekey road, the sum of $500,000 will be expended in erecting a new Eastern theatre which will replace one that is now located near that intersection and also take in the adjacent lot on the corner. This will seat 1,600 persons.

The second neighborhood theatre will be erected at Parsons and Reinhard avenues and will also be of Spanish design. It will also accommodate 1,600 persons. The third motion picture house will be built on the Hilltop on West Broad street.

The three new houses planned will bring the James string to eight. The construction of the two theatres already planned, the first two mentioned, is expected to start within 60 days.

In New York City Harry Blinderman, Charles Steiner, Samuel Friedman, Jack Schwartz and Herman Wissner have purchased outright the Harlem Grand, Stadium, Cosmo and several other Harlem theatres.

With their other theatre's namely, the Rialto, New 12th, Jewel and Harlem Fifth avenue this organization have one of the strongest booking combinations in upper New York city.

Ben Sherman, formerly owner of the newly acquired Blinderman-Steiner theatres, has sold out to this new organization.

The additional theatres taken over by Harry Blinderman and his co-workers give the company one of the strongest booking combinations in New York city. More than 14,000 seats is the joint seating capacity of the combine.

Messrs. Blinderman and Steiner also own and control six of the largest of the many East Side theatres and have in the course of the last month added four other downtown theatres, among which will be the first Egyptian theatre ever built in New York.

Walter Reade has leased to Loew, the Astor Theatre property at Broadway and 45th St. Mr. Reade signed a ten year agreement with Loew's, Inc, with an option to renew of twenty-one years which will net Mr. Reade two million dollars on the first term of this leasehold.

The first attraction to play in this theatre will be "Ben Hur."

Representatives of the Paramount interests and the Keith-Albee Circuit were recently in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Altoona, Allentown, Easton and Reading inspecting the houses that are concerned in the pending deal between Famous Players and William & Vincent. J. J. Murdock, H. B. Franklin and M. S. Goodman were among the executives who made the tour of inspection.

The expansion policy of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, has again come into Ottawa, the Canadian Capital, where the purchase has been made of a 132 foot frontage on Sparks Street, the main business thoroughfare, from Mrs. Mathew St. Denis for $225,000. This is adjacent to a 28 foot frontage which was bought by Famous Players some time ago and the newly-bought property lies exactly in front of a large site on which Famous Players are planning to build a big theatre some years ago.

The purchase of the new property on Sparks Street means that the area now under title to Famous Players for the theatre is approximately double the previously held site.

There is definite talk around Ottawa that Famous Players will build a theatre of this size and that the policy of the new theatre will be to present a combination of photoplays and Pantages vaudeville. Harold Hitchinson of Toronto, supervisor of theatres for Famous Players, has been in Ottawa for some weeks but he has not made any statement regarding immediate plans.

Chicago Booking Combine Forming

Ascher Brothers, Cooney, Karzas and Coston in Buying Combination of Fifty Theatres

THERE formation of a big booking combine in Chicago, as a direct result of and in opposition to the recent Balaban-Katz and Lubliner & Trinz combination, became known this week. Ascher Brothers, Cooney Brothers, Andrew Karzas and the Coston group of houses, comprising all about fifty theatres, have signed a preliminary agreement for a combination booking organization, according to the Chicago correspondent of Motion Picture News, who says that the final papers will likely be signed.

A telegram to Motion Picture News from J. Cooney, President of the National Theatres Corp., says: "Report that this concern has consolidated or merged with any other theatre organization is positively groundless."

The best information is that the deal is a booking combine and does not involve change in ownership of any of the theatres mentioned.

According to Max Ascher, vice-president of Ascher Brothers, the new organization has not yet been named but probably will be called the Motion Picture Theatres Consolidated, and have its headquarters in Ascher Brothers' offices at 509 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

While the group of theatres affected does not include any loop houses, some of the theatres owned by the various signers of the agreement are of great importance in the neighborhood. Included are the Loew's, Coston independently owned theatre which is also being built, Ascher Brothers' entire chain of fourteen theatres, and the string of 63rd Street houses being booked by Jimmy Coston.

The combination starts with fifty houses in Chicago and indications are that more than one hundred Chicago and nearby theatres will be affiliated with the new organization at an early date.

While details of the agreement are lacking, it is learned from authoritative sources that there will be no interchange of stock and the ownership of the various properties will not be affected for the present at least, but the organization will be supported by the theatres paying a percentage of the cost of film into the company's treasury.

"It is a move to protect and increase our buying power," Ascher said. "We now have ninety houses all in Chicago in the combination and expect by the end of the month to increase our control to at least one hundred and twenty-five houses." Ascher admitted that a combination of the Balaban and Katz and the Lubliner and Trinz interests made six weeks ago was in measure responsible for the new combination.

It is also understood that the agreement is being pressed upon the signers for three years.

Once the buying department is operating smoothly, the organization may branch out and include advertising, exploitation and production departments in its activities.

It is also learned that immediately upon hearing of the proposed organization, a number of additional houses have been tried for membership and are under consideration by the advisory board.

It is reported that William Fox is very much interested in this combination and is prepared to back it up with capital if the members think it advisable.
Important Theatre Deals Now Being Negotiated In Europe

By L. C. MOEN

Staff correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

IN PARIS, July 8.

D ESPITE the general unwillingness of the European representatives of American companies to talk or to be quoted in print it can be authoritatively stated that the next few weeks or months will see vital changes in the theatrical map of the continent, somewhat similar to those which have been going on in America in the way of producer ownership of theatres.

France in particular is ripe for the introduction of showmanship and better theatre operation not necessarily in the sense of American methods but in the matters of comfort, ventilation, lighting, programs, exploitations and general aggressiveness.

Someone is going to reap a rich harvest in this field and Paramount, First National and Metro-Goldwyn are each determined to be in on it. Offers are being made to local houses and circuits, sites are being considered for the erection of other theatres. Paramount is "in" the heaviest at the present time. Metro-Goldwyn has the Gaumont Houses under an agreement which has not yet been disclosed even to the French.

First National it can be confidently stated will build in Paris as soon as a site can be decided upon.

The lines are forming for a battle royal. Money is being spent freely if not always wisely and it would not be surprising to see the completion of film affairs in Europe altered radically in the near future.

Sign Colleen Moore Contract

First National Agreement Covers Three Years and Calls for Twelve Features

C OOLEEN MOORE will star in twelve features to be made over a period of three years for First National, according to the terms of a contract signed last week by Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National, and John E. McCormick, husband of the star who will produce the pictures.

Immediately following the signing of the contract Miss Moore and her husband left for Los Angeles where the star will make the final scenes for "We Moderns," adapted from Israel Zangwell's play and her next First National release.

In signing the new contract for Colleen Moore pictures, all previous agreements were set aside and the option to be received by the young star is not stated.

Postal Rate Hearing Date Set

Woodbull Asks Exhibitor Statistics for Presentation Before Committee

C. E. S. JONES, Chairman of the Special Committee considering the Postal Increase Bill to be presented to Congress next December, has informed R. F. Woodbull, president of the M. P. T. O. A. that the committee will hear the objections of exhibitors against the proposed continuation of the increased mail rates in New York on August 3rd.

The M. P. T. O. A. has issued a call to theatre owners to forward at once to the organisation information as to the effect this advance in parcel post and mail costs has had on their operation of their theatres. Such statistics and data will be included in the brief which the M. P. T. O. A. will present before the Committee at the hearing.

In requesting immediate action on the part of exhibitors in supplying this information the M. P. T. O. A. points out the importance of the matter to them and the fact that only a limited time is permitted the organization for the preparation of the case which it will place before the Committee.

The letter from Senator Moses in response to a letter written him by President Woodbull regarding the burden placed upon exhibitors by the increased postal rates, and requesting opportunity to present before the Committee the exhibitors' objections to the increased rates.

Paul McCabe Dead; Was Prominent Exhibitor

Paul McCabe, a pioneer exhibitor in North Carolina, and recently elected vice-president of the M. P. T. O. of that state, died suddenly at his home in Tarboro last week, after an illness of only four days.

Mr. McCabe was the owner of the Opera house at Tarboro, and was a prominent figure in theatre circles in the South. The news of his death came as shock to the industry.

In and Out of Town

H. C. WEAVER, of H. C. Weaver Productions, Tacoma, Washington, is in New York City in the interest of distribution.

W. J. MORGAN, sales manager of Producers Distributing Corp., returned this week from a tour of the principal exchange centers of the Middle West.

D. B. GOODMAN, manager of the Fox Forty East Corp., sailed for Europe recently where he has been assigned to make a survey which will take him into most of the important cities of Europe, Asia and Africa.

J. K. ADAMS, vice-president of the Davis Distributing Co., and Mrs. Adams are celebrating their 21st wedding anniversary up in the Adirondacks.

J. CHARLES DAVIS, II, of the Davis Distributing Division has gone to Boston for a few days in the interest of distribution.

L. FINKLESTEIN and Eddie Rubin of the Finklestein and Rubin theatre chain in Minneapolis, were in New York during the past week.

JACK WOODOY, of Associated Exhibitors, will leave Sunday, July 18th, on a several week trip to the exchange centers of the Middle West.

NATE ASCHER, of Ascher Bros., Chicago, is visiting in New York.

HEDA BARA is expected to arrive in New York City within the next week or so.

Exhibitors of Toronto Open Clubrooms

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ontario decided, at their July monthly luncheon, held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, with President J. C. Brady in the chair, to establish a club centre for all independent exhibitors by opening club rooms in Toronto. This will be for the use of all local and out-of-town exhibitors who are members of the M. P. T. O. or who are in sympathy with the movement.

Skouras, Goldman Merge on Bookings

A BOOKING merger of considerable moment has been concluded in St. Louis by Skouras Brothers and William Goldman whereby the Skouras and Goldman first run houses will play day and date on same as in son's biggest pictures. The number of pictures to be set in under the new arrangements has not been definitely determined as some contracts have not been concluded.

Spyros Skouras, president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, confirmed the merger, saying that it was merely a booking arrangement and did not affect the ownership of the houses. The Goldman houses affected are the Kings Theatre and Garden and the Rivoli. The Skouras houses are the Grand Central, West End Lyric, Lyric Skydome and the Capitol.
West Coast Theatre Deal Completed

Governing Board, With E. V. Richards Chairman, Formed—First National. Lesser and Gore Join Forces

Further details of the West Coast theatre deal were learned this week. It is understood that First National, Sol Lesser and the Gore Brothers have joined forces in the control of 60% of the stock of the First National. The remaining 40%, representing the holdings of Adolph Ramish, has been sold to William Fox.

A governing board to control the First National—Lesser—Gore interest in West Coast has been created with E. V. Richards, Jr. as chairman. A voting trust has been formed, in which the controlling stock has been placed, for a period of ten years. Direct operation of the chain will be under the control of Mr. Lesser and the Gore Brothers.

With the major share of an $8,000,000 sale offer tendered to them, Lesser and the Gore Brothers decided to retain their interests.

This admission was made by the principals in explaining their refusal to consummate the deal after Adolph Ramish, associate owner of West Coast had disposed of his interest to Fox.

In their final breaking off of negotiations, Lesser and the Gores say they were persuaded by a storm of wired entreaties from exhibitors all over the country.

Seider Sends Open Letter To Hays

On Behalf of M. P. T. O. A., Invites M. P. P. D. A. Head to Debate Film Boards and Arbitration Problem

Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of the Arbitration and Contract Committee of the M. P. T. O. A., this week invited Will H. Hays to debate "The existing contract, arbitration and Film Boards of Trade Problem." The invitation was sent out from National Headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A., in the form of an open letter to Mr. Hays.

Mr. Seider suggests that the debate be held at a time and place to be agreed upon, decision to be rendered by three United States or New York State Supreme Court Justices.

When the matter was called to the attention of Courtland Smith, secretary of the Hays organization, he said: "No comment to make."

The letter attacks the statement made by Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Film Boards of Trade, to the effect that 95 per cent of the theatre owners are pleased with the present arbitration system. Mr. Pettijohn's statement, it will be recalled, was given to trade paper reporters at a recent Monday conference in the Hays offices.

Mr. Seider’s letter follows:

"Hon Will H. Hays, President,
Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, 460 Fifth Avenue,
New York City, N. Y.
My Dear Sir:

"The statement made by your office that 95 per cent of the theatre owners of America are pleased with your Film Boards of Trade and arbitration as practiced in this industry, is clearly disproved by the attitude of the theatre owners of America in refusing to ratify your contract at their Chicago Convention in 1923 and again at Milwaukee in 1925. At the latter convention a demonstration against the Film Boards of Trade, the contract and the arbitration system was made when these subjects were placed before the theatre owners.

"We are for arbitration. The arbitration system in our industry, however, controlled by your Boards of Trade, is not arbitration but litigation. It is a convenient collection agency for your members.

"The contract itself is inequitable. Predicted on a contract such as this, no arbitration system, no matter how honest, earnest and sincere the arbitrators may be, can be fair to the theatre owner.

"When a theatre owner becomes enmeshed in your arbitration system, he not only loses his right to trial by jury but also the possibility of having his matter reviewed by a court of competent jurisdiction. Instead of the award of the arbitration board being made a judgment of the Supreme Court, upon proper motion, and collectable through its legal officers, as provided by law, the members of your Film Boards of Trade refuse to deliver pictures to exhibitor defendants. The exhibitor must either pay or close his theatre.

"The individual cannot take advantage of the protection afforded him by law. Injunctions are expensive. A review without injunction cannot be had because of the refusal of all the distributors at the same time refusing to deliver him pictures. And if he can protect himself, wherein is the benefit or advisability of arbitration?

"To be compelled to arbitrate after agreeing to do so is one thing. To be forced to sign a contract providing for arbitration is another. Where the theatre owner deletes the arbitration clause from his contract the contract is rejected. And every distributor at the same time does the same thing to the same theatre owner.

"We are pleading for a short, clear, fair contract, in simple language, so that all our members will know the extent of their obligations.

"We demand the right to appoint 50 per cent of the arbitrators instead of their being appointed for us.

"Since the Film Boards of Trade are the nucleus of the arbitration system, why not separate it from your organization? Then form a Film Board of Trade composed of Distributors and Exhibitors. Thus would the Arbitration Boards cease to be absolutely controlled by your organization.

"We did not refer this situation to the Department of Justice for Investigation. We believe that our interests in our industry are interlocked. For the protection of our Industry we must make every effort to ad-
Mastbaum Off to Europe to Sign Artists and Perfect Building Details

JULIUS E. MASTBAUM, president of the Stanley Company of America has sailed for Europe to remain several months for the purpose of signing up leading concert and opera artists of the world to appear in the Stanley houses. It is also understood that one of the big projects to be settled in France is the building of a modern theatre in Paris to cost $1,000,000.

This new theatre was discussed last year when Mastbaum was in Paris. Since then details have been perfected and these will be given Mastbaum's consideration. His associates urged last year that he make his residence in Paris to supervise the building of the theatre and the operation of it. Just how this detail has been settled has not been announced.

Just before sailing Mastbaum said:

"Personally I am especially eager to return to Stanley theatres the foremost artists of the music world. The public is eager to hear the best and we intend to give it. We believe that we will be able to convince such artists as Luisa Tetrazzini and Feodor Chaliapin, for instance, that a tour of Stanley houses will not in any way take from prestige but—rather, will add to it. And it will not be a difficult matter to bring conviction. The Stanley Theatre in Philadelphia has already presented some of the world's greatest artists. Leopold Stokowski, the brilliant conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, brought his entire organization to the Stanley Theatre to give a special concert. It was a tribute to Stanley's splendid work in the cause of music. "Victor Herbert was guest conductor there on several occasions and he was always happy to appear at the house."

Radio Aiding Crandall Houses
Test of Broadcasting's Influence on Box Office Proves Scheme Profitable

THAT the radio concerts broadcast weekly from the Crandall theatres in Washington, D. C., have stimulated box office receipts at the houses operated by the company, is the declaration of officials of the organization after a series of tests to determine the value of "air advertising." The tests, designed to show first the extent of the audience reached by the broadcasting, and second the direct value to the box office, are declared by the Crandall officers to have clearly demonstrated that broadcasting is a substantial aid to the motion picture exhibitor.

Harry M. Crandall, owner of the fifteen theatres bearing his name in Washington, organized a broadcasting unit eighteen weeks ago. Known as "Crandall Saturday Nighters," this unit sends concerts over the air every Saturday night through station WRC of the Radio Corporation of America. The programs, arranged by Joseph D. Morgan, general manager of the Crandall enterprise, Nelson B. Bell, advertising and publicity director, and Daniel Breskin, a popular announcer, are broadcast from the Crandall vault, and presented on a Wednesday week by a dozen radio stations, including WJZ, New York, through WRC.

"As Man Desires," in which he is featured with Viola Dana, opened at the Metropolitan and Ambassador theatres. Both houses, it is asserted, did abnormal business with no other stimulus than the radio publicity.

Another indication that the box office is profitably served by these radio concerts is the fact that an unusual amount of oral comment is made by patrons during the week immediately following the broadcasting on the musical program, a portion of which is broadcasted on the Saturday evening preceding its presentation in the theatre, and is announced over the radio.

Recently the Crandall broadcasters asked the radio audience if the concerts should be continued during the summer or suspended until fall. The response was so immediate and extensive in favor of a continuation of the broadcasting throughout the hot months that the management has decided to continue, being convinced that the effort and investment is a profitable one from the box office standpoint.

Richey Remains to Run Movie Campaign

Henderson M. Richey, manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan who was to have left Detroit on July 1 to assume his new duties as manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, has decided to continue his office in Detroit. The announcement was made just as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York announced that they had become effective July 1st.

Woodhull Names Picquet on Executive Committee

At the request of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina, National President, R. F. Woodhull has designated C. W. Picquet of Pinehurst, North Carolina, as the National Executive Committee from that State in the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.
Ralph Lewis to Have Lead in “Last Edition”

Ralph Lewis will have the leading role in “The Last Edition,” the next Emory Johnson production for F. B. O. Supporting Lewis will be Virginia Terce Boardman, Ray Haller, Roy Lease, Russel Simpson, David (Red) Kirby, Wade Boteler, Cyler Supplee, Leigh Willard and Will Frank.

“The Last Edition” is scheduled to go into production this week. The story is an original from the pen of Mrs. Emile Johnson, mother of the producer.

“The Unchastened Woman” Ready in August

James Young is editing and titling “The Unchastened Woman,” which he also directed, and which will bring Theda Bara back to the screen. A completed print will be in New York by the first of August. It is planned to give the picture an extended Broadway showing before it is released early in the Fall.

Valentino Picture Title is Changed

The Rudolph Valentino picture which has just gone into production for United Artists will be released as “The Black Eagle,” instead of “The Untamed,” as originally announced. Filming started this week with Clarence Brown directing.

“Arabella” Prints Arrive in This Country

Prints have been received in this country of “Arabella,” a Western production, according to announcement by Crandell and Clark. The picture, which is said to contain many unusual twists, features Mae Marsh.

“U” Is Producing 16 Westerns

UNIVERSAL has set a studio record with sixteen Westerns now in work or in preparation to go into production in the immediate future. At least three of these are to be made on an elaborate scale.

Hoot Gibson is at present in Canada, where he is filming two pictures at once. He heads a large company of players, cameramen, cowboys and technical workers filming “The Calgary Stampede” and “Chip of the Flying U.” The former is being made with the famous rodeo as its background. “Chip of the Flying U” is being filmed on the ranch of the Prince of Wales in Alberta, Canada. Herbert Blache is directing both pictures.

Edward Sedgwick will soon start the direction of “On the Frontier,” a Western story with American history as its background. Sedgwick wrote the novel from which the screen story is adapted. Norman Kerry and Dustin Farnum have two of the leading roles.

Cliff Smith is directing Art Aced in “Sky High Corral”; Robert North Bradbury is filming “Slipper Tongue” with Jack Hoxie as the star; while William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick are busy on a ten-episode serial, “The Winking Idol” with Frances Ford at the megaphone.

Other Westerns in action are: “Montana of the Range,” starring Josie Sedgwick, Edmund Cobb in “The Thrill Hunter,” directed by Ernst Laemmle; Fred Humes in “The Call of Hazard” and “ Ike’s Holiday,” starring Gilbert Holmes and Ben Corbett. Stories in preparation are “The Rustler’s Secret,” “The Emergency Man,” “The Fighting Fool,” “Gun Shy,” and several others.

Billie Dove is Selected for “Ancient Highway”

Irvin Willat has selected Billie Dove to play the leading feminine role in “The Ancient Highway,” which he will produce for Paramount. The other featured players are Jack Holt and Montague Love. The picture is an adaptation from the James Oliver Curwood story.

Claire Adams Joins “Souls for Sables” Cast

Claire Adams has been added to the cast of “Souls for Sables,” a Tiffany production, in which Claire Windsor and Eugene O’Brien play the leading roles. The picture was adapted from the book, “Garland & Co.,” by David Graham Phillips.
Flinn Confers With Managers
Discusses Coming Release Program of Producers Distributing Corporation

JOHN C. FLINN, vice-president and general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, held his first meeting in Chicago last week with the eight new territorial division managers of the company.
The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the order in which the thirty-seven productions listed by Producers Distributing Corporation for the coming season will be released.

In addressing the managers Flinn sought their suggestions on the arrangement of the release schedule after carefully explaining the theme and locale of each of the subjects so far selected for the 1925-26 season.

In this regard Flinn said:
"The order in which productions are released should constitute a real program for the season that is as carefully worked out in its diversity as the daily program offered by a theatre. When we aim, as we do, to have our pictures booked and shown in conssecutive order at the first run theatres, we must arrange our releasing schedule to present constant variety in theme, color and action.

"Our list of attractions includes every element of showmanship—straight drama, straight comedy, melodrama, farce comedy, epics, allegories, spectacles and westerns, in just the right proportions to make a perfettely balanced whole.

"It was with the idea of offering a showmanlike program that we assembled our present group of subjects. Each picture is typical of the best in its class and the group as a whole represents the widest diversity possible to secure from the stage and the literary field.

"And when these pictures are arranged in their final order of release, they may be booked solid for consecutive showings with the absolute assurance of perfect balance."

Principal To Release Three
Will Go to Exhibitors in August
Through Astor Distributing Corp.

ASTOR DISTRIBUTING CORPO-RATION will release three productions for Principal Pictures during the month of August. They are, "A Lover's Oath," "The Business of Love" and "The Shining Adventure."

"A Lover's Oath" is a Ferdinand Pinney Earle production with Ramon Novarro in the starring role and Kathleen Key playing opposite him. The picture was produced in California.

"The Shining Adventure" is a comedy interwoven with dramatic situations.

Edward Everett Horton is the star. Among the recent successes in which he appeared are "Beggar on Horseback" and "Marry Me," two current Broadway attractions in the picture houses. Horton is supported in "The Business of Love" by Barbara Bedford, Tom Ricketts, Zane Potts, Crel Stockdale and Dorothy Wood. The story was produced and directed by Jess Robinson.

"The Shining Adventure" is a madalas Brandels production made in California and directed by Hugo Ballin. Percy Manor is the star, while in the supporting cast are Mabel Ballin and Ben Alexander.

Warners May Star Fazenda and Louis as Team

Louise Fazenda and Willard Louis may be presented as a starring team in Warner productions, according to reports from that company's Hollywood studio. Considerations toward the end that these two well known screen players may be elevated to stardom are now receiving the serious attention of the Warner production heads, who state that the excellent work done by Miss Fazenda and Mr. Louis in several pictures entitles them to such a reward.

"Spanish Sunlight" Barbara
La Marr's Next Vehicle

"Spanish Sunlight," an adaptation of the novel of that title by Anthony Pryde, is the title of the next starring vehicle in which Barbara La Marr will appear for First National. It has been announced by Associated Picture Corporation.

The production will be made on the West Coast, at the United Studios, under the supervision of June Mathis. It is expected that camera work will be started in the middle of August.

Magazine Cover Model in De Mille Cast

Josephine Norman, recently signed as a member of the Cecil De Mille stock company, has been added to the cast of "The Coming of Amos," Rod La Rocque's first starring vehicle for De Mille. Miss Norman is known as "The Girl on the Magazine Cover."
She was for some time a model for the paintings of Howard Chandler Christie and Neysa McMein.
Melford Selecting “Simon the Jester” Cast

George Melford is selecting the cast he will direct in “Simon the Jester,” the first Frances Marion production on the program of Producers Distributing Corporation. It is an adaptation of the William J. Locke story and will have Lilian Rich and Eugene O’Brien featured in the cast which also includes Edmund Burns, Henry B. Walthall, Doris Wynn and William H. Pratt.

William De Mille Ready to Start New Production

William de Mille has selected his cast for the screen version of “New Brooms,” the Frank Craven play, which he will make for Paramount. Hesie Love, Neil Hamilton and Robert McQuade, who played in the stage production of the play, have the featured roles. The scenario was completed recently by Clara Beranger.

Associated Exhibitors Sign Burton King

Associated Exhibitors have signed Burton King to direct a production for them on the coming season’s program. It is tentatively titled “The Attorney for the Defense” and the continuity is being prepared by Arthur Hoerl. King is now casting the production.

“Ancient Mariner” an Xmas Season Release

Fox announces that “The Ancient Mariner,” a screen adaptation of Samuel Taylor Coleridge’s poem produced by Henry Otto, will be released on December 20th as a special attraction for the Christmas season.

Warner Production Advancing

WARNERS report that more than 25 per cent of the productions which are to be made for the 1925-26 season have been completed. At present six units are at work and four more will soon be launched on new picture productions.

Harry M. Warner arrived at the studio last week for a five days’ visit to confer on production matters. Because of matters constantly requiring his attention in the east he will bring Mrs. Warner and their three children with him on his return to New York and make his permanent home there.

To the list of productions finished or under way, two have been added in the last few days and work is to start on four others as soon as studio sets are available.

“The Love Hour,” with Ruth Clifford, Hunty Gordon, Louise Fazenda and Willard Louis heading the cast, is well started, with Herman Raymaker directing.

“Hogan’s Alley,” with Monte Blue, Patsy Ruth Miller, Louise Fazenda, Willard Louis, Eddie Gribbon, Frank Bond, Max Davidson, “Texas Kid” and Nigel Barrie, was started the early part of last week. As soon as he finishes “Hogan’s Alley” Monte Blue will start work on “The White Chief,” under the direction of Erle Kenton.

Julian Josephson is now preparing the script for “Lady Windermere’s Fan,” the famous Oscar Wilde drama that Ernst Lubitsch is to produce.

Preparations are being made by E. T. Love, Jr., to start production soon on “Compromise,” a novel by Mrs. Jay Gelzer. Irene Rich, Louise Fazenda and Clive Brook will have the principal roles. Alan Crosland will direct.

Upon the completion of “Satan In Sables” now nearing an end it has been decided that Lowell Sherman’s next picture for the Warners will be “The Love Toy,” from the pen of an anonymous author. Erle Kenton will be assigned to the direction.

Griffith Adds to Cast of “That Royle Girl”

D. W. Griffith has made several important additions to the cast he will direct in “That Royle Girl,” his first production for Paramount. Among the new-comers to the company are Marie Champlin, one of the principals of “Is Zat So?” now current on Broadway; Ida Waterman, recently seen in the screen version of “The Swan;” Gladys Coburn of Ziegfeld’s “Follies;” and Mrs. John Harriman who has played in a number of films recently.

The featured parts in the picture are to be impersonated by Carol Dempster, James Kirkwood, Harrison Ford and George Rigns.

“Evolution” is a Feature of Rivoli and Rialto Bills

Goldwyn Names Leads for “Garden of Allah”

Samuel Goldwyn has selected Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky for the leading roles in “The Garden of Allah,” second of the Goldwyn-Henry King productions for United Artists release. King will film the story in Biskra as near as possible to the actual locations described by Robert Hichens in his novel.

“The Garden of Allah” will be started immediately upon the completion of “Stella Dallas,” the special King is now directing.

Lasky Assigns Directors for Two Productions

Jesse L. Lasky has assigned George B. Seitz to direct “The Vanishing American,” and William K. Howard to direct “Martinique,” two of the leading Paramount productions which will be included in the Greater Forty.

“The Vanishing American” will be an adaptation from Zane Grey’s novel of that title, and “Martinique,” which will feature Bebe Daniels is to be based on the play by Lawrence Eyre.

Dorothy Cumming Recalled by First National

Dorothy Cumming has been recalled to the cast by First National to appear in “Invisible Wounds,” production on which will be started immediately upon her arrival from the east. Miss Cumming went to Hollywood to appear with Gloria Swanson in the latter’s first production following her arrival home from Paris.

Miss Cumming is to have one of the leading roles in “Invisible Wounds,” which is to be filmed at the Cosmopolitan studios.

Cast Completed for Sidney Olcott Production

Warner Baxter, Esther Ralston, Kathlyn Williams, Edward Davis, Margaret Morrisson and Margaret Livingston have been selected for the principal roles in “The Best People,” the David Grey and Avery Hopwood play which will be Sidney Olcott’s next production for Paramount.

Carl Dane, Rose Blossom Get M-G-M Contracts

Carl Dane and Rose Blossom have been signed to long term contracts by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Dane’s contract is said to have come as the result of his work in “The Big Parade,” John Gilbert’s first starring vehcile. Miss Blossom played the ingenue lead in the screen version of Channing Pollock’s “The Fool.”

“Abe and Mawruss” for United Artists

Samuel Goldwyn will release through United Artists the third Potash and Perlmutter production adapted from the Montague Glass stage success, “Partners Again.”

This is in addition to the George Fitzerman production and Henry King’s “Stella Dallas” and “The Garden of Allah,” already announced.

Glass recently arrived in Hollywood from Europe to prepare this third “Abe and Mawruss” story, which will go into production in the near future.

Two Added to “Girl Who Wouldn’t Work” Cast

B. P. Schulberg has added Winter Hall and Thomas Ricketts to the cast of “The Girl Who Wouldn’t Work,” from the story by Gertie D. Wentworth-James. Others featured in the cast are Lionel Barrymore, Marguerite De La Motte, Henry B. Walthall, Lilian Tashman and Forrest Stanley. Marcel De Sanow is directing.
Roach’s ‘Rex’ Unit Working at Montana Location

The production unit making the next “Rex” feature for Hal Roach is at work in Lodge Grass, Montana, at the Crow Indian Reservation, where the major portion of the action will be filmed. It is being directed by Fred Jackman, who made “King of Wild Horses” and “Black Cyclone.”

The title of the forthcoming production, which Pathe will distribute, has been changed from “Thunderfoot” to “The Devil Horse.” Yakima Canutt and Robert Kortman will be seen as the human hero and heavy of the new picture.

European Screen Star and Director Arrive

Among New York arrivals from Europe this week were Gretta Garbo, among the foremost actresses of Europe, and Mauritz Stiller, Swedish director, both of whom are under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. They will proceed in the near future to the studios at Culver City.

Miss Garbo is scheduled for stardom in a number of big feature productions, and Stiller will direct several pictures, some of which will be adapted from his original stories.

Paramount Has Signed Raoul Walsh to Contract

Raoul Walsh, whose most recent work for Paramount was the production of “The Wanderer,” has been placed under a long term contract by the company, and according to plans announced by Jesse L. Lasky will make a series of big productions for Paramount in the future.

During a career of several years as a director Walsh’s name has been associated with many outstanding productions, among them “They Died With Their Boots On,” “The Vanishing American,” the Douglass Fairbanks screen playtasset.

Vancouver Leads in the First National Sales Drive

The Vancouver branch was in first place at the end of the fifth week in the First National Summer Play Date Contest. Vancouver’s standing, with a percentage based on last year’s actual played time was 100.40 per cent. Chicago was in second place and Atlanta third at the end of the fifth week. The contest will cover a period of twelve weeks and the awards will go to exchanges having the greatest number of bookings actually played during that time.

Joe Brandt Writes Play for Columbia Film

JOE BRANDT, president of Columbia Pictures, is the author of a story, as yet untitled, which is to be produced as a Columbia photoplay, according to an announcement from the company.

Mr. Brandt is in Hollywood discussing the script with Harry Cohn, production manager of Columbia. Preliminary arrangements for the filming of his play are among the things Mr. Brandt will make before returning to his office in New York.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Sign George K. Arthur

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have signed George K. Arthur to a new contract. He is playing at present in support of Marion Davies in “Lights of Old Broadway.” This picture is being directed by Monta Bell and is from the successful play “Merry Wives of Gotham.”

Arthur has gained rapid strides as a comedian. For the past four months he has worked every day at the Culver City studios, where he last played in Monta Bell’s “Lady of the Night,” Van Stromberg’s “The Exquisite Sinner,” “Pretty Ladies,” “Sun Up” and “I’ll Tell the World.”

Asher to Be Associated in Production With Lesser

E. M. Asher, of Corinne Griffiths Productions, will be associated with Sol Lesser of Principal Pictures Corporation in the making of several independent productions and a stage presentation, it was announced this week.

His first film venture in conjunction with Lesser will be in the making of the Drury Lane melodrama “Good Luck.” The producers have leased the Manhattan Opera House in New York City and will produce the play in stage form first, following which the work will be done in pictures.

Paul Bern a Delegate to Paris Art Exposition

Paul Bern, of Famous Players-Lasky, has the distinction of being the only screen director to be appointed by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover as a delegate to the International Exposition of Modern Decorative and Industrial Art now in progress in Paris.

The director is acting as one of the American committee on “Arts of the Theatre.” The Commission will make reports on the status and advance of these arts as revealed at the International exposition.

Fox Studio Staff Hard at Work

Production on New Schedule Advancing Rapidly; New Units Are Being Formed

With the assignment of directors for productions to be started soon and the signing of many new players for prominent roles in the pictures which Fox will offer during 1925-26, the filming of the great number of features and short subjects for the company's new season is well under way at the Fox studios in Los Angeles.

Several new units have been formed to make big features and are preparing to start for locations while the studio stages are occupied with interior and exterior sets being used by companies which have been working for some time.

Among the units preparing to start on location is the company which Reginald Barker will direct in "When the Door Opened," from the James Oliver Curwood story of that title. Mr. Barker will take his company to Canada for the exterior scenes for this picture, in which Jacqueline Logan plays the leading feminine role.

Tom Mix is now engaged on his first production since his return from Europe, "The Lucky Horse-shoe," being filmed under the direction of J. G. Bystone.

Frank Borzage has nearly completed his first production under the Fox banner, "Lazybones," adapted from the stage play by Owen Davis. Frances Marion was responsible for the script.

John Ford is preparing for a special titled "Three Bad Men." Two of the bad men will be J. Farrell MacDonald and Lou Tellegen. The third one is yet to be chosen.

Rowland V. Lee will go to Catalina Island to film scenes for "The Silver Treasure," adapted from the Joseph Conrad novel "Nostradamus."

Lionel Barrymore Signed by Paramount

Paramount has signed Lionel Barrymore for a featured role in the forthcoming Raoul Walsh production, "The Lucky Lady." Others chosen for featured roles are William Collier, Jr., Greta Nissen and Marc MacDermott.

"The Lucky Lady" is an original story by Robert E. Sherwood and Bertram Bloch. It was adapted for the screen by James T. O'Donohue.

Von Brincken Joins Rod La Rocque Cast

Paul Sloane has added Count W. Von Brincken to the cast of "The Coming of Amos." Rod La Rocque's initial starring vehicle for Producers Distributing Corporation release. Von Brincken was for many years in the diplomatic service of the Central European powers. Since the war he has devoted himself to picture acting.

Prod. Dist. Corp. Opens New Des Moines Branch

De Mille Signs Jean Acker to Long Contract

Cecil B. De Mille has signed Jean Acker, formerly Mrs. Rudolph Valentino, to a long term contract to appear in De Mille productions. She has been loaned by De Mille to the Metropolitan features to appear in "Simon the Jester," but is soon to be cast in a De Mille production. For the past year Miss Acker has been featured in vaudeville.

Donald Keith Joins "With This Ring" Cast

Donald Keith is the latest addition to the B. P. Schulberg cast for "With This Ring," an adaptation from the Saturday Evening Post novel by Fanny Heaslip Lea. Others in the cast are Alyce Mills, Lon Tollefsen, Forrest Stanley, Joan Standing, Martha Mattox, Ethelie Jensen and Dick Sutherland. Fred C. Windemere is directing.
Warners Buy back Product From Kwality Pictures

Warner Brothers have taken over the Warner pictures formerly handled by Kwality Pictures, Inc., in Seattle, and will distribute them through their own exchange in that territory. This is the latest of several similar deals in which Warners have bought back the distribution rights from franchise holders since acquiring their own exchange system through the purchase of Vitagraph.

New Johnny Hines Feature Nearing Completion

After five weeks of production work the new Johnny Hines feature, which First National will release under the title of “The Live Wire,” is nearing completion. C. C. Harr, producer of the film, states that the work will be finished by August first. The feature is being made at the Tec-Art Studio in New York under the direction of Charley Hines. The play is an adaptation from Richard Washburn Child’s novel “The Game of Light.”

Betty Compson to Be Lead in “The Pony Express”

Paramount announces that Betty Compson will be featured in “The Pony Express,” which James Cruze will produce as his sequel to “The Covered Wagon.” Miss Compson will appear in the role of Molly Jones, daughter of a blacksmith of Julesburg, Colo., the jumping-off point for the overland stage and pony express in 1860.

Foreign and Domestic Sales

Independent Distributors Report Closing of Territories on Next Year’s Pictures

TERRITORIAL transactions recently closed by independent producers and distributors covering their programs for next season are marked by a number of important contracts for the foreign as well as domestic rights for features and short subjects.

One of the biggest recent deals was concluded between J. G. Bachmann, general manager of distribution for B. P. Schallberg Productions, and Harry Charnas, head of Standard Film Service of Cleveland and Cincinnati, under which the latter organization obtained the territorial rights for thirty Preferred Pictures. Standard will distribute ten of Schallberg’s 1924-25 pictures in Cleveland and Cincinnati, and the entire program for next year in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Detroit.

Sam Sax closed three important territorial deals in the key cities of St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha for the distribution of the new series of twelve pictures.

The distribution contract for the St. Louis territory was made with Jack Weil Pictures Inc. of 3320 Lindell Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

Negotiations for the Kansas City district were completed with Mr. E. C. Rhode representing the Midwest Film Distributors of Kansas City, Mo., and for Omaha the Goedde product will be handled by the Independent Film Co., 1304 Farnham St., Omaha, Nebraska. The contract being closed by Mr. J. L. Stern.

William Skiboll, president of the Skiboll Gold Seal Productions with headquarters at Cleveland has acquired the territorial rights for the state of Ohio for Henry Ginsberg Productions, Banner Productions and Royal Pictures. A branch office of Skiboll Productions has also been established at Cincinnati to facilitate shipments and service to exhibitors.

Dependable Exchange, Inc., New York, purchased the rights for “9 and 3/5 Seconds,” starring Charles Paddock, and “Eyes of Hollywood,” a feature. Reclarka Film Exchange, Chicago, will handle in that territory the six Eileen Sedgwick pictures and the six Bill Patton Productions. Freedom Film Corp., Buffalo, N. Y., bought six Jungle Pictures for the Buffalo territory.

Mr. M. H. Hoffman, General Manager of the Tiffany Truart Productions, announces that the entire production output for 1925-1926 of the Tiffany Big Twelve and the Truart Productions have been sold to Max Gluecksmann of Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic for all the South American countries including Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chili, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. This contract was made through Jacobo Gluecksmann, general representative in the United States for Max Gluecksmann.

The Hi-Mark Film Sales Corporation of No. 220 West 42nd Street, through Nat Nathanson, General Manager, have bought the entire production output of the Truart Film Corporation for Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania.

Louis Weiss, Managing Director of Weiss Brothers Artelass Pictures Corporation, announces that he has arranged for the distribution of his program for the season of 1925-26 in South America. The deal was consummated between Mr. Jacobo Gluecksmann who represented Max Gluecksmann.
Inspiration Pictures Adds to Scenario Staff

Inspiration Pictures has enlarged its scenario department for the preparation of Richard Barltelness and Dorothy Gish productions. Violet E. Powell is head of the department. She is well known for her screen originals and feature newspaper stories.

In addition to Mrs. Powell, Inspiration has acquired the services of Don Bartlett and C. Graham Baker. Bartlett has been scenario editor, script writer and publicity director for a number of leading companies. Baker has had extensive training in pictures, ranging from writing, editing and directing a number of productions.

Schulberg Prepares to Film "Horses and Women"

B. P. Schulberg has made production plans for "Horses and Women," one of his biggest pictures for the coming season. It is an adaptation from the Saturday Evening Post novel by L. B. Yates, "The Biography of a Race Horse." Frey Schulberg has been chosen to direct. It will be ready for Fall release. This production will be a combination of horse picture and a tense society drama. The story, which ran last winter, was recently issued in book form.

Gladden James Added to "Wedding Ring" Cast

 Cecil De Mille has added Gladden James to the supporting cast for Leatrice Joy in "The Wedding Ring," her next starring picture for Producers Distributing Corporation, which Alan Hale is directing at the De Mille studio. Other featured players in the picture are, Robert Ames, Charles Gerard, Rosa Rudani and Ethel Wales.

Roach Gets Comedy Lead in "Dance Madness"

Bert Roach has been given the leading comedy role in "Dance Madness," production of which will be started next week by Metro-Goldwyn Mayer with Irving Cummings directing. Aileen Pringle and Lew Cody appear in the other two featured roles. The story is an original for the screen by S. J. Kaufman.

Paramount Adds Two to Editorial Staff

Hector Turnbull, supervisor of productions at Paramount's west coast studio, has added Hugo Ballin and John Lynch to his staff of supervising editors to help with the extensive production program contemplated. Ballin has won fame as a portrait painter, author, scenario writer and director for Goldwyn for three years and was an independent producer for a time, "The Journey's End," "East Lynne," "Jane Eyre" and "Vanities Fair," were among the successes credited to him.

John Lynch is a playwright and scenarist who has been engaged in screen work for thirteen years, "Enemies of Women" is pointed to as one of his outstanding successes.

World Premiere for "Never the Twain Shall Meet"

The world premiere of "Never the Twain Shall Meet," the Cosmopolitan Corporation production of the Peter B. Kyne novel, will be held at the Capitol Theatre in New York Sunday, July 29th. The production, directed by Maurice Tourneur, was made mostly in Tahiti and Moorea in the South Seas Islands.

In the cast of "Never the Twain Shall Meet" are Anita Stewart, Bert Lytell, Huntly Gordon, Justine Johnstone, George Siegman, Lionel Belmore, William Norris, Emily Fitzroy, Princess Marie de Bourbon and Florence Turner. More than 3,000 natives of the South Seas islands also appear in the picture. It will be released by Metro-Goldwyn following its New York run.

Mary Anderson Will Tour With Film Production

Mary Anderson and her husband, Randolph Hamilton Clement, former newspaper man, have purchased the rights to "Wildness of Youth" from Ivan Abramson, producer of the picture. In conjunction with the film, Miss Anderson will appear in a stage sketch called "Temptation," in which she will be assisted by Richard Carle, well known stage comedian. The first appearance of Miss Anderson and the film, in which she plays a leading role, will be at the Sheridan Theatre, New York City, and will later play in New Jersey, Ohio, Kentucky, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and New Mexico.

Dolores Costello Lead for John Barrymore

Dolores Costello, daughter of Maurice Costello, has been selected as the leading lady for John Barrymore in "The Sea Beast," his first picture for Warners under the new contract. The announcement states that Costello is the personal choice of Barrymore for the role she will play in the picture. She was working in "His Majesty Bunker Bean" at the Warner studios when the star's attention was directed to her. The scenario of "The Sea Beast" is being completed by Bess Meredyth and Millard Webb, who will direct the play.

New Circus Maximus for "Ben Hur"

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER announced this week that property which had been leased near Culver City, Calif., for construction of the Circus Maximus in which the chariot races for "Ben Hur" will be filmed. Construction of the set, which, it is stated, will cost $1,000,000 will begin immediately and it is planned to photograph the races the first week in September.

It will be recalled that the Circus Maximus was built in Rome for the same purpose, at the time scenes being made there, the picture expedition was recalled. The land leased for the latest Circus Maximus is a 60-acre section of Westview Park, belonging to Mrs. May K. Rydene, and located about two miles from the Culver City studios.
THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big." The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method. A report of "Poor" is rated at 0%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

"Lilies of the Field" Well Advertised in Laredo

When Manager Jack Rowley of the Royal theatre at Laredo, Texas, began the exploitation work on "Lilies of the Field," he realized he had a valuable angle in the fact that Corinne Griffith is a Texas young woman. Besides running trailers in the Royal theatre several days in advance and placing numerous stands of pictures about the lobby of his theatre, with attractive lithographs on the walls, Manager Rowley two days before the opening distributed handbills and posted twenty-four sheet and smaller lithographs.

On the Saturday preceding the opening, an elaborate lobby showing of pictures in frames, stands of lithographs and other attractive displays were made, while on each side of the lobby entrance, in the panels, were frames of pictures and stands of lithographs, and in the central entrance of the lobby appeared an immense white lily with the head of Corinne Griffith as the centerpiece. This attractive display remained in evidence throughout Sunday and Monday, being augmented by the electric sign bearing the words, "Corinne Griffith in 'Lilies of the Field.'" The lily feature in the decoration attracted all passers-by, even those across the street.

Photoplay Page Aids Drive for "Learning to Love"

In exploiting "Learning to Love," Arthur Swanke, exploiter for the Rialto and Mission Theatres in El Dorado, Ark., obtained almost a free hand in arranging the picture page of the El Dorado Daily News. The picture was shown at the Mission theatre.

Swanke used a large banner, twenty feet long, by four feet high, across the front of the theatre for the engagement. The banner carried the name of the star and the picture.

Manager H. C. Farley of the Strand theatre, Montgomery, arranged this lobby display for "Adventure" (Paramount) with cutouts on the sides and in center.

Pennants, banners and cutouts were used by Keith’s Greenpoint theatre, Brooklyn, for “The Fighting Ranger” (Universal).

Trackless Train in Albany Enthusiastically Met

Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York and Mayor Win. S. Hackett of Albany boarded America’s first Trackless Train when the special drove into Albany and toured the city as its guests through cheering throngs that crowded every sidewalk. The special, whose trip across the continent is being sponsored by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the interests of better roads and motion pictures, was received at the city limits by a motorcycle escort and drove first to the City Hall, where a committee of city officials, headed by the Mayor, welcomed and inspected it. The entire town turned out to view and admire the trackless transportation wonder.

Mayor Hackett boarded the train at the City Hall. The special then proceeded to the Capitol, where the Governor and members of his staff joined the Mayor’s party. Still and motion pictures were taken of the Mayor and the Governor on the observation platform and also of them individually in the cab of the train for the press.

Thousands of people recognized the officials on their tour about the principal streets, and cheered them wildly. Governor Smith, in high spirits, raised his hat repeatedly to the crowds, told them joyously that he was off to California on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer special, and on passing the New York Central station and the Delaware and Hudson Railroad Building informed the railroad officials that their days were over, as the Trackless Train had arrived to put them out of business by superseding the railroads. Letters to the Mayor of Los Angeles and to the Governor of California were entrusted to the Trackless Train by Governor Smith.

The train, on leaving the Governor and the Mayor at their respective offices, proceeded to the Leland theatre, where Mr. Buckley, one of the owners of the playhouse boarded it. At the Albany Walter Sackno joined him and at the Strand Manager Hill was picked up. Manager Wallace of Proctor’s Grand theatre was called for and these exhibitors enjoyed a lengthy trip about the city.

The Trackless Train celebrated in Albany the completion of its tour of New England.
Varied Stunts Used for "Lost World"

One of the most complete and thorough campaigns that has ever been staged for the exploitation of any picture is a broad statement to make about the effort of any exploitation work. However, in all justice, it can be said of the First National campaign for "The Lost World" at Atlantic City when that picture opened recently at the Globe Theatre.

Booked in with short notice, with only a few days to work before the opening, "The Lost World" was not lost in the boardwalk city—they found it—they couldn't help it.

Here is a summary of the work that was done:

A "Lost World" Lost Animal Contest was arranged with the Atlantic City Gazette-Review. For an entire week this paper ran daily photographs of "The Lost World's" prehistoric animals, with daily cash prizes to those who could give the correct names of the animals. A fifty-word essay about the animal determined the placing of the award and the stunt went over with a bang. Atlantic City laid aside its crossword puzzles and juggled with brontosaurus, allosaurus and the like. More than 2,000 replies being received by the paper.

A tie-up was arranged with the Yellow Taxi, the jitney buses, and the Packard Taxi Company, a total of more than 200 cars. Each car bore a two-foot sticker pasted on the rear windows reading, "Hop in and see 'The Lost World' now playing at the Globe Theatre."

So pleased was the Atlantic City Gazette-Review with the success of the contest which they carried that they distributed 12,000 "Lost World" rotogravure inserts in the Sunday edition of the paper.

Every box store location worthy of using was procured for full window tie ups on the A. L. Bart edition of Sir Arthur Doyle's novel from which the picture was made.

The principal music store window was used to sell the picture and the song "The Lost World."

The Majane News Company, the leading news dealer in Atlantic City, used 11,000 stickers advertising the picture in Yiddish. These were placed on the front page of every Jewish newspaper sold in the city.

In cooperation with the local organization of Boy Scouts, 15,000 special heralds were distributed to the homes.

Twenty-five of the best hotels were agreed to placing special art cards in their lobbies in conspicuous locations.

Trailers were run in two principal picture houses advertising the attraction.

The campaign was under the guidance of Louis R. Brager, directed by Allan S. Glenn, Supervisor of Exploitation for First National.

M. G.-M. Trackless Train Sensation at Haverhill

America's first Trackless Train received an exceptionally enthusiastic welcome at Haverhill, Mass., on recently visiting this city in accordance with special instructions wired from Boston to New York by Louis B. Mayer, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive, who got his start in the theatrical business at the Lafayette Theatre in Haverhill. Enormous crowds turned out to greet the special, its arrival being celebrated by the appearance on the streets of the biggest crowds recorded since the visit of President Coolidge two years ago. Thousands of people lined the sidewalks as the train came into town escorted by four motorcycle police. Front page space was accorded by the press to its arrival, a cut and a three-quarters column being devoted to the event of the Haverhill Gazette.

The train began its tour of the principal streets at ten o'clock in the morning and, with representatives of the local theatres aboard, traveled to the former residence of Mr. Mayer on Hamilton avenue. Photographs of the house were taken there and then the locomotive went to the Lafayette theatre, where additional photographs were taken.

Bicycle Parade Utilized to Aid "Head Winds"

There was a National Bicycle week not so long ago. In Seattle, Wash., a parade of 2000 bike-riding boys was a feature of the celebration. Manager Robert Bender of the Columbia theatre, who was showing "Head Winds" at the time, decided that the parade would not be complete without representation of the feature, and so he tied up with the men in charge.

As a result, two boys carried a large banner reading, "Heading for 'Head Winds' at the Columbia theatre. Join us in celebrating National Bicycle Week," in the center of the riding boys and the newspapers came through with a generous amount of publicity.
House to House Canvass on “The Fast Worker”
“Blanketing” a city the size of St. Louis in house-to-house distribution is no easy matter.
But Bill Goldman did it in exploiting Reginald Denny and Laura La Plante in “The Fast Worker” at the Kings and Rivoli.
In a campaign devised by Al Marks, his general manager: Maurice Davis, Universal exploiter; and Will Foster of the National Dairy Association, Goldman got his advertising into 110,000 of St. Louis’ 185,000 homes.
A four-page milk bottle hanger did it. In practically every home from which these theatres could expect patrons, these milk bottle hangers propagated “The Fast Worker” its stars, its author, the theatre and the playdates. On its back was a coupon which, with a slight admission fee, would admit an adult to any “Fast Worker” weekday matinee.
Half the cost of the hangers was paid by the National Dairy Association, which also paid half the newspaper display advertising costs and handled the hanger-distribution without charge. The Dairy Association’s tie-up came in the fact that both Denny and Miss La Plante advocated milk as a food and tonic.

“Excuse Me” Well Put Over In Sandusky Campain
An excellent campaign on “Excuse Me” was recently waged by C. C. Deardorff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, in Sandusky, O., when this popular comedy played recently at the Schade theatre.
Special pennants attached to wooden standards were stuck up on the grass plots which line the main boulevard by permission of the city authorities, these pennants reading “Excuse Me” at the Schade theatre.” These gaily colored pennants gave the boulevard a festive air and attracted enormous attention to the showing. Phone calls were made to all private residences, informing them of the showing and “Excuse Me” crossword puzzles, taken from the exhibitor’s service book, were planted in one of the local dailies with excellent results, proving extremely popular.

Manager Guy O. Kenimer of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, used this book store tie-up for the showing of “Madame Sans Gene” (Paramount).

Jewelry stores, hat stores, sporting goods, shops and a drug store contributed window displays to the cause.

“The Crackerjack” Showing Aided by Ballyhoos
New York’s attention was vividly called to the Mark Strand showing of “The Crackerjack” by the use of two distinct ballyhoo vehicles which paraded around the Times Square and uptown sections a week previous to the opening of the picture and during the week of the showing.
The exact pickel wagon used in “The Crackerjack” was rushed into duty around New York City and in conjunction with an ingeniously made automobile whose body and parts were made from an aeroplane by a U. S. Army Sergeant, distributed crackerjack candy in front of the New York Mark Strand theatre twice daily. The same ballyhoo was used at the Brooklyn Mark Strand when “The Crackerjack” opened there. The complete exploitation stunt was in the hands of D. E. Wehner, director of advertising and publicity for C. C. Burr’s East Coast Films, Inc.

‘Mechanical Doll’ Boosts “New Toys” Engagement
“New Toys” was given a comprehensive campaign of exploitation by the Saenger Amusement company at the Liberty theatre, New Orleans, where it played.
Departing from the usual, the Saenger firm employed La Rue, the vaudeville Mechanical Doll, to do daily street stunts. La Rue by cleverly contracting his muscles, facial and otherwise, gives a close-up exhibition of the oldtime mechanical doll.
He went on shopping tours, sold newspapers, worked in downtown show windows of big department stores, drove an automobile in rush traffic hours; all tied up directly and indirectly with “New Toys.”

Window display arranged by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. for “The Lost World” (First National) when that picture played the Hyperion theatre, New Haven.
Elaborate “Excuse Me” Ads Effective in Nashville

Loew's Vendome theatre in Nashville, Tenn., recently had a vigorous and elaborate campaign waged in connection with the showing of “Excuse Me” by C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, and Manager Fain, of the Vendome.

A miniature electric train was set going in the lobby one week in advance of the run on a hill side setting completely equipped with railroad signals, stations and a miniature city. The train, consisting of locomotive with tender and three Pullmans, was labeled the “Excuse Me” Special, while points along the track bore captions reading “Cupidville: No change Here;” “Spoonievil: Keep Going,” “Jazztown: don’t park” and “Loverville: don’t linger.” These signs attracted vast attention.

A small bill board on the hill side read: “Take a Pullman Joy Ride With Norma Shearer and Conrad Nagel on the ‘Excuse Me’ Special, Which Leaves Loew’s Vendome Daily at 11 A.M. All Next Week.” Time tables of all railroads having terminals in the city were placed around this set.

Seven thousand Pullman ticket heralds were mailed out to a selected mailing list and distributed among railroad employees, each ticket carrying a coupon good for one admission with each paid ticket.

Ten thousand teaser door knob hangers were hung on door knobs all over the city, bearing the words “Excuse Me” and the date of the opening.

Five thousand auto hangers similarly printed were attached to radiator caps on parked autos throughout Nashville, and 8,000 heralds were distributed with the Sunday papers. In addition the town was lavishly posted.

British Exhibitor’s Novel “Sea Hawk” Publicity

Pirates raided a ballroom which adjoins the Queens Hall Cinema, Hexham, England, and climbing into their awaiting barks at the end of the hall, proceeded to stalk the quarter deck, armed to the teeth with saxophones, cornets and drums, discoursing sweet music to the dancers below.

Tom H. Scott, the enterprising British exhibitor, was responsible for this stunt. Effective as it appeared, the vessel was merely painted on flat canvas. With a few deft touches the artist gave it a thoroughly ship shape appearance, adding a few frowning cannon by way of realism. Another piece of canvas, and a mast, from which the “jolly Roger” was flown, was erected in the middle of the bandstand to complete the picture.

“The Dixie Handicap” Sold With Miniature Race Track

The biggest factor in Manager Roy S. Smart’s campaign on “The Dixie Handicap” at the Noble, Anniston, was the miniature race track constructed on a stage across the 25 ft. lobby of the Savoy Theatre, temporarily closed. This display was made up of enthral horses, fences and all the paraphernalia coincident with a racing course. The same kind of pennants and banners were used as decorated the Festival display at the Noble. Illuminated at night by a row of concealed footlights, this exhibit proved a real attention getter.
Well Planned Campaign for "Idle Tongues"

Manager Wallace of the Fifth Avenue theatre, Nashville, Tenn., gave "Idle Tongues" a well carried out exploitation campaign.

A week in advance, a film trailer and slide were used in his theatre and both of his lobbies were covered with the various styles of posters prepared for this production. The frame of the lobbies and along the stairway of the family cirele carried posters and photographs.

The billing campaign was considerably increased and paper was placed in the outer-skirts of Nashville as well as the business sections of the city. Two hundred fifty window cards were placed and heralds distributed. Two large beaver board cut-outs from the posters were used in the outer lobby.

A tie-up was made by W. R. Arnold, exploiteer with the Packard Company, Nashville agents for the Oakland ear, through E. Gray Smith, manager, by which one of the new model Oakland cars was sent over the city carrying cards advertising both the ear and "Idle Tongues." Arnold also effected a tie-up with Carl Howe, manager of the Howe's Distilled Water company, by which one of its trucks was sent over the streets carrying banners advertising the distilled water and the showing of "Idle Tongues" at the Fifth Avenue theatre.

"Coming Through" Display Visualizes Title

Manager J. P. Harrison devised a lobby display on "Coming Through" at the Hippodrome, Fort Worth, that established the atmosphere of the picture and the title in good shape. The lobby of the Hippodrome was entirely encased in beaver board, cut out and painted to represent the entrance to a mine shaft. The greens, natural rocks, picks and shovels, added a realistic touch to the exhibit. The cut-out title above the entrance was illuminated and attached to a flasher. Directly in back of the entrance, in the center of the lobby, was an appropriately framed scene from the photoplay, decorated with greens and natural rocks.

The lighting effect used on the display did much to enhance its attraction value. All lobby lights were red; red lanterns were placed in front of the theatre and red danger signals along the edge of the sidewalk. This produced a very striking effect.

The 36 window cards with inserts of 11 x 14 photos in a special background card, placed in windows and on soda fountains, proved a most productive investment in the way of publicity for the attraction.

Attractive Display Tie-up Exploits "Any Woman"

From a publicity standpoint, window displays played a prominent role in Manager F. J. Miller's standard campaign on "Any Woman," playing the Modjeska, Augusta. Four prominent windows were secured, three days in advance of opening, all of which had attractive displays of gowns and women's wearing apparel in general. In these windows were placed 8 x 10 still boards with wording tying up with the title, such as:

"Any Woman" would be delighted to own one of these gowns. Don't fail to see Alice Terry in "Any Woman" at the Modjeska, Thurs. Fri. and Sat.

In a shadow box built underneath the theatre marquee, was a display showing Alice Terry in a bathing suit, strikingly outlined against a painted background depicting a typical seashore scene. Illuminated by colored lights, the exhibit was extremely effective.

"Sally" at Warfield Given Drug Company Tie-up

The Owl Drug company, which makes a specialty of the line of Colleen Moore toilet articles on the Pacific Coast, helped exploit that star's picture, "Sally," at Loew's Warfield theatre in San Francisco.

Fred A. Gross, director of displays for the San Francisco branch of the Owl Drug company, prepared and had put into the company's stores an altogether exceptional window display. The name of the new picture and the portraits of the star dominated the displays.

A dozen specially designed cards, carrying portraits of Miss Moore of stills from "Sally," nearly filled the windows. Samples of the various Colleen Moore toilet articles were displayed between the cards. The display was the centre of much interest, particularly on the part of women.
"The Lady" is Advertised With Music Week Bill

"The Lady", with Norma Talmadge, was the feature film which played the Palace theatre during "National Music Week." Manager Howard Waugh advertised both the production and special musical program through the usual channels, with direct appeal to all local music teachers, singers, clubs, etc. In addition, 10,000 special booklets were gotten out by Bry's Department Store, featuring "National Music Week" with special mention of "The Lady." The back page tied-in Victor Victrolas with "Music Week." 5,000 of these pamphlets were distributed by a local laundry, one being enclosed with each bundle. The remaining number were distributed at the theatre and Bry's, with most gratifying results.

A tie-up of great importance was effected with nine of Memphis' leading music stores, whereby a cooperative page was run in the Scimitar. Besides, each shop had an attractive window display on the attraction, with special cards announcing "Music Week" at the Palace.

Manager Waugh arranged a splendid tie-up with the Piggly Wiggly Store for the distribution of 15,000 Cross-Word Puzzle Folders on "The Lady." This was accomplished by wrapping one up with each loaf of Piggly Wiggly Bread. The folder contained a Cross-Word Puzzle Contest with award as follows: To the first fifty ladies presenting the correct solution at the Piggly Wiggly Box Office at 11 o'clock on opening day, a free admission would be issued for that performance. The front page of folder was devoted to advertising copy on "The Lady" and "Music Week," whilst half of the back page carried the Piggly Wiggly Store's advertisement of their Pound Cake. The contest was an excellent publicity builder, both for the theatre and store.

A feature of the week's program was a beautiful prologue especially arranged by Dave Love, musical director of the Palace. The leading man of the local stock company, which closed recently, was engaged for the occasion, and his appearance brought many of the stock company's regular patrons into the Palace.

The regular newspaper advertising was augmented by special stories in all local newspapers on "Music Week." Also had a 30-inch tie-up ad in the Roto Section of the Commercial Appeal with the Piggly Wiggly Store.

Singing Newsies Prologue to "Sally" Presentation

Frank Holland, manager of the Victory theatre, Evansville, Ind., used singing newsboys in a prologue for "Sally," and received splendid encomiums from his patrons.

Against a street drop, he introduced half a dozen newsboys shooting craps, a policeman, an older boy and a girl dressed to represent Miss Moore as Sally.

Intriguing Folder Boosts "Confessions of a Queen"

Interest in "Confessions of a Queen" was effectively aroused in Los Angeles when this production played Monday at Loew's State theatre by the distribution of 10,000 heralds made up in folder form, the front page of which showed a diary conspicuously lettered "Confessions of a Queen." H. W. Lawrancie, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, made up and distributed those folder heralds.

On the first inside page was written under the date May 24: "Today was my wedding day. I am now Queen of Illyria. Christian does not love me. Of that I am sure. I am just his queen—not his wife. I have heard rumors already of another woman—perhaps several. I wonder if any other bride was ever as miserable as I upon this my wedding night. Other women can be unhappy, but a queen must hold her head high."

On the second inside page appeared another entry dated July 18. "Aleki loves me," it read. "He told me tonight. God help me, but I love him. The king has his sweetheart. Why can't I have my lover? Must I be denied a woman's heritage of love just because I wear a crown? Must I sacrifice everything on the pitless altar of stage? The prime minister hints that there should be an heir to the throne. Oh, what shall I do!—what shall I do?"

On the back page appeared several captions, such as "Under the Royal Robes—Just Plain Folks," and "The Veil Hiding the Private Life of Modern Royalty is Lifted in Confessions of a Queen."

Window Displays Feature Campaign on 'Prairie Wife'

A window display featuring tobaccos and pipes and another feature campaign recently helped exploit a showing of "The Prairie Wife" at the Lyric Theatre in Columbus, Ind. Charles Glickman, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, supplemented these exhibits with an active press campaign. Slides were used in the theatre and there was a special lobby display.
Weil Gives “Smouldering Fires” Excellent Campaign

While the people along New York’s White Way were still talking about Universal’s “Oh Doctor!” Carl Laemmle sent another White List Jewel, “Smouldering Fires,” on its way to the screen of Lee Ochs’s beautiful Piccadilly Theatre.

“Smouldering Fires,” starring Pauline Frederick and Laura La Plante, was booked into the Piccadilly for a single week but the critics and a well planned exploitation campaign helped boost the box-office receipts to such a figure during the first week that Lee Ochs used his good judgment and moved back his schedule of other bookings to make way for a second week.

The exploitation campaign conducted by Joe Weil, Big E exploiter, was based on two points. Although Pauline Frederick had not been absent from the screen for any appreciable period, there was great news interest in announcing her “return to the screen” and so this angle was played up to the utmost. Critics on the various papers were advised by carefully worded personal notes to pay particular attention to Miss Frederick’s work in this picture and they were challenged to pick another screen star who would “dare” to portray the role Miss Frederick characterized in the picture.

A special flashy two color yellow and black half sheet card was shipped about the city as the opener of the campaign ten days before the showing. This was tied up with a big showing of half-sheet block paper announcing “The Best Picture on Broadway This Week!”

Three days in advance of the showing two very pretty girls dressed in Pierrot costumes of a vivid red hue, with hearts and dollar signs sewed on, and high conical hats, were sent out on the busy shopping thoroughfares to ballyhoo the picture. They distributed special teazer heralds prepared by Weil to shock the recipients at first glance. In bold letters on both sides of the folded paper were the words:

Warning:
Let no man be necessary to you!

Special copy was written to attract business women and girls to the Piccadilly as “Smouldering Fires” is a story about a business woman. Teazer copy for this purpose was boiled down to post card space and 5,000 milliners, public stenographers, manicurists were circulated.

Browning Ties Up to Union to Aid “Quo Vadis”

In order to get “Quo Vadis” properly before his public, Manager H. (“Tod”) Browning of the Olympia theatre, New Haven, effected a tie-up with the New Haven Union.

Through its tie-up, Philip Troup, editor and publisher of the newspaper, issued 2,000 letters of invitation to a preview showing of “Quo Vadis” at the Olympia. The newspaper furnished both the letterheads and the envelopes and Troup personally signed each letter.

These invitations were sent to all school teachers in New Haven, heads of the various Italian fraternities, to all Yale university professors and to all of the most prominent Italian citizens in New Haven.

The letter of invitation sent out by Troup, announced that the New Haven Union had arranged with Browning for an invitation performance and told something about the new film version of Sienkiewicz’s novel.

Flashing Lamps Herald Run of “If I Marry Again”

Frank Steffy, manager of the Coliseum, Seattle, made the title of “If I Marry Again,” stand out through the use of a flashing border of electric lamps on each side of the corner entrance to his theatre.

The lobby was done in a sponge process which was very attractive on account of its color combination. He used cut-outs in the shadowbox, illuminated at night so that they stood out prominently.

Attractive lobby display given “Learning to Love” (First National) by Manager, Frank Steffy, Coliseum theatre, Seattle.
Rowley Meets Opposition “Show” on “Lincoln”

Every manager has an obstacle of some kind to overcome at intervals during his career as a showman, and in each section of the country these obstacles are of various kinds. Manager Jack Rowley of the Royal theatre at Laredo, Texas, had booked “Abra-

h

American,” for his theatre, but in doing so he did not take cognizance of the fact that in beginning its three-day engagement he was "batting in" on Mexico’s big celebration day, for the “Cinco de Mayo,” as the fifth of May is better known, marks the victory of the Mexicans under General Zaragoza over the French in Pueblo, and this event is celebrated not only in Mexico, but all along the border.

Manager Rowley billed the city with lithographs of all sizes, following the running of trailers and slides and the placing of stands of pictures and lithographs. He issued an invitation to twenty-five of the motion picture critics, ministers and educators of the city of Laredo.

After having viewed the picture at the private showing, the “critics” endorsed the film as “a picture that every red-blooded American in Laredo should see—a picture that gave a true insight into the life of the greatest American, his life’s work, his romrances, his rise to power and other facts that every American should know.”

This was the endorsement that Manager Rowley wanted, and those who attended the private showing of the picture five days ahead of its opening engagement at the Royal theatre proved the best “walking advertisements” that could be obtained.

Manager Rowley converted the front of the Royal theatre into a veritable patriotic front, placing a large portrait of Lincoln in the central entrance, suspended from the top of the doorway, decorated this with flag bunting and then extended flag bunting gar-lands from the picture over all the front entrances of the building, put the words “Romance of Abraham Lincoln” in electric lights under the marquesette, arranged stands of lithos and pictures in the doorways and the outer panels, hung banners at each end of the marquesette. This “front” attracted attention from everybody who passed in the vicinity of the Royal theatre.

Good Use Made of Paper on “A Thief in Paradise”

The management of Loew’s Vendome theatre, Nashville, made free use of the paper and accessories prepared for “A Thief in Paradise” when that picture was shown. Five hundred sheets of paper were put up, 1000 window cards placed and 3,000 heralds distributed, in addition to half-sheets hung on street cars and the free use of the posters in the lobby display.

Exploiter W. R. Arnold, tied up with the Standard Music company for a window displaying the song, “A Thief in Paradise,” along with a still and a card announcing the showing of the film. He obtained window displays with the Cain-Sloan Dry Goods company and with the Joe Morse Clothing company. The Cain-Sloan display consisted of bathing suits and a large card, containing a picture of one of the polo girls in one-piece bathing suit with the statement that the particular brand of bathing suit shown in the window was worn by the polo girls in the making of the picture.

“Man and Maid” Given Four Live Widow Displays

“Man and Maid” was recently aired at the Tower theatre in St. Paul, Minn., by Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, who made four elaborate window displays a features of his campaign. The town was lavishly posted, fifteen 24-sheets being exhibited among other sheets of various sizes. Extra space was taken in all the local dailies, a teaser campaign in this instance proving exceptionally effective.

A trailer was used at the Tower theatre and there was a special lobby display of cut-outs.

An armored express car was used to carry a print of “The Phantom of the Opera” (Universal) from the offices of Universal in New York to the ship which was to carry it to Europe.
Exhibitors' Box-Office Reports

The exhibitors' box-office reports which follow are from theatre owners who reside in the smaller towns. Names of the contributors are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

Christie Makes Additions to Stock Company

Yola D'Avril, French dancer, and Stella Doyle, English musical comedy singer and dancer, have been added to the Christie stock company, now making a series of new releases to be distributed through Educational Film Exchanges.

Miss D'Avril is a protege of Gloria Swanson and appeared with her in "Madame Sans Gene." Miss Doyle has won success on the London stage and has appeared in a few pictures in England.

Fred Peters, a six-foot-four "heavy" comedian is another late addition to the stock company. Other supporting comedians recently placed under contract include Bill Irving, Eddie Baker, Bill Blaisdell and Lincoln Plumer.

Sennett is Featuring Joseph Young and Ruth Taylor

Two comparative newcomers to the screen will have the featured roles in "Dangerous Curves Behind," a Mack Sennett two-reel comedy soon to be offered by Pathé. The players who essay the principal roles in this film directed by Del Lord are Ruth Taylor and Joseph Young.

Gil Pratt, recently added to the Sennett directorial staff, has started a new two-reeler in which Ralph Graves will be starred.

Big List Of "Shorts" From Fox Company is Prepared for Most Important Year for Brief Comedies, Dramas and Novelties

One of the big production organizations which have planned an extensive short subjects program on the belief that the coming year will see the shorts in a more important position than at any period hitherto is the Fox Film Corporation, whose announcement for the coming season includes an imposing list of comedies and novelties in one and two reel length.

Prominent among the comedy and short story series which Fox has prepared to film are the O. Henry stories, the "Helen and Warren" newspaper features, written by Mabel Herbert Urner, and the new group of "Van Bibber" stories taken from the writings of Richard Harding Davis. All of these stories will be filmed in two reel length.

In furthering the very best material on which to make the little two-reel films the Fox Company has created a new short subjects production unit which will function under the supervision of George B. Marshall.

The Marshall unit will be divided into four groups with each group to produce the Van Bibber successes under the direction of Robert Kerr, another unit under the direction of J. G. Blystone will add to the screen the Urner stories, a third will make the Imperial Comedies, with such directors as Lew Selter, Ben Stoloff, Bryan Foy, while the other, under the direction of Daniel Keefe, will bring to the screen the humor and pathos of the master O. Henry.

Under a new production head every preparation has been made to assure that the twenty-six Fox Varities to be released during the coming season will be worthy of the highest class theatres. Ray Hall is the new director of the Varities unit and his long experience in the short subject field places him at the head of the list as regarding judgment of what is one-reel entertainment material.

At the present time Mr. Hall is directing a five-expedition operation in the hitherto unexplored regions in search of the unusual and unusual for Fox's short subjects. These expeditions are under the guidance of some of the best known researchers and explorers.

Truman Taylor is continuing the editor-in-chief of Fox News with an editorial staff chosen for its worth in all sorts of emergencies. Additions to the camera and stage staff of the Fox News have given it a fine head on every point in the world, the near and far, and every angle of the globe being covered with the same thoroughness.

Adams Completing First Star Comedy

Jimmie Adams, recently elevated to stardom in a series of two-reel Christie comedies for Educational release, is completing his first production as the starred member of a cast. The picture, which is to be the first of a series of six which Educational will offer during the 1923-24 season, is being directed by Harold Beaudine.
Short Subjects Drives Under Way In Many Cities

Moves To Interest Press In ‘Featurettes’

A CO-OPERATIVE drive by first run theatres that is developing into the greatest exploitation ever put across on Short Subjects is under way in a number of key cities following a remarkable session held recently in Philadelphia between the Stanley Company of America representatives and the Philadelphia newspaper critics.

Quick to see the advantages of getting the newspaper reviewers more interested in Short Subject reviews, first run managers and publicity men in a number of other cities have adopted the Philadelphia idea and have held or are planning to hold similar meetings with their newspaper representative to pledge their co-operation in giving Short Subjects a better break in the news and review columns of the newspapers.

Nothing that has taken place before has demonstrated so clearly the growing importance of the briefer pictures in the making up of diversified programs and in building up greater box-office appeal.

Slightly over two weeks ago the publicity office of the Stanley Company of America, represented by Abe L. Einstein, Director of Advertising and Publicity, invited the motion picture editors of all the Philadelphia newspapers to a luncheon at which they were informed of the great strides made in recent months by Short Subjects and frankly asked for their opinion on treatment that should be given to these one and two-reel subjects by the press. The ensuing discussion revealed the fact that the newspaper editors were unanimous in believing that the Short Subject often saved the show, that the quality Short Subject always added a great deal of extra appeal to the program and that the public, being vitally interested in these pictures, was entitled to more information about them through the columns of the daily newspapers.

"Many a poor feature picture has been saved from disaster by reason of surrounding attractions at a cinema house," said Herman L. Dieck in the Philadelphia Record in announcing the new newspaper policy as to Short Subjects.

"Local exhibitors are much interested in the plan to build up interest in every part of a motion picture program. It is recognized that there are many astute patrons of picture shows who take into consideration the entire make-up of a bill and who gauge patronage accordingly. But less informed individuals are likely to be attracted only by the name of a feature picture and by the roster of announced players. If it can come to pass that the short subject may also be a lodestone, an ideal for exploitation will have been attained.

Quality of Films Improved

"For a long time producers of the short subject were seemingly content to 'go along.' Then there was presented 'The Voice of the Nightingale.' It was just another short subject. But 'The Philadelphia Record' called attention to the high quality of that production not only in a review but also in an editorial. The makers of the picture at once realized that there was a great field of motion picture activity that was not sufficiently appreciated. It was an encouragement and an incentive. If one short film could be so worthy as to bring the highest praise, other 'featurettes' might also be deemed worthy. So at once a movement began. It was for such pictures of short length as should in every way compare favorably with the long feature. The producers were alert and a new era seemed at hand. There should be such short subjects as would be a credit to any maker of films. And now that movement has gained impetus. The day of the short subject is dawning. It is to be a 'featurette' not only in name but in actuality."

"Enquirer" Endorses Plan

In the Philadelphia Enquirer "The Call Boy" outlines the proper treatment of Short Subjects as follows:

"It begins to look as though the short subject pictures are about to receive the attention from exhibitors and producers that they are entitled to. A well-attended meeting of the prominent film people of the city was held on Thursday at which it was generally expressed that one and two-reel pictures are entitled to as much—and in many instances to greater prominence—than the so-called 'featurettes'. I have maintained for a long time that the short films have more real value than the average long ones, because the former are to a greater extent of an educational quality, representing as they do the activities of the people throughout the entire civilized world."

First run showmen in all these towns of course realize that to keep up this greater newspaper interest in Short Subjects they must treat their Short Subjects with similar respect and interest and all have undertaken to pay greater attention to the briefer pictures in their own ad layouts. Altogether the series of meetings that have sprung up so quickly since the Philadelphia luncheon stand as the most noteworthy exploitation work done in connection with Short Subjects in years.

O. W. Hanson, manager of the local Pathé exchange invited managers of all the local agencies distributing short subjects, to a banquet at the Hotel Wolverine last Monday evening, July 13. Cinema exhibitors and photoplay editors of the local papers were also invited. The value of the short subject as a programme feature was the chief topic of conversation.

Praises "News" Campaign

Hanson declared that the short feature has grown phenomenally in recent months as a method of entertainment and was now a component part of every good programme. Hanson also called upon exhibitors to place more stress upon the short subjects in their advertising, pointing out that such a policy would attract more patronage. Plans were drawn up at the meeting for local campaign which will be held in conjunction with national organizations. He called attention to the campaign being waged by the Motion Picture News, citing the course taken by this publication as being a most noteworthy one, in the acquainting of the nation with the value of comedies, newsreels and educational features.

Since the result of this Philadelphia meeting reflected so forcefully the great public interest in Short Subjects, first run showmen in at least a half dozen other large exchange cities had held similar meetings with newspaper representatives with similar results and the work has even been carried into smaller key centers, such as Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where the first run houses have all undertaken to cover Short Subjects adequately in their advertising and where newspaper men have promised to give them equally adequate attention in their reviews.

Launch Drive in Detroit

In Detroit a meeting was arranged to be held within the last few days at which the Washington Theatre, the Broadway Strand and the general representative of the Kunsky Enterprises were to be hosts to the newspaper critics. The keen interest taken by first run showmen in this city guaranteed beforehand the favorable results of this meeting.

In Cincinnati a very successful luncheon meeting was held with the newspaper critics and the reviewers agreed hereafter to give special attention in their reviews to Short Subjects of merit. As the preview practice is in force in Cincinnati and most feature pictures are screened for critics ahead of the theatre opening date, arrangements were made to preview all Short Subjects with the feature pictures. Within the last two days meetings of this nature have also been held in Indianapolis, Washington and Omaha, but details of the results have not yet been received. A get-together meeting between the St. Louis first run theatre men and newspaper critics has been called and the preparatory work for such a session is under way in Boston.
Touring Europe for Kinograms

Editor of News Reel Will Add to Camera Staff in Foreign Countries

FOREST IZARD, managing editor of Kinograms, the news reel distributed by Educational Film Exchange, sailed last week for an extended tour of Europe where he will establish new arrangements for the organization and engage additional camera men to supply material for world events of the topical kind. Mr. Izzard may extend his voyage to take in Asia, Latin America and the Far East should it be necessary to accomplish the expansion work on which he is now engaged.

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, expressed himself as being most enthusiastic over Mr. Izzard’s plans.

"Mr. Izzard’s trip should prove of immense benefit to exhibitors," said Mr. Hammons. "For it means that Kinograms, within a short time will have the greatest assembly of news events of any news reel in the world. Its expansion is now, I believe, all that could be desired both numerically and for ability. Events of importance which have taken place in the world will be more and more important in a news reel which is a staff almost as big as the one we have in America. It is needed to cover the ground. Mr. Izzard has been given carte blanche to go wherever he thinks fit, and he will not return until Kinograms’ foreign staff is up to par, as second to none."

During Mr. Izzard’s absence the editorial staff will be headed by J. V. Fitchfield, and Herbert E. Hanseb, who, as was previously announced, were recently added to the personnel in the New York office.

Davis To Offer Wide Variety

Features and Short Subjects Will Make Diversified Program for State Righters

DAVIS Distributing Division has lined up a complete service for the state right exchanges. It includes nearly every kind of picture with the exception of the news reel. In addition to many feature productions there is a wide variety of short subjects. There are two series of comedies, two Ben Wilson serials, the Cinema Star novelty reels and the Herrick two-reelers. The McGlothlin-Wongnick productions are making "The Fella" and "Sheals and Shosha" comedies. In connection with these they have secured the services of Mark Golden, one of the originators of the "Our Gang" shorts.

The two-reel "Herrick" series will be released under the title of "Fragments of Life." This group will be produced entirely in the studio and will have no titles. The first of the series will be released as "It Might Happen to You!" It is the featured player. The second, "The Symphony," is a comedy novelty reel and shows how players work at home and in the studio.

The Ben Wilson unit will produce two series, one of which is already completed. It is titled "The Mystery Box" and is in ten episodes. The story was written and directed by Alvin J. Neitz and stars Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber.

"Power God" will be the second of the serial released in the early fall. This also features Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber. The story is being syndicated to newspapers all over the country.

"Our Gang" On Pathe List For July 26th

Pathe releases for the week of July 26th include an "Our Gang" comedy and a Bennett production starring Ralph Gravel.

Variety is given the program by the inclusion of the second chapter of the Pathe serial "Play Ball," and the regular weekly offerings from other sources, among them the Pathe Review, an "Artists and Film Makers" reel and a Graniland Rure "Sports" reel.

"Cap's Boots" is a Mack Sennett Star Comedy with Ralph Gravel in the leading role. Gravel, as seen as a bookkeeper in a shoe store who finds romance in the visits of a certain young lady. Customers, in his efforts to court this lady, is a sentiment of the second chapter of "Play Ball," written by Manager J. J. O'Malley of the New York Times.

"Why Kids Leave Home" is a Graniland Rure "Sports." It features Gail's best efforts to get the kids behind the stand and pitch those tickets in the right field.

A novelty is presented by the presenters of a call from "Submerged."" The Call is the latest of the Pathe-Terry customs, "Aspen's Film Tables." The other subjects which Pathe will release the week of July 25th are "Topicks of the Day" and "Two Is One of Pathe News."

JULY 25, 1925
Use of Short Subject Program Is Spreading Plan Regularly Employed In Many Cities

THAT the all-short-subject program has passed the experimental stage and may be regarded as an established form of entertainment for use by theatres at legitimate rates on important occasions is attested by the fact that there are more than twenty theatres scattered throughout the cities and towns of the country which are known to be making regular use of this type of bill. Many of these houses have used the use of all-short-subjects on certain days of the week over a period of several years.

To the list of houses which make all-short-subject programs a regular weekly or monthly practice there must be added several of the leading theatres of the country, which from time to time have presented such bills with eminently satisfactory results at the box office. A large proportion of these have announced a decision to repeat these programs on certain occasions throughout the year.

There are few cities or towns in the country which have not presented all-short-subject programs at one time or another. Included in the theatres which have reported success with the plan are houses in New York City, Brooklyn, N. Y., Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., Atlantic City, N. J., Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Kansas City, and in a majority of the other large cities of the United States.

In Kansas City there is a theatre which for fifteen years has presented all-short-subject programs regularly on Friday nights of each week. This is the Ashland, owned by W. L. Shelton and Richard Stedman, which has done a flourishing business over the entire period it has been under its present management.

Other theatres which have depended for some time upon all-short-subject bills as attractions at regular intervals are the following: the Princess, Carbon, Ind., John McIntire, manager; the Pastime, Seville, Ind., Ed Croffitts, manager; Star, Winslow, Ind., J. F. Vinyard, manager; Elveric, Lapoe, Ind., C. McKay, manager; Paramount, Rocheester, Ind., Kreigbaum Bros., managers; Rialto, Middletown, Ind., J. Wetz, manager; and the Merit, Hartford, Ark., J. S. Latimer, manager.

Since the Ashland in Kansas City has used the short-subject plan for a span of fifteen years it may be regarded the best available case for consideration of the possibilities of the all-short bill as a box office attraction. The house seats 2,200 and plays to standing room each Friday night at an admission of 3 cents. The man best qualified to describe the experience which the theatre has had with these programs is Richard Stedman, who owns the house in partnership with W. L. Shelton. It might be well to explain that the Ashland is a modern structure, modernly equipped and furnished and that it boasts such unique improvements as a glass indexed "dry room" for young children and folding side walls which it is possible to convert the house into an airconditioned home in less than ten minutes. Thus it may be seen that the Ashland is a picture theatre which may be admired for its progressivism on more counts than its all-short-subject programs.

In relating the results which the Ashland has obtained with the all-short-subject bills Mr. Stedman said: "For the fifteen years we have been sticking to the short subject program on Friday nights we have drawn school children from all parts of the city, we co-operate with the Parent-Teacher Association and civic organizations. We have made our theatre a figure influential for the children on Friday nights. Our short subject programs consist of a 2-reel serial, a 2-reel comedy, a 2-reel drama and a 1-reel comedy—all for five cents, and I won't hesitate to tell you that we make money on it. "The length of such a program usually runs about 1 hour, although if we were rushed we could shorten it to one hour and fifteen minutes. Adults know that Friday night is children's night. Consequently there is no effort on that night to check the youngsters in making noise in the front part of the house. That's what our theatre is operated for on that night. What better advertisement would we want than for the neighborhood for blocks around to hear loud laughing and laughter in our theatre. They're liable to be there themselves the next night, eh? Other nights are ten cents.

"Say what you will, the average school boy doesn't take much to the seven or eight reel feature. Edmund Cobb, for instance, in a 2-reeler would outrage Norma Talmadge more than 3 to 1, as far as the youngsters are concerned. The ratio of boys to girls to adults on Friday night is about 2 to 1. We play for them that night—not their parents. We have the seats to put them in and when you fill 2,200 seats and then stand them up around the walls you can't put up any very fair amount in your box office for the night. As to advertising, we use only a 4 x 4 inch program card, one set of 1-sheets on the serial, one on the drama and one on the comedy. We advertise a week in advance in our lobby. We have the youngsters so well educated about Friday night that no special exploitation effort is necessary. Just put the sheets up in the lobby and give them the titles and stars for Friday night and they'll be there. We use no newspaper advertising. Why should we? The following incident will explain the folly of it:

"One night there was a scarlet fever epidemic in our neighborhood and a man from the board of education came to my theatre to stand in the door and check up on the boys who entered the theatre. I told him that a check on the A-land school would be fruitless, as I drew youngsters from all over the city. We walked over to a group of boys, just for experiment, and asked them where they were from. They proved to be from a district ten miles from the theatre. Several such test disclosed that virtually all parts of the city were represented.

"There is no other theatre in Kansas City which plays a short subject night that I know of, but you can rest assured that it will be another fifteen years—and then some—before we ever consider abandoning the idea. It has been the butwark of the success of our theatre."

J. S. Latimer, manager of the Merit in Hartford, Ark., where short subject programs were established recently stated that the experiment was being made with the hope of saving the theatre during the summer months.

"Starting July 2," said Mr. Latimer, "we are changing from feature to short length subjects, using a serial in two reels, a two-reel comedy and a one-reel subject to fill the third day. We have a two-reel comedy and a one-reel educational comedy for Friday, a Universal Jewel feature with a comedy for our Saturday's offering, and leaving Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday dark. All shows are dark in the state of Arkansas on Sunday."

will help keep your house packed

It is a fact that Short Subjects have not been given the attention and consideration by the majority of Exhibitors that they are fully entitled to. Why? Mainly because short subjects have heretofore been considered "also rans" when the truth of the matter is that they are "HALF OF YOUR SHOW" and oftentimes the whole show.

As an Exhibitor, you know that if your news weekly were taken away from you—and if you could get no comedies, 2-reel series, cartoons, or novelties, your business would rapidly dwindle away for no audience could be constantly drawn to theatres by features alone.

Yet Exhibitors advertise their features strongly, even weak features are given the big advertising preference, when it is a known fact that given the proper advertising consideration and even half hearted exploitation, you can pack your house by boosting your short subjects, relegating your feature to a mere "mention" in your ads when that feature doesn't deserve any more.

F. B. O. is distributing a wonderful array of Short Subjects that are absolutely "sure fire" at the box office.

Every exhibitor in the land recalls the sensational success of our original "Fighting Blood" series.

In our new Sam Hellman series we've got the original Fighting Bloods lashed to the mast. Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Cupid's Boots"
Pathe—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

RALPH GRAVES appears here as the star of a spook-comedy built around a dream in which he successfully courts a daughter of a rich and autocratic banker. It is a "crazy-guilt" affair made in the cutting room from reels and reels of film preventing familiar gags in a familiar fashion. We suspect it was made some time ago and has been held up while better pictures of this star had opportunity to go forth and establish him with the fans as a two-reel comedian.

The play is concerned with the adventures of a shoe-clerk who quits his job in order to find romance and adventure. He hits the open road and snags in his little tent the first evening of the journey he has a dream. The action which follows is dream-like in its incoherence and disregard for the probable and the possible. It shows the girl he loves in the clutches of a villainous band. They make her captive and with her mother and father keep the dear charmer locked up in a dilapidated house. They, the villains, are a wicked lot and like all villains they put off the evil they contemplate until the hero can put within striking distance.

The picture offers only action, physical movement for which there is no discoverable motive. It seems a little too extreme in the respect that no celebration is demanded of the spectactor, for spectators are being taught to look for a little bit of plot and story value in their two-reelers. And some of the lesson, we think, has been learned by this time.

The Cast
The Shoe Clerk.................. Ralph Graves
His Sweetheart.................. Thelma Hill
A Mack Sennett production directed by Ed Kennedy.

Story by Frank Capra.

The Story.—A shoe clerk dares to flirt, and not unsuccessfully, with the daughter of an autocratic banker, who thereupon demands that the clerk be fired. But the clerk has already decided to venture forth in search of romance and adventure, which he finds plentiful in a dream about how he rescues the girl from a band of villains who seek to ruin the wealthy banker and take possession of his pretty but spunky daughter.

Classification.—Melodramatic comedy with a strong admixture of slapstick.

Summary.—A fast-moving but patched-up affair based on the idea that there is nothing funnier than a colored gentleman "scared silly" at the sight of dark rooms filled with furniture over which white sheets have been draped.

"Captured Alive"
Universal—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

H ELEN GIBSON is the star of this two-reel western which is filled with the usual romance, intrigue and comedy. It is the story of the rustlers with the trusted ranch foreman the head of the band, and the hero who turns him up with the assistance of the daughter of the ranch owner. This one goes some of the others one better in that the ranch owner himself is jailed and held on suspicion.

One of the critical scenes of these westerns: however, this story is not a bad one. In fact it is chock full of incident, moves along at a good pace and is well acted. That is as much as can be expected. Helen Gibson plays her role admirably and she is well supported by Edward Peake.

Jim Watson is the rival candidate for sheriff against Bud Harris, incumbent, who has profited on the side through cattle rustling. Jim wins the election with the assistance of Dolly Martin, daughter of the ranch owner, who is one of the chief victims of the rustlers. Dolly's father will not permit her to marry Jim until he has effectively culminated the activities of the rustlers.

Meet Bud Harris, the defeated candidate, is the done as foreman regular of the Martin ranch and continues his rustling, but throws suspicion on the owner of the ranch, who is jailed. Jim and Dolly manage to right the situation by gaining the release of her father and in exciting battle overcome the entire band of rustlers as they are about to abscond with the money realized from the sale of the Martin horses.

The Cast
Dolly Martin.................. Helen Gibson
Jim Watson.................. Edward Peake
A Universal-Mustang picture.

The Story.—Jim Watson, earless young rancher, wins the office of sheriff and attempts to end the activities of the cattle rustlers, who are headed by his late rival for the office. Action is demanded of him after he has failed for a certain period. With the assistance of Dolly Martin he gets a line on the real culprits after Bud Harris, who is suspected of suspicion against her father. The entire band of rustlers is captured red-handed by the young couple.

Classification.—A fast action, well acted western.

Summary.—While the story is somewhat hackneyed, it is full of incident and moves along at a rapid pace, with a new angle injected here and there. All in all it is an improvement on most of these westerns and should go well wherever stories of this character are appreciated.

"Dry Up"
Universal-Century—Two Reels
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

T HIS Century comedy fairly abounds with action and hokum. It is a picture of gags to which the slim story is merely incidental. It gives Jack Singleton a chance to show his whole box of tricks as a comedian and he gets away with it in pretty good shape. Though too dumb to get himself admitted to the bar following a correspondence school course, he has a happy faculty of outsmarting the officer through the two reels of the picture.

He has managed to stand his landlady off with the promise of a diploma, but receives the word that he has failed in all examinations. Said landlady then takes possession of his clothes and other belongings. Jack is equal to the occasion. He throws a lariat from his window over a passerby and takes possession of the latter's clothes. By the simple expedient of hurling various and sundry articles at passing vendors, they in turn get sore and hurl their wares up at him. In this way he gets the necessary sustenance.

The Cast
The Lady.................. Martine Burkeett
The Attorney.................. Jack Singleton Director by Al Herman; Featuring Singleton and Miss Burkeett.

The Story.—Jack, an unauthorized attorney, finds himself without means to meet his lodgings bill and without food. In various and comical situations, his ingenuity is eventually thwarted by the fair lady to serve the divorce summons on her husband. Jack makes the attempt, follows the wrong man, eventually succeeds in his mission, and then is turned down flat by the repenting wife.

Classification.—A slapstick comedy full of humorous incidents and capably acted.

Summary.—This comedy is rather weak in story, but it has more than the usual amount of humorous incidents and many of them are laughable to bring laughs to almost any audience. Singleton is a good comedian and Miss Burkeett does her somewhat limited part well.

When Men Were Men
Pathe—One Reel

CARTOONIST Paul Terry takes the spectator back several ages to the time when life was rough and ready. The Cave Man, with his club and stone, is seen doing his stuff, and with the "atmosphere building" in the way of showing how parents displayed their affection for their offspring by administering lusty wallops and kicks, licks the comic and humor of the play.

—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Boys Will Be Boys" is the title of the latest "Our Gang" comedy offered by Pathe.
“Boys Will Be Boys”
Pathe—Two Reels

THE "Our Gang" comedians are shown at their best as back lot inventors in this new comedy by Mack Sennett, William McGowan and produced by Hal Roach. The most elaborate props are used in depicting the make-shift roller-coasters, ferris wheels and spinning tables which the kids rig out to equip their amusement park. The most ingenious part of the production is to be found in the design of these "fun" contraptions erected by the gang in their efforts to amuse the public and make some money for themselves, and we think the young engineers of all ages will learn a lot from a view of the results as shown on the screen. A human interest story enters the affair with the introduction of an elderly captain of industry who has more fun playing with the kids than he does at directors' meetings and beating down the wages of his factory workers. He is the owner of the lot the gang appropriates for their playground and when his surveyors start to stake off the property with a view to building another factory, the kids protest. They take the owner out to their park and he has such a good time helping them with their devices that he tells the board of directors to help themselves to the business while he will divert himself as the director general of the playground.

The action is rather fast but there is repetition, as, indeed, is the case every time a producer erects an elaborate setting. It seems as though the cost of the set regulates the length of the footage devoted to action playing therein. However, the comedy producers here fore tell the feature people are in this regard, and in this case Director McGowan has kept his comedy moving with the inclusion of all the incident he could develop about and around the setting.

The comedians are, as usual, natural and sincere in their work. They just play their way through the picture and consequently there is never any trace of effort in their acting. It is an amusing and pleasant contribution to the stock of two-reelers which the market has to offer.

The Cast
Mickey Daniels, Mary Kornman, Farina, Joe Cobb, Jackie Condon

The Story.—The "Gang" decide to go in the amusement park business and start to build roller-coasters and other contraptions of the sort. Just as they are making progress, their enterprise is threatened for they are informed their lot is to be utilized as a factory site. They appeal to the president of the company who owns the property and so engage him in the affair that he promises to let them use the lot and helps them to make a success of the venture.

Classification.—Juvenile comedians in wholesome, amusing comedy of youthful pranks in emulation of the grown-up promoters of amusement parks.

Summary.—A finely produced, well acted comedy showing the "Our Gang" troopers at their best. The directors have used a human-interest vein which has some emotional appeal and appears capable of winning the applause of the large following of the "Gang" pictures.

“Discord in a Flat”
(Universal-Bulls Eye—One Reel)

A BABY who wanders through this reel playing with a razor and slashing everything in sight with it really is the feature of this picture which is supposed to feature A. Lake. The suspense furnished by this toddling tot will provide more thrills to an audience than the comedies themselves.

Arthur Lake apparently is trying too hard to make a success of these comedies. He has resorted entirely, too much to mugging, a failure that has developed to an exceptional degree in the last two or three pictures of this good Sweet Sixteen series.

Arthur is the victim of music loving parents who have a career as a violinist mapped for him. As they take their departure for the evening Arthur leaves off his practicing and phones his girl. The baby promptly cuts the telephone connection, so the girl comes over to see him, as the rival also arrives at the house. The baby eventually breaks Arthur's fiddle over his head just as his father arrives with a new one he has won in a raffle. The story is rather slim, but the picture should be fairly pleasing.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Bugville Field Day
(Pathe—One Reel)

THE term "novely" loses its meaning when applied to Paul Terry's cartoons we fear—nevertheless it must be used here in connection with this latest "Aesop's Film Fables" reel. The cats and mice, dogs and monkeys of the animal kingdom which have been so well exploited in these reels, here give way to the insects and we have a heroic tale involving a fly, a spider and a lovely lady bug. While sundry and various species of their world join in the action which relates how a fly beats a great spider which has stolen his sweetheart. The setting and characters are changed and therefore the gags must be regarded different, though most of them have appeared before in previous "Aesop's" films. It is fairly amusing.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Travel Treasures"
(Edwardal—One Reel)

LYMAN H. HOWE has arranged an exceptionally interesting Hodge Podge in this one which takes the audience to all parts of the world and shows many interesting sights. It is defined as a loose leaf record of a trip around the world. There are scenes in the United States, France, Italy, Japan, China, Russia, Egypt and Australia, scattered in the fields and different industries in each country. With these scenes are interspersed some comedy material which should prove attractive in any type house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Milky Way"
(Universal-Bulls Eye—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY is the featured comedian in this Bulls Eye which strives almost too hard and too continuously for its laughs. Puffy does his work with disastrous results to himself. The rival company substitutes a race horse for his regular milk wagon horse and when the animal bears away Pictures the viewer of the contents of the wagon. He outrights the rivals in the end however, and becomes a partner in the prosperous business. This one has lots of laughs and should casters all neighbor hood houses.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Pathe Review No. 30
(One Reel)

THE Wildness of Water" is the title of a number made up of scenes showing Reelfoot Lake, in the Mississippi Valley, and this year's leading home pictures, No. 12. It is not much different than most scenes, save that here the views are beautiful and have a distinctive charm—a quality not so rare in pictures taken at an out-of-the-way farm. "The Wilder ness of Water" makes this issue an interesting contribution for any program.—T. C. KEN NEDY.

Pathe Review No. 29
(One Reel)

A POLAR bear, a lion cub and other animals of the London Zoo group away with the feature honors in this interesting number of the Review. The beasts are born screen comedians and without the slightest conscious effort at acting they carry away Pictures and postures which touch the peak of the grotesque. The animals appear in a secrets of nature series called "Animal Appetites." A new submarine bears off the drill is displayed in "Submarine Salvage," a group of scenes showing the operation of the drill in cutting through the hulls of sunken vessels. The Pathetherm suite, showing the view from San Francisco rounds off the offering.—T. C. KENNEDY.

For the Love of a Gal
(Pathe—One Reel)

THE cartoonist goes in for love interest in this contribution to the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. Courtship is of the modern, spunky type, here being taken his sweetheart for a drive in his car. But the contraption breaks down, and with it the loyalty of his gal, for she accepts the invitation of another fellow in a bigger and better machine. Pirates kidnap the girl and then the hero extends himself, fighting some "Peter Pan" duels with the blackguards and defeating the whole murderous crew of them. The girl pleads for forgiveness and the show ends in a final close-up clutch. The reel affords many amusing moments.—T. C. KENNEDY.
Pre-release Reviews of Features

His Buddy’s Wife
(Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

For half its length this picture tells a heart interest story with a lot of truth and feeling even though the director has stressed the facts of the situation rather too much for the purposes of the plot. The simple way these scenes are treated will extract a fine response everywhere.

At the start we see a young man bidding a farewell to his aged mother and his bride. He has enlisted for overseas. What follows are several sustaining library shots inter-cut with a few close-ups that are genuine, featuring war incident. The single fellow has secretly worshipped his buddy’s wife—and when the married one is assigned to a dangerous job he extracts a promise from the other to look after his family. These scenes are all done very well—except for the over-emphasis of the pathos.

It is when the hero comes back to fulfill his promise that the story loses most of its human tone. The director follows the conventional methods. He shows up the narrow intolerance of the natives in scorning the young widow and accusing the soldier of being a scapegoat. And this on top of the fine reputation the heroine has borne in the community. The hero defends her good name by striking one of the scoundrels and is tried for assault and battery. The story has ended once with the youth striking up a romance with the widow. But it starts all over again with a counterplot of complications which are skilfully woven into the widow testifies and reveals the reason for the young man’s presence.

Then comes an anti-climax when the husband returns home. Instead of being killed he had been captured. The director deserves praise for showing a surprise and bringing out the final logically. The buddy looks in the window, spies his wife in the arms of his friend and turns away from Enoch Arden? He does not.

The hero discovers him and tells him all about his romance. He is the one who sacrifices himself. This may disappoint the fans, insomuch as the most sympathetic character loses his happiness, but the scene is handled by the director with considerable of its human appeal. However, it is clean and whole-some—and looks like a good bet for average houses. Glen Hunter and Edna Murphy play their parts with good feeling.

THEME. Heart interest drama of war buddies—one man marries the other’s wife single. The latter returns,-room and says his friend’s death and his romance with the widow. The buddy turns up and the youth sacrifices his happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The.sentiment. The heart interest moments in soldier’s leave-taking. The return of hero and his romance. The scorn of the villagers.

DIRECTION. Develops it to extract sympathy and sentiment. Piles it on a little too thick for the story needs balance. Shows an honest ending when hero sacrifices himself and the widows romance is the only point.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with Legion posts. Play up the heart interest. Play up the romance of war hero and his buddy’s wife and his fine sacrifice. Put on prologue numbers of male quartette dressed in khaki, etc.

DRAWING POWER. A good audience picture for average houses. Title should appeal.

SUMMARY. A tender little picture, heavy with sentiment and pathos, but withal tugging at the heart strings until the latter reels when it realizes some far-fetched incident of village life. Is well acted—and holds the interest.

SYNOPSIS. Youth enlists for war and falls in love with buddy’s wife from a photograph. When the married one is reported missing, the hero returns home and imparts the sad news to his wife. He says and does more a romance and the young people are scorned by intolerant villagers. However, their honor is vindicated. The missing buddy returns and the other boy sacrifices his happiness.

The Marriage Whirl
(First National—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

Through intelligent treatment and handling the theme so that no suggestion of melodrama could spoil it, Al Santell, the director, has worked out a likely picture from Harlow Manners’ play, “The National Anthem.” It was in the original that Laurette Taylor starred and the time it was produced found the jazz craze riding on the crest of popularity. A great number of pictures have been presented since then—each with a similar theme, but none have got down to the simple human proper- ties. Here this picture is well done. Sanford and the heroine have relied upon melodrama seasoned with a lot of spice to get over. There is spice in this picture, too—but it has a logical part in the development. In other words the story never gets out of key with its plot.

It’s a picture that is reasonably true. The characters certainly appear to be real and the love interest genuine, the situations naturalistic. With the disintegration of character of the wife due to her marrying a reckless, irresponsible youth and being dragged down to his level we see her trying to defy the spirit of jazz. When she can no longer stand the incessant noise and the devastating influence of her husband she tries to kill herself. The fault of an erstwhile suitor and the doctor’s treatment pull her through—and she marries the former when her husband meets a tragic death.

The atmosphere of jazz is carried all through the picture. There is one wild party after another. And the drama is, there too. It seems as if every scene from the beginning of the film finds her father dead—and again when her distorted mind visualizes the jazz players and their instruments in all kinds of distorted shapes. No heroes are introduced. The honorable suitor is a true friend who does not wear a halo of virtue over his head. It’s a story that deals with the jazz spirit and the ‘jazz drug’ with which it is so morbidly mixed. There is no denying that it commands strict attention. It is well mounted, though some of the sets are too large. As for the acting it certainly gives Corinne Griffith great emotional opportunities—and she takes advantage of them. She never appeared more beautiful than in the close-ups. By the way she can stand a close-up better than any other actress of the screen.

THEME. Drama of the jazz age showing girl rushing into matrimony with a gay youth. Regrets the marriage after being satisfied with the fast life. Tries to kill herself, but is restored to health and finds ultimate happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The development of the jazz atmosphere. The scene when the fathers surprise their children in an intoxicated condition. Moment when girl realizes her husband’s love is off the scene.

DIRECTION. Has brought out the full meaning of Manners’ play. Has emphasized the spirit of jazz as a wrecker of homes. Gets real drama of romance—and gives a proper emphasis in all his scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature a jazz band or a saxophone sextette in prologue. Bill as film version of the popular play in which Laurette Taylor starred. Play up star—featuring her beauty and acting ability.

DRAWING POWER. Star and title should draw them. Suitable for all houses—as it is easily understood.

SUMMARY. A good picture, this—of the jazz age—and the defiance of youth. Is something of a flapper story, but it carries a good lesson without preaching at you. Tells its plot well, carries humor and effective drama.
The Wife Who Wasn’t Wanted
(Warner Brothers—Seven Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliot)

Warner Brothers may well be proud of this feature, one of the first of its new season group. It is a picture built for the box office, a type now in demand by theatre-goes.

The story is interesting from start to close. It is a modern political-society tale with some new twists and the action keeps moving along smoothly and logically to the melodramatic seventh reel. A district attorney refrains to help free the son of another man suddenly finds himself in a position where he has to prosecute his own son on a charge of manslaughter. His sense of judicial duty forces him into the situation. The wife and mother, however, becomes desperate and enters into a plot with her husband’s political opponent to bring about his undoing for a promise that her son will be freed if the other man is elected.

The action starts with a thrilling auto wreck, followed by an equally tense courtroom scene in which the mother sees her son led away to a cell, although innocent, after he has been charged by a girl friend with the death of a woman killed in the accident. There is more action as the wife, finding her husband will not resign rather than prosecute his son, takes the leading part in a framed raid on a question on inn, so as to bring scandal and defeat to her husband. But the real kick is in the climax when the girl, really guilty of the woman’s death, drops a cigarette in the grass and starts a forest conflagration which results in the explosion of a powder house, the wrecking of a dam and the flooding of the surrounding area.

It is superbly mounted, beautifully photographed, excellently written and a personal triumph for Irene Rich.

THEME. Society drama in which a mother and wife fights her own husband when he refuses to come to the aid of the son, feeling that he is in duty bound as district attorney to prosecute him.

Production Highlights. The auto wreck. The courtroom scene in which the son is charged with manslaughter after a young couple cowardly accuse him of the deed of which they are guilty. The scenes between Miss Rich and Wayne Whitman.

Direction. James Flood has turned out a real achievement in this feature which he has packed with action, tackling on a climax of big thrills for good measure. He has also inspired his players to flawless acting.

Exploitation Angles. Play up the title. It is a real box office magnet. Boost Irene Rich and the fine cast. Tell your patrons about the big forest fire, the powder house explosion, the blowing up of the dam, the flood and many other thrills. Tie up with Mothers’ Clubs.

Drawing Power. This is the kind of picture present day picture fans like and it should attract business in any size house because it has the case and the story.

Summary. If all Warner Brothers’ pictures for the new season are as good as this one exhibitors may be able to offer their patrons some treats. Here we have a plot with a different angle, a cast of talented players and a punch in every reel with a climax that will be talked about.

The Cast
Eileen Manning .......... Irene Rich
John Manning .......... Huntly Gordon
Bob Manning .......... John Harron
Marjorie Patterson .......... June Marlowe
"Slick" Jennings .......... Edward Flynn

By Gertie De S. Wentworth James, Scenario by Frank Dayton. Directed by Gertie De S. Wentworth James. Photographed by John J. Mescall.

Synopsis. When John Manning, in his position as district attorney, refuses to intercede for his son, who is held on a charge of murder following an accident, his wife, Eileen, consents to aid in a scandal of her old lover, Wallace, also a candidate for district attorney, in return for the latter’s promise to save her son. Manning finds his wife in Wallace’s rooms. He denounces her, not understanding her motives. They separate. Diane Graham confesses to Eileen at a country estate that she was driving the death car. Diane and Eileen are saved from a forest fire and flood. There is a reconciliation and the son is freed.

The Scarlet West
(Frank J. Carroll Production—First National—Nine Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliot)

First National is to be congratulated for coming forward at this time with this splendid story of the great West in making an aid to exhibitors in proving to their patrons that The Great Race, Seasonally seems something "The Scarlet West," is undoubtedly one of the finest western pictures produced in many moons.

It is a tale of the West just after the closing of the strife between North and South when pioneers pushing ever toward the Golden Gate were finding their way barred by hostile Indians. Much of the action revolves around the romance and adventure encountered by the soldiers and women of historic Fort Remington, then the outpost of the American military forces. While the picture is filled with dramatic T. N. T., the outstanding sequence is that depicting the Custer family. In this is a personal triumph for Clara Bow THEME. Western drama of General Custer’s days depicting the romance of an Indian who fell in love with a white maiden, only to be forced to give her up.

Production Highlights. The scene in which Cardealanche, son of an Indian chief, who after saving him from the hands of renegade Indians, is recommended for a captaincy. He accepts it but soon finds himself an outcast when he falls in love with Miriam, the daughter of the commander of the fort. Robert Frazer gives to his characterization of Cardealanche a convincing intensity, while Miriam, winning real sympathy for the role. Robert Edeson is immense as General Kinnard. Clara Bow is seen to advantage in a role very different from her recent fancy flapper roles and does well in it. Johnny Walker and Walter McGrail are good as rivals.

Direction. John G. Adolphi deserves much praise for the realistic manner in which he has transferred this delightful drama of the golden west to the silver screen. He has inserted a wealth of detail, given the picture a beautiful natural background and made his players convincing.

Exploitation Angles. Go after the school crowd on this, playing up its historical value. Dress the lobby in Indian style. Put on a wild west parade if possible. If you can’t get a real Indian to doll up in his war paint and native costume as a ballyho-great!

Drawing Power. O. K. for most houses, with an especial appeal for family audiences and the towns.

Summary. This is the kind of picture that is in demand by patrons. It is filled with action of the kind that kids can sit back and enjoy. There is a fine cast and settings that rank among the most beautiful ever shown on the screen. Should go over big with its rich exploitation possibilities.

The Cast
Cardelanche .......... Robert Frazer
Miriam .......... Clara Bow
General Kinnard .......... Robert Edeson
Lieut. Parkman .......... Johnny Walker
Captain Howard .......... Lyle Talbot
Nestina .......... Helen Ferguson
Mrs. Custer .......... Ruth Stonehouse
Harriett Kinnard .......... Martha Francis
Mrs. Harper .......... Florence Reed

Synopsis. Cardealanche, son of an Indian chief, returns from his education in the east, falls into disfavor with the tribe because he seems to side with the white man. One day Cardealanche saves a group of soldiers from renegade Indians. As a reward he is made a captain. He falls in love with Miriam, daughter of General Kinnard. Lieut. Parkman, also in love with Miriam, is reduced to the ranks, following a fight over the girl. Cardealanche’s tribe takes to the warpath. Cardealanche is given up by Miriam who seeks Parkman.
Marry Me!
(Paramount—5526 Feet)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

There's not much to this picture if you consider it in terms of drama. It is a delicate little story, fashioned from fine silken threads of romance. Yet these same threads are unbreakable the way James Cruze has woven them together. With less than a third of the routine they would have broken asunder. It is as much a feather in his cap to build a picture of this kind as something of the substantial order like "The Covered Wagon." He has embroidered it with human touches, bringing out its wistful appeal, its gentle comedy and pathos. It is just a tale of a small town schoolteacher longing for romance. And so delightfully is it told that you accept it all as very real—this in spite of the fact of its gossamer structure.

Cruze, above everything else in his direction, builds his characterization first. Make the figures life-like—and the motivation will take care of itself. This is the way he has worked here. He has sensed that the plot cannot sustain itself. So he emphasizes the characterization. His small town types are fine selections and he brings the close-up into prominence to make them vivid.

The story traces the romance of this schoolteacher played with splendid feeling and sympathy by Florence Vidor. There is a sentimental tug when the egg upon which she had accepted a youth's proposal is sent to the city and allowed to rest in cold storage. So the girl waits four years and then another John Smith comes into her life—a John Smith who would never suggest a romantic adventure.

When the girl sees him she has recourse to tears. He is not her ideal of the great lover. He is a timid "hypo" who takes pills, medicine and his temperature in unending repetition. Moreover, he is afraid of the girl. They are thrust into matrimony. The appealing studies by Florence Vidor and Edward Everett Horton.

DIRECTION. Establishes characterization, and builds his plot accordingly. Saturates with the human touches. Brings out some gentle comedy. Keeps it in its mood.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the story with teasers showing the matrimonial market value of cold storage eggs. Play up Cruze and principal players. The title carries teaser possibilities—and suggests tie-ups with merchants catering to newlyweds.

DRAWING POWER. Title, director, and players should draw. Needs exploitation, but should interest all romance-seekers. O. K. for any type of house.

SUMMARY. A quiet, but charming little picture—one exceeding in degree. But he has carried it to the fine direction by James Cruze. It is drenched with splendid human touches, carries gentle humor and wistful charm.

THE CAST.

- Hetty Gandy: Florence Vidor
- John Smith No. 1: Edward Everett Horton
- John Smith No. 2: John Roche
- Sarah Hume: Helen Jerome Eddy
- Granny: Fanny Midgley
- Norman Frisbie: Z. Wall Covington
- Jenkings: Erwin Connelly
- Mrs. Hume: Anna Schaefer
- Jackson: James Kearns

SYNOPSIS. School teacher fearing spinsterhood writes acceptance of proposal on an egg. But it never reaches the youth it was intended for. After four years another man, a timid hypochondriac, comes into her life and they are thrust into matrimony to save the girl from becoming the joke. She learns to love him and her sympathy banishes his foolish fears.

Under the Rouge
(Encore-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

Starting up as a box-office attraction through its play of incident and action and the convincing manner in which it is acted, "Under the Rouge," should pass muster anywhere as first rate crook melodrama. True, it is rather involved and some situations, a dash of a Wagon. Yet the two crooks in a gun battle with a chauffeur (who is killed) and a couple of cops. But after the lesser crook fades out of the picture and death scene the incident is closed. Meanwhile his pal is permitted his liberty after a few weeks in jail. Which introduces too much charity by the forces of law and order. Otherwise the plot holds up very well, allowing for some coincidence—and a few unimportant gaps.

It is a picture carrying a redemption theme worked out via romance. The crook's sweetheart longs for the peace of the country and when she arrives the crook has a mild love affair with a supposedly honest youth. The hero follows and gets a job in the local bank. But they have enemies in another set of crooks who are posing as evangelists. One of them lures the bank's cashier into his lair with his offer of marriage, but the hero rescues her just in time. There is a lot of incident, the introductory scenes—and plenty of it in the country episodes, which is another way of saying that the plot doesn't lack for action.

It moves briskly and presents some surprise touches as well as a fair amount of suspense. The finish showing the heroine determined to commit suicide is well executed. She has thrown away the paddle and the canoe has approached almost to the brink of the falls when the hero jumps in and saves her. Odd! Yes, but never have I seen a better one. The whole picture is a fine piece of work.

THEME. Romantic comedy-drama of lovelorn girl who waits for youth only to have romance with one who does not meet her ideal. She overcomes his timidity and finds happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The delightful human touches. Scene when wrong hero comes to town. The small town atmosphere. The manner in which couple are thrust into matrimony. The appealing studies by Florence Vidor and Edward Everett Horton.

DIRECTION. Establishes characterization, and builds his plot accordingly. Saturates with the human touches. Brings out some gentle comedy. Keeps it in its mood.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the story with teasers showing the matrimonial market value of cold storage eggs. Play up Cruze and principal players. The title carries teaser possibilities—and suggests tie-ups with merchants catering to newlyweds.

DRAWING POWER. Title, director, and players should draw. Needs exploitation, but should interest all romance-seekers. O. K. for any type of house.

SUMMARY. An entertaining crook melodrama which allowing for a few wiggles is as reasonably true of both of them. It features the redemption theme—and while you may anticipate the action all the way nevertheless it contains some good incident and characterization.

THE CAST.

- Kitty, a girl: Eileen Percy
- Whitey, a crook: Tom Moore
- Chip, a pal: Eddie Phillips
- Mal, a gentleman: James Mason
- Daisy, a lady: Claire De Lorez
- Doc Haskell, a faker: Wm. V. Mong
- Mr. gồm Mac Connell: Chester Conklin
- Mrs. Fleck, her anchor: Aileen Manning
- Jim Condron, a detective: Stanley Blystone
- Mary, his fiancée: Peggy Prevost
- Martha Maynard, a mother: Mary Alden
- Evelyn, her daughter: Carmelita Geraghty
- Little Tommy, her son: Grace Gin
- Barker: Paige Goddard
- Fred Morton, a bank cashier: Tom Gallery

SYNOPSIS. A pair of crooks—one of them a girl—decide to go straight. The girl goes to the country where she gets honest employment, the youth is arrested so that he might clear up an attempted robbery. He is given his freedom and follows the girl to the country. They find redemption and develop their romance.
The Freshman
(Harold Lloyd-Pathe—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

AND the greatest of these is—"The Freshman." There's no question but what the foregoing statement will be the verdict passed on Harold Lloyd's newest comedy. So good is its making, and its picture flings open the doors to a new field of commercial exploitation, that it is in every sense called his greatest. He has been hitting such a high mark from the day he branched out to five reels that it doesn't seem possible that there could be any improvement. Yet he is able to go by the previous mark with each new effort. Which shows what a great organization he has in working to get the best possible results. We've had college stories time and again, but the true spirit of the campus, the boyish enthusiasm, the effort to excel and the good-natured rivalry of the boys—these points have never been caught as they are here.

A mere student side of college life and the high explosives of comedy do not accumulate until the atmosphere, the characters—and all the necessary incident is thoroughly planted. Thus the freshman bids for sympathy—a point which is never lost sight of from the day he arrives until he leaves the day for good old Tate. There are no loose threads. The boy has saved a bank account to spend in college. He has the previous year's most popular man to look up to his ideal. But he would surpass him. So he tries to make a hit—and being a perfect booby doesn't realize that he is the joke of the campus.

By this time the laughs are being spread—and they accumulate until you are bent nearly double. They come right from the diafragma—these laughs. There is great fun when Harold allows himself to be the taunting dummy for the football squad—and again when he gives a dinner dance, attired in a tuxedo which has merely been passed over. The tailor has to accompany him to sew up the suit when it falls apart. This is bright, new incident—which runs its pace—to be followed by something else equally amusing—and novel. But the high spots are found in the football game—when Harold is sent in as the last substitute and proceeds to tackle the players with the playfulness and every other thing that comes on the field. He is always out of position and is considered a pest by the coach and the players, but he manages to get the fumbled ball and score the touchdown. It is the greatest climax we've ever seen in a comedy—a climax uproariously funny. There is pathos and romance, too. No elements are forgotten to make it a well-balanced picture.

THEME. Romantic comedy of freshman in college who strives to be a popular hero. Is a joke on the campus, but makes good and wins respect.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The campus atmosphere. The incident. Lloyd being used as tackling dummy. Scene at dance when Lloyd wears basted tuxedo. The football game—and the new field. The subtleties.

DIRECTION. Have certainly put over a live-wire comedy—timing every scene perfectly—planting all the elements to build the laughs. Shows a big array of bright new gags—and finishes with a great climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with schools and colleges, etc. Bill as Lloyd's funniest comedy. Put on an atmospheric prologue suggestive of campus, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Dust off your S. R. O. sign—you'll need it here. Shout every type of house—everywhere.

SUMMARY. Lloyd's funniest picture. Has some exceptionally comic scenes—the gags being new and the incident bright and zippy. Is balanced with human touches, sentiment and romance. Certainly hits a very high mark. A sure-fire knockout. Will make a wooden Indian laugh.

SYNOPSIS. Boy goes to college, enters freshman class and determines to make himself a popular hero. Doesn't realize he is a joke to his classmates, but the girl tells him he is to be true to himself. He is humiliated at dance but saves the football team from being defeated when he picks up fumbled ball and scores touchdown. Is lionized as a result.

Headlines

(St. Regis-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN a story is based on the theme of a woman's sacrifice of her good name and position to protect someone very dear to her you can bank upon it carrying enough heart appeal to re-use the average picture. "The Freshman" is such a story—and it tells its plot with a minimum effort, there being no beating around the bush in expressing it in terms of simple, direct action. The sponsors have not written any melodrama into it. There is surprise attending a few important situations. You anticipate that this woman, in a court room scene which could have been developed from the divorce angle.

The title never comes into the prominence suggested from the opening flash when the heroine, a feature writer on a city newspaper, refuses an assignment to cover some European question so that she might correct her flapper daughter, expelled from school. There is a good atmosphere of the "city room" with some gentle comedy, introducing the old fellow who writes the love column. The characters are well plantet. The heroine has kept it a secret that she has a daughter and tries to discourage a young suitor. But the girl comes home and passes her mother off as her sister until the older woman finally declares the relationship to the ardent youth.

The subsequent action plays up the flirtatious moods of the flapper who delivers herself of romantic wise-cracks and has a guilty time with her afternoon sport. At last the girl really dominates the picture the moment she appears. And Virginia Lee Corbin is an excellent type for the flapper. Her biggest scene is when the mother, portrayed by Alice Joyce, breaks in on an engagement she is having with a wealthy idler in the latter's home. This bit of action is the climax, and it carries some effective dramatics as the man's wife surprises him while the mother, refusing to reveal her daughter's presence, takes the blame. The youthful suitor makes his entrance and is charmed over the affair. But in the end he appreciates the woman's fine sacrifice and joins her on shipboard. So there is no scandal—and all ends happily. The picture is well treated in its continuity and directed with an eye to dramatic values.

THEME. Drama of a mother's sacrifice in bringing scandal upon herself to save her daughter's honor. Finds happiness in romance and the salvation of the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The sincere acting by Alice Joyce, who was daring enough to play a mother role. The competent support. Atmosphere in newspaper office. The cabaret scene. The climax when the mother lies to defend her daughter. The continuity.

DIRECTION. Has brought out some fine human interest in simple story. Makes characters real and builds important scenes well. Lays off melodrama stuff. The villain turns out to be a square-shooter. Mounts it convincingly—except for heroine's home—which is a trifle too lavish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up title—and tease it through newspapers. Play up Alice Joyce as playing one of the most courageous roles of her career. Emphasize the love of a mother for her daughter. DRAWING POWER. A good audience picture for the average houses. Star well known and should draw patronage. O. K. for downtown districts and small towns.

SUMMARY. A rare picture simple of plot, but handled intelligently. Scenarist and director have treated it sympathetically. No hokum nor any melodramatics. Just a pleasant little picture which holds the interest.

I

N looking over the program for a suitable picture for Jack Dempsey, his sponsor, Oscar Prets, turned to one of Douglas Fairbanks' most popular stories, Manhattan Madness, which was made back in the old Triangle days. The new star being an active fellow like Doug, needed an action picture. And the former vehicle was just made to order for him. It has been completely rewritten and certainly affords Dempsey forty minutes of solid excitement as well as the audience out front.

To the old-timers who remember the Triangle releases (they certainly haven't forgotten this one) it won't appear as much of a novelty. But it is a picture that picturesitters haven't come along since the original. They should like it. Moreover they'll be interested in Dempsey—and that goes for the old-timers. Of course they'll all agree that it is a hokum picture which is built entirely on the premise of surprise. It is a surprise as much for the hero as it is for the patrons—but the latter must belong to the new generation to profit by it.

It is well done allowing for some colorless comedy relief expressed by a pair of eccentric coconquerors—and some repetitious incident leading up to the climax. We see Dempsey as a westerner bound for New York. He soaks at the big town—says it lacks excitement and thrills. So his friends proceed to show him how he's judged is all wrong. They lure him into a mysterious house and put him through all kinds of stunts. It is planned that the friends and their hired "ronghneys" are taking it as seriously as the hero.

Dempsey uses his famous left—and his equally famous right. His footwork is agile too. He plunges through trap-doors is fired on, is forced to defend himself picture perfect. The whole looks good. He squares accounts by kidnapping the heroine and compelling her to elope with him. The players are forced to work hard. Dempsey has them frightened now and then. But it is easy to see that he "pulls" his punches so as not to punish them too severely.

THEME. Adventure romance of westerner who comes to New York and bewitches the city. His friends surprise him with plenty of excitement.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The episodes of adventure when westerner is lured to subarban house and compelled to fight for his life. The speed of the incident.

DIRECTION. Has speeded up the episodes leading to climax, but gets off to a rather slow start. Might have dispensed with some of the comedy relief—which is not funny.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Fans should be interested in Dempsey—and his name well exploited should bring business. Also feature his wife, Estelle Taylor, who is co-starred with him. Bill as a snappy, action picture.

DRAWING POWER. Most everyone is interested in the champion and his bride. Suitable for average houses.

SUMMARY. This is a new version of the Fairbanks picture—the first being made several years ago. It affords Jack Dempsey an active role in which he has occasion to "clean up" the boys, but to anyone who saw the original there isn't any suspense.

THE CAST

- Steve O'Dare: Jack Dempsey
- The Girl: Estelle Taylor
- "Doc" Harlan: George Selman
- The Butler: Frank Campeau
- "Bull" Montana: "Bull" Montana
- The Maid: Jane Barr
- Count Veverkamp: Theodore Lorch
- Hank: Bill Frane
- Zeke: Nelson McDowell
- Jack Russell: Robert Graves
- A Porter: A. Wilson
- "Broken Nose" Murphy: Glenn Cavender
- "Lefty" Lewis: Harry Ten Broek
- Sculptor: Frederick de Cordova

SYNOPSIS. Westerner comes to New York and roasts the big time, a lack of excitement. His friends proceed to show him the thrill of his life. He had become interested in a pretty girl en route and she also appears among the jokers. To help him in combating several "villains" and to fight for his own life, the westerner has his hands full. But he puts over several timely punches. In the end he realizes that the whole affair is a practical joke.

Pretty Ladies
(Metro-Goldwyn—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is just about the most accurate picture of theatrical life that has ever reached the screen. In the short time Monta Bell has been directing pictures he has been a stickler for telling the truth as he sees it. He doesn't paint any false colors or dress up a story to point some roving climax. He holds his story, and "slowly" it is. What comes forth is an honest effort. Here he has taken Adela Rogers St. John's story which glorifies romance back stage among the Follies and produced a picture which is colorful and entertaining. It shows painstaking attention to detail and atmosphere.

Here is what the plot? Just a simple little narrative of a comedienne who craves romance. She builds her dreams and worships an ideal, but eventually has a love affair with the trap drummer. There isn't much to it, but so well is the incident stressed—so human are the various scenes, that you accept it all as very true.

THEME. Comedy drama of back-stage revolving around lack of romance in life of comedienne. Love comes to her and when she nearly loses it she wins back her husband through having faith in him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The theatrical atmosphere. The imitation of the Follies. The color of the Follies sequences. The moment when heroine wins her man—and again when she nearly loses him. The tone and quality of sets. The acting.

DIRECTION. Shows keen sympathy with characterization and gets everything out of plot. Balances his scenes to extract comedy and pathos. Shows variety of action and always holds the interest.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Certainly play up the Follies—which is good publicity for the Ziegfeld show. Put on lavish prologue. By all means exploit the cast—several top-notchers having nothing but small parts.

DRAWING POWER. The title—the tone and quality of sets—the cast—all of these should bring patronage. Suitable for big town theatres and the small houses.

SUMMARY. Another "ace" for Monta Bell—who has put over one of the most interesting pictures of back-stage life ever shown. It is very life like—painted with human touch—touched, humorous realizes she is invited around just to make them laugh. Then when she wins the trap drummer who writes a fine number for her (the House Fly Blues)—a number that would look well in any theatrical revue—the prima donna tries to steal him away from her. The climax is honest to the core. The drummer, having married the comedienne, forgets his marital vows and his wife learns the truth. But is there any scene? We'll say there isn't. Bell doesn't work that way. The girl forgives him. She tells herself it will never happen again. You see she has faith in him. There is tone and quality in this production. It has been directed with sympathy and feeling and played in the same manner by Tom Moore, Zasu Pitts and the other players.

THE CAST

- Maggie Keenan: Zasu Pitts
- Al Cassidy: Ann Pennington
- Tom Moore: Ann Pennington
- Selma Larson: Llyyan Tashman
- Aaron Savage: Bernhard Randell
- Adrienne Tash: Helen D'Algy
- Maggie's Dream Lover: Conrad Nagel
- Frances White: Norma Shearer
- Roger Van Horne: George K. Arthur
- Bobby: Lucile Lesueur
- Warren Hadley: Paul Ellis
- T. W. Pennington: Roy D'Arcy
- Charles C. Gee: Dan Crimmins
- Diamond Tights Girl: Dorothy Seastrom
- Will Rogers: Lew Harvey
- Ada C. Cutter: Walter Shumway
- Mr. Shean: Dan Crimmins
- Eddie Cantor: Adrienne Tash
- Policeman: Dan Crimmins
- By Adela Rogers St. John. Directed by Monte Bell.
Maine

J. GORDON EDWARDS, a director for the Fox Films Corporation, together with Mrs. Edwards are spending a few days at Litchfield, Maine, where they are the guests of Mr. Edwards' brother, J. D. Edwards. This is the first time in 17 years that Mr. Edwards visited his home town and he was given a tremendous welcome, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards are to sail the latter part of the month for Europe on a vacation trip.

Gail Kane, former motion picture star, and now well known stage actress, with her husband, Henry Ottman, have opened their summer home on Lake Cobbossee, in Augusta, Maine, for two months. Miss Kane is to devote the two months to "vacationing" and will return to New York for rehearsals the latter part of August.

J. H. Curran, manager of the American Feature Film Company in Portland, took the opportunity offered by the Fourth's coming on Saturday, to enjoy a few days' vacation.

The Cosmopolitan Theatre and Film Company, of Park Square Building, Boston, Mass., is continuing the erection of the erection of one picture house in Auburn, Maine. Several sites are under consideration one of them being at the corner of Main and High Streets. Twenty thousand dollars is the price asked for the lot. Auburn has a population of about 17,000 and is said by the Boston people to be the only city of its size in the country without a motion picture theatre. Residents have always patronized the theatres in Lewiston.

Mr. Hulsen, manager of the United Artists Corporation in Maine, has returned to Portland after a short business trip to the Boston office.

James A. Curran, manager of the American Feature Film Company, with offices in Portland, spent a day at Boston last week on business.

Baltimore

BUSINESS in Baltimore took another slump during the first part of the week preceding Monday, July 6, due to the hot, sticky weather which settled down upon the city during that time. Harry Van Hoven, advertising manager for the Combined Whitehurst Interests, controlling the Century, New, Garden and Parkway Theatres, is also known in the auto racing world as a great manager and tactician.

With the opening of the new Baltimore - Washington Speedway, Van Hoven was right on the job with a scheme to take motion pictures of the events and the salient points of the big 250 mile classic. Rights were secured by the Combined Whitehurst Interests for this purpose and Mr. Van Hoven superintended the taking of several thousand feet of film with five cameras placed at strategic points along the track and two others to catch the unforeseen happenings that might occur.

The special idea of Mr. Van Hoven was to show the film as soon after the race as possible at the speedway theatre.

While his wife and ten year old daughter sat near him watching the show at Keith's Hippodrome on Friday night, July 3, Frank School, drummer in the orchestra at that playhouse, suddenly fell over dead. He was quickly taken to the Volunteers of America Hospital where pronounced dead by Dr. Harry K. Gorsuch, coroner, from natural causes. The audience did not know of the death until they read of it in the papers next morning for the musicians kept on playing and the comedians on the stage went on with their act while E. A. Lake, the manager, had the body of the stricken drummer carried under the stage to a dressing room. Having finished 21 years in the moving picture business, Daniel P. Wine, pioneer moving picture man of Harrisonburg, Va., will give up the operation of the New Virginia theatre in that city, which was built in 1913, and devote all his time as secretary of the Shenandoah Valley, Inc.

The New Virginia has been leased by Weinberg and Sacks, who will operate the Stauton, Lexington and Clifton Forge. The lease runs for a period of ten years and the rent will be $5,000 per year. The seating capacity of the New Virginia is 1,000 persons and the new operators plan to spend about $20,000 on improvements.

Mr. Wine started in the film business with a theatre seating 50 persons and there were only two small houses in Washington at the time each seating a little over 200 persons.

The upper lid of the left eye of J. M. Shellenbarger, motion picture editor of the Baltimore Sun, is tinged a deep violet and bears a neat cut, at the present time. Shellenbarger says he stoned over in the dark to pick up a book which had fallen from a table thereby causing the eye to come into contact with the corner of the table forcibly. All who have heard the story smile, some say he must have had an argument. However, Mrs. Shellenbarger and their two children left for a summer resort on the Eastern Shore of Maryland Monday, July 6.

Howard Burton who sets up practically all the motion picture ads, for the Baltimore Sun, is now at Mercy Hospital where he has just had an operation performed. He is getting along nicely.

Frank Price, jr., with his wife and daughter, spent a week in Iowa and City during the week beginning Monday, July 13, for a vacation. Mr. Price is assistant to Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Rivoli.

Miss H. L. Baurrie, motion picture editor of the Baltimore American, is on a vacation at Beuna Vista Springs, Pa.

Herman Tate, who formerly made special trailers for some of the first run theatres of Baltimore and represented the Palmer Institute of Authorship in that city, has just returned from Cleveland and is the father of a bouncing boy which arrived on Wednesday.

The Irvington Theatre, 4115 - 15 Frederick Road, Baltimore, Md., has been taken over by Jack and Irvin Levin, who also operate the Realart Theatre. Sigmund Kleiman formerly operated the Irvington.

Ricord Gradwell, formerly general manager of the old World Film Corporation, visited Baltimore Wednesday, July 8.

G. Edward Smith, treasurer of the New Theatre Company, is now in the West Baltimore Hospital suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Eugene Daley, formerly manager of the New Theatre and for many years a Baltimore travelogue, will return to Baltimore from Salybiville soon, it is announced. Mr. Daley has been very ill for some months.

Des Moines

L. S. WALSOTT has purchased the Eagle Grove theatre at Eagle Grove, Iowa, and the Grand theatre at Eldon, Iowa, and will visit the local exchanges this week.

M. A. Swartz, booker for Premontrol, arrived in Cleveland by the death of his mother, Mrs. Hannah J. Swartz. He returned last week.

Miss Deensra, secretary to Mr. Frank Crawford, manager of Famous, was the incentive for a surprise party given at the exchange by several young women together with Miss Deensra's friends. The occasion was the twenty-second anniversary of the honoree.

Misses Coline and Alice Mackeol of Famous Players Exchange are away on vacations.

George Stevenson, shipping clerk at Famous, has been ill for the past ten days.

W. R. Gurney has purchased the Princess theatre at Parkersburg, Iowa.

George Stevenson, shipping clerk at Famous, has been ill for the past ten days.

E. C. Hour of Universal is spending his vacation in Kansas City and Omaha.

Miss Anglos of Ollimitz, Iowa, was a recent caller at Universal.

E. L. Myers, a former salesman for Famous, has taken a position as manager for Associated Exhibitors.

F. W. Young, manager for Film Booking was in Waterloo last week on business.

A. E. Clement, booker for Famous, was accompanied by his secretary, Miss Louise Wollensack, motored to Omaha a week ago. The former spent last week July Fourth there and Miss Wollensack visited friends at Plattsmouth, Neb.

It is rumored that the Strand and Lincoln theatres at Chariton have changed hands. The new purchaser is unknown to local manager.

Ralph Ferrand of the Grand theatre, Independence, Iowa, has taken over the management of the Vic theatre.

Callers at Educational last week were the following: Messrs. Friedland and Wertheim, Mr. Jarnigan of Tama, Iowa, Mr. Holmes of Scranton, Mr. Vooschen of Elkator, and W. B. Booth, also Pleasantville, Iowa.

A. A. Van Hosen of Western Theatre Supply Company, Omaha, was in the city last week in the interests of securing a location here.
THE annual athletic field day and picnic of the First National Club will be held at Indian Point on Saturday, July 18th. First National Pictures has declared executives will be present and many of the executives will participate in the events.

The river steamship Channery M. D. of the finest boats plying the Hudson, has been chartered for the occasion. It will leave from Wall Street at 9:15 a.m., returning when the members of the Club are satisfied that they have had a day's fun.

In absence of E. Bruce Johnson, president of the First National Club, George R. Grant, vice president, will have supervision over the events of the day. Arrangements for the outing and for the athletic features have been arranged by the committee and Fred W. Croshie, the president in charge, with the aid of the Athletic Department of the New York Athletic Club, and the latter will take over the duties of assistant sales manager.

Harry Thompson of the Pittsburgh branch of Pathe has been transferred to Newark under C. M. Stobsham, Pelham Lynton of the local Pathe exchange has been promoted to the position of sales, and the best known and most liked sales representative of the company.

Fred Meyers, who has been with Pathe, has been transferred to Operation Bros. and will take over the duties of assistant sales manager.

In the nine years of service in New Jersey, Mr. Lee has become the best known and best liked sales representative of the company. His addition to the Fox staff is in line with the corporation's policy of securing the best men in each territory to give perfect service to exhibitors.

A new telephone number will be assigned to the Prudential Film Delivery Co., a house in uptown New York from being burglarized and again the other night, another driver, William Gallagher, almost arrived at the Parkside, one of Wm. Brand's Brooklyn theatres, in time. The thieves had apparently just preceded him and had broken in, picked up the small safe and made their get-a-way. This happened about one-thirty in the morning when Gallagher was out on his late pickup.

The O. C. C. of New York are planning an outing to be held in the near future. Details will be announced at this week's Tuesday meeting.

Weiss Bross, operating with Amzon Mintz and Samuel Lesselman, of the Premier Amusement Co., of Brooklyn, have bought the 112 acres Hillerest golf course at Jamaica, L. I., and eighty-two adjoining acres. The former will be cut up into home sites and the latter developed as a community.

The Hamilton theatre, Hamilton Place, Brooklyn, will re-open on July 27th under the management of J. A. Edelheit.

The Bluebird theatre, a 600 seat house being built by Kerman, over in Brooklyn, is expected to be ready for business about August 15th.

Sam Rolzheimer, of the Globe and Rowley in Brooklyn, is building a new theatre at Broadway, Yonkers.

Memorial Hall, Beacon, N. Y. will open July 27th after installing entire new equipmen.

Among the local theatres recently installing new equipment furnished by Howells, are the Stadium, under George Davis who has put in a curtain control and new stage and the New Theatre at 108th St. and 2nd Ave., under M. A. Compol. This latter house will open about the first week in September. Others, are the Lyons theatre at Morristown, one of Roth Bros., houses, the Supreme in Brooklyn, owned by Rachmell Ent., and several of the theatres belonging to the Walter Reade circuit.

Dave Gross, formerly with the New York exchange of First National, has gone with the Fox exchange and will oversee sales in the Metropolitan district.

Many Leading Exchanges now have the Life of Prints Doubled

LIQUEFIED FILM WAXING PROCESS is guaranteed to protect film against lack of moisture and brittleness, caused by the excessive heat from the arc, hot operating booths and dry climates.

This process also keeps prints free from old oil; pliable and durable; and prevents 75% of film scratching, ripping and torn sprockets.

Absolute freedom from emulsion deposits upon the film tract of the projector by new prints, results from the use of Liquefied Film Waxing Process.

A new amusement enterprise including a theatre, cabaret and huge dancing floor, was opened on Saturday, July 18, at Mt. Gretna, Pa., a mountain resort near Harrisburg, which is the scene of the annual encampments of the various units of the Pennsylvania National Guard, and where there also is a big colony of summer cottages.

The enterprise is known as "Danceland Park."

The newspaper advertisement declares that the dance floor is the largest in Pennsylvania, with a floor space of 20,000 square feet. A feature of the enterprise is a ladies' smoking parlor, and free parking space is provided for automobiles. Souvenirs were distributed among the ladies on the opening night.

Among Central Pennsylvania theatres that have closed for the summer are the Opera House and the Orpheum, both of York, the Motionville theatre, New Bloomfield, and the Diga, South Bethelhem. In Lykens, the Star theatre is being operated only on Saturday nights during the warm weather.

Tellers are busy tabulating the votes cast by patrons of the Majestic theatre, Harrisburg, in the contest arranged by Manager Cloyd M. Gibble to select the most popular amateur aspirants to fame as screen actors, who are to be the stars in a home-made film photo to be produced by the Majestic management and later thrown on the Majestic screen.

It was necessary for the Jackson theatre, York, for five days during which $6,500 was spent on redecorating the interior. Two weeks were required to do the work but it was possible to keep the house open during the greater part of the time. Lighting effects and draperies were installed. Frank E. Barry, house manager, announced other extensive motion picture preparations for a later date. The Franklin is controlled by the Nathan Appell Amusement Company.

The Board of School Directors of the borough of Biglerville, Adams county, decided at a meeting on July 8, to purchase a centrally located building for use as a community auditorium where motion pictures will be shown and other forms of amusement will be held. The price to be paid is $10,000. The hall will be permitted to remain in its present condition and be available for community entertainments of all kinds, but an addition will be built to provide more classrooms for the school. The School Board will put the question of a bond issue, to pay for the building, before the voters of the borough at the coming Fall election.

Four hundred dollars was raised for the benefit of the Minersville cornet band through a special motion picture show given through the courtesy of Charley Kaer, manager of the Minersville Opera House, in that theatre recently.

The use of the Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, was taken over by the Reading police force for two nights to stage the annual police pension fund benefit entertainment through the courtesy of Frank Mickley, in behalf of the Wimer & Vincent theatre company.

A guest of the management of the Majestic theatre, Harrisburg, on the evening of June 25, was Miss Kathryn M. Frick, a deaf and dumb girl of Harrisburg, who has been called "the Second Helen Keller" because of her brilliant scholastic accomplishments despite her physical handicaps.

Work of enlarging the Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, at an expenditure of $5000, is transforming it into a vaudeville and picture house with a seating capacity of 2500 is going rapidly ahead. According to the reports the Orpheum is one of the sixteen theatres in Pennsylvania that are likely to be sold to theatre owners of the Lasky interests by the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company. The heavy steel girders for the superstructure began to arrive at the theatre during the first week of July.

Manager Farrel, of the Irving theatre, Carbondale, has substituted motion picture features for the usual vaudeville programs there, for during the summer months. The first of the feature pictures was Tom Mix in "The Last of the Duanes." The house is controlled by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton.

Seattle

M. ROSENBERG, secretary-treasurer of Principal Pictures Corporation, and brother of Al Rosenberg of the De Luxe Feature Film Exchange, was a visitor in his old home town last week, on a combined business and pleasure trip. Mike spent several days in this city with Al, and the rest of the family, and was then expected to return to Los Angeles, where he has spent his recent years in the film business. During his stay here he renewed many acquaintances with many of the exchange men and exhibitors that he knew during his former years in Seattle.

L. O. Lukon, well known by exhibitors and film men throughout the Northwest, returned to his old haunts last week to assume the management of the local Universal exchange, following his resignation with First National in Minneapolis. He was accompanied to this city and installed in office by Jack L. Schlather, former manager of the office here, and now Western division manager for Carl Laemmle's organization. Mr. Lukon was at one time manager of the local First National office, and was then acting manager and director for John Hamrick's circuit of Blue Mouse Theatres, previous to his removal to the Middle West.

The Heilig Theatre in this city opened its doors to the public again last week as the new Goldwyn house in Seattle, following a week's darkness during which time the theatre underwent a thorough renovation and overhauling.

Prices under the new policy are thirty-five and fifty cents, with matinees at a quarter, in place of the former straight twenty-five cent prices that were formerly effective.

Fred G. Sliter, manager of the First National exchange, has been absent from the city for the last several days on a business trip into the Eastern part of the state. Most of his time was expected to be spent in Spokane, where various difficulties among the first run theatres are being solved by the exhibitors and film companies concerned.

Following the performances of the first week in July, the Pantages Theatre in this city closed its doors to the public for two weeks, during which time approximately $100,000 was to be spent under the direction of Manager E. C. Bozick and Assistant Manager Rodney Pantages in the complete renovating, redecorating and remodeling of the house and stage. The theatre has been operating steadily for many years, and recently has been playing a twelve-hour vaudeville and picture policy which has made expensive repairs impossible. A gala reopening was being planned for the latter part of July, at which time a monster vaudeville program and first run picture program was to be offered.

Seth D. Perkins, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange, left last week for a business trip into Eastern Washington and Montana, planning to stop off at Spokane, Walla Walla, Missoula and a number of the smaller cities and towns during his absence. While he was away the local office was under the direction of Mr. J. W. Parry, assistant manager and booker.

W. D. Farrell, owner and manager of the American Theatre at Sunnyvale, Wash., was a recent visitor on Film Row, his first visit to this city in a number of weeks. Mr. Farrell booked and bought pictures for the next several weeks for his house, which is expected to be taken over by Jensen-Von-Andersen early in 1926, according to plans recently announced.

A. J. Sullivan, office manager of the Producers Distributing Corporation exchange, spent a few days on the road last week on a business trip to a number of the smaller towns in the Northern part of the state. He has been sent to return to the local office early in July to confer with Manager Charles E. Feldman.

R. C. Hill, rare book salesman of Maurice A. H. Huot's Film Booking Office exchange, returned to Seattle last week after an absence of several days in Northern Washington and British Columbia. Mr. Hill reported that "a good time was had by all."
IMPORTANT changes in the sales force of the Fox exchange in Albany have taken place during the past week. Fred Roble has been assigned to cover the northern section of the state, while Mr. Simcha Schenectady, a newcomer to this region and who hails from the Fox branch in Charlotte, N. C., has been assigned to represent Mr. Mahoney along the southern tier. Charles Walder, manager of the exchange, was in New York for four days last week negotiating with covering the key cities of this section. Mr. Walder's children are spending the summer at a camp on Ponatoosuc Lake. Miss Winifred Allen, who is the cashier at the Fox exchange, is spending a two weeks' vacation at a resort on Lake Chautauqua.

The Empire theatre in Syracuse features up the work of its orchestra and a new program of advertisements in all instances stating that "Stolarevsky is conducting," while Paul H. Forster presides at the organ.

Miss Margaret Sullivan, well known along Film Row, and who handles the San Souci in Waterford, via the Saugerties, has announced that she would close the two houses for the summer. According to rumor, Mr. Braff may not reopen the theatres, and may return to the furniture business.

Leon Herman, salesman in the Universal exchange here, and a brother of Carl Herman, manager for First National, had a rather unusual experience last week on a trip between Troy and Valatie. It appeared that when Mr. Herman reached Tivoli, there were no taxicabs available and the only means of transportation was to walk to Madalin, where he was to see exhibitor Roff, a jackass. Having come thus far, Mr. Herman decided to see the town through and traveled behind the animal to Madalin, only to find that Mr. Roff was not in the field for any more pictures at the present time.

There is one exhibitor in this city who is fond of swimming, and that is Walter Suckno, who is rapidly becoming a local hero through the way he is handling the Albany and Regent theatres, and Mr. Suckno can be found at Ford's Beach, indulging in a swim before hurrying back to the theatres in time to handle the nine o'clock crowds.

Two Throntons, Arthur S., of the Walden in Williamstown, Mass., and Albert in Saugerties, were along Film Row during the past week. Arthur S. Thornton has been running the Walden for the past four years and according to his own story has never received so much as a single imperiment reply from the hundreds of students that flock to his house with William S. is in session. When Mr. Thornton took over the theatre he decided to put a stop to the students smoking while watching pictures. Today Mr. Thornton is one of the boys along with the student body, and students believe that practically 99 per cent of the students patronize his house.

Harry Knappen, a special representative for Pathe in these parts during the past week. Leon Medem, manager for Pathe in this city, made a trip to Utica during the past week and found Pathe a Pathe salesman, well known throughout this territory, appeared at the theatre in a brand new car.

A rather novel idea is entertaining visitors who might camp over night with him is being advanced by George Roberts, who at one time ran the theatres in Scotia, and the Family theatres in Rotterdam and Burnt Hills. At a recent time Mr. Roberts was out of the theatre business and is engaged in running a gasoline station and wayside restaurant near Amsterdam.Apparently he has been most successful as he has erected a new home in the immediate vicinity. There is a considerable space which Mr. Roberts plans to utilize as a camping ground for tourists. If they come in sufficient numbers to warrant him setting up a machine and provide a couple of reels of pictures nightly for their entertainment.

"Al" Bothner needs no announcing these days whenever he approaches one of the towns on his circuit in the Ford car which has replaced the time-honored vehicle that used to stand him in good stead when he was running the Star in Rome. Mr. Bothner has been connected with the Smalley circuit for some time past and during the past week it was a deal of trouble in going from town to town where the theatres are located. Friends along Film Row declare that Mr. Bothner has already driven the car such distances that with a rattle and a bang, his coming is known beforehand. At any rate Mr. Bothner is one of Mr. Smalley's right hand men and is making exceptionally good in his new position.

No less than a hundred business men in the fall will be handled by a couple of exhibitors from this county, these being F. E. Chase, of Pine Plains, and Charles Asher, who runs the Star in Rhinebeck. The two men are already as busy as can be in arranging for what is generally regarded as one of the biggest county fairs in the entire state.

Ollie Stacey, of the Majestic, in Albany, is wondering these days whether he will ever stop raining. Sooner or later, he does he book a fight picture than it starts to rain, giving him a bad break nine times out of ten.

At the Robbins-Eckel theatre in Syracuse, movie tests were taken during the afternoon and evening of July 8, and attracted plenty of attention in that city.

Theatre at Port Henry will resume in the near future, an announcement that means hundreds of dollars to Lew Fischer, of Port Edward, who has a house in Port Henry that has managed to struggle along during the last year or so when the mines have been down.

Fred Myers, of the Mark Strand in Albany, is wondering these days just how much of an honor it is to be elected as a delegate from this city to the state convention of the Knights of Pythias. The convention is slated for Albany later on this summer. While other delegates will enjoy long trips with all their expenses met, in coming to Albany, Delegate Myers will hoof it down the street to the convention.

Jimmie Sper, of Buffalo, well known in this city, and who is now looking after Dependable's output in western New York, with head quarters in Buffalo, and Charles Goetz, of New York City, general manager of the company, were along Film Row during the past week, shaking hands with everyone.

It looks like a big meeting of the Arbitration Board on July 20, the first one that has been held so far this month. It is said that there are thirty or forty cases to come up before the Board and if such proves the case, the session will be an all day affair.

A big sign adorns the property recently purchased by the Strand interests in Albany, and which will be razed to make way for the new $500,000 motion picture theatre which will be erected on the site. The theatre will be under the personal management of Mr. H. S. Hall, according to the banner's announcement.

Amateur nights are continuing at both the Rose theatre in Troy and the Albany theatre in Schenectady.

A new business block is in course of erection directly adjoining the State theatre in Schenectady. The building appears not interfered with the showing of the pictures, but when riveting gets under way it may be a different story.

James E. Roach, the new manager for the Farley theatres in Schenectady, does not believe in cutting down his newspaper advertising in the summer time. Instead of having a smaller program on the days on the grounds that there is no business in the summer, Mr. Roach has increased his newspaper space five or six times compounded that it would be in normal times. Mr. Roach comes to the Farley circuit with the experience gained from five years in Kansas City, where he owned the Idle Hour as well as managed the Globe theatre. Mr. Roach is a firm admirer of young men as ushers in his theatres, saying that they hold their heads higher by days when they have a work to do.

George Dwore, who works with his father handling the Capitol and Cameo theatres in Schenectady, and who was recently elected as secretary of the Albany, is spending more of his time in Albany than in the past. In Schenectady, Thursday and Friday nights' business at the motion picture theatres is running ahead of that slated for Saturday and Sunday night on account of the large number of automobiles and counter attractions which take the people into the country over the week end. Each Proctor is erecting in Schenectady has progressed to the extent that the local boys are going up and the work is going ahead as fast as can be expected.

Harry McNamara, of Valatie, who was secretary Film Row during the past week, being incorporated by Mrs. McNamara, who is assisting with the bookings.

Of all the exhibitors in this part of the state, few are busier these days than John Myers, who is employed during the day time at one of the banks, and who in the evening, spends his time in handling the Star in Schenectady and the Grand in Scotia, along with his duties as a usher. He is also an organizer and district deputy for the Modern Woodmen of America and is in all finds the days too short.

It was so hot in Schenectady during the recent wave, that Miss Betty Doctrow, of the Cameo, decided to abandon the ticket booth for the time being, standing outside where she had a chance of catching the breeze. She then handed out the tickets and took in the mousy.

Senator E. Alexander introduced Mr. Mc- Cutcheon, who responded with a brief talk on his new venture and on the confidence that he had in Blytheville.

Indianapolis

THE recently completed two story Paramount exchange building at 116 West Michigan Avenue, Indianapolis, is considered by local film men and executives of Paramount Players-Lasky Cor- poration to be one of the finest buildings of its kind in the coun- try. The exchange is between North Capitol Avenue and Illinois Street, with a frontage of forty feet on Michigan Avenue which gives the building the benefit of natural light on three sides.

In all respects the new Indian- napolis building follows the Para- mount standard exchange plan ex- cept for certain improvements in equipment which will make for better handling of film. Every known device to minimize fire haz- ard has been embodied in this building which is completely equipped with automatic sprinklers, steel partitions and metal office furniture wherever possible.

The ground floor is given over to the projection room, film and ad-sales bins, and booking offices; while the executive offices are in the upper story. The film storage room is completely separated from the main building.

The building was erected for the Paramount Realty Corporation by Mothershead and Fitzton, prominent architects and builders, under the direction of T. C. Young, head of the Paramount Realty Bureau. It represents the finest type of brick and concrete construction. The front of the building is orn- amented in tapestry brick in a neat design.

CHARLES W. GRISWOLD, personal representative of Harold Franklin, manager of Star theatres for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, arrived last Monday from New York, to spend several weeks in Atlanta and assist Southern Enterprise book-ings here. Mr. Griswold is traveling throughout the country confirming all bookings for theatres in the Southern Enterprises chain, remaining in each point only long enough to complete his check.

Before his connection with Mr. Franklin, Mr. Griswold was manager of the Rivoli Theatre in New York, and prior to managing the Rivoli he was personal manager of Theatre of Lead. In August Mr. Griswold will leave New York for London, where he will supervise house service of the New Famous Players-Lasky theatre there.

Nat Royster, formerly manager of the Temple theatre, Birmingham, Ala., and manager of the recently acquired Warner Bros. theatres in North Carolina, which are the Lexington, Charlotte, Salisbury, Concord, Greensboro and Lincoln, a colored house, in Winston-Salem, is a member of the Alamo- way theatre in Columbus, N. C.

Prior to his connection with the Temple theatre in Birmingham, Mr. Royster was manager of the Marvin Wise interests, "Claude" Essell, "district" manager of Associated Exhibitors, who has been spending the past several weeks in the Atlanta office, has appointed O. K. Bourgeois, to succeed Joseph Marrett, former branch manager of the company in this territory. Mr. Marrett went to New Orleans a few weeks ago, and since his departure Mr. Essell has held the fort until he should appoint a successor to Mr. Marrett.

This week Mr. Essell received Mr. Bourgeois' acception of his duties, with Associated Exhibitors, Inc., Wall Street, N. Y.

Mr. Essell left for Chattanooga today, and from there will go to the West Coast.

Mr. Griswold has inaugurated a new office system for his theatres by instituting office hours of 9 to 5, instead of the 8:30 to 5:30 rule under which the exchange had been working. This is in conformity with the hours observed in the New York office of the company, and has met with the hearty approval of Paramount's force here—needless to say.

High wind last week completely demolished the plate glass front of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new exchange on Walton Street, where the office has just recently been installed. No one was hurt in the crash, however.

The Lyric Theatre, Hoganville, Ga., is now closed and for sale, it is announced by Messrs. Smith and Heywood, former owners and operators of this theatre.

Riley P. Davis, shipping clerk and head of the accessory department of Progress Pictures Corporation here, was married on July 1st to Miss Elma Clarice Dumas, of Atlanta. They are now residing at 1075 Highland Avenue. William Oldknow, president of 20th Century-Fox, has returned from the west this week. He seems to have been bitten by the "real estate bug" and is having a good time. He expects to spend a short while down there looking the situation over.

Miss Elma Dumas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oldknow, President of Liberty Film Distributing Corporation, is enjoying a month's stay in Asheville, N. C., accompanied by her young son. She is staying at Kelvin Worth Inn.

"Days of Prince," branch manager for Paramount, is spending this week in Atlanta, visiting various branches of the company. Several Georgia towns of importance where he will return to Atlanta early next week. It is expected that "Perry, Sargent and Progress Pictures," will be in Chattanooga, last week visiting his family there. He will be back in town Sunday.

H. R. Kilfoil, "district" manager for Pathé, was in the Hospital last week for a few days. It was not announced what his condition was, but his friends interested will be glad to learn that he is getting along nicely.

Thomas A. Kilfoil announces that indications all point to the opening of Paramount's new exchange a short time after July 26th.

Mathew Betz, who plays an important role in "My Lady's Lips," a B. P. Schulberg Production, set July 25th. Unless unforeseen difficulties come up, he expects the office to be installed in their new quarters by July 18th.

Archie Blue, sales representative for Paramount working out of the Jacksonville exchange, has left his office and is again in the field for contracting with the company. His future plans have not been announced as yet.

Ben Styles, president of Paramount's 100% Club and sales manager of the Jacksonville exchange, is again out in the field working for contracts.

Walter Clements, formerly billing clerk for the Atlanta Paramount exchange but now booker in the Jacksonville exchange, was in the city Wednesday to arrange bookings of Paramount Pictures in Florida. He returned to Jacksonville in the evening.

Charles Crute, of the Lyric Theatre, Huntsville, Ala., was in Atlanta late Wednesday afternoon on business.

Mrs. Martin, salesman for Liberty Film Distributing Corporation, underwent an operation for appendicitis in Chattanooga last week. Oscar Oldknow, president of the company, immediately sent Bill Specht, another member of the sales force, to Chattanooga to take care of Mr. Martin during his illness, and to see that he got the very best medical advice.

Mr. Martin is reported to be improving rapidly, and will soon be back in Atlanta again.

Sidney Lathem, Georgia representative, was in town Sunday concurring with Branch Manager W. H. Lasky on some laundries he left town again Monday to take up his duties again with renewed vigor.

E. E. Geyer, exploiter for Famous Players-Lasky, was in Toccoa, Ga., where he hopes to build up good summer business for the Star Theatre.

D. L. Sullivan, general auditor for Warner Brothers, left town a few days ago after completing one of his regular visits going over the books of the exchange here. He next goes to the Warner exchange in New Orleans, Dallas, and Oklahoma City; then back to Charlotte, returning to New York from there.

Ernest Bowman, assistant manager of the Alamo No. 2, who has been ill for the past several weeks is now spending his time trying to resume his activities at the theatre.

Captain M. McKenzie, production manager for the Criterion Classics, came into Atlanta Friday from last week of first from Los Angeles, and left next day for New York. Mr. F. Gehrke, head of the production department of the local First National office is still on his vacation this week. He will return from his two week's jaunt early next week.

Mrs. Thomas Kilfoil came into Atlanta Monday of this week from New York, to join her husband, who is on duty in the local Paramount exchange. Mr. and Mrs. Kilfoil are staying at the Robert Fulton hotel.

"Monty" Salmon, head of the Southern Enterprises houses in Macon, Ga., formerly manager of the one-time Lyric Players here, came in Monday for a flying visit to his Atlanta friends. He returned to Macon on Tuesday.

Roy S. Campbell, Universal representative in Alabama was in Atlanta a few hours Friday, en route to his home at Cleveland, Tenn., where he went to spend Sunday.

stay in Sacramento where he was appointed a special "Security" agent in 1917. Edward Rowden of the T. and D. Jr. circuit is to be married July 18 to Miss Stella Breen and has been receiving many congratulations.

Max Weiss of the Silver Palace and Lyric theatres and "best friends,' friends, is now spending the summer vacation in the exchange business until July 31st. Jim Linn, has purchased the 16th Street theatre at Salinas, Calif., for his Summer vacation.

"The Strand theatre was opened Friday, July 1st at Santa Rosa by Mr. E. F. Fulton, a swell fellow. Los Angeles theatrical man.

WARREN M. HOLMES, 33, manager of the Palace theatre, at DeKalb and Joe Feldon, property man of that playhouse, is at the Infirmary, seriously injured, following an auto accident Thursday, July 7th on the LaPorte road.

Mr. Holmes has been connected with the Interstate Amusement Company which owns the Palace and Majestic here for about 15 years, and was well known as a showman throughout the country. Two years ago he was made manager of the Palace after first serving as assistant manager.

Surviving Mr. Holmes is his wife two half brothers and a half sister, all of Houston.

The need of a permanent film sales center in South Texas is very apparent and its establishment at Houston is again brought to the fore by the fact that the manager and entire sales force of the Dalлас Paramount Exchange have established headquarters in this city temporarily, as was done last year and the year before. Located at the Rice Hotel Manager J. B. Dugger is directing Paramount booking and sales throughout South Texas. Aside from his sales, made a short trip to Texas City, Paramount exploitation representative for this territory, has also established an office in Houston.

On being asked if the need of Houston as a permanent film distributing center for South Texas was not equally obvious, Mr. Dugger replied:

"That is perfectly true. The physical handling of film—its shipment to distant points to fill engagements will be held for all inspection for inspection before it is permitted to go out to another customer—i t is becoming very evident with the rapidly increasing volume of business. This burden would be very much lightened by the creation of an exchange at Houston. I feel at liberty to say that our company had had this subject under consideration for some time. It is a matter of fact that requires consideration, for a Paramount exchange is much more than a modern office building—it is a plant requiring special equipment of an extensive and costly nature. "Houston as a film distributing center would constitute a useful adjustment of the present machinery of film handling. Not only would it take care of the business in South Texas, but would sooner or later take care of the territory of Western Louisiana. In my opinion a plant of this kind can be counted on for the not distant future."

Gabe Laskin manager of the Cory Theatre for five years, who has been in Los Angeles for the past six months, was in Houston last week enroute to Kansas City.

Mr. Laskin is negotiating for another location in Houston, and plans to reopen a show here at an early date. He is also planning to bring a series of high class road attractions to the City Auditorium this fall and winter.

Jerry Iselt left Sunday night for California where he will spend several weeks at the film headquarters. Mr. Iselt is house manager of the Iris theatre.

Otto Brauer Universal Film Service South Texas representative is in town for the week end.

Mack, Philadelphia branch manager for Pathe, has returned from a two weeks' visit at Eagle Bay, New York; accept a position with the Border Amusement company in Buffalo. The Ellen theatre will be closed for a month for repairs and redecoration.

Fred Schweppe has closed the Amus in Elmira for the summer. In the coming months he will enlarge the seating capacity to 1200, put in new seats, install a new or gan and lighting and ventilating systems. The work will cost about $50,000.

H. M. Addison, manager of the O. S. Hathaway theatres in Binghamton, will join his family at Wildwood, N. J., the latter part of July for a long vacation.

H. L. Averill has removed his motion picture equipment from the opera house in Palmyra, N. Y., to Orange Hall, where he has started a film exchange, Boys and Girls. Repairs on the opera house, necessitated by the recent fire, are rapidly progressing.

The committee appointed at the recent Syracuse convention of the M. P. T. O., of N. Y., Inc., has completed the new by-laws, a copy of which has been sent to Committee Chairman A. C. Hyman of Niagara Falls to the chairman of the Albany zone for approval.

Policeman Hector Kelly of the Eastman Rochester, has completed two weeks' vacation in Montreal. During his absence George E. Williams of Buffalo Paramount jumped in and helped out on some of the publicity.

Arthur L. Skinner, manager of the Victoria, Buffalo, is spending a week's vacation at his new summer home at Point Abino, near Crystal Beach, Ontario.

The new screening room has been completed at the Buffalo National Exchange. The machines are the latest improved, an. Simplex machines which are installed by the Beecher Theatre Supply company of Buffalo.
SPENCER SLADIN, sales manager of Associated Arts Corporation, is making his headquarters in Chicago.

Three pieces of property located at the corners of Vermont Street and Fifth and Sixty-first streets, on the northside, have been transferred to Blair McElroy, treasurer of Fitzpatrick & McElroy Company, and Charles H. Haas, Blue Island businessman. The property covers all the business frontage of Western Avenue between Fifty-first and Fifty-second streets on Vermont Street, and the action of all parties represented in the transfer, in merging this property into one extensive and substantial holding makes it one of the most valuable suburban corner properties in Cook County. No announcement has yet been made as to the future plans and developments of this property.

Marka Brothers, owners of the Orpheens, Broadway Strand and Marshallfield Theatres, and who are considering two theaters on the northside, announce that they will erect one of the largest houses in Chicago, on Madison Street, three hundred feet west of Crawford. They state that a feature of the theatre will be a tower of jewels and one of the largest sets of chimes in the world.

William Hersheberg, owner of the Cameo, Rainbow and Schindler's Theatres, left Saturday night for Florida, where he expects to remain for several weeks. It is understood that Mr. Hersheberg is interested in Florida real estate.

A number of Samuel Abraham's friends tendered him a farewell dinner at the Covenant Club last week, on the eve of his departure for a trip to Europe, where he will visit his aged father. A pleasant feature of the gathering was the presentation to Mr. Abraham's, of a beautiful walrus glutstone bag, by Ludwig Siegel, secretary of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, and some of the Prarama people were tonemaster and kept things moving in a lively clip throughout the evening.

The Monroe Theatre is scheduled to open again on July 15th. Extensive improvements have been completed during the period it has been dark.

The Rex Theatre at 847 S. Racine Avenue, has been painted outside and redecorated inside, and V. A. Yokum reports the improvements have stimulated business.

The Chicago Riding Club, the famous millionaire Gold Coast haven, has taken a page out of the experience of the motion picture exhibitor's experience. They have completed the installation of a huge Wurlitzer Unit Organ of the size and type used in the largest theatres. This instrument is not only used for recitals but has made possible many novelty equestrian events, such as musical rides.

RECEIPTS of three big days at the Garden Theatre were saved by the security of the lock on the recently installed safe, when cracksmen tried to force the combination on the night following July 4. As banks were closed over the holiday, the combination saved the day, or rather the night. It is believed by Manager Koch and the owners that the bands hid in the house after the close of the show, later repatriating to the office for their unsuccessful venture.

Mrs. S. H. Abrams, wife of the Milwaukee manager for F. B. O., and their son, Herbert, arrived in this city Friday, from Indianapolis, to establish permanent residence here. Mr. Abrams became Milwaukee manager four years ago, after resigning from his job in New York, and the family remained in the city only for the summer.

J. MOELLER, president of the Moeller Theatre Service Inc., of New York, has been a visitor in Detroit. He renewed acquaintances with a number of friends he made while he was manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan several years ago.

Michael de Stefano, concert master of the Capitol Theatre Symphony orchestra has been awarded a Fellowship in the Juilliard Musical Foundation Graduate school of New York. Competitive examinations for the fellowship were held recently by the Foundation. During the eight days of the test, 170 musicians were examined, of this number 102 were selected. The Fellowship was a member of the Detroit Symphony orchestra, occupying first violin in the group.

Jesse Fishman, general manager for the Standard Film Service Company arrived in Detroit, this week, to supervise plans for the first film, in the collection. The enterprise, which has been in preparation for several weeks, will be a contest film, and will be produced by the studio's English department. The battle, the battle.
Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

July 25, 1925

How Baxter Butted In—Warner's, Piccadilly, New York

Daily News: "Here is a comedy which all can enjoy and one which will hold the attention from the introduction to the last fadeout. Pretty is agreeably acted and efficiently assembled. Certainly it gives Matt Moore plenty of chances to win the audience, as well as to peal after peal of laughter yesterday greeted some of the ludicrous incidents. This film has been handled with praiseworthy originality."

Evening Journal: "A corking good comedy! There's lots of enjoyable nonsense in the film, and it is very well acted. You'll like it. You may even find it inspiring."

Morning Telegraph: "The picture is an appealing mixture of pathos and humor and gives Matt Moore ample opportunity for the sort of thing he does best. Dorothy Devore is well cast and plays with a great deal of sparkle."

Daily News: "Some new jokes, mighty good sub-titles, the pleasing Matt Moore, the vivacious Dorothy Devore, an entertaining plot, and if you don't laugh at this you're apt to have failed in your share of entertainment."

Evening Journal: "Moore demonstrates again that he is the most delightful sap character on the screen. He never at any time loses the entire sympathy of his audience."

The Making of O'Malley—First National, Strand, New York

Herald-Tribune: "We never care for policeman pictures. And then, when 'O'Malley' began, it was a distinct and pleasurable surprise. It might almost be called 'The Making of Milton Sills,' he seems so human. And we're sure, that, unless you are even more rabidly set against policeman pictures than we are, you'll be amused by 'The Making of O'Malley.'"

Mornin Telegraph: "Milton Sills appears as the chief oop to the entire satisfaction of the real movie fans. It is bound to suc-

Kiss Me Again—Warner's, Forum, Los Angeles

Examiner: One of the most delicious comedies of marriage the screen has known. The work of Marie Prevost is almost faultless, Monte Blue is convincing throughout, and registers with brillant dramatic effect. John Roche was never seen to such advantage as in this picture and Clara Bow and Willard Louis make their roles outstanding. The story is fast moving and graphic. His confident conception and execution has ever been put on the screen with success. Lubitsch's hands one of the keenest and most sparkling of farce comedies, knits into a fine fabric the episodes of love and laughter."

"Kiss Me Again," by comparison, is a cascade of dramatic fireworks, at which one can only say 'Ah!' again and again."

Record: "One of the finest comedy dramas of the season. All five players have established certain records with other directors but with this they succeed in surpassing all things previous."

"Times:" A Lubitsch production is always an event of character and class. Marie Prevost will again claim the title of popular prominence. Blue is responsible for much of the mirth. John Roche has never had such an impersonation. Clara Bow is poignant and Willard Louis also is very good."

"Herald:" "It is the importance of the small details which make 'Kiss Me Again' worth seeing and give it the note of subtlety which sets it above the ordinary police comedy."

Daily News: "I did not imagine that the motion picture producers..."
were capable of such excellent work. To say this is a comedy is misleading, for we usually think of comedy as slapstick. It is one of the most delightfully whimsical pictures I have ever seen. It is even better than "The Marriage Circle." It is subtle, satirical, clever.

"The Monster"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Loew’s State, L. A.
Times: "The Monster" is a mystery thriller which outshines "The Bat" and outrates "The Cat!" In fact, this spine-chiller makes all other mystery thrillers look like the day dreams of an amateur detective. Don’t miss it. The Monster is full of restless doors and trick stairways and strange attendants doing weird deeds of science in dimly lit chambers.

Record: "They’ve finally succeeded in transferring the various chills and thrills incident to a mystery play to the screen. All attempts heretofore have been more or less interesting, but rather mild. In ‘The Monster’ the audience’s composite backbone is very likely to assume some of the properties of ice. If you don’t believe it listen to the applause when the meek little hero finally dispatches the final menace at Loew’s this week."

Express: "The idea that it is impossible to match the spoken drama in the line of mystery plays on the screen is quite dispelled at Loew’s State this week by ‘The Monster.’ This creepy melodrama has been turned into silent form very effectively and even improved by alterations in Crane Wilbur’s work in the transfer. Lon Chaney has done his usual excellent characterization of an extreme type. Mystery stories are popular, and this one is one of the best."

Herald: "Thrill follows fast on the heels of thrill at Loew’s State this week where Lon Chaney carries the titular role in ‘The Monster.’ This suspense and mystery of the plot is added the pseudo-scientific note imparted by the fact that the movie is a surgeon, a madman from the unprofessional ranks. This is weird enough, but the Oregon airthor for experience. What more soul stirring situation could the most ardent seeker after thrillers ask for than that?"

Examiner: "You can laugh or shudder when you see ‘The Monster.’ Whether you prefer a tingling funny bone or a creeping sensation about the spinal column, you are sure to be gratified. Hilarious comedy episodes vie with inconceivable villainy in a picture one of the most unusual which this season has offered. Mystery, action and adventure abound, and the shadows of your fleshes serve as its only luminant. A small town detective solves a strange case of criminal disappearance, and shrieks of terror pursue his every move. Here is quite the best mystery play the screen has ever offered."

Daily News: "A movie paintingly beautiful and visibly perilous! ‘The White Desert’ is probably one of the most venture-some productions ever screened. It’s certainly one of the most entrancing, most spell-binding and, interpreted, most interesting. Mr. Frasier is called upon for a performance which requires and receives real ability. Claire Windsor is her usual dazzling self in a picturesque role. If you don’t get a kick out of ‘The White Desert,’ movies no longer kick at all for many kicks American! ‘Suspense quivered in the air from the first scene of ‘The White Desert.’ And, as the story progressed, the excitement at the Capitol became tense with excitement. This is one thriller that stimulates. The show of the great snow avalanche slowly creeping down the mountainside, toppling buildings over the cliff, completely engulfing the retreating survivors, are terrific. Then, for good measure, a billboard, a fanfare and a zillion-tanner are thrown in. If you enjoy thrillers, you will find this one of the best."

Evening World: "There is a soul-stirring thrill in nearly every inch of ‘The White Desert.’ As the name implies, ‘The White Desert’ has been turned into a man’s struggle against billions of tons of snow in the Rocky Mountains during the construction of a continental railroad. It demonstrates anew the aptness of Shakespeare’s observation that the soul is a thing of many duties. ‘The White Desert’ has the advantage of a stellar cast—but its story is so gripping realistic that almost any cast could have made it convincing."

Journal: "‘The White Desert’ at Loew’s is one of the best outdoor dramas I’ve ever seen. It’s an absorbing and very well acted tale, placed in the snow lands of Colorado and dealing with situations that leave one breathless. What with the villainy of Mathew Betz, a starling of the apron wall, and the unusual nature to get aid from the nearest town despite a raging blizzard, the picture is dramatically effective. "Nearly finished ‘The White Desert’ is a wintery melodrama abounding in gorgeously beautiful snow scenes. The scene where the white ants besiege the camp was thrilling and beautiful as it rolled and rumbled under the eyes of the mountain. The little chills shanties of the camp, it is decidedly worth seeing."

Mirror: "The snow avalanche is one of the sturdiest pieces of photography we’ve seen. Claire Windsor lends wistful beauty to the action and Pat O’Malley dashes through a heroic role in convincing style. Priscilla Bonner and Frank Currier contribute intriguing characterizations."

Times: "One of the appeals at this particular moment of ‘The White Desert’ is its effect of the snow scene, which strike the eye gratefully at this season of the year. The scene of the snowslide is one of the best effects of its kind seen recently in pictures. It is very impressively managed. The sequence of the relief train’s approach also has moments of high effectiveness. ‘The production is a marvel of photography. There is a story, and a very good one, too, woven into it, and the picture is a splendid one. The scenes involving the destruction of the camp by a succession of snowslides are marvelously done, as are those where the men go out into the blizzard to repair the telegraph lines."

"Black Cyclone"—Pathé, Granada, San Francisco
Call-Post: "A marvelous picture—‘Black Cyclone.’ What else is there? ‘Black Cyclone’ is sure to become in filmature. Had anyone told us, before we saw ‘Black Cyclone’ that these things could be done with animals—not trained but wild beasts—we’d have led him aside, folding into, and told him that a delightful madman and interested us hugely. These things have been done with who animals in the Pathe picture. It is one of the most remarkable things accomplished in the picture line since Edison, in the days of his youth, brought forth the kinetoscope."

Daily News: "There is something new under the cinema sun! It is ‘Black Cyclone,’ a picture so original, so different from the usual that it stands out on the screen like a beacon of hope to eyes that have become jaded, ped, lairs, and brain somewhat dulled from viewing picture after picture, many of them good, yes, but all of them conventions. ‘Black Cyclone’ is not to be considered an ‘animal’ picture. It is drama, well thought out and well acted, horses and human beings working in complete accord. There is never a dull moment in its unending story which seems to be more nearly fool-proof than any tales that have ever been devised for the screen. Beast heat! It is a happy choice of directors and the picture is fascinating from start to finish. ‘The Happy Warrior’ is as good a picture as ‘The Clean Heart.’"

Morning Telegraph: "A story and a theme that appeal to audiences of intelligence and taste. Mr. Blacketton has effected a thoroughly refreshing photography. This is ingeniously developed."

Daily Mirror: "Mr. Blackton possesses the charming knack of transcription the whimsicality, the pathos, the tenderness of Hutchinson to the silver sheet. ‘The Happy Warrior’ ranks with his previous production, ‘The Clean Heart.’"

Times: "The author would recognize his story if he were confronted with this screen version of it, which is more than you can always say. This is a consistently delightful photoplay that always holds the interest. Frequently displays touches above the average. Oliver Borden runs off at the ends with his neat humor, but the others do excellently."

Evening World: "Blacketton has done excellently well. For here is a feature that is intelligently sticking out all over it. And he has the advantage of a perfectly literate prose. ‘Black Cyclone’ has lent itself to the screen with rare fidelity. Malcolm McGregor probably never has done better, Alice Chevallier’s excellent portrayal, Oliver Borden gives more promise than any young lady seen on Broadway since in months. Mary Alden gives one more of her stellar character performances, and GardnerJames excelled sympathetically throughout."

Daily News: "The Happy Warrior proves the actors’ point: ‘Give us a story and we’ll give you a photoplay as you have a chance to see for a long time."

"Evolution"—Red Seal, Rivoli, New York
Herald-Tribune: "Don’t miss it. You must see it. We sat through it twice."

The Sun: ‘Evolution’ is an ambiguous picture, tracing the ascent of Man. Your beliefs, therefore, cannot prevent your enjoyment of an exhibition presenting in pictorial form the speculations of the best known scientists of the world. A wave of applause swept the house the first time."

Journal: "Absorbing, timely and well done."

World: "Enlightening and amusing."

Post: "Unusually interesting and instructive as well."

Mirror: "Fascinating. Hugo Riesenfeld should really issue a special invitation to William Jenning’s fans."

Times: "The audience applauded ‘Evolution,’ which proved interesting as a means of popularizing an abstract question."

Telegram: "Applauded for almost a minute."

New Color Effects for Stage Presentation

Eastman Theatre and Kodak Co. Develop Method Giving Remarkable Results That Are Easily Obtainable

By Thomas F. Murray, Jr.

All of the color effects so far described were “static.” They were put upon the curtain and remained unchanged, discounting the irising effect on designs like the butterflies, until they were removed. Changing colors, chasing each other like shadows over the curtain, would be more graceful. They would lack that severity that definition of the static color effects.

In an article on, “The Use of Color for the Embellishment of the Motion Picture Program” Loyd A. Jones and Lewis M. Townsend refer to this matter in the following words:

“The great difference between color in nature and in the handiwork of the artist is that the latter is largely static, while the former is frequently mobile. There is a fascination and charm in the mobility of color as observed in nature which we cannot hope to find in the static production of the artist. Many of the best artistic results are good because the artist has caught a fleeting color effect and fixed it on his canvas. If this is true, how much more interesting and beautiful would be a picture having a mobility of coloring similar to that displayed by nature. The motion picture has made it possible to reproduce mobility of form but unfortunately the photographic process in common use at the present time is not capable of reproducing the chromatic attributes of color, and we are forced to be content with pictures from which these chromatic facts are absent.”

Some very interesting effects in dynamic color production are afforded by the use of the double dissolving stereopticon and photographed designs similar to those used for static color production, except that here the photographs are made on plates, or on films which are then sealed between plates. A very artistic result was obtained by using the design illustrated in Figure 8. This was revolved in the path of one beam of light while the color wheel in front of it was also rotated, giving the design in a series of colors. The other beam of light was used to flood the curtain with red. In this case it was the negative, of course, that was used.

A more spectacular effect was produced with the “Chromotrope” designs shown in Figures 9A and 9B. One of these designs was mounted in the path of one beam of light and the other design in the path of the other beam. If now the designs are held stationary while the color wheels revolve, the effect produced is that of revolving wheels suddenly changing their direction of motion. Other effects are produced by setting the designs as far out of center as possible and revolving them in the same direction or in opposite directions while the color wheels are not revolved. Another variation is to revolve both the color wheels and the designs.

A refinement in the production of dynamic color has just been described by L. A. Jones and L. M. Townsend. They have used a pair of filters each composed of three disc wedges, one colored blue-green, one magenta, and one yellow. These are so mounted that the complete filters may be rotated as units or each element may be rotated independently.

If a conventional design is used, the photograph is taken on one positive film on acetate base and a print is made on similar material. The negative is placed in one stereopticon and the positive in another. The wedge filters are so set that the designs through the two films contrast. When the filters are rotated in the same direction at the same speed, the design will always have the same contrast although the colors will change continually. If the design photographed contains gray areas or figures in addition to the black on white, or white on black, that is, if there are half-tones on the films, the half-tone areas will be colored by light from the two filters and thus there will always be three colors on the curtain. When the filters are mounted so that each element can be made to rotate independently of all the others, and each element of the filter is made to rotate at a different rate of speed, the sequence of color obtainable is practically unlimited.

A simpler filter, and one by which very satisfactory results may be obtained, is produced by making a color wheel of eighteen sectors of colored glass or gelatin so selected that the hues are uniformly spaced throughout the spectrum and also through out the non-spectral region. Do not be frightened by “spectrum” and “non-spectral region.” All they mean is this:—a spectrum is the same.

as a rainbow. The colors in the rainbow are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, and violet. Now there is this to remember about a rainbow, the ends do not meet, which is unfortunate, for if they did, there would be no "nonspectral region."

Now of the colors in the rainbow the important ones are red, green, and blue, and if there were bands of no-man's-land between these colors, there would be no yellow. If the ends of the rainbow joined red and blue would mix giving the magenta and purple hues; but the ends of the rainbow do not join so the purples and magentas are relegated to the "nonspectral" region. Even though these shades are not in the rainbow, they are very pleasing colors in a motion picture house so you should include some of them in your color wheel. Furthermore, in your wheel these "nonspectral" colors are essential to an easy transition from blue to red.

On rotating a filter made as described, a series of color changes is produced. The change in color from one filter to the next is not very abrupt since at the time of each change sections of the two adjacent filters are in the path of the light beam and a mixture of the two colors result. These color wheels may, of course, be used with designs, and effects will be obtained similar to those described when using the compound wedge filters.

So color has come to the motion picture house as the result of the combined efforts of physicist, projectionist, and artist, and backed by the organizations which invented and perfected motion picture film and established leadership in the art of entertaining the public through the medium of it. Colors produced as described and judiciously employed fill a void in the motion picture program which has long been recognized, but tolerated for want of a suitable solution to the problem. This color introduction to the picture smooths out the bump which, since the beginning of motion picture projection, has been experienced in those moments between "The End" of one film and the title of the next.

Might not now this prediction be safely made? Color with motion pictures will become increasingly popular, and improvements will appear in the methods of entrapping it and releasing it for the edification of the clients of the theatre. Striving for color perfection will continue until the day comes when every film shown in a motion picture theatre will exhibit not only the forms of the things in nature but will reproduce, as well, their splendid colorings.

New Theatre Planned for Jersey City

Plans are being drawn by Hyman Rosen- soln of Newark, New Jersey, for the construction of a motion picture theatre to be erected on a plot 115 x 190 at Newark Avenue, Jersey City. The building is to be a one story brick construction. The owner is Alfred Gottman.

Ventilation Proving Important in Securing Business for Small Houses

A COOL theatre; satisfied customers; personal advertising;—

These benefits plus bigger box office returns invariably follow when theatre owners appreciate the value of comfortable theatres and actually make their places of business pleasing to their patrons.

For many years theatre owners have found the summer months more or less barren from the profit standpoint. In fact, scores of good theatres are closed during the summer time just for this reason. Not only has this been detrimental to the individual theatre owner who closes in summer but it is injurious to the theatrical business in general.

Every theatre man knows that much educational work has been done in the past to develop the "theatre going" habit in America. Whenever theatres close it interrupts the "theatre going" habit. Hence, the habit must be developed all over again. This means a greater outlay of money in advertising than would have been the case had the theatres been able to keep open in the summer and keep up a continuous run of advertising.

The theatre men of America have two things to sell, first entertainment and second comfort. Any theatre lacking in either loses business. Which of the two is most important is hard to say but it is safe to guess that in the summer time the second is most necessary.

Making a theatre comfortable in the summer time has been a difficult problem for the medium and small theatres. Just recently, there has come on the market a new cooling and ventilating system which has already been installed in many theatres, particularly in the middle west. This system is known as the Artie-Nu-Air with offices in the State Lake building, Chicago.

The Artie Nu-Air system was exhibited at the Milwaukee convention and attracted considerable attention. The system was in actual operation and proved to be a very impressive exhibition. It "kicks up" 40,000 cubic feet of fresh air every minute and distributes it throughout the theatre. Thus far the manufacturers report satisfaction on the part of all who have installed them.

Start Work Soon on Warner Theatre in Hollywood

Plans for the theatre which Warner Brothers will build at Hollywood Boulevard and Wilcox avenue, Hollywood, were approved last week by H. M. Warner and construction work is scheduled to start within 60 days. The estimated cost of the building is $1,250,000. It is to be a 3,600-seat house, of modern architecture.

Among the features which will be included in the theatre are a large ballroom, a roof garden and promenade, with the balance of the structure devoted to shops and offices. The theatre will be used for world premiers of Warner productions.

Inquiries and Comments

The Newcomer Errs

OME little while ago we welcomed into our fold a newcomer in the editorial projection field when American Cinematographer, a West Coast publication, announced the institution of a Projection Department as a regular feature of its publication.

That this welcome was not unanimous was evidenced when another publication undertook to castigate American Cinematographer for daring to presume upon sacred territory.

This castigation took the rather high-handed form of sending a personal letter to the newcomer in which some rather hasty things were said and implied; even going so far as to attempt to besmirch the reputation of a good man.

But the worm turned!

It smote back!

Indeed it smote such a mighty smite so that nothing has since been heard from this castigator.

Not even one little yelp. Which is as it should be for the less said of this unpleasant episode, the better.

Our Turn

Be that as it may, we too wish to take our turn at castigating this presuming newcomer. But in a fashion a little more friendly than that attempted by the individual referred to above.

We have no hard feelings for American Cinematographer. Rather, we wish it success.

The thing that riles us, however, is a certain passage in the Projection Department article of June last issue wherein the writer condemns all exhibitors and projectionists alike for their all-round stupidity and shiftlessness. The passage referred to is this:

"The average projectionist perhaps looks at his screen six or seven times during the projection of the same number of reels. The manager knows little or nothing about projection, and the man he is paying to project his expensive program is either ruining him or making money for him. However, the manager doesn't realize this, and because his box office receipts fall off he thinks that his programs are very poor. He hasn't stopped to realize that perhaps it might be his presentation that is effecting the decline in box office receipts; he is not educated to know good projection; he doesn't realize that the screen is the medium from which all the money in the industry is derived; he doesn't realize that his screen is too bright, too dull, that the screen is dirty, that his house is lighted wrong or that the mechanical condition of his projectors is poor. The picture is jumpy and, perhaps, out of focus. His box office receipts will tell him all this if he is not educated to proper screen presentation. What is the result of all this? Nothing more than it is the screen, the projected picture that brings the money to the industry. Everything finally and absolutely depends upon the projection of the individual theatre on the screen to bring out those qualities that are so nearly life-like and real and to bring out that value that has been put into the production. When the managers realize the secret of putting on their screens all that is actually in the film, then their box office receipts will directly correspond with the value that is in the picture."

We Take Exceptions

We justly take exception to the statements in that article. We believe we have no less than three good reasons for taking such exception.

In the first place, after all the educational effort that has been put forth in the past years to prevent the things charged in this article we are not ready to admit without argument that these efforts have been all in vain.

Secondly, everyday personal observation in theatres has convinced us that the exhibitors and projectionists are, on the whole, wise-awake to the importance of good projection and that they are making earnest effort to bring themselves to a high standing in their respective business.

Thirdly, we are not at all ready to admit so forcibly that reduced box office receipts are entirely the fault of the poor projection.

Not So Stupid

Concerning the first two points we do not believe that theatre managers and projectionists, in general, are quite so stupid and shiftless as Mr. Cuffe points them. No, indeed! It is possible that these remarks on personal observations in theatres on the West Coast but at that we doubt whether these accusations would apply in the sweeping manner he indicates.

Sufficient it to say that, in the East, at least, when a theatre suffers poor business, the first thing that is usually subjected to close scrutiny is the quality of projection—and we have every reason to believe correspondence with other theatres, to believe that this holds true in other sections of the country also. Theatre men are concerned for a failing to fail prey to every patented device for improving their projection.

On the other hand, to admit such a charge would but be an admission to a graver one that the various trade and technical publications, the S. M. P. E., and the efforts of the various unions had been wasted entirely. This is obviously far from being the true case as a little reflection on facts will bear out.

Not Alone Projection

With reference to our third point we do not believe that all the good projection in the world will correct the evils of a poor picture plot or poor photography.

Mr. Cuffe speaks nonchalantly of the state of perfection which has been attained in the producing end of the business but the fact remains that of all the thousands of motion pictures produced the total of those having repeated value can be counted upon the fingers of one hand.

We call this a rather poor showing. The reason for it is not hard to find. The principal thing in present day pictures seems to be to strike some hold on popular appeal. Heart Interest as it is called. Such appeal is unusually hard to continuously maintain.

The Picture Quadrangle

As we see it, the success of this picture business rests squarely upon four things. These four things are good stories, good casts, good photography, and good projection.

The lack of any one of these is sufficient to kill the show and explain poor box office receipts.

It seems hardly fair, Mr. Cuffe, to put the onus on the exhibitor and projectionist with their limited capital and limited education when the producer with wealth enough to buy the services of the best brains and experience available falls down on the job.
Low Cost Quality Projection

There is no apparatus or light source available for motion picture projection that surpasses Incandescent Lamp Projection for economy of operation or quality and dependability of screen illumination.

The incandescent lamp lowers projection cost from 33% to 75% because it requires much less electrical power than the standard arc.

The light from the incandescent lamp is steady and of a tonal quality that brings out greater depth of pictures and adds to their attractiveness. It is a soft light that will not tire the eyes of the audience.

The light source is definitely fixed. Light is spread evenly over the entire screen. Shadows are eliminated.

Incandescent lamp projection greatly improves operating conditions. There are no fumes, dust or excessive heat. Once properly adjusted the optical system needs no further attention. The best projectionists favor theatres using incandescent lamp projection.

Full particulars as to the adaptability of incandescent projection to your theatre, cost of installing and operating, etc., will be sent to you free on request.

Necessity of Ballyhoo for Success in Modern Showmanship

By William F. Libman, Pres. Libman-Spanger Corp.

A MONG the definitions of the word "Lobby", Webster of dictionary fame assures us that it means "those who frequent the ante room of a legislative hall for the purpose of influencing legislators."

Were that same compiler to see the magnificent lobbies leading into today's most successful motion picture theatres, no doubt he'd define a lobby display as a "means of influencing those who enter the theatre."

The showing of motion pictures as a most important unit of the amusement industry has developed its own peculiar and necessary architectural and technical features as is apparent in the evolutionary period from the store show of earlier days to the cinema palaces of the present.

Behind the entire structure of the exhibiting business however we find the same compelling element that has been the basis of the show business from the beginning, and that is "the ballyhoo." This ballyhoo is ever present in some form or other, whether it is used by the showman exhibiting his three headed calf at present inside or Uncle Sam recruiting his army and navy.

From the producer who advertises his wares in the trade press to the exhibitor who informs his public of the current attractions, the old ballyhoo or the show-the-folks-what-you-have stuff is always there.

Could the show business exist without resorting to this attention compelling element? Hardly, for just as long as men are engaged in providing amusement for the public, just so long will it be necessary to appeal to that same public for patronage.

Take the circus or the "big top" for example. Is there any one who hasn't got the biggest kind of a thrill as he stood before the big bulging, highly colored painted canvases that are erected outside of the side show which houses the numerous freaks. And what draws the millions of people into the side show every season? Is it the way the Barker combs his hair? Not on your life; it's the suggestion of what he's going to see inside that the big canvas outside gave him that carries Mr. Average Man into the sideshow tent. And it's a cinch that without the painted canvas ballyhoo, there's many a freak that would wonder where the next cup of coffee was coming from.

So much for the ballyhoo of the circus. Let's take ballyhoo of legitimate every day merchandise or storekeeping. Where is the merchant's ballyhoo? Why it's right in that little old store window which experts have improved so in the past few years.

Today's best store windows are constructed so that the minimum of copper frame is used to hold the glass in place. And why? Just simply so that Mr. Retailer has as much unobstructed glass surface as possible behind which to show what he's selling.

And suppose an ordinance were enacted that demanded every store keeper to board up his windows so the public couldn't see what he's selling. Can you imagine what an imposing array of indignant retailers would march on to the City Hall? And just visualize the eloquent arguments that would be advanced in favor of the priceless value of the store window as a ballyhoo.

Why does the modern chain drug store spend millions annually for dressing its windows. And do you suppose for a moment that the chain cigar store management spends similar sums simply because the poor window fan? There's only one reason why the biggest successful men who direct the affairs of these companies carefully appropriate these huge sums because they realize the unlimited value of window display.

If any exhibitor thinks these statements are overdrawn just let him open up a little cigar store just across the street from a chain cigar store and build his store without any windows in it at all, and it's a sure fire bet that he'll certainly experience all the emotions of galloping starvation waiting for patronage.

So much for the store window. Now let's get down to the question of the appeal which general attractiveness carries with it. And it is in this particular field that the writer feels altogether at home in. And the question of attractiveness is an extremely important one where the purchasing public is concerned. We are living today in an age of refinement and education. To prove it we only need to compare today's department store and ad with those of a dozen years ago. The same folks that go out looking for the best house furnishings are the ones who know the difference between an attractive theatre and one that's unattractive. The public today realizes the value of decorative art more than ever before.

And that there's an irresistible appeal in things artistic and pleasing has been apparent since the hand of the Creator moulded this earth. Just to prove what a big influence a little picture will have on its surroundings, go into some home whose atmosphere of coziness you've always admired, and strip the pictures off the walls.

Then stand back and look over the results. What a different atmosphere is created at once. The warmth and friendliness of the room is gone. Now take down the mirror over the little console table. The bare wall behind it adds still more to the lack of cheerfulness and comfort that prevails. The psychology of pictures no doubt is what prompted a wise man of old to observe that no home is a home until at least one picture is hung on its walls.

And why do you suppose that prisons and corrective institutions all have that "institutional look"? It's because of the lack of that same element—the absence of a cheerful picture in a cheerful frame to break the monotony of hard empty walls.

And yet there are still some exhibitors who do not realize that a tremendous appeal that an attractive lobby can carry. An appeal that reaches out to every normal man, woman and child that lives and breathes.

But then the writer realizes too that the running of a theatre involves an attraction to a hundred details but to you busy men who run the theatres of the nation these few articles are directed with the hope that before long every manager will realize that the theatre doesn't start from where the doorman takes the tickets, but it begins at that point where something about its front stops the busy passerby and lures him into a seat.

Not Mere Glass

CINEPHOR Projection Lenses and Condensers are made from select optical glass

CINEPHOR Projection Lenses are regarded as the work of precision optics—the division where the measurement of a millionth of an inch is not left to the imagination. CINEPHOR Condensers, made of clear, white, heat resisting optical glass, supplement and should be used with CINEPHOR Projection Lenses. The CINEPHOR Optical System, providing approximately 50% more illumination (when used with Mazdas) than any other combination of commercial lenses, is invariably recognized by impartial critics as superior.

Million Dollar Atlantic City Stanley House Opened

The $1,000,000 Stanley Theatre at Kentucky Avenue and the Boardwalk, Atlantic City, was opened on July 3rd with a special performance. Jules E. Mastbaum, President of the Stanley Company, made a short address of welcome and introduced Joseph P. Perksie, City Solicitor at Atlantic City, Mayor W. Freeund Kendrick, of Philadelphia, and Senator James Walker of New York, all of whom delivered addresses.

Signor Romberg, the eminent composer, was guest conductor of the Stanley Symphony Orchestra, composed of forty members under the direction of David Kaplen, and the musical program was exceptionally fine.

Karl Bonavitz, master organist, who has signed a long-term contract with the Stanley Company, and will be permanently located at Atlantic City, played several selections on the new organ.

The new theatre occupies an extremely desirable site and was designed and constructed by Hoffman & Henon under the supervision of Mr. Mastbaum. The Stanley Company holds a long-term lease on the site, which is owned by James T. and George H. Hew.

The color scheme of the theatre is blue, gold and white and one of the most striking features of the auditorium is the crystal chandelier of colored lights, weighing 2,000 pounds, which can be lowered to the floor. The latest type chairs have been provided and the seating capacity is 2,005, the largest in Atlantic City.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur and Admiral Eberle posed with Ramon Novarro after they had given him his diploma in "True Blue" (Metro-Goldwyn).
The final safeguard for success—

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

To make the most of a picture from the box office viewpoint you carefully plan the publicity notices, newspaper advertisements, lobby displays, tie-ups.

But one more safeguard for success remains—photographic quality. Look in the film margin for the black-lettered identification “Eastman” and “Kodak” and you know that the screen will show all the quality of the negative.

When all's said and done—
What you want—
Is Something Real to sell your public—
Something they want to buy—

Well, what does the public buy in motion picture entertainment? We suspect they buy these things:

STARS — real stars, whose names can drag 'em in, regardless.

BOOKS — not just any old book, but books the millions read and talk about.

PLAYS — plays that have made real hits and get talked about far from Broadway.

TITLES — titles that can dig into the public mind by reason of many ways to exploit them.

DIRECTORS — Pictures made by men the public can trust to do a good job. Such as the men who made The Covered Wagon, Robin Hood, Way Down East, Peter Pan, North of 36, Are Parents People, Back Home and Broke, Miss Bluebeard, The Thief of Bagdad, Adventure.

NAT. ADVERTISING — Public confidence in productions made by an organization that is willing to bet its advertising money its product is right.

STORIES — stories that hold interest, that enthral—a chance to laugh a little, something to thrill at, love that makes the world go round, obstacles to overcome, a little jazz, a little pep, a dig at the funny bone or a tug at the heart strings. In a word, stories that entertain.
Well then, how does THE GREATER FORTY fill the order?

The Last Word in Theatre-Cooling Equipment—
As just installed in the Capitol Theatre, New York

"At first motion picture theatres featured only motion pictures. Then they introduced orchestras, diversions, light effects, and vaudeville numbers. And now they point with pride to their cooling systems.

"We stopped in the Capitol the other day and found the theatre so delightfully cool that we went down into the basement to investigate. It was thoroughly explained, but all we remember is that there were large motors and condensers, twelve thousand feet of cooling pipes, and six thousand feet of condensing coils. Water is pumped through the roof, thereby cooling off the theatre. We also registered little gasps of astonishment at the huge machinery and the compressors, but can't recall whether our guide said the water was taken from gas, or gas taken from the water. Anyway, the theatre is refreshingly cool."

THE CAPITOL THEATRE has just completed the installation of the largest theatre cooling plant in the world. The problem of cooling the air of the world's largest theatre was a particularly unique one, because of its enormous size and seating capacity. After an extensive study of the various types of refrigerating plants, Major Edward Bowes, managing director, arranged with the Helmer Air Conditioning Company for the construction of a special type of plant which will meet the required conditions. This cooling plant is the largest installed in any theatre in the world and has a capacity of 400 tons of refrigeration.

The Temptress

Seldom have so many big dramatic moments been crowded into a story as in this master achievement of the great Ibanez, considered by the industry as the prize picture story of the year. Tense, brilliant, romantic is this drama of an irresistible Temptress. It flashes its fascinating course from the bandit-ridden interiors of South America to the gilded cafes of the Continent where beauty and wealth flirt madly in the drama of life. Here is dramatic material out of which a tremendous box-office production is being made, directed by a genius of the screen, played by an All-Star Cast!

And now comes

The Torrent

NO WONDER the world gasped when Ibanez published this startling novel of a love between an Opera beauty and a handsome youth. "The Torrent" is one of the most gripping romances ever written, exciting in its portrayal of a great Passion, yet tender, human, touching in its immortal love theme. Ibanez' name is associated with the greatest money-makers of screen history. "The Torrent" will make his name more than ever the symbol of box-office success.

Felix the Cat

26 new one-reel Animated Cartoons by PAT SULLIVAN

What a drawing power Felix is for a little fellow! No other single-reel comedy star can boast as many friends who would pay their money at the box-office to see him alone. And he's better than ever now that he's joined the fast-steppers in the Educational Pictures family.

“I've gone over to Educational with my bag of tricks. And I've got a host of new ones that I've been practicing on for a long time. My first one will be out soon. Better see your Educational Exchange about it right away.”

A Great New Comedy Box-Office Bet

LUPINO LANE

The newest addition to Educational's great line-up of comedy stars is a master of pantomime second to none. He has a record of unbroken successes on the stage in both Europe and America. His appearance in pictures, both Short Subjects and features, met with instant public approval. Even such a conservative newspaper as the New York Evening Post showed the greatest enthusiasm in discussing his work in "Isn't Life Wonderful?" You can bank on a real box-office bet when the Post talks this way:

"We wish to rise and state that Mr. Lane's work... touches a high mark in comedy which no screen actor save Chaplin has ever reached...."

"We consider that Lupino Lane's work in 'Isn't Life Wonderful?' puts this comedian in a class by himself, and that, given the proper stories, he has it in him to become one of our best makers of sincere laughter."

Here's a great new box-office bet that means additional profit for every theatre that books and boosts his pictures.

So you'd better sign up now for the six two-reel

Greater Movie Season Bulletins

Because we construe the Greater Movie Season to mean a Greater Business Season for the entire motion picture industry, we are contributing this page for the cause. For the remaining week preceding the season's opening date of August third, this page will carry the important bulletins to be issued to the various branches of the industry.

W. A. JOHNSTON.

The fuse is lighted. The big burst of advertising for Greater Movie Season throughout the United States is about to cut loose.

When the Greater Movie Season Campaign was first outlined, it was agreed that it would be a success if thirty-five cities participated.

More than three hundred cities have joined in organized campaigns and, throughout the country, theatres in hundreds of smaller towns are having celebrations of their own.

It is a celebration that is truly national in scope. Letters received from exhibitors and General Managers of the various local campaigns indicate that the theatre owners want Greater Movie Season made an annual event and that next year there hardly will be a town anywhere that will not have its campaign.

In Detroit, 750 taxicabs will carry a sticker reading “Take This Cab To The Movies. It's GREATER MOVIE SEASON. They're Bigger and Better Than Ever.”

There is a city ordinance in Detroit forbidding advertising on taxicabs, but, because of the importance of the campaign, this ordinance was waived.

Airplanes will drop 20,000 passes—some from every theatre in the city—over Philadelphia on August 3rd.

The Dagmar Automobile Co. has contributed a $2,200 car for a prize in the Philadelphia Greater Movie Season Contest.

W. A. STEFFESE, President of the Northwest Exhibitors, has written all members of his organization urging them to take part in Greater Movie Season, and the whole Northwest is coming in. Even the smallest theatres in the smallest towns in the Northwest are joining. Though they may do no more than to post a few one-sheets and to distribute a few heralds, they're going to celebrate.

"Radio Pageant" will be staged in New York City, from station WEAF, on the night of Monday, August 3rd. Arrangements are being made to broadcast an elaborate radio program from Los Angeles on the same night. Greater Movie Season Committees in other cities are preparing other radio programs for the same night, so that the entire country will be blanketed with Greater Movie Season Radio programs on that night.

Greater Movie Season articles by Rex Beach, George Ade, Wallace Irwin, Rita Weiman, Temple Bailey, Richard Connell, Meredith Nicholson, John Emerson and Anita Loos, Elmer Davis, Terry Ramsaye and Pamela Wynne have been sent to all General Managers of Greater Movie Season Committees.

These articles are of unusual merit and newspapers everywhere are glad to get them. They will be released generally the last week in July.

The Denver Greater Movie Season Parade will have as a contributed feature the Fort Logan Military Band. To the Indianapolis Parade have been contributed two excellent bands, the Newsboys' Band and the Navy Band.

In Dallas, small bands, selected from members of the theatre orchestras, will play short concerts in front of each theatre at 7:30 o'clock each evening.

New York City plans a city-wide bugle call at 9 o'clock each evening. A bugler will mount the canopy of each theatre and at 9 sharp they all will blow the same call.

The Greater Movie Season proclamation of Mayor Hylan of New York City is being issued this week. Each New York Borough President also has endorsed Greater Movie Season.
Sunday Opening

EXHIBITORS who are confronted with Sunday Blue Laws, or who desire to conduct campaigns to the public to bring about Sunday opening, will be aided by the experience of Jay Gould, of the Eagle Theatre, Montevideo, Minn., who brought Sabbath showings to his town.

The question was submitted at an election and the liberal forces won. Here are some of the arguments used by the Sunday opening committee:

"The committee responsible for this circular and representative of the citizenship in general of our city, is in favor of a continuance of Sunday pictures for the following reasons:

"1. The Sunday moving picture is responsible for a better class of pictures being shown in Montevideo.

"2. It furnishes a comfortable place and wholesome entertainment for the young people who are seeking diversion on this day. Is it not better that we know where they are?

"3. The great minister, Dr. Chas. H. Spurgeon, put it in a nutshell when he said: ‘Your Sunday bills and laws pertaining to religion seem to me to be all wrong. I should be afraid to borrow help from Government; it would look to me as if I rested on an arm of flesh, instead of depending on the living God.’ John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, also has aptly said, ‘Condemn no man for not thinking as you think. Let every one enjoy the full and free liberty of thinking for himself. Leave him to God, the Judge of all.’

"4. We believe that it is only fair to those who wish to attend Sunday pictures for their recreation, pastime, pleasure or whatever you may wish to call it, to have that privilege.

"5. We ask that you soberly, thoughtfully and conscientiously compare as Sunday indulgences the reading of a book in the home with that of seeing and reading the same book on the screen. Also the Sunday newspaper with its comic section, fiction and news of a good, bad and indifferent variety with the selected productions presented on the screen. In fact, compare the Sunday picture with any of the pleasures participated in by at least a majority of those who may be opposed to them and the Sunday picture could hardly suffer from the comparison.

"6. The motion picture is often compared to the public press and it is a question which would have the greater power if used for the same purpose. Then is not the paragraph in the United States Constitution which reads, ‘Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the free dom of speech, or of the press,’ quite patent to the issue? Also freedom of religion is guaranteed by the Constitution. Why then should individual religiousists attempt to curtail the freedom of others?

"7. A few may wish to return to the old Sunday Blue laws. In fact, a bill was before the last Congress and will be introduced in the present Congress that if enacted into law will practically re-establish them nationally. This committee is opposed to any such law and is also opposed to permitting the entering wedge being driven in at home by forbidding those who wish to do so from looking at pictures on Sunday in Montevideo.

"It is in keeping with our Constitution, our society, our many fraternal organizations and in fact the basis of successful democracies to be tolerant, to respect the other person's views. Let us not try to take away from some other person that which he may enjoy and at the same same does us no harm. Especially so since we are not willing to give up our particular form of diversion on the Sabbath Day. This is not only intolerant but selfish.

"In conclusion, we quote from the Declaration of Independence: ‘We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.’"

August 1, 1925  MOTION PICTURE NEWS  Vol. XXXII  No. 5

GREETING AND FAREWELL

JOHN McCORMICK and Al Rockett were guests at a dinner given by First National executives and directors at the Hollywood Athletic Club on the night of July 19. It was a combination welcome home and good bye party. McCormick having returned from Europe and Al Rockett heading for New York and First National headquarters. M. C. Levee acted as master of ceremonies. Among those present were Frank Lloyd, Edwin Carewe, Al Santell, Joseph Skirboll, N. H. Brower, John Francis Dillon, Robert Frazer, Lewis Stone, Freddy Fralick, Hugh Allen, Victor McLagen, Lloyd Hughes, Fred Beeton, David Thompson, Jack Hawkes, James R. Quirk, Al Green, Harry D. Wilson, F. B. Albom, Clifford Butler, Harry Seymour and Charles Murray.

WINNING HIS CASE

HARRY CAREY has just won his three year legal fight with the government by the decision of Secretary of Interior Work awarding him a clear deed to his "Harry Carey Rancho" in San Franciscoquito Canyon, forty miles from Los Angeles. In 1918 Carey took out his homestead entry on this property and since then has spent nearly $40,000 in improvements. He recently established a Trading Post there that has become one of the points of interest around L. A.

Three years ago the government intervened and declared that as the land had oil possibilities it was not subject to homesteading. The land officials finally decided, however, that the oil possibilities were too indefinite to deprive Carey of his claim. During the litigation the western star has continued work on his pictures.

RIESFELD REMINISCENCES

R. HUGO RIESFELD looked over some five-year old Rialto programs the other day and made some interesting discoveries. While many of the 1920 screen favorites have vanished, quite a few are just as popular to-day as they were then. During the week of July 4, 1920, Ethel Clayton was starred in a Paramount picture called "The Ladder of Lies." In the cast was Clyde Fillmore. What has become of him? Irving Cummings had a part too. Now he is a director! In July, 1920 Robert Warwick and Lois Wilson starred at the Rialto in "The City of Masks." But what has become of the other members of the cast, such as Edward Jobson, J. M. Dumont, Robert Dunbar and T. E. Duncan? Tommy Meighan's cast in the "Prince Chape" are practically all going strong in 1925. Among the missing, as uncovered by the Rialto records, is Mary Miles Minter and Roscoe Arbuckle, the latter hen starring in "The Roundup" and "The Life of The Party."

HYMAN COOLS OFF

THE sea breezes are sweeping soothingly around the person of Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre. He is rusticating by what the poet called "the sad sea waves" in the neighborhood of Atlantic City and sends us a post card offering ironic sympathy for the unfortunates whom fate compels to remain in sizzling, torrid Gotham. But—after all, he's got to come back, sooner or later, and maybe someone will mock him by mail from a safe distance.
MORE MARRIAGES

COUNl that day lost that doesn't reveal a marriage in screen circles. Whether it is the atmosphere of some choice "location" or the social contact or something which spells romance when the cameraman begins to grind, there's no getting away from the fact that film circles are developing a strong heart interest—not found in the plots.

Out at Culver City the other day saw three sham weddings and a real one being celebrated. The genuine ceremony found Edward Brophy, unit production manager for the Christy Cabanne company, being united to Anne Paulette, secretary to Norma and Constance Talmadge. The jokers didn't kidnap the bride, but the husband was seized, handcuffed, and placed in a cell for two hours, despite the tearful protests of the Missus.

For a real novel setting the ceremony performed last week on the diamond at the Polo Grounds wins the solid silver dinner set. Right where Frankie Frisch does his stuff around second base—where the double plays are started—found Maybell Pratt of Carbon City, Pa., and Rutger Farnsworth of Rockford, Ark., saying "I do." The wedding marked the culmination of a romance which began last spring at Sarasota, Fla., the training camp of the Giants.

John McGraw, who wrote the Pathé serial, "Play Ball," was best man. As for the ball players they formed two lines—a la military—crossed their bats like officers cross their swords and the happy couple strolled through the "arch."

THE BIOGRAPH MUSKETEERS

HE three musketeers of the old Biograph days are together again. When you see "Heir-Loons," you will discover Ralph Lewis, Sam de Grasse and Frank Campeau—pioneers in the celluloid drama—entertaining you as they did in the good, old days. The old Biograph lot is to motion picture history what Plymouth Rock is to American history. Incidentally the three veterans have hit upon the idea of a great actor-family reunion—which will take place when "The Birth of a Nation" is shown in Los Angeles in a few weeks. Lewis, you will remember, portrayed the unforgettable role of Stoneman, while de Grasse played Sumner. Campeau later became a member of the Reliance-Majestic Company, and is best remembered for his Trampas in "The Virginian."

CODY IN VILLAIN FADE-OUT

THE sly, smirking and threatening scowl will no longer disfigure Lew Cody's countenance. This purveyor of villainy on the screen is tired of portraying bad men and in the future will hit up the comedy parts. Cody acknowledges that the fans have come to look upon him as the real thing in rough stuff, but hereafter they will have to accept him as a good guy, with comic trimmings. As the financially embarrassed prince in Marshall Neilan's production of "The Sporting Venus", Cody made a tremendous comedy hit and instead of thrills and chills he is slated for a real laugh-provoker in the coming production—"An Exchange of Wives," directed by Hobart Henley.
MRS. EMILIE JOHNSON, author of "The Last Edition," which F. B. O. will distribute, wasn't content to take a chance on her newspaper atmosphere until she came into contact with the genuine color stuff. Never having worked on a daily, she felt that she ought to get some real first-hand experience. So she approached a Los Angeles city editor, confessed that she was merely a writer of fiction, but willing to take a place on his staff and learn how the game was played. The desk man took her at her word. He sent Mrs. Johnson all "over the map" so far as his particular section of the country was concerned. She rushed to fires, dashed in and out of police headquarters, gave the morgue the "once-over" when necessary and in every way qualified herself as a busy member of the Fourth Estate.

And what is Mrs. Johnson's verdict? "I always wanted to do newspaper work," says the lady. "To me it has ever been a profession full of interest and fascination. But I never had a chance in my youth to do that kind of work. Part of my life was spent in Sweden, and there the opportunities for a girl to enter journalism aren't very rosy. Then when I came to America I was too busy raising a family to do it."

We are willing to agree as to the fascination of reportorial work. But we are also willing to bet that Mrs. Johnson doesn't adopt it as a regular profession. For the money is in the movies.

ALICE IN REAL ESTATE

W. J. Collins, the Warner Brothers star, is the latest screen luminary to demonstrate that one can keep a nifty eye on the speculation field and profit thereby during the intervals when the camera isn't working. Miss Calhoun, in conjunction with J. J. Curn and Mark M. Hansen, has completed negotiations for erection and operation of a large new Hollywood theatre. A sum of $2,000,000 is said to be involved in the deal, including rentals and cost of improvements.

The holding syndicate, represented by T. Larkin Griffith of W. I. Hollingsworth, H. J. Beck and J. J. Millar, has secured a ninety-year lease on the Jewett property on Hollywood boulevard, between Bronson Avenue and Gower Street, at a rental of $900,-000. The new owners of the site will improve it at once with a theatre building to cost $500,000. When completed the theatre will be leased for a twenty-five year period to the syndicate of which Alice Calhoun reigns as queen.

A sum in excess of $500,000 is the rental which Miss Calhoun and her associates have agreed to pay over the twenty-five year period. The auditorium portion of the structure will have a seating capacity of 1250, two sections of the mezzanine floor will be enclosed in glass, one to be devoted exclusively to theatre parties, the other utilized as ladies' and gentlemen's smoking room during the screening of the picture.

Only the other day Lila Lee was reported as having made a big killing in Wall Street. It looks as though our feminine screen stars are fast developing into financial magnates, leaving their male contemporaries among the "also rans."

THAT DE MILLE GIRL

CECILIA DE MILLE, the attractive young daughter of Cecil B. De Mille, has gone into the movies. She will appear in her father's production, "The Road to Yesterday," which is now being filmed. Part of the picture has the Grand Canyon for a setting, so when De Mille took his company to this wonder spot, Cecilia went along for a vacation. However, the director interrupted her happy hours by drafting her into service as an actress, as he needed another character in a hurry. Cecilia gave ample evidence of her heredity in dramas by playing her part naturally, and without being 'camera conscious.'

HAVING THEIR SAY

TWO dignitaries connected with Metro-Goldwyn had their say recently when talking shop. One was Irving Thalberg, associate executive for M-G-M, the other was Hobart Henley, the director. Thalberg took as his text—"The Opportunity for In-devolved Expression," and enlarged upon his theme by declaring the director of today can express his individuality more than at any other time in the history of the industry.

Trixie Friganza in one of the laughable scenes filmed at the Grand Canyon for "The Road to Yesterday" (Producers Dist. Corp.) under the personal direction of Cecil B. De Mille.
Lewis Stone signs a long-term contract with First National for his services, which have been much in demand. At the left is Al Rockett, who represents First National, and at the right is Freddie Fralick, Stone's business manager.

"In the not-so-distant past," the executive stated, "the director's worries started before his story was chosen and piled up throughout the production. He cast his own players, found his locations, supervised construction of sets and passed judgment on all the minor details, later attending to the cutting and editing. Now his mind is relieved of all the time-consuming details of production—and he can devote himself to infusing all his artistry and ability into making a good picture."

Hobart Henley championed the screen in his arguments. He declared the stage has been the god-father of the screen, but now that the child has become old enough to think for itself, it is, like most children, leading its parent a merry chase.

Says Henley:

"The screen in the last fifteen years has developed faster and become more of a force in American contemporary life than the stage can ever hope to. The greatest reason may be that a small can of film is much easier and less expensive to transport over the country than a troupe of actors—and for fifty or sixty-five cents, the theatre owner may see the best talent available on the screen at any time of the day, while people living even in fairly sizeable towns have to wait months to see a star of any calibre, and then pay $3.00 or $4.00 to see him supported by a second or third rate company."

Hopi Whoops

The Hopi Indians on the reservation at Prescott, Arizona, are going to whoop it up for Hunt Stromberg one of these early days. The tribal ceremonies are considered the most remarkable and picturesque of all Indian rites—and are held but once a year. Naturally, all the Hops who have migrated elsewhere return, just like the visiting firemen, to participate in the doings. Stromberg and his cameramen are down there to catch the ceremonies for "The Last Frontier," the picture originally planned by Thomas H. Ince, which is now being completed as a testimonial to the famous producer.

C. Baker Joins Inspiration

Graham Baker, known to filmland at large for many years as scenario Editor for Vitagraph, and later with Fox, has signed up with Inspiration Pictures. Mr. Baker is now engaged in framing up the plot of "Just Suppose" featuring Richard Barthelmess. The fans will remember him as the author of the successful scenarios—"The Kreutzer Sonata," "Loyalties" and "The Winding Stairs."
Paramount Negotiating with Balaban and Katz

No Decision Reached Yet on Big Merger

FAMOUS Players-Lasky Corporation and Balaban & Katz are engaged in negotiations looking toward a merger of interests, under just what arrangements remains to be seen. Authentic news of the proposed merger came to this publication this week from its Chicago correspondent, who telegraphed as follows:

"Reports in the daily press that Barney Balaban had returned from New York and made the statement that the Balaban & Katz-Paramount negotiations for merger were under way sent B. & K. stock to a new high level of 83, on Monday.

"Mr. Balaban would not confirm the merger report but admitted negotiations of some kind were going on."

If the merger is consummated, it will be the biggest of its kind in the history of the industry and will have a far-reaching effect.

When the Chicago wire was read to Harold B. Franklin, head of the Famous Players theatre department, he said: "I can add nothing to the telegram you have just read me."

Meanwhile, Balaban & Katz are rapidly extending their interests in the Middle West. It was reported that an agreement had been made with Fitzpatrick & McElroy, who operate a large chain in Illinois, Michigan and Indiana. At the Fitzpatrick & McElroy offices in Chicago, the report was neither confirmed nor denied. "Nothing to say," was the only comment made.

Specifically, it was reported that the controlling stock in the Michigan City Theatre Corporation had been bought by Fitzpatrick & McElroy in association with Balaban & Katz. This brings all four theatres in Michigan City under one control and gives Fitzpatrick & McElroy a chain of 41 houses owned and 50 with which they have hooking arrangements.

The Michigan Film Review this week stated that the reported agreement between Balaban & Katz and the Fitzpatrick & McElroy group specifies that the latter will keep out of Chicago in return for which B. & K. promise not to enter any of the towns in which Fitzpatrick & McElroy are established. Another provision, says the Michigan, is a paper to be signed by Balaban & McElroy which would give first choice on certain film product for their downtown territory.

Through Lubliner & Trinz, an affiliated organization, Balaban & Katz have also secured an interest in the Lynch Theatres, Inc., comprising 23 houses in Chicago and adjacent suburban cities. Several of these theatres have large seating capacity. It is reported that Balaban & Katz will buy pictures for the Lynch circuit and that this would seem a natural development of the deal.

The Lynch transaction brings the number of theatres affiliated with Balaban & Katz up to two hundred. Outstanding among the affiliations of B. & K. are the Kunsky circuit and A. H. Blank.

Both of the latter are First National franchiseholders, as are B. & K. In view of the proposed merger with Famous Players, interest was created in the industry as to the possible effect this would have on First National-Paramount relations.

It is well known, of course, that Sam Katz is a very important figure in First National. The scope of the merger negotiations might therefore be very wide, but no authoritative information could be obtained on this point.

In well-informed circles, it is being said that the battle-lines in this most recent merger battle between the big producer-distributors will be clearly defined before many weeks have passed. In this connection, many observers are hazarding the guess that Paramount had a distinct influence on the recent West Coast Theatres deal, which was, at one time, all set with Fox, and afterwards fell through. Fox obtaining a minority interest only.

When the smoke of battle cleared away, First National had control of the West Coast chain, through the formation of a voting trust, with E. V. Richards, Jr., head of the governing board which operates the chain.

This led some observers to the belief that a strong influence had intervened to prevent the West Coast circuit from going outside First National. Or, to put it another way, the Katz-Paramount negotiations were already in progress when the West Coast deal came up.

As stated before, this point of view lies in the realm of guesses, but there are strong indications that it has a foundation.

It was also observed this week that Famous Players had made an unsuccessful offer direct for the West Coast circuit, this being the second instance in which the former company had sought to acquire one of the big factors in First National's hitherto being, of course, the Nathan H. Gordon chain in New England. The latter deal was consummated.

If the Balaban & Katz-Paramount merger becomes a reality, and results in a combination of theatre interests, Famous Players will then directly or indirectly have control over or a voice in the operation of the following, which have always been accounted outstanding factors in First National: the Balaban & Katz; A. H. Blank and John H. Kunsky interests.

It will be recalled that E. E. Shaver, foreign manager for Famous Players, in a recent statement, thus far not denied, declared that Paramount had 358 theatres in the United States. If the interpretation of the situation as given above is correct, then nothing but a merger between Balaban & Katz, taking into account the latter's affiliated interests, would bring the Paramount list up to more than five hundred.

And, if the West Coast chain can be figured as being in line through the deal made last week in which Sam Katz must have played a big part, then Famous Players and its associates would have control or an equivalent over about 700 theatres.

It is some such analysis as this which lends close observers to call the present situation "the battle of the giants."

In any event, the extension of Paramount theatre interests goes southeast in this direction. Negotiations are pending for a pooling arrangement with Nathan Robbins, operator of New York upstate houses, ten in number in Utica, Syracuse and Watertown.

The arrangement, if reported, would provide for a pool to be operated by the Famous Players theatre department. The Famous houses are located in Yonkers, Rough IKE. Keep, Lockport, Newburgh and other towns, most of which have been acquired recently.

All-Night Bugaboo is Again Up in Seattle

Seattle's ever-present film bugaboo, the question of "all-night" movies, has sprung up again to break all quiet into the motion picture situation in the Seattle City Council chambers. For the last year Councilman Robert Hesket has been attempting to force the closing of all motion picture houses at midnight. Up to this time, negotiations are pending for a pooling arrangement with Nathan Robbins, operator of New York upstate houses, ten in number in Utica, Syracuse and Watertown.

The arrangement, if reported, would provide for a pool to be operated by the Famous Players theatre department. The Famous houses are located in Yonkers, Rough IKE. Keep, Lockport, Newburgh and other towns, most of which have been acquired recently.

Chaplin-Mayer Picture Company Dissolved

Papers noting the voluntary dissolution of the Chaplin-Mayer Picture Company of New York were filed with the secretary of state in Albany during the past week. The company was incorporated on September 30, 1919, with a capitalization of $1,000,000. The officers of the company were Louis B. Mayer, of Hollywood, Calif., president; Colman Levin of Boston, Mass., vice-president; J. Robert Rubin, of New York city, secretary, and Oscar Grosberg, of Boston, treasurer.
C O N S I D E R A B L E attention was given in the trade this week to reports that the Crandall Circuit in Washington, D. C., one of the most important in the country, was about to be sold. Morro Pictures News made direct inquiry through its Washington correspondent, who reported as follows:

"Crandall officials deny circuit will be sold. Several offers have been made for the Crandall theatres in the last 90 days, but none has been given serious consideration."

Reports concerning the Crandall chain were revived when it became known that William Fox was in Washington this week.

It had also been reported that the Stanley Company of America, which is expanding toward the southward, would take over the Crandall theatres, but Stanley officials also denied that such negotiations were pending. The Stanley interests have recently acquired four theatres that were for several years owned by the Topkins-Gins interests in Wilmington, Del.

Among other circuit news was the announcement by Walter Vincent of the purchase of the large Victoria theatre and office building in Altoona, Pa., by Wilmer & Vincent.

This property was built only a few years ago, and owned at first by A. Hanes George, who at one time owned and operated the Victoria theatre in Harrisburg. The Altoona property, however, subsequently passed into the hands of Lee & Karides, from whom Wilmer & Vincent have just made the purchase. The consideration was not made public. The papers are to be passed in a week or two.

While both Mr. Vincent and C. F. Ford Hopkins, Harrisburg representatives of the Wilmer & Vincent Company, confirmed the purchase of the Altoona property, they declined to discuss the report that the company acquired the theatre for the purpose of transferring it subsequently to the Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation.

It is reported that the theatre will be ready to close a deal whereby it will acquire sixteen Pennsylvania theatres from Wilmer & Vincent.

While it is believed in authoritative though unofficial circles that the Altoona will be included among those that Famous-Players-Lasky contemplate buying, and that the Wilmer & Vincent purchase of the Altoona theatre was made merely to facilitate the bigger deal, neither Mr. Vincent nor Mr. Hopkins would confirm this impression. Nor would they yet admit that Famous-Players-Lasky will acquire any of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres.

A new building will be erected at the northeast corner of Linwood boulevard and Troost avenue, Kansas City, has been designated as the site for a 14-story shop building and the largest motion picture theatre in Kansas City, a 90-day option to purchase the tract having been given by M. H. Cohen of Des Moines to W. C. Gumm, who was represented by Al Finkelstein of the Harry Finkelstein Realty Company. The price stipulated was $500,000.

It has been persistently rumored in Kansas City for the last two months that Metro-Goldwyn was negotiating for a large suburban theatre. Mr. Gumm admitted negotiations were pending for the leasing of the theatre to a large motion picture producer, but declined to name the company. Plans are being prepared by H. Alexander Drake, architect.

The plans provide for a theatre on the ground floor level with a seating capacity of 3,700. The theatre stage, as outlined, would be one of the largest in the city, being adequate for the largest of prologues. The estimated cost of the building, as shown in the architect's plans, would be $2,500,000, which with the ground, would be a total investment of $3,000,000.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Theatres, Inc., Detroit, W. S. Butterfield purchased the controlling interest in the stock and was elected president of the new company. His purchase of the Consolidated Theatres coming within a month after his purchase of the lease of the Powers Theatre gives him control of the amusement situation in Grand Rapids. The Majestic, Orpheum, Isis and Strand theatre are in the consolidated group. Two are straight picture houses while two play combination bills.

On July 18 the wrecking crew started tearing down the City Hall at Owosso, Michigan, which site is to be utilized for the new $200,000 Capitol Theatre, which will be exhibited by the Butterfield interests. The ceremony of tearing the ground will take place on August 1st. Plans call for completion of the theatre by the middle of December, and the formal opening will take place during the Christmas holidays.

Plans for the new theatre at Ann Arbor, Mich., are being completed, and Colonel Butterfield announces that construction work will be under way by fall. Also that work on the new Capitol Theatre at Flint will commence in the very near future.

Buffalo Council Refuses the Riverside Co. Permit

The petition of the Riverside Amusement company for a permit for the construction and operation of a moving picture theatre at Tonawanda and Prairie streets was denied this week by the Buffalo city council. Property owners and residents in the vicinity were opposed to a permit being granted. It is likely that Charles F. Boine, attorney for the petitioner, will apply for a mandamus order compelling the council to grant the permit.

The house planned was to have cost $200,000 and it was reported that the Shea Amusement company was interested in leasing it.

Loew Co. Takes Lease on Star Theatre, Cleveland

The Loew's Ohio Theatres last week acquired a ten-year lease on the Star theatre, a former downtown burlesque house in Cleveland. It is located on what is down as lower Euclid Ave. The theatre is old and dilapidated, but contracts have already been let for an entire new front and complete new equipment and interior decorations. This makes the ninth Cleveland house for Loew's Ohio. The others are the Stillman, Allen, State, Park, Mall, Alhambra, Liberty and Doan. Negotiations were completed through the offices of Joseph Laronge, Union Trust Bldg.

Samuels and Hyman to Build New Atlantic Theatre

Adolph Samuels, veteran showman in Atlanta, who owns the Alamo No. 2 theatre here, and Hyman Jacobs, financier, have jointly bought the property in West End and intend to build a block of business houses, offices and stores, and an opera-house and vaudeville theatre. The property is located on Gordon street, near Lee, and is valued at about $15,000.

Schine Corp. Will Build New Fairport House

Fairport, N. Y., is to have a new motion picture theatre. The J. Meyer Schine theatre corporation will build a house in Westaven, just west of the Jacobson block. The Schine company operate the Rivoli theatre in the same town.

Burford Acquires a Third House in Arkansas City

Roy Burford has acquired the Isis theatre in Arkansas City, Kas. Burford now controls that city, operating in addition to the Isis, the Burford, Rex and Strand theatres there.
Europe Needs Showmen in Every Branch of Industry

Vast Opportunity Seen by News Staff Man Abroad

By L. C. Moen

(Editor’s Note: This is the first of a series of articles on the European film situation, based upon personal observation, by a member of the News editorial staff who has just returned from abroad. Recognizing the growing importance of the European market and the vital changes which are taking place there, the News desired to obtain its own first-hand story of what is going on. Succeeding articles will go into the trend of production, distribution and exhibition in each of the leading European nations and in relation to the American market.)

T

HE story is told of a traveler, journeying by train across a small European country, who, upon looking from the coach window and seeing a Titian-haired damsel, wrote in his notebook the entry: “The women of this country have red hair.” Perhaps I do not quote the story quite accurately, but it will illustrate the point. Travelers are prone to base their judgment of a country on just such scanty evidence. I met a tourist in Boulogne who assured me that the French currency was about to collapse. He knew, because he had talked with a bank clerk in Paris. The next day the frame staged a substantial recovery. I met another in Hanover who had been in one German motion picture theatre, and who assured me that the movie houses were “terrible—positively terrible!” That statement, too, proved substantially untrue.

So let me state at the outset that I make no claims to omniscience in this matter of the European film situation, and that I shall try in these articles merely to set forth as clearly and honestly as possible my necessarily sketchy impressions of that field, reinforced by the opinions and statements of men far better qualified to judge of the outlook than I.

Yet even that is not easy. You can find in Europe an opinion of whatever complexity you seek. One man will assure you that the public wants nothing but American films. The very next man you meet will inform you that the public is weary of them and craves more European pictures. A producer will assure you that it is virtually impossible to finance picture making in Europe today—and another scoffs at the idea and shows you where he has finances available for a dozen films.

Still, taking the matter by and large, that is not surprising. For now, and in America, has never been noted for frankness in the giving out of information. There is a strong fiction in Europe devoted mainly to the distribution of American films, and another interested in the making and distribution of European product, so there is nothing remarkable about the fact that this should lead to a rather chaotic situation. In spite of the maze of conflicting rumors, the division reports and opinions it is possible to draw a few sound conclusions as to what is going on—and what is coming.

Let me, at the outset, express my appreciation of the courteous and co-operation that have been extended to me by every faction in my effort to gain a true picture of the situation. Producers, distributors, theatre managers, newspaper men, trade paper editors, exchange managers, American representatives, film brokers, laboratory men, players and directors, publicity men—all of these have, often at great personal inconvenience, aided me in every possible way to get at the bottom of things as directly as could be. Except for that hearty assistance and co-operation, I should have seen much less during my necessarily brief stay in each European centre.

First and foremost, I bring away from Europe the conviction that there is here a tremendous potential field and an outstanding opportunity for showmanship. Just who is going to develop that field and cash in on that opportunity remains to be seen—and battle lines are forming right now for the struggle. That struggle will not be merely American vs. European, but one American company against another, and European firms against each other, with still other factions of alliances between American and European distributors. And it is my guess that the last named, in some form, will win.

But above all, showmanship—using the word in its best sense—is the outstanding need in Europe. Showmanship in the production of box-office pictures. Showmanship in the creation of a larger picture going public. Showmanship in the operation of better theatres. And so on down the line.

Thus, far, probably no one will disagree. But the mistake that can be—and is being—made is to assume that pure and unadulterated American showmanship is the required article. That is somewhat wide of the mark. The European public is not the American public. The European and the American may be brothers under the skin, but there is a wide divergence in their tastes, their customs and their modes of thought. What is altogether proper to an American may appear shocking or, more likely, absurd to a European.

To further complicate the problem, each European country has its own peculiar problems. We, here in America, think of Europe as just “Europe,” without making any particular distinctions between one nation and another. Yet if we would stop to consider for a moment the wide difference in exhibiting conditions in, say, less advanced in North Carolina than in Ohio, or in Texas and in California, we would realize how much wider must be this divergence in Europe, where differences of race, language, customs, climate, government and politics exist in endless variety.

Generalizations about Europe, for that reason, are likely to be misleading. To say that Europe is prosperous or needy, that theatres are good or bad, that production is increasing or waning, may be completely misleading. England has certain conditions peculiar to herself. The Scandinavian countries are in a situation entirely their own. France has problems of a yet different nature. Germany, Austria, and Switzerland have never had the excess of America in direction, and the light of its particular conditions.

For one thing, the general prosperity of Europe fluctuates widely. In some countries currency is on a stable gold basis. In others it fluctuates from day to day, with the dollar abnormally high, making it expensive for those nations to buy from America. In certain spots, unemployment is widespread. In others, workmen are busy and factories humming.

The after-effects of the war are felt keenly everywhere, and it will be many years before Europe can reach its maximum value as a market. In spite of that, however, Europe is becoming a far better market than it has been, and it can be brought to a much higher point, even under present conditions.

Showmanship is the vital need—showmanship fitted to European conditions. Americans—as companies or as individuals—cannot apply American methods without change or alteration and hope to succeed in the fullest measure. American methods of distribution, exhibition and exploitation may be the finest in the world—for use in America—but many of them will only arouse antagonism and sales resistance in Europe; already have, in fact, here and there.

Europe has, in the past, been an easy money field for American companies: a place where a little “velvet” could be brought in to add to the margin of profit. Much American product has been sold abroad at ridiculous prices and given to the exhibitors at paltry rentals. That has obtained widespread report among European firms, but it has not brought in anything like the income that this market might well yield.

Those “easy money” days are drawing to an end. Europe, too, is growing weary of economic conditions, both in America and abroad, is rapidly bringing about a situation in Europe identical with that here.

Paramount Picture School is Opened

Eighteen Carefully Selected Students Hear Addresses by Company Executives Before Starting Studies

Penn. Censors Ban Dance for Prince of Wales

The Pennsylvania Board of Censors has prohibited the showing in Pennsylvania of a film and near views of native women of Zulaland nude from the waist up in their dances for the entertainment of the Prince of Wales.

The film is a production of Famous Players-Lasky, under the title of "Prince of Wales," and is being distributed through New大陆's semi-weekly issue No. 58.

International has ordered the elimination of all such scenes from every picture used in Pennsylvania, from where came the only protests from a censors board against the showing of these pictures.

They are to have been received by acclamation by the British in London.

"The swift development of the motion picture's popularity long ago brought about a serious situation; the producers, despite the march of an army of aspiring young actors on Hollywood, found themselves facing a scarcity of good actors and actresses—men and women who combined the skill of their craft with that elusive personality that endears the great stars to the public. All the producers realized the problem, but the search for new personalities was for the most part in vain.

"Just as it was Paramount that years ago brought the stars of the stage to the screen and lifted the motion picture out of the bog of mediocrity, so it is Paramount today that is trying to solve this new problem. About a year ago we conceived the idea of forming a school wherein would be trained those young men and women who gave promise of being successful on the screen. All over this vast land of ours thousands of boys and girls within their breasts the ambitions to act on the screen. Many of these thousands left their homes and stowed the studios of Hollywood. There in the rush of picture making, nobly could find the time from his studio work to hear them, judge them and give them an opportunity. Out of the countless hundreds, only a few, through lucky opportunity, found their way through that costly eye that is the door to screen success. But in that army of the unsuccessful surely there must have been some of the very people that the studios were begging for.

"Therefore, the Paramount School, while performing the selfish function of providing additional players for the screen, also opens the door to the young men and women of America who seek their fame and fortune in the motion picture.

"Before you stretches a golden avenue of opportunity. At the end of that avenue dwells success, and in its home some of you will find wealth and fame and, above all, the opportunity to bring high adventure and happiness to the world. Truly yours is a glorious heritage!

"But I want to talk to you of your responsibility; and when I speak please believe me I speak from fifteen years' experience as the active producing executive of the biggest studio in the world. I have seen players come and go; I have seen extra girls rise to the dizziest heights of stardom, and I have seen the brightest stars lose their lustre and fade into obscurity. Therefore, my dear young ladies and gentlemen, at the risk of being a bore, for the moment I am going to be fatherly and give you some advice about the responsibility which the screen places on your shoulders. I am going to show you the other side of that great shining light which we call public favor.

"The public is lavish to its favorites. Wealth, fame and happiness are showered upon the lucky mortals who win its smile. But while it smiles, it also demands the strictest obedience to its laws; and disobedience brings punishment that is as swift as it is severe, and governs itself accordingly.

"Never for one moment forget this responsibility. If you win great material success in your new profession beware of the temptations which follow in the wake of your success. Constant pitfalls lurk in the path of the successful, no matter what profession they adopt. They are no more numerous in motion pictures than in any other line of endeavor; and character and sensibility, which we call your soul, will hold you in check against them here as well as elsewhere. But when you are a motion picture player you are a public character, and your actions and your conduct are a matter of public concern. You are watched, judged, criticized, and condemned, and let nothing you do bring the dizziest smirch upon the profession which today is accepting you as one of its members.

"So in your own life, in your own conduct, do nothing that will affront our most prized dreams. Be decent, be honorable, be loyal to your teachers, loyal to your company, loyal to the best in your profession, and above all, be loyal to that great multitude of your friends, the public.'
A TEST case on the validity of the present arbitration system will be made in the New York County Supreme Court and in the Federal Courts, it became known this week, Joseph M. Seider, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, issued a statement in which he declared that "we feel we are justified in taking steps to compel a legal determination of our rights."

The test is to be made in the case of the Apollo Exchange vs. Wellmont Theatre, Inc., operated by Harry H. Wel lenbrink, theatre owner, of New Jersey. The action was brought by the exchange through Louis Phillips, counsel for the New York Film Board of Trade.

Mr. Seider announced that the organization would back Mr. Wellenbrink in his defense of the case, which arose over a default judgment, and that counsel had also been instructed to bring a Federal action for alleged damages sustained by Mr. Wellenbrink "through exchanges at the same time refusing his film, unless he paid the default judgment or deposited with the court the sum of $250."

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Film Board of Trade, declined to comment on the matter. Mr. Seider's statement follows:

"We feel that we have exhausted every effort to show the merits of our claims to those in whose hands lies the power to give to the theatre owners of the country an equitable contract, and based on a fair contract, arbitration, unencumbered by rules and procedure that take away from the theatre owner his property rights."

"It was our sincere hope that this situation would be settled within the industry. What fairer method could there be than a debate on the merits? Yet, Mr. Hays has seen fit to ignore our invitation. We know that Mr. Hays is not in town, but his office has not even extended us the courtesy of acknowledging the receipt of our letter. Further, they have caused statements to be printed to the effect that they will ignore our offer to debate the issues."

"The challenge to Mr. Hays to debate the issues involved, is equal to an offer to arbitrate the shortcomings of the present arbitration system, predicated on an unfair contract."

"We feel that we are justified in taking steps to compel a legal determination of our rights. Our members must be protected. We cannot continue longer without relief of the condition of terrorism in our industry, particularly as it relates to dealings among of the purchase and booking of pictures."

"Mr. W. Gavazzi King, in his report to the British organization on the Milwaukee Convention, stated in part: 'But the M. P. T. O. has been negotiating with the Renters organization and a standard contract of abnormal length and of a character which would have produced a revolt amongst your members, has been framed. Of course, the M. P. T. O. of America is not responsible for the contract. It has consistently refused to accept it.'"

"Mr. Pettijohn, attorney for the Hays organization and the Film Board of Trade, has repeatedly, forcibly stated that they want 'teeth' in the arbitration clause. They paid $10,000 to a firm of lawyers, outside of their organization, to put the 'teeth' in.

"The reason so much money was paid for the drafting of this one clause is that the procedure is illegal. The great desire for the 'teeth' in the clause, by the Hays organization, was the cause for the effort to obtain from high-priced lawyers some kind of clause that would pass legal scrutiny. This, to our minds, is the reason for the fear of the Hays organization to submit the question to an unbiased and equitable tribunal. They would prefer to rely on the condition of terrorism now prevalent — on their belief that the theatre owner is a coward and would not resist — on their belief that the theatre owner is not going to appeal to the courts.

"The theatre owner is organized and he will resist and his organization is behind him to the extent of all its resources."

"In order to collect from an exhibitor, who does not want the contract, it is necessary to cite him before an arbitration board, claiming that he had been compelled to sign the contract with the arbitration clause, under the penalty that he would not be sold any film; the Film Boards of Trade, controlled by the Hays organization, obtain a judgment by default and proceed to collect this judgment, by all members of the Film Board of Trade concertedly refusing the theatre owner when the Film Boards of Trade claim the right to this procedure under the arbitration clause for the drawing of which they paid $10,000."

"But this is 1925. The New York F.I.L.M. Club tried this on Harry H. Wel lenbrink, who operates three theatres in New Jersey. Mr. Wel lenbrink refused to become terrorized. He came to his organization for protection. Mr. Wel lenbrink acceded to the demands of the members of the New York F.I.L.M. Club with whom he did business and put up with each exchange $250 and had faith in himself and in his being right and in his organization."

"Finding that Mr. Wel lenbrink refused to become 'buffaloed' or scared by the hig h-boo, the Apollo Exchange, through the attorney for the F.I.L.M. Club, Louis Phillips, did what they could and should have done in the first place. They applied to the courts for an order compelling arbitration. Whether they will receive such an order will soon be determined. They surely would receive the order compelling arbitration if they meet with us to frame a mutually fair contract and arbitration system."

M.P.T.O.A. Board to Meet in Detroit
Steffes and Woodhull Issue Statements—Session to Be Held on July 30 at Hotel Wolverine

A MEETING of the national board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be held at the Hotel Wolverine, Detroit, on July 30, and important matters will come up for discussion.

In advance of the meeting W. A. Steffes, President of the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest and of the Allied States organization, which went back into the M. P. T. O. A. at Milwaukee, issued a statement this week in which he declared that the Allied group would go to Detroit "demanding to rid the organization of one-man rule."

Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Board, had nothing to say regarding the Steffes statement.

A brief statement in this connection was issued by R. F. Woodhull, National President, as follows:

"Acceptances to date indicate full meeting of the National Board of Directors, Detroit, July 30. Any reports of break prior to this meeting are manifestly premature and must be received encouragement from sources unfriendly to exhibitor organization."

Mr. Steffes' statement follows:

"Members of the Allied group, backed by other conscientious directors of the organization, are going to the National Board of Directors meeting in Detroit on July 30, demanding to rid the organization of one man rule."

"The time is at hand for a show down. We are going through with a campaign for reform, even though we expect it will subject us to attack as radicals and Bolsheviks. We (the Allied) do not want to again withdraw from the National organization and don't intend to, unless our efforts to accomplish reforms are futile. But neither will we sit idly by and see the organization develop into an autocratocracy at the time when the very life of the independent exhibitor trembles in the balance."

"To date there has never been a meeting of the Play Date Bureau Committee, of which I am a member. At least I have never been notified of such meeting. At the meeting of the Board of Directors in New York the Play Date Bureau, by unanimous vote of the directors, was separated entirely from the M. P. T. O. A., yet someone, who is attempting to constitute himself the supreme power of the organization, has seen fit, contrary to the decree of the Board of Directors, to broadcast propaganda for the Bureau under the official seal of the organization."

"The recent Finance Committee meeting, of which I am also a member, together with G. E. Cross, of Michigan; M. E. Comerford, of Pennsylvania; Harry Davis, of Pittsburg, and Sydney S. Cohen, of New York, was a joke and a crime and there was nothing accomplished, whatever. Spending exhibitors' money to bring members to New York only to meet with manipulations, trickery, etc., which prevented any action, is not in keeping with our idea of proper conduct of the organization and we don't intend to tolerate it any longer."

Pathe Forms Public Relations Dept.
Miss Regge Doran Heads Bureau to Establish Personal Contact Service to Exhibitors

A DEPARTMENT of Public Relations is the new service innovation which Pathe will establish to render personal contact service for exhibitors, it was announced this week by Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager of the distributing concern. Mr. Pearson has engaged Miss Regge Doran, who organized and conducted the highly successful Public Relations Department in operation for some time at the West Coast Theatres, Inc., chain of houses in California, to form the department and direct its work for Pathe.

According to Mr. Pearson, Pathe believes that they can go further in aiding exhibitors by the type of personal contact service than by limiting the cooperation to the regularly accepted forms of publicity and advertising. The Department of Public Relations, although a separate entity, will work in close co-operation with the Exploitation, Publicity and Advertising Departments of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

In citing Miss Doran's work on the Pacific Coast, Mr. Pearson recalled one example of her work which was especially beneficial to exhibitors and motion pictures generally in the state of California. In this instance, Miss Doran so interested a prominent social group in the real purpose of motion picture entertainment that the entire body and its state affiliations backed her work and adopted the excellent slogan "Make the Best Pictures Pay."

Native of Scotland, Miss Doran expressed interest in music and art at an early age. She lived in the leading cities of Europe where she continued her cultural education. Then she came to America and entered Barnard College of Columbia University. At the University she showed her aptitude for things dramatic by acting in and directing undergraduate plays. After graduation, as one of the Washington Square Players and, later as ingenue lead for Richard Bennett, she gained the intimate knowledge of the theatre which she is now putting to such practical use.

She staged the Brooklyn pageant, celebrating the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims. Then she tried her hand at newspaper writing, both in New York and in Los Angeles. She wrote continuities and adapted stories in the Hollywood Studios, where she acquired the "screen angle" which is the "open sesame" to the picture business. Miss Doran's Public Relations activities started while she was assistant Managing Director of the Criterion Theatre in Los Angeles.

Miss Doran enters her duties with Pathe Exchange, Inc., on August 3rd and will immediately organize the Department of Public Relations.

"Roxy" to Preside Over N. Y. Circuit
With Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, Rothafel Will Build at Least Six Houses in New York City

S. L. ROTHAFEL will be at the head of a circuit of large motion picture houses in New York City, according to the plans of Arthur H. Sawyer, Herbert Lubin and Rothafel, just disclosed. The announcement comes upon the heels of the deal recently consummated by the Sawyer-Lubin-Rothafel combination whereby the "Roxy" theatre, the largest in the world will be erected at Fifty-fifth Street and Seventh Avenue.

It is planned to erect at least six theatres of enormous seating capacity and luxurious appointment at carefully chosen spots in Greater New York with Roxy, providing over the entire circuit as director and embodying in each new theatre his personal genius in matters of presentation and screen entertainment.

The "Roxy," to be built at Fifty-fifth Street and Seventh Avenue, will be designed by Walter W. Ahlshleger, internationally known architect of Chicago, who has been responsible for the plans for several of the largest theatres in the middle west, and who will also design each of the houses in the "Roxy" circuit.

The first theatre in the Sawyer-Lubin-Rothafel combination will have 6012 seats, involving an expenditure placed at $7,000,000 covering real estate and construction, and will offer to the motion picture going public for the first time a reserved loge section of eleven hundred seats.

Many innovations in the matters of seating, lighting, stage construction and general appointment, will be placed into effect in the "Roxy," by the man for whom the theatre is named, and who, through his successful direction of the Strand, Rialto, Rivoli and Capitol during the past ten years, has become one of the most distinctive personalities in the theatre and radio world.
Contests Increase Interest In Greater Movie Season
Newspapers Back Project as Cities Organize

A SCORE of important daily newspapers and a great number of smaller ones, have already contracted to participate in the Greater Movie Season National Contest that has as its capital national awards a trip for two around the world on the Red Star liner Belgium, the biggest ship ever to circle the globe, and vacations for two in Los Angeles and Miami as gifts of the respective chambers of commerce. With a total sworn circulation of 2,306,000 and, and the vigorous interest from each newspaper is putting behind the affair, public response is expected to set a new high-mark in national contests. The importance that publishers attach to the contest and its mutual benefits is denoted by the caliber of the publications that comprise the following list:

The basis of the contest is a three-hundred-word essay on “What the Motion Picture Means to Me” or “What the Motion Picture Means to My Community.” In addition to the three national prizes, each newspaper is arranging a list of local from merchants, thus securing valuable theatre throughout the season. As news response, the value of local prizes obtained by the Chicago American for its readers is said to be $100,000.

The national awards will go to writers of the three best essays selected from the three principal winners in each city. Campaigns that have been mapped out for the participating newspapers are already under way. Posters and slides link each theatre into the contest while stories and specially prepared advertisements will develop popular interest for the middle of July to the end of August.

By the action of Louisville in adopting the Greater Movie Season plan as sponsored by Will H. Hays, president of Motion Picture Owners of Texas, American Inc., every key-city in the United States will now participate in the August demonstration. Louisville exhibitors have chosen Charles W. Krebs of the Radio Theatre as campaign manager.

The biggest blanket adoption of the plan since H. M. Richey organized Michigan for the drive, has occurred in Texas where more than two hundred theatres, constituting the membership of the Motion Picture Owners of Texas asked for cooperation in order to put over their Season. Simultaneously fifty towns coming under the general management of Wm. P. Gray of Lewiston, Maine, have set their campaign in motion, and similar activity is reflected throughout New England as a whole.

Henry Menger of the Victory Theatre, will be conducting manager in Holyoke, Mass.; in Springfield, Mass., Gordon Rider of Poli’s Palace Theatre will superintend the drive; in Manchester, N. H, Al Couture of the Crown Theatre has been elected general manager. In Hartford, Conn., J. J. Hoffman of the Strand and Princess Theatres will conduct the campaign with supervision over Ansonia as well. New Britain, Conn. has J. S. Costaras, of the Capitol Theatre, in charge, while Miss Julia Smith, of the Strand Theatre, controls the Waterbury season.

With Earl Fain, of Loew’s Vendome as chairman; Harry Sudekum, of the Princess Theatre, as Secretary and Treasurer and Tony Sudekum, of the Crescent Amusement Company, as director of publicity, Greater Movie Season is moving towards an enthusiastic start in Nashville, Tenn. The campaign also embraces Columbia, Springfield, Marysville, Harrisman, Lebanon and Morris-town, Tenn., Bowling Green and Hopkinsville, Ky., and Florence, Alabama. Campaign officers at Chattanooga, Tenn., include Sam H. Borsky, American Theatre, chairman; J. L. Carlwight, Radio Theatre, Secretary and Treasurer; and K. R. Rogers, Tivoli Theatre, director of publicity and general manager.

Two newspaper contests are planned at Denver in addition to the national event. A “Star Likeness” Contest will award prizes to girls who most resemble well-known screen players while the boys-scouts are in training for an inter-city reel-race also conducted under newspaper auspices.

Highlights of the Salt Lake City drive include a mammoth sign spelling Greater Movie Season in moving pictures on the mountain-side at the head of Main Street, a thousand feet above street level and certainly the most conspicuous spot in town. The sign will be illuminated at night. The Desert News, Tribune and Telegram have already begun publication of interviews with public officials and local celebrities emphasizing the achievement of the film industry. Ogden and Provo, Utah, will have campaigns designed along the Salt Lake City lines.

Baltimore elected Louis Schlichter, Bridge Theatre, general manager; Harry Van Hoven, director of publicity and Louis J. Rome, chairman of the Ways and Means committee. Ben Davis comptroller of the Schine Theatres operating from Groversville, N. Y., and well known as an advertising and exploitation man before he entered the managerial side of the business, has completed plans in association with his district managers that include a four-page newspaper supplement in Carthage, pen- nants on all the cross-arm trolley wires in Corning, North Side and Painted Post, double-track advertising joy-outs in Nor- wich and Oneonta in addition to an extensive campaign of window displays, radio broadcasting, public speaking, ballhoo and bannering. Each district manager has directed the stunts in every town under his control.

Among prominent exhibitors most actively engaged in putting Greater Movie Season over in Buffalo is J. H. Michael, chairman of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, State of New York, Buffalo Zone.

An urgent bulletin has gone from W. A. Steffes, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest, to every theatre throughout that territory, recommending Greater Movie Season as a business-stimulant at no great cost and offering cooperation to any theatre that desires to promote the season on an elaborate scale.

Houston theatre managers are putting on full steam for “Greater Movie Season” which will open the first week in August. Plans call for a “Greater Movie Ball” also special newspaper and outdoor advertising. A local organization has been formed and the last directed duties of the committee who will have charge of the publicity and advertising.

Full cooperation will be given the Motion Picture Distributors and Producers, by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., in an endeavor to make the movement this year a great success.

Not only will the Maryland organization contribute its moral support but it will dig down into its treasury for $1,500 or $2,000 to spend in bringing the matter before the public with a strenuous advertising campaign.

The decision to back the move was made at a meeting of the Maryland organization, of which Walter D. Parks is president, held at the Emerson Hotel on Thursday, July 9, when the plans were outlined by Jack Pez- ler, of the Will Hays organization, and Harry Van Hoven advertising manager of Combined Western Interests, who addressed the gathering.

A committee was appointed to handle the matter including; Louis Schlichter, chairman; Harry Van Hoven and J. Louis Rome. According to the present plans a great deal (Continued on page 545)
Baltimore Musicians and the Theatres in Wage Dispute

Unless the Theatrical Managers’ Association and the Musicians’ Union of Baltimore come to an agreement before that time over the increased wage scale demands, there will be no music in theatres of that city after August first. The musicians have demanded an increase of 20 to 27 per cent over the $38 per week which they now receive.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., have agreed to be governed by whatever the T. M. A. of Baltimore does with the exception of the rival and metropolitan theatres managed by Guy L. Wonders and Bernard Depkin, Jr. They have agreed to the new wage scale. Neither is a member of the M. F. T. O. of Maryland.

Jack Schlaifer is Honored by Northwest Film Board

In appreciation for his work as vice-president and as a member of a number of standing committees, the Northwest Film Board of Trade presented Jack L. Schlaifer with an engraved cigarette case, just prior to his departure for San Francisco as the new Western division manager for the Universal Film Company.

L. O. Lukan, who replaces Mr. Schlaifer at the Seattle Universal offices, was elected to succeed him as vice-president of the Film Board also.

American Theatre in Troy to Reopen August 15

The American theatre in Troy, N. Y., formerly operated by Ben Apple and now controlled by the Strand interests, will reopen on August 15 as a first-run with a split week policy. An admission price of 15 cents will be charged.

Samuel Weiss Dies After Protracted Illness

Samuel Weiss, father of Adolph, Max and Lewis Weiss, of Weiss Brothers Artelace Pictures Corporation, died at the age of seventy-one on July 17 after a protracted illness. He was born in Austria-Hungary and came to this country in his early youth.

World Premiere of “U” Film at Dayton, Tenn.

Dayton, Tenn., scene of the world-famed “evolution” trial, this week witnessed the world premiere of “Lorraine of the Lions,” the Universal Jewel production in which a gorilla enacts an important role, competing itself in a manner said to lend weight to the theory of relationship of apes and men. The picture, which is scheduled for general release in October, was shown Thursday and Friday of this week at the Lyric Theatre in Dayton.

Exploitation for the picture was directed along the lines of the “man-monkey” controversy so popular since the arrest and trial of Scopes for violation of the state statute forbidding the teaching of the theory of evolution in schools.

Ufa Acquires M-G-M Features

Forty Pictures Taken For Distribution By German Concern, Is Announcement

Forty Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures of the 1924-25 group have been acquired by Ufa for distribution throughout Germany, according to statements issued this week by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer foreign department and the New York office of Ufa-USA.

This marks an important step in foreign distribution, since it will place in circulation in Central Europe practically an entire season’s output. Ufa is an important producing, distributing and exhibiting corporation, owning and operating a considerable chain of theatres of its own. Many of these are first run houses of the newest type, and several others are under construction.

Recent steps taken by Ufa include the acquisition of United Artists and Warner Brothers product. This is all in addition to the 36 pictures which it will produce at its own studios.

At the same time, Frederick Wyne-Jones, managing director of Ufa-USA, announced that his company had engaged Mac Murray to make pictures in Germany for one year, beginning September 1st. Other American feminine stars, he stated, have been engaged but cannot yet be announced. Ufa is also looking for a suitable American male star, he said.

Further discussion of the importance of these movies will be taken up in the series of exclusive articles on the European situation starting in this issue of Motion Picture News.

Invitation Declined by Cohen

M. P. T. O. A. Official Suggests That Testimonial Dinner Feature “Independence” Instead of Himself

dney S. Cohen, Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Board of Directors, has written a letter to the Committee of Independent producers sponsoring the proposed Testimonial Dinner to Mr. Cohen, declining to be the host guest, but suggesting instead that the dinner feature “Independence.”

The letter to Mr. Cohen, on behalf of the Independents, sent by Samuel Zierler, President of the Commonwealth Film Corporation, pointed out that the dinner was to express to Mr. Cohen “our heartfelt appreciation for the great effort you are making to perpetuate this industry for all those who should stay in it on a live basis.”

After thanking the committee for “the wonderful compliment,” Mr. Cohen replied: “However, I must decline to be single out in this way for special mention. It seems to me instead, ‘Independence’ should be the honored guest. It is the ideal that guided our glorious country to its birth; it is the principle men have fought and shed their blood for, and it is but fitting that the Motion Picture Industry, the Serven Press of the World, the greatest medium today of transmitting entertainment, education and knowledge should have Independence for its watchword and safeguard.

‘Might I therefore take it upon myself to suggest that your plans take on the form of a dinner to Independence, one that you can broadcast throughout the land; one that can focus the attention of the world on the fight we are waging for our freedom in this Industry and to keep our screens free from the restraint and control of monopoly for our people. Such a dinner it appears to me would be of inestimable advantage for all and for greater than any personal tribute.

‘As for myself, I believe I have had sufficient honors. I have had the privilege of being President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for four years, of working with some of the finest men God ever made and for a cause that is so great. I have earned a priceless treasure in the many loyal friends I can count as mine in the various branches of the Industry today. My fellow workers in the Organizations, the men in the rank and file, have all through various ways shown their appreciation for whatever time and service I have given to their cause. That they esteem it and value this is enough, for me no greater honor or fame can come than this and I would rather feature ‘Independence’ than ‘star’ myself, and instead be a doughboy in the ranks, a booster of the cause, doing my bit with the other fellow.”

JOHN E. McCORMICK

Made First National Gen. Mgr. on Coast

J
OHN E. McCORMICK has been appointed General Manager of West Coast productions of First National under which title he will assume the executive direction of that company’s own units on the coast, it has been announced by A. Rowland, general manager of First National. Mr. McCormick will continue to act as Coast representative for the company in dealings with independent producers.

On his return to Los Angeles, last week, Mr. McCormick assumed his new office and already is placing in operation plans for drawing First National’s own producing units closer together. It is probable that in the near future, three or four units will be working continuously at the Coast studios. Announcements of other equal importance developments in the production branch of First National Pictures are expected within the next few weeks.

“The rise of Mr. McCormick to his present position of responsibility is entirely due to his display of merit since his association with First National,” said Mr. Rowland.

Eschmann Analyses Sales Personnel
First National General Manager of Distribution Outlines Points Necessary for Successful Force

"A MODERN sales organization is like a tree. The roots strike deep in the soil of product, personality and principle, giving nourishment to the branches." This is the statement of E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution for First National Pictures.

"The essential point in the building of an organization, sales or otherwise, is the point of contact," says Eschmann. "Branches—flourish or wither according to the quality of the soil from which they spring. If the soil is arid there will be no fruit. If the flow of strength and nourishment drawn from the roots is checked the leaves will wither.

"The heads of a sales department are the channel of contact connecting the men in the field with the basic soil from which the organization springs. If we fail in point of contact, the vitality of the organization is weakened.

"Our requirement therefore, is to impress favorably upon contact with our men—to inspire the desire to do good—to give a proper definition of right and wrong—to be able to determine what's right by unbiased analysis—to operate for tomorrow as well as today—to assist those in need or encouragement—to dispel pessimism and court optimism.

"This may seem like a large order, and it is, but only as it is fulfilled will a sales organization realize its aim in any large sense.

"Nothing has become more evident in modern business than the importance of morale and unity of purpose. There is no room for pettiness, or selfishness in the larger vision of teamwork whereby all benefit alike. If sales executives fail to impart this spirit they are not fulfilling their mission. And they must operate through human contact, through the example of performance, not by precepts; through living their instructions, persuading and requesting, not attempting to enforce orders by autocratic demands. There is no other way to gain the spirit of true cooperation, a spirit without which any organization, however elaborate or physical mechanism, is lifeless—a body without a soul.

"I am not going into a discussion of the physical formation of a sales department. In a general way the plan of operation is sufficiently familiar to the trade. Changes during the past few years have been along the line of advancement in the systematizing of efforts to reach all exhibitors with a reasonable presentation of facts. The day of bank and bluster and misstatement has passed. A salesman must be completely sold on his own product before he can hope to sell anybody else. And there again we come back to teamwork between executives at headquarters and the men in the field.

"We have succeeded or failed in getting across our message in proportion to our success in making the men with whom we work appreciate what we believe to be facts about the company with which we are associated and the product it is marketing.

"If a salesman employed by a company of the first rank does not believe that his own best interests are served by promoting the welfare of the company; if he lacks faith in its product, its present and its future, the fault may be with the salesman, or it may be with executives who have failed to get close to him on a man-to-man footing. Every member of an organization must be made to feel that he is a part of it, that he shares in its ideals and its destinies. If this feeling is lacking, he cannot be expected to put the requisite enthusiasm into his efforts, nor will he experience the satisfaction consequent upon success.

"The motion picture business always has been and must continue to be largely a matter of personalities. Stars are made through personality, authors write stories that introduce interesting personalities on the screen; clever exhibitors lend an inviting personality to their theatres and are extremely careful about the personal which comes into contact with the audience; from first to last it is the personal, human equation that counts.

"Building a 100 per cent sales organization on paper would not be difficult. There are few secrets about divisions of territory, quotas, percentages and the like. All of these things have been figured out with care and precision. The variable factor is the man power that keeps the wheels moving, and the strength of this man power, in the final analysis, is due to ability of sales executives to inspire the right attitude of mind.

"Take any group of five hundred men of salesmen caliber, and by that I mean men who by reason of previous training, temperament and personality, may be deemed eligible, and the average of latent ability will not vary greatly. Some may be expected to advance rapidly, others to drop out, while along in the middle comes the great majority—loyal, steady workers anxious to make good, not only for the week or the month, but for the years to come.

"It is this group that sound business is most concerned in developing. Men of this caliber, looking to the future, are not tempted to a few extra dollars that mean parting with a company in whose principles and future they have faith.

"By his contact with his sales staff, the manager of distribution can foster, stimulate and develop these traits of loyalty—and by contact alone. No other method has been discovered. By the efficiency of his organization is a sales manager's success and value to his company measured. His force will be just as big and effective and loyal as he is himself. The head of the organization must display his good traits, wear them on his sleeve, so to speak, otherwise his associates may fail to notice and absorb them. This applies with equal truth to the members of his force.

"From whatever avenue one approaches the building up of an efficient, result-getting organization, the way leads to the cap-sheaf of contact. The method of working out and applying this cap-sheaf must be solved individually by each sales manager according to his own lights and his own personality. His success depends on finding a workable solution of the problem of contact."

Cashier of St. Louis House Held Up by Bandits
Two would-be robbers in an automobile held up Miss Elsie Betzold, cashier for the Kings Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., as she was on her way to the Chouteau Trust Company at Vandeventer and Chouteau avenues at 10:20 a.m. July 13. After searching her car and finding nothing the pair fled. Miss Betzold was driving a Ford sedan and was forced to go to the curb a few doors from the bank. The pair demanded "the money" but Miss Betzold carried no money.

On May 18 last two employees of the Kings were held up while en route to the bank and robbed of $1,700 in receipts.

Boys Loot Safe of Theatre in Reading, Pa.
The safe in the second floor office of the Hippodrome theatre, Reading, owned by the Wilmer & Vincent Company, was robbed of $225 by a boy who climbed through a transom. Frank S. Mickle, manager of the theatre, notified the police, and a few days later the boy, 13, and an accomplice, 18, were arrested, and $83 of the money, together with a bicycle on which the boys had paid $35, were recovered.

Agent of Operators’ Union Charged in Bomb Case
A second arrest was made last week in connection with the bombing of the World-in-Motion theatre, Kansas City, last February. William Moore, business agent for the motion picture operators’ union, was arrested and charged in an indictment returned against him with malicious destruction of property. He formerly was an operator for the Victory theatre, Kansas City.
Vice-President Dawes Invited to Lead the Chicago Movie Season Parade

VICE-PRESIDENT Charles G. Dawes has been invited by Will H. Hays to lead the huge parade which will open the “Greater Movie Season” campaign in Chicago, scheduled to take place in the month of August. If the Vice-president accepts the invitation he and Mr. Hays will head the line of march which will inaugurate the gigantic “go to movies” drive which has been launched in Chicago and which will reach its culmination during the month of August.

Those who will participate in the parade number many of Chicago’s leading business men, civic and social societies. A feature of the parade will be the Chicago Evening American’s photographer’s float, from which pictures for reproduction in the Silver Jubilee section of that publication will be taken.

Guarantee Pictures Organized
Will Produce and Distribute the Curwood and General Charles King Stories

AETNA Finance Corporation, Ben Wilson and the Davis Distributing Division have combined and organized Guarantee Pictures, Inc., for the purpose of financing, producing and distributing the James Oliver Curwood and General Charles King series of pictures. These pictures originally were to have been produced by Clifford S. Ellett, whose other interests have prompted him to give up the production end. Davis Distributing Division contracted for the distribution of the pictures. By the new arrangement, AETNA Finance Corporation will finance the productions, Ben Wilson will produce them and the Davis Distributing Division will distribute them.

Guarantee Pictures has undertaken to see that the James Oliver Curwood pictures and eight General Charles King pictures are produced and distributed.

The second of the Kings is completed and stars Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber who will also be the stars of the remaining pictures in this series. One of the Curwood’s is completed “My Neighbor’s Wife” and the second, “The Gold Hunters” is also in work with the following cast, under the direction of Paul Hurst: Mary Carr, Dave Butler, George Fawcett, Hodde Nova, Bull Montana, Claire Windsor, Victor Potel.

The third King picture, “Fort Frayne,” starring Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber is in production. The two completed ones are “Warrior Gap” and “Under Fire.”

The formation of Guarantee Pictures in no way affects the other production arrangements of Davis Distributing Division, Inc., but creates a combination of the three most important elements in the industry which they believe will prove of mutual benefit to exhibitors and exchanges alike.

The nominating committee of the A. M. P. A. presented their nominations for officers for the ensuing year at the meeting held by the organization in New York July 16. The committee, composed of P. S. Parsons, Bert Adler, Fred Baer, Paul Gulick, Victor Shapiro, C. L. Yearsley and Lou Young, presented the following as the unanimous choice:

For president, Harry Reichenback: for vice-president, Jerome Beatty; for treasurer, Charles Einfield; for secretary, Russell Holman.

For trustees of treasurers’ fund—Paul Gulick, three years; Victor Shapiro, two years; P. S. Parsons, one year.

George T. Pardy Joins M. P. News Staff

GEORGE T. PARDY, one of the best known of photoplay critics, this week joined the staff of Motion Picture News as the successor of Laurence Reid, who resigned to become Editor of Movie Monthly.

Mr. Pardy has an established reputation as a reviewer, and is a newspaper man of wide experience. He was a correspondent for the Chicago Inter-Ocean with General Butler’s army during the Boer War, was on the staff of the Detroit Free Press, Chicago American and other important dailies, and entered the industry as motion picture editor of The Morning Telegraph.

Later he held a similar position with the Dramatic Mirror, and in 1916 joined the staff of Exhibitors Trade Review, where he continued until recently as Editor of Reviews.

In addition to his work as a picture critic, Mr. Pardy has written a large number of special articles for newspapers and magazines, has been the author of several vaudeville sketches.

He comes to the staff a recognized specialist in the difficult work of appraising pictures for the exhibitor, and The News takes pleasure in announcing his appointment.

Woodhull Honor Guest at Rochester

National President R. F. Woodhull, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was the guest of honor at the annual Picnic and Field Day of the Rochester Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association at Point Pleasant, Irondequoit Bay, on Tuesday, July 21st.

The outing was largely attended by theatre owners and exchangemen from the vicinity of Rochester and Buffalo, who gave President Woodhull a cordial reception. He spoke briefly on the progress the National Organization was making. He congratulated the Rochester Theatre Owners on their splendid organization and of their past loyalty and support of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and encouraged them to keep on along these lines as they knew the advantages and benefits of National Organization.

Meador and Robertson to Start Production

J. E. D. Meador and John S. Robertson last week organized Meador-Robertson Productions to film a series of special short Blasco Ibanez stories and other works now under consideration. Robertson will personally direct the entire series to be known as John S. Robertson Productions.

Robertson, with Mrs. Robertson and his son, sailed from New York last Saturday to start preparations for filming “Queen Catala,” late novel of Ibanez. The picture will be shot in Spain, Paris and Monte Carlo. This production will be followed by “The Fifth Horseman.” The Ibanez series will also include “The Cabin,” “La Bodega,” “The Mayflower” and “Sor- ria.”

Tourner Will Direct Sam Rork Production

Sam Rork has engaged Maurice Tourner to direct his screen production of “Clothes Make the Pirate,” the Holman Day novel, in which Leon Errol will be featured. The picture is to be made in New York and will be presented on the First National program.

Among the players engaged by Rork for the leading roles in support of Errol are Dorothy Gish, Shirley Mason, Nita Naldi, Tully Marshall, George Marion and Frank Lawlor.

Arrow Will Distribute the Steiner Features

William Steiner has completed arrangements with Arrow Film Corporation whereby the latter will distribute the new Edith Thornton series of four one-reel dramas and five of the new feature series, "Hitch of the Secret Service," featuring Charles Hutchison.

Steiner reports his five producing units on the coast well ahead of their production schedule.
Contests to Build Interest in Greater Movie Season

of out-door advertising will be used including about 100 24-sheets, 1-sheets, 3-sheets, banners, novelties, caps and buttons.

Mike Coyne, advance man for Greater Movie Season, passed through the city as part of the campaign in the south, has left Atlanta for a final swing through this district, prior to the opening of the Season, August 3rd. Coyne left Tuesday, and it will probably take him until the year day of operation, of Greater Movie Season to visit all the cities which come under his jurisdiction. His itinerary includes: Atlanta, Ga.; Memphis, Tenn.; Little Rock, Ark.; Dallas, Texas; Houston, Tex.; New Orleans, La.; Birmingham, Ala.; Nashville, Tenn.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Montgomery, Ala.; and Beaumont, Texas.

Kansas City in a few days will be dotted with prominent figures of the industry, bearing the words: “Greater Movie Season. Let’s Go!” At present the M. P. T. O. K-M. is a turmoil of detail and hustle in an effort to complete plans for the Kansas City celebration. A large order for pennants was placed with a company Tuesday by C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. K-M., while the committees are busy arranging for a parade of floats. A meeting has been planned at the Palace theatre in a few days, to be the last night performance, when chairmen of the committees will meet with the advertising representative of large business concerned in effort to obtain the fullest cooperation. Both the Kansas City Star and the Journal-Post have pledged support.

A plan to offer prizes for the best window display in connection with the campaign also has been announced. About $5,000 has been subscribed thus far among exhibitors and that mark is expected to be surpassed soon.

No concrete program has been adopted for the celebration yet, although one probably will be made in the next few days, according to Mr. Cook.

Letters are being sent to all towns in the Kansas City territory by the M. P. T. O. K-M. office, urging that each village, town and city stage a celebration.

San Francisco features will be a big reception by the Mayor and city officials to the host of Movie stars and people coming up from Los Angeles. A big parade through the principal street, “The Path of Gold,” to be richly decorated with banners and long strips of flags on electric light poles with a big line at top reading, “Greater Movie Season. Personal appearance of stars at residential theatres during the event on special dates; notice on one page to a double track frequently; several special luncheons by civic and fraternal organizations; prominent speakers at a big dinner by the Chamber of Commerce to visiting movie people.

The four theatres in Salt Lake City that are concentrating their efforts and capital into putting on Greater Movie Season, the Paramount-Emperor, Victory, Kinemac and Fantage, are getting the campaign well underway, and when the opening day comes it will find the field well covered and publicity stunts ready to burst forth.

The twenty-four sheets will be posted conspicuously about the city and the other advertising accessories such as banners, teasers, trailers, caps, dolls and snappers will receive a wide distribution. Frank Becker, recently appointed publicity manager for the campaign, has started exploitation matters humming. The managers of the four active theatres are all planning novel and interesting stunts to be pulled at their houses, and big productions are being lined up to give the opening week of the Season great impetus.

Europe Needs New Showmen Throughout Industry

Producer ownership of theatres, block booking, chaining up of theatres, booking combinations, patent monopolies, joint physical distribution—all of these issues so familiar in America are equally pressing in England and on the Continent.

Several large American companies are preparing to invade the European field in full force. Production, distribution and even production are forming. Rumors and the denial of rumors will fill the air for months, but the smoke which hides the battle will only make more plain the fact that such a battle is being waged. The stronger European factions, too, are not to be lightly ignored. Offers and counter-offers are being made toward alliances between American and European interests. Some of these have already been consummated; others are in the air and will follow.

The soil has been tilled, the seed is in, conditions are reasonably favorable—and only the fertilization of intelligent showmanship is needed to bear a rich harvest which will increase as the years pass. Who will reap this harvest?

Test Arbitration Case Will Be Heard in Court

“Perhaps in this lies the solution of our dilemma. When a fair contract and a good system of arbitration is agreed upon, when the products of the Producers and Distributors of America resign from the F.I.L.M. Club or Film Boards of Trade, controlled by the Hays organization, and set up Film Boards of Trade consisting of both distributors and theatres, when a penalty is placed for the bringing of unmeritorious claims and when the custom of distributors bringing claims promiscuously in amounts of $25,000 is stopped, then the theatre owner will have the choice of buying from the company giving him a square deal, which does not take away from him the property rights granted him by law.”

New Corporations Launched in New York State

Newly incorporated companies receiving charters from the secretary of state during the past week and proposing to enter into the motion picture business in New York State, included the following: Irving Theatres Corporation, $500,000, with Marion L. Elkin, Mollie Salit, Anne Eichel, New York city; Valley Theatre Corporation, capitalized at $100,000, Albert Cooper, David Davis, Jacob W. Kers, New York city; Hamilton Avenue Exhibition Company, Inc., $2,000, Pauline Maltzer, Brooklyn; Sophie C. Edelhertz, Dora L. Bernstein, New York city; W. & J. Amusement Corporation, $10,000, David Schneider, Samuel Bedell, Brooklyn; Samuel Otteness, New York city; Baldwin Amusement Corporation, $5,000, Baldwin, N. Y.; Robert T. Himmans, George Rapp, Chicago; Chevron Film, Beatrice Smith, of Roosevelt, N. Y.

New Blake Theatre Corporation, $10,000, Hyman Bernstein, Bronx; Isidore Levine, Isaac Kafka, Brooklyn; Harrison Motion Picture Corporation, $200,000, Benjamin Liebmann, Brooklyn; John and Betty Jordan, New York city; Cargross Exhibition Company, Inc., $25,000, Cecel E. Carter, Conrad A. Ross, David E. Grange, New York city.

Great Neck Playhouse Now Legitimate House

The Great Neck Playhouse takes its place among the legitimate theatres, according to a new policy announced by Irving M. Lesser. It will be devoted to legitimate plays which have already played Broadway or are to be played there. The new arrangement is the result of a working alliance between Lesser and producer Henry Pollard, of John Golden, Sam Harris, Arthur Hopkins, A. L. Ehringer, the Selwyns and Schuberts.

The first legitimate production to mark the new change of policy was the John Galsworthy play, "The Holy Terror." The Great Neck Playhouse is one of the newer theatres, built at a cost of $450,000 and its policy had been one of motion pictures, combined with a bill of vaudeville.

Atlanta Bans Organisms in Picture Houses

Decision to discontinue employment of organisms in Atlanta moving picture theatres was made by the managers following action of the organism members of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians, which decreed a raise in salary for all organizers employed in these theatres, this raise to begin September 1.

The raise decree was the outcome of a meeting of the Federation of Musicians at which the matter involved in motion to raise salaries. This motion was seconded and carried without consultation with the theatre managers, it being customary in all such matters to call a conference between managers and representatives of the Musicians' union before handing in an ultimatum.
I. S. Liner Joins DeMille Business Staff

I. S. Liner has associated with Cecil B. De Mille during the production of "The Ten Commandments" for Paramount, has been engaged as a unit manager by the new De Mille producing organization. His first work will be the handling of the business details of "The Wedding Song," in which Lorette Joy will be starred by De Mille for the Producers-Distributing Corporation.

Set "Parisian Love" Release Date July 27

"Parisian Love," first of the new group of Preferred Pictures to reach the exhibitors, will be released July 27th, according to announcement by J. G. Bachmann, general manager of distribution for B. P. Schulberg Productions.

The picture, produced by Gasnier, is an adaptation based on the F. Oakley Crawford novel. The script is by Lois Hutchinson. Nola Bow is featured in the leading feminine role, with Lou Tellegen opposite her. Others in the cast are Donald Keith, Alyce Mills, Lillian Leighton, Jean de Briac, Hazel Keener and Otto Mathieson.

De Mille Selects Cast for "The Wedding Song"

The cast which will support Lorette Joy in "The Wedding Song," a Cecil B. DeMille production for Producers Distributing Corp. release, has been completed. Those who will have prominent parts in support of the star are Robert Ames, Louis Natheaux, Ethel Waley and Rosa Rudiani.

Lloyd Starts Comedy For Paramount Release

HAROLD LLOYD has started work on the first of two feature comedies which he will produce for Paramount distribution before May, 1926. He is making exterior scenes on the grounds of the Hotel Ambassador and other fashionable settings in Los Angeles and Beverly Hills. Jobyna Ralston is playing the lead opposite the star.

In order to live up to the schedule which he has mapped out, Lloyd will have only a rest of about three weeks between pictures sometime in December, when it is expected his current work will be completed. He and Mrs. Lloyd plan to visit Europe for a vacation next summer after work has been finished on his second Paramount vehicle.

Premiere of "The Danger Signal" at Broadway

"The Danger Signal," a railroad drama and the first of the Columbia 1925-26 productions, had its New York premiere at the B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre, where it was offered as the main film attraction for the entire week.

Hunt Stromberg Completes Three New Features

Three productions listed for distribution by Producers Distributing Corporation have been completed by Hunt Stromberg. The features are "The Red Lands," a Harry Carey western drama, which completes his series for the current season; "The Prairie Pirate," first of the Harry Carey vehicles for the new program, and "Off the Highway," a special production with an all-star cast.

"Three Wise Crooks" Next Evelyn Brent Vehicle

"Three Wise Crooks," an original story by John Brownell and Fred Kennedy, has been selected as the next starring vehicle for Evelyn Brent, F. B. O. star. The camera work on the film will be started soon. Miss Brent will essay another crook characterization in which she won popularity as the star of "Midnight Molly," "Silk Stocking Sal," and "Alias Mary Flynn."

Calhoun and Gregg Signed by Independent

Jesse J. Goldberg, head of Independent Pictures Corporation, has engaged Alice Calhoun and Arnold Gregg to play the leading roles in the first "Big Timber" story featuring "Lightnin,'" the canine star. Other well-known players who will appear in the picture are Stuart Holmes, Gertrude Astor and Spottiswoode Aitken. William J. Craft is directing the production.
Davidson Gets Role With Jackie Coogan

Max Davidson has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for an important role in "Old Clothes," Jackie Coogan's next starring vehicle which goes into production Monday. Davidson is a well known delineator of Hebrew characters. It is said the coming role will be much the same type as that he played in "The Rag Man," Jackie's last picture.

"Old Clothes" will be directed by Eddie Cline, with Frank B. Good as chief cameraman. Kenneth B. Clark wrote the continuity and the entire production will be made under the supervision of Jack Coogan, Sr.

Will Start Production of "The Savage" Soon

Production work on "The Savage," a First National offering in which Lloyd Hughes and Dorothy Mackaill will have the featured parts, is scheduled to start soon at the company's New York Studios. Miss Mackaill is due back at the studio in a few days following a month's vacation in California. Hughes recently joined the Earl Hudson unit of First National.

Goulding Named to Direct "Sally, Irene and Mary"

The screen version which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will make of "Sally, Irene and Mary," musical comedy stage successes, will be directed by Edmund Goulding, it was announced this week by Harry Rapf, production executive of the company. The adaptation of the play will also be done by Mr. Goulding, a work on which he is now engaged.

Fox Starts Airplane Service

Fox News is to operate its own airplane service. It will be operated solely in the interest of Fox News and dedicated to the gathering and distributing of pictures for news reels.

The first step in this direction was taken when Mrs. William Fox christened the first airplane in the new service at Curtiss Field, Mineola, Long Island, during the week. On either side of the christening plane flew a squadron of eight other Curtiss machines.

Speed is the requisite in News-gathering, but safety has been added to speed in this Fox machine. It is equipped with three parachutes for pilot and cameramen passengers, flares for night landings, compass, speed and altitude indicators and balloon tires for landing gear. A radical improvement has been made through the installation of an extra "gas" tank which shortens the cruising radius from 400 to 750 miles. Thus equipped, the "Fox News" can make a non-stop flight from New York to Chicago in seven hours, or cross the continent with but two stops for "gas" and oil.

Though news reels and newspapers have hired airplanes on a few special occasions when extra speed was necessary, the purchase of its own plane by Fox News marks an unusual appreciation of the results that can be thus obtained. The decision to establish a hangar and buy a plane was reached only after a check-up of instances in which airplanes achieved news beats.

Much of the success of such a service will rest upon the skill and daring of the pilot. A seasoned and skillful military aviator has been secured by Fox in the person of Lieut. George A. Wies, Jr., who received his training at the United States Air Service flying school at Brooks and Kelly Fields in Texas.

Stromberg Will Direct "Winning Futurity"

Hunt Stromberg has been engaged by L. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, to direct "Winning the Futurity," a race track special to be released by Chadwick organization probably in December. Stromberg only recently completed "The Romances of an Actress" for Chadwick.

"Winning the Futurity" is an adaptation from the well known stage success of two generations ago. Several of the race track scenes have already been made with some of the biggest turf events of the season as the background. The cast for the picture has not yet been announced.

Stuart Holmes Has Comedy Role in "Heir Loons"

Stuart Holmes, screen heavy who has played villain roles in many feature productions, has been cast for a comedy part in "Heir Loons," the feature comedy which Spitzer-Jones are making for distribution by Pathe. Others who will be seen in the play are: Ralph Lewis, Frank Campeau, Edith Roberts, Sam de Graasse, Wallace MacDonald, and others. Grover Jones is the director of "Heir Loons."
Chadwick Buys Share in Studio
Purchases Half Interest in Independent Pictures Plant From Jesse Goldburg

E. CHADWICK, president of Chadwick Picture Corporation, has purchased a half interest in the real estate and studios of the Independent Pictures Corporation on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood. The deal was concluded this week between Mr. Chadwick and Jesse J. Goldburg, head of Independent.

Announcement of the purchase from the Chadwick organization stated that the acquisition to carry out the production plans which have been mapped out for the coming year and that immediate steps will be taken to enlarge the studios to house the Chadwick units as well as those of the Independent company.

It is planned to increase the stage space to 17,500 square feet from the present measure of 15,500 square feet, and erect a new two-story building with offices on the rear of the property.

Independent Pictures Corporation will continue to operate its Bob Custer, Bill Cody and Big Timber units, while Chadwick Pictures Corporation will produce with the George Walsh, Lionel Barrymore and Larry Semon units. The Charles Ray unit will continue to produce at the Charles Ray Studio, and the Hunt Stromberg unit at the Hollywood Studios.

Mr. Chadwick is expected to return east at the end of this month with Mr. Goldburg, and further announcement concerning the studio activities of both organizations will be made.

“Phantom” N. Y. Premiere Set
Elaborate Plans Made by Universal for Opening at Astor September 7th

UNIVERSAL’S long heralded “Phantom of the Opera” is to have its New York premiere at the Astor Theatre, September 7th. Lon Chaney is the star and the featured players are Mary Philbin and Norma Kerry. Elaborate preparations are under way by Universal for a lavish presentation.

Notable in the premiere plans are the proposed musical accompaniments. Universal has secured the services of Professor Gustav Hindrichs, noted musical director to arrange the score and incidental accompaniment.

The big scenes of the “Phantom” are filmed in natural color, including a masked ball sequence with several thousand actors and actresses in brilliant costumes. The home office of Universal has started an exploitation campaign which it is said will surpass anything of the kind ever attempted by the company. When he departed for Europe, Carl Laemmle left word to spare no expense in putting the picture over as no Universal picture had ever been put over before.

The “Phantom” will not be roadshowed, but will be released to exhibitors early in the Fall.

“Pride of Force” Under Way at Gerson’s
Production is under way at the Gerson studios on the coast on “The Pride of the Force,” a police story by Arthur Hoerl. It is being directed by Duke Worne and supervised by B. Berger. This is the first of a series of six pictures being produced by B. Berger of Gerson Pictures for release through Rayart.

Featured in the cast of “The Pride of the Force” are Tom Santschi, Gladys Hulette, Francis X. Bushman, James Morrison, Crawford Kent, Alice Powell, Edith Chapman and Joseph Girard.

Russian Prince Leading Man for Pola Negri
Pola Negri’s leading man for “Flower of Night,” her next starring vehicle for Paramount, will be Yonea Troubetzkoy, son of the Russian Prince and Princess Nicola Troubetzkoy.

The picture is scheduled to go into production this week under the direction of Paul Bern. The story is from the pen of Joseph Hergesheimer.

Levy Joins Commonwealth as Sales Manager
Jack Levy, formerly associated with Fox Film as head of the New York exchange and as sales manager, has joined Commonwealth Film Corporation as sales manager. Mr. Levy’s connection with the film industry dates back several years and he is widely known in sales circles. Commonwealth is distributing 42 productions.

Four M-G-M Features In August

Announce Important Productions for Booking During Greater Movie Season

FOUR important feature productions have been scheduled for release during August by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Included in the group is "Romola," starring Lillian Gish, Monta Bell's production "Pretty Ladies," "The Unholy Three," in which Lon Chaney plays a featured role, and Hobart Henley's "A Slave of Fashion."

The list will be headed by "Romola," which is announced for release on August 1st. This Monta Bell production offers a cast including Tom Moore, ZaSu Pitts, Lillian Tashman, in the featured roles, and with Norma Shearer, Conrad Nagel and George K. Arthur in minor parts. A special feature of the offering is a reproduction of scenes of the "Romola" photographed in Technicolor. The picture was shown at a pre-release engagement at the Capitol, New York City, last week.

Tod Browning's "The Unholy Three," is next, with release scheduled for August sixteenth. Lon Chaney and Mae Busch have the featured roles in this mystery romance adapted by Waldemar Young from Tod Robins' novel of the same title. Those who have prominent parts in the supporting company are Matt Moore, Victor McLaglen and Harry Earles.

Lillian Gish's vehicle, "Romola," which was filmed in Italy under the direction of Henry King, will be released August twentieth. The supporting cast is headed by Dorothy Gish, the star's sister, and has Ronald Colman in the heroine role. The production was presented on Broadway last season at the George M. Cohan theatre.

Norma Shearer is featured opposite Lew Cody in "A Slave of Fashion," which is a Samuel Shipman story directed by Hobart Henley from the screen adaptation made by Bess Meredyth. It will be released on August twenty-third. William Haines, Mary Carr, James Corrigan, Virna Odegan, Miss Dupont, Estelle Clark and Sidney Bracy comprise the unusually strong cast of this swiftly-moving and thoroughly modern story. A number of elaborate scenes in technicolor are a feature of the film.

First National Gives New Titles for Two Features

"What Fools Men" is the new title selected by First National for the screen version of Henry Kitchell Webster's novel "Joseph Greer and His Daughter," and "The Sea Woman," which Edwin Carewe is filming, will be released as "Dangerous Currents," according to an announcement this week from the First National offices.

Additions Are Made to "Big Parade"

Hobart Bosworth, Claire Adams, Robert Ober, and Claire McDowell have been added to the cast of "The Big Parade," John Gilbert's first starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Nardelli Signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

George A. Nardelli, former motorcycle racer who has appeared in minor roles in several feature pictures, has been signed to a long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

John Weier, Fox Magazine Editor, Dead

John F. Weier, editor of Fox Folks, the Fox Film Corporation monthly magazine, passed away suddenly July 17th, a victim of apoplexy. He was stricken while in a tea room near his home in Flushing and died shortly after reaching the hospital.

Weier, 53 years old, had wide experience as a newspaper man and before joining Fox was owner of the Flushing Daily Times for ten years. Mayor John Purroy Mitchel appointed him Park Commissioner of Queens and during his term of office he initiated many improvements. He is survived by a wife and two sons.

"The Danger Line" is Next Macfadden Feature

"The Danger Line" is the title of the second Bernarr Macfadden True Story Films production for distribution by Astor, it was announced this week by Harry Rath- re, president of Astor. Production will be made at the former Pathé Studio in the Bronx. The scenario for the play is now being written by Harry Allen Browne.

Wesley Ruggles to Direct "Plastic Age"

Wesley Ruggles has been signed by B. P. Schulberg to direct the screen version of the Pever Marks novel, "The Plastic Age," which will be released as a Preferred Picture on the new season's program. Camera work is to start shortly. Donald Keith and Clara Bow have the principal roles. The picture is scheduled for release the first week in November.

EDWIN MILES FADMAN, Pres.
Grainger Back From Long Trip

James R. Grainger, general sales manager for Fox Film Corporation, is back at his desk in New York City after a tour which took him to all the branch offices of the company in the United States and Canada. A keen observer of conditions, Grainger looked carefully into all local situations and returned most optimistic about the prospects of what he thinks will be an exceptional season. Not only does he think it will be a big season for the Fox Film Corporation, but that business conditions in general will show a vast improvement.

"Indications point to the biggest season in motion pictures yet known," said Mr. Grainger. "I have made a careful survey of business conditions in all big cities of the United States and Canada and as a result of this survey I do not hesitate to make the prediction that the season of 1925-26 will be the greatest in point of business the motion picture industry has ever known.

"One reason I feel so optimistic is that everybody seems to have plenty of money and willing to spend it. Another reason is that the finest pictures yet produced will go into the motion picture theatres during the coming season.

"Competition has been exceedingly keen during the past few years and the larger producers of pictures have come to a realization that they must bend every effort towards superior production. While more money is going into pictures than ever before, I believe the vast amount of capital is being expended more sanely and more wisely."

Two Chadwick Releases Fixed

"Wizard of Oz" and "American Pluck"
Are Due for the Exhibitors in August

I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, returned to New York this week with a print of "The Unchastened Woman," which will bring Thela Bara back to the screen, and with the announcement that two of his company's seventeen productions for the coming season will go to the exhibitors in August.

"The Wizard of Oz" is the first of these and it will be released August 1st. It will be followed on the 15th by "American Pluck." The former is Larry Semon's first offering of the new season. It is based on the well known book and play of the same name by L. Frank Baum. The picture has already had pre-release showings in New York, Los Angeles and other key cities.

"American Pluck" is the first of a series of six pictures George Walsh will make for Chadwick this year. It was directed by Richard Stanton from Ralph Spence's adaptation of "Blaze Derringer," a novel by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr. In addition to Walsh the cast includes Wanda Hawley, Tom Wilson, Leo White, Frank Leigh, Wilfred North, Sydney De Grey and Day Mason.

"The Unchastened Woman," Thela Bara's new vehicle, was personally supervised by Chadwick and was in production for several months. Arrangements are now being completed for the World's premiere showing in New York city, where it will be booked for an indefinite engagement. The house has not yet been decided upon, but the picture will open about September 1st, which has been announced as its general release date.

World Premiere is Given
"Enemy of Men"

Dorothy Revier's first Waldorf production, "Enemy of Men," released by Columbia Pictures Corporation, had its world premiere at the Strand Theatre, Providence, Rhode Island, Monday, July 20th. The production was scheduled to run the entire week. It will be followed with runs in different parts of New England.

Pauline Starke Has Lead in "Little Bit of Broadway"

Pauline Starke will play the leading role, that of a Broadway butterfly in "A Little Bit of Broadway," Robert Z. Leonard's next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. An important part has also been assigned to Lilian Tashman. Jessie Burns wrote the continuity for "A Little Bit of Broadway" from the story of the same name by Richard Connell. The picture is scheduled to go into production this week.

Farnum Will Impersonate
General Custer

Dustin Farnum will impersonate the character of General George A. Custer in Universal's "On the Frontier," for which he was recently signed. "Custer's Last Stand" will be one of the big scenes in the picture. Other historic characters that will be impersonated will be Sitting Bull, President U. S. Grant and General Phil Sheridan. Edward Sedgwick will direct.

Mary Astor Lead in "The Scarlet Saint"

Mary Astor will have the feminine lead in "The Scarlet Saint," which Earl A. Hudson will produce in New York for First National. Miss Astor will take up her role in the adaptation of the Gerald Beaumont story, which was published by a magazine under the title "The Lady Who Played Fiddle," following the completion of her work in "The Face that Thrills," in which she is now appearing with Ben Lyon.

Fitzgerald Signs Gertrude Short for "Tessie"

Dallas M. Fitzgerald has engaged Gertrude Short for an important role in "Tessie," his first production to be released by Arrow Pictures Corporation. Others in the cast headed by May McAvoy are Bobby Agnew, Lee Moran and Myrtle Stedman. "Tessie" is an adaptation of a Sewell Ford story which originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

Kraft Writes Titles for Hines Film

John Kraft has completed editing and titling "The Wrong Doers," directed by Hugh Dierker, the first of the Bernarr MacFadden series, and is now writing final titles for Johnny Hines' forthcoming comedy feature, "The Live Wire."

Columbia Pictures has changed the title of "The Lure of Broadway" to "The Lure of the North." The production is to be released later in the year.

Thirteen For F. B. O. Release

Eight Features and Five Short Subjects Go to Exhibitors in September

EIGHT feature pictures and five short subjects are on the releasing schedule for F. B. O. for the month of September. The list is headed by the first of a series of eight Tom Tyler western pictures. This initial production has not yet been titled, but it will go to the exhibitors September 1st.

September 6th is set as the release date for "If Marriage Fails," an F. B. O. Gold Bond production, which recently played at the Colony Theatre on Broadway, New York. The story was written and produced by C. Gardner Sullivan, with Joceline Logan and Clive Brook sharing starring honors, and Belle Bennett, Jean Hersholt, Cissy Fitzgerald and Mathilde Comont in support. John Ince directed.

"High and Handsome" with "Lefty" Flynn in the starring role will be shown September 13th. The screen play is an adaptation by Rex Taylor of the Gerald Beaumont story. In the supporting cast are Kathleen Myers, Lydia Knott, Tom Kennedy, Ralph McCullough and Gene Perry. Harry Garson directed.

"Three Wise Crooks," Evelyn Brent's next vehicle, will be released on September 14th. The story is by John Brownell and Fred Kennedy Myton and the continuity by E. Richard Schayer.

The eighth Texas Ranger production starring Bob Custer, as yet untitled, is set for September 20th, while "Parisian Nights," the second Gold Bond production on the F. B. O. program, will be distributed on September 27th. "Parisian Nights" began its career at the Capitol Theatre, New York, and co-stars Ethel Hamerstein and Lou Tellegen with Renee Adoree, Gaston Glass, William J. Kelly and Boris Karloff in support. Al Sontell directed.

"The Wall Street Whiz" starring Richard Talmadge is also set for September 27th release. The story and continuity come from the pen of James Bell Smith. In the supporting cast are, Marceline Day, Lillian Langdon, Dan Mason, Carl Miller and Belle Bennett. Jack Nelson directed.

Still another September 27th release is "Riding the Wind," in which Fred Thomson and his wonder horse, Silver King, are starred.

The short subjects are headed by the first of the "Blue Ribbon" comedies which Joe Rock is producing for Standard Cinema Corporation and F. B. O., in which Chester Conklin will be featured. Jay A. Howe is directing the entire "Blue Ribbon" series. "Blue Ribbon" No. 1 will be released September 6th.

On September 13th "Amazing Mazie," No. 1 of F. B. O.'s new series, "The Adventures of Mazie" will be ready for exhibitors. Alberta Vaughn will be starred. The first of the new Standard Fat Men Comedies, which Joe Rock is also producing for Standard Cinema Corporation and F. B. O., featuring "Fat" Carr, "Tiny" Alexander and "Kewpie" Ross will be released September 20th.

The same day will see the distribution of the first of the new Bray cartoons, a one reel novelty, which Walter Lantz is now preparing and on September 27th the second episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" will be released.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Sign Lawford Davidson

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have signed Lawford Davidson, well known stage actor, to a long term contract. He will play heavy in forthcoming productions. His screen career started two years ago in the cast.
Premiere Dates Set for “The Gold Rush”

Further dates for premiere showings of “The Gold Rush” were announced this week by the Charles Chaplin offices in New York. The opening at the New York Mark Strand on Sunday, August 16th, will be preceded by a special midnight showing the night previous, it was announced. This will be attended by the press and will also be open to the public in certain parts of the house. Chaplin has promised to be in attendance.

Chaplin plans to leave for Europe soon after to arrange the details of the premieres there. “The Gold Rush” will open at the Tivoli in London on September 15th; at the Salle Marivaux in Paris on September 16th; and at a leading theatre in Berlin early in October.

Mack Swain, who essays a new type of role in this picture, was a New York visitor this week with his family. Despite his 12 years on the screen and 22 years on the legitimate stage, it was his first glimpse of Manhattan.

Flora Finch Prominent in Support of Johnny Hines

C. C. Burr, producer of the Johnny Hines features which First National will release, has engaged Flora Finch, well known screen comedienne, for a prominent part in support of the star in “The Live Wire,” his initial First National release which is now nearing completion in New York.

Newsreel To Train Army Men

International Will Provide Training School for U. S. Air Service Operators

Arrangements have been made with International Newsreel by Major-General Mason H. Patrick, Chief of the Army Air Service, for the training of air service motion picture operators for the Government. The step was taken as a result of the results achieved in aerial photography by International.

Graduates of the Air Service Photographic School at Chanute Field, Ill., have been assigned to the New York and San Francisco offices of International Newsreel for a course not to exceed three months. They will work with International staff men for a few weeks as assistants, in order to learn the way in which a skilled newsreel cameraman goes about the making of a picture, and after that will cover assignments with Akeley cameras supplied them by the army.

Master Sergeant Charles G. Leiby, 22nd Photo Section, Kelley Field, San Antonio, Tex., has been assigned to the San Francisco bureau of International.

When the photographers assigned to International Newsreel for training are passed by the editors of International as fully capable and competent motion picture cameramen, they will be used by the army for the making not only of films of military value, but of motion pictures of historical value. For this purpose it is necessary that they have such training as only can be had in the office of a modern newsreel.

The army photographers will be entirely under the control of the International’s news desk during their training and any individual who does not show promise will be “discharged” immediately and sent back to his regular army duties.

New Department Started by M-G-M

Bennett Nathan of New York will create a new department for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It is a fabric decoration department and in it will be created the fabrics for costumes and sets. Nathan will work with Erte, the fashion and set designer.

Nathan has built up a big reputation in New York where he has decorated and created materials for many of the big musical shows, including the Folies and Scandals. His first work in connection with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be on “The Mystic,” a Tod Browning production in which Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle have the leading roles.

Donald Ogden Stewart to Adapt His Book to Screen

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have engaged Donald Ogden Stewart, author of “The Crazy Fool,” screen rights to which M-G-M recently acquired, to make the screen adaptation of his book. The association will be the popular humorist’s first with motion pictures. His contract with the company calls for his services as a screen editor as well as scenarist.

Ben Lyon Juvenile Lead in Robert Kane Feature

Robert T. Kane has chosen Ben Lyon to enact the juvenile lead in “Invisible Wounds,” which he will produce for the First National program. The picture will be based on the Frederick Palmer novel of the same title and is to be directed by Howard Higgin.
The very strength of this lobby display on "The Night Club" (Paramount) lay in its simplicity. It was conceived by Manager John B. Carroll of the Victory theatre, Tampa, in connection with the recent showing at that house.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair," the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big." The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Press Campaign Only For "Confessions of Queen"

An exploitation campaign confined entirely to the press recently aided "Confessions of a Queen" in San Diego, where this production played at the Plaza theatre. Teaser ads were followed up by large displays in both local dailies, four 12-inch advertisements, each different, appearing in each paper. Such lines as "Her Majesty's Affairs of the Heart Exposed," "Under the Royal Robes—Just Plain Folks" and "The Soul of a Woman Revealed" were prominently featured.

Extra space was taken in both papers throughout the week preceding the premiere, each ad being changed daily. Slides and trailers were also brought into play at the theatre.

Herschel Stuart's Stunts for "Madame Sans Gene"

Both attendance and boxoffice receipts at the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, recently reached an exceptionally high figure during the showing of "Madame Sans Gene." Much of its success was due to the efforts of Manager Herschel Stuart and Publicity Director William Saal, who launched a campaign of unusual merit.

One of the highlights of the campaign was a tie-up with St. Louis' largest department store, whereby the original gowns worn by Gloria Swanson in the picture were displayed in their windows. The windows being located in a prominent part of the business section where an average of 30,000 people pass daily, proved a strong advertising medium. In addition to the window displays, the store mailed out over 10,000 letters to their largest accounts with a special folder giving the history of the production and the story of "Madame Sans Gene." This stunt cost the department store over $250, but the publicity resulting justified the outlay.

Marriage License Tie-up for "Man and Maid"

When "Man and Maid" played recently at the Sun theatre in Omaha, Neb., W. G. Bishop, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, caused widespread comment on the picture by causing the following paragraph to appear at the top of the marriage license column in the press under the caption "The Union of 'Man and Maid':"

"Elinor Glyn, famous author of 'Three Weeks,' 'His Hour' and 'Man and Maid,' and lending exponent of love as the ruling passion of the universe, wants every newly married couple or those engaged to be married, to see the screen presentation of her latest success, 'Man and Maid,' at the Sun theatre. Through arrangements with Elinor Glyn and Metro-Goldwyn, the Omaha Daily News will give to each couple whose names appear in this column during the run of the picture complimentary tickets to see this forceful and graphic portrayal of the love of 'Man and Maid.' Tickets may be procured by calling at the Daily News Office. Special stories were used in the press to supplement this stunt.

In addition Bishop distributed sealed envelopes reading on the outside: "Mr. Man: Do you dare give this unopened to a maid?" and in smaller letters under this question: "The above is for the unmarried man. The married man should give this unopened to his wife." The card inside contained an invitation to see the picture addressed in affectionate terms and signed "The One Who Gave You This."

Window displays featuring jewelry, radio, typewriters, drugs, maps and Goodyear tires helped exploit the showing also. Slides and trailers were brought into play at the different theatres and there was a special lobby display.

A strong shadow-box was the central piece of this lobby display on "The Light of the Western Stars" (Paramount), which was executed by Luke Hitchcock, staff artist of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, of which Guy O. Kenimer is manager.
Safety First Parade Given for “Seven Chances”

A novel parade emphasizing the necessity for careful driving and safety first was the feature of an intensive exploitation campaign waged recently in Madison, Wis., in connection with the showing of Buster Keaton’s new comedy, “Seven Chances,” at the Strand Theatre. Six trucks headed this parade, the first truck carrying an auto which had been slightly damaged with a banner reading “Chance No. 1.” The second truck carried an auto damaged somewhat more, and labelled “Chance No. 2,” and so on, the sixth truck carrying a machine almost completely wrecked. These six trucks were followed by a bearce captioned: “The party that is riding inside took one chance too many. But you still have ‘Seven Chances’ to see Buster Keaton at the Strand.” Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, conducted this campaign in collaboration with Mr. Desmoureaux, enterprising manager of the Strand.

The Casualty Insurance Company was induced to contribute a float to the parade also, and to donate a prize of $20 for the best essay on “Don’t Take Chances.” Manager Desmoureaux added $30 to this sum, making the prize $50. This contest was featured in the local dailies and proved immensely popular.

All Yellow Cabs carried banners exploiting the showing over their spare tires with the additional caption—“Our Drivers Never Take Chances.” A “seven” sticker was attached to newspapers by newsboys, and four window displays, two with the Knuppy hat stores and two with music stores featuring harmonicas, also helped exploit the showing. Heralds were put into the mail and key boxes of all guests at the two biggest hotels, the New Belmont and the Loraine, and a pass for the two was put into every box having a number ending in seven.

Extra space was taken in all the papers, and slides and trailers were also used. Cutouts decorated the lobby.

Clever Hoax Boosts “Rag Man”

Butte is Aroused to Fever Heat by Announcement of Junk Shop

The cleverest and most successful exploitation feat ever put over in Butte, Montana, and one of the most original known, anywhere, was recently staged by W. J. Sullivan, manager of the Rialto Theatre, and W. A. Burke, director of publicity for the Silver Bow Amusement Company, which owns this playhouse.

Burke and Sullivan advertised the opening of a “High Class Junk Store” under the management of Ginsberg & Kelly, at 142 West Park street, a select retail district. Immediately opposition was voiced by merchants of the vicinity, whereupon Burke and Sullivan caused the following advertisement to appear in all of the local dailies: “Our Hats Are in the Ring! We are in Butte to Stay. Ginsberg & Kelly, Dealers in High Class Junk, Will Hold Their Opening as Advertised at 142 West Park St., on Wednesday Next. Save all your bottles, rags, etc., for Ginsberg & Kelly, Dealers in High Class Junk.”

Indignation broke out among merchants throughout the town. The Riddell Paint & Art Company inserted advertisements in all of the dailies appealing to the public as follows: “WE PROTEST! We do not believe a junk shop should be allowed to operate on West Park street. We have occupied our present location on West Park street since the building was built in the year 1900, and have taken a great deal of pride in maintaining our store and improving and installing one of the most modern and attractive store fronts in the state of Montana. We believe Butte to be a modern city and have always displayed our faith in the future of Butte by constantly upholding and defending its claim to be the best city in America. We do not believe the select retail district of Butte should be handicapped with an establishment selling old bottles, old rags and junk. We believe popular opinion will strongly oppose the opening of a junk shop by Ginsberg & Kelly or any other concern, as advertised for 142 West Park street.”

At this point Burke and Sullivan exposed the true situation in prominent advertisements announcing that Ginsberg & Kelly had moved from 142 West Park street to the Rialto Theatre, where Ginsberg, impersonated by Max Davidson, and Kelly, played by Jackie Coogan, would hold a grand opening in “The Rag Man.”
Exhibitors' Box-Office Reports

Names of the theatre owners are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

John Barrymore is more than a name; more than a personality he is an institution. In America and England a Barrymore play is the season's event. No player in the dramatic world has been more photographed. Magazines and newspapers continually record his accomplishments; discuss his art; analyze his personality.

John Barrymore's prestige is due to his marvelous ability. He is rightly called the world's greatest actor. Under the auspices of Warner Bros., Barrymore will make his new contributions to the screen in 1925-26. It was through Warner Bros. that John Barrymore in "Beau Brummel" reached the screen. Likewise through Warner Bros. the art and the wonder of John Barrymore will this season be brought to millions.
Warner's policy of a varied program is again illustrated in the selection of Syd Chaplin to star in two feature comedies. The immense public favor toward this inimitable master of pantomime is best illustrated by the enthusiastic reception accorded him last season in "Charlie's Aunt."

Two Syd Chaplin pictures will be "The Man on the Box" and "The College Widow," two stories which have proven their box office power on the stage. If, as the forecasters have agreed, this season will be the year for feature comedies, then the Syd Chaplin pictures will be among the biggest of the year. For no comedian is more likeable, more spontaneously humorous, or has such finesse in pantomimic art.
MARIE PREVOST

Her charm has been felt wherever pictures are shown. Her appeal is world-wide yet in every production she is a new Marie Prevost. First alluring, then demure and daintily feminine, then the chic, vivacious comedienne.

Her recent fine achievements have strengthened her hold upon moviegoers. She is a proven box office star; and her 1925-26 productions will be certain box office successes.
Monte Blue will be one of the mainstays of Warner’s 1925-26 program. In a smashing railroad melodrama, in society stories, in a rugged mountaineer drama, in a speedy comedy drama, this inimitable star will prove his versatility.

And Blue is versatile. Compare “Kiss Me Again” with “Recompense”. Entirely different types of roles—but Monte Blue delighted his huge army of admirers in both.
Kenneth Harlan—Patsy Ruth Miller

These two screen artists will appear together as co-stars in stories of modern American life.

Miss Miller, as leading lady in scores of big productions during the past three years, has very thoroughly proved her hold upon the public. She is dainty and charming, and is equally at home in comedy as well as dramatic situations.

Kenneth Harlan has likewise proved his right to stardom. He is a clean cut, attractive leading man with a record of scores of box office successes.
MATT MOORE—DOROTHY DEVORE

This team of stars made their first appearance together in "The Narrow Street." They followed with "How Baxter Butted In", and showed conclusively that theirs was a type of comedy drama that is sure-fire at the box office. Matt Moore is sympathetic, droll, and has a wealth of pantomimic expression. Dorothy Devore is lovable, charming, and distinct.

The first Moore-Devore picture in the Warner forty will be "Three Weeks in Paris" to be followed by "The Sap" and "The Honeymoon Express".
Lowell Sherman

Warner Bros. in 1925-26 will afford to Lowell Sherman the opportunity this great screen and stage star so well deserves. Under the direction of great Warner directors, in Warner classics that will afford him roles suited to his personality, Sherman will be welcomed as a star by thousands upon thousands.

In Lowell Sherman there is romance, a touch of sophistication, and a flair for subtle comedy that is unequalled.
Irene Rich

The public, always positive in selecting its favorites, has very definitely decided that Irene Rich shall be placed high on a pedestal of popularity. There is a wistfulness about her that entrances. She is the most truly feminine of all feminine stars, representing the highest type of American womanhood.

She will be seen in the new Warner forty in dramatic productions suited to that personality and presence which will make her forever outstanding among screen artists.

Rin-Tin-Tin

The public wants dog pictures—and the public wants Rin-Tin-Tin, the wonder dog. He is the one canine star whose moods change with the mood of his stories. He can be tender, protective, fierce, sympathetic, aggressive, light-hearted.

Surrounded by Warner artists of highest calibre, moving through stories of the Great Outdoors filled with thrills, heart-interest and action, Rin-Tin-Tin's pictures will find a place this season in the finest theatres.
The screen's greatest stars can be made greater by fine direction. Theirs is the invisible power which gives force to the story and finesse to the acting. And Warner directors have been as carefully selected from the top ranks as Warner stars and stories.

Just as the Warner forty for 1925-26 is varied entertainment, including melodrama, society drama, feature comedy, outdoor drama, comedy drama and adventure stories, so too, Warner directors have proven their particular ability in making varied types of entertainment.

Box office value is behind the names of Warner directors. The motion picture public as well as the motion picture exhibitor has come to know and appreciate the work of these men who will handle the megaphones during the making of the Warner forty.
The genius of Lubitsch is the greater because his work always accomplishes its purpose—providing entertainment for the millions. He is known for his subtlety and his sophistication; yet he is one who reaches the hearts of the great rank and file of moviegoers. And in this is the final proof of his genius. He creates where others follow precedent, but he does not lose his hold upon the fundamentals of screen entertainment. He is, in short, always different; never beyond appreciation.

His "Three Women", "The Marriage Circle", and "Kiss Me Again" were three high spots in movie history. He is now at work on Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan", the first of his two Warner Classics for the season of 1925-26.

Authors of World-Fame

Warner is pledged to secure the greatest fiction by the greatest writers.

Arthur Somers Roche, acknowledged master of mystery stories, experienced in screen requirements, will write exclusively for Warner. Not only his future product, but his past fiction, which has placed him in the niche of popularity he now occupies, will be available for Warner.

Other authors represented in the Warner forty are the most successful and most popular writers of today and yesterday. They include Kathleen Norris, James Oliver Curwood, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Harold McGrath, Rex Beach, Gilette Burgess, Oscar Wilde, Charles Hanson Towne, Harry Leon Wilson, Herman Melville, William McLeod Raine, Charles K. Harris, George Hill and others.
Scenarios by Proven Experts

The finest story, scenerized by an experienced and capable screen writer, will become a finer picture. To the scenarist is entrusted the work of injecting those points of audience appeal that mean increased box office returns.

Warner scenarists are trained in sensing the needs of the exhibitor. All have a record of big things accomplished, from a commercial as well as a dramatic viewpoint. From these men and women, Warner will receive great screen translations of great stories:

National Advertising to Your Patrons

Warner's national advertising campaign for the season of 1925-26, will be focused directly upon exhibitors' patrons. Advertisements in newspapers throughout the country and in motion picture "fan" magazines will create an interest in individual Warner pictures and stars that is bound to reflect in increased profits at the box office.

Warner advertising will be the most constructive step in audience building ever taken in the industry. The circulation of Warner newspaper advertising will total between eighteen and twenty million!

It is advertising to the public for the exhibitor!
Serial Stories in 1000 Newspapers

Warner stories will be serialized in newspapers to an extent never before dreamed of in the motion picture world. This Warner serialization plan will cover not one, but many, of the Warner classics for the season of 1925-26, building for these pictures a ready-made audience and a lively interest that could not be equalled in any other way.

Fully a thousand newspapers will carry serializations of Warner stories. The circulation reaches millions. But actual computation, a quarter of a million columns of newspaper space will be devoted to the publication of Warner's screen fiction. In all newspapers, announcement of the forthcoming picture will be made.
In 1925-26 Warner Bros. will enjoy, through its own exchange system, the privilege of direct contact with exhibitors.

In the purchase of Vitagraph, Inc. early in 1925, Warner Bros. secured the oldest and most reputable distributing organization as a channel through which the Warner product could flow direct to exhibitors. This releasing system, the need for which had long been felt, completely founded out the Warner organization. With a perfectly equipped studio and every production facility, Warner has added branch offices throughout the world, which, operating under the control of the Home Office, will strive first and foremost for service.

Exhibitors who in the past have been removed from direct dealings with Warner Bros. will find, under this new distributing plan, a company able not only to produce fine entertainment, but to render the perfect service in distribution.

And in All Leading Foreign Cities
FORTY Specials are on the Warner schedule for 1925-26. A considerable number of showmen who already have booked the entire list for their theatres. In fact, one influential Broadway exhibitor has signed a contract with Warner Bros., binding himself to show the offerings of no other producer at any time during a term of fifty-two weeks. It was Lee A. Oels, managing director of the Piccadilly Theatre.

Six of the productions are frankly melodramas. Slightly more than a dozen are comedies or comedy dramas, although the Warners have arranged to distribute a list of comedies independently of those on this list. The remaining attractions cover the whole gamut of human emotions, supplying adventure, mystery, romance—every form of dramatic entertainment.

Herewith is a list of the Warner Forty, arranged, as nearly as is possible thus early, in the order of their release:

“The Limited Mail,” from Elmer E. Vance’s thrilling play, starring Monte Blue, with George Hill directing from a scenario by Darryl F. Zanuck.

“Bobbed Hair,” from the widely read novel which was the composite work of twenty popular authors. Marie Prevost will have the principal role, and Alan Crossland will direct. The scenario is by Lewis Milestone.

“Three Weeks in Paris,” a Gregory Rogers comedy, will be interpreted by Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore, with a carefully selected cast. Roy del Ruth is the director and Darryl F. Zanuck the scenarist. The melodrama, “Below the Line,” by Charles A. Logue, will feature Rin-Tin-Tin, the famous dog actor. The author is his own scenarist and Herman Raymaker directed the production.

Bradley King’s “Satam in Sables” has been selected as Lowell Sherman’s first starring vehicle. Miss King has prepared the scenario and James Flood directed.

“Syd” Chaplin will star in Harold McGrath’s comedy, “The Man on the Box,” with Charles Francis Reisner directing, Charles A. Logue and Mr. Reisner prepared the scenario.

Patsy Ruth Miller is starred in Kathleen Norris’s “Rose of the World,” which was directed by Harry Beaumont from the scenario by Julien Josephson.

Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller will be seen in the comedy-drama, “Hogan’s Alley,” directed by Roy del Ruth.

Oscar Wilde’s most celebrated drama, “Lady Windermere’s Fan,” is to be picturized by Ernst Lubitsch, an all-star cast appearing in the production.

“Red Hot Tires,” an adventure drama, starring Monte Blue, was directed by Erle C. Kenton. E. T. Lowe, Jr., wrote the script from the work of the author, Gregory Rogers.

Irene Rich will star in Arthur Somers Roche’s novel, “The Pleasure Buyers.” Hope Loring and Louis Lighton wrote the scenario and Chester Withey is directing.

Lewis Milestone’s drama, “The Easiest Road” will have Marie Prevost in the leading role. Mr. Milestone will direct from the scenario which he and Darryl F. Zanuck prepared in collaboration.

The Matt Moore-Dorothy Devore combination will appear again in Harry L. Wilson’s comedy, “His Majesty Donker Bean,” under the direction of Harry Beaumont. Julien Josephson was the scenarist.

Charles A. Logue’s “The Clash of the Wolves” is Rin-Tin-Tin’s second attraction on the schedule. H. Raymaker will direct from Mr. Logue’s scenario.

“The Love Toy” will be the second production starring Lowell Sherman. E. T. Lowe, Jr., is the scenarist and James Flood will direct.

John Barrymore’s first picture will be “The Sea Beast,” from Herman Melville’s epic of the sea, “Moby Dick.” Millard Webb will direct from Bess Meredyth’s scenario.

Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan will star in William McLeod Raine’s “The Fighting Edge.”

Ruth Cross’s novel, “The Golden Coooon,” is to be interpreted by an all star cast. Millard Webb directed and Hope Loring and Louis Leighton are the scenarists.

Another starring vehicle for Monte Blue is “The White Chief,” by Bess Meredyth.

Beatrice Burton’s “His Jazz Bride” will be the work of an all star cast. Jay Gelber’s “Compromise” will have Irene Rich as the central figure, Chester Withey directing from a scenario by E. T. Lowe, Jr.

Marie Prevost is to star in Catherine Brookey’s “Why Girls Go Back Home.” James Flood is to direct from C. Gardner Sullivan’s script.

In “The Sap” from the famous play the inimitable comedy team, Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore will appear again on the schedule.

Rin-Tin-Tin’s third melodrama will be “The Night Cry.” Herman Raymaker directing.

The title of a second Ernest Lubitsch production, with an all star cast, is to be announced later.

“Syd” Chaplin is to star in “The College Widow.” from the novel by Frank Howe with Charles Francis Reisner directing the production.

“Hell Bent for Heaven,” by the famous prize play by Thalcher Hughes, will star Monte Blue, William Beaudine directing from Julien Josephson’s scenario.

Rex Beach’s “The Vengeance of Durand” will have Irene Rich as star. Bess Meredyth is the scenarist.

E. Phillips Oppenheim’s “The Passionate Quest” will star Marie Prevost, James Flood directing from Bess Meredyth’s scenario.

The Matt Moore-Dorothy Devore team will star in the famous musical comedy “The Honeymoon Express” from the scenario by E. T. Lowe, Jr.

Rin-Tin-Tin’s next offering is to be “A Hero of the Big Snows.”

Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan will be co-starred in Gelet Burgess’s “The Cave Man.”

Rex Beach’s “The Barrier That Was Burned” will have Monte Blue as its star.

Irene Rich will be the central figure in Charles K. Harrison’s “Silken Shackles.”

The star of Charles Hanson Towne’s “The Gay Ones” is Marie Prevost. Millard Webb will direct.

Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore will appear in E. Phillips Oppenheim’s “The Inevitable Millionaires,” with Roy del Ruth directing from Darryl F. Zanuck’s scenario.

Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan are to interpret “The Social Highwayman,” by Elizabeth P. Traine.

A special all star cast is scheduled to appear in the comedy drama, “The Little Irish Girl.”

It is an interesting fact that already 25 per cent of this production schedule has been completed. The studios are busier than ever before, with six companies now at work and four others actively preparing to begin early production activities.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the 1925-26 production schedule, which, in extent, in range and appeal of subjects, and in eminence of stars and authors, easily surpasses any arranged in the history of the company, brought general recognition that it marked the high water so far attained by Warner Bros.

By various stages the Warner program has been enlarged from a single outstanding offering to a list of forty specials. This has been accomplished in eight years.

Harry M. Warner, the eldest of the four brothers, remarked recently that one thing the brothers had to learn through the years of their business association was the part each was best fitted to play. It was a case of "A place for every man and every man in his place." Each brother is in his place now, with the result that there is no conflict of authority, on overlapping of effort.

Thus Albert and Sam Warner devote themselves largely to supervision of the work at the home offices, though Albert is now in Europe inspecting the foreign exchanges and investigating the European theatre situation, and Sam keeps in close touch with the exchanges throughout the United States and Canada. Jack Warner spends his entire time on the west coast as general supervisor of studio activities, while Harry divides his attention between New York and Los Angeles, making frequent cross-continent trips.

It was in 1903 that the Warners opened a ninety-seat theatre in Newcastle, Pa. In the next year they launched into film distribution, forming the Duquesne Amusement & Supply Company to serve that territory. For a time this enterprise flourished, but when, six years later, its supply of product for distribution was cut off by the organization of the General Film Company, it was forced to sell out at an extremely low figure.

Four months after this set-back the Warners contracted with the Film Sales Company for the right to establish a distributing agency for its pictures in the Pittsburgh territory. Unfortunately, the films were frequently late in arriving and proved of a quality inferior to what they had expected, so once again they had to dispose of their business at a loss.

But they remained an undaunted crew—this quartette of brothers. They decided that if they couldn't obtain the kind of ready-made productions they wanted they would do their own producing. Accordingly they transferred their activities to New York and established Warner's Features. Their "Redemption," "The Glass Coffin" and "Perils of the Plains," formed the original Warner schedule. Still, they were not yet fairly launched on the road to success. Their ignorance of corporation matters proved costly, so costly that, in spite of a brave struggle, the brothers lost control of their company.

There was just one thing left to do—to start all over again—and that they did. This time they organized on a more complete and elaborate scale, determined, after a careful study of business methods and conditions, to overlook no safeguard needed to secure permanency. They formed Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., with the production unit in Los Angeles and the distribution unit in New York, and Warner Bros. "Classics of the Screen" came into being.

It was back in 1917 that the new company first did "something really big" and it was "My Four Years in Germany" that put the Warners on the map.

This success was followed by others, such pictures as "Lost City," "Why Girls Leave Home," "School Days," "Rags to Riches," "The Beautiful and Damned," "Heroes of the Street," "The Little Church Around the Corner," "Brass," "Main Street" and "A Dangerous Adventure."

Then followed the purchase of the Belasco plays for screen reproduction. By 1923-24 the Warner schedule had grown to eighteen pictures, including Belasco's "Tiger Rose" and "Daddies," and Clyde Fitch's play, "Beau Brummel," starring John Barrymore.

Last year's schedule, with twenty features, was not only the largest but the most successful schedule which had been prepared so far. And now comes the 1925-26 program—a leap from an even score to the "Warner Forty."

An outstanding move of the last few months was the acquiring of a complete and extensive branch exchange system, by which the company is now serving exhibitors directly instead of through franchise holders.

Warner Bros. Are Issuing Eight Westerns

IGHT Pete Morrison westerns are on the current Warner Bros. release schedule in addition to the Forty Classics. They are five-reelers, picturing tales of life and adventure in the "cattle country," and beyond. In this list are: "The Empty Saddle," "Santa Fe Pete," "Mystery of Lone Ranch," "West of Arizona," "Cowboy Grit," "Range Buzzards," "One Shot Ranger," and "Stampede Thunder."

Marked Progress Made By Warner Bros.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the 1925-26 production schedule, which, in extent, in range and appeal of subjects, and in eminence of stars and authors, easily surpasses any arranged in the history of the company, brought general recognition that it marked the high water so far attained by Warner Bros.

By various stages the Warner program has been enlarged from a single outstanding offering to a list of forty specials. This has been accomplished in eight years.

Harry M. Warner, the eldest of the four brothers, remarked recently that one thing the brothers had to learn through the years of their business association was the part each was best fitted to play. It was a case of "A place for every man and every man in his place." Each brother is in his place now, with the result that there is no conflict of authority, on overlapping of effort.

Thus Albert and Sam Warner devote themselves largely to supervision of the work at the home offices, though Albert is now in Europe inspecting the foreign exchanges and investigating the European theatre situation, and Sam keeps in close touch with the exchanges throughout the United States and Canada. Jack Warner spends his entire time on the west coast as general supervisor of studio activities, while Harry divides his attention between New York and Los Angeles, making frequent cross-continent trips.

It was in 1903 that the Warners opened a ninety-seat theatre in Newcastle, Pa. In the next year they launched into film distribution, forming the Duquesne Amusement & Supply Company to serve that territory. For a time this enterprise flourished, but when, six years later, its supply of product for distribution was cut off by the organization of the General Film Company, it was forced to sell out at an extremely low figure.

Four months after this set-back the Warners contracted with the Film Sales Company for the right to establish a distributing agency for its pictures in the Pittsburgh territory. Unfortunately, the films were frequently late in arriving and proved of a quality inferior to what they had expected, so once again they had to dispose of their business at a loss.

But they remained an undaunted crew—this quartette of brothers. They decided that if they couldn't obtain the kind of ready-made productions they wanted they would do their own producing. Accordingly they transferred their activities to New York and established Warner's Features. Their "Redemption," "The Glass Coffin" and "Perils of the Plains," formed the original Warner schedule. Still, they were not yet fairly launched on the road to success. Their ignorance of corporation matters proved costly, so costly that, in spite of a brave struggle, the brothers lost control of their company.

Three Big Studios Operated by the Warners

With three large studios, two in California and one in Brooklyn, Warner Bros. own complete and extensive production facilities.

The central plant in Hollywood, covers thirteen acres, an entire block, in the very heart of the city. It is fitted throughout with the most modern equipment to meet every conceivable demand of picture production.

With their several studios, Warner Bros. are placed in a position to make 40 or 400 pictures.

Jack L. Warner is in charge of all production activities. Every department of the central plant in Hollywood is under his constant supervision, and every detail of operation receives his personal attention, or that of Bennie Zeidman, who is associate executive to Mr. Warner.

Within the main studio building on Sunset Boulevard are four stages, having a combined floor area of 85,000 square feet; and capable of accommodating from twelve to fifteen companies at one time.

The second Warner studio in Hollywood is equipped with three open air and four closed stages covering an area of 97,525 square feet. These two buildings, it is said, give the Warner organization a greater amount of floor space than is at the command of any other producing company in the world, even without taking into account the eastern studio in Brooklyn.

Housed on the Warner lot, within or adjoining the main building, are a lumber yard, an iron mill, a blacksmith shop, a garage, a camera repair shop, drapery shops, property rooms, an aviary, a manager’s office, a huge laboratory, an architectural department, and cutting and projection rooms. Herein are facilities to satisfy any requirement which could possibly arise.

The laboratory, where the film shot by the various Warner producing units is developed and printed, is a huge affair, capable of handling two million feet of film every twenty-four hours.

Expert cutters and film editors are occupied constantly in the twelve cutting rooms. The projection rooms also number twelve, four of these being used by the inspectors, who view every foot of film before it leaves for distribution throughout the world.

The main electrical power station is sufficiently large to supply the needs of a city of 60,000 population. To pour a flood of light over the largest of sets, 131 overhead pieces are used.

The Warner Bros. radio station, KFWB, from which programs are broadcast daily, with Warner stars serving as announcers, is an interesting and helpful feature which has been added recently.

The Warner Bros. studio in Brooklyn is a pioneer among picture-making plants. Its two stages are not now in use, for all Warner production is being carried on at the west coast, but the laboratories are scenes of much activity.

John Barrymore in New Type of Role

WARNER BROS. never made a more enterprising stroke than when they signed John Barrymore. For the coming season’s work, Barrymore proceeded to Hollywood early this summer almost immediately upon his return from London, where, during a season in “Hamlet,” he elevated the reputation abroad of American dramatic art to a new high level.

His “Beau Brummel,” a Warner Bros. production, won for him the Valentino Medal as the most nearly perfect of the year.

This year Mr. Barrymore has made still a more radical departure in selecting “The Sea Beast,” based on the celebrated whaling story, “Moby Dick,” as the first of his productions. This epic of the sea—specifically it is a highly colorful tale of the New Bedford whaling industry—contains action sufficient for half a dozen pictures.

The selection was approved in response to Mr. Barrymore’s request for an adventure story, in which he should appear in a truly masculine role. Elaborate preparations are being made for this production.
Not all the picture stars are actors. Some of them are literary lights who supply the material which the players interpret. Half a hundred authors—the cream of the writing world—are represented on the Warner Bros. 1925-26 schedule. They are stars in their field quite as surely as the men and women pictured on the screen are stars in theirs.

Warner Bros. have always insisted that screen vehicles should be selected with as scrupulous care as casts. They were among the earliest of producers to recognize the importance of "names" lack of those of the performers themselves. Of value are the title and the theme of a production and it is enhanced immeasurably if the work interpreted is the product of authors of established reputation.

Every exhibitor knows that if star, story and author all have "sold themselves" to the public, the triumph of a picture as a box office drawing card is almost positively assured in advance. When all three have been exploited for the exhibitor—much of the trouble and expense commonly devolving upon the showman is obviated.

With thousands of persons who are both readers of books and picture fans the mere mention of many of the titles on the Warner schedule inevitably brings to mind authors in whose works they have revelled and they should welcome the opportunity to see these literary offerings pictured in the films.

27 Artists in Warner Star Stock Company

The Warner Stock Company includes 27 artists. It is declared to be the largest of the kind. The Warners secured the theatrical and picture worlds to obtain its stars and featured actors.

Any company having as a star John Barrymore, Lowell Sherman and Sydney Chaplin—any one of the trio—might be said to be "made," so far as its standing as a purveyor of entertainment is concerned.

A glance at the entire Warner list will reveal that in the selection of every individual star and stock company member, the utmost care was taken to recruit, at least, one person truly representative of one particular department of dramatic endeavor.

Such a company of outstanding authors of wide reputation—many of them of international fame—was never before brought together, is the Warner claim. They are literary specialists whose names betray the very wide range of theme covered in the Warner productions.

Warner Exchange System Is World-Wide

A major step forward in the perfecting of their organization was taken by Warner Bros. a few months ago in acquiring an extensive system of branch exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, as well as the British Isles, the continent of Europe, and Africa.

Thereupon, the distribution of Warner product had been through franchise-holders. Under the arrangement now prevailing, the company, through duly-accredited representatives, comes into direct contact with the showmen.

When Warner Bros. decided to operate an exchange system it took over twenty-nine established offices on the American continent, in addition to twenty in Europe and Africa. It has since added several to the list, to make certain that the entire exhibition field will be adequately covered. As illustrating the caliber of the men in the field organization, it may be stated that among the twenty-nine branch managers first signed, the average of service with a single company was almost six years.

Samuel E. Morris, general manager in charge of distribution, is actively in charge of this field force. Occasionally, also, he enters the field himself, conferring not only with his staff of captains and lieutenants in their several sectors, but meeting personally the exhibitors whom they serve.

The exchanges now maintained by Warner Bros. in the United States and Canada, with the branch managers in charge of each, are as follows:

Albany, N. Y., S. N. Buras; Atlanta, Ga., Ira P. Stone; Boston, Mass., Chester W. Sawin; Buffalo, N. Y., C. W. Anthony; Charlotte, N. C., E. P. Fielder; Chicago, Ill., John A. Steinson; Cincinnati, O., James V. Allan; Cleveland, O., J. E. Beek; Dallas, Tex., J. E. Huey; Denver, Colo., Charles R. Gilmour; Detroit, Mich., John H. Young; Indianapolis, Ind., Calvin Bard; Kansas City, Mo., C. A. Schultz; Los Angeles, Calif., M. A. Hulling; Milwaukee, Wis., F. F. Nine; Minneapolis, Minn., Thomas A. Burke; New Orleans, La., Thomas G. Guinan; New Haven, Conn., Paul J. Swift; New Jersey (office in New York), Nat Beier; New York City, Robert S. Horsely; Oklahoma City, Okla., J. N. Byrd; Omaha, Neb., E. F. Tarbell; Philadelphia, Pa., J. S. Hebrew; Pittsburgh, Pa., Frank W. Redfield; Salt Lake City, Utah, R. S. Stackhouse; San Francisco, Calif., Morgan A. Walsh; Seattle, Wash., H. A. Black; St. Louis, Mo., A. Danke; Washington, D. C., Stanley Spoerl; Montreal, Canada, C. R. Osbom; St. John, N. B., R. Romney; Toronto, Canada, Frank Meyers; Vancouver, X. C., David Farquhar; Winnipeg, Canada, A. S. Clowthy.

“Man on the Box” Is Syd Chaplin’s First

Syd Chaplin, who will star in features produced by Warner Bros.

“Syd” Chaplin’s next production will be the famous “College Widow” adapted from the novel by Frank Howe. He will have with him Charles Francis (Chuck) Reisner, the same director who has just finished “The Man On The Box.”

Following his success in “Charley’s Aunt,” Mr. Chaplin leaped into favor over night. Not that he hadn’t been in the popular limelight before. His “Galloping Fish” from the studio of Thomas Ince started the chuckle. Previous to this he had divided his time to business outside of the industry and making a picture now and then that always stood out. He had no intention of returning to the screen permanently.

Warner Bros. offered him a contract in which he was to have his own unit, be provided with the best story, best company and most capable comedy director obtainable. He got them and the result is “The Man On The Box.”

Warner Brothers boast Exceptional Scenario Staff

WARNER BROS. boast a scenario staff which, they contend is second to none anywhere. The work of its individual members speaks for itself. Its excellence is reflected in the finished productions.

The names of most of the men and women on this staff are almost as well known than those of many stars and directors. The Warners, realizing in fullest measure the vital part which the script writers play in picture-making, show the same discriminating care in the selection of their scenarists.

Possibly Bess Meredyth's most ambitious script was that for "Ben Hur," though she has been the scenarist of all the Fred Niblo productions. The scenarios of "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted" and "The Sea Beast," in which John Barrymore is to star, are by Miss Meredyth.

Julian Josephson has to his credit the scenarios of "Main Street" and "Brass," among a Warners production, and he will be represented on the 1925-26 program by "His Majesty Bunker Bean," to mention one attraction.

C. Gardner Sullivan needs no introduction, for he has been with many producers and prepared the scenarios for a host of screen successes. His first picture on this year's program will be "Why Girls Go Back Home.

William King, writer both of original stories and adaptations, was scenarist for Thomas H. Ince many years. He is author and scenarist of "Satam In Sables," Lowell Sherman, star of forthcoming Warner features.

Lowell Sherman's starring production for Warner Bros.

The outstanding work of Edward T. Lowe, Jr., to date, is "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," though his list of achievements is an extended one. He has lately signed a contract with Warner Bros, and his first work will be "Red Hot Tires."

Warner Features Sold Over Entire World

CONFIDENCE in Warner Bros is universal and the appeal of the 1925-26 schedule is world-wide, according to Warner officials. Impressive evidence of this is given in the fact that nineteen foreign countries, not counting those in which the organization maintains permanent branch exchanges, already are booked for the entire program.

This is the result of a campaign launched only a month ago by the foreign department, which has its home office in New York, with Gus Schlesinger as general manager.

With the twenty European exchanges active, almost the entire world is now sold on the complete schedule, it is claimed. Negotiations with the few countries remaining are now well under way, with assurances that deals will be closed in the very near future.

It is significant that in not one of the nineteen countries with which negotiations have been closed was a single production on the schedule rejected. The contracts call for a start in delivery in September. The nineteen countries are Philippine Islands, China, Japan, Central America, Cuba, Brazil, Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, Dutch East Indies, Straits Settlements and Mexico.

Warner Bros.' head office on the European continent is located in Paris, with Ronald A. Reader in charge. There are branch offices at Boulogne, Lille, Lyons, Marseilles, Nancy and Strasbourg, in France, at Brussels, Belgium, Geneva, Switzerland, and Algiers, in Algeria, on the African continent.

George H. Smith, with an office in London, is in charge of the work throughout the British Isles, Scotland and Wales. The branch exchanges are at Birmingham, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester and Newcastle-on-Tyne, in England, Glasgow, Scotland, Cardiff, Wales and Dublin, Irish Free State.

Doubtless foreign interest in Warner Bros. and their studio product is heightened, by the European tour now being made by Albert Warner. In the illness of Mr. Selznick, who took his place, the studio's film was shown at a New York hotel at the time, Mr. Warner left New York in June to carry on a general survey of European conditions. His intention was to remain away four months, not only inspecting the Warner exchanges abroad but visiting every important city on the continent.

The foreign department has been an effective force for the dissemination of Warner product abroad ever since its organization, and with the acquiring of the exchanges in Europe and Africa the facilities have been increased immeasurably.

Lowell Sherman Is on the Warner Program

WARNER BROS. recently put under a limited contract Lowell Sherman, an artist whose successes in roles that cast fashionable fancies has won for him many admirers.

Mr. Sherman will appear in productions of the Warners, which they believe will stand out prominently in the 1925-26 Forty. The first of these is "Satam In Sables" by Bradley King under the direction of James Flood.

The picture to follow with Mr. Sherman as a star is "The Love Toy," a story of New York's Greenwich village, by an anonymous author which has proved to be one of the sensational novels of the year. The director and cast for have not yet been finally selected, but will be of the same high caliber as appears in "Satam in Sables," it is announced.

Warner Bros. would have been willing to sign the star to a long term contract, but his stage engagements require his presence in New York early in the fall for an opening in a new play under the management of Al H. Woods. Last season he was the star of the stage play "High Stakes."

This artist is not new to pictures although this is his first time he has appeared as a screen star in his own right. Those who remember D. W. Grifith's "Way Down East" will recall the fine performance of the polly-axed villain in that production. The part was played by Mr. Sherman.

As the King in "Monsieur Beaucaille," in which Rudolph Valerie was starred, Mr. Sherman, as usual, gave an exceptional performance.
Many Successes Credited Warner Directors

It is one of the many proud boasts of Warner Bros., that they possess, as they confidently believe, the greatest staff of capable directors to be found with any producing organization. As in the case of their stars and featured players, every name in the Warner list is one of importance. Proof, if proof were needed, is to be found in the productions they have made.

Possibly the average fan takes little thought of the men behind the megaphone. He likes the star or he doesn’t. The general impression created by a given picture is or isn’t favorable. But exhibitors know that many an otherwise good film has been marred by indifferent or incompetent direction.

It is manifestly impossible to determine the exact value of the director’s work in the making of a picture—with relation to the work of other contributing factors—but that it is tremendous no one having the slightest acquaintance with production will dispute.

Warner Bros., were early to recognize this. Hence they exercise the same careful attention in the selection of their directors as they give to stars, casts and stories.

To the credit of Ernst Lubitsch are such outstanding pictures as “The Marriage Circle,” “Three Women,” and “Kiss Me Again,” and to him has been entrusted the making of Oscar Wilde’s “Lady Windermere’s Fan,” on the 1925-26 schedule.

Among Harry Beaumont’s achievements are “Beau Brummel” and “Reconnoisseur,” the success of which won for him the assignment to direct “Her Name’s E.V. Sje–Majesty Bunker Bean” and other important pictures.

William Beaudine’s “The Narrow Street,” “How Baxter Butted In” and other Warner attractions so impressed Mary Pickford that she borrowed his services for the production of “Little Annie Rooney.” He is starting work soon on the Warner “Hell Bent for Heaven.”

Millard Webb is the youngest of the directors, but a brilliant future is predicted for him. His work thus far has been so favorable that he has been selected to direct John Barrymore in “The Sea Beast.” Among his best last year were “My Wife and I” and “The Dark Swan.”

“The Man Without a Conscience” and “The Woman Hater” are among James Flood’s outstanding successes. He has lately finished “The Wife Who Wasn’t Wanted” and is now directing Lowell Sherman in “Satans in Sables.”

“Evie’s Lover,” one of the greatest successes on the Warner 1924-25 schedule, was a tall feather in the cap of Roy del Ruth, who has recently completed “Three Weeks in Paris” for the coming year’s program. This is to be followed by “The Inevitable Millionaires.”

Herman Raymaker directed Rin-Tin-Tin in “Tracked in the Snow Country,” and among the Rin-Tin-Tin pictures he will make on the next schedule are “Buckman,” and “A Night’s Love.”

Such productions as “Enemies of Women” and “Under the Red Roof” are among the past achievements of Alan Crosland. He has just finished “Robbed Hair,” the picturization of the current successful novel by twenty famous writers.

George Hill, who enjoys a wide reputation as a premier melodramatic director, with such works as “Get Your Man” and “While the Devil Laughs” to his credit, has lately finished “The Limited Mail” for the coming year’s schedule.

Chet Withey, who directed “Romance,” Dorothy Gish in “The Honeymoon” and John Barrymore in “In the Quiet,” has just completed “The Pleasure Buyers” and will start work on “Compromise” soon.

Erle C. Kenton, recently signed to a long time contract, made “Tea With a Kick” and “The Leather Fishers,” among his other successes. His first picture for Warner Bros. is “Red Hot Tires.”

Noel Smith, signed by the Warners because of the long line of success he has made, is at work now on “The Clash of the Wolves,” in which the dog actor, Rin-Tin-Tin, is featured.

Charles (Chuck) Reisner co-directed with Charles Chaplin “A Dog’s Life,” “The Pilgrim,” “The Kid,” “Shoulder Arms” and “The Get-Rich-Quick Wolf” were represented in the new Warner schedule by “The Man on the Box” and “The College Widow.”

Lewis Milestone, who wrote the scenario of “Robbed Hair,” has just finished the direction of “The Easiest Road,” the story and scenario of which he wrote with Darryl F. Zanuck.

Lubitsch To Direct Important Production

I. N. Ernst Lubitsch, Warner Bros., has an eminent director. Lubitsch is consistently good. Coming to America from Europe, and entering upon screen work after a successful stage career, Mr. Lubitsch brought to picture direction a world-wide outlook and an experience covering every field of dramatic effort. Critics regard as one of his strongest points the fact that he is able to inject into every player whom he directs his own personality and emotions, while his ability to work in harmony with the cameramen equips him to adapt himself to whatever situation is demanded by a given script.

It will be a long time before the “Marriage Circle,” a Lubitsch production for Warner Bros., is forgotten. Of the many lists of “Ten Best Pictures of the Year,” compiled by reviewers in every section of the country, not one failed to contain the name of this big special, and many of the judges placed it at top of column as a production without a peer. “Three Women,” a drama of another type, also won praise for Warner Bros. and Mr. Lubitsch as well as the players participating.

When “Kiss Me Again,” appeared, comparison with “The Marriage Circle” was inevitable, and, following the rule in the consideration of Lubitsch offerings, most critics declared this superior to the former triumph. Although “Kiss Me Again” is yet to have its first New York run, so enthusiastic was the dramatic editor of a leading New York newspaper, who had a preview, that on two successive Sundays in recent weeks he has devoted his lead article to appreciations of the production and its director. This is a tribute believed to be unprecedented in the case of a picture yet to be offered the New York public.

According to the Warner offices, one of the greatest marks of recognition ever paid to Mr. Lubitsch was that of the trustees of the Oscar Wilde estate who, after standing out for years in their refusal to permit a picturization of the Wilde classic “Lady Windermere’s Fan,” yielded when assured by Warner Bros. that the production would be in the hands of Lubitsch. “Lady Windermere’s Fan” has an important place on the 1925-26 schedule.

Warner Bros. Add First Vamp

For her work in “Satans In Sables,” with Lowell Sherman, Warner Bros. has just signed Myra Loy, known as “a new type of vamp” to a long term contract, making her the twenty-seventh member of their famous stock company. She is the only vamp in the Warner featured player line-up, and the company intend to cast her in important roles.

Miss Loy is a graduate of the Ruth St. Denis School of Dancing and first attracted attention when she appeared in several of Sid Grauman’s prologues at his Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood. She attracted the attention of Henry Waxman, the well known photographer, and through him she obtained a part in “What Price Beauty.” This was followed by a prominent role in “Pretty Ladies.” Her engagement for “Satans in Sables” followed.
Warner Accessories Big Aid to Exhibitors

One of the reasons advanced for the success of Warner Bros. pictures at box-offices throughout the country from the inception of the firm has been the high grade advertising accessories which this big producing and distributing company make a practice of providing for each individual release.

That posters, heralds, window cards, lobby displays, newspaper ads and matrices are oftentimes prepared merely because it has long been the custom to provide articles of this nature as adjuncts to photoplays is a suspicion for which there would seem to be some justification when some lines of "advertising accessories" are under examination.

From the moment Warner Bros. began their march to the top among motion picture producers with such releases as "Why Girls Leave Home," "School Days," etc., it was the observation of exhibitors everywhere that here was a firm which believed in good "advertising tools" and was willing to expend plenty of time, energy, and money to provide them.

No individual piece of advertising literature used by Warner Bros. is a "one-man job." The one man whose job it is to see that the posters, the heralds, the window cards, or what not are ready for exhibitors when they want them is only the "engineer."

Newspapers Using Serials of Warner Pictures

One thousand newspapers are publishing every day in the year serial novels from which the Warner Forty have been produced, it is stated.

The circulation of these publications, according to the certified statements, amounts to ten million.

Among the novels which are being serialized are: "The Limited Mail" by Elmer E. Vance; "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted" by Gertrude S. Wentworth-James; "Bobbed Hair" by twenty famous authors; "Satans in Sables" by Bradley King; "The Golden Cocoon" by Ruth Cross; "Why Girls Go Back Home" by Catherine Brody; "The Gay Ones" by Charles Hanson Towne; "The Pleasure Buyers" by Arthur Somers Roche; "His Jazz Bride" by Beatrice Burton; "Rose of the World" by Kathleen Norris; "The Inevitable Millionaires" by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

A dozen others, representing the combined showmanship sense of the entire Warner Bros. organization, give material help on everything that is produced.

Warner Publicity Reaches Every News Outlet

The publicity campaign carried on by the Warner organization is prosecuted with energy from one year's end to the other.

At work all the time in the home office is a staff of trained writers—specialists in the preparation and dissemination of publicity.

Five hundred of the best newspapers in the United States receive special articles from the Warner offices every week in the year.

Two thousand newspapers receive a regular Warner news service twice monthly.

A special woman's page, carrying a particular appeal to mothers and daughters—and they constitute the bulk of motion picture fans—is used by 900 newspapers every month.

Several hundred newspapers receive and take advantage of a regular illustrated mat service.

Every newspaper which has facilities for handling features in rotogravure—pictures of stars and of scenes in Warner productions—constantly is supplied with material.

Radio Station to Aid Greater Movie Season

It was the enterprise of Warner Bros. that gave to Hollywood its first studio radio broadcasting station and the first of its kind in the world. Not only has the studio business within its radius proven a stimulus to theatre attendance on the order of exhibitors, but KFWB is to play a big part in the Greater Movie Season just ahead.

Much of the success of the Greater Movie Season depends on the national publicity given to it. The Warner Hollywood studio linked up with some other 15 stations stretched across the continent will be a mouthpiece of the motion picture industry during the big drive to aid business. Over KFWB in Hollywood and from a station in Washington, President Coolidge and Will Hays will exchange greetings in opening the national movement. Stars of the industry will entertain, and a series of other publicity stunts are being arranged.
1100 Papers to Carry "Bonded Advertising"

WARNER BROS. are about to launch a comprehensive national advertising campaign. The purpose is to call the attention of the public to the Warner product, thereby backing up the exhibitors who play these pictures.

"Not only will the campaign be notable because of the vast field to be covered, the extraordinary number of publications to be reached and the vast amount of material published, but it will be unique in the fact that the advertising will be bonded advertising," says the announcement.

"Exhibitors will receive certificates which will be, in effect, gilt-edged pledges that Warner Bros. will make good their promise to advertise exactly in accordance with every feature of the plan as outlined to them in advance. These certificates will be an essential part of the contract between the company and the exhibitors to whom Warners sell their Forty."

All details of the campaign were worked out by Mr. Lesser, president of the Blaine-Thompson Advertising Company, of Cincinnati, who has taken a desk in the Warner Bros. offices in New York and will personally direct every move in the drive until its completion. The campaign is set to start between August 10th and 15th.

The campaign is to be carried on progressively. In the beginning approximately one hundred newspapers in forty-five leading cities—key centers—of the country will carry the opening message. About ten pieces of advertising copy, some of them filling an entire page each, will be placed in each of these publications. These advertisements will have to do with Warner Bros.' product in general, and with personalities.

The presence of the Warner line-up of such a famous star as John Barrymore, such a director as Ernst Lubitsch and the Warner Bros. stock company will be impressed upon the minds of the theatre-goers.

As the next move, advertising bearing directly on individual pictures on the 1925-26 schedule will be carried in approximately one thousand daily newspapers not included in the original list. Each will print about thirty pieces of copy, of column length. This advertising will be timed to coincide with the run of a given picture in each city and will appeal particularly to picture fans.

Meanwhile motion picture fandom will be reached through page advertising to be run through a year in five of the leading fan magazines of the country.

Supplementing the advertising campaign is the publication of leading newspapers of serialization of many of the stories picturized for release on the coming year's schedule. This service is to be given the publications absolutely without charge, and assurances already have been received that 1,000 newspapers will take advantage of it, it is stated.

"The launching of this campaign on a scale unprecedented," said Mr. Lesser, "is justified by the superior quality and the vast quantity of Warner Bros. product. For the same reason we are enabled to extend to the exhibitor lavishly liberal facilities, such as were never offered him in the past.

"Bonded advertising, is something entirely new in the motion picture industry. Too often in the past have some producers and exhibitors given intimations that they would back up the exhibitor with extensive advertising, only to fail him when put to the test.

"The certificate we shall issue will preclude the possibility of failure to make good our word. It will be as much of a contract with the exhibitor as a contract for one of our productions. It is Warner Bros.' bond, guaranteeing our sincerity of purpose and rendering impossible the cancellation of any part of the advertising promised."

Direct Selling to Public by Exploitation

AMONG the big plans underway by Warner Bros. as exhibitor aids is a nation-wide exploitation service which will take in districts from coast to coast and is aimed to help sell the picture to the public for the local exhibitors.

As rapidly as possible capable exploitation men will be engaged; men experienced in newspaper work, theatre management and who are proven showmen.

Campaigns on all Warner pictures are now being laid out at the New York office by "Exhib" Bonas, who is in charge of national exploitation.

Although the exploitation men in the field will be under the supervision of the home office, their work in localities will be guided entirely by the branch managers and the demands of individual exhibitors. In other words the men will work in districts instead of individual branch offices, and will be sent to the spot where aid is especially needed, so that exhibitors can call on the Warner local exchange for help anytime and be sure that there is an exploitation man in the district to give it to him.

According to Bonas there are exploitation plans for trans-continental outdoor stunts, and especial attention will be paid to newspapers and the radio. The radio, reaching the large field of motion picture fans that it does, will be used largely and several stunts are under cover to use this as a medium for selling the Warner product to the public.

Among them may be mentioned a traveling radio exploitation man whose business it will be to go into cities and towns and talk about Warner Bros. pictures playing the locality at the time. There can be no surer way of letting the public know what pictures are playing local theatres than by telling them directly.
Gotham Productions Has Completed Five

STUDIO work has been completed on the new Gotham productions, according to word from the coast forwarded by Sam Sax, producer of Gotham Productions and president of Lumas Film Corporation. "The Part Time Wife," fifth of the series, was completed last week, leaving but seven scheduled productions on the company's program for the coming season to be completed, with the opening of the sea- son still six weeks away.

Sax is now arranging for the sixth production which will be a racing drama titled, "Racing Blood." This will be put into production in the immediate future. Preceding it will be the comedy special, "McFadden's Row of Flats.

The five Gotham productions already completed are: "The Overland Limited," "The Fire Patrol," "A Little Girl in a Big City," "His Master's Voice" and "The Part Time Wife." "His Master's Voice" is the first of a new series featuring "Thunder," the marvel dog. Prints have been shipped east ready for forwarding to the exchanges.

Gotham Productions Has Completed Five

In connection with these enthusiastic statements details of the pictures included in the group under discussion have been published by the company.

"The Man in the Saddle"

Hoot Gibson is said to reach the high point of his career as a star in this adaptation from William McLeod Raine's story "The Daughter of the Don's." It was di rected by Herbert Blaché and presents the story as an Arizona adventure seeking thrills and excitement in South America, a role which is said to be ideally suited to the personality and abilities of Gibson.

As "The Man in the Saddle," the hero encounters all the adventure in which he revels, this including participation in political intrigue, duels, a revolution and love romance.

The climax of the story provides both a thrill and a laugh, with Hoot getting out of a dangerous situation when he meets a gang of his old army "buddies" who had been summoned to the southern republic in the same search for excitement which had led Hoot from his native land.

Gibson is given excellent support by the large cast. Virginia Brown Faire appears in the leading feminine role, and Cesare Gravina, Fred Malatesta, George D'Oyen, William Oramond and Otto Hoffman contribute characteristics in minor roles.

Gibson in a Western Thriller

"The Arizona Sweepstakes" is said to be a thrill picture of exceptional qualities. Clifford Smith, the director, and Hoot Gibson set out to make this feature a hair-raiser, break-taker and heart-stopper. From all current accounts at Universal, they did it.

There is a new angle to this latest Gibson picture in which the hard-riding Hoot is first seen caught in the labyrinths of a great city's underworld, finally getting back to his native stamping-ground—the free and unbound plains of the West.

It is the story of an unsophisticated cow puncher's adventures in a city gang life and of his battle of wits and nerve with an unscrupulous millionaire rancher from the East. Of the many exciting scenes that feature "The Arizona Sweepstakes" the great cross-country race participated in by Hoot, the villain and a score or more of real cowpunchers, is the most exciting.

An excellent group of players is found in support of Gibson. It includes Helen Lynch in the leading feminine role with Philo McCullough cast as the "chaser" for the Purse, and George Ovey take care of the comedy well aided by Billy Schaeffer, Jackie Morgan and Turner Savage. Others in the cast include Emmett King and Tod Brown.

"The Storm Breaker"

A thrilling battle with the waves furnishes one of the big scenes in "The Storm Breaker," Universal-Jewel production starring House Peters.

The locale of the picture is an island fishing village off the coast of Nova Scotia and the fishing grounds thereabouts. In this particular scene a great storm has lashed the ocean into a fury. Out beyond the harbor a fishing smack has pounded to pieces on Gaul Rock, a jagged pinnacle that reaches up out of the sea. A man is clinging to it.

The life boat of the village puts to sea in the midst of the wind, the rain and the mounting waves. At its helm is John Strong, the most experienced man of the placid, also the most arrogant and conceited. His will is supreme. This is the character played by Peters. The man on Gaul Rock is Neil Strong, John's brother.

The scene was taken in the midst of a great storm. Thrashing waves ran the rock and it is soon apparent that the life boat will be unable to get near it. John Strong turns over the tiller to another fisherman and leaps into the waves. Then begins a terrible struggle of a man against the ocean.

The supporting cast is of the highest order. Ray Hallor is Neil Strong. Others in the cast are Nina Romano, Ruth Clifford, Jere Austin, Emmett King, Lionel Belmore, Mark Fenton, Lon Poff, William J. Colvin, Gertrude Olmstead and Ed Brown. Edward Sloman directed the picture.

"Peacock Feathers"

This Universal Jewel production starring Jack Logan and Colin Landis, with Ward Crane and George Fawcett in important roles, is a screen adaptation from the novel by Temple Bailey. The story concerns a boy and a girl, both of whom are poor, but one of whom is proud.

The girl, once rich, is a member of St. Louis society while the boy is a struggling college graduate, having the soul of a poet and the purse of a pauper. The flames of love flare high between the young lovers, but when the vision of endless wealth that would certain be theirs through unmar ried life throws its haunting shadow before the eyes of the luxury loving girl, whose symbol of life is the Peacock Feather, graven deep in the escutcheon of her ancestor, she turns from his mocking gaze, determined, to wed a man of wealth whom she despises.

From this situation is developed the struggle of the boy against the persuasive power of the jilted rich man who is still determined to retrieve his prize.

Others in the cast in addition to those mentioned, are Carolyn Irwin, Emmett King, Prince Younea Trunblitzkoy, Aggie Harring and Dunbar Raymond.

"Stella Maris"

Mary Philbin, the dainty heroine of "Merry Go Round" and "The Phantom of the Opera," now is at work in a role which Universal studio executives say will give her a veritable seven triumph. The picture is "Stella Maris" and it is slated to be one of the big Universal releases for next Spring.

In "Stella Maris" Universal will present two new Mary Philbins. Each is a totally different entity. One is a beautiful invalid; fragile, dainty as a Dresden doll—a veritable poem. The other is a scrubwoman—coarse, poverty-stricken woman with absolutely no charm—but with a soul as beautiful as an angel's under an exterior that is almost loathsome.

Mary Philbin plays Stella Maris, the beautiful,—also Unity Blake, the little scrub woman who, in William J. Locke's famous novel, lays her life down upon the altar of happiness, a boy who has ever been kind to her.

Charles Brabin directed and a notable cast appears in the new picture. Elliott Dexter appears as John Risca, one of the two old heroes. Thomas Meighan is the other, and the roles of the two old heroes center. Gladys Brockwell, of "Hunchback of Notre Dame" fame, plays the sinister Lousia, his nemesis. Jason Robards plays the other man in the strange tangle of loves that makes the story. Philip Smalley and other well known artists are seen in adequate supporting roles.
Intensive Exploitation on “The Wizard of Oz”

After a short, concentrated but very intensive advertising and exploitation campaign, “The Wizard of Oz” with Larry Semon heading an all star cast, made its bow to New York audiences recently.

Lou Young and Charles Reed Jones who handled the campaign for this Chadwick special production did not overlook any opportunity or medium which might serve the purpose of notifying the natives of Manhattan and its environs that this famous L. Frank Baum story was to appear at the Colony Theatre.

One of the first tie-ups effected was with “Roseland,” known as America’s finest Ballroom, located at Broadway and 51st Street. A special “Wizard of Oz” night with a prize waltz contest was arranged and the contest and theatre engagement were announced in conjunction with the semi-weekly radio broadcasting stunt given by “Roseland” through station WHN. Special decorations showing the famous “Oz” characters were utilized inside and out for two weeks in advance and the large illuminated marquee of the “Roseland” on Broadway carried an 18 foot cut-out of Larry Semon as Scarecrow which could be seen for blocks. This display and the radio publicity reached hundreds of thousands of people and started the campaign off with a rush.

Next followed a special “Wizard of Oz” contest with the New York Daily Mirror and Daily News. Each of these papers devoting space for two weeks to this attraction. The Daily Mirror offered each day a cartoon of Larry Semon in the famous straw man make up which the children were invited to color. Hundreds of prizes consisting of a Speener Monotrol Radio Set, a Columbia Boy eyele, Hohner Harmonicas, Flexatones, a new musical instrument similar to the musical saw; Books and Dolls of the “Wizard of Oz,” Yanki Boy play suits and “Bonzo” cartoon dolls. The various prizes being donated by the various manufacturers.

The Daily News Contest featured a theatre party under the patronage of Sally Joy Brown to see this famous fantasy so dear to children of all ages.

Bobb-Merrill Co., publishers of the “Oz” books issued a special photoplay edition of “The Wizard of Oz” which was displayed in book stores throughout the city and also in department stores.

Frank L. Bacm, son of the author and President of the Oz Toy and Doll Mfg. Co., arranged various window displays of these funny character creations, together with stills from the production in many prominent windows.

In addition to these various mediums all the usual methods were utilized. Special block paper ranging from one half sheet to twenty-four sheets was made and posted in every available spot in and around New York.

A series of specially drawn newspaper ads. ranging from sixty lines to full page in size, were carried in all the New York dailies.

“Chronicles” Showing Are Given Better Films Aid

Better Films Committees throughout the country are going to co-operate in the local showings of the historical series being distributed under the collective title of “The Chronicles of America.”

The National Committee for Better Films, affiliated with The National Board of Review, with headquarters in New York City, has pledged itself, to co-operate in every possible way with theatres showing this series produced by the Yale University Press. During the past week a letter went out from headquarters to all the Better Films Committees throughout the country urging them to “encourage exhibitors to show these films by guaranteeing the sale of tickets for the series of performances.”

The letter also calls attention to the fact that exhibitors will usually allow co-operating organizations a percentage on the sales made through such organizations. Undoubtedly this is a good business proposition from the exhibitors’ standpoint.

The percentage plan was recently used very satisfactorily to all concerned in Washington, D. C., where “The Chronicles of America” were shown at the Ambassador theatre at eight special weekly performances, March 10th through April 28th from 4:00 to 5:15 o’clock each Tuesday afternoon. “The Eve of the Revolution” and “The Declaration of Independence” were shown together; then “Jamestown” and “Vincennes”; “The Pilgrims” and “The Frontier Woman”; “The Puritans” and “The Gateway to the West”; “Peter Stuyvesant” and “Wolfe and Montcalm”; “Columbus” by itself; “Daniel Boone” and “Yorktown”; and finally “Alexander Hamilton” and “Dixie.”

Tickets for the eight performances were disposed of largely through the efforts of the D. A. R., which was allowed a percentage of the receipts. Arrangements were made by the Educational and Public Service department of the Crandall Theatres, Mrs. Locher, director.

The Fre
His Greatest Triumph
Produced By Harold Lloyd Corporation
NOT long since Pathe publicly voiced appreciation for the splendid and most unusual spirit displayed by the Harold Lloyd Corporation in spending upon "THE FRESHMAN," their last picture under the Pathe contract, a sum far exceeding their contractual obligation.

Now Pathe desires, in all sincerity, to voice equal appreciation of the fact that this picture, representing a cost far beyond the producer's obligation, represents also a supreme effort in feature comedy making, a really monumental achievement in mirth-creation.

Pathe congratulates Mr. Lloyd personally and the Harold Lloyd Corporation upon their greatest triumph,—"THE FRESHMAN."

Pathe assures exhibitors of its profound conviction that "THE FRESHMAN" is not only Mr. Lloyd's greatest picture, but also the greatest picture and the greatest business-getting picture this business has ever seen.

Pathe is proud to present this supreme testimonial of the friendship and intimate relations enjoyed for eleven years with Harold Lloyd.

Alice Day Makes Debut as Comedy Star:
Charley Chase Vehicle on Program

Alice Day, Mark Sennett comedian, makes her debut as the star of a two-reel comedy on the Pathe program for the week of August 2, the make-up of which was announced this week. In addition to the Day vehicle there will be a two-reeler starring Charley Chase on the schedule for the week, which will also bring a chapter of the “Play Ball” serial, an “Aesop’s Film Fables” reel, a Pathe Review number and the regular two issues of the Pathe News.

Miss Day, who is widely known for her work in Mack Sennett productions, begins her starring career in “Tee for Two,” in which she is supported by Raymond McKee, Thelma Parr and Wm. McCall.

In this comedy, Alice appears as a little Scotch girl who attempts to find her way about America as a maid of all work, and as the title implies the business-man’s sport—golf—provides a locale for plenty of action.

Charley Chase stars in a Hal Roach two-reeler entitled “Innocent Husbands,” a domestic situation fun-fest. Katherine Grant in the role of Chase’s wife summons a medium to tell her what her husband is doing when she is away from home. Suddenly she decides that she would like to continue the seance at home and then things happen for the husband. Lucien Littlefield, Jane Sherman, William Gillespie, Kay De Lys, and Jimmie Finlayson are in the cast.

Leo McCarey directed this Roach comedy. “Betrayed!” is the title of the third chapter of the Pathe serial, “Play Ball,” written by Manager McGraw of the New York Giants. In this episode, Jack Rollins is discovered to be the son of Senator Hornell, who is conducting an investigation against Thomas W. Sutton, father of the heroine, Doris Sutton. Alene Ray is Miss Sutton and Walter Miller plays Jack Rollins.

Pathe Review No. 31 presents: “The Indian Cathedral,” an old Spanish mission in Arizona; Chapter VII of “The Origin of Man” series entitled “The Treasure Hunt,” and Rochester, the florid city, one of the Pathescope “Visiting Our Own America” series.

Completing the Pathe schedule of August 2nd are “A Yarn About Yarn,” one of the “Aesop’s Film Fables”; “Topiis of the Day,” and two issues of last minute news events in Pathe News Nos. 64 and 65.

“Evolution” Film Subject of Radio Address

Arias Now Heads Classplay Pictures Corporation

Henry Arias has purchased the interests of Jacob Weinberg in Classplay Pictures Corp., which he now heads as president and general manager. Classplay controls the distribution rights to several independent features.

Nolan Producing ‘Krazy Kat’ Cartoons

M. J. Winkler has engaged Bill Nolan, a pioneer in the cartoon field, to produce the “Krazy Kat” comics for him. Nolan has already completed two of the series. He is making them at his own studios in Long Branch.

Nolan started as an animated cartoon artist with International and later was with the Pat Sullivan organization, where in a measure, he was responsible for the success of the “Felix” cartoons.

“A Krazy Kat, Krazy Kat, where have you been?”
“In the world’s best papers, since I don’t know when.
The screen will soon behold my face,
And I’ll start and finish—the first in the race.”

Big Power Plant Installed at Educational Studio

Enough electricity to light a moderately sized town is generated hourly at the new Educational Studio, Los Angeles, where Mermaid, Hamilton, Juvenile, Lupino Lane and Canno Comedies are being made for distribution through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

A total output of 7,500 amperes at voltages of 110 and 220 is produced by the huge motor generators which supply the current for the big ares and Cooper-Hewitts used to light the sets used in the comedies. As the average house light uses about two fifths as much current, the current generated is sufficient to light 18,750 lights of the ordinary 40-watt size.

Glen Tryon and "Husky" Hanes are the principal actors in "Daddy Goes A Grunting," a two-reel Hal Roach Comedy offered by Pathé. These scenes are taken from the picture.
Short Subject Bill Given at Lincoln in Cleveland

T HE LINCOLN THEATRE in Cleveland has booked an all-short-subject program as a special attraction for three days commencing July 30th. The program will consist of a two-reel Ben Turpin comedy "Raspberry Romance," "The Love Bug," and "Our Gang" comedy; "Good Morning Nurse," two-reel Sennett Star; Pathe Review; Sportlight, and another two-reel comedy, "The Woman Stays." Managers Crockett and Burton have put out twenty-five Carnival one sheets, itemizing the program. These have been placed conspicuously in the neighborhood of the theatre. In addition, they are running slides giving the names of the short subjects to be included in the novelty program, and working up interest in the policy.

Other exhibitors in Cleveland are watching the experiment with interest. If it proves as successful it will undoubtedly become a fixture in local house policies.

International Beauty Trio in Christie Feature

Jean Lorrain, Doris Wynn, and Yola D'Avril composed an "International beauty trio" which will be one of the prominent attractions in the Christie feature, "Madame Laey," in which Julian Eltinge, female impersonator, will appear as star on the Producers Distributing Corporation program.

Miss Lorrain is an American, Doris Wynn an English girl born in Southampton, and Yola D'Avril a Parisian dancer who made her screen debut in "Madame Sans Gene," Gloria Swanson's starring vehicle.

David Oliver Joins Camera Staff of Kinograms

David Oliver, well known cinematographer who has been connected with important photoplay and special productions, has joined the camera staff of Kinograms, it is announced by E. W. Hammons, President of Educational Films, which releases the news reel.

Oliver will be assigned to special duties requiring artistic photographic effects, a field of work in which he has gained a wide reputation.

Standard Cinema Signs Rock

Under New Contract Will Produce 26 Comedies for Release Through F. B. O.

S TANDARD CINEMA CORPORATION has signed Joe Rock to a new contract to produce a new series of twenty-six comedies for release through F. B. O. Rock only recently completed two series of two-reelers starring Stan Laurel and Jimmy Aubrey.

One of the coming series will be known as "Blue Ribbon" comedies. They will feature famous fat men of the screen. The first of these was started this week with Frank Alexander, Hiliard Karr and Bill Ross as the featured players. Billie Rhodes has been cast as leading woman and James Davis will direct. The picture is as yet untitled.

The other series of thirteen two-reelers will be known as "Parisian Standard" comedies and will feature some well known comedians.

"Our Gang" Exploited by Rialto, New York

T HE RIALTO THEATRE, New York City, exploited the showing there of "Boys Will Be Boys," a two-reel "Our Gang" comedy produced by Hal Roach, with a prominent display in the newspaper advertisements for the bill which was presented last week. The comedy was given a generous play in all of the ads which the Rialto used in Sunday newspaper displays announcing the bill for the coming week.

The picture received special comment from several of the reviewers for the New York dailies, the New York Evening World critic stating that in his opinion the "Our Gang" comedy was the real feature of the program.

"The Fighting Schoolmarm" Universal—Mustang—Two Reels (Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

This story is styled a Western Love and the adroitness of it might be termed a deep melodrama. There is more of the melodramatic in it than there is of the western. It is a story that is not unfamiliar. Everybody has been acquainted with it, but there can be no denying that it holds the interest and that it is not without its thrills. Josie Sedgwick is the heroine and a mighty agile one at that. This is more than evidenced when she climbs to the school belfry and saves the small son of the schoolmaster. Estelle Conley and Zelma Roberts are good, and the valet opens the door to the chamber and the tiger is rescued. In their efforts to make their getaway Josie and the valet rush into a secret chamber where the skeleton makes its appearance. The skeleton becomes attached to the shoulders of the colored man who strives in vain to extricate himself from it. The balance of the picture finds all hands dashed from room to room avoiding first the tiger and then the skeleton.

The Story.—Lige and his valet visit the old castle in the Alps which has been turned into an inn. They inadvertently free a tiger, which runs amuck causing consternation among visitors and hosts alike. In their effort to escape, Lige and his valet wander in a secret chamber in which is a lively human skeleton who becomes much attached to the valet. From there on it is a tiger story with much action and it is left to all hands to escape the tiger and the skeleton.

Classification.—A fairly fast moving comedy with a few humoristic situations.

Summary.—There is nothing in this picture that is new. It is just another song and a new one to those who have not seen it before. It is just a wild, harum-scarum chase of all hands to avoid a tiger and a skeleton. There is hardly any action in the picture, which however will probably get a few laughs in the neighborhood houses.

"Beware"

Educational—Mermaid—Two Reels (Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

The well-known tiger and the equally well-known mermaid combine to make a skeleton and the colored man can usually be depended upon for a few laughs in a comedy of this type. This one is no exception. It is so like so many that have gone before that one wonders how they can all continue to get laughs.

Lige Conley is the featured player but the mermaid of the story is Arthur Smith in his efforts to avoid both the tiger and the skeleton must be given the palm when it comes to these so-called humorous situations. The story could hardly be dignified called such. It is just a lot of linked hokum and gags speeded up to a high pitch in a plea for laughter.

Lige and his colored valet finally reach the castle in the Swiss Alps, in which is concealed in a strong chamber this man-eating story of the Sweet Sixteen series. The valet opens the door to the chamber and the tiger is released. In their effort to make their getaway Lige and the valet rush into a secret chamber where the skeleton makes its appearance. The skeleton becomes attached to the shoulders of the colored man who strives in vain to extricate himself from it.

The balance of the picture finds all hands dashed from room to room avoiding first the tiger and then the skeleton.

"Short Pants"

(Universal—Bull’s Eye—One Reel)

ARTHUR LAKE is featured in this rather ordinary story of the Sweet Sixteen series. It has more of the genuine touch of the kid stuff in it than some of those that have gone before. Arthur is the butt of the Sweet Sixteen Club, when on a motor truck party the truck hits a bumpt and he falls off into a mud puddle. The hostess takes him to her home where the young people gather and provides him a suit. He is then sent to the hospital for proposing to her daughter, which Arthur takes advantage of, only to be discovered at the hospital by his friends who hand him his suit by the rest of the club members. The girl slips from the bench beside him and a cow plods up as the rest of the club chortles its pleasure. The farewell finds Arthur planting a fervent kiss on the wet nose of the cow. This one should prove a fair attraction in almost any house.—CHESTER J. SMITH “Innocent Husbands”
Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

This new Charley Chase comedy probably maintains the standard which has made this series of two-reelers the most consistently worthy of any being offered the exhibitor at present. The star of the series is the best player of the type he is doing and “Innocent Husbands” does not succeed then the only answer is that the material is of the “feature quality” in their short subject entertainment.

On the strength of all that he has done so far in the screen, Charley Chase seems worthy of being exploited by the exhibitors. His consistent work makes it apparent that he can live up to the reputation which an exhibitor can build for him in the community by a little “boosting.” Certainly “Innocent Husbands” is worth a good flash in the advertising of any theatre which books it, for with this picture the showman can promise clean, bright, original comedy done with the utmost in the line of humor.

Chase appears as a husband again. His wife is jealous without having a reason for feeling so. But circumstance takes a hand and places Charley in the most embarrassing position of having two ladies up to the apartment and to put to the extremity of inventing marvelous and laughable devices for the purpose of extricating him from the difficulty. His stunt of draping one of the women with a sheet to pose as a spirit materializing from the seance which a mystic is conducting in the living room, his procedure in removing the inert form of the fainting fat lady by laying her on a tea-carriage and pushing it through the window as a second spirit and his own impersonation of an uncle, dead for years, and called for by the wife at the seance, are all extremely clever and hilarious device of Charley’s cleverness.

The acting is excellent. Chase has definitively found himself in the type of characterization and essay and here he is supported brilliantly by Katherine Grant as the jealous wife. Others who score individual hits are Lucien Littlefield, Emmie Finlayson, Kay De Lys, Martha Sleeper, William Gillespie and Jane Sherman.

“Tee for Two”
Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

A LICE DAY is billed here as a Sennett comedy star in the leading role of this two-reel production directed by Eddie Cline. The picture will appear in several comedies, appears to be self-conscious or else her vehicle is too sketchy to adapt to anything noteworthy in the way of performances, and the director has left the role of the best of her career as the stellar attraction of the brief comedies.

She appears as a Scotch girl recently converted to Christianity and moving in the serious world, in which she found her true self. The director has endowed her with slapstick and movement. He is successful in spots, but the task was a formidable one and there are many moments where the picture slows down to a walk—a slow-motion walk at that.

Raymond McKee is Miss Day’s leading man, and the pretty Thelma Parr is the “other girl,” the rich one whom the father has selected for his son’s wife. The golf links, where a burlesque game of the ancient and royal sport is perpetrated, proves the battle-ground on which this Scotch Peck (the rebel against the consent of the father to a marriage. The father is a confirmed duffer and when he sees what a wonderful golfer the girl is, thinks the game was invented) can play both the boys have their way and take the girl of his heart.

Yakima Canutt Disabled by Explosion

Yakima Canutt is the latest victim of misfortune that has struck the Hal Roach company making "The Devil Horse" in Montana for Pathe release. He is confined in a hospital in a small Montana town suffering from burns received when one of two flare lights exploded as he was carrying them over a ridge in a wild horseback ride.

This is only one of a series of mishaps that have struck the troupe, though the others are minor compared with it. Earthquakes have also added to the inconvenience of the company.

"The Devil Horse" stars Rex, hero of "Black Cyclone." Fred Jackman and Roy Clements are co-directing the picture, which will be a feature in seven reels.

Al Raboch to Direct Beach Drama for M-G-M

Al Raboch, recently signed to the directorial staff of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been selected to direct the production of Rex Beach's "The Auction Block," which is to be done in film form by the M-G-M organization. Raboch was a portrait painter and illustrator before taking up picture work, in which he first engaged as a designer of settings and later as assistant director.

Enlarging Educational Studio

Huge Closed-In Stage Will Give Comedy Units 60,000 Square Feet of Stage Space

COMPLETION of the huge closed-in stage now being erected at the Educational Studio on Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles, will give the comedy units making pictures there for the forthcoming program of the Educational company a total stage space of 60,000 square feet all enclosed. The addition of this new stage therefore will be equipped with one of the largest roofed areas ever devoted exclusively to comedy making.

The units which will make Educational comedies at the studio during the coming year include the Mermaid, Hamilton, Juvenile, Lapino Lane and Cameo companies.

Mr. E. W. Hammons, President of Educational, together with Mr. and Mrs. Mort- daunt Hall, J. A. Barry and J. J. McCarthy, inspected the stage a few days ago, at which time Lige Conley was making a few scenes for a forthcoming Mermaid Comedy and Johnny Arthur working in a Tuxedo Comedy.

While at the studio Mr. Hammons watched the installation of the new 300 K. W. generator set in the new power house building. This unit will be cut into the main supply lines in a few days.

Both the Mermaid and Tuxedo schedules are well under way. Norman Taurog, direct- ing Conley and Estelle Bradley, in Mer- maid Comedies, has finished the first picture of the series, "Plunder Bound," while William Goodrich, directing Arthur and Helen Foster in Tuxedo Comedies, has also finished his first picture, "The Tourist." Tuxedo Comedies, this year, will be more along the lines of situation comedies, with clever sto- ries, written and directed by Goodrich, the director who made the popular Tuxedo Comedies of the last series, "Curses," "The Iron Mule," "Dynamite Doggie" and many others.

Jess Robbins is directing Lapino Lane in his first two-reel comedy for Educational. The English comedy star is making a series of six Lapino Lane Comedies, which promise to be among the outstanding comedies of the year.

Al St. John is well under way on his second picture, a Mermaid Comedy. Under the direction of Stephen Roberts the company is working at Newhall, Cal., in a desert location. They will complete all exteriors in this original location before returning to the studio for the interior shots.

Production on Cameo, Juvenile and Ham- ilton Comedies has started, these pictures being put under way as soon as stage space was made available and the new electric generating plant completed.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Lightnin’ (Fox—7990 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

This picture strikes right to the box office bulge! A great stage success, it has every indication of being a great drawing card in filmland. You can’t help feeling a sort of sneaking sympathy with the central figure, good old Bill Jones, as portrayed by Jay Hunt, and once you get heart interest established, as in this case, the feature is bound to go over with vim. Naturally the stage dialogue helps the picture version out a whole lot. This is reproduced in sub titles, craftily inserted, never too verbose and always right up to the mark.

It ranks as a really fine picturization of the lovable story that made a record Broadway run, you can’t help responding to the deep pathos and tender ennuiess of Old Bill Jones, and laughing at the antics of the faithful dog who guards his booze bottle. Jay Hunt in the role which made Bacon famous, gives a really splendid performance. Never once does he cross that slender borderline which divides pathos from pathos. He is Bill all the time, a true to life character, remarkable for its plausibility and tender appeal.

Director John Ford “did himself proud” in handling this one. He keeps the action moving at a chipping gait, manipulates his players with an unerring hand, and gets the real human touch into every situation. The courtroom scene is undoubtedly the “big thing” in the picture. It is replete with humor and pathos. Yet it does seem to the looker as though Ford sacrificed straight comedy to the goddess of farce by stressing the absurd antics of the judge presiding. Even in Nevada one would expect him to maintain at least a semblance of dignity, but his clowning is so crude and far-fetched that at times it crosses the bullseye line.

The support is capital. Ethel Clayton, former Paramount star, comes back to the screen in a snappy portrayal of the young widow who vamps the aforesaid judge. Madge Bellamy is a dainty touch, and the support throughout is well balanced. Photography good, settings elaborate.

THEME. Deals with an old ex-Grand Army veteran, Bill Jones, who likes his liquor and runs a hotel in conjunction with his wife on the state line dividing California and Nevada. Swindlers induce the wife to sell out, but Bill, backed up by a young lawyer, refuses to sign. Wife sues for divorce, but relents at the crucial moment and all ends well.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Comedy moments showing dog carrying booze bottle. Scene where hero dodges sheriff. Court-Room situation.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can play this up as one of the greatest Broadway hits. Road companies have played it all over the country and you can tell your patrons that the film is better than the original.

DRAWING POWER. This picture should do good business in any theatre. It is alive with human interest, shot through with bright comedy touches and entertaining as a whole.

SUMMARY. A capital drawing card. Not a dull moment in the entire eight reels. Direction and acting far above average.

SYNOPSIS. Comedy drama centering about lovable old character who is a natural born yarn spinner. He and his wife run a hotel on the California-Nevada border. When swindlers induce his wife to sell out, Bill refuses to sign. This is misinterpreted by his wife, who sues for divorce. At the last minute, in the courthouse, everything ends happily.

The Street of Forgotten Men
(Paramount—6366 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

If this doesn’t hit the box office target right plumb in the center we miss our guess badly. Here is a story checkful of human interest, well directed, beautifully photographed and crammed into a tidal wave finish that sweeps everything before it. We have never seen better stuff than those scenes depicting the good old Bowery in the late 90’s, and the lineup of the fake crippled army is so convincing that it leaves the average spectator wondering why one should be so foolish as to work for a living wage along legitimate borders. Diamond Mike’s saloon with its back room where the phony beggars congregate is the very acme of realism. The lame, halt and blind pursue their respective careers with joyous abandon, a care-free lot that you can’t help warming up to, a real jovial crowd.

Then the note of pathos creeps in. For Portland Faney, a week of womanhood about to slide into the eternal shadows, begs “Easy Money Charlie” to take care of her little four-year-old girl, an inmate of an orphan asylum. And Charlie makes good. He hires a housekeeper, rents a shanty far away from the great city and brings the kid up like a lady, keeping her off the streets and never letting her know what his real profession is.

Now this is a story that the average director would, putting it in slang phrase, “slip over” on, when it comes to stressing the sentimental angle; but Herbert Brenon has skillfully steered clear of such pitfalls; his people are intensely human, they grab your sympathy and hang on to it all through the picture. Charlie lives his double life, always protecting the girl and when the right man comes along he steps out just in time to let the marriage take place. Perey Marmont scores a decided hit in the role of Easy Money Charlie, giving a really excellent interpretation of the quality of mercy. Juliet Brenon offers a finely polished, yet extremely natural character sketch of Portland Faney, and the support is all that could be desired.

THEME. Heart interest picture, showing the Bowery of the late nineties rich in local color.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Death of Portland Faney. Scene between Marmont and dying woman where she begs him to look out for her baby daughter. Sequence where Marmont’s dog is killed. Situation where Marmont prevents White Eye from telling the girl the truth.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as an underworld romance in which the King of Beggars sacrifices everything for love. The title carries strong advertising possibilities. Feature Percy Marmont, Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton.

DRAWING POWER. A well directed, beautifully photographed story of the underworld. Should do well in any theatre.

SUMMARY. This registers as a real knockout. Fast action, clean sentiment, clever direction and good work by entire cast.

SYNOPSIS. Portland Faney, Bowery derelict, dying, asks Easy Money Charlie to take care of her four-year-old daughter. Charlie brings the child up carefully, never letting her know that his real profession is that of a beggar. White-Eye, Charlie’s enemy, tries to blackmail him but is defeated. The girl marries the man she loves.
Wild Justice
(United Artists—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

“EVERY dog has its day” according to the old adage, and it looks as though the canine is all set for a real screen holiday. But as a matter of course they aren’t enjoying a vacation, quite the contrary, for it’s real work they’re doing before the camera these days. In “Wild Justice” the dog star known as Arno certainly works hard from beginning to end. C. Gardner Sullivan directed this one and he saw to it that the bow-wow earned his salary.

But it must be admitted that “Peter The Great”, portrayed by Mr. Arno we speak of him in a human sense, so great is the impression made upon us by this trusty paw-waver and limpid eyes, seems to puzzle. There are dogs and dogs! Some of them face the camera with a sort of challenge to fate. They are there just to be photographed, don’t like the game but submit because of circumstances over which they have no control.

Now Peter isn’t a bit like a screen consort. Pete gives you the impression of a four-footed hound who is in it heart and soul, if dogs can be slaved as possessing a soul, as the reincarnation theory has it. He displays intelligence of extraordinary high degree and makes you feel that he is boss of the entire picture. The story opens with an old man lying dead in his lonely cabin. Beside him crouches Arno, the giant dog. His owner has been slain by a bullet penetrating his forehead. Doctor Blake appears and recovers the bullet, later it develops that the bullet which killed the heroine’s uncle was fired by one Blake. The latter calls the Vigilantes together, and the angry settlers besiege the doctor’s cabin. Arno is sent for help, but is trapped by Blake, tied in a canoe and set adrift in turbulent rapids above a waterfall. However, he fights himself loose and hikes back to the cabin. He gets there in time to start on the trail of Blake, who has escaped after confessing to the sheriff. In the finale, Arno pursues the villain and hurls him to death over a precipice.

THEME. Straight melodrama, with dog hero, accused of being vicious but finally clearing himself and avenging murder of his master.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Dr. Blake discovers identity of bullet with that which killed Peter’s master. Gathering of Vigilantes. Arno’s voyage through the rapids lashed in a canoe—his escape and return to the cabin. Flight of Blake after fight with doctor. Combat between Arno and villain in which latter is hurled over cliff.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A trick dog ballyhoo could be utilized with good effect in boosting this feature. Tie-up with department stores on dog supply sales is in order. Play up Peter The Great and feature George Sherwood, Frank Hagnay and Frances Teague.

DRAWING POWER. You should do well with the juvenile trade, and the young ones will surely pull the adults to see this one. Ought to get the money as a program attraction.

SUMMARY. This will make a big hit with the kiddies and offers entertainment classy enough to please their elders.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. Arno, giant dog is found lying beside corpse of murdered man. He is engaged by young doctor who discovers the murderer. Arno maintains dislike for Blake, trials him constantly and finally drives him to death over a precipice.

A Slave of Fashion
(Metro-Goldwyn—5986 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD box office attraction. “The Slave Of Fashion” as its names indicates is strong on styles in women’s clothing. Norma Shearer parades a magnificent wardrobe, wears her gowns gracefully and excites envy in the breasts of all feminine patrons. But there is more than mere gown display to this picture. The plot is a very ingenious plot with a twist to it that the most cultured fan can hardly anticipate, holds its interest all the way and swings into a totally unexpected climax.

The story starts with Katherine Emerson hiking for New York via the Pullman car route. There’s a train wreck. Katherine, bewildered, but able to rally her mental forces, gets hold of the effects of another woman who is killed, and masquerades as her in Nicholas Wentworth’s vacated apartment. Nick is journeying abroad, but he returns here, Katherine and her family, the members of which pay her an unlooked-for visit.

There are some very bright spots in this film. Along about the middle the action slackens down a bit, but speeds up again and makes a racing finish. Katherine has a grand time of it in the Park Avenue apartment to which she falls temporarily heirless, until the rightful owner shows up, having returned from Europe earlier than he expected. Norma Shearer photographs beautifully, gets all the comedy and emotional values out of a role which demands considerable talent and gives a really fine performance throughout. Lew Cody plays opposite her in the unusual part of hero instead of villain.

Mr. Cody has been principally distinguished in the past as a bad cut, but manages to make this one appealing. William Haines, Aunt Sophy, the sly scheming guy and adequate support is furnished by the remainder of the cast. The big punch in the picture is put over when the heroine’s family comes to the big town, and amusing complications result when the much-astonished Nicholas Wentworth returns to find his apartment bossed over by the lovely Katherine. The plot isn’t particularly convincing and depends largely upon the long-stretched arm of coincidence to hold it together, but, after all it’s amusing entertainment designed to please the majority of fans.

THEME. Girl leaves Iowa home and heads for New York with intention of becoming a model. Train is wrecked, and she escapes with another woman’s hand bag containing letter which gives her entree into New York society and possession of bachelor Wentworth’s apartment. Latter returns unexpectedly falls in love with and weds Katherine.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can praise this as a society drama of the finest. Go after the women trade on account of gorgeous costumes worn by star. Play up the heart interest and comedy stuff. Feature Lew Cody and Norma Shearer.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in any house if properly exploited. Put on a fashion parade where possible. Stress the funny angles.

Camille of the Barbary Coast
(Dierker-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S a lot of good common sense developed in this picture—which treats of the redemption theme. What is shown here could really happen and it is treated logically all the way without any recourse to melodrama to give it a punch. The director skates over thin ice in establishing the morals of the dance-hall denizens. But he gets away with it nicely. He has cast the picture well—Mae Busch, Owen Moore and Burr McIntosh being excellent types for portraying the girl, the youth and the hard-hearted father, respectively.

The iden is not new—and the characters have been used in a score of similar plots. But where it differs from the general run of such stories is the emphasis placed upon the humanities. The author shows us a world of sin and evil, and by his father when he commits embezzlement. The young man takes his "medicine" and goes to jail. He becomes embittered and disheartened. After being released with the customary ten spot he drifts to the Barbary Coast (the action of the story has Fraser for a background) and picks up a fliration with a dance-hall girl.

After leading him to tell his story she lends him her sympathy and offers him money. His heart is touched—and he accepts her hospitality. The father has hired a detective to watch the youth, but the "bull" being true to type, bounds him from one job to another. In the end the father is reconciled to his son—when he realizes how the girl has effected his redemption.

That's all there is to the plot—but it is told with no wavering whatsoever. To balance it the director introduces a lot of honky-tonk atmosphere. The sincere acting by Mae Busch, Owen Moore and Burr McIntosh.

DIRECTION. Keeps plot even and builds it logically. Provides good atmosphere for different scenes. Refrains from adding melodrama. Brings out the sympathy for the central characters.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can bill as a truthful little story of two despondent people—who meet and have a romance. Play up the redemption theme. Use teaser statements such as "His father scorned him, but a girl had faith in him."

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for all average houses. The heart interest and romance should appeal to the everyday picture goer.

SUMMARY. This picture is developed with a lot of common sense. To make a story out of it the father is painted rather harshly, but the climax brings on a happy ending. Treats of redemption and the power of romance to work good. Is staged with first rate atmosphere and acted with sincerity.

THE PLAYERS
Mae Busch, Owen Moore, Fritzie Brunette, Burr McIntosh, Harry T. Morey, Tammany Young, Dorothy King, William Robert Daley, Dagmar Godowsky.

By Forest Halsey. Directed by Hugh Dierker.

SYNOPSIS. Youth is caught in a thief and his father refuses to save him. After serving a prison term the young man drifts into a notorious cafe and develops romance with girl. Her sympathy helps him to get on his feet. They get married and refuse to seek assistance from the father. Eventually his heart is softened and a reconciliation follows.

Keep Smiling
(Monty Banks-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Edwin G. Johnston)

PROBABLY the best way to label this picture would be to call it a farce-melodrama with more emphasis placed upon the thrill element than upon the laughs. For one thing it carries speed—because the action zips right along without any pause—you don't have much time to notice its lack of spontaneity and humor. Had some attention been paid toward making some of the important scenes convincing it would pass as better entertainment. Even as it is it will please certain audiences who have not become too sophisticated.

The star plays a youth afraid of the water. It is planted in the first scene how this fear complex has regulated his whole life. 'There is a shipwreck, but logic disappears when the lifeboat reveals the hero (as a child), with his mother as the only occupants of the lifeboat. It lacks realism on this account. The subsequent action shows the fishing village—with the child growing up with a dreadful fear of the water. He spends most of his time attempting to perfect a life-belt—which invention is the main prop of the story.

It develops that the president of a steamship company, operatug nearby, offers a prize for the best life-belt—so the hero decides to get someone to give his invention an ocean test. Which is the point where the heroine enters—and where the romance begins.

The plot becomes more complicated. There is the other man—a suitor of the girl. And the incident builds to a climax, featuring a motor boat race. The other fellow is one of the entries and is promised the hand of the daughter if he wins. There is a merry mix-up of identity as Monty, the rival, and a pilot indulge in a lot of hokum—player the incident featuring the comedy in an elevator and at a dance. The race is the big scene and offers an array of stunts as well as some thrills. Let it be said that the hero wins the prize and the girl. It's a fair picture which could stand some editing in its concluding footage.

THEME. Farce-melodrama of youth afraid of water. He invents life-belt, saves beautiful girl from drowning, enters himself in boat race—and wins the prize and the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The speed of the incident. The moment when hero rescues girl. The development of romance. The incident leading up to boat race. The dance episode. The race. The good atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Doesn't point it with much logic in early scenes—and gags it too much toward finish. However, has not applied any brakes as it zips right along. Does a pretty good job by it.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title affords tease-possibilities. So use it for a slogan—and for tie-ups with stores, etc. Play up Monty Banks as one of the real comers in the comedy ranks.

DRAWING POWER. Title will draw them—and Banks has made some good pictures. So they should come out for this one. Suitable for average houses anywhere.

SUMMARY. If the melodrama had not been pointed so strongly at the start and the comedy gags not been used so often toward the finish, this picture would be a hum-dinger. But some of the scenes are overstressed with incident.

SYNOPSIS. Youth, when a child, becomes shipwrecked with his mother. The two are saved and as boy grows to maturity he develops a strong fear of water. He invents a life-belt and has occasion to test it while rescuing a girl. She falls in love with him. He interests her father, president of a steamship company, in the boat—and when a boat race is run off the hero wins the prize—and also the girl.
FROM a scenic standpoint this picture ranks high, the marine shots conveying much of the magical sea atmosphere for which the yarns of Joseph C. Lincoln are noted. Its dramatic quality is not so good, due to the fact that the central figure of the cast, Captain Bartlett, fails to be convincing. This character, a religious fanatic and at heart a coward, portrayed by Wallace Beery, is appointed captain of the life-saving station through political influence, a job which he surprised Homer expected and didn't get. You are given to understand that the Cap suffered some horrible experience in the past which has enveloped him in gloom, but it isn't made clear at the start that he is carrying an exis- tiing piety handicap.

Therefore, when he breaks loose in a sort of fanatical orgy, as a shipwreck is peeling, refuses to let the crew go to the rescue on the plea that he has been engaged in prayer to the Almighty and received assurance that the vessel will receive divine help; the general effect is grotesque rather than impressive. However, the captain's dodging of his duty enables the hero to distinguish himself, for Calvin takes command and rescues the crew of the storm-battered craft.

This rescue scene is uncommonly well done. You watch the life boat fighting its perilous way through huge, rolling waves, enveloped in mist and spray, the men tugging furiously at the oars, as foot by foot they near their goal, one moment lost to sight in a veiling mist, the next reappearing on a crested mountain of foam. Then the hoarding of the ship, transferring of the crew and the pull for the shore, every instant cumulated with breathless sus- pense—a truly rare and impressive bit of camera work. Another very effective episode is that in which Calvin puts out in a dory during a terrific storm to save the crazy Bartlett, who is drifting about in deep water. The fans are so used to seeing Wallace Beery in virile roles that they are apt to be a trifle disappointed over his appearance as a chap who "shows the yellow." Warner Baxter does well as hero Calvin and Phyllis Haver and Lois Wilson are pleasing in the principal feminine characterizations.

THEME. Melodrama of the Cape Cod coast, depicting romance of young life-saver and daughter of cowardly Captain, who is also religious fanatic.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Impressive marine at- mosphere. Scenes showing life boat going to aid of ship- wrecked vessel and rescue of Captain Bartlett by hero in furious storm.

DIRECTION. Fair, but fails to get life like color into events outside of straight marine episodes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange for book-store tieup on Lincoln novel from which picture is adapted. Author is widely known. Play up the big storm scenes. Feature Wallace Beery, Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter, Phyllis Haver.

DRAWING POWER. Has a good cast, photography pleasing, story moves slowly at first, action quickens about the middle and speeds into interesting climax. Suitable for average house.

SUMMARY. Although the film, as a whole, doesn't measure up to first-class standard, it is redeemed from list- ing as a commonplace feature by the fine scenic effects and potent thrills offered in the two rescue situations, which alone largely for the somewhat unimpressive narration of proceedings in the village and life-saving station.

THE CAST

Norma Bartlett ............... Lois Wilson
Captain Bartlett ............... Wallace Beery
Calvin Homer ............... Warner Baxter
Myra Fuller ............... Phyllis Haver
Mrs. Fuller................. Dot Farley

SYNOPSIS. The hero, a life-saver, loses appointment as captain of station when other man uses political influence. In the crisis, during a storm and shipwreck, the other man proves yellow and the hero leads the rescue. Love interest between hero and other man's daughter comes to happy conclusion.
Philadelphia

The unprecedented success that attended the showing of the 20 minute film showing the 250-mile automobile inaugural race on the Baltimore-Washington Speedway on July 11, when presented at the Garden Theatre during the week beginning Monday, July 13, has caused the combined Whitworth Interests to install a film race track next season as a regular part of their organization. This auto race film was made under the direction of Harry Van Hoven, advertising manager for the Combined Whitworth Interests. Due to the showing of this automobile race immediately during the week following the race, the Garden Theatre did the best business in the city and had crowded houses every night.

The Rialto Theatre, North Avenue near Linden, closed on Saturday night, July 18, for two weeks. This playhouse is operated by the Associated Theatres Company and is managed by Samuel Back. It will be renovated while dark and will reopen when the Greater Movie Season starts on Monday, August 3.

B. Oletsky, manager of the Waverly Theatre and son of Pete Oletsky, proprietor of the Federated Exchange in Baltimore, returned from a vacation in Philadelphia and Atlantic City, on Monday, July 13. He motored on the trip and had his mother and three sisters along. They had a fine time but the young man came back with a very bad case of sunburn.

Bernard Depkin, Jr., is leaving back and forth between New York, Baltimore and Washington these days. He is not saying much but is evidently looking out for bookings for the new season of Warner Brother pictures, which they have been running at the Hippodrome, which he manages. He has just made a drastic cut in his newspaper advertising.

Mrs. Frank A. Hornig, wife of the manager of the Horn Theatre, 218 West Pratt street, and their young son, are spending the summer at Atlantic City. Mr. Hornig goes to the resort every Saturday to spend the week end.

Keith's Hippodrome Theatre, managed by E. A. Lake, has lowered the prices of admission to conform with the prices of the Garden Theatre, a Whitlirth playhouse. These houses show feature pictures and short subjects together with five acts of vaudeville.

M. Schaefier, publicity representative of the United Artists Corporation, visited Baltimore on Wednesday, July 15, and called on various editors in that city.

Ernest Geyer, exploiter, and O. B. Freeman, manager for Paramount left Monday this week for Dayton, Tenn., to explain the interest of the manager in the interests of the managers, which is playing there next week.

Fred L. Davie, manager of Film Booking Office, got in Saturday last week from Tennessee, where he has been for about ten days. He expects to stay a little while here before going out on the road again.

The Charlotte branch of Progress Pictures, Inc., moved last week from their old offices at 8 South Church street to new headquarters at 303 West Fourth street.

Theatre Supply and Equipment company will house an organ beginning this week, in the interest of better projection and better equipment. J. R. McElhaney, manager, is editor-in-chief of this very admirable little booklet.

Louis B. Remy, formerly assistant to Mr. Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Amusement Company which operates all the Majestic Theatres in the Orpheum circuit, has recently signed a contract with Fox Film Corporation, and will be given the Southern district.

The Atlanta exchange of Film Booking Offices, headed by Fred L. Davie, has come first in another National sales drive which F. B. O. staged beginning February 1st and lasting till May 1st. "The Gold Rush" returns have now come in, showing that Atlanta starting off in third place, jumped to first in four weeks, and remained there, winning the large cash prize. This makes the second sales drive won by the local company this year, and is a very good record for Mr. Davie and his associates.

Lazarus Leide, father of Enrico Leide, musical director of the Metropolitan Theatre, has been knighted by the King of Italy, receiving the Order of the Chevalier of the Crown of Italy, in recognition of thirty years service in the chair of languages at the University of Naples, Italy.

Kansas City

Just fourteen days ago last Tuesday, the city of Kansas City, the home of the President of the M. P. T. O. Kansas City, assumed charge of the Circle theatre, a Kansas City suburban house which had been doing a weekly "Flop" for several months. Today Mr. Eisner's books will show a daily increase over the previous day—and he hasn't even started his exploitation campaign on the house. How did he do it? Simple enough. A large sign in front of the theatre, bearing the words, "Summer Prices 10 Cents," started them coming. "Why should I worry about charging ten cents when my gross receipts show more than the house formerly did at 15 cents?" asked Mr. Eisner. "That's what counts with me."

Through tie-up arrangements with the Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., of Kansas City, the M. P. T. O. Kansas City, will receive a percentage of the earnings of the serial, "Battling Breswiter," which will be recommended to the organization's membership as a means of obtaining additional funds.

When out-of-town directors of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri attend the next directors' meeting of the Kansas City Midwest Distributors, Inc., of Kansas City, has announced a group of twenty-seven productions from famous authors for the ensuing season. E. R. Collins, new Enterprise representative, is bringing in business by the armload, according to Bob Wilbers, Enterprise branch manager. C. F. Semen, Educational branch manager, was rubbing elbows among Leavenworth, Kansas, exhibitors last week, while Mr. A. Levy, Fox branch manager, announced that thirty-four towns in the Kansas City territory have been closed on Fox product. T. O. Byerle, First National branch manager, made a second trip in one week into the territory, which is proof enough that business must have been good, while Mr. A. Levy, Fox branch manager, visited Wichita, Kansas, exhibitors. Three new salesmen, Al Eden, Charles Russell and Bert Edwards, have been added to the Midwest Distributors, Inc., force. Jack Flynn of St. Louis, district Metro-Goldwyn manager, was in Kansas City and held a sales meeting.

ONE of the biggest attractions of the last week at the Coliseum Theatre was staged last week at the Coliseum Theatre in this city by Manager Frank Steffens. The feature was the double feature of "The Titanic" and "The Sea Wolf," which were shown twice daily.

The Coliseum Theatre is one of the largest theatres in Minneapolis, and is regarded as one of the finest in the city. It is located on the corner of Nicollet Avenue and Hennepin Avenue.

Manager Steffens has been in charge of the Coliseum Theatre for the past five years, and has built up a fine reputation for his management. He has been active in the Motion Picture Industry for many years, and is well known throughout the industry.

The Coliseum Theatre is one of the few theatres in Minneapolis that still offers double features. This is a popular practice in the industry, as it allows for a wider variety of films to be shown in a single week.

Manager Steffens has announced that the Coliseum Theatre will continue to offer double features throughout the summer, and that they will be sure to have something for everyone.

In addition to the films, the Coliseum Theatre also offers a wide variety of entertainment options, including live music and drama performances. This is a popular feature of the theatre, and is a reason why it is so well known in the city.

Manager Steffens has stated that he is looking forward to a successful summer season, and that he is confident that the Coliseum Theatre will continue to be a popular destination for film lovers.

The Coliseum Theatre is open daily from 10:00 AM to 11:00 PM, and is located at 900 Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota. For more information, please call (612) 555-1234.

Canada

JACK ARTHUR, director of music for the Hippodrome Theatre, yesterday broke the record of the Famous Players chain across Canada, is becoming the "Roe" in the music business. Through his tie-up each week with the Station CFCA, Toronto, with the Hippodrome Concert Orchestra. These tie-ups, it is believed, have increased the Hippodrome organization have become a very popular feature, and considerable publicity is secured.

Another of the series of special free moving picture performances as a community feature was staged in the Palace Theatre, Montreal, on July 15 when Manager George Rotsky took care of an audience of 1,500 underprivileged boys and girls. Appropriate pictures were presented, including "Christopher Columbus," and others.

Howard Snook, manager of the Columbia Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, completed the presentation of Universal's first prize of $100 in Canada for the best exploitation of the series "The Great Circus Mysteri-".

Leonard Bishop, manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, dropped in to look over his corner of the city on July 13 after spending a month on the picture front in Los Angeles where he visited many studios, had a happy stay with his father, mother and sister, and toured through Canada and the United States going and coming.

Former theatre managers of Ottawa, Ontario—or at least their wives—broke the regular feature news of the Canadian Capital on Thursday, July 16, when Mrs. Oral Clokey entertained at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa's exclusive hotel, in honor of MRS. (Capt.) Frank Goodale, now of Hollywood, California. In his absence, Mrs. Clokey is remembered as the lively manager of the Ottawa Regent and he now sits in the gold mining business.

A hit of very important social news is that J. C. Kennedy, manager of the Orpheum Theatre at Fort William, Ontario, for the past year took unto himself a wife on July 11 at Ottawa when he married Miss Blanche Gavreau, cashier of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa.

The first half of the schedule of the Toronto Motion Picture Baseball League has been finished with Regal Films, Limited, having played in the standing with four victories and two losses. First National was also in the running until the last three engagements when the team of Famous Players Canadian Corp. took First National into camp by the score of 8 to 6. Regals also got quite a scare when they were trounced 12 to 10 by the team of Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, but they held first place through First National's defeat at the hands of Famous Players. The final stand-
SAM HOCHSTEIN, who used to be a film salesman with Pathe in this city, but who is now running the Star theatre, in Hudson, following his usual policy of redecorating and changing the lighting effects in the theatre each year, has just completed the work. Edward Hochstein, his brother, who is with Pathe here, generally spends Sunday in Hudson, running the house and thereby giving his brother a day off.

Business is expected to take on the usual August rush in Saratoga Springs within the next few days with the motion picture theatres of that city coming in for their share. On account of the tens of thousands of persons who flock to the race meet each year, the theatre owners retain many of their best pictures for August.

Leon Medem, manager of the local Pathe exchange, and Charles Boyd, local manager for Associated Exhibitors, journeyed over to Pittfield during the past week to interview the exhibitors of that place.

The Majestic, in Cohoes, which is run by Louis Henry, is scheduled to open on Labor Day. In the meantime the house will be thoroughly renovated and a number of improvements made.

Moe Mark, of New York city, and Walter Hays, of Buffalo, who are at the head of the Strand group of theatres in New York, Brooklyn, Albany, Troy and Buffalo, were here the other night, returning from a most successful fishing trip in the Adirondacks. They were accompanied by Frank Dolan, of Albany.

William Benton, of Saratoga Springs, passed many anxious moments last week as his young son fought bravely for his life. It appears that the boy had had his tonsils removed, and that later on pneumonia developed. He is now said to be out of danger.

A. L. Burke, who formerly handled the exploitation and publicity for Universal in the Buffalo and Albany territories, and who later removed to New York city, has the sympathy of all through the death of his wife which occurred on July 2.

Alex Herman, manager of the First National exchange in the city, has issued a challenge to J. H. MacIntyre, manager of the Famous Players exchange here, for a golf match on the local links in the near future. Both men play excellent golf and for some time past there has been a keen rivalry between the two that has not been confined to Film Row alone.

Along Film Row during the past week were Bob Pierce of Ilion, W. H. Linton, of Utica, who went on to New York; L. L. Comors of Cambridge, and Louis Buettner, of Cohoes.

Peter J. White, who is connected with the Universal office here, has been promoted to the position of sales control, succeeding Miss Mittauer, who has resigned and returned to her home in Vermont. Howard Morgan, manager for Educational, is away on his vacation. Jane Halloran, secretary of the Albany Film Board of Trade, will leave on August 19 for a two weeks' vacation.

The Empress theatre in Nor- folk and the Star in Norwood, which have been run by A. E. Curry, have just been leased to Charles McIver, who plans to run amateur nights from time to time. Uly S. Hill, of Troy, accompanied by his son, Norman, left this week by car for Canada, where he will spend several days in angling for black bass.

George Gildersleeve, the new manager of the Community theatre in Catskill, received a visit during the past week from Herman Stearn, local manager for F. B. O. Mr. Gildersleeve reports business as being first class in the Catskill resort village.

The sympathy of the readers of this magazine is extended to C. L. Gardner, of the Pine Hills theatre in Albany, in the recent loss of his mother. The theatre was closed for two days.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, with houses in Watertown, saw to it that "His Supreme Moment" played at the Avon in Watertown, last week, and in which following residents of the city appeared, the fact was played up in the newspapers.

In order to put a stop to the practice of seeking free films, the Albany Film Board of Trade recently adopted a resolution with the result that the following notables is now prominently displayed in all exchanges in Albany:

"No exchange has the authority to approve the giving of donatives, charity, free shows, etc., to any individual, club or institution. All such requests must be referred to the secretary of the Film Board of Trade."

The Empire, in Glen Falls, which is managed by John Garry, is cutting down on its entertainment space this summer. When the house was first taken over by C. H. Buckley, unusually large newspaper advertisements were run.

If C. Bissell has purchased a new Hudson coach. By way of explanation it might be stated that Mr. Bissell is the manager of the local Universal exchange which won first place in Group C in the New York Kiddie Jubilee Contest, and which brought to Mr. Bissell the sum of $250 and to each employee of the exchange one week's salary.

There was an exciting baseball game on Saturday afternoon at East Berne between the nine from that town and a team composed of among the film salesmen of Albany. Bissell did the twirling for the film aggregation with Ray Smith catching.

C. R. Halligan, of the Universal exchange, better known to the trade as "Daisy," is enjoying himself on a two weeks' vacation which he described before he left as being "in parts unknown."

John Mattice, who runs the Novelty theatre in Middleburg, and who at the present time is booking pictures for his house as well as hot dog concessions at various county fairs, will not be seen this fall at Altamont. The trouble came when the management of the Altamont Palace upped the price of the concession beyond what Mr. Mattice thought it was worth.

A. A. Elliott, who has the Rich- alto and Playhouse in Hudson, returned from New York city last week after a conference with Sydney Cohen.

Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal theatre in Albany, has just bought himself a country home at Crooked Lake, a well known resort a short distance from Troy. Mr. and Mrs. Hallman will spend their summer there, motoring in to Albany each day, however, in order to give their personal attention to their theatre.

Miss Noma Suckno, able manager of the Albany theatre, is planning to take a two weeks' vacation. Her brother, Walter, who devotes most of his attention to the Regent, will probably remain in the job.

With sleeves rolled up, Alec Sayles, who left a newspaper desk a year ago, to become manager of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, leaves no stone unturned to attract business. That has been successful is plainly evident from the crowds that are flocking to the theatre nightly.
BUFFALO

GEORGE EASTMAN, accompanied by Dr. Albert D. Kais and the Rev. and Mrs. George E. Norton, leave Rochester July 26 for a several week's trip through British Columbia. But the latter part of the trip Mr. Eastman plans to follow the coast of the Alaskan peninsula in a large power boat. He hopes to make pictures of the kodiak bear, now nearly extinct, which is occasionally found in the neighborhood of Sitka. The party expects to return early in September.

J. N. Rogers of the home office organization is installing a new booking system at the local Universal exchange.

Use of motion pictures as a means of introducing evidence in court has been frowned upon by Circuit Judge Franklin Miller of St. Louis, Mo. It is probable that the court will bar such evidence on the grounds that it cannot be used before the Court of Appeals if an appeal is taken. Taylor R. Young, counsel for the defense in the suit of other property owners to prevent Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Clifford, 3667 Cook Ave., from selling their home to negroes, had the pictures taken. They show negroes entering and leaving a church directly opposite to the Clifford home. He contends the pictures show that the property is salable only to negroes.

TEXAS

W. L. WESSLEY, Producers Distributors Corporation, signed a contract for their entire output in Houston early last week. This was the last organization to sign an exhibitor in Houston.

Analysis of New Theatre Construction Predictions for Future Building; Many Independent Houses Scheduled

W ith the continuous reports circulating of theatre acquisitions made by large producing companies and circuits it is of interest to study the ownership of new houses and proposed theatres to be built this year. Also the question arises—what effect will the erecting process have on the construction of independent theatres and houses by small circuits operating but from two to five theatres. Will the incentive for the construction of this group of theatres be killed or invigorated?

Logical reasons can be advanced justifying either contention, but far better than reasons and opinions is an analysis of the building process that is now under way.

The new theatre projects that have been reported to the News office have been published in this department at intervals. Also the latest theatre building news is printed hereinafter. By scrutinizing this date, a conclusion that may be surprising to many is reached, i. e., a large number of theatres are being built for private ownership, though these so-called independent theatres are in the majority of cases houses constructed on a less pretentious scale than those being built by large circuit and producing companies.

A logical conclusion to be reached regarding theatre building in general is that a continuous round of theatre construction may be anticipated for an indefinite length of time as a result of several forces—the population increase of this country and the subsequent need for more seating capacity; the gradual improvement of the entertainment offered by motion picture theatres with its instigation of greater patronage; the ever present appeal for investment in any motion picture enterprise by the public; and, for the present at least, independent theatre competition for circuit and producer built theatres.

The following list of new theatre projects, numbering thirty-one, shows the Central section of the country represented heaviest, while the Eastern division runs a close second. In this particular report the West Coast is sparingly listed which is a reversal to its representation in former reports.

Two theatre projects are given that call for an investment of over two million dollars each, one at an even million and eight for more than one hundred thousand:

Consolidated's Executives Dine; Progress and New Plans Reported

THE executives and department heads of the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., attended the first of a series of get-together dinners at the Hotel Astor, Friday night, July 17, that will be given at regular intervals for the purpose of promoting the spirit of cooperation and good fellowship among all the employees of this industry.

A fascinating story of remarkable business progress was unfolded as the achievements of this company during the first year of its existence were summarized. Starting but little over a year ago and representing the consolidation of five separately operated laboratories, the management of the Consolidated has so unified and coordinated the activities of these plants that today a much larger business than the total of all the separate plants before consolidation.

The increase in the business being done by the Consolidated and their desire to turn out the best quality product and give the utmost in service has led them to enlarge one of their laboratories so that when it is finished it will be equipped to handle more film and to render a degree of laboratory service as near perfect as possible.

This new laboratory when finished will enable the Consolidated to handle nearly three times their present volume of business and will be the last word in the scientific inventions for a speedy handling of all kinds of laboratory work under the most ideal conditions.

Even further plans of expansion were hinted at by H. J. Yates, the Managing Director, in his brief informal talk. Plans that are already under way will insure the growth of the Consolidated to a creditable position in the film industry.

Poli Theatre, Scranton, Pa., Undergoing Remodelling

Taking advantage of the dull summer season to make improvements on the Poli Theatre, Scranton, Pa., the Comerford Amusement Company has temporarily closed the house. The changes being made include the removal of the picture booth from the balcony to the gallery, and the installation of more seats in the balcony as well as on the ground floor. The house is being redecorated and refurbished on an elaborate scale, including the placing of new draperies and carpets. Alterations are being made to the stage and the boxes, and a new Kimball organ is to be installed. Peter Shafer is the house manager.

Work Started on 1,500 Seat Florida Theatre

Work on the new Edwards Theatre, on Pineapple Avenue at Seventh Street, Sarasota, Florida, has started, the contract having been awarded last week to G. A. Miller, of Tampa, and it is promised to be completed and delivered not later than the first of December this year.

The building will have a frontage of eighty feet and a depth of 190. It will be three stories high, with offices and apartments on the two upper floors and the theatre occupying the ground floor with a seating capacity of 1,570.

The structure will cost $210,000. It will be of Spanish style, fireproof and modern in every way. The Universal Film Co. have taken a lease on the theatre for a term of twenty years, and they will install the theatre equipment, which will include a large pipe organ. There are two other theatres now operating in Sarasota, one of them under the management of the Universal Co.

Richmond, Ind., Theatre, Installs Marr & Colton

M. E. Remley, of Richmond, Indiana, has purchased a two-manual organ for his Washington Theatre. The theatre is being remodeled and redecorated and will be reopened September 1st. The organ will be installed during the summer.

Reducing the Fire Hazard

Undoubtedly, the greatest fear associated with motion picture projection which exists in the minds of the layman—and a good many other persons with more experience—is that of fire. This fear has some justification in the occasional serious fires which occur when some overly careless person violates the common sense rules which should be followed when handling motion picture film whether in the projection room, or outside.

This consideration of safety has been one of the impelling motives for various improvements in projection and projection room construction until now the danger of a serious fire starting has been pretty well minimized. The attempt has been made, to make the handling of such film, at least during the time of projection, more or less foolproof.

Automatic Fireproof Device

The final step seems to have been taken when two Cleveland projectionists, according to our correspondent, perfected a device for precluding the possibility of film fires while the film is in the projector.

The projectionists in question, Henry Leiber of the Strand Theatre and Edward Noble of the Kinsman Theatre have already secured the approval, it is claimed, of the fire insurance underwriters and have had favorable reports made on the device by other persons holding posts of importance in the motion picture industry.

A company of Cleveland business men has already been formed to manufacture this fire prevention attachment. Ten of the attachments have been made, some of which were exhibited at the recent Motion Picture Supply Dealers convention in Milwaukee which took place simultaneously with the Exhibitor's convention.

Incidently, the fire underwriters are quoted as saying that the installation of this device should reduce fire insurance rates.

How It Works

The device, as we have received the description, is fairly simple and can be attached to any projector. It has one principal object—that of preventing a fire while the film is being projected—which is accomplished by three operators.

It causes the projector to stop running; it extinguishes the light and it cuts the film off below the lower idler sprocket so that there is no danger of film packing at this point.

Should the film, while in motion break, either at the top or at the intermittent sprocket, should the sprocket holes be torn, or the driving belt break, the projector is instantly halted automatically. The film must be kept in motion to have a picture on the screen.

The mechanism, which has not yet received its commercial name, is attached to the head of the projector as shown in Fig. 1. It consists, primarily, of a centrifugal governor, which actuates a magnetic device for breaking the lamp circuit thereby extinguishing the lamp. At the same time the motor circuit is broken so that the projector itself stops running.

The third operation, that of severing the film past the intermittent sprocket is accomplished by means of a tension cutting device attached at a point between the lower idler sprocket and the guide rollers at the entrance to the lower magazine. This cutting mechanism can be seen in Fig. 2 which shows the tension rollers lowered after having just cut the film at the entrance to the lower magazine.

Should the film break past the intermittent sprocket, the tension rollers here illustrated will drop, thereby causing the automatic switch to open which will extinguish the light and stop the projector.

It will be noticed in Fig. 2 that there are two tension rollers below the lower idler sprocket, one bearing against either side of the film. If the film is torn on either side, therefore, one or the other of these rollers will drop, thus causing the automatic switch to function.

In Fig. 3 is shown a film threaded in the projector with the two tension rollers bearing against it ready for operation.

To start, presumably, the projector and motor switches are closed, the projector is then cranked by hand and when sufficient speed is obtained to close the centrifugally operated switch, the projector motor starts simultaneously with striking the arc when the carbons are separated.

We are not certain as to whether or not this is the procedure, but if it is we cannot help but wonder how the projectionist warms up his arc to form the proper crater and we rather imagine that with Mazda, the lamp filament must receive some considerable jolt during that first inrush of current.

If on the other hand projector and light source are temporarily disconnected from the automatic switch and started in the regular manner, will the projectionist always be thoughtful and careful enough to again connect in the automatic switch to make the device operative? These points require further explanation.

Procedure for Insuring Proper Theatre Lobby Display

W. F. Libman, Pres. of Libman-Spanjer Corp.

In last week's article, the writer whose knowledge of things artistic, and whose activities in lobby display matters qualifies him to speak as an expert, pointed out how the theatre lobby might well be regarded as the finger which beckons the prospect on past the ticket taker.

To the reader of the last article it might seem that all that is necessary to attract the eye of the visitor is to run down to the local five and ten cent store and grab an armful of chromo and have the hired man nail them up in the lobby. Maybe there was a time when this could be done, but not in the year 1925. We are living in an age of specialization.

When a successful architect desires the execution of a mural decoration he doesn't call on the local house and barn painter, and neither does he commission the neighborhood all round carpenter when he wants theatre chairs, etc.

And so it is with those things that go toward making the lobby the kind of a magnet that pulls the customer up toward the ticket box. If every theatre were equipped with a standard lobby that could be dressed up in the same manner as the chain cigar store folks dress their windows it would be an easy matter for the manager to fix up his lobby to the best advantage.

But inasmuch as every theatre practically presents its individual lobby characteristics, it is necessary for the owner or manager to call for help, and this is where the expert with the right kind of service is indeed helpful and necessary. The right time to call on the frame builder and lobby expert is when the theatre plans are being laid out in the architect's drafting room. It's at this stage of the game where the lobby man with his sense of attractiveness and utility can do his best work.

It should stand to reason that any specialist continually doing theatre work is in a position to advise and suggest as to the best means of getting every advantage out of certain lobby spacing. He knows that atmospheric conditions make themselves felt on ornamental woodwork, gildings and finish. He knows what is good for the salt air of a New England shore resort theatre lobby is all wrong for the lobby of the Florida resort lobby where atmospheric appetites eat things up in an altogether different way. So why not get expert advice on the lobby from experts and at the right time.

So much for the value of expert advice. Let's talk about some lobby abuses that can be remedied. One of them, to the writer's mind, is the pasted up poster. Years ago the only thing that men could think of when they held a poster before them was to stick it up somewhere with the pastebrush. It was customary for subway, street railway and railroad companies to stick their placards up with paste, and we can all remember how ragged looking and dirty many of these posters looked after a few days of service. But today the urge of neatness prompts even the smallest organization to do things different and better.

Some managers seem to feel that when they have pasted a poster on the outside of their theatre or even in the lobby where it may be attacked by rain, sunshine or "Peek's Bad Boy," is sufficient. But let it be here noted that pasted up posters are just as much out of the running in the life of a modern theatre, as is the old kitchen chair of the obsolete store show. Pasted up posters are all right in their place but that place is a billboard and not the wall of a lobby.

How often have we seen the handsome hero on a lithographed poster doing his big scene with part of his anatomy removed and just simply because the poster on which he appears has been insecurely pasted or has been meddled with. The writer himself saw a poster recently that had been half pulled off and showed the upper portion of Gloria Swanson supporting the lower extremities of Charlie Chaplin. This was the result of a picture of Chaplin being pasted up the week previous.

How many exhibitors during the year pay a visit to the big nationally known theatres just simply to get ideas and to take home with them a few object lessons in up to date theatre management. Practically every worthwhile big theatre is using lobby displays to the best advantage.

Many times we have seen theatres opened that were wonderful examples of architectural beauty. Buildings whose lines and proportions were so perfect that no advertising could possibly be used without outraging this architectural masterpiece. The theatre opens and folks come into the entrance but no farther, because they see no familiar mark in the entire lobby that stamps the building as a theatre. All they see is marble, bronze and tile.

In a certain cultured New England city, a theatre was planned and to make sure that it would be everything that its Grecian style of beauty called for, the services of an internationally famous store architect was secured. This house opened its doors with the dignified blowing of trumpets. After the first nighters had their innings it was noticed that business was very poor—in fact there wasn't any. It's true that art students used to come into the lobby and go into ecstasies over its alabaster pilasters but they weren't show patrons.

Today that theatre front is covered with dignified poster frames and is doing its regular share of business as a theatre, instead of a beautiful but non productive example of Grecian art. This proves that the theatre front has a mission to perform, namely—to interest the passersby in what is being shown within.

Western N. Y. Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., Opens Lafayette House

BEAUTY of architectural design, safety provided in its construction and careful attention given to the little details for the comfort of its patrons are among the features of the new Lafayette theatre which was opened on July 9 at Batavia, N. Y., by the Western New York Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of which Fred M. Zimmerman is president.

The theatre, which was built by the Faber Brothers and leased to the Zimmerman organization, is constructed of sturdy building tile covered with light buff brick. It is trimmed in white cast stone and dark buff brick and a copper cornice extends across the front. The front of the house is 52 feet both in height and width and halfway up on either side of the entrance are two stone masks. The marquise, which extends over the sidewalk almost to the curb, is illuminated on all sides by large daylight bulbs. Double rows of colored lights around the sign are controlled by an automatic flasher. At the front of the sign the theatre name is displayed in large channel illuminated letters and theatre programs are shown on either side in opaque glass letters. The theatre sign which hangs over the marquise is about 25 feet in height and also has a double row flasher system. Four large photograph frames are hung at the front of the house.

As an entrance to the lobby from the street there are three wide double oak doors finished in mahogany and trimmed with bronze grills and door handles. Each door is equipped with an automatic closer and swings almost at the touch of the hand. Over the doors is a large art glass panel of blended colors. In the lobby itself one gets the first view of a pleasing color scheme which has been worked out in all the interior decorating. The ceiling is of a rough grain plaster with maroon, blue, gold, green, grey, bronze and buff colors all skillfully combined to give a restful effect to the eyes. The border of the lobby is of light brown Italian marble with a darker marble wainscoting and baseboard. The floor is of black and white check tile and is on a level with the sidewalk.

On either side of the lobby are two large oak picture frames for bills of future attractions. On the north side there is a gilt framed beveled glass mirror between the picture frames. The box office window is between the frames on the south side. There is a three inch brass rail in front of the ticket window. The lobby is divided into three aisles by heavy rose-colored velvet ropes with bronze fittings. The lobby is lighted by a large bronze fixture in the center of the ceiling and smaller candelabra fixtures at the sides.

All of the house lights may be controlled from either the ticket office or the stage and are equipped with dimmers. Wide oak panel doors lead into the foyer of the theatre, which is carpeted with a long nap turft-like Axminster carpet with a rose and black figuring on a taupe background. Under the balcony light is provided by nine inverted ceiling fixtures. The men’s smoking room is on the north side of the foyer, under the stairs and the ladies’ room is under the stairs on the south side. Both rooms are finished in white tile and enamel brick and are large and roomy.

The auditorium walls are of light buff color and on either side are tapestry effect panels of maroon stencil work trimmed with a border of gold-coloring ornamental plaster. The stencil work is shaded to give it a cloth-like appearance. The radiators are set in deep recesses in the walls along the side aisles.

There are 700 seats on the main floor. Each seat is leather cushioned and knee room of 30 inches is allowed between the seat backs. There are 22 seats in each row—eleven in each section. Four double exit doors lead from the auditorium to concrete runways which lead directly to the street.

Kivalina of the Icelands—Pathe, Strand, New York

Times: “As an antidote to the sultry weather, 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands,' the principal attraction, at the Strand this week, undoubtedly merits a purpose yesterday, as for more than an hour it felt as if one were centering one's attention upon a frozen background with scenes of the 'restless Arctic Ocean,' silenced by the presence of deadly winter. There is a deal to be learned from this picture, and much credit is due Miss Harlan-Miller for her clutch and energy in putting forth such a production.”

Evening World: “'Kivalina of the Ice Lands' is a distinct screen achievement. It is one of the most interesting and informative pictures seen on Broadway in months, and coming as it does so soon after the return of Amundson, it is bound to exert a tremendous interest upon the public. Miss Harlan-Miller is shown. Earl Rossman, big game hunter and explorer, is responsible for this excellent effort.”

Graphic: “No more wonderful pictures of the Arctic region have been filmed, not excepting 'Nanook of the North.' Probably the most wonderful scenes of the Arctic region ever photographed are displayed. 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands' is not only an entertaining picture but an educational one. You cannot afford to miss it.”

Mirror: “Every now and then a human interest story of great beauty and interest reaches the silver screen. The Mark Strand presents such a production this week in Earl Rossman's 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands,' the film, which required two years to shoot, is rich with gorgeous photography, thrilling reinder scenes, and entertaining human stories. Of particular interest is the first picturization of the Aurora Borealis in natural color.”

Daily News: “Here is one of the most interesting and unusual films to grace Broadway in a cinema season. The cast is capable and includes such stars as the colored scenes showing the Aurora Borealis—this must posi-tively be one of the most interesting scenes seen. It is beyond words. Everybody interested at all, in anything having to do with people whose lives we little know, will be wholly appreciative of this delightful production. Don’t let it get by without seeing it.”

Sun: “Kivalina of the Ice Lands' is a wholly admirable offering. Its chilling scenes are excellent, and with a somber, wintry weather. In its reel one must see reindeer round-ups, caribou hunting scenes, and whale hunting. The film depicts the barren region of the Eskimos lead and is a picturesque successor to 'Nanook of the North.' It is a dying die for those who are fed up with the trivial stuff of the films. It is real.”

World: “One of the most fascinating of all the screen novels is on view at the Strand this week. 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands' presents us with the entire action of the drama taking place in the bleak and merciless coldness of the Arctic. If for no other reason than that it brings to every man’s home town a reproduction in faithful pictures of a land few of us will ever see, it is a valuable and interesting document. But 'Kivalina' is much more than this. The scenes in full color of the Aurora Borealis are magnificent.”

American: “One of the most absorbing dramas that Broadway has seen for many weeks. For two years Earl Rossman lived in the Arctic regions, studying the ways of its people. Slowly he gathered material for his film. He selected from among the villagers, they knew nothing of acting, but they were so carried away by their own excitement that they did it without thinking. The film is a near life picture, quite inspiriting, and despite all lack of ‘sex appeal,’ it only tend to appeal to almost everyone.”

"Pretty Ladies"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol, New York

Telegraph: “Monta Bell has done it again. Which means that in 'Pretty Ladies' he has turned out a picture of remarkable entertainment value, with Adela Rogers St. Johns’ story of the 'fading beauty' who has reached the height of the industry’s star to work with, he has evolved a beautifully balanced screen picture. It gives ZaSu Pitts the best role she has ever had; it contains some of the best natural color scenes yet made, and it daries to give frank information about some features of chorus girl life. Miss Pitts is superb in the leading part.”

Journal: “If I had a hat on, I’d take it off to Monta Bell, who directed this one. I am one of the glories of the best pictures of the season. Monta Bell directs a picture like a painter paints one. He takes an idea and presents it with such self-confidence that it leaves an impression beyond mere visual entertainment.”

Daily News: “One good turn deserves another. After years of glorifying the American girl, Mr. Ziegfeld and his 'Follies' come in for a large portion of glorifying in the movies. Monta Bell is the bright boy who did it. And he did neat job. There’s a gleam about the piece that holds one until the fadeout.”

Mirror: “'Pretty Ladies' is a story of an American girl with gorgeous scenes, beautiful girls and superb acting by ZaSu Pitts. It offers the kind of entertainment for which one ordinarily pays $5.50 and checks out another directorial triumph for Monta Bell.”

Graphic: “You’ll want to see 'Pretty Ladies' at the Capitol, and when you’ve seen it our bet is that you’ll want to see it again. For "Pretty Ladies" is the best backstage picture that has ever been put on. Mr. Bell knows as much about directing as a fish knows about swimming—and that is everything. Each shot of this film is interesting, unique and to the point.”

"One Minute While We Change Reels"

In the early days of motion pictures no one cared much about the technique or quality of projection. When the operator announced—"One minute while we change reels"—the audience was glad of the opportunity to rest its eyes from the flash and glare of the screen. It accepted the annoyances of poor projection without protest.

But it is quite a different story today. The manner in which a picture is presented is as important a matter as the quality of the picture itself.

Projection today is either an asset or a liability. It either attracts patronage or drives it away. The large percentage of unsuccessful theatres that have poor projection is tangible proof that people know the difference between good and bad projection and that they give their patronage to theatres that offer the best.

Good projection is a matter of good business. Besides being an unfailing means of increasing patronage it actually costs less in the long run. If you have faulty projection you also have expensive repairs of machines and reels, less box office receipts, and the good will value of your theatre is nil. But if you have perfect projection, the kind you get from a Simplex projector, you have no repair bills, larger box office returns, a high investment value in your machine, and the reputation of your theatre extends more and more every day.

Buy a Simplex on Easy Terms

The Simplex represents maximum value in motion picture projectors. It is sturdily built and can be depended upon to give uninterrupted service over a long period of time.

The perfect manner in which a Simplex presents pictures is due to the correctness of its design and to the mechanical precision of each working part.

The Simplex can be purchased on an easy time payment plan.

For full description, prices, terms, etc., write the "Precision Machine Company, Inc.", 317 E. 34th St., New York, N. Y.
A SLAVE OF FASHION

Lena Kellner, Norma Shearer, Nicholas Wicentowski, Lew Cody, Rock Wayne, William Hickey, Mother Emerson, Mary Carr, Father Emerson, James Corrigan, Aunt Sophie, Vivia Ogden, Madeleine, Miss Dudden, Mayme, Estelle Clark Holmes, Sidney Bracy.

A sure-fire box office bet. It has everything film fans want. There is a beautiful star, a lot of romance in the story that also carries a great suspense thrill, clothes, laughs, and in addition a surprise in the fact that Lew Cody turns out to be a hero instead of a heavy, which is fair enough in itself.

A top of all this the picture is directed with a score or more of deft touches on the part of Hobart Henley, who is now around the top of the group that are labeled "com-mercial directors," for he is turning out pictures distinctly box office.

This one starts off with just that type of kick that is usually held for the big scene in a picture. It is a railroad smash-up, high in the air on a trestle, as a result of which the heroine of the story instead of handing in New York to begin her work assumes the identity of a girl of pleasure who was one of the vic-tims who take over an apartment that a former admirer and protector has sold at her disposal while he is abroad, with the understanding that she is to leave before he returns.

Just think of the transition of a small town girl from the wilds of To-way, where Jed Flansing comes from, to a Park avenue duplex with a maid and a man servant, a Rolls and a charge account for every-thing from theatre tickets to clothes.

Does she step! And how! Why she just speeds and all is going along in great shape, for she is even copped herself a would-be.

Playing to tremendous business at Capitol (N.Y.) — and it's just the beginning of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's The Quality 52.

And Forty Other Branches in Thirty-Three Cities
In September comes the first showing of Harold Bell Wright’s newest and greatest novel, "A Son of His Father", which has been running serially in McCall’s Magazine (circulation 2,125,000) and which will be issued August 1st as a book with a tremendous advertising campaign in 40 newspapers and national magazines. Produced in true Paramount de luxe Western style.

Ultra-modern gowns, society scandals, bathing beauties, comedy and strong human drama are features of Gloria Swanson’s new Paramount picture, “The Coast of Folly,” released in September. More people want to see Gloria today than any other star in the world. Cash in! Allan Dwan produced the picture.

Thomas Meighan with his son and daughter, Virginia and Sidney, are playing the leading roles. The picture is a big Irish story. Meighan—"Shamrock"—you can appreciate the box-office pull of that combination.

Off to a flying start—PARAMOUNT’S GREATER FORTY!

“THE LUCKY DEVIL” shown to mid-winter business in mid-July at the Rivoli, New York, and hailed as the greatest auto-race thriller ever made. Richard Dix in Class AA as a star.

“NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK” knocks ’em cuckoo in New York and Cleveland, and it’ll do the same for you.

“STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN” shown and hailed as another “Miracle Man.”

NOW WATCH!

"IN THE NAME OF LOVE." With Greta Nissen, about whom they’re all raving. Ricardo Cortez. Wallace Beery. Raymond Hatton. The Sweetheart Special. Something easy to sell the public.

ZANE GREY’S “WILD HORSE MESA.” Man, how good this one is! Shades of “Thundering Herd” and all other Zane Greys—this one has ’em stopped! Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove, Doug, Jr., 5000 stampeding mustangs. Something easy to sell the public.
AND ALSO WATCH

THOMAS MEIGHAN in "THE MAN WHO FOUND HIMSELF." Guaranteed a great Meighan entertainment. Booth Tarkington original story. Marvelous cast—Virginia Valli, Julia Hoyt, and others. Something easy to sell the public.

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT’S latest novel, "A SON OF HIS FATHER." Herman Wobber, one of the industry’s squarest shooters, writes: "Have personally previewed ‘A Son of His Father’ and it is one of greatest outdoor pictures Paramount ever handled. It’s box office all over." Something easy to sell the public.

THESE ARE STILL TO COME:

Just samples of future Greater Forty releases:

"THE PONY EXPRESS"—James Cruze’s greatest.
"THE VANISHING AMERICAN"—Zane Grey’s greatest.
"STAGE STRUCK"—Gloria Swanson’s greatest.

means to you Mr. Exhibitor

With an established reputation of fifteen years as producers of fast-moving, rollicking comedy of proved box office quality—backed by the most elaborate and up-to-date studio equipment for the creation of de luxe productions—the Christie Feature Comedies for the coming year will Surpass the magnificent records made by the Christie Product in the past.

His long and brilliant career has won for Al Christie the title of Master Farceur of Motion Picture Production. That rare faculty of detecting the humor possibilities in a situation and that still rarer ability to grasp the kind of humor that turns laughs into plethoric box-office receipts, is the reason Al Christie leads in the Feature Comedy field.

The Past Performances of the Christies have made their name synonymous with Box Office Success. When you book a Christie picture, you book an Assured Success—the product of men who have proved their ability to gauge the public demand for Entertainment and have met that demand with the maximum percentage of Showmanship Productions.

The stupendous success of "CHARLEY'S AUNT" demonstrated that the Christies stand alone in the Feature Comedy field.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT" BROKE ALL RECORDS AT EVERY FIRST RUN HOUSE IT PLAYED SINCE DATE OF RELEASE! It is acknowledged to be the greatest screen comedy ever produced.

"SEVEN DAYS" and "MADAME LUCY" will measure up to the superlative quality which the Christies demand and the public expect in the Christie Feature Comedies.

The proper use of light is a subject that every theatre owner should study carefully. For in every theatre, large or small, light can be employed effectively to increase the attractiveness of the theatre—both inside and outside.

Our lighting experts have recently prepared a booklet that is one of the most complete and up-to-date treatises on the subject of theatre light that has ever been published.

A few topics discussed in this booklet are:

(1) How to use direct and indirect lighting.
(2) The proper intensity of light that should be used in each department of the theatre.
(3) The secret of coordinating light and music.
(4) Decorative and ornamental lighting.
(5) The use of colored light for psychological and decorative effects.
(6) The selection of orchestra lights.

This valuable handbook will be sent free on request to any theatre owner.

F.B.O.

FILM BOOKING OFFICES of America take this opportunity to thank Mr. Brown openly for his complimentary expressions.

This is Mr. Brown’s first letter of praise written to any film company. Naturally we are gratified to receive such a commendary note. Thousands of other exhibitors who use F. B. O. Product never write letters either, yet, if they did, they would write precisely as Mr. Brown has written.

Fine pictures. Square treatment. Good prints. Money making product. What else can any exhibitor ask for? So as we’ve said many times before—“TRADE WITH F. B. O. AND UNDERWRITE YOUR OWN PROSPERITY.”

F. B. O. Gold Bond Specials For 1925-26

DRUSILLA
WITH A MILLION

The talk of the trade. The Associated Arts production from Elizabeth Cooper’s famous novel. Directed by F. Harmon Weight. Packed ‘em in for one solid week at the CAPITOL, New York’s largest and finest theatre. Backed by Sat.-Eve. Post Advertising selling the picture to millions of people before you play it.

“The Keeper of the Bees”

Gene Stratton Porter’s sensational success now running serially in McCall’s magazine, and NOW being advertised nationally in McCall’s for four solid months by F. B. O. Backed also by a tremendous national campaign by Doubleday, Page & Co., on the book tie-up. Produced by J. Leo Meehan.

“PARISIAN NIGHTS”

The Gothic production starring Louis Tappeen, Elaine Hammerstein, Renee Adoree. Directed by Al San-Tell. Packed ‘em into the CAPITOL, New York’s finest and largest picture theatre for one week. Praised by the critics.

“IF MARRIAGE FAILS”?

“A POOR GIRL’S ROMANCE”

The 2nd of the sensational LAURA JEAN LIBBEY stories. We predict for these Laura Jean Libbey stories an enormous draw at the box office because these are stories that millions have waited for.

2 EMORY JOHNSON
GOLD BOND SPECIALS

The first of which will be the thrilling melodramatic newspaper story “THE LAST EDITION” with the popular Ralph Lewis in the lead. Second Gold Bond Special by Johnson entitled—“HAPPINESS” a huge story with a wonderful theme and backed by tremendous exploitation.

“When His Love Grew Cold”

The first of the famous LAURA JEAN LIBBEY stories that will set new box office records. Stories known to millions—a sensational box office draw. See trade papers for further announcements.

“THE MIDNIGHT FLYER”

A thrilling railroad romance, with a story twist that has never before been seen in railroad pictures. A smashing climax built up by a marvelous breath taking series of events. Watch the trade papers for further news on this one.

“The Futurity Winner”

A whale of a race track story, based on a new angle of showmanship. All the romance, fire, color, high speed action and box office power of the best of the big timers. More news of “THE FUTURITY WIN-NER” to be announced shortly.

“FLAMING WATERS”

Associated Arts next big time Gold Bond Special for F. B. O., based on E. Lloyd Sheldon’s famous story of oil “the” man in the great golden oil fields of the far west. Thrills, chills, drama, punch, power.

“The Isle of Retribution”

Edison Marshall’s thrilling book brought to the screen at last. A story of great courage, great honor, and a greater love. One of the best sellers of the season.

Greater Movie Season Bulletins

BECASE we construe the Greater Movie Season to mean a Greater Business Season for the entire motion picture industry, we are contributing this page for the cause. This is the final week preceding the season’s opening date of August third. Here are the important, last-minute bulletins issued to the various branches of the industry.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE has endorsed Greater Movie Season. News-wires have broadcast that endorsement; the public has read it; the NEWS reprints it.

Before a national industrial movement can attain such significance as to merit presidential commendation, that movement must reflect internal unity of effort. Greater Movie Season has begun in more than a thousand cities and towns. It is the industry's first nation-wide demonstration. With only three months' organization work behind the drive, and apart altogether from its public aspects, Greater Movie Season has brought producers, distributors and exhibitors into closer working harmony than the whole twenty-nine years of film activity achieved hitherto.

Still wider plans are contemplated for next year's season.

Five years hence a 99.9% co-operating industry may look back into the archives of 1925 and wonder why field-men ever had to be sent out to sell the Greater Movie Season idea.

ENLARGED photographic copies of President Coolidge's endorsement have been supplied to all campaign managers in sufficient quantities to allow one to each theatre. Displayed in lobbies this letter will impress indelibly the national importance of motion pictures. Even after the season no exhibitor is likely to discard it. He'll frame it and hang it conspicuously as the presidential answer to unwar- ranted criticism.

NINETY-SIX War Department Theatres attached to army posts are in on the big show. Six thousand five hundred Navy boards are displaying the Greater Movie Season poster.

DENVER holds the record for window showings. During the season there will be between 400 and 500 displays.

THE Salt Lake City newspapers will run special Greater Movie Season sections on Saturday and Sunday, August 1st and 2nd.

BECAUSE Greater Movie Season means greater entertainment, producing directors and musical directors of theatres all over the country have arranged presentations and orchestral accompaniments that will emphasize how remarkably the art of presentation has advanced. The Broadway houses in New York City, the principal theatres in Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Washington and elsewhere maintain production standards that equal the stage's highest.

THE National Contest has opened editorial doors in newspaper offices that have been closed and locked against film exploitation. Those doors will remain open. Add the Tulsa(Oklahoma) Tribune to the list of participating papers. Never heard of the Tulsa Tribune? Nevertheless its 35,000 daily circulation means as much to exhibitors in Tulsa as the Chicago American's half-million means to Chicago.

THE FOURTH ESTATE, the most authoritative magazine for editors and publishers, has urged newspaper support and pointed out the revenue-earning possibilities of enlisting commercial advertisers with the movement. Hundreds of pages of co-operative space arranged by newspaper space-salesmen will give additional impetus to the season’s opening.

ANY small theatres, only now appreciating the value of the season, have requested campaign books. Their campaigns, just developing, will culminate in September. Greater Movie Season presents that advantage. It is as good during one month as any other. The Hays office will keep on hand for many months to come press-books and complete organization details that any theatre may secure at any time.
An Exhibitor’s Declaration

ELI WHITNEY COLLINS, President of the M. P. T. O. of Arkansas and an official of the national organization, has written A Declaration of Principles, which deserves both commendation and widespread publicity. Here are the standards upon which Mr. Collins operates his theatres:

“ar to give to our public the last dollar in value, reserving for ourselves only a fair and just profit.

“To show nothing upon our screens that we would be ashamed to have our wives, daughters, sisters and mothers see.

“To lend the power of our screens to the upbuilding of Jonesboro, Craighead County and Arkansas and all worthy institutions therein.

“To fearlessly and vigorously eliminate from our programs all that does not conform to the highest standard of morality.

“To acknowledge and perform our duty as citizens and to zealously guard the position we have attained as the Arbiters of Jonesboro’s pleasure.

“To keep our theatres clean, cozy and comfortable and to serve our patrons above ourselves.

“To accept no profit that is obtained at the expense of our principles as men or that requires a slackening in our sense of right.

“To deliver, at all times, the finest entertainment attainable at the lowest prices commensurate with a just profit.

“Our business has been built upon a solid rock of confidence. Our patrons know that our ‘Golden Rule’ is not mere words. It is the keynote of our business. We have never made all the money that we could have made had we not adhered to this rule, but we have faith to believe that we will make money longer and more surely than by adopting the methods that many have followed, of getting all we could out of our customers, and giving back as little as possible.

“You must be satisfied at our theatres or we do not want your money.”

Showmanship

SOME forceful remarks on the necessity for first-class showmanship in all theatres are contained in a recent Bulletin of the Board of Trade and Commerce, affiliated with the M. P. T. O. A. We quote:

“Many theatre owners who are shrewd and astute buyers of film, who are clever handlers of men, and who, to all intents and purposes, run their houses perfectly, fail to achieve that measure of success which would seem to be rightfully theirs. They lack some degree of showmanship. It is not enough to buy some ‘sure fire’ attraction, at a right price, and then just make an ordinary announcement regarding it. Showmen—real showmen—must not keep secrets from the public where their shows are concerned. They must literally ‘tell the world’ what they’ve got. Then, if the world does not come in to see the attraction, it is not the fault of the theatre owner. But all too many of us do not let enough people know what we have to show. Far too many persons in our own localities do not know that we have a certain fine picture until after it has played our house. We venture to say that there are enough of such people in every theatre owner’s locality to either make up the difference between profit and loss, or the difference between a mild success and a knock-out.

“Don’t be content with your usual stereotyped methods of teaching the public. Such continually to reach them in new and individual ways as befits the attraction you are showing. The exploitation aids you get from some of the film companies are of help, but your very best exploitation will be that which you yourself devise. You know your public; you must also know all about the pictures you are playing. Don’t be content to ‘plug’ one portion of your show—even your chief feature—to the exclusion of the rest of the show. Particularly should this be the case in all of your front of the house advertising. Play up your bill as the vaudeville houses do theirs; name every part of your program distinctly, so that ‘he who runs may read.’”

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

ON WITH THE DANCE

Can it be that sultry weather conditions, instead of slowing down the physical and mental pep of the inhabitants and near-inhabitants of filmland, causes them to brim over with dynamic vigor and engage in joyous festive carnival? We ask in all humbleness, for otherwise how account for the sudden deluge of invitations to recent nightly pleasure rallies, combined with a business seasoning?

Famous Players-Lasky came to bat with the triumphant prophecy of a wonderful time at a barbecue being given Saturday night, August 1st, in Times Square, on the site of Westover Court, rear of Putnam Building, and marking the actual breaking of ground for the new twenty-nine story Paramount Theatre Building, which will occupy the tract now covered by the Putnam Building and Westover Court. Two thousand persons are expected, consisting of employees of the Famous-Lasky Home Office, theatres and studios, and their guests. Following the dinner, a concert by Ben Bernie's jazz orchestra, after which general dancing on a floor especially erected for the event.

From Whitman Bennett came the announcement of a House-Warming, to assist in commemorating befittingly the acquisition of the Glendale Studios, Glendale, L. I. Mr. Bennett further announced that special buses would leave Times Square, north-east corner of Broadway and 42nd Street, at 6 p. m. Friday, July 31st, 1925. And there was high revel and much "tripping on the light, fantastic toe!"

And at the playhouse in Great Neck, L. I. First National gave a trial showing of Frank Lloyd's "Winds Of Chance," based on Rex Beach's adventure novel of gold-rush days. This was followed by a screening of Constance Talmadge's Hans Kraely picture-"Her Sister From Paris," directed by Sidney Franklin. At both affairs a large crowd of general sales managers, film executives and stars were present, who pronounced the attraction to be sure-fire box office stuff. Showings for "Winds Of Chance" and "Her Sister From Paris" in New York are being arranged in the near future.
T
HE possession of a legion of freckles and a countenance that even his warmest adherent could not help pronouncing as most unattractive helped a whole lot in getting Junior Coghlan of Southern California a contract as regular member of the De Mille Stock Company. But homeliness, although a big factor in Junior’s success, wasn’t all by a long shot.

It was when the lad, who is only eight years old, distinguished himself by the fine performance he gave with William Boyd in “The Road To Yesterday”, that he made such an impression on De Mille as to induce that astute person to sign him up. Young Coghlan is tow-headed and his teeth are chiefly conspicuous by their absence, and De Mille, who realized that the boy would stand out in odd contrast to most other youngsters before the camera, is convinced that he will become a second Wesley Barry. The later, by the way, was given his first big chance in De Mille’s “Male and Female.” Junior is no novice in picture work, having made appearances in “Mike” and “The Skyrocket” for Marshall Neilan; “Cause For Divorce,” “Bobbed Hair,” “Garrison’s Finest,” and “The Fourth Musketeer.”

In addition to the above information, sent us by Charles J. Giegerich of Producers Distributing Corporation, the publicity expert gives vent to his feelings in the following touching lament:

If I hadn’t been so pretty as a boy
I would have proved an everlasting joy
To millions who viewed me on the screen.

’Tis tough, indeed, to think what might have been!

We were not acquainted with Mr. Giegerich in his juvenile days, but are quite willing to accept the foregoing statement at its face value.

S ONY, the celebrated Mix co-star and equine actor, is to have an understudy. The latter is named Napoleon, and his selection was the result of a long and painstaking search on the part of Tom Mix, his ranch foreman, Pat Chrisman, and various cowboys who have worked in films with Tony and his master.

Horse stars have come to the front rapidly since Tony first made his screen debut nearly a decade ago, but Tony is the dean of ‘em all, and no other steed has so thoroughly established himself in the affection of the fans. But having passed his twelfth year, which is middle-age life for his kind, Tony has earned the right to take things a bit more leisurely, hence the efforts of Mr. Mix to find a worthy successor for him.

It was no easy job to locate a nip showing promise enough to be ridden over the sort of picture trails Tony negotiated so successfully. Colt after colt was examined, and often it was believed that the search was ended. But always some blemish or bad trait loomed up which resulted in the find being abandoned. Finally Napoleon, a promising bay colt, made his appearance. The veterinarians pronounced him sound in wind and limb, he gave every indication of being bright mentally and free from all meanness.

That was two years ago, when Napoleon was purchased and sent to the Mixville corral, California, where he has been constantly tutored in his new profession. He will make his first appearance on the screen in “The Lucky Horseshoe.” That he will prove a talented cow-pony is confidently predicted by all who have had a hand in training him for his new duties. It took Tom Mix five years to find a suitable co-star, but if he fills the bill, the time has not been wasted. Meanwhile the wise and dignified Tony will indulge in a long vacation, after which he and Nap will alternately in the Mix pictures.
MEIGHAN VISITS ERIN

THOMAS MEIGHAN, Paramount Star, is aboard the Leviathan, headed for the old sod, where he will produce a picture with the Lakes of Killarney, Muckross Abbey, Ross and Blarney Castles, for backgrounds, as well as a well-known race course in the vicinity of Dublin. This is the culmination of a long cherished ambition on Mr. Meighan’s part, as he long pined to make a film surrounded by genuine Irish atmosphere.

If a high-class producing staff means anything in the turning-out of big features, the Meighan experiment ought to prove a howling success, even if it is listed as silent drama. For, besides Mrs. Meighan, whose job it is to see that Thomas doesn’t overwork himself, there’s the renowned Tom Geraghty, supervising director and scenarist of many of the Meighan screen hits, who will attend to the story values end, with direction in the hands of Victor Heerman and Alvin Wyckoff at the camera; with Louis A. Sarecky, Ted Palhe, Gaston Longet and Emmet Crozier also in evidence. And it’s a safe bet that they’ll frame up a film that will be an apt illustration of the old slogan—“There’s nothing too good for the Irish!”

VICE-PRESIDENT AT CHEYENNE

VICE-PRESIDENT CHARLES C. DAWES recently devoted a whole morning to watching the filming of “The Pony Express”, James Cruze’s next Western historical picture for Paramount, on the Cruze location near Cheyenne, Wyo. General Dawes and party were the guests of Senator and Mrs. Francis E. Warren of Wyoming. As the General, when a young man, spent much time in Western Nebraska, when the Wild West was really untamed, he was much interested in the scene. He remarked that the sod houses used in the picture were more familiar to him than his Washington habitation. The Vice-President was also greatly taken with the work of the “Pony Express” orchestra, which played for him a number of oldtime stage driver songs of 1860, the period where the action is set. Among the Dawes party were Mrs. Dawes, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Humphreys of Denver and Mrs. W. V. Huges, of the same city, Senator and Mrs. Warren, and John Fleming of the Wyoming State Tribune.

As a climax to his visit the General was induced to direct a sequence of the film, also to crank the camera on one of its important scenes, thereby qualifying as one “on the inside of the game”, whereas before he was merely listed as an enthusiastic fan.

MARIOTTI’S STRENUOUS CAREER

RDERICK MARIOTTI, actor and soldier of fortune, has been cast for the role of Toni, the mate, in Rex Ingram’s production of “Mare Nostrum.” Which means “Our Sea” talk. The picture is now being filmed in France for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno, in the leading roles.

But as regards Mr. Mariotti, that gentleman shines as a brilliant offset to the popular belief that a chap who is chockful of valor on the screen would run if pursued by a sheep in actual life. He’s a fascinating blend of the artiste and bold adventurer. Born in Marseilles, France, of Spanish and Italian parentage, at the age of thirteen he blew into Buenos Aires, where his uncle lived. Later he regathered on the pampas with Indians, where, like a wandering troubadour of ye olden time, he became an established favorite with the copper-colored sons of the open because he sung joiavely and strummed the light guitar. Joining his brother at Rosario de Santa Fe, a revolution broke out, and they managed to make a getaway by the closest kind of a shave. Mariotti then started out to view the globe in dead earnest and during the next few years sailed all over the Seven Seas. He was first mate when he decided to try the land again and appeared in music halls, singing songs of the pampas. Later he played leads in a Paris Stock Company and made his film debut there. When the great war broke out he went to the front and saw 33 months of active service, was seriously wounded and sent to Nice to recover. After which he went in for the cinema game in real earnest, and since that time has appeared in important parts in “La Nouvelle,” Imperial, “Surcouf,” and several other successful European films.

They won’t have to worry about any role being too rough for this Gallic gamecock to tackle.
CONFERS WITH IBANEZ

E. D. MEADOR of Meador-Robertson productions announces that he is in receipt of a cable from director John S. Robertson that the latter was met by Blasco Ibanez on the former's arrival, with his staff and Mrs. Robertson in Paris, and that he is holding daily conferences with the author regarding "Queen of the Andalusia," first of the company's special series of Ibanez works.

The Spanish writer is a friend of long standing of Meador's and will personally assist in an advisory capacity in the production of "Queen of the Andalusia." Mr. Robertson will visit Spain and Monte Carlo to select the locations needed for the film. The director has been promised the co-operation of the Spanish Government and expects big results in the way of getting an authentic picture of life in King Alfonso's country, something, it may be added, not always to be seen in the average feature depicting doings among the Dons.

HOPE HAMPTON SAILS

SHORTLY after completing work on in the leading role of "The Unfair Sex," Associated Exhibitors picture, Hope Hampton packed up and fled to Europe, leaving on the Aquitania, July 28. The object of her exodus is to view the field of operatic vehicles and selecting one for production. It is also rumored that Miss Hampton will appear with Walter Woolf in "The Sheik."

While in Paris she will purchase gowns to be reproduced in a series of pictures in natural colors, returning to America early in September, when she will go into rehearsal in the chosen opera, under Shubert management.

ERBERT BRENNON has begun work at the Paramount Long Island Studio on Sir James Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella," in which Betty Bronson will play the leading role. This will be Paramount's Christmas gift to the fans. It is described as a delightful fantasy, with much of the imaginative atmosphere so loved by the kiddies, and that human interest quality which appeals to the adults. Tom Moore plays the policeman who is transformed into a prince and Henry Vibart the serene Mr. Bodie.

TWO DISTINGUISHED GUESTS

ILL HAYS AND JAMES P. GOODRICH, ex-Governor of Indiana, were recently guests at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Culver City studios. Escorted by Louis B. Mayer, they went all through the huge plant. Later, at Westview Park, they saw in process of construction a replica of the Circus Maximus in which the chariot race of the Fred Niblo production of Ben Hur will be staged. Ramon Na Navarro plays the title role in this picture.

Florence Turner (left) will be seen again on the screen with Alice Lake in "The Price of Success" (Columbia), where her emotional ability will be seen to advantage.
Battle of Theatre Seats Now Being Extended to Europe American Interests Seeking First Run Control

By L. C. Moen

WHEN the smoke of battle dies down in Europe, someone is going to be sitting on top of the heap, holding control of the first run theatre situation and the world film market. That someone will then automatically become the strongest film organization in existence and the first to be truly international. Or perhaps there will be two such groups. It is very unlikely that there will be more.

The day of provincialism in costly pictures is about done. Pictures of purely national character will have to be made cheaply enough to gross back their cost and a profit on the home market. Productions deserving the adjective "big" will have to be made along more truly international lines than has yet been achieved, if they are to command a market wide enough to make them pay.

Just as, in America, each year has seen a sharper division between important productions and program pictures, a sharp cleavage will develop between the product made for the home market and the greater pictures made for the world market.

The secret of making genuinely international pictures has not been solved. Occasionally, one has resulted from accident, but not many. The company to survive and dominate will be the one that masters that problem.

What that solution will be I do not pretend to say, but I will venture a prophecy as to what it is not: The assembling of an American director, a German scenarist, a British leading man, a French leading woman, a Russian vampire, an Italian villain, a Spanish cinematographer and a Danish architect will not prove to be the road to internationalizing film production. The Tower of Babel, you may remember, was not a great success, architecturally or otherwise.

Much study is being given that problem in many quarters—more than is generally realized—and something is going to be done about it. European tastes are being quieted; studied—reports of the success or failure of American pictures abroad analyzed—movies being made toward lessening the handicap of provincialism that lies on American photodramas.

But production of a more or less international character will not be enough. There must be control of the first run situation at home and abroad, to assure showing of these costly pictures in all countries. And that is where the fight will centre.

The three leading contenders from this side of the water, as matters stand today, are and will be Famous Players, First National and Metro-Goldwyn. As the principal theatre-owning groups in America, they are naturally making the greatest bid for first run dominance abroad. None of them is giving any publicity to its moves, but in this direction, logically enough, but evidences of busy activity are to be seen on every hand in Europe.

Paramount is playing rather a lone hand. This organization, which achieved its first beginnings with a French film, was the first American company to pay any great attention to the foreign market. While other firms were still disposing of their product en bloc to brokers at ridiculously low prices, Paramount was operating its own exchanges.

Paramount also began theatre acquisition at an early period and has the advantage of having considered this move and laid plans for it over a period of years.

As a result of all this, Paramount is firmly entrenched in Europe. Its distributing and exhibiting activities abroad have been extensive. Because of that, it occupies today a position probably materially stronger than its two leading rivals, though tomorrow the situation may be changed.

Digest of Second Article
In European Series

L. C. MOEN, of the NEWS staff, who has just returned from a survey at first hand of European conditions, this week continued his discussion of the "low-down" on what is developing abroad.

This is of vital interest to everyone in the American industry, since the European situation is closely interwoven with our own. As is pointed out in the accompanying article, the struggle for first run control abroad is developing along much the same lines as that here, making producer ownership of theatres a world-wide issue.

This article sketches something of the activities abroad of Famous, Metro-Goldwyn and First National.

Essentially Paramount's European tactics have been along the lines of developing single-handed its own machinery of distribution and first run exhibition. There has been little talk of alliances or mergers. This has resulted in a certain strength but there is a crack in the armor, also. As the outstanding American-owned and operated concern abroad, it has had to bear the lion's share of the attacks made on American pictures.

Just as it was leaving Europe, a stormy session occurred in the Chambre Syndicale des Industries Cinematographiques, or Motion Picture Chamber of Commerce, in Paris, at which it was even proposed that American concerns be excluded from membership. The brunt of this was borne by Adolphe Osso, Paramount's manager, who made a valiant effort to meet the criticisms directed at his company, more of which will be said at a later point.

Again, when Paramount purchased the historic Vaudeville—a theatre dear to the hearts of Parisians for its traditions—a storm of protest arose. Just as a storm of protest would probably arise in New York if the Hippodrome were to be purchased by a German firm, or if a French syndicate had purchased Madison Square Garden and announced plans for the erection of a theatre for the exhibition of French films.

Noted literary and artistic people of France went so far as to appeal to the government against this alien ownership of a revered French institution. Then this committee discovered an old law on the statute books in Paris, no longer enforced but still valid, providing that no theatre might have more than 900 seats. Threats were made to invoke this ordinance, which might have crippled Paramount's plans, since the desire was to build a large first run house seating several thousand persons.

Finally Paramount announced that it would build on the site of the Vaudeville, not a cinema, but a legitimate theatre. This quieted the storm, and now, from all I could gather, Paramount is going right ahead with the construction of a large, modern picture theatre.

You may put your own interpretation on such affairs, but they afford a clue, at least, to the hazards of "going it alone" in Europe on a large scale. Nevertheless, Paramount, through its early start and its heavy theatre holdings, occupies what is possibly the strongest position of any American company in the European field, and its income from this source is well ahead of that of any other company.

Metro-Goldwyn, however, bids fair to become an important contender through its recent deals—the one the formation in France of Gaumont-Metro-Goldwyn, and the other the deal with Ufa for distribution in Germany of the entire last season's productions.

The precise nature of the arrangement between Gaumont and Metro-Goldwyn, resulting in the organization of Gaumont-Metro-Goldwyn, has never been announced, and
STROHEIM WILL ACT AGAIN
To Support Constance Talmadge

T he "best hated man on the screen," Erich von Stroheim is going to act again. This was the surprise note accompanying word from the offices of Joseph M. Schenck in Hollywood that the director-actor had been signed to direct Constance Talmadge in her next First National starring vehicle, "East of the Setting Sun," and also to act in it.

This forthcoming First National attraction will be von Stroheim's first appearance as an actor since his memorable portrayal in "Foolish Wives," which he also directed as well as acted in. In the new Constance Talmadge film he will wear the monocle, uniform and all the other accoutrements of the villain which in "Foolish Wives" earned him the title of "best hated man on the screen."

"East of the Setting Sun" is from a serial novel by George Barr McCutcheon which is in preparation for appearance in book form. McCutcheon is the author of Norma Talmadge's current romance, "Graustark."

Copyrights Menace to Canada

NEW Menace has appeared on the horizon for all exhibitors of Canada as a result of the formation at Toronto, Ontario, of the Canadian Performing Right Society with the object of protecting and enforcing the rights of composers and authors and other copyright owners in the Dominion, as they are protected and operated in Great Britain and other countries.

The designated president of the Canadian Performing Right Society is H. T. Jamieson of Toronto and he is to control the Canadian organization. Announcement to this effect has just been made by John Woodhouse, Controller of the Public Right Society of London, England, who has been visiting in Canada on business in connection with the establishment of the Society in the Dominion, following the organization of a branch in South Africa. Incidentally, Mr. Woodhouse has paid a visit to New York City for the purpose of consulting with the American Society of Authors and Composers with a possible view of securing a working arrangement on a co-operative basis in the United States.

In connection with the formation of the Canadian Society, Mr. Woodhouse has stated that the Canadian Copyright Act is reciprocal with the British law in regard to the performing right in music and that it is the intention to establish agencies for the purpose of collecting fees for the performance of music comprised in the extensive repertoire it controls, both in British and foreign music.

Woodhouse has intimated that his society is very much in favor of the proposed changes in the Canadian Copyright Act which came up before the last session of the Canadian Parliament at Ottawa with a view to legally designating theatrical performances as coming under the scope of the Copyright Act for the collecting of royalties. This did not become law before the session adjourned but the Performing Right Society claims to be in a position to proceed with its operations under existing conditions. It is proposed to charge flat fees for the presentation of its controlled copyrighted music in all theatres.

Judge Refuses Injunction Banning Negroes

An injunction was denied the Franklin Amusement Company of St. Louis by Circuit Judge Miller seeking to prevent the Little Theatre Corporation, operators of the new Palace Theatre from segregating negroes and white patrons of the house.

Judge Miller held that the practice of admitting negroes only to the balcony was not in violation of a provision of the lease which provided that the house was to be used either exclusively as a house for negroes, or exclusively the house for negroes and white audiences.

Counsel for the plaintiffs stated that formerly negroes were permitted to mix with the whites in all parts of the house. The "mixed audience" clause was inserted in the lease so that the theatre would not interfere with the Majestic which shows to whites exclusively.

Holdup in Chicago House Nets $7,500

Joseph McKeown, manager of the Stratford Theatre, 63rd and Halstead Streets, Chicago was robbed of $7,500, receipts, which were being transferred by McKeown and Miss Elizabeth Kelly, cashier, from the box office to the manager's office on the mezzanine floor. The robbery occurred outside the manager's office within a few feet of hundreds of people in the audience. The three robbers were armed with drawn guns, snatched the bag and ran downstairs to the street. The police are looking for the trio.

$175,000,000 Production During 1924

Battle of the Theatre Seats Extends to Europe

there is no little speculation in France as to the details. In effect, it probably means a partnership over a period of five years between the two companies in the production, distribution and exhibition of pictures in the French field. The Gaumont string of theatres is a large and important one, headed by the Gaumont-Palace in Paris, the largest picture house in the world. Such a circuit must be assured of a supply of meritorious product, and it was probably the fear of a shortage of good pictures that precipitated the deal with Metro-Goldwyn, for Gaumont already occupied a strong position.

The chief concern in the French industry, while I was in Paris, seemed to be whether or no Gaumont had demanded in return that Metro-Goldwyn distribute a certain number of French pictures in America, or produce pictures in France. Producers felt that a concern like Gaumont, listing an important group of theatres, was in a position to demand in return for them a representation in America, and that it would be little short of a mockery if they did not.

Apparantly, however, such was the case. Stories in France were to the effect that Metro-Goldwyn would either select a certain number of Gaumont productions for American release, or would produce them in association with Gaumont in Paris. It has been stated that the Gaumont studios at Belleville, at the edge of Paris, were to be renovated and brought up to date in order to accommodate this production. It should be remembered that Metro-Goldwyn has already done some little foreign producing on its own account, including the Rex Ingram productions, Marshal Neilan's trip to England, and one or two other units.

Further strong representation will be given to Metro-Goldwyn on the continent through the deal with Ufa in Germany, announced last week. This involves no theatre control, it will give widespread showing to the product in central Europe.

First National, meanwhile, has terminated its arrangements with Transoceanic and placed the distribution of the 1925-26 product in Germany in the hands of Phoebus Film, one of the strongest surviving independent distributors, which has excellent theatre affiliations. In France and Belgium First National is opening its own exchanges, and mighty fine ones, too. In England it is already well established, First National, too, is preparing a heavy drive on the European market.

Talk of big pictures is again echoing around Hollywood. And it is not talk merely—but words supported by decisive action.

The announcements of the new fall and winter programs are indicative of the trend, but more than that there is a revival of the big feature spirit in the studios. Producers, directors and stars all want to do something extraordinary again. Entertainment as entertainment is not to be neglected, but it is going to have an increased significance. Ambition is seeing a new reawakening.

The one consistent impression growing out of this is that the standards of the more spectacular productions are about to be re-established. There have been enough stress on movies as movies for a time, and while there is no let-down in the meeting of the box-office demands, there will be a bigger stride toward more artistic (not highbrow, however) objectives.

No single type of film is actually in the spotlight. There is no repetition of the wild rush toward costume that prevailed two years ago. Variety is the watchword, but variety with a stronger emphasis on worth. Careful and more painstaking effort in production. Less speed and haste in the turning out of films just for the sake of getting them on the market, making a time record and overdoing the economy impulse. More attention devoted to the sort of picture subjects that require thoughtful planning. All this to be blended, of course, with the more modern efficiency in the studios and the elimination of waste.

The conclusion is clear. An enormous benefit should result to the whole industry. There will still be plenty of those types of pictures that are fill-ins, but there will also be a very appreciable number that will increase and renew the prestige of the theater, bringing back again those audiences who have inclined to scoff a little of late at the general quality of entertainment. Big pictures that can be heavily advertised for their personnel, their subjects, and their general merit—as well as incidentally their cost—get the people into the theater, and cause them to become once again more vitally concerned with the screen as a means of diversion.

Most interesting of all just at present, is the John Barrymore adventure in "The Sea Beast," taken from the American classic, "Moby Dick." A critic's artist much of the time on the screen, with a strong appeal also to the discriminating theatergoer, Barrymore has embarked on an enterprise that appears destined for unusual popularity. The period of the story is historic. From all accounts, though, the film itself will reflect not only history, but also a strong pioneer inspiration, suggestive to a degree of "The Covered Wagon." That is the aim both of Barrymore, and of Warner Brothers as the producers.

The background is the whaling industry of New Bedford, already familiar through "Down to the Sea in Ships." Similarity ceases, however, with this setting. "The Sea Beast," is essentially romantic in idea and purpose. The pioneer force grows out of the achievement of early Americans who had to struggle for a place in one of the world's greatest trading activities. But beside this, a very appealing and pathetic love theme, plus the fascination of roving sea adventure, will endow the plot with telling humanism.

"The Sea Beast" is a marked departure for Barrymore, though it affords him a tremendous and powerful acting role. As a leader of the whaling expeditions he is crippled during a battle with the denizens of the deep. He becomes a sort of Lon Chaney character, embittered, somber and tragic, contrasting decidedly with the romantic individual that he is in the beginning. The locale for the romance is the island of Java, which was reproduced with rare tropical splendor right in the studio for the early scenes.

Some of the whole fishing shots will be secured through an expedition in the Pacific, and Barrymore himself is to appear in many scenes aboard a chartered vessel. Dolores Costello, the daughter of Maurice Costello, has been assigned the role of the heroine, and makes a very quixotic picture in the old fashioned hoopskirts of the period. Barrymore has long desired to do a vigorous out door picture, and he has on various occasions expressed a great admiration for "Down to the Sea in Ships," and even declared that he wished he could have played in this feature. "The Sea Beast," therefore, represents for him a fulfillment in many ways of this ambition.

One can well turn an interested gaze also toward the activity of Cecil De Mille at the present time. He has taken an entirely new turn with his production of "The Road to Yesterday." His goal is romance, but it will be set forth in an entirely different way from the Barrymore production. There is a historical aspect to "The Road to Yesterday," but it is highly imaginative. The theme of the feature touches on reincarnation, and after De Mille has introduced his modern set of characters, and disclosed their various perplexities, he transfers the scene to the middle ages. This cutback is far more elaborate, and has a more important relation to the plot than any other that De Mille has introduced, with the exception of "The Ten Commandments," wherein the cutback was instead a prologue. In "The Road to Yesterday" the entanglements of the modern story, hinge in part on the curse spoken by a gypsy during the historic episode, in a tragically melodramatic climax of burning at the stake.

Jetta Goudal, Joseph Schildkraut, and Vera Reynolds figure prominently in both parts of the plot, while De Mille is also predicting big things for William Boyd in a heroic lead.

The story as I have heard it impresses me as being one of the soundest and most convincing that De Mille has ever directed. It suggests spectacular elements that will be on a plane with his very biggest features. De Mille's first independent venture is altogether one of his most promising, and despite that there has been much headshaking and skepticism about his departure from the Paramount organization, he appears to feel no restrictions or limitations in his new endeavor. Personally, he evidences the keen optimism that has always distinguished him. He has built up an organization that appears to differ comparatively little from the Westi Liquidating Affairs in European Field

ACCORDING to word received in New York, the Westi Film interests in Germany are being liquidated. The Stinnes interests were involved to some extent in this company, and the financial ties made for the support of the German industry for 1924 were cut off by Stinnes enterprises from Wegeroff and Stinnes. When the banks took over the management of the Stinnes enterprises, following the financial crisis, the financial support would be withdrawn from all unessential enterprises in the group. This will mean Westi and the firms represented by Westi and Dewest would receive no further financial backing.

Westi was formed with the intention of becoming an international organization. An alliance with Pathé in France covered production, distribution and exhibition on a mutual basis. The Nordwesti in Sweden was producing there. An Italian branch was also at work, and a distributing system had been opened in Germany.

Further developments in this situation, and their bearing on the European market, will be taken up in succeeding articles in this section, appearing in the NEWS by L. C. Moen, of the staff, who has just returned from a survey of this field.

Away from Sophistication

All of the features that I have mentioned symbolize money. They represent, too, a certain reaction away from sophistication, and too much parlor drama and sex stuff. The outdoors always gives freedom and new vitality to a movie project. Most of the big pictures in the past have had open-air settings, and the historical setting is the most stimulating drama. Croze has had to devote much of his time to routine film material—without the exception of “Beggars on Horseback,” which proved a little too highbrow—but this has been his great chance once again. He will doubtless display an intensified zest in directing the new feature, because of its large and pulsating interest.

Two Frontier Pictures

Croze is not alone in the field. “The Pony Express” is also a starring picture based on much the same pioneer exploits, which carries the title of “On the Frontier.” The locations are to be at Pendleton, Ore., and West Point Academy, and the picture has been filmed on a very pretentious scale, with Norman Kerry, Dustin Farnum, Kathleen Key, Anne Cornwall and George Fawcett among the principal personages in the plot. Farnum’s return in this type of picture will doubtless be greeted with considerable attention.

The cast in Croze’s film comprises Ricardo Cortez, Ernest Torrence, who plays a combined role of blacksmith and preacher for comedy effect. Betty Beery and Betty Compson. Torrence has given superb performance in “The Wanderer” the biblical Q. Nilsson are among the principals, and the settings are a height of decorativeness. June Mathis is supervising, with Knut Rolfeld making his debut as director. They are taking plenty of time with this undertaking because it is to be carried out so pretentiously.

Other war pictures like “The Big Parade” and “Havoc” promise much, and will be released early. Jack Gilber’s presence in the former, and George O’Brien in the latter, will perhaps give a new edge to the present competition among prominent leading men. However, they are strikingly different personalities. As for the pictures themselves, “The Dark Angel” is inclined to lightness in the treatment, whereas “Havoc” has a sternly dramatic quality.

Quite a contrast to these modern stories of conflict will be the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offering of William Gish, with oldtime Latin Quarter of Paris as the background. The first tests of Miss Gish indicate that she will have a charming womanliness as the heroine of this definitely romantic picture. Whether or not the opera should have considerable to do with the film’s popularity, particularly when it is presented with music cho- en therefrom. The actual screen adaptation is being made from the original novel by Henri Murger, and this should materially strengthen the story.

Comedy still holds its own as a salient force in all picture-making. It will probably be used to brighten and humanize the romantic enterprises that are now forcing themselves into the foreground. Charlie Chaplin has demonstrated that unusual outdoor settings can prove attractive in comedy, as well as serious drama, in his production of “The Gold Rush. A revision in this picture is due to the fact that he made it with the suggested background of Chili-cothe pass.

The reaction to “The Gold Rush,” especially of the stars and directors, has been unusually favorable, and the public has been crowding to the presentation at Grauman’s Egyptian Theatre ever since the opening. Everybody seems to enjoy the excitement of the exciting new historical setting and the consistent for more than two hours. The “epical,” or “deeply significant” phases of the Chaplin production, if it has such, do not appear to matter particularly so long as everyone can enjoy himself the same way, while in the theatre. “The Gold Rush” also offers several very telling touches of Chaplin paths, and while I do not believe that the picture, as a whole, is artistically on the same plane with Chaplin, such pictures as “A Dog’s Life,” “Shoulder Arms” or “The Kid,” it is nevertheless great entertainment.

Rudolph Valentino is somewhat affected apparently by the present comedy tendency. His picture “The Black Eagle” is to lay considerable stress on a new type of hero. The period of the story has been modernized and the setting is Russia. Valentino plays a Cossack officer, who suffers some tribulations because of the women, but more importance is being given to “The Eagle” than to the newly developed athletic skill. Some expert horseback riding and other stunts by him will likely be incorporated, insofar as they do not tread too closely on feats like Fanchon the Cricket, the Hungarian actress, whom Samuel Goldwyn discovered abroad, will play the feminine lead, and great things are already being predicted for her in “The Dark Angel.” Goldwyn’s final picture before joining United Artists.
President Coolidge Endorses Greater Movie Season
Plans Completed For Launching Of Campaign

President Calvin Coolidge has endorsed Greater Movie Season.

In a letter written from Swampscott, Mass., to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., President Coolidge declares:

"My attention has been called to the fact that you are taking the twenty-ninth anniversary of the moving picture industry as an occasion to inaugurate a Greater Movie Season Campaign. Such a movement to emphasize the desirability of worthy motion pictures will be of real public value. The progress that has been made in both education and entertainment in this tremendous enterprise is an outstanding achievement of the opening years of this century. I congratulate you and wish you a continuation of your success.

Very truly yours,
Sgd. CALVIN COOLIDGE."

President Coolidge’s statement constitutes a signal honor for the film industry since, with the exception of Red Cross drives, no other national movement has received such official endorsement from the White House.

How enthusiastically the industry as a whole has adopted the season is indicated by the fact that whereas at the outset the neutral organization attached to the Hays office set thirty-five individual campaigns as its objective, actually one hundred and twenty-one drives are in vigorous operation. More than a thousand cities and towns-large and small—are included in this scope—more than five thousand theatres are flying the Greater Movie Season pennant.

From many localities here the central bureau received no notice that action was ever contemplated, much less demands for additional buttons and urgent co-operation reveal that, of their own accord, exhibitors have organized to put the season over.

Thirty Newspaper Contests

Every phase of the campaign is marked by similar success. Thirty newspapers with an aggregate daily circulation of 3,049,000 are now conducting the Greater Movie Season essay contest that has a trip for two around the world on the Red Star liner Belgium and vacation for two in Los Angeles and Miami as the principal national prizes. Latest additions to the list include the New York Mirror, Washington Times, Louisville Herald and Post, Oklahoma City News, Toledo News Bee, and Wichita Beacon.

As a feature of the general opening celebrations, Monday, August 3rd, a radio pageant linking east and west has been arranged. From 10:15 P.M. to midnight, station WEAF (New York) will broadcast a special program to which famous artists of stage and screen and the combined orchestras of the Capitol, ivoli, Rialto and Piccadilly Theatres will contribute hookups with different stations and carry this program as far west as Davenport, Iowa, while on the same evening film folk have arranged an aerial demonstration from Los Angeles with radio greetings for the fans from their favorite players as an additional attraction.

Naval co-operation secured at the commencement of activities has already gone into effect with the result that 6,500 Navy boards occupying picked street locations throughout the country carry the Greater Movie Season poster that the U. S. Navy prepared. Ninety-six War Department Theatres attached to army posts have joined in the campaign, their theatre conducting a campaign along the lines set out by the Hays office, supplemented by special advertising material from the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service.

A part altogether from increased entertainment, increased public service to be rendered by the screen has become the keynote of many campaigns. Notably M. J. O’Toole, former president of the M.P.T.O.A. in aiding the theatres of Scranton, Pa., has stressed the educational influence of motion pictures and secured official recognition from the U. S. War Department, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania and the State legislature. Another phase of this work is presented by the Stanley Theatre of Philadelphia, in the form of a huge pledge, framed and hung outside the theatre, that shows the signature of every employee from the manager to porter, guaranteeing better service to moviegoers.

The Governor of Colorado and the Mayor of Denver have been invited to head the movie parade in Denver, in which Betty Compson, Ernest Torrence and players of the "Pony Express" company on location will participate. Every dancing academy in the city will provide pretty ballerinas for floats, while several hundred cowboys, adding picturesque local color, will ride in honor of various Westerns.

Headquarters Busy Spot

Greater Movie Season headquarters is the busiest place in the city. All work for the past week has been concentrated on developing plans for the movie parade which will be held Saturday morning, August 1st at 10 o’clock. Estimates at this writing indicate the parade will be two and one-half miles in length with approximately forty floats. Floats are being entered by all the larger theatres. In addition to the theatres the leading commercial houses of Denver have entered their appearance either by floats or other representation. Indications to-day are that Colorado Springs will be represented by the participants of a rodeo which will be held there in the near future.

Two meetings last week between chairmen of committees working on the Greater Movie Season campaign in Kansas City and advertising managers of large Kansas City business institutions have left arrangements nearing a status of completion. Co-operation has been assured by several large business concerns. The National Bank at the Panitages theatre and the Newman theatre, the latter being in the basement of the Newman theatre.

Plans for parades, floats and other details in connection with the celebration will be completed in a few days. C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, succeeded in "getting over"
FRED CUBBERLY

Gets Important New Post With F. & R. SUPERVISION of Finkelstein & Ruben’s long string of theatres in the Northwest outside the Twin City territory is in the hands of Fred Cubberley.

He was given the job of running the out-of-town theatres after he had done all the theatre buying for the F. & R. organization for more than a year.

His desk is now moved up near the head of the line in the Loeb Arcade offices in Minneapolis and he has his hands full, for he is still in a sort of general supervision of the film activities of the Twin City company.

It has been six or seven years now since Cubberley took charge of the First National office in Minneapolis and thus made his first connection with the F. & R. Film company, after the four years that he spent in the short subject field as well as taking hold of Educational films. A little later he acted for Finkelstein & Ruben in the establishment of F. & R. Film company, organized to handle independent features, for the company and for any others who wished to use them.

At length he resigned his First National connection and began doing the theatre buying for the Northwestern string and now they have given him the job of handling the whole line.

lengthy stories in daily newspapers concerning the national essay phase of the campaign.

Greater Movie Season will open in San Francisco with a week of festivities at all of the city’s theatres, according to plans launched at a meeting of the Allied Amusements Industries.

Distributors of San Francisco, which will open its season during the week of August 5th, perfected the following organization, representing every branch of the industry.

General Chairman, Edward R. Baron, Granada-California-Imperial, St. Francis Theatres; Assistant Chairman, Thomas D. VanOsten, manager Allied Amusement Industries, Finance committee chairman, Irving C. Ackerman, Ackerman & Harris.

Publicity Committee

Publicity and Advertising—Chairman, J. A. Brebner, West Coast Theatres, Inc.; assistant chairman, Nat Halt, California Theatre; F. M. Whitbeck, Loew’s Warfield Theatre; Robert Harvey, Loew’s Warfield; M. S. Vidaver, Louis R. Greenfield Theatre; Arthur H. Kees, Cameo Theatre; and Charles Kurtzman, California Theatre.

Charles Pineas, Imperial Theatre; Walter Barusch, Union Square Theatre; Oscar Kautner, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; J. W. Murphy, Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation; W. C. Ghetty, Universal Film Corporation; W. Harold Wilson, representing the neighborhood theatres.

Others Are Named

F. H. Emmick, Golden State Theatre & Realty Corporation; C. A. Nathan, Universal Pictures Corporation; Fred W. Voigt, Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation; G. A. Blumenhal, Education Film Exchange; C. L. Thuerkant, Cameo Theatre; Max Graf, Aztec and Egyptian Theatres; Ben F. Simpson, Associated Exhibitors; S. E. Levis, Francesca Theatre; Aaron Goldberg, Aaron Goldberg Theatres.

Another New House for Kansas City

Kansas City is to have another new picture palace next week to be announced in the past two months. The latest announcement calls for a 3,000 seat house at a location one block of the new Warwick, to be reconstructed at Thirty-Ninth and Main streets. It is to cost upward of $200,000.

The new house is being promoted by George Tristaniich, who will operate it, and R. L. Willis, who is owner of the property.

G. Edgar Smith Victim of Heart Disease

G. Edgar Smith, for fifteen years treasurer of the New Theatre Company and who was treasurer for the Whitehurst Interests for many years as well as a buyer for the American Wholesale Corporation, died at the West Baltimore General Hospital Saturday, July 18. He succumbed to heart disease and was buried at Merchandize, N. J., the home of his mother. He was 63 years of age and is survived by his mother and two sisters.

Picture Conditions Poor in East Africa

A. M. Warren, American Consul at Nairobi, Africa, reports picture conditions rather poor in that scattered farming community of 4,000 inhabitants. There are three picture houses that give performances nightly, except Sunday. On Saturday night the attendance reaches its maximum of about 100.

Rentled films are imported independently by the theatres in sufficient quantity to give two changes of performances weekly. The programs usually include an American comedy of two reels, an American scientific film of one reel, a topical British film of one reel and a drama or comedy film in six reels. The admission prices range from about twenty-four cents to seventy-two cents.

Thirty Take Civil Service Quiz as Reviewers

About thirty persons took the Civil Service examinations in New York state last week, seeking later appointment to the New York State Motion Picture Commission, as reviewers. The examination was held in the State Capital. The number of men and women were about equally divided.

The position of reviewer pays $1,500 a year outside of the metropolitan district, and $1,800 in and around New York city. It is said that there are no vacancies existing at the present time. When such occur, the person heading the list as the result of the examinations conducted last week, will receive the appointment.

Exhibitors Campaign for Sunday Shows

Exhibitors of two Missouri towns are waging educational campaigns in hope of bringing back Sunday shows in their respective communities. J. W. Cooper of the Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo., is conducting the fight for liberalism in that town, while in Columbia, Mo., Rex Barrett of the Cozy Theatre is showing the way back to the days of Washington and Jefferson.

An effort will be made to obtain city ordinances permitting Sunday shows. It is also probable that elections will be held in both towns.

Governor Smith to Open Radio Pageant

THE radio pageant which will inaugurate “Greater Movie Season” in New York will be formally opened by Governor Alfred E. Smith, who will broadcast from the Crystal Room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel at 10 o’clock through station W. E. B. In accepting the invitation Governor Smith said:

“The only thing that might prevent me from talking into the microphone would be a call to Albany to attend to some important official business. From the present outlook I expect to be in New York city next week. I shall be only too glad to open the program that night and say a few words about the movies. I heartily endorse any movement for a better era for the cinema.”
Five Important Developments In Arbitration Situation
Seider-Pettijohn Debate in N. Y. Leads the List

Five important developments were noted this week in connection with Arbitration, which continues to be one of the liveliest topics in the industry:

1. A sharp exchange of views between Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, and Charles C. Pettijohn, General Counsel of the Film Board of Trade.

2. Decision of the Government not to appeal a case in which Federal Judge Bondy held that members of a trade association may withhold credit from customers under certain conditions. Advocates of the present Arbitration in the film industry declare that this is a parallel situation with the Film Board of Trade.

3. Announcement of the forthcoming complete extension of Arbitration System to Canada, where it is expected to be in full operation by October 1.

4. A week's postponement of the Apollo-Wellmont Theatre case, in the New York County Supreme Court. The Apollo Exchange seeks to compel the theatre to submit to arbitration. This case, it has been announced, will be made a test action by the exhibitor organization which is backing the Wellmont in its defense of the suit.

5. In answer to a suit filed June 24 by John Romwebber, Akron exhibitor, charging the Cleveland Film Board of Trade, Pathe, Progress Pictures, Skirball Gold Seal Productions, and the Ohio Educational Exchanges with conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce, Squires, Saunders and Dempsey, attorneys for the defendants, have filed a demurrer charging that the case of Romwebber against the above defendants is not within the jurisdiction of the Cleveland Federal court, and furthermore that there is insufficient grounds in the charge to make a case. The court will decide whether the case has any standing or not.

The debate between Messrs. Seider and Pettijohn took place at an open meeting of the A. M. P. A., in New York, July 23, and was entirely unexpected. Mr. Seider had been invited to address the association. Mr. Pettijohn, as an A. M. P. A., member, asked permission to query Mr. Seider, and the result was a heated argument.

It will be recalled that Mr. Seider recently sent a letter to Will Hays inviting the latter to a joint debate on arbitration and the Film Boards of Trade. During the A. M. P. A. colloquy, Mr. Seider declared that the letter had not been acknowledged, to which Mr. Pettijohn rejoined that the letter had been acknowledged and a copy sent to Mr. Hays, who is in California. Mr. Seider said he had not received the acknowledgment.

Mr. Pettijohn charged that Mr. Seider "did not represent anybody," to which the latter replied that he was President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey and had been unanimously elected chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Committee on Contract and Arbitration.

Admitting that he had never had any difficulty with the Film Boards of Trade, Mr. Seider contended that he was qualified to deal with the arbitration question because he had nothing personal at stake. "We are fighting for a cause," he declared. "There is no personal motive whatever behind my activities." Mr. Pettijohn asserted that there was no complaint from any theatre owner. "They are all satisfied with the arbitration system," he added. "We are not opposed to arbitration," Mr. Seider replied, "but we want fair arbitration predicated on a fair contract. There are four law-suits pending in every part of the country. There were six hundred theatre owners in the convention hall at Milwaukee; all six hundred voted unanimously against the present contract and your arbitration system."

Mr. Pettijohn declared there was one case in Texas that had been settled and one pending in Ohio.

Mr. Seider came back with the Wellenbrink (Wellmont) case and the Samuelson matter. Referring to the latter, the exhibitor leader declared that Samuelson asserted the case had been delayed. Mr. Pettijohn answered that he was ready to try it "tomorrow."

"If you want to determine the legality of the arbitration clause or whether or not there is restraint of trade, go to court — go to the Supreme Court!"

Mr. Seider replied: "You, as an exponent of arbitration, tell us to go to court. You have left us no other alternative. We have already done so."

Mr. Pettijohn set out an extended argument over the status of the negotiations between the exhibitor organization and the Hays body on revision of the contract. Mr. Pettijohn declared that Nathan Burkan took up redrafting of the contract with any of the Hays office. He added that Mr. Burkan had gone to Europe and Gabriel L. Hess, of the Hays legal staff was on vacation; hence nothing was done.

Mr. Seider rejoined that Mr. Burkan had written him (Seider) a letter in which he said that Mr. Hess refused to consider the contract submitted by Burkan and informed him that the theatre owners had practically agreed to a new contract. On the contrary, said Mr. Seider, the negotiations had not been concluded. Quoting Mr. Burkan: "You can see by this that we did not get very far with them."

When a motion was made to extend a vote of thanks by the A. M. P. A. to Mr. Seider for his address, Mr. Pettijohn seconded it.

The decision by Judge Bondy was handed down in New York last May in the case of the Government vs. the Fur Dressers and Fur Dyers' Association, Inc. The Government's petition alleging conspiracy in restraint of trade, was dismissed. Judge Bondy held that members of a trade association may agree to withhold credit from customers who have not paid bills long overdue, without violating the law, provided such practice "does not go beyond the reasonable requirements to correct the abuses which have crept into the trade."

Caldwalader, Wickersham & Taft, counsel for the association, have been advised that the Attorney-General has decided not to appeal the decision. The time limit for such appeal by the Government has expired.

Judge Bondy held, in part, that the Association fixed no prices, but merely regulated the business of members in a manner tending to promote legitimate trade rather than restrain it.

Supporters of the present arbitration system in the picture business declare that the decision virtually legalized withholding of credit from exhibitors by the Film Boards of Trade in connection with certain arbitration cases.

All recognized picture distributors in Canada will have the Arbitration Clause included in their printed forms of booking contract as outlined by the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada.

Theatre Circuits Extending Rapidly

Seven More Houses for Famous Players—Important Deals in Jersey, Michigan, New England and Texas

NEW YORK STATE, Michigan, the Pacific Northwest, Baltimore, New England, New Jersey, Canada, and Texas figured this week in important news of theatre circuit activities.

Famous Players-Lasky has acquired a half interest in six houses upstream through a deal with W. W. Farley of Scheneectady. Paramount gets an interest in the four theatres which Mr. Farley owns in that city, the State, which cost upwards of $400,000; the Strand, the Albany and the Bard, all located in the business center of Scheneectady. Two houses in Catkill are included in the deal. The four Scheneectady theatres were recently acquired by Mr. Farley a few weeks ago, when he bought the interests of William Shirley and William Raferty, with whom he had been associated under the firm name of Farley and Inc.

The Catkill houses were also acquired recently by Mr. Farley and include the Community, formerly operated by M. E. Silberstein and another theatre which was run by William Blackmore. It is a report that Famous Players will also enter Albany and either buy or build a theatre in that city in the near future.

Famous Players Canadian Corp., has acquired the Fine Arts Theatre at Ottawa, Ontario, and will operate it under a varying policy of pictures, vaudeville and stage plays. This makes the third of the former Ambrose Small Theatres in Ontario which have been acquired, the others being the Grand, London, Ontario, and the Grand, Kingston.

In Detroit, an extensive building program, said to involve $10,000,000 and the construction of six new houses, was announced by Charles H. Miller who operates the Miles, Regent and Ferry Field. The program has for its aim the placing of a Miles theatre within easy reach of every Detroit neighborhood. The projected theatres will have a combined seating capacity of 20,000, according to the announcement.

The first to be built will be called the New Miles and will stand on Adams avenue opposite the Teller Hotel. It will seat 3,500. This will be the only downtown unit of the new group. The rest will be neighborhood theatres. None will seat less than 3,000 and two have been designed to take care of 4,000 each.

In the Pacific Northwest, reports are current that William Fox is negotiating to take over the important Jensen & Von Herberg circuit. The Northwest Film Journal says that Fox has made an offer indentical with that Famous tendered, but that Fox would convert the demands of Jensen & Von Herberg for cash.

Although Harry M. Crandall this week specifically denied that an interest in his chain had been sold to the Stanley Company, it is learned that Fox is interested in, or is negotiating for an interest in the Crandall circuit.

In Baltimore, the report is persistent that the Stanley Company will build one or more theatres in the Maryland metropolis. A wire to the Stanley offices remained unanswered at press time. It would not be surprising, however, if the story turned out to be substantially correct. It is known that several of the larger companies have contemplated building there.

New England attracted attention because of the negotiations of the group headed by Arthur S. Friend. They are already building a large theatre in New Haven, Conn., which is to be the first of a chain of eight in the New England States. A site has been acquired on State street, the main business thoroughfare of New London, Conn., where the second house will be built. The land cost the syndicate about $300,000, it is reported, and this, plus the cost of the buildings, will make the project total about $630,000. The seating capacity of the theatre will be about 2,900.

There were two important developments in New Jersey. The Fabian Enterprises have taken over the Capitol, at Passaic, the largest theatre in Jersey, under a 21-year lease. The report was confirmed by Abe Fabian, who said that an arrangement had been made satisfactory to the Harris Brothers, who are the controlling stockholders of the Capitol. This brings the number of Fabian theatres up to 21, and they will open three more in the fall.

Joseph Stern announced this week that he had bought land in Red Bank, N. J., and would build a 2,900-seat house there to cost $300,000. Vaudeville, pictures and dramatic shows will be given. Mr. Stern also has under construction the following houses: Royal Theatre, Bloomfield, capacity 1,005; Capitol, Newark, capacity 2,000; and Ritz theatre, Newark, capacity 2,000, cost $400,000, to open Dec. 1; Sanford theatre, Irvington, capacity 1,800, cost $350,000, to open March 1.

In Texas Dent-Musselman, Inc., controlling more than 15 houses, have made a deal with Dye, Ford & Rogers for supervision of the latter houses, including the Strand: Mission and Deandi at Amarillo, and the Olympic, Strand, Mission and Palace at Wichita Falls.

Dent-Musselman recently completed negotiations for the management of the Fair at Amarillo from J. Levy and the Strand at Wichita Falls from the Strand theatre company. Henry Ford will be city manager at Wichita Falls and Ross Rogers at Amarillo.

Important Developments in Arbitration Situation

Toronto, by October 1st, according to formal announcement just made from the headquarters of the Canadian distributors association.

This arbitration clause is already effective in the contracts of a number of leading film exchanges in the Dominion and its full force is now felt in those Provinces where Film Boards of Trade have been established, these having been organized at Toronto, Ontario, and Montreal, Quebec.

It is pointed out in the new contracts that the provisions of arbitration are to be construed according to the laws of Ontario where there is a code of statutes designed to provide for private arbitration of selling contracts. This code was primarily intended for the use of grain companies and growers but the provisions therein are applicable in every degree to disputes in any line of business, it is stated.

Arson Charged Following Freeport, Me., Fire

Gasoline enough to blow up the entire block is alleged to have been found by the authorities following a fire in a bowling alley which also partly destroyed the Nordea Theater in Freeport last Tuesday morning.

As a result Lewis and Nikolos Kesaris and Henry Morin, all of Lewiston, are being held under $4,000 bonds each on charges of arson.

The fire started in the bowling alley situated under the Nordea Theater and was well under way when firemen arrived. Four jugs of gasoline are alleged to have been found in the burned area and it is also said by the authorities that gasoline had been spread over the floor.

They are to appear in the Municipal Court July 31. The theater was named after Madame Lillian Nordea world famous singer.

Nat Beier Named Warners’ New York Manager

Nat Beier has been named manager of Warner Brothers New York exchange, succeeding Robert S. Horly, resigned. Beier in his new position will also continue to exercise supervision over the New Jersey territory. He was appointed New Jersey manager a few weeks ago. Beier is a veteran of the picture industry and an old time Warnerite.
Independence Week To Be Held In Month of October

M. P. T. O. A. and I. M. P. A. Join Forces For Drive

INDIAN Independence Week will be celebrated in the theatres of the country beginning Sunday, October 18. This was determined upon at an important meeting this week of the Board of Trade and Commerce, affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and a committee of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America.

Present at the meeting on behalf of the M. P. T. O. A. were Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the national board; Nathan Yamin, of Fall River, Mass.; A. Julian Brylawski, of Washington, D. C.; and L. M. Sagal, of New Haven, Conn. Representing the independent producers and distributors were Frederick H. Elliott, General Manager of the I. M. P. A.; W. E. Shallenberger, A. Carlos, Jack Bellman and Harry Thomas.

The country will be zoned into six districts, to which will be sent special sales and publicity men. The statement issued by the two committees and signed by those named above follows in part:

"The Committee endorsed the various activities carried out by the Committees in charge in connection with Board of Trade and Commerce functioning. The producers stating that the results of the formation of the Board were actually in operation and were of a most gratifying nature. Independent product was getting its chance; and the inroads of Monopoly upon this Industry was being slowly but surely checked.

"A resolution by the Committee inaugura-

Chadwick Sees Wall Street as Menace

Declaring motion pictures the new plaything of Wall Street, I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Motion Picture Association, asserted in an address to members of the association at a meeting in the Hotel Astor, Wednesday, that production, distribution and exhibition of films are being made secondary considerations.

"The main idea of the manipulators today is rigging the stock market," he said. "The whole thing is a repetition of what happened in the steel business, the automobile industry and in other lines where the American ideal of industrial combination and centralization lent itself to the purposes of money power. Steel, automobiles and the other big industries have been stabilized and standardized and so Wall street needs a new toy.

"Playing for Market Rise

"Motion pictures supply that need, so they are going about the work of playfully rigging the market for an overnight rise of anywhere from ten to fifteen points. In order to do this, they have to have something to build on and theatre control satisfies that necessity. It is all being done to create a structure on which they can sell stock issues to the public, thereby rigging the market.

"It stands to reason that men who can make millions simply by rigging the stock market do not care about the relatively small profits to be made out of legitimate picture production, distribution and exhibition.

"Out in Los Angeles, where picture production is the main thought, they believe that the picture is the thing. They know nothing of what is the matter with what happens to the picture as it is distributed and exhibited. And these producers who are making pictures and turning them over to the big companies honestly believe they are creating fine things, individualistic and artistic.

"As practical picture men and business men, we know that this is not true. Already the dominant forces of this industry have standardized picture production to the point where individuality no longer counts. It is a repetition of what happened to the individuals in steel and automobiles. They simply become spokes in the big wheel of centralization, from the highest to the lowest among them. And the same thing is becoming true in the picture production field.

"It is a regrettable thing that such things are permitted to happen in this country, for industrial combination and centralization stifle the opportunity and individuality of our children and the future generations. And some day we will pay heavily for it.

"The independent steel companies and the other industries which were the playing things of Wall Street lost their individuality because they did not fight—and the success of the independent picture industries, production, distribution and exhibition, depends entirely upon the amount of fight they put up. I cannot too strongly urge upon these elements and especially the members of this association the necessity of meeting the opposition with the same weapons they use against us. We must meet them with the same forces and our forces must be equal to theirs in numbers and intelligence. It is a game in which we must have the same number of players as they have and it is up to us to get them.

Sacrifices Must Be Made

"To do this it will be necessary for us to make sacrifices, to forget selfish interests and to put all of our power into the purse for defense and independence."

Mr. Chadwick, who is president of the Chadwick Pictures Corporation, has just returned from the coast, and this was the first meeting of the Independent Association over which he had presided since the gathering in Milwaukee.
ATKINSON JOINS "ROXY" CIRCUIT
Associates With New York Chain

WILLIAM E. ATKINSON, vice-president and general manager of Metro-Goldwyn, is to become associated with Arthur H. Sawyer, Herbert Lubin and S. I. Rothafel in the erection of a circuit of mammoth motion picture theatres in Greater New York, the first of which to be called the "Roxy," will be built on the plot at 50th Street and Seventh Avenue, New York City, with a seating capacity of 6,212 seats.

Atkinson was one of the prime movers in the affairs of the Metro Pictures Corporation for many years, entering that organization eleven years ago as field representative.

Upon his return to New York, following an absence of several weeks, Mr. Atkinson made the following statement:

"On my return to New York, from an extended vacation, Sawyer and Lubin invited me to become associated with them in their undertaking with Mr. Rothafel. While I naturally regret severing a business relationship which has lasted almost eleven years and which has been a source of great pleasure to me, due to the excellent men with whom I have been associated, a careful study of the enormous theatre project planned for, influenced me to tender my resignation as vice-president and general manager of the Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. I expect to take up my new work in August. It is my sincere belief that the erection of the "Roxy" at 50th Street and 7th Avenue, the world's largest motion picture theatre as the first link in the circuit of Roxy houses to be placed in carefully chosen locations in New York, Brooklyn and the Bronx, will revolutionize motion picture theatre history in the outlying districts of New York, at the same time bringing to the great host of local screen followers the type of entertainment which in some sections they have long been denied."

Skouras Declares Dividend

Report of the St. Louis Concern Shows Healthy Business Condition for Quarter

THE Board of Directors of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., St. Louis, declared a dividend of 40 cents per share on its Class B stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents per share of the Class A issue. The dividends are payable August 1 to stockholders of record July 25.

A report of the company's business for the three months' period ended July 3, 1925, shows a net income before deducting federal income taxes but after allowing for interest, depreciation and running expenses, etc., of $67,214.50. For the first quarter of the year the net earnings totaled $88,979.17, bringing the total for the first six months of the year to $126,193.67. This is at the rate of $10.09 per share on the 25,000 shares of A stock outstanding or 3 3/2 times the dividend requirements.

The statement shows a liquid condition of $126,596.17 in quick assets to meet current liabilities of $110,544.67, leaving a working capital of $11,051.50. The net worth as of July 3 was $2,111,159.44. The quick assets included $315,131.23 in cash.

"Progress on the new theatre at Seventh and Loewest streets is very satisfactory. At present the contractors are two weeks ahead of schedule, and the foundation is about one-third complete. Steel will start being erected around August 15." The A stock closed the week on July 25 at 43 a new high level and an increase for the week of 2 points.

Jersey M. P. T. O. Move Headquarters

The headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey on August 1st will move from 727 Seventh Avenue, New York City, to the sixth floor of 745 Seventh Avenue, corner of 49th street. The new telephone numbers are: Circle 6025-6.

Allene Ray and Larry Wheeler Married

Larry Wheeler, Independent Picture Producer and Allene Ray, Pathe Serial Star, were married last week in a Mexican border town. Relatices of both sides were present. The couple are returning to New York following a wire received from there to begin production on a new Pathe picture.

In and Out of Town

B. P. MCCORMICK, owner of theatres at Florence and Canyon City, Calif., was a visitor in New York this week. He has been taking a two-months' vacation, visiting his old home in Georgia. He came to New York by boat from Jacksonville, Fla.

I. E. CHADWICK has returned from the Coast and presided at the meeting of the Independent Association this week.

E. A. ESCHMANN, of First National, leaves this week for the Coast. He will visit a number of the company's exchanges, returning in about two weeks.

JAMES E. GRAinger, general sales manager for Fox, is on a visit to Chicago, Detroit and Boston.

CHARLES DAvis, 2nd, made a flying trip to Philadelphia this week on distribution matters.

among the week's visitors were: Bob Savini, Atlanta; Bud Barsky, Hollywood; Tony Lucchese, Philadelphia.

Barney Goodman, production manager of the Maynard unit, is here from the Coast.

E. W. HAMMONS, President of Educational, returned July 29 from the Coast where he went for a brief visit.

UDWig ERE and O. E. Goebel, of Associated Arts, have arrived in Hollywood by auto from New York.

Budd Rogers, vice-president of Warnes Film, is on a tour of Southern and Western states. He will visit Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Little Rock and Oklahoma City.

A. LOTT, head of the print department of First National, London, arrived on the Homeric for a two weeks' stay.

J. G. BACHMANN, of Schulberg Productions, has gone to Hollywood. He will visit the Schulberg exchanges on the Coast, returning in about six weeks.

L. ROCKeTTT, assistant to Richard A. Rosland, First National, has returned from a six weeks' stay in Hollywood where he pinch-hit for John McCormick during the latter's vacation abroad.

SERING D. WILSON sailed last week for an extended business tour of England and the Continent.

C. LANG COBB, general sales manager for Co sensation, is on a tour of the key cities.

M. H. HOFFMAN, general manager of Tiffany, is in Hollywood.
Labor Troubles Loom in Industry

Regular Annual Controversies Are Under Way in Many Cities. With Atlanta in Most Serious Plight

With the approach of the new season and the termination of old agreements, the usual labor controversies are looming among theatre managers, musicians and operators unions in various sections of the United States. Up to the present, the most serious threatened difficulty seems to be around Atlanta, where a possible lockout of all employees of Atlanta picture houses loomed last Saturday when it was learned that management and employees connected with the industry were asking increases in salaries and making other demands.

"Operators are asking for a 20 per cent increase, and other employees are demanding advances in proportion," Willard C. Patterson, representing the Theatre Managers' Association of Atlanta, said, "We are unable to meet these demands as we were to grant those of the musicians, and are negotiating to try to avert any crisis. We hope that nothing serious will result." G. R. Swords, operator at the Rialto theatre, is head of the local branch of the L. A. Operators' Association.

Members and directors of orchestras of practically all large motion picture houses in Atlanta were given notice by managers of the theatres that after two weeks their services would not be needed.

The climax in the wholesale discharge of musicians, all of whom are members of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians, came with announcement that Alex Keese, director of the Howard orchestra had received his notice. Enrico Leide, director of the Metropolitan, received his notice earlier.

Willard C. Patterson, speaking for the Theatre Managers' Association declared local theatres have been "forced to take such action because of unreasonable and impossible demands by the Atlanta Federation of Musicians."

On Friday of last week a joint meeting was held of the Atlanta theatre managers, representatives of the Federation of Music, and the members of the Motion Picture Operators' Union. At this meeting, which took place in the offices of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade, in the Haas-Howell building, the musicians asked for an increase for organists, and an increase in scale for several theatres. The operators are asking a 20 per cent increase in salary, and are also asking that the Metropolitan and Howard theatres employ three operators instead of two, the work to be divided evenly among them.

It is the consensus of opinion that the time is not opportune for any advance in salaries, and it is understood that a very decided stand will be taken by the managers, that no increase shall be made in any salary in any department of any Atlanta house.

THEATRE MANAGERS' MEETING

Theatre managers participating in the meeting were J. J. Franklin, district supervisor for Southern Enterprises, Sir Saunders and Willard C. Patterson, of the Metropolitan; Thomas H. James, of Loew's Grand; Louis Hume, of the Atlanta; James Jackson, of the Tudor, Thomas G. Coleman, of the Cameo and Alamo No. 1; Matt Whitham, of the Alamo No. 2; Marin Semon, of the Forstyth theatre: W. T. Murray, of the Rialto theatre, and Howard Waugh, manager of the Howard theatre. Mr. Patterson presided over the meeting.

The annual controversy with the operators' union now is confronting Kansas City exhibitors. This year the operators are demanding an increase of 30 cents a house—from $1.45 to $1.75. Several increases have been granted the operators in the last few years, but this year sentiment among exhibitors is decidedly against the increase. A meeting between exhibitors and operators probably will be held in a few days.

Motion picture machine operators in the New Portland, Maine and Casco motion picture houses are out on strike with the employees of the Loew Circuit for alleged violation of contracts. These two local houses are the only ones to date affected. Tickets were stationed in front of each theatre and while the union demands that police have stopped these others say it has been done.

Survey Brings Clean Pictures Plea

Interesting Facts Are Revealed in Questionnaire Issued by Loew's Warfield in San Francisco

Loew's Warfield Theatre in San Francisco, operated by the West Coast Theatres Inc., has just completed a survey of likes and dislikes among the motion picture theatre goers of that city. Every cinema in the neighborhood, every class of inhabitant, every varying portion of the business and financial districts of the western city was included in the survey which was made by Therese Fitzgerald, newspaper woman, press agent and fiction writer—a woman with an understanding of and an appreciation for this work.

The outstanding feature of the entire survey, a canvass which covered more than a thousand varying peoples, was, "let the pictures be clean—sacrifice, if need be, some of the thrill so that we may take your youngsters to the theatre."

Perhaps one of the most interesting facts revealed by the survey was—20 percent of those who attend Loew's Warfield Theatre are attracted, for in answer to the question marked "If so—what attracts you?"—by the policy of the theatre for they answered,—"It's a habit and because the Warfield is the best show in the city."

Some months ago Loew's Warfield took for an advertising slogan, "San Francisco's Greatest Entertainment," and every piece of copy turned out of the publicity department has bore this line.

Loew's Warfield, in its advertising campaign uses 60 percent newspaper display space, 30 percent billboards with the remaining 10 percent of their advertising appropriation covering a tie-up with radio KPO, the dash boards of the Market street ear line and exploitation stands. Yet the Warfield was unable to race to the marketplace an equal division among all the various mediums. Friendly advice and conversation that shownmen term "mouth-to-mouth" advertising, ranked high in swaying a doubtful theatre goer.

"What sort of pictures do you like best?" brought almost a constant repetition of "Any kind, just so they are clean." If any advantage was to be placed over another, "Romantic Drama" had the edge with the added advice of "but, no costumes."

The leading star vote had Colleen Moore leading the field with Norma Shearer second and Norma Talmadge a close third. Among the men, and this was unusual, because Loew's Warfield had been the topic of conversation between the investigator and those interviewed, Tom Mix was the favorite and the Mix pictures are never shown at the Warfield. There was not hardly any other choice for a male star. Harry Langdon led in the comedy leads.

Less than a half of one percent of those interviewed could give an intelligent answer to the question, "Do you understand the picture situation?" The investigator suggested this with, "Do you know how the theatres secure the pictures, where they are made and what stars work for certain producing companies and what theatres release the pictures of these stars and producers?"

This fact brings home the thought that more serious informative publicity should be given by the theatre press men as to the releasing companies, the producers and under what banner a star is playing. The investigator reported that the average person was interested in this phase of motion picture situation but had never read anything concerning it.

Eight and a fraction percent were attracted to Loew's Warfield by the music and stage entertainment. This is considered a fair average for this house which makes a feature of their Fanchon and Marco stage presentations and the Lipshultz and the Music Master orchestral offerings.

The entire survey cost the theatre less than $0.00, and included both the time of the investigator and the printing of the questionnaire. A trilling sum, in the opinion of General Manager A. M. Bowles of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Frank Whitcomb, in charge of publicity and exploitation, for it gave them an interesting insight to just what the present and prospective patrons of Loew's Warfield Theatre wanted in their entertainment, in the appeal that was to be made to them to gain their patronage and the manner in which they were to be treated after they had spent their money at the box office.
F. B. O. HAS SURPRISE STAR
Tyler to Have Lead in Westerns

F. B. O. has revealed the identity of its new surprise star. He is Tom Tyler, twenty-two years of age and an athlete of considerable ability. He is to assume the leading role in a series of Western pictures.

Tyler is one of the star athletes of the Los Angeles Athletic Club team. He is said to be credited with American and world's records in weight-lifting in two events—the one-hand "clean and jerk" at 240½ pounds, and the two-hand "snatch" at 212 pounds.

In addition to his ability as a strong man, Tyler is said to be an expert horseman, and a football, track and field star of note. He is not new to the screen as he has appeared in a number of productions, among them Elinor Glyn's "The Only Thing." He has supported Fred Thomson, has played several roles in Joe Brown productions and was featured in "The Midnight Express."

"Let's Go Gallagher" is the tentative title of the first Tyler production. It is described as a fast moving Western with plenty of action. A number of other stories are being lined up for the new star.

Independent Association Boom
Producers, Distributors and Exchanges Are Taking Organization Memberships

FREDERICK H. ELLIOTT, general manager of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America, makes the announcement that within sixty days virtually all independent producers, distributors and exchanges in the industry will be members of the association. He bases his forecast on the number of members recently elected and upon reports from seventeen Regional Directors who have been making a survey of the situation under his direction.

Since the election of Elliott as General Manager, June 15, thirty-five new members have been added to the organization, which now includes twenty-six producer-distributor members and sixty-four exchanges, a total of ninety organizations. The association has representation in every key center.

New members taken in since July 15 include:—First Graphic Exchange, Albany; Franklin Film Co., Boston; Franklin Film Co., New Haven; Progress Pictures, Inc., Charlotte, N. C.; Progress Pictures, Inc., Indianapolis; Progress Pictures, Inc., Oklahoma City; Skirball Gold Seal Productions, Inc., Cincinnati; Reunion Pictures, Buffalo; Independent Films, Inc., New Haven; American Feature Films, New Haven; Celebrated Players Film Exchange, Indianapolis; Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, Indianapolis; Pen and Pencil Films, New York; Imperial Pictures, Philadelphia; Astor Productions, Inc., Boston; Erwin S. Kleeblatt Press, Inc., New York Associate Member.

Elliott declares that the product being offered by the members of his association compares favorably with any which is being marketed to exhibitors for the new season.

"Our members," he declares, "realize that without good product they cannot hope to compete for play dates, regardless of how well disposed towards them exhibitors may be. Consequently they have gone to extraordinary expense in procuring suitable stories, stars and directors for their programs.

"The Independent producer, distributor and exchange man all feel that this is to be their big year and they have spared no expense in making their pictures par with the best of them. I do not think anyone can dispute the fact that Independent pictures for 1925-26 season are bigger and better than at any time in the history of the business."

"Our members are sincerely trying to give exhibitors the best product obtainable and, with the support which members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have pledged them, they will be encouraged to even greater efforts in the future."

Noted Title Writers Sign M-G-M Contract

Katherine Hilliker and her husband, Captain H. H. Coldwell have been signed to a joint long term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as title writers. Under this contract they will be not associated on the same pictures, but will work separately for the first time. They have titled many of the leading pictures of the past.

Paramount Tossers Beat the Metro-Goldwyn

The Metro-Goldwyn baseball team suffered its first defeat in four starts this season when they were humbled by the Paramount Pep Club at the Catholic Proctorial oval in New York last Saturday 7 to 2.

Sweeney, pitching for Paramount allowed only six hits, while Borack was touched for eight. Sweeney failed to strike out any batter, while Borack ten, Claude Keator, center fielder for Paramount starred with three hits in four trips to the plate. He was also credited with three runs. Max Kusel was the Metro star with two hits out of three times up.

The game marked the second victory of Paramount in two starts. They previously defeated Fox by a 10 to 4 score.

Oscar Neufeld is Named on Contract Committee

Oscar Neufeld, president of the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade, has been elected chairman of the equitable contract committee of the Independent Motion Picture Association. Joe Klein and Jack Bellman of New York, are the other members of the committee.

The committee of which Mr. Neufeld is chairman will meet with a committee appointed at the Detroit meeting of the board of directors of the M.P.F.O.A., and draft an independent contract which will in all probability be adopted for the 1926-27 season.

New Companies Launched in New York State

Motion picture companies incorporated in New York state during the past week, included the following: Arthur Kober, Inc., capitalized at $15,000, with Arthur Kober, Henry I. Myers, New York city, and Ruth Tree, of Hollis; Manlove Amusement Corporation, $15,000, with Benjamin Gutman, Jennie J. Lodge, Brooklyn, New York; Sweeney-Ton-A. Inc., Mineola, New York; Mineola Theatre, Inc., Mineola, $150,000, Ralph W. Latham, Alexander D. Latham, J. Alfred Valentine, of Mineola; 2104 Amusement Co., Inc., capitalization not stated, Max Sheinman, Brooklyn; Frieda V. Goldstein, Tessie Goldberg, New York City.

Fox Reported Negotiating for Three Important Theatre Chains

WILLIAM FOX has been negotiating to take over the Mark Strand chain of theatres, it was learned this week from an authoritative source. It was said Mr. Fox made an offer for the chain in conference with Mr. Mark, but that an agreement could not be reached on price. In some quarters it was said negotiations were already off.

The Mark Strand Corporation, besides controlling the New York and Brooklyn Strand theatres, has a house in Albany, and a new theatre is to be constructed there, has three houses in Troy, N. Y., one each in Quincy, Mass., Lynn, Mass., and Wrottesley, Mass., and has an interest in houses in Syracuse and Buffalo.

It was pointed out that Mr. Fox, if he obtained the circuit, would have an important Broadway outlet, besides theatres located in other strategic points.

It was also reported that Fox was negotiating for the Jensen & Von Herberg circuit in the Pacific Northwest. This follows reports that Famous Players was making overtures to buy control of the chain, and it was said Fox had made the same offer as Famous Players, except that Fox offered to meet the demands of J. & Von H. for cash.

In the trade the report was given considerable credence, because Fox has already bought a 40% interest in West Coast Theatres, Inc., and it was pointed out he might very likely be seeking a further outlet in the Far West.

Still another report of the Fox theatre extension activities was linked with the Crandall Circuit in Washington, D. C., for which Mr. Fox was said to be negotiating. None of these reports could be confirmed.
Shallenberger Reviews Independence

Arrow Chief Sees Failure for Smaller Exhibitors Unless They Cooperate Fully With Producers

Dr. W. E. SHALLENBERGER, leading figure among the independent producers and distributors of motion pictures and a pioneer in the industry, sees a very definite handwriting on the wall unless the present movement of the independent producers and distributors with the cooperation of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners attains its objective. That objective, according to the President of Arrow Pictures Corporation is the separation of the producing end entirely from the exhibition end. He sees as the proper stimulant to box office activity the division of the two natural component parts of the industry.

Dr. Shallenberger is a very strong advocate of the "live and let live" policy. He has no objection to what he terms the "trust" companies, provided they will not interfere with the independents; that they will continue on their way without molestation of the smaller companies. He sees only the stifling of competition in what he terms "the methods now being employed to crush the independent market."

Along this line Dr. Shallenberger says: "This country has grown too large for any one-man or group to control any particular branch of our industrial and commercial life. The independent producer of motion pictures asks that he be permitted to enter into legitimate competition with other organizations and that price and quality of product be the determining factors of success. The spirit of live and let live is too thoroughly American to be killed by any group or organization or individual.

"The exhibitor whose theatre is his only means of income and livelihood is vitally concerned with the policy of the open door. With the present tendency of the large picture companies coralling theatres, it is only a question of time, if they be permitted to continue, when the independent exhibitor will be extinct.

"There are enough independent theatres in the United States, who, if they hooked independent pictures in the same numbers as they now booked trust pictures in the past, could, within six months bring about an entire change of present and possible future conditions so that they need never fear dictation or possible ownership at the hands of the larger interests."

Advocating the independent picture, Dr. Shallenberger points to the fact that the expenses of the independent who has not the large overhead staff to maintain, and who has the same good talent available as the big national companies for the production of pictures, can naturally make as good pictures as the big fellow and at considerably less expense.

Continuing, he says:

"In the final analysis in the determining of price values which every exhibitor must (Continued on Page 609)

Gloria Gould to Launch New Embassy

Society Leader to Take Charge of Premiere of Latest Broadway House; Has Interesting Plans

Lubliner and Trinz Sign Louis Kramer

"society" lines. In pursuance of this policy, some of the ideas to be carried out at the Embassy will include the following:

The entire personnel of the theatre will be composed of women, even to the musicians, ushers, and the like. In addition to its value as a novelty, Miss Gould firmly believes that women are more efficient than men, and will provide her with a more smooth-running organization. It is also in line with her conviction that every woman should be self-supporting, regardless of her social position.

There will be no "presentation" or supporting program in the usual sense at the Embassy. The feature will stand on its own feet, unsupported by surrounding vaudeville or short subjects. There will be an overture, and perhaps other musical numbers, but no prologues or atmospheric presentations.

There will be but one performance each evening, and perhaps three matinees a week—probably Sunday, Wednesday and Saturday.

The house will be run at a two dollar top—and bottom. Thus it will be seen that the whole appeal will be along the lines of making the Embassy a "smart" institution, unique among picture theatres.

The statement has frequently been made by critics of the screen that progress would require that theatres stop trying to appeal to all classes of persons, and that motion pictures be made of varying types to appeal to these varying audiences.

The plan laid down for the operation of the Embassy will be an interesting experiment in this direction, and if it proves successful it is not unlikely that it would pave the way for similar houses in other large centers.

The appointment of society leaders to the positions of hostesses in charge of intimate motion picture playhouses promises to lend increased attraction to pre-view showings, and insure brilliant premieres in addition. The opening of the Embassy under Miss Gould's management promises in particular to be a gala social affair, brilliant with literary folk, screen and stage stars, with society matrons and debutantes acting as ushers and program girls. It is prophesied in this connection that society leaders will play a prominent part in the little theatre movement already begun in England and rapidly mounting in favor in this country.
Lilyan Tashman is Signed by Metropolitan

Lilyan Tashman has been signed to a three year contract by Metropolitan Pictures and in future will be seen in featured roles exclusively in productions to be released through Producers Distributing Corporation. The new contract assures her roles in pictures to be produced by Cecil B. De Mille, Hunt Stromberg, Al Christie, Frances Marion and George Mefford.

Valentino Picture Title is Again Changed

Another change in title is announced for Rudolph Valentino's first starring vehicle for United Artists, which went into production this week. It will be released as "The Lone Eagle." The previous change was in conflict with another production being made by United Artists.

Five additions to the cast for "The Lone Eagle" were also announced. They are Louise Dresser, Carrie Clark Ward, James Marcus, Captain Albert Conti and Eric Mayne. Clarence Brown is directing.

Anne Cornwall Leading Lady With Banks

Anne Cornwall has the leading role opposite Monty Banks in the Associated Exhibitors' feature comedy, "Keep Smiling," which was directed by Albert Austin and Gilbert W. Pratt from a story provided by Herman Raymaker and Clyde Bruckman. The picture is a Monty Banks Pictures Corporation production.

Colvin Brown Off for Brief Tour

Colvin W. Brown, vice-president in charge of production for Film Booking Offices has started on a tour which will take him to a number of exchanges. He departed July 24th for Chicago, Minneapolis and Detroit, but will visit other cities before returning. The trip is being made in the interest of the company's product for the coming season.

Two Thousand Extras in Mix Picture

Tom Mix required the services of two thousand extras for the making of "The Lucky Horseshoe," his first picture for the Fox Film Corporation since his return from Europe. The picture is now being made on the west coast with Billie Dove in the leading feminine role and a supporting cast which includes Malcolm White, J. Farrell MacDonald, Clarissa Selwyn and twelve beautiful Hollywood girls. J. G. Blystone is directing "The Lucky Horseshoe."

First National Purchases the Molnar Novel

First National has purchased screen rights to "Prisoners," the new novel by Franz Molnar, the Viennese playwright, whose "The Devil," "The Swan," and "Fashions for Men," have been produced in New York. "Prisoners" is the only Molnar novel translated into English and published in this country.

De Mille Signs Lillian Rich for Long Term

Lillian Rich has signed a five year contract with Cecil B. De Mille. Her first picture will be in the feminine lead in Rod La Rocque's starring vehicle, "Red Dies," on which Director Paul Sloane is scheduled to start shooting in August. In the meantime De Mille has loaned Miss Rich to Christie for a featured part in "Seven Days," which is now being filmed.

Byron Morgan is Signed by Paramount

Byron Morgan, well known as an author, has signed a long term contract with Paramount whereby the latter will have exclusive rights to his stories for a number of years. He has departed Hollywood for New York to write a screen story for Bebe Daniels.

Among Morgan's latest stories for Paramount were "The Air Mail," "Code of the Sea" and "The Lucky Devil." He wrote several of the starring vehicles for the late Wallace Reid.

Fire Threatens the Sets in Universal City

Fire which broke out last week at Universal City threatened several sets, but the heavy loss was averted through the prompt action of Battalion Chief George A. Kelly, who directed forty firemen in the fight. These firemen at the time were playing roles for Universal in "The Still Alarm."
Seider Talks Before the Kiwanis Club

Joseph M. Seider, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, addressed a meeting of the Kiwanis Club and the Board of Directors of the erie organization at Toms River last Tuesday in which he described the mechanism of the motion picture industry and the exhibition branch in particular. In concluding his talk Seider offered the screen of New Jersey for any local meritons work contemplated. Following the address by Seider, Isadore Hirshblond, Toms River exhibitor was lauded by Rev. Dr. Rowland Nichols who declared that only on very rare occasions should pictures shown by Hirshblond be subjected to criticism.

Virginia Bushman Signed to Contract

Virginia Bushman, daughter of Frances X. Bushman, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will be seen for the first time on the screen in a small part in the Monte Bell production, “Lights of Old Broadway.” It was because of her work in this “hit” the contract was offered her. Miss Bushman is nineteen years old.

Dana Rush to Pass Upon True Story Scripts

Miss Dana V. Rush has been engaged by General Manager R. R. Riskin of the Narr Macfadden True Story Film Company to pass upon all scripts to be produced.

Will Perfect Plans for Cohen Dinner

Plans will be perfected within a week for the testimonial dinner to be tendered Sydney S. Cohen by the Independents. While it has not been definitely decided that the testimonial will take the form of a dinner, that angle seems practically certain. It is also likely it will be held at one of the largest of the New York hotels in September.

take into consideration in order that he may establish the danger line between expense and income, the one item over and above all others is not so much the overhead of the theatre which he is managing but the overhead the picture producer has to add on his product in order to make ends meet and insure a profit on his investment.

“As has been proven in many instances, no one producer has a monopoly in the making of good pictures. Today, as a result of experience and observation, the Independent Producer is employing the best brains and talent in turning out a product that will stand the acid test of public approval. He can sell his pictures for far less money and still make a legitimate profit because he has no carrying charge of inflated executive expense and home office maintenance to add to the cost of his releases. The average cost of distribution of pictures, it has been learned, runs between thirty and forty per cent of the gross income for the big combinations. This cost is double and triple what it costs any other large industrial organization to carry on its business. Who pays this?

“The question almost answers itself. In fact there is but one answer. The exhibitor! It is he who guarantees the box-office. The cost of product to the exhibitor can only come down when the exhibitor picks and chooses his pictures instead of buying in blocks. Every condition in the industry is susceptible to betterment and every individual exhibitor is the best doctor for the ailment.

Situation Seen As Acute

“Present day conditions are not the creatures of a moment. The cancer that slowly but surely eating into the vitals of the Exhibitor began its deadly course years ago until now, through the indifference or apathy of the exhibitor, it has reached a point where the surgeon has to cut deep and quick to save the patient.

“The Declaration of Independence which sounded the death knell of tyranny and oppression to the Colonies and resulted in the establishment of the Republic of the United States, was not a document created by inspiration of the minute. On the other hand, years of suffering and threatened annihilation, political and financial, brought it about. It is the same story with every man who operates his theatre that he bought and owns as a result of toil and savings. It left to follow the course laid out for the motion picture industry by the monopolistic octopus, there will be no independent exhibitor in five years from now. The producer will operate your theatre and maybe, if you are lucky, you can get the job of janitor.”

Hays Office Plans for Group Insurance

Plans are being investigated by the Hays office with the ultimate idea of buying insurance protection on a group plan for all of the members of the organization and thus reducing the prevailing rates. At present all possible data on the subject is being gathered and this will be presented in concrete shape to the members of the association.

The plan as at present contemplated provides for the appointment of the Hays office as insurance manager for the entire group and the possible use of one broker as the medium through which all of the business will be handled.
Eltinge “Madame Lucy” Cast Completed

Director Scott Sidney has practically completed the cast for "Madame Lucy," in which Julian Eltinge will star for the Christie organization. The picture will be released through Producers-Distributing Corporation.

Ann Pennington will play opposite Eltinge, while Lilyan Tashman will have the other most important feminine role. Others who will figure prominently in support of the star are Lionel Belmore, Jack Duffy, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Tom Wilson, David James, and Bill Blaisdel.

Tom Mix Starts Work on Third Production

Tom Mix, who only recently completed "The Lucky Horseshoe," has started work on his third production for Fox for the coming season. Emmett Flynn who directed him in "The Untamed" will again wield the megaphone on "The Conquistador," adapted from the Katherine Fullerton Gordon novel. The original title will be changed to a more suitable English title before release.

Olive Borden has been engaged to play the lead opposite Mix in "The Conquistador," while others assigned important parts are, Margaret Livingston, Tom Kennedy, Francis MacDonald, Kathryn Hill, Martha Mattox, Raymond Wells, Gene Palette, Harry Seymour and K. Kranz.

Clarence Badger Completes "Golden Princess"

Director Clarence Badger has completed work for Paramount on the Betty Bronson starring vehicle, "The Golden Princess." Final scenes were filmed last week at Newport Beach. In the supporting roles were Neil Hamilton, Rockliffe Fellowes, Phyllis Haver and Joseph Dowling.

Miss Bronson is now at the Paramount. Long Island studios, where she has started work in the well known J. M. Barrie play, "A Kiss for Cinderella," a Herbert Bronson production.

Bushman to Play Opposite Mae Murray

Francis X. Bushman has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play opposite Mae Murray in her next starring vehicle, "The Masked Bride," which Josef von Sternberg will direct from the story by Leon Abrams.

M-G-M Launches New Syndicate Service

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER has launched a syndicate service through which it will serialize picture stories free of charge to newspapers throughout Canada and the United States. The first of the stories to be handled in this way will be "The Unholy Three," by Tod Robbins, a starring vehicle for Lon Chaney. Mae Busch is featured opposite Chaney in this production.

Coming under the head of exploitation, the syndicate division will function under the direction of William R. Ferguson, director of exploitation. He will have as his assistant H. W. Fisher, an experienced newspaper man. The following field representatives will cover assignments of the key cities: Bert Lennox, Charles Glickauf, Morris Abrams, C. C. Deardorff, C. D. Haug, W. J. Murphy, Albert Kaufman, W. G. Bishop, J. G. Fraenkel, Norman W. Pyle and James W. Clark.

Goldstein Reports Central America Improving

Louis Goldstein, Central America manager for Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation is back in New York and reports his territory is growing rapidly as a picture market. Goldstein covers Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and British Honduras.

Central America is a territory that has been largely overlooked, according to Goldstein. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product play in more than 90 per cent of the territory, according to the report. Since opening his office in Guatemala City in January, 1925, Goldstein has been an active factor in the rapid growth in popularity of American films.

Gilbert Roland is Signed by Schulberg

Gilbert Roland, a juvenile leading man has been placed under a long term contract by B. P. Schulberg. He is of Spanish descent, the son of Francisco Alonzo, a few years ago one of the most famous bull fighters in Spain.

Young Roland has been in pictures less than two years. His first appearance under the Schulberg banner will be made as a college boy in Percy Marks' "The Plastic Age." He gained his first screen recognition as a matador in "The Siren of Seville."

Ernst Laemmle Making "The Thrill Hunter"

"The Thrill Hunter," a two-reel western starring Edmund Cobb is now being produced at Universal under the direction of Ernst Laemmle. In the cast are Velma Cooper, William Steele, Ted Henderson, Robert Rose, Fred Burns and Jack Gavin. Fred Humes is cast in the featured role in the "Call of Hazard," another two-reel Western being made at Universal. William Crinley is directing. Supporting Humes are Virginia Bradford, Anton Vavera, Buck Moulton and Morgan Brown.

Will Novelize Latest Lloyd Picture

Exhibitors will be offered a book tieup for the first time with a Harold Lloyd comedy when "The Freshman." his latest vehicle is released. Coincident with the release date of the picture Grosset and Dunlap are publishing a novel based on the story and carrying the same title as the comedy. The author is Russell Holman, who has already made several books from motion pictures. "The Freshman" as a book will have a three-color jacket containing a large photograph of Harold Lloyd in sweater and Freshman cap. Eight stills from the production illustrate the action in the book. Representatives of the publishers will cooperate with exhibitors in putting up both novel and picture.

Jack Conway Again Signs M-G-M Contract

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has renewed the directorial contract of Jack Conway, as the result of his work on Elmer Glyn's newest picture. He has been identified with the direction of motion pictures for the past eight years. John M. Nicholus, laboratory superintendent at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios has also been signed on a contract for another year.

First National Finishes Four Productions

First National concluded photography last week on four new releases. They are "The Knockout," "What Fools Men," "Classified," "The Pause That Thrills." Production is well under way on four additional pictures, "The Viennese Medley," "The Beautiful City," "The Dark Angel" and "Dangerous Currents."

Dramatic episodes from "Below the Line," a Warner production featuring Rin-Tin-Tin, the dog star.
Alma Rubens as Dancer in "Winding Stair"

Alma Rubens will have the role of a dancer in "The Winding Stair," the John Griffith Wray production filmed at the Fox West Coast Studio. The picture is an adaptation from the novel by A. E. W. Mason. Miss Rubens and Edmund Lowe have the leading roles. In the supporting cast are Mahlon Hamilton, Warner Oland, Frank Leitch, Chester Conklin and Emily Fitzroy.

Haines Gets Third Role in "Memory Lane"

William Haines has been selected for the third featured role in "Memory Lane," which John M. Stahl will direct for First National. The other two featured roles has already been assigned to Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel. The story is an original by John M. Stahl and Benjamin Glazer.

Riskin Will Supervise the Macfadden Pictures

Herbert Macfadden has signed R. R. Riskin to supervise his production activities to be carried on at the Pathe Studios in the Bronx. The pictures are to be released through Astor Distributing Corporation.

The first picture to be produced under the supervision of Riskin will be "The Danger Line," a Macfadden "True Story."

Weight Engaged to Direct
"Flaming Waters"

Associated Arts Corporation has engaged F. Harmon Weight to direct "Flaming Waters," a special for F. B. O. release. It is to be produced at the F. B. O. coast studios.

Fox Schedules Short Subjects
Twenty-Two Included in Initial Group for the Release Which Starts in August

FOX has announced the release dates for the initial group of short subject productions for the season beginning in August. There are twenty-two in the list exclusive of Fox News. Four of these are of the second series of Richard Hard- ing Davis Van Bibber comedies, three of the new O. Henry series, three of "The Married Life of Helen and Warren," three Imperial Comedies and nine Fox Varieties in one reelers.

The Van Bibber, "The Big Game Hunter," starring Earle Foxe is the initial release on August 16th. "On the Go," an Imperial, and "The West Wind," a Variety, are scheduled for August 23rd.

"A Business Engagement," first of the "Married Life of Helen and Warren" series is scheduled for August 30th, with "Shoes" of the O. Henry series, "Sweet Marie," an Imperial, and "In a China Shop," a Variety, on September 6th.

Concluding the initial group of releases on December 13th, are "A Parisian Knight," a Van Bibber and "Toiling for Rest," a Variety.

F. B. O. Buys First Story for 1926-27

F. B. O. has selected the first story to be produced for release on the 1926-27 program. They have secured screen rights to Calvin Johnston's novelette, "Pedigree," which is to appear in several installments in Pictorial Review. It will be made as a special and will be listed under the Gold Bond productions for the season.

Asher at Universal for "Two Blocks Away"

E. M. Asher has arrived at Universal City, where he will assist the studio officials at the big plant of the Universal Pictures Corporation in the production of "Two Blocks Away," one of the new Jewel pictures scheduled for the Second White List. Production on the picture will be commenced without delay.

Harry Pollard will handle the megaphone. Several prominent screen stars will be featured in the cast, including George Sidney, Charles Murray, Vera Gordon and Alex Carr. "Two Blocks Away" was written by Aaron Hoffman. The continuity is being prepared by Alfred Cohn.

Florence Turner Returns With Columbia

Florence Turner, Vitagraph star of twenty years ago, has been engaged by Columbia Pictures to play in "The Price of Success," second of the Columbia-Waldorf releases. Miss Turner will be directed by Tony Gaudio, who "shot" her early productions, when Griffith was her director.

For the past eight years Miss Turner has been heading her own company in England with considerable success. She expects to continue her screen career in America in the future.

Alice Lake Heads Cast in Waldorf Picture

Alice Lake has been selected to head the cast for the second Waldorf picture, to be released through Columbia Pictures. Tony Gaudio will direct. Production manager Harry Cohn is now recruiting the balance of the cast.

Wilson Co. Will Release Morden Pictures

Selig D. Wilson and Company have concluded arrangements for the world distribution of William J. Morden's "Far Eastern Trails," which comprises 165,000 feet of film taken in Asia and Africa.

Morden is a well known traveller and sportsman who has just returned from a three year trip over the regions which are the objective of the Roosevelt expedition. The first series of the subjects he photographed will be released by the Wilson organization under the title of "The Buzzing Orient." This will consist of twelve separate releases picturizing the principal industries of the Orient. The initial subject, "Yarns of Old Kashmir," is scheduled for release September 17th. Thereafter they will be released at the rate of one a month.

Ship X-Ray Machine for Broken Leg

It was necessary to ship a 6,000 lb. portable electric generator, X-Ray photographing machine to a point 100 miles northeast of Flagstaff, Arizona, to X-Ray the broken leg of William A. Griffith. Griffith is production manager of the Paramount company engaged in filming "The Vanishing American," a Zane Grey story.

John Barrymore's Next to Be "Don Juan"

John Barrymore's next starring vehicle for Warner Brothers following "The Sea Beast," which he started last week, will be an adaptation from the Lord Byron poem, "Don Juan." This is in keeping with the star's request for an entirely different role in each picture.

It will be some time before the new picture is started as Barrymore is scheduled to leave Hollywood shortly to obtain the thrill scenes for "The Sea Beast."

Marjorie Bonner Signed for Paramount Story

Irvin Willat has signed Marjorie Bonner to play the ingenuous in Paramount's screen version of James Oliver Curwood's "The Ancient Highway." The featured roles are being played by Jack Holt, Billie Dove and Montagu Love, while others in the cast are Lloyd Whitlock, William A. Carrol and Stanley Taylor.

Buck Jones Has Completed Two Westerns

Buck Jones, who will figure prominently on the Fox releasing schedule for the coming season, has already completed starring roles in two westerns, "The Timber Wolf," from the novel by Jackson Gregory, and "Durand of the Bad Lands," adapted from the story by Maibelle Heikes Justice.

In addition to the western picture, Buck will play the title role in the screen version of the Owen Davis stage success, "Lazybones." The first release of the season, however, in which he will star, is "The Timber Wolf," set for September 20th. "Durand of the Bad Lands" is set for release November 1st. "Lazybones" will reach the screens of first-run theatres November 8th.

Christies Make Additions to Producing Staff

A number of additions are announced to the Christie comedy staff producing for release through Educational. Hank Mann has been signed as gag man and assigned to the company that William Watson is directing. This comedy is the first of the Christies in which Bill Dooley, former vaudeville star, is featured.

Sig Herzog has joined the Christie scenario staff and is collaborating with Frank Roland Conklin on the script for the first Jimmy Adams comedy, which is being shot under Harold Beaudine's direction.

Hal Conklin, brother of Frank Conklin, is also writing comedies, the first of which will be Bobby Vernon's first in his new starring series for Educational.

Edward Hearn in Coming Schulberg Release

Edward Hearn, who gained considerable popularity in the title role of "The Man Without a Country," is playing the leading masculine role opposite Clara Bow in B. P. Schulberg's forthcoming Preferred picture, "The Lawful Cheater." The picture was directed by Frank O'Connor.

Phyllis Haver Joins "New Brooms" Cast

William de Mille has added Phyllis Haver to the cast of "New Brooms," which he will produce for Paramount. Others already announced in the cast include Berdie Love, Neil Hamilton and Robert McWade. Clara Beranger adapted the Frank Craven play for the screen.
M-G-M Signs McNutt on Scenario Staff

William Slavens McNutt, well known fiction writer, is the latest addition to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scenario staff. He was signed to a contract last week and is now on his way to the Culver City studios. Among other recent additions to the scenario staff are Louis Lighton, Hope Loring, Katherine Milliker, and H. H. Caldwell.

Stone Co-Featured With Barbara La Marr

Lewis Stone will be co-featured with Barbara La Marr in his first picture under his new long term contract with First National. "Spanish Sunlight" is the title of the picture which Sawyer-Lubin are producing from the new Anthony Pryde novel. It will be made on the west coast under the supervision of June Mathis who is preparing the continuity.

"Paris After Dark" Norma Talmadge's Next

Norma Talmadge's next starring vehicle for First National will be "Paris After Dark." It will go into production immediately upon completion of her present vehicle, "Graustark." "Paris After Dark" is an original story by John W. Considine, Jr. It was previously titled "Sun of Montmartre."

Gwen Lee Signed to Long Term Contract

Gwen Lee has been signed to a long term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will make her first appearance in Robert Z. Leonard's "A Little Bit of Broadway."

Meighan Signs New Contract

Star, Bound for Ireland. Signs Paramount Agreement for a Long Term of Years

ONE of the last moves of Thomas Meighan before sailing for Ireland last Saturday was to sign a new long term contract with Paramount. The star still has two more pictures to make under his old contract and the new one will carry him along for a period of several years.

Just before boarding the steamer Meighan said:

"During the past several weeks I have received offers from nearly every company in the picture business. However, I have been associated with Adolph Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky in Paramount pictures for several years and during that time I have come to have a regard for them and their company which made it impossible for me to accept any of the offers that were made me, however generous and flattering they were.

"Under the terms of my new agreement made with Mr. Zukor I shall be a star in Paramount pictures practically for the rest of my life. The plans for my future productions, as outlined to me are extremely interesting, as I know that Mr. Zukor and his associates will give me everything, in the way of stories, directors and supporting casts, that is necessary for the best pictures."

Mr. Zukor was equally enthusiastic over the new agreement with Mr. Meighan and predicted that in his coming productions the Paramount star, will rise to even new heights of artistic and popular success.

Marilyn Mills Completes the First for Davis

Marilyn Mills Pictures has completed "Tricks," first of the company productions to be handled throughout the world by Davis Distributing Division. The picture was directed by Bruce Mitchell and stars Miss Mills and her two horses, "Star" and "Beverley." In the supporting cast are J. Frank Glendon, William Lowry, Myles McCarthy, Hazel Dean and Eugene Paulette.

Ray Will Start Third for Chadwick

Charles Ray and Jerome Storm, his directors, are preparing to start work on the third Ray starring vehicle for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. The story will be an original written for Ray and has not yet been titled. Production will start as soon as President Chadwick returns to the coast. Ray has already completed "Some Punkins" and "The Winners" for Chadwick.
Costello Girls Assigned to Leading Roles

Two daughters of Maurice Costello will figure prominently in Warner Brothers productions for the 1925-26 season. Helene has been selected to play the leading feminine role opposite Lowell Sherman in "The Love Toy," and John Barrymore has named Dolores for his leading lady in "The Sea Beast," which he is now making. Both of the Costello girls were signed to Warner contracts April 6th as members of the stock company.

"Warrior Gap" Cast is Completed

Guaranteed Pictures has completed the cast for "Warrior Gap," which will be distributed by Davis Distributing Division. Ben Wilson and N. E. Gerber are costarred. In the supporting roles are Robert Walker, Jim Welch, Alene Goodwin, Late McKee, Dick Halton, Alfred Heston, Ruth Royce, Len Haynes and William Paton.

Davis Appoints Goosman Representative

F. C. Goosman has been appointed a special representative of Davis Distributing Division by J. Charles Davis II. He has started on a trip that will take him to Pittsburgh, Cleveland and St. Louis. The new appointee is a veteran in the picture business. He started with Famous Players in 1916 in the home office.

Prod. Dist. Corp. Finishes Six

First Productions on Season's Schedule Completen With Second Six in Work

Producers Distributing Corporation has completed the first six productions on the coming season's program and work is already under way on the second six.

"The Prairie Pirate" has Robert Edeson and Stromberg's new find Trilby Clark in support of Harry Carey. In "Off The Highway" Chas. Gerrard, Buddy Post, Joseph Swickard, Gino Corrado and Smoke Turner support William V. Mong, Marguerite De La Motte and John Bowers in the three featured roles.

The six features now in course of production include:

"The Road to Yesterday." Cecil De Mille's personally directed production which is now in its fifth week of work with Joseph Schildkraut, Jetta Goudal, Vera Reynolds, William Boyd and Julia Faye in featured roles.

"The Wedding Song," starring Lewatrice Joy under Alan Hale's direction is in its first week at the De Mille studio with Robert Ames, Gertrude Claire, Charles Gerrold and Rosa Raduni in the supporting cast.

"Simon the Jester," Frances Marion's production, is in work at the Hollywood Studio under the direction of George Melford with Eugene O'Brien and Lillian Rich in the featured roles supported by Edmund Burns and Henry B. Walthall.

"Madame Lucy," Al Christie's big feature comedy is in work under Scott Sidney's direction with Julian Eltinge, Ann Pennington, Lionel Belmore, Stanhope Wheateroff, Evelyn Francisco, and Jack Duffy contributing their talent to make this production a worthy successor to "Charley's Aunt."

Scenes from the latest Gloria Swanson starring vehicle release through Paramount titled "The Coast of Fally"
Sign Constance Bennett for Two More Features

Oscar Price has signed Constance Bennett for featured roles in two more productions he will make for Associated Exhibitors. Miss Bennett has completed her work in "The Pinch Hitter" opposite Glenn Hunter. She will appear with Mr. Hunter again in "The God Hopper" and will then have the featured role in "Peggy."

Gloria Swanson in East to Make "Stage Struck"

Gloria Swanson arrived in New York last Wednesday from Hollywood. The star will film her next vehicle, which is to follow "The Coast of Folly," recently completed on the Coast, at the Paramount Long Island Studios. It is titled "Stage Struck" and was written by Arthur Struger.

First National Managers in Conference

A conference of First National branch and district managers is on in New York this week with E. A. Eschmann presiding. The sessions were set for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The convention was called for the purpose of presenting to the field force the selling plan on the new product.

Christy Cabanne to Direct "Dance Madness"

Christy Cabanne is to start the direction shortly for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of "Dance Madness," an original screen story by J. Jay Kaufman, adapted for the screen by Max Mayer. Aileen Pringle and Lew Cody will have the featured roles.

"U" Buys Another For Denny

"What Happened to Jones" Goes Into Production for Second "White List"

Universal has purchased another old-time stage success for Reginald Denny. This time it is "What Happened to Jones," a well known farce produced by George Broadhurst. Last week it was announced that Universal had purchased "Skinner's Dress Suit," as a Denny vehicle.

The Universal announcement also carries the information that "What Happened to Jones" will be put into immediate production, and prepared for release as a Second White List picture, which means that it will reach the screen during the coming winter. "Skinner's Dress Suit" also will be scheduled for Second White List release, and will be ready for the market next spring.

This means a re-arrangement of the Denny schedule for the year 1923-1926.

In introducing "What Happened to Jones" and "Skinner's Dress Suit" to the Second White List, the following changes have been made:
- "What Happened to Jones" goes into the schedule in the place of "The Whole Town's Talking," and will be released January 17, 1926. "Skinner's Dress Suit" goes in as a replacement for "This Way Out," scheduled for release April 4, 1926. The two replaced pictures probably will be moved over to the Third White List, scheduled for release during the 1926-1927 season.

Sullivan Will Prepare "Three Faces East"

Cecil R. de Mille has engaged C. Gardner Sullivan to prepare a screen treatment of "Three Faces East," the war-time secret service play, which is to be filmed at the De Mille studio under the direction of Rupert Julian for Producers Distributing Corporation release.

Paramount is Casting for "Kiss for Cinderella"

Paramount has started signing the cast for "A Kiss for Cinderella," which will go into production as soon as Betty Bronson and Tom Moore arrive from the coast. They have the leading roles in the picture. Henry Vibart is the first member of the supporting cast signed.

"Kivalina of the Ice Lands" to Open in Washington

"Kivalina of the Ice Lands," which has been set for national release by Pathé on August 9th, is to open at the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D.C., on that day. It recently had its premiere at the Mark Strand Theatre on Broadway, New York.
New Independent Sales Deals
Latest State Rights Transactions Cover Season's Products

THE new sales reported by independent distributors include several important contracts covering the product which they have announced for this season. Deals this week are notable for the "group"-contracts in which exchanges have signed up for the entire product of certain companies.

W. E. Shallenberger, President of Arrow Pictures Corporation, announces the completion of arrangements with Mr. Edward A. Golden, President of Golden Distributing Corporation, 57 Church Street, Boston, Mass., under the terms of which Mr. Golden's organization will market in the new England territory, the Twenty-Four First-Run Pictures which make up The Golden Arrow Franchise.

R. C. Fox, president of Freedom Film Corporation of Rochester, New York, has signed with Columbia Pictures to distribute in upper New York State a number of their features, "Traffic in Hearts," "Her Accidental Husband," and "Pal O'Mine," as well as twenty-two serials featuring Dick Hatton, and Screen Snapshots.

The Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation announces the closing of additional territory for the entire output of Banner Productions and Royal Pictures. P. Winthrop, President of the Fontenelle Feature Film Co., of Omaha has the Ginsberg product for Iowa and Nebraska, while Joseph Silberman, General Manager of the Independent Feature Film Corporation has state rights for Kansas and Western Missouri.

A. Carlos, Secretary of the Tiffany-Truart Corporations announces that the Tiffany and Truart Productions for 1925-26 have been sold for Mexico to Senior Gonalon Varela of Mexico City.

Special representative John Pelzer of the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., just closed contracts with Lee Goldberg of Big Feature rights, 221 South Third Street, Louisville, Kentucky, for Kentucky and Tennessee territory on the Ben Wilson Serial, "The Mystery Box," starring Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber; "Border Musketeers;" the series of eight Marilyn Mills Productions starring Marilyn Mills and her wonder horses "Star" and "Revely;" also the MacMillan series of Al Ferguson productions. Big Feature Rights have previously contracted for the "Ken" Maynard Series and the first group of Al Ferguson pictures.

The following territories have been sold by Nat Levine, general sales manager of Bischoff, Incorporated: Greater New York & Northern New Jersey, Chadwick Pictures Corp.; Upper New York State, Bond Film Exchange; Philadelphia, Masterpiece Film Exchange; Pittsburgh, Lande Film Exchange; New England territory, American Feature Film Exchange; Michigan, American Booking Film Exchange; Northern Illinois & all of Indiana, Judell Film Exchange; Texas, Oklahoma & Arkansas, Speciality Film Exchange; California, Arizona & Nevada, Peerless Film Exchange; Northwest & Mountain States, Greater Features Film Exchange; Washington, D. C. territory, Trio Productions—Foreign Rights, Appoloo Trading Corp.

Louis Weiss, Managing Director of Arthes, announces that he has sold his series of Eight Five Reel Rough Riding Romances featuring Buddy Roosevelt and his series of Eight Five Reel Thunderbolt Thrillers, featuring M. Kleinerman of New York for the territory of the Japanese Empire.
Additions To Warner Staff
Five Important Changes Are Made in Personnel of Executives of Field Force

SAM E. MORRIS, general manager in charge of distribution announced five important additions to the Warner Brothers field staff made last week. E. J. Smith, well known as a film executive, was appointed eastern sales manager for the concern, with headquarters in New York. Smith was with Universal for many years. He organized the English offices for that organization and afterwards became sales manager. More recently he was eastern manager for F. B. O. Herbert Elder is the new Warner southern division manager, with office in Atlanta. He has been with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation many years, occupying a post in the home office recently. George H. Dumond, who has been in the picture industry twenty-one years, becomes general manager of the theatres controlled by the Warner organization. For two years, up to about a year ago, he was with the Warners as house office representative. Recently he has been managing the State Theatre in Cleveland and had charge of production for all the Loew houses in that city. Dumond left last week to inspect the Warner houses in the south and confer with Nat L. Royster, managing director of Warner Bros. Southern Theatres, Inc., at Charlotte, N. C.

“Fire” Panic Averted by Piano Player

Some person yelling “fire” at the Arbor Hill theatre in Albany, N. Y., last week, precipitated what came within an ace of becoming a serious panic. Through the coolness of the piano player, Peter Reilly, the panic was averted. Reilly kept on playing and by doing so, quieted the crowds that were jamming the exits.

Postal Increase Hearings Are Being Held

Hearings are being held in different parts of the country with regard to the increased postal rates measure to be submitted to Congress in December. The M. P. T. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, and the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade are lining up to combat the measure. They will meet a sub-committee of the Senate and House of Representatives in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, August 1st.

James McKay is Directing “Souls for Sables”

Tiffany Productions has engaged James C. McKay to direct “Souls for Sables,” which is now in production. The picture was adapted from “Garlan & Co.,” by David Graham Phillips. Before joining Tiffany, McKay was assistant director to Herbert Brenon and later was with Cosmopolitan Productions.

Truart Announces Four Picture Titles

Titles have been given the four Truart Pictures now in production. M. H. Hoffman, general manager of the company announced these titles as follows: “The Midnight Special,” “The Flood,” “The Night Watch” and “A Call in the Night.”

Philly Exhibitors Plan Golf Tourney

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, Southern New Jersey and Delaware are planning their first annual golf tournament to be held August 18th on the course of the Green Valley Country Club. It will be followed by a dinner dance in the evening. Trophies to the value of $1,000 have been contributed for the tournament by the golfer as follows: Jakes E. Mather, president of the Stanley Company of America; M. E. Comerford, Wilmer and Vincent, Carr and Schad, Frank Bukler, managing director of the Stanley Company of America; Joe Snellenburg, manager of the Stanley Theatres in Atlantic City; and George H. Dumond, general manager of the Gem and Paramount Theatres, and The Exhibitor. The committee in charge of the event is composed of Dr. Walter E. Strempfig, Jack Greenberg, Joe Cunningham, William Doyle, Paul Green and George Griffin.

All Warner Stars to Be Used in Big Special

With the exception of John Barrymore and Lowell Sherman, Warner Brothers will probably use all of their stars and all members of their stock company in the production of “Broken Hearts of Broadway,” which will be the most ambitious special ever made by the company.

Among the stars and featured players who will appear in the picture are Syl Chaplin, Monte Blue, Marie Prevost, Irene Rich, Louise Fazenda and Patsy Ruth Miller. It is likely, too, a dog part will be written in for Rin-Tin-Tin. “Broken Hearts of Broadway” is a story by G. B. Patten and will be directed by Roy del Ruth from the scenario by Darryl Francis Zanuck.

“Wanderer” Premiere on August 19th

PARAMOUNT has completed plans for the world premiere of “The Wanderer” to be held at the Criterion Theatre, New York, Wednesday night, August 19th. The picture is announced by the Paramount organization as a worthy successor to “The Ten Commandments” and “The Covered Wagon.” It is a Raoul Walsh special production.

An elaborate New York presentation is being prepared by Hugo Reissenfeld, who also is working out an effective operatic score. The Criterion is being remodeled and redecorated for the occasion.

In the principal roles of the picture are, Greta Nissen, William Collier, Jr., Ernest Torrence, Wallace Beery, George Rigas and Kathryn Williams.

Albany Defers Action on Express Shipments

Up to the present time, no action has been taken by the Albany Film Board of Trade toward making all shipment of film by express rather than parcel post. The matter came to the attention of the Board last Monday at a meeting but on account of several of the exchange managers being absent it was decided not to do anything definite until the September meeting.
WARNERS SELECTING CAST FOR BARRYMORE

Warner Brothers are still carefully selecting the cast to support John Barrymore in "The Sea Beast," production on which has already started. Those so far named are Dolores Costello, a leading lady, Wilfred Lucas, Mike Doulin, Sam Baker, Sojin, Frank Hagney, James O. Barrows, George O'Hara, Mathilde Comont, George Burell and Sam Allen. Millard Webb is directing the production.

FARNHAM TO WRITE TITLES FOR "BIG PARADE"

Irvng Thalberg has assigned Joseph W. Farnham to write the titles for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Big Parade," starring John Gilbert. Farnham recently completed the writing of "The Mystic" and "A Slave of Fashion," neither of which has yet been released. "The Big Parade" was written for the screen by Laurence Stallings.

DOTY SIGNS CONTRACT WITH Cecil De Mille

Donatias Z. Doty, a former editor of Century Magazine has been signed to a long term contract by Cecil B. De Mille as a member of his scenario staff. Doty recently completed the continuity for Leatrice Joy's next starring picture, "The Wedding Song," which is now being produced under the direction of Alan Hale.

NEW UNITED ARTISTS PRODUCERS

ROLAND WEST and John W. Considine, Jr., have combined forces and will become associated producers for United Artists Corporation, according to announcement from the coast by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of United Artists. Up to the present time West and Considine have been production supervisors for Norma and Constance Talmadge.

By the arrangement this new combination of producers joins the executive roster of the newly organized Art Finance Corporation and places at their disposal $3,000,000 to expend on their forthcoming productions. This is looked upon as another step by Schenck toward a much heavier releasing program for United Artists in the future. He recently was instrumental in bringing Samuel Goldwyn and Sol Lesser into affiliation with United Artist. They also will add a number of productions to the schedule, which will include pictures by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charley Chaplin, Rudolph Valentino and William S. Hart.

West and Considine will supplement their producing activities by continuing to supervise the Norma and Constance Talmadge films. West, who produced "The Unknown Purple" and "The Monster," and is credited as author and producer of more one-act plays than any American playwright, will supervise Norma Talmadge's next starring film, "Paris After Dark." Considine is preparing to put Constance Talmadge's adaptation of the George Barr McCutcheon story, "East of the Setting Sun," into production. He also is general manager of the Norma and Constance Talmadge Productions.

CHARLES RAY SIGNED BY M-G-M

WILL BE CO-FEATURED WITH PAULINE STARKE IN "A LITTLE BIT OF BROADWAY"

Among the many contracts negotiated recently by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with stars, studio executives and others, is one which bears the signature of Charles Ray. This announcement has just been made by Harry Rapf, associate producer executive at the Culver City studio.

In the first story in which Ray will appear under his new contract he will be co-featured with Pauline Starke in "A Little Bit of Broadway." This is a Robert Z. Leonard production and in it, it is said, the star will be seen in the type of role which made him famous. He will play the bashful, awkward country boy who comes to the big city.

The return of Ray to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio has an interesting angle. These were the old Triangle studios before their purchase by Goldwyn, and it was with Triangle that Ray, guided by the late Thomas H. Ince, started his climb to stardom.

Regarding the signing of Ray, Rapf said: "The signing of Ray evidences again the policy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to use the very best artists obtainable for our pictures. We feel that his association with us will not only add lustre to his laurels but will materially enhance the picture in which he appears."
Striking lobby paintings and special display material featured the front for "The Fool" (Fox) in connection with the recent engagement of that picture at B. F. Keith’s theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

Miniature Stage in Lobby for "Madame Sans Gene"

A "fountain of publicity" fittingly expresses the miniature toyer display conceived by Manager E. B. Roberts for his showing of "Mme. Sans Gene." It was his ingenuity which converted the fountain in the Majestic toyer into a miniature stage with a setting depicting the terrace of an old French chateau, similar to one shown in the production. One saw Gloria Swanson as "Mme. Sans Gene," arrayed in her coronation gown, posing at the head of a flight of stone steps, against a background of majestic marble pillars and a vista of smooth lawns. Along the terrace wall and at sides of steps natural greens added a touch of realism.

The effect was accomplished by blocking in the space between the gold archwork above fountain and its base, with beaverboard painted to represent scene described above, adding the small cut-out of Miss Swanson. The star's name, title of photoplay and play dates were printed across the top of display directly underneath the gold arch.

The marquee of the theatre carried a large flasher sign with two medallions of the star's head at either end. These were 3 ft. high and 3 ft. wide, with purple and white coloring. Their size and coloring made them conspicuous for some distance from the theatre thereby enhancing their drawing power.

The Sans Gene Gold Coins were distributed in a novel fashion by a local drug store, who featuring a "Mme. Sans Gene" Sunday, gave a gold coin to each customer buying one of these. This store also gave away 200 metal novelties on the attraction.

An additional 200 coins were distributed at the University Weekly German two days before opening by a little girl dressed in an old fashioned costume who recited the following daggler:

"I come to bring you medallions of gold, Struck off to America's Queen. They tell of a wonderful story bold, Gloria Swanson in 'Madame Sans Gene.' This picture comes to the Majestic day after tomorrow—If you see it not, you'll be filled with sorrow."

"Circe" Given Candy Kiss Tie-Up in Evansville

Three thousand candy kisses, advertised as the Mae Murray kisses, were recently distributed in envelopes exploiding the showing of "Circe the Enchantress" at the Strand theatre in Evansville, Ind., in consequence of a tie-up with a local candy manufacturer arranged for by Charles Glickauf, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter. Girls dressed in white gave these kisses away on the main street on the Saturday preceding the opening. A great number of out-of-town people, who come into Evansville to do shopping Saturday afternoons, were reached in this way.

An entire window display of the latest gown was contributed by the best department store. This exhibit featured an oil painting and an art card. Oil paintings were placed in other windows along the main street, and 1,000 heralds were distributed. The showing was exploited on 4,300 pay envelopes used by thirty of the leading factories and department stores, and the town was liberally posted. A vigorous newspaper campaign supplemented these efforts. Three slides and a trailer were used and there was a special lobby display.

French Gold Coin Used for "Madame Sans Gene"

The week preceding the showing of "Madame Sans Gene," the cashier at the Imperial, Asheville, included in the patron's change a French period Gold Coin advertising "Sans Gene." In addition to distributing the coins through the box-office, Manager Turner had them dropped alongside of people on the streets, where their clink and brightness attracted instant attention. This novel advertising idea conceived by Paramount's Sales Department proved an excellent publicity medium for the attraction.

The regular newspaper and billing campaign was started well in advance with special window cards, 5,000 close-ups, 8,000 magazine programs, 1,000 heralds and 2,000 special Gloria Swanson Paris Postcards, carrying a picture of the star.
N. Y. Hotel Postcard Used for "Sally" in New Haven

Three thousand postcards, carrying on the back an ad for the Breslin Hotel, New York, with pictures of the building, its dining room, lounge, etc., were used by Manager H. Browning of Gordon's Olympia Theatre, New Haven, to publicize First National's Colleen Moore picture "Sally."

The postcards were addressed to a selected list of patrons—mostly men—in New Haven. Each card carried the following message, written in ink, in a woman's hand-writing: "Will be in New Haven all week of March 29th at 146 Temple Street. Call 1755. "Sally." The cards were mailed from New York so they would carry the New York cancellation stamp.

Manager Browning states that he obtained excellent results with this stunt. He wrote to First National: "To say that it was a success is putting it mildly. For three days prior to the opening of "Sally" and throughout the entire week of its engagement, hundreds of calls came pouring in over the phone, inquiring as to who was "Sally" and what she wanted. A few men called chiding us saying that we nearly broke up their homes as a result of their wives reading the cards. wives called to ask what "Sally" wanted of her husbands. To all these queries we replied that "Sally" was the title of Colleen Moore's latest photoplay that was coming here the week of March 29th. There wasn't a minute's rest between these calls, as soon as one hung up another would call. This necessitated in appointing one of the usherettes here as "Sally" and having her do naught but answer the phone's incessant ringing."

Manager Browning also employed the cross word puzzle contest which he has found so excellent a means of exploiting his attractions. The cross word contest was used in the Yale Daily News pictorial supplement and in the New Haven Shipping News.

Heavy Campaign Given "Fool"

Showing at Keith's Palace, Cleveland, Supported by Strong Publicity Line-Up

C AREFULLY planned and aggressively executed exploitation was given the recent engagement of "The Fool" at B. F. Keith's Palace theatre, Cleveland. A few of the highlights of the campaign, as executed by Manager John F. Royal, follow. Special screenings were arranged for priests, ministers, rabbis and for captains and social workers of the Salvation Army. The picture was also shown to presidents and heads of electrical workers, iron molders, paperhangers, and the heads of all labor unions in Cleveland. Not a few of the clerks who were invited to see the picture, spoke approvingly of it from their pulpits.

An airplane was chartered to fly over Cleveland and towns in the vicinity, dropping small paper parachutes that bore an envelope carrying a card to which one penny was attached, and bearing the following copy:

This penny and five more will pay your street car fare to see "The Fool," the truly remarkable photodrama at B. F. Keith's Palace.

Due to the fact that one of the main characters in "The Fool" is of Polish nationality, this angle was played up heavily in ads taken in Polish and foreign language newspapers.

Another stunt that attracted more than the ordinary amount of attention was the use in advantageous windows about the downtown district, of a small clown bust supporting a card announcement of the attraction. A number of 30 x 40 and 40 x 60 enlargements were used in special locations as well.

An elaborate prologue was staged at the opening of the picture, consisting of a medieval church setting, similar to the set used in "The Miracle," and in which the Orpheus Choir, a body of fifty men sang "The Crusaders,"" Holy Light" and other selections, also singing through certain sequences of the film.
Newspaper Essay Stunt on “I’ll Show You the Town”

“Show San Francisco to your fellow townsmen and win a prize.” That was the gist of a contest worked out by the Granada theatre in co-operation with the San Francisco Call for “I’ll Show You the Town.” The announcement continued:

“There are in San Francisco many hidden away corners with a romantic appeal: many forgotten thoroughfares; many quaint and strange houses; many industries and public buildings of national importance. There are countless places and things of general interest, phases and things hunted out by visitors, but probably known to few of us who live here.”

The story of these out-of-the-way corners of San Francisco was to be told in 350 words and for the ten best there was a cash award of $5.00 each. The winning contributions made interesting reading matter for the Call.

An “I’ll Show You the Town” contest will strike a responsive chord in almost any city in the United States of any size. If there is one thing the average American likes to do, it is to show other folks his town, from the new Masonic Temple to the recently broken ground for the Union Station. It should not be difficult to induce the leading paper in any town to sponsor such a stunt.

Special Front Built for “Man and Maid” Run

For the first time in exploitation annals of East Liberty, Pa., a special front was built for the Cameraphone theatre when “Man and Maid” played there recently. This innovation attracted much attention to the run, as did a cross-word puzzle contest staged by Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn explorer, who distributed 5,000 heralds printed with the puzzle in the theatre and on the busiest streets of the city.

House Well Decorated for “Flirting with Love”

Manager Jack Rowley, when he booked “Flirting with Love” as one of the attractions at the Royal theatre, Laredo, Texas, decided to put over a big campaign. Cuts of Colleen Moore and readers boosting “Flirting with Love,” appeared in the newspapers; slides and trailers on the screen of the Royal theatre, lithographs on the billboards and stands of pictures and lithographs in the lobby of the theatre. Then he obtained the aid of a clever young Mexican artist, Manuel Ayala, who distributed lithos, which outlined the ideas of Manager Rowley on a “front” for the Royal theatre that attracted the attention of everyone.

In the center of the double-door entrance of the theatre was placed a large hand-painted sign, size 4 x 6 feet, with gray background and lettered in black and red, bearing in a side panel below a cut-out likeness of Colleen Moore the words, “Look Who's Here.” Then the big sign read: “Don't Come If You Don't Want to Laugh. Colleen Moore in 'Flirting with Love.'” (Then a large heart in the center, flanked by two smaller hearts on each side.) Right in Here Today.” On each end of the theatre were large lithographs, with staves of lithographs and framed pictures in each side door entrance, while in the panels between the doors, on each side of the central entrance were frames of pictures.

Suspended from the outer front of the marquee, in front of the large electric sign, hung suspended a massive heart with a cut-out of Colleen Moore in the centre and a huge arrow piercing the large heart (made of beaver board painted red). On each end of the marquise setette hung garlands of large red hearts.

“Spaniard” Showing Billed as “Sheik Week” in Ads

Capitalizing on the feminine appeal of “The Spaniard,” and the popularity of Richard Cortez, the star, Manager Kingsmore billed this attraction as “Sheik Week.” Two hundred block one sheets, announcing this fact to the public, were shipped all over Atlanta. All newspaper advertising played up strongly the romantic character of the photoplay, with special appeal to the ladies.

A novel feature of the campaign was the distribution of a card resembling an admission ticket to a Spanish bull fight. This card carried title, cast, theatre and play dates, proving itself a profitable advertising medium.

The Howard lobby was artistically decorated with the Spanish colors, which together with cut-outs from the lithos, made a very impressive exhibit.
Whitman’s Exploitation on “The Fighting Ranger”

Herman Whitman, manager of Keith’s-Greenpoint theatre, Brooklyn, put on excellent exploitation when he played the beginning episode of “The Fighting Ranger,” and incidentally collected first prize money in Universal’s contest for serial exploitation.

As a special attraction, he engaged Montana May, a cowgirl, who stood in front of the house in costume and gave a ten-minute rope demonstration on the stage during the performance. She also acted as judge in a roping contest for which “Fighting Ranger” baseballs were awarded as prizes.

An announcement that the first 100 children to appear at the theatre in Indian, cowboy or cowgirl costumes would be admitted free brought out more “wild westerners” than Brooklyn has seen in many days.

The entire front of the Greenpoint was decorated with signal flags which extended from the roof to the marquee, and two banners were swung across the front. Cut-outs and half sheets signs covered the lobby.

“Seven Chances” Exploited Well in Birmingham

A tie-up achieving front page space in the press in Birmingham, Ala., was recently put over by C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, in connection with the appearance of “Seven Chances” at Loew’s Temple theatre. Haug tied up the showing of this picture with the popular local baseball team by inducing the Birmingham Age-Herald to print the pictures of two members of the team each day for seven days. This “Know Your Team” contest was announced daily on the front page of the Age-Herald, and became enormously popular. Twenty inches of space altogether were devoted to the engagement daily by the Age-Herald.

Haug also tied up with the Birmingham Post for a Keaton cross word puzzle contest. Tickets were awarded for the correct solutions received. This competition also aroused keen interest.

Five thousand pen wipers exploiting the picture were distributed to school children of the city and fifty street car cards were carried by the Birmingham street cars throughout the week. One hundred 1-sheets were posted and fifty window cards were used. Fifteen Red Top cabs carried banners exploiting the showing as well.

Manager Vinson of Loew’s Temple theatre extended active cooperation to Haug throughout the entire campaign.

Jack Turner Makes Flight as “Air Mail” Stunt

Jack Turner, Manager of the Galax theatre in Birmingham, Ala., soared well above the usual run of exploitation stunts when he piloted his own plane from Birmingham to Chattanooga and back to demonstrate the feasibility of a plane postal route and incidentally to pave the way for his forthcoming attraction, “The Air Mail.” Turner took advantage of a current local agitation for an air mail service and turned good accounts his experience as a pilot in the World War. By means of cooperation of the newspapers, especially the Age-Herald of Birmingham, he got a remarkable amount of publicity for his stunt, much of it front-page space.

It so happens that the whole city of Birmingham is in the midst of a campaign to obtain the early establishment of the Chicago-New Orleans route, via Nashville, Birmingham, and Montgomery. The subject is being agitated widely both in business and in legislative circles. What could be more apropos? Into this ready-made setting Turner stepped, volunteering to make a test flight to Chattanooga carrying letters and packages of the Age-Herald, and blazing the trail for Alabama’s first air mail delivery. He had himself sworn in as a carrier by the local postmaster, and with the eyes of all Birmingham focused upon his undertaking, he made a triumphant flight and brought back to Birmingham in his own plane the film of “The Air Mail,” as well as a quantity of regular mail destined for the Alabama capital.

Turner was greeted like a conquering hero and had a regular brass-band reception on his arrival in both cities. Considered from every angle his flight was a marked success. He made the trip to Chattanooga in 2 hours and 10 minutes, just half the running time of the fast trains between the two cities, thus proving the advantages of an air mail and he gained an amount of publicity and a type of publicity that could not fail to help his picture.

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on any one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage — a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Stan Laurel Will Direct
Clyde Cook

A number of items of interest come out of the Hal Roach studio this week. Among these is one to the effect that Stan Laurel has turned director and will guide Clyde Cook in his next Roach comedy for Pathé release.

H. M. Walker, title editor at the Roach studios has completed the titling of “A Punch in the Nose,” “Good Morning Judge” and “Bigger and Better Pictures.”

Louis Foster who started as a property boy for Roach is now assistant to F. Richard Jones, vice-president and director-general of the Roach studios.

Title is Restored for Herrick Picture

“It Might Happen to You” has been restored as the title for the first of the Herrick two-reel “Fragments of Life” series to be released by Davis Distributing Division. This was the original title, which later was changed to “Sympathy.”

Pathe Marian in scenes from “Speak Freely,” a century comedy distributed by Universal.

Pathe Fixes Week’s Releases

Program Scheduled for Week of August 9
Headed by “Kivalina of the Ice Lands”

THE PATHE release program for the week of August 9th will be headed by the Earl Rossman photodrama of the Arctic, “Kivalina of the Ice Lands.” In addition there will be a two-reel Hal Roach comedy, a chapter of the Patheserial, “Play Ball,” a Grantland Rice “Sportlight,” “Topics of the Day,” “Aesop’s Film Fables,” a Pathe Review and Pathe News. Rossman spent two years among the Eskimos in the making of “Kivalina of the Ice Lands.”

“The Iron Nag” is a two-reel comedy made by Mack Sennett with Billy Bevan and Ruth Taylor in leading roles. As the title implies it is a humorous story of the race track. Others in the cast in addition to Miss Taylor and Bevan, are Andy Clyde, Sunshine Hart, John J. Richardson, and Leo Shilyk. Del Lord directed the comedy. “The Decoy Wire” is the title of the fourth chapter of “Play Ball,” the Patheserial written by Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants. Allen Ray and Walter Miller continue their exciting experiences in the featured roles.

“Sons of Swat,” the Grantland Rice “Sportlight” reveals intimate close-ups of the big leaguers in action and also glimpses of boys on the back-lot diamond. It was produced by J. L. Hawkenson.

Pathe Review No. 32 presents: “Four-Footed Fortunes,” showing the yearly shearings on an Arizona sheep ranch; “Boston, the Hub City,” scenes in Pathescope; and “The Breton Bride,” another of the popular “Here Comes the Bride” series.

Completing the Pathé program of August 9th are: “Bubbles,” one of the “Aesop’s Film Fables,” “Topics of the Day,” and two issues of Pathe News.

Rock Starts Comedy Series for F. B. O. Release

Joe Rock has started the first of thirteen two reel “Red Ribbon” comedies, which he will release through F. B. O. The series co-stars Alice Ardell and Chester Conklin.
Alice Day's Starring Vehicle Ready

Alice Day's first two reel starring comedy under the guidance of Mack Sennett will be released by Pathe, August 2nd. It is titled, "Tee for Two" and was directed by Eddie Cline, Raymond McKee, Thelma Parr, Eva Thatcher and William McCall support the new Sennett star, the first woman to be starred by Sennett since Mabel Normand.

Billy Dooley Starts First for Educational

Billy Dooley, vaudeville star, signed three months ago by Educational to be featured in two-reel comedies, has started his first picture under the direction of William Watson. Appearing with Dooley in this picture, which is not yet titled, are Vera Steadman, Eddie Baker, Rosa Gore, Ward Caulfield and Bobby, the monkey.

Educational Will Erect Large Property Building

Ground has been broken for the erection of a large furniture storage and property building at the Educational Studio. It will adjoin the new stage just completed and will be large enough to house all of the furniture and props used by all of the companies working on the big comedy lot.

Educational Special Due Soon

Scientific Expedition Pictures Will Reveal "Wild Beasts of Borneo"

Educational Film Exchanges will shortly release a two-reel special under the title of "Wild Beasts of Borneo." The two reels were selected out of many thousands of feet made during a two year scientific expedition into Borneo by Lou C. Hutt, well known Pacific Coast cameraman.

The expedition headed by Hutt, on which he was accompanied by his wife, was made with the avowed purpose of taking no animal life unless it was absolutely necessary for self-protection.

The motion pictures made by this expedition were originally made into a five-reel feature, which recently made a hit in a number of theatres in and around San Francisco. It is the cream of the "shots" in this five-reel subject that have been selected and re-edited as Educational's Special "Wild Beasts of Borneo."

Educational is preparing for exceptional exploitation on this two-reel subject and will provide exhibitors with a press sheet, including a number of newspaper ads, as well as with a full line of accessories.

Among the outstanding scenes in the special, are a number of exceptional "shots" of a herd of the sacred white elephants made possible only by the use of a lens so powerful that it makes the object appear ten times nearer than it actually is; "shots" showing the trapping of a big leopard; the catching of savage crocodiles and the capturing of a mighty python, which was found wound about the limb of a tree and which was untravelled and eaged at great hazard.

To Release Century Comedies

Century Comedies has four two-reelers ready for release during the month of August. Wanda Wiley, Edna Marian, Al Alt and Eddie Gordon are the stars.

The first to reach the screen will be "After a Reputation," starring Edna Marian, who has been borrowed by the Universal Pictures Corporation to play an important role in one of the forthcoming Second White List Jewels, "The Still Alarm." "After a Reputation," was directed by William Watson. Matty Roubert plays the principal supporting role. This comedy will be released through Universal Exchanges August 5th.

The second release will be "Paging a Wife," starring Al Alt. Charles Lamont directed. Included in the cast are Hilliard Karr, Charles King, and Lillian Worth. It will be released August 12th.

The third Century Comedy for August will be a Wanda Wiley vehicle. It is called "Von By Law," and shows Miss Wiley in an entirely new type of comedy. Bob Reeves has the chief supporting role in this comedy. Others in the cast are Lillian Worth and Frank Whitson. It will be released August 19th.

The last Century release for August is "Crying For Love," starring Eddie Gordon, Noel Smith directed it. Eddie has the role of an adventurous young bride-groom, with husky Blanche Payson playing the bride.

The August Centuries mark the wind-up of that company's 1924-1925 product.

The Overland Limited
(Gotham-Lumas Film—6389 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GENUINE thriller! Wherever speedy, sentimental melodrama is popular, this well-directed, sensitized tale of railroad life will surely meet with instantaneous approval. There's a capital cast, excellent photography and one vivid, intense situation on top of another with a rapidity and forceful appeal that fairly takes the onlooker's breath away.

Here David Barton is a consulting engineer for the railway, on which his father Big Ed Barton, drives the road's crack train, the Overland Limited. David's plans for a bridge over a mountain gorge are accepted, it is built and his dad takes out his train for the first trip over the new bridge. David's rival, Bruce Miller, with acrobatics, weakens the structure. Unknown to Miller, the latter's mother is a passenger on the train, also David's sweetheart, and a lunatic pugilist, Farrell. The maniac pug breaks away from his keepers, gains the engine and knocks both engineer and fireman unconscious. Big Ed recovers just in time to uncouple his engine and apply the brakes as they dash toward the damaged bridge, and the locomotive topples into the gorge; cars are derailed. All of which seems to bear a strong resemblance to one of those old-time stage melos which roused the gallery gods of a past generation to wild outbursts of enthusiasm. However that may be, it's good entertainment stuff, so skillfully manipulated by director and players that we miss our guess badly if it fails to make a big box office score.

THEME. Stirring melodrama, replete with heartfelt interest, in which villain, jealous of young consulting engineer, plans to wreck bridge across gorge which latter has built.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Maniac Farrell's journey across top of train to engine, his attack on inmates of cab. Recovery of engine Ed Barton, scene in which he uncouples engine, applies brakes. Big thrill where the Overland is seen thundering toward sure destruction on damaged bridge.

DIRECTION. Has handled his material with fine accuracy of detail and brought sympathetic interest well to the foreground. Stresses melodramatic episodes with tremendous force, makes story convincing and guides it into whirlwind climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. It should be practical to win the support of such organizations as the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen in boosting this picture. Get in touch with the secretaries of the local branches in your section. As for your patrons in general, you can dwell upon the sweeping melodramatic action of the picture, its unerring heart interest and never-failing suspense. They will not be disappointed.

DRAWING POWER. A sure-fire audience picture, which should do well anywhere.

SUMMARY. An intensely human as well as marvelously exciting film. The sort of thing that is certain to please the masses and entertain even the most critical fans.

The Half-Way Girl
(First National—7570 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THOSE peevish souls continually given to hostile criticism of the silent drama on the grounds of slavish devotion of producers to conventional stories running in familiar grooves, will find nothing to back up their pet theory in this picture. For this film is anything but conventional. It is even a trifle daring in spots, not foolishly so, but just enough to bring out in bold relief the bizarre coloring and evil shadows of its Oriental atmosphere.

For one thing it demonstrates convincingly that a white girl couldn't very well find a worse spot to be stranded in than any portion of that vaguely mysterious region referred to by Kipling as—"East Of Suez." That's what happens to Poppy La Rue, American chorus lady, cleverly portrayed by Doris Kenyon, when the theatrical venture with which she is connected goes to pieces. If occasionally it might appear that the narrative is a little far-fetched, one remembers that the Far East has never been listed historically either now or in the past as being severely handicapped by moral ethics.

So that the efforts of plantation-owner Jardine to make Poppy his mistress, failing which he employs official aid to drive her into what we would call an orient's red-light district, are quite convincing when viewed in a comparative light. There is considerable pathos, as well as human venom, in all this, and real love interest develops when the girl meets Douglas, a young Britisher who has temporarily gone to the bad. Poppy's escape on the steamer where Jardine again threatens her, the burning of the ship and her final rescue, show lurid melodrama, but wonderfully effective.

THEME. Colorful drama depicting fateful adventures of American chorus girl stranded in Far East—her persecution by lustful admirer and narrow escape from being compelled to lead life of shame. She eventually finds safety.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Artistically appealing Oriental atmosphere, Poppy's first encounter with villainous Lavinia, and later with debauched but honest Englishman whom she learns to love. Her exit as undesirable person into town's segregated quarter, after she has assisted lover to get away when he slays man in self-defense.

DIRECTION. Makes the most of Oriental settings, with darkly mysterious backgrounds, shows good judgment in piecing situations smoothly together. Gets admirable work out of principals and support. Achieves satisfactory results.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Stress the horror of situation in which helpless heroine finds herself at the mercy of a man who wants to make her his prey in the Far East. Tell your patrons this tale is crammed with heart interest. Feature Doris Kenyon, who does fine work as the girl in the case.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any house, if correctly exploited.

SUMMARY. Nothing commonplace about this picture. The acting is sincere and convincing by all characters concerned. Emotional phases not overdone, melodramatic punches deftly administered. Well mounted.

SYNOPSIS. Poppy La Rue finds herself penniless in Far East when theatrical company to which she is stranded, plantation-owner, failing to make her his victim, utilizes Government official pressure to exile her into district of prostitution. She falls in love with wastrel young Britisher, helps him flee when he slays man in self-defense. Later, forced into city's bad quarter, she escapes on board steamer on which Jardine is passenger. Again threatened by him, she is saved when ship catches fire and blows up. Is finally reunited to lover, who has reformed.
Not So Long Ago
(Paramount—6943 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

NEW YORK in the fifties, old-fashioned, graceful dances, quaint costumes, a sweet little love story and bit of melodrama, comedy of the unexpectedly odd order—all this is included in the latest picture in which Betty Bronson, erstwhile elfish star of Peter Pan, makes her second bow to the screen public. Sidney Olcott directed, and here and there one is reminded of his work in a former production—"Little Old New York," which proved such a success. Mr. Olcott has an almost uncanny flair for reproducing Gotham atmosphere. He is a go-getting period, with absolute fidelity and life-like appeal, and to his possession of this faculty, "Not So Long Ago" owes its principal charm.

The plot is of go-samer texture, light in the extreme, yet its interest takes hold at the start and never relaxes grip until the finale. It features heroine who won her wealthy lover, and her old daddy, who invents a horseless carriage, run by steam, an ancestor of the modern auto, achieves success and sees his twin enemies of poverty and public derision confounded. It does not class as a great picture, but there is no doubt whatever that it is one with direct audience appeal, awakening both sympathy and laughter. And it gives Miss Bronson an opportunity to prove that she is something more than a mere "flash in the pan," (no pun intended) and that Paramount has a real star in this young girl, who qualifies not only as a beauty, but a recognized emotional actress and clever comedienne.

Ricardo Cortez registers as an extremely stately and handsomelover. Other telling character sketches are those contributed by Laurance Wheat, a great bit of low comedy stuff, and Dan Crammies, as Betty's old dad.

THEME. Heart interest drama, interpolated with comedy. New York locale. Period 1850. Depicts struggle of poor old inventor to construct horseless carriage and daughter's romance with wealthy lover.

DIRECTION. Faultless. Has mingled sentimental charm and humorous episodes beautifully and kept action moving smoothly and rapidly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Try tie-ups with libraries and book stores on novels dealing with life in the fifties. Tie up with auto dealers, showing ancient cars up to present development. Feature the bicycle of bygone days in its many stages.

DRAWING POWER. Should pull 'em anywhere, suitable for city and country big and little houses.

SUMMARY. Well directed and acted, atmosphere capital. Slight plot built up into highly entertaining picture, without resort to padding tactics.

SYNOPSIS. In New York, 1850, Michael Dover toils to invent a horseless carriage, propelled by steam. Poverty-stricken, his daughter Betty works as seamstress in home of wealthy Mrs. Bal- lard. Old Michael goes to auto dealers, showing ancient cars up to present development. Feature the bicycle of bygone days in its many stages.

Before Midnight
(Paramount—5895 Feet)
(Reviewed by Ray Gallagher)

FOLLOWERS of society crook melodramas will find this first-rate entertainment. While the theme is not entirely new it is well handled and sustains the interest to the end—a surprise climax. When the days of the type are over it can surely be said to have accomplished its purpose. In a few places it may strain credulity in an effort to build suspense. The instances are few and on the whole the production has been built along believability lines.

John Adolfi, the director, loses no time in introducing his characters and keeps things moving at a lively clip. In developing the mystery element he has also managed to hold the love interest and has trimmed his sequences of all unnecessary detail. He gives it a good solid foundation and keeps his players well in hand.

The plot has lots of action, and they go together. It begins between morning and midnight of the same day, and this does not permit of a slackening of pace. All the ingredients that have made this sort of picture popular are contained in the story. It deals with the efforts of a girl, who, to keep her brother from prison, is forced into an agreement with the manager of a private detective agency to report on the actions of a man, a supposed crook. They both attend a wedding, and fall in love. The situations they find themselves in lead each to suspect the other. It develops that the man suspected of trying to smuggle in a priceless gem has really been investigating the woman. All of the detective agency before investing his money in said agency. He traps the man tracker with a bribe paid in marked bills and clears the way for a happy ending.

William Russell, as the supposed crook, gives a thoroughly convincing performance. He is given good opportunity to display his prowess in the fight scene. When he is deceived, the girl plays her role with understanding. Brinsley Shaw and Alan Roscoe make their parts real. The photography is adequate. The weekend party at the wealthy home introduces some rich backgrounds. A host of bootleggers adds color and the rescue of the hero from drowning is well done.

THEME. Entertaining crook melodrama revolving around a girl, who, to keep her brother from prison, agrees to aid a private detective in capturing a supposed crook. She falls in love with the man and they find happiness, when he traps the dishonest detective and clears himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good action creating a deal of mystery and suspense. The surprise ending. The scene in which hero rescues the girl from drowning when she is run down by speedboat.

DIRECTION. Creates a very good vehicle of suspense and keeps story at tension point. Might have injected more comedy into picture. Gives it good mounting. All in all the director has done a good job.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title lends itself admirably to a teaser campaign and one could be used effectively. Throwaways with the words: "What Happened Before Midnight?" is one way. A tie-up with local jewelers could be worked out, since a good part of the action deals with the smuggling in of a famous jewel.

DRAWING POWER. Anyone enjoying crook melodramas will be well pleased with this one. A good offering for average houses.

SUMMARY. An interesting and entertaining picture. An exciting line of action balanced with pleasing love interest. To make it timely a band of bootleggers is introduced into the plot. The party at the home of the wealthy hostess permits of some rich backgrounds.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. Helen Saldivar to keep her brother from prison, enters into an agreement with Durand, manager of a detective agency, for a little money. He finds the crook and at the belief that he is a crook. The young couple, attending a weekend party, fall in love. Circumstances arise that for a time makes each doubt the other's honesty. The atmosphere is finally cleared by a host of bootleggers, and the plot is solved. Helen becomes the story of an investigation of Durand's activities before Tom bought the agency employing him.
Never the Twain Shall Meet
(Cosmopolitan-Metro-Goldwyn—8143 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FEW productions with the loveliness of the South Seas for background have equalled this film for sheer natural beauty. It was photographed right on the spot where most of the action takes place, the scenic Paradise of the blue Pacific, and director Bert Lytell and cameraman A. Leland Belmore have done a remarkable job of converting this lovely locale into a drawing-board reproduction of the fairyland they themselves so vividly visualized. They have imbued the pictorial beauty of the South Seas with a moving human interest and a spirit of adventure. A love story in the book and film, the story of a love affair between Charlie Pardy and George Tamea, a native girl, is the key to the action. The production is well-adapted and G. B. Schuster's music adds to the mood of romance and mystery.

The picture is full of tension right from the opening shot of a mysterious madam, tracing the story of the wild Pardy as he makes his way from San Francisco to Hawaii. Here he meets Tamea, the beautiful native girl, and they fall in love. Tamea's parents are against the match and the lovers are divided, but they see each other again in Hawaii, and when Pardy returns to the mainland with Tamea he is arrested on a charge of murder. In the court the prosecuting attorney, Charlie Chaplin, gets it in the neck, and Pardy wins his case. Tamea, not knowing her lover is in prison, goes to see him, and Chaplin's interest has been aroused. Together they make a great team, and they set out to free Pardy. In the end, Pardy is set free and the lovers are reunited. The production is a rich potpourri of adventure and romance, and Chaplin gives a masterful performance as the lawyer. The picture is a fine example of the art of the film-maker, and should be enjoyed by all who like a good story well-told.
Romance Road
(Granada Production-Truant—Five Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS one was made obviously for the smaller houses. It reminds us of films of other days both in plot and construction and character interpretation. The story could be told but for the padding out with only 5,000 feet by injecting a lot of unnecessary business. A youthful American returns from France—broke. He walks from New York to his upstate home where he finds an enthusiastic welcome but no job. He is forced to accept work in a garage after telling his aged mother he has been appointed secretary to the rich Mr. Van Tassler, whose daughter soon falls in love with the hero. However the villain and an aunt make the future look dark for the young former service man until he invents a device to separate water from gasoline. A former buddy markets it. There is much money as a result and the world is made safe.

Raymond McKeel is a likable chap and a good actor, but he had an impossible proposition here. He is, however, the one, bright spot in the picture. The supporting cast is mediocre, the work of Marjorie Meadows being too "sweet" and she is far from being "at home" as yet in front of the camera. The picture is filled with much "hokum," the adoption of a lame dog, the arrival of kittens in the O'Brien household, the welcome home of Pat by his mother, etc. There is some interest in the climax in which the hero and heroine supposedly are kidnapped by a gang of hooded fellahs and prepared for the end. But it all turns out to be just a hallow'en hoax, with the hero's wartime buddy as the responsible person.

The settings are fair, the continuity the same and the photography ordinary. The work of "Hash," the dog will have some appeal for young lovers as the little canine does some clever tricks.

There are a few moments of comedy, especially when the hero pushes the villain into a mud hole, and when he steps on the "gas" and dashes away from the snobbish youth after the heroine also drives away from him on a lonely country road.

Don't misuse your time on this one. It is O. K. on a double bill or if you change your program several times a week but it won't do for the intelligentsia. But, of course, it wasn't made for them.

THEME. A comedy drama dealing with the rough road to fortune encountered in a rural setting by a returned service man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The return of the hero to his upstate home town. The refusal of the bank president to re-install the hero in his old job. The snubbing of the soldier at the garden party. The scene in which the heroine drives away from the villain, who is also passed on a lonely road by the hero. The framed kid napping of the couple at the climax.

DIRECTION. Very ordinary. Has failed to make characters very convincing, but has had the handicap of a weak plot and poor cast. Has given the production a fair mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Raymond McKeel as the hero of "Down to the Sea in Ships." Tie up with local Legion Posts on the military theme. Arrange window displays in auto supply stores using stills of McKeel working on carburators and cars. Plaster highways leading into town with title of picture. DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller downtown houses, the towns and second class community theatres.

SUMMARY. Just another program picture possessing nothing of originality and having little entertainment in its rather hackneyed plot. A fair background and a cast of unknown players, except for Raymond McKeel.

THE CAST

Patrick O'Brien Raymond McKeel
Buddy Billy Fletcher
Mary Van Tassler Marjorie Meadows
Arthur Waddington Watts Dick Gordon
Moth O'Brien Gertrude Clarke
Directed by Fred Windemere. Photographed by Lenwood Abbott. Edited by Frank Ware.

SYNOPSIS. Returning from the war, Patrick O'Brien finds his job in a garage, where he invents a device to improve carburation and wins the daughter of the rich Van Tassler, in spite of the plotting of the villain and a snobbish aunt.

The Home Maker
(Universal-Jewel—7755 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Parudy)

A DOMESTIC problem picture, extremely human and natural in tone, the sort of thing which will make the average man or woman say: "That would I do under such conditions?" Therefore its appeal has a wide range, all the more so because the excellent acting of all the players brings out its sympathetic points and strikes right home to the hearts of the onlookers. It is another example of what fine results can be obtained from a simple plot dealing merely with the life of ordinary people, when properly handled. Here are no thrills, ornate sets or wonderful scenic shots, just good photography, appropriate surroundings, but a story that grips you.

Credit must be given King Baggot for his skilled work in directing the feature, but he will be one mistake—of piloting on superficial footage. Much of the detail in the opening reels regarding the hard time heroine Eva has over the double problem of training the kids and getting her housework done could have been eliminated and the action thereby quickened up a whole lot. However, even this error in judgment won't by any means kill off the interest, so appealing are the characterizations outlined by principals and supporting cast. Of course the film brings upon the oft-debated question of whether a woman's place is in the home or business field, but whatever may be the opinions held by spectators on this project they are not likely to be entertained by the feature.

Some feminine patrons may find a pleasurable hint of satirical humor in the situations showing how hubby Lester, who made rather a mess of his business bookkeeping job, proves a success at the task of staying home and looking after the kiddies, while wife Alice is ruffled by her efficiency on the outside. As a matter of fact, Lester, while he arouses one's pity, loons up as somewhat of a dub at that, for he even fails when he tries to commit suicide, only managing to acquire paralysis of the legs. But as things turn out, this is really a blessing in disguise and a genuine note of your patronized toward the line when he begins the physical not to reveal the fact that he is eured, lest the smooth course of family life should be ruffled.

THEME. Domestic problem, involving unhappiness of husband and wife, each dissatisfied with his or her labors in life, until their positions are reversed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Wife's early struggles with her household duties. Husband's dislike of his employment and sense when he not only fails to achieve promotion but is discharged. Situation where Lester, shrinking from informing wife of his bad luck, attempts suicide. Episodes where, though paralyzed in legs, he manages by virtue of his affection for children to keep them in order, while Eva scores a success in business circles.

DIRECTION. Except that he spun the production out to rather unnecessary length, King Baggot has done very well, maintaining the interest from start to finish.

DRAWING POWER. A tieup with book-stores on Dorothy Canfield's novel of the same title, from which picture is taken, can be arranged. Stress the question of whether a wife should stick to her home tasks or venture into the business world. Wee Billy Kent Schaffer gives a really surprising performance and should be featured, as well as the principals, Alice Joyce and Clive Brook. You can list Miss Joyce's work as one of the finest character sketches she has ever favored the screen with.

THE CAST

Eva Knapp Alice Joyce
Lester Knapp Clive Brook
Mrs. Prouty Virginia Boardman
Author, Dorothy Canfield. Scenario by Mary O'Hara. Director, King Baggot.

SYNOPSIS. Lester Knapp, clerk, attempts suicide when discharged and his legs becomes paralysed. His wife Eva, who hates housework, obtains position and becomes successful business woman. Lester's love for his children results in making them happy. Lester regains use of limbs, but begs doctor to keep it a secret, for fear domestic unhappiness should be renewed. The physician's wise verdict establishes everything on a satisfactory basis.
Eve's Lover
(Warner Brothers—7237 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Parry)

THE up-to-date modern business woman who has made a success in her chosen career, avoided sentimental attachments; but finally falls a victim to the tender passion, thereby becoming involved in a net of complications, is a well-known screen figure. She makes her appearance again in this picture, which is interesting enough to please a majority of movie patrons, despite its somewhat shopworn theme. The heavy drama is nicely balanced with bright comedy effects and this helps a whole lot, even if the story tells nothing particularly new.

Outside of dyed-in-the-wood feminists, most folks who witness the struggles against adverse fortune of heroine Eve Burnside will sympathize with that lady's lot, and will be happy to see the testations of the temporarily worthless Baron Maddox, only to discover later that he carries the handicap of a doubtful past out of which comes a former light-of-love to disturb her domestic peace. Irene Rich plays the role of Eve with keen understanding of its dramatic values, and Bert Lytell shows to great advantage as the sophisticated, debonair Baron, whose slogans of "I am crazy at adventure!"—"I am crazy at blondes!"—fully explains his attitude when he makes love to her. Even when you know the Baron to be an uncoral sort of chap, you can't help admiring him some. Therefore, when he furnishes him into their schemes, faces the mob of strikers threatening "Eve's" steel mill plant with destruction, wins them over and saves the day, and husband and wife acknowledge their mutual love, a decidedly pleasing climax is attained.

The principals are well supported, the action moves rapidly, and the big mob scene at the close is remarkably well photographed and a forceful bit of realism.

THEME. Presents successful business woman, owner of steel-plant, who is wooed and won by fascinating Baron. Heart interest drama with many complications.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Development of Eve's love affair with Baron, their marriage, the honeymoon, tropical views. Scene where Baron's former flame shows up, and Eve hears him confess he merely wed her to save himself from prosecution on criminal charge by villain. Situation showing strikers about to destroy plant, rescue of wife by Baron and his appeal to mob which disperses it.

DIRECTION. Shows tendency at times to dwell too much on characterizations expense of action, but on the whole satisfactory. Builds up plot very neatly in leading up to climax in last reel. Has mounted picture pleasingly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange tieup with local newspaper on woman's page, discussing effect of business woman's outside activities on home career, always a subject of interest to readers. Make canvass of women's organizations in favor of this life drama of one of their sex who successfully operated steel plant, yet yielded to the call of sentiment. The title possesses advertising possibilities. Play up Irene Rich, Bert Lytell, Clara Bow, Willard Louis.

DRAWING POWER. Besides possessing advantages of a strong cast, the story is of peculiar interest to the feminine contingent, whose influence will bring in male patrons. Properly exploited the picture should prove good attraction for average house.

SUMMARY. The plot, although conventional in theme, never actually flaps at any time and preserves its interest fairly well up to the climax, which is very effective. Film is an example of how old material can be worked into amusing entertainment by expert handling.

Husband and wife are reunited.

The Ranger of the Big Pines
(Vitagraph—5800 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Parry)

THEY imparted a new touch to an old plot in this picture by basing the principal action on a feud between a cattle baron and Forest Rangers. As every follower of Western melodrama knows, it's usually the cattle and sheep men who met out their intensely mutual dislike. The film will probably be welcomed wherever the lure of straight shootin' and generally vigorous action, which includes man-handling and a dash of romance, intrigues the patrons and sends them home satisfied.

The plot differs from the average Westerner in that it depicts the new West, as opposed to the old, when the men were of a more primitive type and a Federal Forest Ranger an unknown quality. Nevertheless, the cowboys are still to the fore, maybe not as strongly inclined to kill on sight when the spirit moves them, as were their predecessors of a vanished generation, but extremely fond of individuals just the same. And there is quite enough doing in the rough-house line to please the admirers of the red-blooded stuff. Kenneth Harlan plays the hero of the great outdoors, as exemplified by the Rocky Mountains and thereabouts. He is in love with the young daughter of Lize Weatherford, a hearty, rugged female who runs a small inn at Sulphur Springs, Virginia, the daughter in question doesn't think much of her childhood home when she returns from college, but she does fall in love with Ranger Cavanagh. When the cattlemen plan a descent on Cavanagh's cabin, Virginia proves that she comes of real pioneer stock by scraping alongside her wife, finally takes her back East and swears off on the ranging proposition.

Harlan is better as a lover than a fighting hero, although he does very well in the Cavanagh role. He has been essaying much milder parts for a long time back, and probably felt a bit strange about playing a "slicy" gal. The girl, Helene Costello, daughter of the well known screen veteran, Maurice, is prettily appealing as heroine Virginia. Support adequate, with Eulalie Jensen an impressive figure as the rude but loyal Lize.

THEME. Romantic melodrama, local Western cattle country. Cattle Baron pursues feud against hero, a Federal Forest Ranger. Latest frontier adventure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenic beauty of this picture, its really beautiful long shots, and impressive mountain backgrounds will appeal to every true lover of nature. Episode where Virginia returns from college to her childhood home and meeting with her affectionate, if uncultured mother, conveys strong pathetic suggestion. Mother's repulse of unwelcome cowboy suitor, Virginia's resignation to conditions and her love affair with Cavanagh cleverly developed. Surprise finale when girl and Cavanagh fight off the Greys gang, and learn that old man who aided them was really her father, an ex-convict.

DIRECTION. Adequate. Keeps action going tolerably fast, hadn't an extraordinarily strong plot foundation to build on, but manages to maintain interest throughout.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a melodrama of the new West, with love romance in evidence, fine scenery and generous quota of thrills. Feature Kenneth Harlan, Helene Costello, Eulalie Jensen.

DRAWING POWER. Hardly subtle enough for critical audiences, but suitable for houses where exciting—open-air action suits the popular demand.

SUMMARY. A pleasing picture of its type. Different from average Western, with more variety than usual in plot.

THE CAST

Ross Cavanagh .................................... Kenneth Harlan
Virginia Weatherford .......................... Helene Costello

SYNOPSIS. Virginia Weatherford returns from Eastern college to childhood home of Sulphur Springs, where her mother Lize runs a rough-and-ready hotel. Girl disappointed with but makes best of surrounding. Falls in love with Forest Ranger Cavanagh, who is at feud with cattle baron. Virginia rallies to lover's aid when cattlemen attack his cabin. They are aided by old man Edwards, who is, and turns to be an ex-convict and Virginia's father. Cavanagh takes girl and her mother with him to the East, where he really belongs.
THE John H. Kunsky Theatrical Interests are creating two new down-town houses in Detroit, one of which will be completed this fall. The State theatre is rapidly coming to completion on Woodward avenue just one block above the park and will add materially to the appearance of Detroit's main street. The new Michigan theatre, to seat 5,000 persons, which is being erected on Bagley avenue by the allied Kunsky-Balaban and Katz Interests is coming along at a great rate and should be open to the public sometime in 1926. It is being built in connection with a 13-story office building.

PLANS and contracts were announced this week for two new theatres for Houston. Work has started and when completed one theatre will represent $1,000,000 investment and the other a $150,000 investment.

Jesse H. Jones will build a 3,000 seat theatre for Southern Enterprises, Inc., at Texas, at the cost of a million dollars. It will be located on the south half of the block bounded by Main and Travis and McKinney and Lamar and will be one of the finest in the south. Jones agreed to build this theatre for Southern Enterprises last fall when they took over the management of the Melba Theatre, Dallas, Texas, which is owned by Jones. The stage will be on the Travis street side with the entrance on Main street, giving the theatre the full run of a city block. The inside of the theatre, according to Alfred C. Finn, architect, will be after the Egyptian style throughout. If present plans hold it will be the future home of Paramount pictures and will open for the public early in September, 1926. Excavation work is now under way and other contracts will be announced in a short time.

The second theatre to be announced this week will be located at 914 Preston avenue, and will be erected by Theo D. Polenakos.

James G. Gafoles and associates. Work is now under way and the 000. It will be fitted throughout with modern equipment. The interior decorations and architecture will be Spanish design. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,660, 860 doors and 400 in the balcony. William Ward Watkins, the architect, announced that the theatre would be opened by October 15th. It is a popular price theatre and play a popular program.

Mr. Polenakos, the manager, is well known in the theatre world of south Texas, having been manager of the Olympus theatre since it was erected several years ago, prior to that he was connected with the Crown theatre.

Plans are set and invitations have been posted for the Great Movie Ball which will be held at the City Auditorium Saturday night, August 1st. The hotel owners are putting forth a great deal of time and money to put the Great Movie Season over with a bang in Houston and other central states.

Edna W. Saunders, concert director and road show manager, has left for a motor trip through Kentucky and other central states. She will return to Houston early in September and plans to open for the fall season October 1st.

John Victor, manager of the Mission theatre at Abilene, has announced that his theatre will go from a two a week schedule to full time. The house has been cost will be approximately $150, completely overhauled, new equipment added and the force of employees increased.

The H. T. Hodge circuit, operating theatres in Abilene, Winters, Merkel, Ballinger and Stamford, have purchased a building on Main street at Winters and will open a theatre there about the first of September. F. H. Hodge, who manages the Queen theatre in that city, will also be in charge of the new house and plans to show pictures of the highest class.

Manager Harry Kittler opened the New American theatre at Orange, Texas, on July 15th with an elaborate program.

Construction of P. A. Preddy's new theatre at San Antonio, Texas, has reached the point where equipment is about to be installed. Mr. Preddy also operates the Elaine at this time.

The Mission at Dalhart recently had a $1,500 fire that damaged the electric piano and scenery. The blaze was discovered after theatre closing and it is believed that a lighted cigarette was the cause. No damage was found on this part of the equipment.

Jeff Custer, of Slaton, Texas, plans to open his new theatre about September 15th. The seating capacity will be 700.

Texas oilfields, near Holliday, are to have a new motion picture theatre, according to plans announced by one of the local officials who operates the name of Senter & Senter. Equipment has already been contracted for.

The Gem theatre at Dumas, recently destroyed by fire, has been rebuilt and it is planned to reopen the house the latter part of July. W. I. Fish is the manager of the Gem.

Martha Francis in First National's 'Scarlet West.'

BILL SHARP, formerly a salesman for Fox, out of the Atlanta office, is now connected with United Artists.

Dan Roberts, well known film man, is now with Producers Distributing Corporation, working out of the Charlotte office.

Mrs. Anna H. Sessions, of Producers Distributing Corporation, left Tuesday for Charlotte, to attend the opening of the new exchange there.

Freddy Martin, salesman for Liberty, who was operated on a short time ago for appendicitis, came to Atlanta last week apparently sufficient recovered to continue his daily business. He has since suffered a relapse, however, and is now at the Robert Fulton hotel, confined to his bed. Oscar Oldknow and the rest of the Liberty force are looking out for him to the best of their ability.

R. M. Savini, of Savini Films, is in New York on business. He is expected to return in a few days.

Frank Rogers, salesman for Liberty, and William Oldknow, returned this week from Florida, where they have been "real estateing."

J. J. Franklin, director of theatres for Southern Enterprises in this territory, left Monday for New York, where he spent most of this week conferring with officials in the home office, and returning Thursday.

Charles W. Griswold, personal representative of Harold B. Franklin, director of theatres for Famous, spent 20 minutes in Atlanta Monday of this week, on route from New York, to Columbus, Ga. "Marty" Semen, manager of the Forsyth Theatre, has taken himself and his family on a vacation. They left Saturday, going from Savannah by boat to New York.

A. W. Cawley, chief booker for Southern Enterprises since his appointment to that position during the convention held in Atlanta in January, was here for several days this week.

Howard Waugh, manager of the Howard theatre, went to New York early part of the week on business.

Miss Izola Dodd, member of the local Famous Players-Lasky office force, is on her vacation, and will be out of the city for two weeks. She is visiting friends in South Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. James, manager and manageress of Lowes' Grand theatre, left the city last Saturday, for a two weeks' vacation in Louisiana.

M. J. Mintz, inventor and patentee of the Thematic Music Cue Sheet issued by the Cameo Music company, of New York city, is back at his desk after a serious illness which confined him to his bed for more than two weeks.

Miss Cornelia Mayr, secretary to W. W. Anderson, of Pathé, is out of the city on a two weeks vacation, visiting her sister in Washington, D. C.

John A. Snider, and son who operates theatre at Bessemer, Ala., paid Atlanta a brief visit for a few days this week.

J. N. Thomas, of Southern Enterprises, Atlanta Thursday, on his way from New York to Jacksonville.

Harry Kirschgessner, of Producers Distributing Corporation, was in town for a few days this week. He is in this territory for the purpose of transferring the Carolina records from the Atlanta office to the new Charlotte exchange.

The Naomi theater, operated by C. A. Adams and L. S. McDaniel, will open in Glenwood, Ga., in the near future, as construction is practically complete.

The new headquarters for the local Paramount force are practically complete, and, according to an announcement from Dave Przybylo, managing manager, the office force will move from 51 Luckie street to its new home 110-112 Walton street, by Tuesday next week. The new exchange is one of the largest and most completely equipped in the South. It is a two story brick building occupying 4,000 square feet of ground space.
A NUMBER OF theatre openings are scheduled for the latter part of July and during the month of August. The Woodrow, at 660 Wilson Ave, Brooklyn, will start on a three-day weekly schedule and go into full time about September 1st. The Bluebird, being built by Kerman at Livonia Ave, Brooklyn, is expected to be ready in two weeks. The Lyons theatre at Morris ave, N. J., will open on July 27th, and the Hamilton, in Brooklyn, on Saturday, July 25th.

Bill Brandt, who has taken over the Montauk in Brooklyn, is laying out considerable money on alterations. Both the Montauk and the New Carleton, the latter under construction, will be ready for business in the early fall. Mount Vernon will have a new 1,500 seat theatre that is expected to be ready about the first of December. It will be located at 165 East Street and by the owner of the Little Photoplay House, which is located in the same city.

George Marrow, of the Harry Harris Enterprises, is managing the West End on 125th Street. Fred Deoiling, the former manager, has recently resigned.

Louis Rosenthal, who operates the Lyceum and Colonial theatres in Orange, N. J., will reopen his houses Labor Day. Mr. Rosenthal has expended about $25,000 on alterations and everything will be in tip top shape on the opening day.

Herbert Barbash, formerly associated with the Herman Rachmied Circuit, and a recent manager of the East Side Jewish Theatre, is back at his old post in Sheffield. Mr. Barbash feels at home there and is glad to be back with his former associates.

The Rachmied Circuit's new theatre that is under construction at Livonia and Saratoga Aves, Brooklyn, will be ready about the first of November. It is a strictly modern theatre and the seating capacity is about 2,900.

It is reported that Matthew Christmas of Yonkers is about to take over two new houses in Westchester. The one is a 500 seat construction and nearly complete.

According to Joe Hornstein, and Joe Sarno, who are in the construction business, there are at least one hundred theatres under construction in this territory. And, as usual, Joe is getting his share of the new equipment installations in local theatres. Recent equipment orders furnished by Howell's include the Supreme Theatre, Brooklyn, the New Em- bassador, being built by Rachmied, Walter Reade's Asbury Park houses, and Bill Brandt's Montauk and New Carleton.

E. H. Metzger, owner of the Park theatre at Caldwell, N. J., probably one of the finest suburban theatres in this country, was a caller among the exchanges this last week.

Vacations are in order with local exhibitors and A. Phillips, secretary of the M. F. T. O. of New York, has joined the New England circuit, also operating the Central and Wilson theatres, has gone for a two weeks rest at Fleischmans, N. Y. Harry Saunders, brother of Rudy Saunders, left last Saturday on a two weeks trip. Dave Mammel, who will go on vacation on August 17th and Frank Vally who runs the Fugazy theatre on West Houston Street, left recently on a pleasure tour.

Miss Sylvia Goodman, who helps run Joe Seider's office, returned from a two weeks trip spent in the mountains. Al Mooney, of the same office, is also entertaining hopes of getting away from his booking sheets for awhile.

Not long ago, according to Eph Rosen, a funny looking individual blew into the F. B. O. headquarters with a request to book the Film Exchange building and began to burst through into the private office. He had a complexion like a Chippewa Indian and was immediately sized up as a country exhibitor who had been earning the pay- roll by participating in the festivities of the harvest fields. Then somebody let out a yell for the stranger was recognized as Leo Ryan, cashier of the office, who had been spending a couple of weeks in Iowa.

Benny Berger of the Metropolitan theatre in Grand Forks will be back at work soon. He reports the birth of a 8 pound boy.

The new Garden theatre at Hibbing opened last Wednesday, July 1st, after the difficulty between the exhibitors and the landlord had been amicably settled. The house was scheduled to open May the 1st and Edelstein's lease expired on that date at the Victory. The Victory was closed and the party who built the new Garden refused to allow the Edelsteins to go into the new building before it was entirely completed and yet charged them a part of the property. There are rumors to the effect that Edelstein will bring suit for the two months rent that his property received.

In Saint Paul, Fred Hummel, former branch manager for Universal in Sioux Falls and earlier representative of Fugazy, has joined the F. B. O. staff here as key center man for the territory working out of Minneapolis.

JOHN FARREN, manager of the Victoria theatre, Rochester, an official umpire and chief faunmaker at the annual outing of the Rochester Theatres Owners’ association, put on his famous hill climb up the slopes at Point Pleasant, where the outing was held, Tuesday, July 21, for a five dollar bill, but the event wasn’t staged until after the 50 other hill climbers had exhausted themselves in a baseball game. Therefore the entry attracted only six of the “younger bloods.” John Street and Walter Lipkay were in at the finish in a dead heat, but John snatched the five just as Lester was clutching at it.

The hill climb came as a climax of a big day of fun. Arch Callicom, manager of Fay’s theatre, started off the afternoon by a win in a shoe race. Without a formal program the fillum fellas had an afternoon of job, most of it at the hill climb. One of the more unusual of the Rochester theatres lined up against managers of the Buffalo film exchanges with John Farren again at the center of the picture as umpire. Pitchers came and went but the scoring went on and on. Bill Levy, manager of the Regent and a major league player for a time in his youth, put the Rochester nine around for a time with a magnificent slide into third after sending two runs across the plate. The advantage, however, was not in doubt when the Rochester nine, for the Buffalo men picked up their bats with a vengeance. The outcome was never in doubt after Harry Levy brought the winning run over with a fast fall-away slide into the home plate.

The day started with a dinner in the Point Pleasant hotel, at which E. P. Woodhull, president of the M.P.T.O. of A., was the guest of honor. Michael Commerford of Scranton was also present, as president of the Scranton organization and Michael F. Carr, secretary, were in charge of the arrangements.

Among those present were: A. A. Elliott, Hudson; Sid Allen, Medina; Charles Loordan, Universal; Bill Roweell, Fox; Paul Silverer, Pathé; Harry Levy, Associated Exhibitors; Richard C. Fox, Freedom Film; Frank Spreeter, Theatre Owners; Charles M. Klein; William Schwab, Hoosic; F. J. A. McCarthy, First National; Henry Schwartz, Lorne & Colton Organ company; “Cuckoo” Arnold, Universal exploiter and Rochester exhibitor; Arch Callicom, John Farren, H. W. Shannon, J. J. O’Neil, Arch McCallum, Sol Schaffer, T. A. Aspelin; V. O. Aspelin; F. J. Koch, Mike Carr, C. W. Block, George Caffrey, George Evans, Cis F. Stalley, William Stalley, George J. Kress, Bert Falk, Sols Tischkoff, Max Fogel, George Frank, John Stitzel and John J. Johnston.

The Regent theatre in Corning, N. Y., which has been closed for some time, is being renovated and will reopen for foreign films in some time in September. The house is to be operated by the J. Meyer Schine Theatre corporation, which organization also owns the State and Princess in the same city. The house will be under the direct supervision of Charles J. Rose, district manager.

The mayor and members of the city council of Buffalo have been served with an order directing them to show cause in supreme court why they should not be compelled to issue a permit to the Riverside Amusements company for a moving picture theatre at 822-824 Tonawanda street. The council has refused the permit. Property owners near the site objected to the house.

Perhaps the biggest news of the week is that Charlie Boyce, veteran theatre man of Buffalo, where he now manages the Frontier, is to be married this fall. The news has shocked both exhibitors and executive personnel. It won’t be proved that you can keep a good man down. Charlie was “on the job” for 61 days when they used to show films of speed trains in stores in lower Main street.

Alan Forrest, signed to a new contract with Jackie Coogan Productions, released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

H. P. Lally of the Regent and Capitol in Dunkirk, N. Y., is down in Florida taking a peek at that much-talked real estate. Wonder if H. P. is going to open a theatre down there?

The musicians’ union in Jamestown, N. Y., has started something. The men have been receiving $45 for a seven day week. Now they want the same amount for a six day week and $29 extra for the seventh day. The exhibitors will fight the move.

Sydney Samson, manager of the Bond Photoplays corporation, Buffalo, announces the completion of his fall lineup. Mr. Samson also announces the engagement of E. J. Hays, formerly a member of the Producers Distributing corporation sales staff as a member of the Bond staff.

A model of the proposed open-air theatre in Delaware Park, Buffalo, has just been completed by A. L. King, architect of the department of parks and public buildings, and is now on exhibit in his office in the city hall. The theatre is designed in terms of landscape architecture rather than construction and the tiers of seats which will run across the remodeled plot will be terraced in turf. The cost of the project is estimated at $25,000.

Vincent K. McFaul, managing director of the Buffalo Hippodrome, has returned from a round trip to the Thousand Islands and is all set for the busiest season in the history of the house.

Norman L. Sper, better known to exhibitors in western New York, as just plain “Jimmy” has closed the Buffalo exchange of Dependable Pictures corporation and has been succeeded by Alan S. Moritz, who has been associated with several distributors in the Buffalo territory and who recently has been operating the Rita, formerly the Lumberg theatre in Niagara Falls, N. Y. The resignation of Jimmy came as a shock to his friends. Jimmy has been taking on the duties both of manager and staff for a long time. He has not as yet given his plans for the future, but says he is considering several offers.

Work is progressing rapidly on the mammoth new Shea Buffalo theatre. Construction is almost complete and the roof is on. The imposing front is up and the marquee in place. The interior work is also going ahead rapidly and the house will soon be entirely ready for the work inside.

Jim Fater, Rochester district representative for the Buffalo First National office, is looking much happier since that suit against him for bumping another car, has been dropped. Saw Jim touring about Kodak Town the other day in a new Hudson coach and beaming as only a 250 pounder can beam.

Capacity houses were the order of the first week of the new Palace theatre in Lockport, N. Y., and Manager George T. Crouzen was thoroughly pleased with the splendid staging of the program. It was Old Home Week in Lockport, and at one time there were 1,500 persons in the theatre.

Mrs. Florence Ackley, chairman of the Community Service Bureau maintained in Harrisburg by the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company, held a contest for six theatres in that city, was in charge of the sing program which was a feature of the contest for the blind persons, conducted on July 23 by the Dauphin County Association. Sixty-four entries submitted also boat ride on the Susquehanna river and a picnic at Island Park. Forty-one blind persons were the guests of honor.

Carr & Schad, Inc., of Reading, which controls a big chain of picture theatres in that city and Lebannon, is cooperating with The Reading Times in conducting the 1925 contest to select the girl who will represent the city as “Miss Reading” in the annual beauty show at Atlantic City to be held the second week in September.

The Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton controls many theatres in the hard coal mining regions, has awarded to Brigg Brothers, of Scranton the contract for the city’s new theatre in that city’s new house in Hazelton. The architecture is that of Harper & Sons, of Rochester, N. Y.

Pictures are being shown twice a week this summer in the auditorium of Gardner’s Casino, at Parkland, which has been leased for the season by H. J. Mack and Edward Gabriel.

It is expected that Peter Magaro, prominent Harrisburg motion picture exhibitor for twenty years until last May when he sold his Regent Theatre to the Marcus Loew interests, will return about September 1 from Europe where he has been traveling since early summer. He is accompanied by his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Magaro, and Marino Acri and the latter’s daughter. Mr. Magaro will devote his activities, upon his return, to the operation of his big dancing hall, the lease of which is to his extensive real estate interests in Harrisburg.

Fred Chafer, of the New York office of the United Artists’ Corporation, was in Harrisburg on July 21, visiting the newspaper offices in the interest of publicity for forthcoming productions by the studio.

Miss Mary Judge, who holds an important post in the general offices of the Comerford Amusement Company, in Scranton, has recently returned to that city after a vacation passed at Delaware Water Gap.
L. J. Connors, who is running a theatre in Cambridge, and one which suffered considerably from fire two weeks ago, is now on the road as a sales manager for Independents. Mr. Connors was in Mechanicville, talking with Exhibitor Tweedy of that place, and he complained of feeling ill. His condition became rapidly worse and Mr. Tweedy brought him to his home where he was attended to. It is not known if Mr. Connors will cover the section north of Albany.

Montague Glass, who did titles for Fox version of John Golden stage success, "The Wheel,"

L. J. Carkey, who has been serving as manager of three theatres in Carthage, has just been appointed a district manager for Schine brothers, and will make his home hereafter in Little Falls. He will be succeeded in Carthage, by his brother, George J. Carkey, who has been associated with him for some time past. It is understood that the Schines have decided upon combining their many theatres into districts of a dozen or more houses each, placing a district manager over each group, and giving each theatre a house manager, who will report to the district manager, and who in turn will be held responsible by the Schines for the conduct of the houses generally.

At the Strand in Rome, has a summer home at Old Forge, where he is spending much of his time these days.

Top Veiler, manager of the Lincoln in Troy, is taking his vacation this week, indulging in an automobile trip to New York, and winding up at Lake George. Mr. Veiler deserves a vacation, however, having suffered a great deal of ague for several days from an infected tooth.

It looks as though Jake Rosen- thiel, of the Roxy in Troy, soon be charging a straight 15 cent admission seven days out of the week. He is now running what he considered legal cut outs on Friday nights, playing to capacity with 15 cents to everyone.

He is now charging fifteen cents four nights a week, although the Rose was originally a ten cent house.

Mattice, of the Coxy, has completed the improvements now under way at the Bradley theatre in Fort Edward, he will run vaudeville along with the pictures. During the past week, a contract was let for a new lighting system in the house as well as the complete re-decorating of the interior.

T. Roy Kiefer, the well known conductor of the orchestra at the Troy theatre, is just back from a week in the automobile trip through the New England states. During his absence, the orchestra was handled by Mr. Adamson.

Ted O'Shea, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange in Albany, hasn't had a vacation in seven years, and doesn't intend to take one this year. Mr. O'Shea asserts that he is not only extremely busy just now but also extremely healthy and between the two he can not figure out any reason for even a week's rest.

The Majestic theatre in Elmira, after having been closed for a month, is scheduled to reopen the forepart of August with Benjamin Bernstein, of New York, handling the details. Julius Bernstein, a brother, who runs the Palace in Troy, plans to resume his manager's position in Elmira, his business picks up at the collar factories.

Rex Epstein is manager of the King theatre in Troy, which is now being run by James Rose. Mr. Rose is a firm believer in advertising and is spending a lot of time on the theatre's business and lobby variety. He now has a half dozen houses in Troy and elsewhere and reports business as being satisfactory in all of them.

W. W. Mase, who runs the "Mase" theatre in Prattsville, is away among the visitors along Film Row during the past week. Thomas and F. Sullivan, of Middleburg, were also in town. Mrs. Francis McGraw, who owns the little theatre in Little Falls for several years, and who recently sold her house to the Schine brothers, will continue to be associated with the theatre, which is still running and will continue to do so.

The Stone, of the Delaware and Athens theatres in Albany, is back from a 1,000-mile trip that took him to New York City, Atlantic City, Washington, Gettysburg and other places. He was accompanied by Mrs. Stone, their baby and his mother-in-law.

Bob Wilson, a former manager and former manager of the Gateway theatre in Little Falls, is busy these days buying out a lost outstanding stock in the theatre which was recently taken over by the Schine brothers. The house is scheduled to reopen early in August and with a brand new sign, as well as many improvements which will make it more attractive than ever.

Miss Agnes Riley, a bookkeeper in the Fox exchange, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation at Lake George. Employees in the local Pathe exchange, are now planning for another picnic, but no definite date has yet been fixed.

Basil Brady, manager of the Pathe branch in Buffalo, and Harry Knappen, of New York city, a special feature representative, arrived in Albany during the past week, and in company with their respective bookers, swooped down on the Schine brothers in Gloversville for an entire week.

Sam Hochstimm, who has a theatre in Hudson and his brother, Ed, who peddles Pathe product out of the Pathe car, is becoming the "Warner brothers" of the industry, for both of the young men plan to become producers as soon as the way opens and the necessary cash and opportunity are forthcoming.

Business continues to be good at all of the local motion picture theatres, largely through the fact that the evenings are cool and that there has been a great deal of rain during the month of July. Many persons who had planned on leaving the city for a vacation have changed their minds on account of the weather, and this has brought in a flood of business to the theatres. Some of the exhibitors had to cut down the attendance, and seeking to stimulate the same, are offering free programs which would not be held for the winter months.

Bringing back no fish, but returning with tales of wonderful scenery and a visit to the mountain top at Big Hill, managing director of the Strand group of houses in Albany and Troy, is once more on the job after a week spent in Canada.

hall and concert pavilion and one of the chief amusement attractions in Australia. More than 5000 dancers at one time can be accommodated on the floor of the Wattle Path Palais.

Beatty's Casino re-opened July 18th under an entirely new policy.
The theatre will be conducted, according to the announcement of James Beatty, as a strictly motion picture house with the adjunct of good music. Good pictures at admission will be the slogan of the Casino.

Portola has just moved into a new beautiful bungalow at 30th St. and Indiana Way.

A film fire occurred in the protection room of the Fairyland Theatre, recently, partially destroying the machines and film.
Quick action on the part of the projectionist in extinguishing the flames and keeping the fire confined to the protection room saved the building and what might have been a very serious fire.

The Lyric, owned by the National Theatres, Inc., Monterey,
Calif., is to have a new Wurlitzer
Unit organ.

A Wurlitzer Unit organ is being installed by the Sutter Theatre
Corp., San Francisco.

The local office of The Rodolph Wurlitzer Company has just announced the sale of two Wurlitz-

OFFICIALS of the Stanley Company of America state that the present season has been the best in the history of the house. For the summer months business has been exceptionally good, despite the extreme heat that was experienced in June.

The Philadelphia office of the Producers Distributing Corporation, located at 1235 Vine Street, is planning the acquisition of the adjoining premises, 1237 Vine St., now occupied by the Consolidated Exchange, owned and operated by Harry Smith. If satisfactory arrangements can be made for the first floor of 1237 the new office will be renovated. If this deal does not go through, Producers will in all probability move to the Fox quarters at 1327 Vine Street.

Philadelphia
STANLEY HATCH, First National home office executive, is in Cleveland temporarily at the helm of the local First National exchange. He will remain until the position left vacant by the resignation of Norman Moray is filled.

William Brown has resigned as manager of Keith's East 106th St. theatre. His successor has not been announced.

Nat Barach was in town last week. He brought up a lot of wonderful tales of real estate deals in Florida. He is a fine booster of the South, and this is certainly the most spectacular of the season.

Harry Rogers has joined the local Producers Distributing Corporation as sales representative in the Toledo territory. Mr. Rogers was formerly with Famous Players in the South.

Chester Loewe is now with P. D. C. as district representative working directly under Robert Cottin, division manager of district No. 4, which includes northern Ohio. Loewe has been handling educational non-theatrical pictures in and around Cleveland.

Tommy Carroll is with us once more for which we are all duly grateful. Mr. Carroll has returned from the West and just in time to take up the job of manager of Loew's State theatre. Everybody around here knows Tommy. He has managed motion picture theatres and vaudeville theatres, and has even been on the near side of the footlights upon occasion. For the last year he has been out of town. He succeeds Fred Holzworth, who has resigned to go into business for himself.

Emory Downs returns unto the fold week and exhibits again. This time in the guise of house manager for Loew's Allen theatre. Mr. Downs has recently been managing the De Luxe Youngstown. Long years ago he managed the Knickerbocker theatre, Euclid Ave and East 22nd St. At that time the Knickerbocker was the only high-class East Side neighborhood motion picture theatre. Now there are dozens of 'em. In the interim between selling high class amusement at the Knickerbocker, and his return engagement at the Allen, Mr. Downs has been in the automobile business.

L. Cowan has sold his two motion picture theatres, the Picurton in San Antonio Texas, and the Crest at Urichsville, to G. M. Jordon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Harlan, owners and managers of the Gem theatre, Fremont, are the proud parents of a newly arrived seven and-a-half pound boy, who will henceforth be known to the world as Jean North Harlan. Congratulations!

Mr. and Mrs. Van Wormer of the Melvin theatre, Toledo, stopped off in Cleveland for a few days before leaving for a protracted motor trip through the east which will include Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York and Atlantic City.

Paul Gudanovic, president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exchange, and his association, has promised from a hurried trip to Chicago. Gudanovic went to the Windy City for the purpose of securing a new picture house which he is erecting on Lorain Ave and West 117th St.

Mr. Walters has resigned as manager of the Temple theatre, Toledo. J. S. O'Connors, formerly with local F. D. outfit, now has the job.

The Breyer brothers who operate a chain of Rainbow,—one Rainbow theatre in Mechanicville and another Rainbow theatre in West Liberty,—were in town last week one day, looking and booking.

The Film Bldg. register made a poor showing this week. The only new signatures for the week were R. L. Breese, manager of the Rialto, Bellevue, and J. Rubin, of the Strand, Newton, Falls.

Bert Stern, special representative from the Warner home office, is in Cleveland a few weeks in the northern Ohio territory, making his headquarters in the Cleveland Vitagraph exchange.

During the remainder of the summer season, the Fairbanks theatre in Springfield will show the ever popular priced picture entertainment, changing its program every other day. Manager Ed. C. Paul has arranged for many high-class pictures. He also has $15,000 at his disposal for persons who write to him, asking for a return engagement on any picture that has been missed when it was offered too late. At the theatre, he will attempt to secure a return of the picture just as soon as the booking can be arranged.

E. A. Allee, president of the Keith-Albee circuit, on a visit in Columbus, Ohio, stated that when the new Keith theatre in Columbus is opened in the great new American Insurance Union building, now under construction, Columbus will have a theatre befitting its size and importance. The new theatre will probably be opened in September of next year. Mr. Albee stated. The opening will not be rushed, he said, in order to have everything ready on the opening date. The first Keith theatre was opened in Columbus twenty years ago in March.

Saenger Amuse. Opens Million Dollar House

Strand, Shreveport, La., Embodies Latest Theatre Design; Has 2,200 Seats

THE Saenger-Ehrlich Enterprises, Inc., recently opened a new million dollar theatre in Shreveport, La., that is held forth as an example of the most advanced science and art of modern motion picture theatre design and appointment. This new house has a seating capacity of 2,200 and is named the Strand. A complete detailed description of this amusement palace has been submitted to the News and is herewith published as a source of reference for other exhibitors contemplating building elaborate houses of their own:

Combines Beauty and Utility

The exterior of the Strand represents a grouping into a beautiful and practical construction plan the best elements of the leading playhouses of this and other countries.

The exit of the Saenger-Ehrlich interests, has traveled afar. In these travels he has visited some of the world renowned homes of the drama, show palaces, the boasts of great metropolitan centers of this and other countries. He selected detail of construction and adornment which have been incorporated in the exterior lines and interior embellishments of the Strand.

The Strand represents, exclusive of ground value, an investment of fully one million dollars.

For one and one-half years this theatre has been in the course of construction. The period of time spent in construction is indicative of the thoroughness and painstaking attention to details.

The builders desired a theatre beautiful, elaborate, elegant and safe, with every comfort provided and in every line and decoration a delight to the eye.

Compels Attention

Seen from the exterior, the Strand compels the attention of the passerby. The great dome, artistic by day and beautiful in its varied colored myriad lights by night, attract the eye. But in this lighting as in the announcement signs about the marquee and the wall signs, there is a dignified softness, nothing garish, yet attracting the eye to the messages and beauties of construction.

The Crockett Street side of the Strand is embellished with a great Gothic arch, patterned along the lines of the Cathedral windows of great European centers. The keystone of the arch tells the message and there is an inscription, hewn in the stone and gilded, which further declares the purposes of this great temple of art, namely to furnish whole-of-entertainment for progressive people.

The lobby of the Strand is in solid marble and genuine travertine stone walls. The floor is laid with marble blocks. The ticket windows are practicable and in harmony with elaborateness of the lobby in general. Gazing above the eye sees lights of many colors twinkle as the stars in the firmament.

Marvelous Painting

Surrounding the upper wall of the circular lobby is a marvelous work of art, painting by Paul Heerwagen, one of the South's leading artists. This painting portrays a falcon hunt. There is flashed before the eye a picture of the scene of old and mental pictures revived of the lore of childhood and the records of history.

when the Old World was in the heyday of its glory.

From the lobby one steps into the great foyer. One is compelled to hesitate involuntarily by the scene of beauty. There are great mirrors, in golden frames. Rich carpets, cover the floor. Drapes, damask, silk and velour, of soft tones, add their touch and in the center there is a fountain with a mirrored background in which the waters are reflected, deep red and blue, glow being produced by artistically conceived and arranged lighting effects.

There are a number of chandeliers. Each has many globes. Each sparkles re- plentifully through the crystals. And leading above there are wide stairways, the steps of solid marble and the balustrades of marble and artistically wrought metal.

From the foyer stairs lead down also into the men’s smoking room where every provision is made for their comfort. The smoking room is a circular room with lavatories adjoining.

From the foyer one enters into the lower floor auditorium of the theatre. Throughout the house the aisles are carpeted. The carpet is costly and soft of tasteful design.

All Seats, “Good Seats”

All 2,200 seats are “good-seats” that is they are comfortable, upholstered in genuine leather and with visibility unobstructed to each. There are no posts in the Strand to mar the view.

Off the stage, there are great loges, or boxes, handsomely draped and beautifully decorated. These boxes, uppers and lowers on each side are capable of comfortably seating nearly 200 persons.

The orchestra pit is ample. A feature of the Strand musical equipment is the Robert-Morton-Duplex organ. The acoustics of the theatre are so excellent that the sound swells and rolls through the great structure, delighting every ear with the mellowness of the music.

There is the stage. The proscenium arch 46 feet wide and 52 feet high is among the largest stages of the country. The drop curtain is of costly material.

Cooling System

So many degrees colder than without, the message which is taken “with a grain of salt,” in the case of the average theatres, is a presentment of truth in the case of the Strand.

The cooling and ventilation system of this great theatre is the last word in perfection. The spectator coming from the sultry and torrid outside, can be assured every comfort while in the theatre.

Henry Seel, for many years connected with the Saenger Organization is the Managing Director of the Strand, and Howard L. Swan, Supervising Manager of Saenger Amusement Co’s Shreveport Theatres, is the Strand’s Director of Publicity.

Following in line with the success of the Aztec and Egyptian Theatres, San Francisco, Rousseau Bros. are building another theatre to add to their holdings, several doors from the Granada Theatre. The house will be slightly larger than the twin theatres, and it is planned to open about July 15th and to call it the Pompeian. It will be under the supervision of Max Graf.

Ontario Theatre Destroyed in $200,000 Blaze

Howard Hager, owner of the Regal Theatre at Hagersville, Ontario, lost his theatre on the night of June 14 when the handsome building was destroyed by fire which started in adjoining premises from unknown cause. The total property loss, including the adjacent structures, amounted to $200,000. It is the announced intention of Mr. Hager to rebuild the theatre without delay.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
POWERLITE

This company has long been fully aware of the value of the reflector lamp but did not feel justified in placing one on the market until a lamp of this type could be offered to the motion picture industry which would fully live up to the reputation we have established for Power’s Projectors and Power’s Products. In offering Powerlite we feel that a reflector lamp has finally been produced which overcomes the serious defects of the earlier lamps and in addition has a number of important improvements and patented features which will win the strong approval of exhibitors, managers and projectionists.

Control apparatus is very neat and compact and is attached inside the lamphouse, thus eliminating the necessity for extra shafts, gears and control handles. Constructed so that perfect control of the arc is secured and carbons fed intermittently and automatically upon an infinitesimal rise of voltage brought about by the burning of the carbons. Control apparatus is thoroughly protected and it is impossible for the current to reach the motor until the arc is struck regardless of whether the line switch is open or closed. This permits the control motor to be wound for proper arc voltage and to operate positively at full voltage as soon as it is brought into the circuit. The control mechanism forms part of the lamp itself and only the necessary controls project from the rear of the lamphouse.

The method of inserting carbons will be found a real convenience to the projectionist. It is merely necessary to press a lever, insert carbons into the carbon holders FROM THE SIDE and release the lever. The carbons are then locked into position ready for operation without the use of tools. Vertical adjustment of the negative carbon and lateral adjustment of the positive carbon have been provided for in a manner which will be found very satisfactory to the projectionist and Powerlite also permits an exceptionally long carbon trim. An improved friction device allows the arc to be struck and fed without unlocking it from the motor feed system.

Special attention has been given to the design and construction of the mirror which has been made according to our own specifications. Improved insulated mirror supports and latch allow the mirror to be readily removed for cleaning. A radical departure and a great improvement in lamphouse construction has been made in Powerlite by having the door slide quickly and easily into the top of the lamphouse. This action is similar to that of the door in a sectional bookcase and leaves the interior clear and accessible for the projectionist’s manipulation. The lamp slides easily into or out of the lamphouse and this will be found extremely convenient when cleaning or making replacements.

Powerlite can be attached in about five minutes to Power’s, Simplex or Motiograph and no lining-up or similar adjustments are required.

REFLECTOR LAMP

POWERLITE REFLECTOR LAMP

Lamphouse

Powerlite lamphouse is of ample capacity and this is extremely important as the reflector lamp requires a certain minimum space in order to secure the most efficient results.

Stereopticon attachment may be easily swung into position for projecting slides, operating in a manner similar to that of the ordinary arc lamp.

Entire lamphouse is finished in black crystallized lacquer and makes a very attractive appearance.

ECONOMIES

Practical tests and actual use in thousands of theatres have definitely shown the tremendous economies effected by the use of the reflector arc lamp. The figures given on this page may therefore be accepted without doubt or hesitancy, and investigation will fully substantiate all statements made.

Powerlite Reflector Lamp using approximately 20 amperes actually delivers more light and of a better quality than the ordinary arc lamp using 75 to 80 amperes direct current. This means that an immediate saving is effected of 75% in current consumption alone in addition to the superior results obtained upon the screen. A house using 75 ampere arcs (ignoring entirely the fact that two of them are burnt for a portion of the day and taking only one into consideration) paying for current at the rate of 5c per kilowatt and running ten hours a day for one year, by using Powerlite Reflector Lamp will effect a saving of over $1,000 in current.

A large saving is also effected in carbons as the ordinary D.C. are using from 70 to 80 amperes requires 7.8 x 12 positive carbons and 7.16 x 6 negative carbons. At least two negative carbons will be used for each positive carbon consumed. Using 1,000 positive carbons per year at $161.00 per thousand and 2,000 negative carbons at $72.00 per thousand, the amount paid for carbons during the year would be approximately $355.00. As against this 1,000 sets of carbons for the reflector arc will cost at the most $85 and only one negative is necessary for each positive consumed. Figuring that only 1,000 sets of carbons are used per year (and this estimate is fairly conservative) the carbon saving with Powerlite would be $220.00 — a saving of approximately 70%.

The method of carbon support in the Powerlite permits the stubs to be burned extremely short and this of course prevents unnecessary waste. Other economies are also effected through the elimination of condenser breakage and on such items as carbon holder replacements.

Powerlite Reflector Lamp will also be found more reliable than the ordinary reflector lamp and its simplicity and convenience will make a strong appeal to the projectionists.

The economies secured through the use of Powerlite seem so extraordinary and the figures are so startling it may be difficult at first to believe they are not exaggerated. Making reasonable allowances for the size of the house, the number of hours the projectors are operated and other conditions of a similar nature, the figures will be found approximately correct but we will be very glad to furnish further detailed information based upon the current consumed in any particular theatre.

Inquiries and Comments

A Comeback

OME little while ago we gave a rather lengthy friendly criticism of a letter from an Ohio projectionist who tried in rather vague terms to convince us that the projection in certain Ohio theatres was something above the ordinary. This in support of his contention that the small town projectionist was, as in many cases, as fully qualified to render top-notch work as his big city brother.

It appears that Brother Johnson, of Washington, C. O., Ohio, possessed the persevering nature for he comes back with another letter intending to justify himself and at the same time making himself a little more explicit concerning his idea of good projection.

He writes as follows:

"Dear Sir:"

"In response to your article concerning "Friend Johnson," must beg to advise you that the letter you received was not intended to "bash" you out. On the contrary, I believe your article seemed to give me the biggest part of the bawling out.

However, we won't argue about that, so we will just call it even. The letter that was typed often happened to be written on a friend's machine and my not knowing it thoroughly, in addition to the ribbon being twisted explains why part of the letter was in one color and the rest in another.

Agrees

I am not near a typewriter now or I might try the same over again.

I will agree with you in most of your articles and feel that you have given a clear explanation of how the city fellow excels the small-town man. I do believe, however, that you have exaggerated things in some parts of your article and in my opinion you seemed to believe that I might not have good judgment when I really do see good screen results.

Here is what I call perfect projection and I think you will agree with me: a good steady picture and subtitles; a bright steady light all over the screen; practically no flicker; clear pictures and sharp definition; excellent changeovers. Don't you think that these fulfillments would be good enough for any large theatre in any large city?

Well these conditions were observed in the theatres I mentioned and in the order in which I listed them. You know, after a fellow has been in the projection game for many years he may easily pick out a good many minor faults of other projectionists which may not even be apparent to the public.

Some projectionists think they can fool the public but in my mind a poorly projected picture will easily ruin the entire meaning of a play and people seeing this will surely leave the theatre dissatisfied. Am I not right?

So brothers, let's get together and pull the same way. Give the public the best possible in the way of projection as I do not think that anyone willingly wants to put on a jumpy, poorly lighted picture on the screen.

I hope this gives you the information you have been wanting."

Relieved

Well, Friend Johnson, we are certainly relieved to learn that the vivid color scheme used in your last letter was not caused by an misguided desire to annihilate us as we surely think that was what you were longing to do. We cannot recall ever having compared the small-town and big-city man's qualifications in these columns, so were at a loss to account for it. Probably some one else put this bee in your bonnet.

As for our implying that you were incapable of judging the quality of projected pictures or could not recognize a well projected picture when you saw one, why, such a thing was never intended. Far be it from us to cast aspersions on fellow "critters" knowledge. Life is too short for such things.

Not So Good

The principle thing we were interested in was securing the important element of your ideas of the projection merits in the theatres you mentioned, not so much for our sake, as for that of the other readers of this department. The mere statement that a thing is so may be all right but unless considerately amplified by details, provides dry reading.

While admitting that the things you mention as being requisite for good projection are so, we still do not agree with you that they alone indicate first class workmanship and this is the point we have been trying to get home—a statement of all the conditions.

Give an experienced man a high powered are and it is comparatively easy for him, by exercising care, to do the things you mention. That is merely the part of a machine attendant and calls mostly for care and patience.

The mark of a true projectionist, however, rests in his ability to project pictures efficiently with no waste effort or excess power. It goes without saying that the screen results should, at the same time, be all that could be desired.

For any particular size of theatre there is a certain screen intensity which is desirable from the standpoint of picture brightness and comfortable viewing. To secure this intensity with any given optic system requires just so much electrical power—no more. In order to secure the desired screen brightness at a minimum power cost requires that each and every element in the optic system clear to the screen be of the correct type at a cost of $50,000. Engineering Report Gives OK for Comerford Theatre Site

Engineers who made examinations of the site of the proposed West Scranton, Pa., theatre to be erected by the Comerford Amusement Company, to determine whether there was any danger of a cave-in due to coal mining operations in that vicinity, have reported that the location is a safe one, there being no underground void having all been packed with fill. As a result the work of razing buildings on the site has begun, and one large structure is being moved across the street to make way for the theatre, which is to be a large, modern structure with a seating capacity of 2,000. Actual building operations will be started early in August, according to plans of the company, and it is hoped to have the theatre ready for formal opening about the first of the new year.

Wilmer & Vincent House Remodelled for Vaudeville

Walter Vincent, of New York, one of the heads of the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company, was in Harrisburg on July 17, inspecting the company's six theatres there, and particularly the Orpheum which is being reconstructed, almost from the ground up, into a vaudeville house that will seat 2,500. Earlier in the week his partner, Mr. Wilmer, was in Harrisburg on a similar errand. They were shown about the properties by C. Floyd Hopkins, their Harrisburg representative.

Omaha, Nebraska. to Have a $50,000 Picture House

Plans are being drawn by John & Alan McDonald, 2nd Floor, Standard Oil Building, for the erection of a motion picture house to be erected on a site 50 by 125 at 50th and Dodge Streets, Omaha, Nebraska, at a cost of $50,000. The owner is A. R. Hansen, 4001 Dodge Street, Omaha, Nebraska.
Lobbies Are the Show Windows of Motion Picture Theatres

By S. Weinstein, Pres., Menger, Ring & Weinstein, Inc.

In order to properly understand the functions of the frame as a means of displaying pictures attractively, a realization must be brought about of the fact that the exhibitor is not like the average merchant along the avenue, who simply places his wares in the window and lets them do the rest, but he is a well-shaped pair of shoes, an attractive shirt, a modish dress, or a well-finished piece of furniture; they all have their economic as well as aesthetic appeal, even in the matter of food. It has been recognized by leading restaurateurs that an appeal to the palate alone is not enough—they have learned to lay their sea-food and other delicacies in the window, not only temptingly, but artistically, so as to appeal to your sense of beauty in addition to tantalizing your palate.

Not so with the exhibitor; he cannot display his wares; all he can do is show you pictures of it, and whoever is able to show, must carry with it an appeal to your sense of beauty,—to that part of us that is not so materialistic—that something within us that loves pretty flowers, beautiful sunsets, poetry, and music.

It will readily be seen that the frame surrounding the exhibitor's wares must possess beauty of design, harmony of color, symmetry, and warmth. From time immemorial it has been recognized by artists and painters the world over, that the frame is an essential part of the picture; it serves as a background and border; it gives a picture perspective and finish. To such an extent have the old masters appreciated the value of the frame that a good many of them were in the habit of making the frames for their paintings, and in fact, this is what has brought about the vogue for the highly carved artistic frames that can be seen in the famous art galleries of the old world, also in the great museums of this country.

It is quite customary for artists of the present day to select the frames for their paintings; they will not intrust the selection to even the most advanced framing establishments, but prefer to personally supervise every detail, knowing what a great bearing the frame will have on the final appearance of the picture.

S. M. P. E. Convention Oct. 5-8 at Lakewood Farm Inn

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers has announced that the semi-annual meeting will take place October 5, 6, 7 and 8 at Lakewood Farm Inn, Roscoe, New York. The Society held a spring convention at Lakewood Farm Inn a year ago last spring. The members attending that meeting were so pleased with the place that many special requests have been received by the board of governors which influenced the selection of this mountain resort for the coming convention.

Rex Hedwig Laboratories Print Fight Films

The motion pictures taken of the Greb, Wills and Shade boats at the Polo Grounds in New York City, on the night of July 2, for the benefit of the Italian Hospital Fund, were processed at the Rex Hedwig Laboratories. At the close of each fight the negatives were rushed to the laboratory, where they were immediately developed, printed, cut, assembled, and early Friday afternoon they were thrown upon the screens of leading theatres throughout the New York Metropolitan area.
OLD AGE AND YOUR THEATRE

Thousands of theatre chairs, through neglect, are suffering from the effects of "Old Age." Are your theatre chairs passing into this class? Under present day competition no theatre can afford to allow its theatre chairs to suffer from the effects of "Old Age."

Through our method of procedure, which is an innovation, we can recondition and transform, Like Magic Over Night, unsightly theatre chairs into ones of real beauty, comfort and distinction, automatically creating an entirely new auditorium atmosphere that has definite box-office value, at reasonable cost in any part of the U. $35,000 Addition Planned by Moller Organ Co.

Growth of the business of the M. P. Moller Organ Company, of Hagerstown, Maryland, manufacturers of pipe organs used in motion picture theatres, has resulted in the announcement, on July 21, of plans for the enlargement of two departments of the plant in that city. The two additions are to be built at an expenditure of $35,000. One of the additions will be to the theatre and the other will connect the offices with the theatre.

Record Earnings Shown by Morgan Lithograph Co.

The Morgan Lithograph Company, according to preliminary unofficial reports, closed its fiscal year June 30, 1925, with the best showing that it has made in its fifteen years of successful operation. The report states that the Morgan Lithograph Company alone, before giving effect to the result of operations of the companies which it has recently purchased, earned for the fiscal year approximately $500,000 net before Federal taxes. The newly acquired companies and the contracts which they hold, the report states, will double the present volume of business of the Morgan Company, which will be largely reflected in the net earnings of the combination for the coming year. The outlook, the report states, is very bright.

Storm and Burnouts; But Show Goes on or Bust

HERE'S an instance that serves to explain why this industry has a fascination to all who ever enter its fold. The appeal of showwoman-ship—the show goes on or bust spirit is witnessed in these few following lines. The Amurru Theatre, Oakland City, Ind., writes:

Due to a severe electrical storm our compensac conversion system was burned out during performance. Next morning at eight o'clock, we called Joe Bommersheim of E. E. Fulton Co., Indianapolis. Leaving Indianapolis at nine-thirty, by hard driving Mr. Bommersheim made the distance of about two hundred miles arriving here at three o'clock. By starting time we had installed a new Mazda Projection system and lost but the one night, that of the mishap.

New High Intensity Studio Arc Placed on Market

A new high intensity lamp has just appeared on the market, for which many advantages are claimed. This lamp is presented by Max Mayer, New York City, whose electrical connection with the film producing industry is well known.

These lamps, manufactured by Hall & Connolly, of New York, under the Sperry patents, are entirely automatic and will operate, it is said, for a full half hour without any attention whatsoever. The striking or starting device is instantaneous in action and so arranged that it will not break the carbon crater in striking.

Extreme steadiness and silence of operation are obtained by an ingenious compensated constant feed mechanism.

The permanent accurate alignment of the carbons and new manner of mounting of lamp and mirror, result in overcoming the usual ghost or shadow in the light beam.

Much thought and practical study have been given to every detail in the design and construction of this lamp with the result that exceptional sturdiness and serviceability are claimed along with a considerable reduction in weight over similar units.

A specially designed mirror mounting provides for a great spread of light beam without shadow and without objectionable lengthening of the lamp housing.

The first three of these lamps have been in constant use in the Paragon Studios, Fort Lee, N. J., for over two months.

Kansas City Letters Protest New Theatre Building

The City Plan Commission of Kansas City has received nine letters of protest against the proposed construction of a motion picture theatre at Forty-eighth street and the Paseo, which is unusual in the records of Kansas City. The letters protested against the proposed modification of the zoning law to permit the construction of the theatre.

The modification was requested by G. M. Baltis, who filed a petition of 160 property owners in the neighborhood in support of his request, which has been taken under advisement.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"A Slave of Fashion"—M. G. M., Capitol, N. Y.

Daily News: "Most of the boys were to have your choice for the ideal starring story for Norma Shearer you couldn't do better than 'A Slave of Fashion.' This is a money story with 5th Ave. trimmings. The subtitles fairly snap with humor and the direction is as smooth as Norma's hair. Norma Shearer, a gal that's good for a twenty-fours look, looks good and is suave and charming as the gentleman who discovers he has a life on his return home."

Brooklyn Eagle: "Norma Shearer is making her bow as a full-fledged star in 'A Slave of Fashion,' this fall at the Capitol Theatre and is demonstrating as if a demonstration were not necessary. She has now been extremely present in previous pictures, but the reviewer cannot recall one in which she was more engaging. Miss Shearer and Cody come off with the principal honors. Cody is the hero instead of the villain, and William Haines is the villain instead of the hero. An exciting picture!"

"The Foot"—Fox, Keith's Palace, Cleveland

Times: "This picture should be as effective as its theme. It is a film which is made for action, plenty of romance, plenty of everything. You will enjoy it."

er Herald-Tribune: "Norma Shearer is far too beautiful and alluring! She dazzles the eye. 'A Slave of Fashion' is a good picture. Cody is the hero instead of the villain, and William Haines is the villain instead of the hero. An exciting picture!"

"The Foot"—Fox, Keith's Palace, Cleveland

Times: "This picture should be as effective as its theme. It is a film which is made for action, plenty of romance, plenty of everything. You will enjoy it."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "Miss Griffth is a beautiful and a well-acted actress and is supported by Lloyd Hughes."

"Soul Fire"—First National, Stanley, Philadelphia

Philadelphia Inquirer: "Corinne Griffth is a very charming and personal lady. She gives a most impressive performance in 'Declass'-The picture is, to our mind, a real success."

Philadelphia Record: "The picture is a fine one and is a real success."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "The romance of the two lovers was such a success that Philadelphia was greatly assisted in forgetting their weather woes. 'Soul Fire' has the advantage that it is an original story and the work of its stars, and was produced in a most skillful manner. It did not have any engaging scene accessories, but was marked by splendid acting by all who took part."

Inquirer: "At least three things and maybe four, make the picture the best of this week's bill at the Stanley worth seeing. And that's a good batting average. First of all, Richard Barthelmess is the man of the hour; secondly, there is much to be said for the picture besides its plot is unusual. Each episode is full of interest and there is a real musing in the whole plot."

Public Ledger: "A picture which contains much of the too-much-loved and gold-and-silk-really small amount of the usual motion picture dross is 'Soul Fire.' Four things make it notable. The unusual way in which the story is told, the excellent work done by Richard Barthelmess, the unique screen type of Carlotta Monterey, and the splendid lighting which makes the scenes stand out. The role of young Eric Fane is one of the best that Richard Barthelmess has had and he gives to it that delicacy and tenderness which seem peculiarly his own."

Evening Ledger: "'Soul Fire' reverses the usual order of things. It is a highly successful play adapted from the stage play 'Great Music.' Richard Barthelmess deserves the lion's share of the credit for the success of the film's adaptation. It is one of the best roles he has had since 'To'fabeid' Barthelmess continues to wear the mantle of interpreting such sympathetic characters is shown in this picture."

Public Bulletin: "A pleasing portrayal by Richard Barthelmess. He very capably demonstrates his versatility on the screen."

Sun: "Richard Barthelmess in the best picture he has had lately."

1. Workmanship and material are the best obtainable.
2. An Instantaneous Mechanism "Title Brake" that controls projector speed without changing setting of speed control.
3. Accessible—the prime factor for ease of operation.
4. Film tracks and tension length over five inches long, resulting in perfect projection at all speeds.
5. A Heavy Duty Projector, for it performs uncomplainingly and without constant attention.
6. Can be equipped with every conceivable attachment for "stunt" work or De Luxe type performances.
7. A beltless motor drive, directly connected, eliminates scores of trouble-giving parts.
8. As near five-proof or hazard-proof as human ingenuity can make it.
10. Various models for every projection requirement, each complete in itself, eliminating attachments and adapters.

“The Home Maker”

Universal Produces, With Alice Joyce and Clive Brook, One of the Finest Pictures Ever Made

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

“The Home Maker,” with Alice Joyce and Clive Brook, will be an outstanding picture of the coming season. Exhibitors will throw their hats in the air and cheer when they see its effect upon their audiences, for in addition to its unquestionable box-office value, it is the sort of clean, wholesome, gripping domestic drama which will do the reputation of the whole industry a world of good. Universal has been making some fine pictures lately and “The Home Maker” will be near the top of the White List, if it doesn’t lead them all.

This is a box-office picture par excellence for all audiences. It is hard to conceive an audience that will dislike it. The drama is simply done but so tense and absorbing in its import that it will hold the eyes glued on the screen. Women will eat it up, and cry, and men will like it fully as well as the women, for it does man no injustice by putting woman on an unscalable pinnacle.

“The Home Maker’s” many points of interest—and its wonderful exploitation angles—may be analyzed without a single justifiable criticism except that of length, and on that point there is ample ground for argument. The general opinion of reviewers who sat enthralled throughout its 7,755 feet was that it might be cut a few hundred feet, but nobody insisted that eliminations were imperative. Possibly the critics couldn’t believe that here was a picture which couldn’t be criticized. Oh yes, two of the subtitles are too flowery.

King Baggot is responsible for “The Home Maker” and Universal owes him a flock of congratulatory telegrams and a museum of medals.

The picture is really wonderful in the simplicity of its story and settings and acting. It is a perfect emotional unit from start to finish. An accident in which the husband is crippled and a fire threatening loss of life might have been over-stressed, but they have been carefully subordinated to the telling of the story.

“The Home Maker” opens with scenes of ordinary domestic routine. The wife is performing her daily work, stopping only to reprove... the children. In this role Alice Joyce is perfect. She does the ordinary things which we see done from day to day, does them simply and naturally, yet rivets attention on herself. The same is true of Clive Brook. These two accomplished artists—may their tribe increase—bring a wealth of humanity to the picture that assures the utmost in realism. We cannot for the moment recall any picture which is so real as "The Home Maker."

While the entire cast does expert work, two other members deserve especial mention. Martha Maddox is superb as a sour-faced, dyspeptic old maid. Her work is restrained like that of the others, but remarkably effective.

The other player? Say, you must see little Billy Kent Schaffer. In this picture he ranks with Jackie Coogan, not as Jackie is now, an experienced actor, but as he was when about Billy's age—four years. Little Billy is called upon to sulk and he does it in such delightfully realistic fashion that women's arms will go out toward him; he is called upon to smile and there was never a more winning baby seen on the screen.

In closing, a word about the exploitation angles of this picture. They are there—big and self-evident. The wife takes the husband's place as the wage-earner, having failed to inspire happy children; the husband, a business failure, succeeds in the home. In the end, smiles replace scowls on the children's faces and there is joy.

Don't fail to book this picture. It will please your patrons as few pictures have done; it will do your prestige as a theatre owner untold good. Book it, boost it, get the clergy to see it, for they will preach about it, and you'll live in the hope that the gods will be kind and give you another picture just as good sometime in the not too distant future.

Those insects which we tend to associate with childhood memories and stories, might well have been designed with an appreciation of their respective environments in mind. Some children would return to the same beekeeper with the same delight, and others would return to the same place with the same joy. In this instance, the children would return to the same beekeeper with the same delight, and others would return to the same place with the same joy.

As the children return to the same beekeeper with the same delight, and others would return to the same place with the same joy, the children would return to the same beekeeper with the same delight, and others would return to the same place with the same joy.

FIGURES don’t lie—and figures definitely and unqualifiedly prove Gene Stratton Porter the most widely read of all authors.

The sale of her novels is one of the phenomena of modern publishing. In twenty years over TEN MILLION copies of her books have been sold, which have been read by FIFTY MILLION people!

Five of her Nature Novels have had an average sale of over 1,500,000 each. THIS IS HER GREATEST NATURE NOVEL!

For the past four months the story has been running serially in McCall’s Magazine, and accompanying each installment has appeared one of the full column ads shown on the opposite page. The circulation of McCall’s Magazine is 2,000,000, with an estimated reading public of five times that figure!

This novel comes off the press August 17th—just before the release of the picture—AND EVERY JACKET OF EVERY COPY CALLS ATTENTION TO THE PICTURE!

The average sale of a popular novel is from 4000 to 5000 copies. The publishers are printing 150,000 copies in the first edition!

They are putting behind it the strongest selling campaign they have ever put behind a novel—AND EVERY PIECE OF ADVERTISING MATTER IN THIS SELLING CAMPAIGN IS DIRECTLY TIED UP WITH THE PICTURE!

Gene Stratton Porter’s “Keeper of the Bees” directed by J. Leo Meehan is the greatest box office proposition exhibitors have been offered in a decade—because it has that most substantial of all values—circulation!

This is one of twelve F. B. O. Gold Bonds for 1925-1926. Each will have some unusual and extraordinary value that will make it a self seller for the theatre.

The Meeting at Detroit

Motion Picture News is not printing a detailed story of what happened at the recent session of the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. A. at Detroit. This, we are perfectly willing to admit, is an unusual procedure for a publication dedicated week in and week out to the recording of the vital news of the industry.

In this instance, however, we depart from established custom for what seems to us a perfectly justifiable reason. We do not believe the interests of exhibitor organization are served, or will be served, by the printing of acrimonious remarks passed by exhibitor leaders in the heat of argument.

The perpetuation of quarrels is often found more in the relentless medium of type than in the quarrels themselves. One statement leads to another statement until the result is a mountainous mass of printed words.

To those who have submitted statements for publication on the Detroit meeting, may we say that we have considered them carefully, and wish to be understood as intending no discourtesy in not putting them in type. We believe the course we are following will appeal to all reasonable men as constructive and helpful.

What we have to say here is all that we shall say about the Detroit meeting—unless the situation changes greatly. We prefer to record the simple fact that the Detroit meeting accomplished these results, about the authenticity of which, we believe, there can be no controversy:

The appointment of an Administrative Committee, consisting of A. Julian Brylawski, M. E. Comerford, Nathan Yamins, Harry Davis and Jake Wells. Glenn Cross was originally named on the committee. He resigned and was succeeded by Mr. Yamins.

The Finance Committee was re-named. It is composed of Sydney S. Cohen, Harry Davis and M. E. Comerford. The work of Joseph M. Seider on contract and arbitration matters was unanimously endorsed.

The Administrative Committee was empowered to engage a business manager. It was further authorized to make expenditures up to $5,000 on a majority vote of the committee, and a sum not to exceed $25,000 on unanimous vote.

A committee, composed of Messrs. Seider, Cohen and Yamins, was appointed to handle the copyright situation and was empowered to engage counsel.

A special committee to negotiate an equitable contract with the Independent Motion Picture Association was named. It consists of Messrs. Brylawski, Seider, R. R. Biechele, Davis and Yamins.

Independence Week was endorsed. A resolution of thanks was extended to Messrs. Cohen and Davis for their work.

The committee to represent the M. P. T. O. A. on the Board of Trade and Commerce was named as follows: Sydney Cohen, Nathan Yamins, L. M. Sagal, Harry Davis and J. J. Harwood. W. A. Steffes and A. Julian Brylawski were originally named on the committee. They resigned, and were succeeded by Messrs. Davis and Harwood.

These, we say, appear to be the definite results of the Detroit meeting.

If there is one thing the exhibitors of this country need above all, it is a firmly-knit national organization. Much good work has already been done by the exhibitor body. Still greater work lies ahead of it, waiting to be done.

In the interest of the exhibitor—and in the interest of the whole industry—we want to see the M. P. T. O. A. go ahead and fulfill its destiny in the highest degree. And we believe we are contributing to its welfare by refusing to contribute the destructive quality sometimes found in the printed word.
On the Subject of Art

GILBERT SELDEs, critic and essayist, writes an article for The Nation, generally considered a "highbrow" publication, on the subject of "Art in the Movies." This question of art and the screen troubles a great many people, but Mr. Seldes seems to have some pretty clear ideas worth listening to. Here is what he says:

"The hardest thing a critic of the movies has to face is the accusation that he wants to make the movies artistic. The reason this is a crime is, of course, that art doesn't sell; and the critic, whenever he has the good fortune to talk to a professional, feels the underlying hostility which means 'you want to bankrupt me.'"

"The last thing I want to see is a movie made for the pleasure of a few aesthetes. I have been assured that we shall come to it; that a chain of little movie houses, like the little theatres, will give new vitality and new artistic standards to the movie; and that gradually the movie, like the commercial theatre, will incorporate the good discoveries of the artistic groups. This is possible; but unless there is a great confusion of terms, it seems to me unnecessary. 'Art' when used roughly about the movies usually means good interior decoration. Duse-like restraint in registering emotions, and the elimination of banal plots and incidents. It also suggests a great infusion of 'artiness,' the whole attitude of movies for the few is arrogant and patronizing. Regard the mechanics of the stage and you are instantly aware that at its best a play can have only a few hundred auditors at one time; look at the mechanics of the film and you see that, while you can have a movie for one spectator, the natural thing is to have hundreds of thousands simultaneously—the limit is really the product of multiplying the number of prints by the number of spectators; it approaches infinity. I am in favor of its doing so.

"The confusion, I suspect, arises from our habit of saying that a film is inartistic when we dislike the plot, a standard we might as well apply to the 'Vanities of 1925.' We say it, again, when the methods used are a little obvious, when, in order to show us that a husband is no longer in love with his wife, a director can think of nothing but having the gentleman thumb his nose at the lady in public. But these are largely matters of intelligence; the directors may be right in assuming that their spectators do not understand a shrug of the shoulder, and the whole notion that subtlety is the basis of art is open to question. It is possible that the moving picture can handle only broad effects; it is certain that a satisfactory picture can be made with them.

"The artistic elements can exist in a film without for a moment touching upon the subject in such a way that the spectator is made uncomfortably aware of them. The structure of the whole film, the relation of part to part, the rhythm of the action and its variations—all these can give a picture artistic qualities, and they are as possible in a slap-stick comedy as in a super-spectacle.

"We get further if we ask of a picture only that it be technically a good picture—that it utilize the capacities of the camera to the full. In this respect the most interesting films made in America today are the quarter, half, or one reel 'short subjects' which usually follow the news of the day. Sometimes they are scenes, sometimes trick photography, sometimes drawn pictures or combinations of drawn and photographed pictures; and they are always interesting. The aesthetic of the films hardly recognizes them, because they offer very little scope for imagination, in the story sense, or for composition; and none for plot. But these films are made with complete mastery of the instrument. The last one I saw in the way of trick photography was a joy. It represented a cow in a meadow. The cow walked. Presently the fore part lengthened itself and then again collapsed, or walked away entirely from the hind quarters; a moment later the cow was facing itself and walked head-on into itself. The whole thing was pure movie and was done with perfect skill.
PICTURES AND PEOPLE

GREAT MOVIE Season on Broadway got off to a fine start by registering three pictures this week fairly entitled to rank as "super-features." A much-abused and over-used phrase, due to rough handling by the publicity sharers, but in the present case hitting the mark squarely. The films in question are—D. W. Griffith's production for United Artists, "Sally Of The Sawdust," at the Mark Strand; "Kiss Me Again," directed by Ernst Lubitsch for Warner Brothers at the Picadilly, and "The Unholy Three," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, at the Capitol, directed by Tod Browning. Each of the trio is a really great picture in the true sense of the word, and each director has distinguished himself according to his own individual style. It would be foolish to try to make comparisons, just as futile as if one were to criticise three excellent paintings—marine, portraiture and landscape—each the work of an acknowledged master of the brush, with a view to praising one at the expense of another.

With regard to the productions in question the point is that in each case the audience responded warmly to the picture's distinctive appeal. Alternate tears and laughter greeted the sentimental and comic interludes of "Sally," unrestrained mirth reigned as the debt, light Lubitsch creation of sparklingly bright Continental comedy unfolded on the screen; and the weird, bizarre atmosphere, fierce melodramatic urge and occasional glinting humor of "The Unholy Three" held the on-lookers spell bound. Truly a triple triumph for the silent drama, achieved just at the right time. We do not recall any previous occasion where the Broadway houses made such a three-ply killing both from the artistic and commercial standpoint. It is worth noting that a revival of a former Griffith success—"Orphans of the Storm," graces the Cameo screen, and that "Sally" and "Kiss Me Again" are being held over for another week.

Laura Jean Libby, authoress of "His Love Grew Cold," which F. B. O. will film, and a score of other popular sellers.

Flo Kennedy, of the Ziegfeld Follies, one of the five impersonators of "Krazy Kat" (M. J. Winkler) in the Philadelphia Greater Movie Season parade.

Frank Lloyd's "Wings of Chance" company, producing for First National on location. Those included are: Philo McCullough, Anna Q. Nilsson, Viola Dana, Vistor B. McClaghen, Dorothy Sebastian, Ben Lyon, Claude Gillingwater, Director Frank Lloyd and William Conklin.

Edward Montagne (right) Universal West Coast scenario chief, and Edward Laemmle, director, talk over "The Still Alarm" in front of one of the ancient fire engines used in it.

Al Rockett, assistant to Richard A. Rosland, and George Archamboad, First National director, accompanied by their wives, leave Hollywood to return to New York.

Aileen Pringle, playing in "The Mystic" (Metro-Goldwyn), has created a brand new bob, with her hair drawn back on one side over the ear.
SOME FAMOUS ACTIVITIES

THE producing units of Famous Players-Lasky are in full swing these sultry days. Thomas Meighan is quartered on the old sod, having invaded Ireland with his company, where exterior scenes will be made for "The Imperfect Imposter." His leading lady, Lois Wilson, is en-route from Hollywood to join the Meighan forces. James Cruze is in Cheyenne, Wyoming, with a company of 300 players, filming "The Pony Express;" in Arizona, at Keyenta, the Indian trading post, Richard Dix heads the enormous cast which will participate in the making of "The Vanishing American," in which 10,000 red men will take part, and D. HARRY CAREY, ABLE SEAMAN

ARRY CAREY has temporarily forsaken the atmosphere of the prairieland, stopped dodging bullets, sworn off on the cowboy regalia and whir of the encircling lariat. For him it is now sea-fog, surging billows and the heave and swing of the Spanish Main, or something that corresponds to that historical marine highway. Which doesn't mean that Mr. Carey has suddenly hoisted the black flag and may be sighted through a spyglass, stalking a gory quarter deck, with cutlass at his side and humming — "fifteen men on the dead man's chest." Nothing of the sort, me hearty!

The mild truth is that, with his wife and two kiddies, he is putting in a well-earned vacation aboard his two-masted schooner yacht, the Ella J. Ludlum, somewhere off the California coast. And if you ask the erstwhile cowboy hero he'll aver that he deserves a rest after the strenuous time he went through making "The Prairie Pirate," his latest Hunt Stromberg feature, recently completed. Next week he deserts the salty brine and gets back to his ranch to begin work on "The Man From Red Gulch."

FOUND BY EXPLORER WHITE

HEY tell the tale thus: Jack White, producer of Mermaid Comedies (Educational Film Exchange, Inc.) went for a drive through San Bernardino, Cal. He was merely on pleasure bent, but, possessing an unerring eye for both beauty and business, he sighted a damsel of such exceeding fairness, that she slammed on the brakes, stopped abruptly, hot-footed it down the road in pursuit of the lovely stranger and then and there made her a proposition to appear in pictures. The girl, finding that he was in deadly earnest, satisfactory camera tests were made and the engagement of Helen Marlowe as leading lady in Educational-Cameo Comedies, followed.

F. B. O. OUTING

CHOES of the last F. B. O. week-end party are still ringing through filmland. The executives came to a sudden decision to take a real holiday, all at once, and left Friday, July 31, to spend Saturday and Sunday in Nathan Gordon's camp at Cape Cod. The guests included Major H. C. S. Thomson; Vice-President J. I. Schnitzer; Advertising Director Nat G. Rothstein; Sales Manager Lee Marcus; Charles Rosenzweig, manager New York Exchange; and Al. Bovasberg, sales promotion director; with Bill Shapiro, of Franklin Film Company, Boston, acting as pilot. The event was a huge success in every way, and we wouldn't be surprised if a revival showing followed in the near future.

MEIGHAN IN M. C. ROLE

HEY picked out Tom Meighan for master of ceremonies for the concert held aboard the Leviathan, during his trip to Ireland, and the Paramount star distinguished himself by breaking all records for raising money for charitable purposes on the broad Atlantic. He coaxed $1,902 away from the cabin passengers, whereas the most any other person ever got, acting in a similar capacity at a ship concert, was $600, according to officials of the United States Line vessel. The money will go to the Seaman's Fund, an organization that cares for the wants of deserving sailors and dependents. Many international celebrities were present and Meighan's auctioneering abilities excited universal admiration.

EDMUND GOULDING'S SPEED TEST

Goulding's Speed Test

EDMUND GOULDING made a whirlwind finish in picture shooting, breaking all existing records at the Metropolitan-Mayer studios. This feat wasn't accomplished in connection with his production, "Sun-Up," starring Pauline Starks and Conrad Nagel, but was merely a flyer, so as to speak, being a trailer, featuring Norma Shearer and Lew Cody for advertising purposes, a one-reeler.

It was 11 A.M. when Goulding got the assignment. The picture had to be finished by 6 P.M. for use in a San Francisco premiere.
KIDS MAKE OWN FILM

THE members of "Our Gang," famous for their work in Pathé comedies, were given a "free hand" by director Robert McGowan the other day in the producing line and have turned out a polite satire on the business of improving film material, by making a comedy entitled—"Better Movies." McGowan accepted the juvenile suggestions literally, the result being a plot that jumps frantically from San Francisco's Chinatown to the Nile River and Cleopatra's palace and moves "fast and furiously." To prove that they wanted "bigger and better" pictures, the kiddies put more villains, poisonous looks and strange symbols into the course of events than are found in ten average movies. This great thrill is said by studio executives to be a real laugh-provoker and perfect imitation of the old-time screen melodramas.

DOUG SEEKS TALENT

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS is in search of a new leading woman for his next production, so far entitled "The Black Pirate." Screen experience is desirable, although she is not required to have attained the heights of stardom. The specifications are for a young woman, about five feet, six inches tall, handsome and of "regal bearing." Harry D. Buckley, personal representative of Mr. Fairbanks, in charge of the "Don Q, Son of Zorro," showing at the Globe Theatre, New York, warns all aspirants for the position not to go to Hollywood. Applications, enclosing letter and photograph, should be sent to Douglas Fairbanks, care of Pickford-Fairbanks Studio, Hollywood, Cal.

MARION IN LUCK

GEORGE MARION, JR., now titling pictures at F. B. O. was recently advised that Ann Nichols, author and producer of the record-breaking stage attraction—"Abie's Irish Rose" will produce his musical play—"The Fatal Blonde." The locale is a film studio, with an Irish script boy and Jewish script girl involved. Book and lyrics are by the well-known title-writer and music by Warner Jansen. Mr. Marion, who is the son of the celebrated character actor and stage director, said that he believes Miss Nichols intends to open the play in August. This is the first attraction Miss Nichols has consented to produce since the sensational "Abie" started out to break all long-run records four years ago.

GALSWORTHY MAY WRITE SCRIPT

JOHN GALSWORTHY, author and playwright of international fame is likely to join the brigade of celebrated literary lights that have contributed original scenarios to the screen. That is, if the efforts of Associated Pictures Corporation in that direction bear fruit. Associated wants a new vehicle for Barbara La Marr, who played the lead in Sawyer-Lubin's production of "The White Monkey," an adaption of Galsworthy's novel of the same title for First National.

It is intended to have the new Galsworthy story follow "Spanish Sunlight," based on an Anthony Pyde novel, Miss La Marr's next feature, which will be made on the coast and personally supervised by June Mathis.

Greater Movie Season Opens With Bang Over U. S.

Many Cities Report Brilliant Inaugurations

GREATER Movie Season is in full swing. More than fifteen hundred cities and towns are flying the pennant this week and will continue their campaigns throughout August. Brilliant openings are reported generally in telegrams to the national service bureau that organized the drive from the Will H. Hays office.

A salute of guns in Atlantic City; a parade Chicago witnessed by more people than any like event since the Armistice celebration; a radio pageant broadcast from New York; a demonstration in Denver that amounted to a get-together of civic officials, theatre owners and business men on a basis of mutual co-operation; every city with some outstanding achievement by way of emphasizing the public importance of motion pictures. So runs the history of the first national Greater Movie Season backed by exhibition exploitation of an unprecedented nature.

Personal appearances of D. W. Griffith, Carol Dempster, W. C. Fields and other popular screen players commenced proceedings at the New York Strand. Special presentations at the Capitol, Rivoli, Rialto and Picadilly carried the “greatest movie” theme; and an intensive newspaper, billboard and front-of-house campaigns brought immediate results at all the seventy-five participating theatres throughout Greater New York.

The drive nationally developed Atlanta, for instance, contrariwise, principal advantages were for first-run down-town houses.

“Reports from all theatres here indicate from ten to forty per cent increase in business over the past three months,” Willard C. Patterson telegraphed, “Community and second run theatres show the greatest increase. The most outstanding feature of our campaign was the splendid co-operation from big business concerns and newspapers, showing that the people of Atlanta hold their picture theatres in high regard. Greater Movie Season is a success. Let’s have it every year.”

From present indications Chicago staged the most spectacular function. The highlight proved to be the “King and Queen of Movies” Contest sponsored by the Herald-Examiner. Thirty-six hundred young men and women entered and all participated in the parade as Ladies—and Gentlemen—in Waiting to the winners, Bert Douglas and Anne Teven. More than a million and a half people thronged the line of march. Exhibitors throughout Chicago reported one of the best Saturdays and Sundays in their experience, proving that already the campaign has taken effect.

Under the direction of Ralph T. Kettering, everything planned was carried to a successful conclusion. Two contests were conducted simultaneously in the Chicago papers—the essay contest being carried on throughout the country in the Chicago Evening American and the “King and Queen” contest in the Chicago Herald and Examiner. All the other publications were very generous in their support. More than 17,920 lines of free publicity were secured in the six Chicago newspapers, which at the regular advertising rates would have cost $54,760. The writing and placing of the stories was handled by Louis P. Kramer, chairman of the publicity committee. Credit for the parade, which is declared to be the greatest thing arranged by any industry in Chicago, goes to Russell Moon of Paramount.

Chicagoans had a second opportunity to pay homage to the movie king and queen and to continue the celebration of Movie Season at Trinum Ballroom when the winners of the royalty contest were awarded the prizes offered by Chicago’s leading merchants. Miss Anne Teven, the striking brunette queen, received a diamond ring, valued at $1,000 and Bert Douglas, the king, received a similar gift. The “royal couple” also received paid-up life insurance policies for $1,000 and parcels of Florida real estate. Other prizes to the value of $10,000 were awarded competitors.

“There can be no doubt that the campaign on Greater Movie Season has helped to bring together various factions in the motion picture industry,” says Louis P. Kramer, chairman of the publicity committee. “Exhibitors and their executives, who were at sword’s point before the start of the campaign, are now working in harmony, having learned the value of unified effort through Greater Movie Season. The campaign has also aided business in general. One newspaper handling the Chicago contest has increased its advertising through the month of July by more than four hundred columns over the same period of last year, and has built circulation instead of falling off as most newspapers do during the summer period when people are away on vacations. The industry has not only benefited, but has made many friends who now fully understand the value of motion pictures and motion picture theatres.”

Three hundred Michigan theatre-owners conducted the campaign simultaneously, and, according to H. M. Rieley, “reports indicate a remarkable public interest. It has been a big job but it will be worth the effort.”

No less than fifty special window displays were arranged in Detroit. One enterprising Michigan exhibitor in a town of twelve thousand is offering two automobiles as prizes to his patrons; while in Lansing, where the effort behind the national contest is particularly aggressive, twenty valuable local awards have been secured.

Minneapolis, St. Paul, Oklahoma City, Tulsa and Louisville have deferred their season for two weeks in order to develop full publicity impacts.

Telegraph dispatches from other centers where the season has opened follow:

ATLANTIC CITY—A salute of fourteen guns one for each theatre, fired by the Janeway Battery Saturday morning formed the opening shots of Greater Movie Season. This brought thousands on the run to the beach where boy scouts displayed large banners reading, “Atlantic City Welcomes Greater Movie Season Which Opens Today.” From there the parade moved down Atlantic Avenue. All theatres and most of the exchanges were represented by floats; theatre employees marched, together with platoons of military units and mounted police. The country for twenty miles around is twenty-four sheeted; the fronts of street-cars carry one-sheets; and the Greater Movie Season slogan is born on the windshields of over two hundred jitneys speeding west. There are fifty thousand visitors in Atlantic City at present and with the intensive three weeks’ campaign that has been directed at them all houses and the two piers are getting extra month.

NEW ORLEANS—The season has been launched auspiciously, ably supported by ninety per cent of the leading theatre owners. The campaign has been sound and practical and without unnecessary trimmings. It is felt that exhibitors have learned much that will prove valuable next year.

DES MOINES—“The public is in accord with our campaign and know that greater and better motion pictures are to be shown during the coming season,” said A. G. Stolte, of the A. H. Blank Enterprise whose efforts have been largely responsible for the successful opening of Greater Movie Season here. “The present line-up of attraction being booked from August to December promises exceptional business, and we are convinced the public of the sincerity of the Greater Movie slogan.”

DALLAS—The season opened with capacity audiences all day. Newspapers have given splendid editorial support. While no actual figures regarding box-office increases can be quoted, Mr. Charnisky of the Capitol, for one, declares himself thoroughly sold on the movement and looks forward to it as a yearly event.

French Production Alliance for "U"

Laemmle Signs Contract for Joint Filming in Paris of "The Man Who Laughs"

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal Pictures corporation, has signed a contract with the Societe Generale de Films, Paris, for the co-production by the two companies of "L'Homme qui Rit" ("The Man Who Laughs") by Victor Hugo, according to announcement this week by Rene Batigne, managing director in New York for the French firm.

The contract was signed by Mr. Laemmle, who is now in Europe on his annual trip, and the Duke d'Ayen, president of the Societe Generale de Films, the holding company of the producers of "The Miracile of the Wolves."

This move comes as a striking confirmation of predictions made in the series of articles now running in Motion Picture News on the European situation, to the effect that American concern would find it advantageous to enter into alliances with European producers and distributors for the mutual production of pictures of an international character.

The Victor Hugo story, "The Man Who Laughs," has long been sought by American film companies, but the rights were controlled by the European firm. In most European countries, a copyright runs for 99 years after the death of the author, making the situation in regard to the classics quite different than in America.

John Barrymore appeared on Broadway a few years ago in a version of "The Man Who Laughs," which attracted some little attention at that time. The story is a vivid one, dealing with a man who is punished for a small offense by being slashed across the face with a sword, widening his mouth to a hideous and perpetual grin. This provides the basis for a dramatic and moving tale.

An important feature of the production contract entered into is the fact that Universal will select the cast, to be made up of American and French players, with a leading American male star in the lead. Universal will also have a hand in the general supervision of the production. Fuller details of the precise arrangement will be made public shortly.

Universal will distribute the picture in America, while the French company will presumably handle it in France in the same manner as "The Miracle of the Wolves" was distributed.

Plans for the production of "The Man Who Laughs" have been under way for some time by the Societe Generale de Films, and were actively under discussion at the time the Motion Picture News representative was in Paris. It was particularly desired to find a subject which would be a worthy successor in importance to "The Miracle of the Wolves," and the directors felt that "The Man Who Laughs" was especially suitable from this standpoint.

The alliance with Universal for the production and distribution of the picture will increase the scope of these plans, since with American distribution assured it will be possible to film the story on the most elaborate scale.

Positive Exports Show Striking Gain

Department of Commerce Figures Indicate Firm Upward Trend in Film Shipments

PRELIMINARY figures just issued by the Department of Commerce show that exports of negatives from the United States for the month of June reached a total linear footage of 26,803,969 at a declared value of $598,199. This is slightly over 2,000,000 feet more than was sent abroad for the month of May and over double the quantity exported during June, 1924.

Slight Negative Drop

For the month of June, 926,944 linear feet of negatives were exported at a declared value of $412,284. This is about 100,000 feet less than what were sent overseas during May and a little less than 75,000 feet under what were exported during the same period last year.

For the fiscal year which comprises the 12 months ending June 30, 1925, preliminary Department of Commerce figures show exports of positives to the amount of 210,452,857 linear feet valued at $8,739,786. This shows a net increase of over 67,000,000 feet over exports of positives for the preceding fiscal year.

With respect to individual countries the United Kingdom with 47,000,000 feet approximately as about 13,000,000 feet the year before topped the list. Next came Canada with 22,000,000 feet in round numbers—about 4,000,000 feet more than the year before. Mexico ranked third, her total was also about 22,000,000 feet, or 5,000,000 feet more than for the fiscal year 1923-24. Argentine, France, Brazil and Japan followed in order with figures from 10,000,000 to 16,000,000 feet—except Japan, which took about 7,000,000. These all showed gains over last year—France more than double—with the exception of Japan which showed a slight loss.

Exports of negatives for the fiscal year under consideration reached a total of 9,393,580 linear feet valued at $1,894,314 as compared with 7,319,835 linear feet valued at $1,187,093 for the fiscal year 1923-24. France, Germany and the United Kingdom continue to be our largest customers for these.

Large Gain for Year

While it does not afford any direct comparison, it is interesting to note that American exports of positives for the fiscal year topped by over 40,000,000 feet exports of positives for the calendar year 1923, while exports of negatives for the fiscal period reached about 1,000,000 feet above similar totals for the calendar period.
“Schaufenster-Theater,” Seen as European Objective

First Runs Needed Abroad By American Firms

By L. C. Moen

WHEN American executives go abroad these days, they are not on pleasure bent, or at least not entirely. European affairs are in a state of flux—anything may happen and many anxious eyes are directed from America across the sea. Not only are some of the European companies rousing themselves but the American firms are beginning to compete with one another in real earnestness.

An expression has been coined in Germany which sums up the present objective of the leading American companies abroad (identical, incidentally, with their objective at home). This expression is “Schaufenster-Theater” — Show-window Theatres.

As explained last week in part, the “battle of theatre seats” is assuming much the same complexion in Europe that it bears here, further complicated by certain peculiarities of the Continental situation. I stated last week that the heaviest contenders at the moment are the three leading producer-distributor-exhibitor firms, Famous Players, First National and Metro-Goldwyn.

But there are others. Albert Warner is abroad for Warner Brothers. Winfield R. Sheehan is on the other side and will probably remain there most of the summer in the interests of Fox. Schiller and Rubin are in Europe for Metro-Goldwyn. Abe Berman and Nathan Burkan are looking into matters for United Artists. Carl Laemmle is abroad for the summer as usual. Vogel has been arranging matters for Producers Distributing Corporation.

All of this affords some clue to the deep interest in the European market prevailing at the moment. And by way of clearing the ground for what is to follow, let us consider briefly the position in which some of the leading American concerns find themselves:

Famous Players: As stated last week, this concern occupies easily the strongest position of any American concern in the European field. Having been the first to approach the problem seriously, it is strongly entrenched, with many theatres and a powerful distributing organization. In the matter of production abroad on a reciprocal basis, which will be dealt with at length later, it also has some little experience to serve as a guide in future ventures. It is working independently of European concerns, building its own complete organization.

First National: This company has also built its European revenue up to a considerable point, partly through European distributors and partly through its own exchanges. Its activities seem to be tending toward a development similar to Famous Players, with its own first run houses, exchanges and perhaps some production abroad. This is pure conjecture, however, and the general plans of First National may be said to be in the stage of investigation and consideration rather than definite action. One or more of the principal executives will probably go abroad shortly to study conditions and lay plans for an offensive to meet the competition of Famous Players. This will be vitally necessary, if the company is to compete with Famous Players on the home market. With Famous Players grossing a million dollars a month in the foreign field, First National must build its own European income up to something like that figure if it is to compete successfully at home on the American market.

Metro-Goldwyn: Through its alliance with Gaumont, this concern immediately leaps into a more important position in the foreign market. If it can continue to work in association with, or through, such concerns as Gaumont in France, Ufa in Germany, Le Mat in Scandinavia, and others, it will probably be unnecessary for this company to build theatres abroad, though it would not be surprising if some production affiliations developed.

United Artists Interested

United Artists: This company’s interest in a reciprocal producing and distributing arrangement has been publicly announced. United Artists, handling a relatively limited number of pictures each year, could easily accommodate a few high grade foreign releases each year, provided that they were produced under suitable supervision—and provided that it obtained important first run representation abroad. Had the deal with Ufa, for instance, materialized United Artists would have obtained important first run showings in Germany in return for distribution here of certain pictures made by Ufa under United Artists’ editorial supervision. This deal did not go through, for certain reasons, but other important developments may be expected. Much of the United Artists’ product is likely to be of great value on the European market, particularly in view of a development which will be dealt with at length later—the wanting importance of the program picture in Europe. William S. Hart (known abroad as “Rio Jim”) and Chaplin are easily two of the very biggest stars with the European public, and their pictures for United Artists will carry the remainder of the product.

Warner Brothers: By the acquisition of Vitagraph, this company obtained a group of foreign offices that materially strengthen its position. Albert Warner recently announced abroad that his company would like “show window theatres” in London, Paris and Berlin, for exploitation first run purpose; his company embraces much that is likely to be popular abroad, including the Ernest Lubitsch and John Barrymore productions.

Producers’ Status Abroad

Producers Distributing Corporation: Now handling its foreign affairs through William Vogel—but keep your eye on this company. John Finn had some little chance to view the European situation while still with Famous Players, and is in a position to approach this field intelligently and forcefully. Some important distributing connections have already been made, and this concern may easily become an important factor abroad, particularly if it were to enter into reciprocal distributing arrangements here.

Universal: This is another of the pioneers in the European field. Universal covers England and the Continent, central Europe and the Far East pretty completely. Laemmle stated at the Milwaukeee convention that it was the foreign revenue which had enabled Universal to keep its head above water, and there is no questioning this company’s importance abroad in its field. Owns theatres in London and Leeds, England, but has not gone into this heavily. Operates its own exchanges, largely. Meanwhile, watch for some important developments in a production way in connection with Laemmle’s trip.

Fox: Much of this company’s strength, also, has come from its pioneer work abroad. Fox has its own exchanges throughout Europe and the Far East, covering much the same key points as Universal. The Tom Mays brought considerable clout to Fox, which will probably be reflected in the interest in these subjects. This company is strongly entrenched in its own particular niche in the foreign market. Winfield R. Sheehan is now abroad, reorganizing and strengthening the field there, and some interesting announcements may be expected upon his return.

Film Booking Office: This company has many strong connections abroad and has excellent distribution in certain areas. The head of the company, Major H. C. S. Thomas, is one of the best informed men in the American industry on European conditions, and his next trip abroad is likely to see some important moves toward strengthening this firm’s position.

Greater Movie Season Opens

INDIANAPOLIS—Greater Movie Season opening on Sunday was a big success at all theatres. In addition to special advertising space, the season was featured in individual displays. The campaign here illustrated so graphically the manner in which public spirit and enthusiasm can be developed by a co-operative drive, that city officials and business men will adopt the working plans for a civic demonstration to be known as Greater Indianapolis week, scheduled for September.

TOLEDO—All theatres participating in Greater Movie Season have started off on increased business, according to F. E. Walters of the Temple Theatres, who controlled the campaign. The mayor issued a general proclamation which was published in all newspapers. Theatre-fronts are decorated and a large band is paraded across the main thoroughfare. The Toledo News-Bee, conducting the essay contest, is offering thirteen hundred and seventy-three prizes in addition to the three national awards.

Encouraged by the campaign’s success, the large theatres intend to carry the season through into September.

The Greater Movie Season was inaugurated in Cincinnati last week with only six of the city’s movie houses participating. These are the Capitol, the Greater City, the Walnut, the Grand, the Family, Lyric and Palace and are all of the I. Libson Circuit of theatres. The theatres were decorated both out and in and all in all they presented an appearance of a gala occasion.

The Greater Movie Season campaign in Atlanta broke last Sunday, and is now swinging its way along to a new era in the picture houses. The town was plaedared with twenty-four sheets, all the theatres decorated with banners and pennants, waistcoating the season, and the newspaper advertising was backed up with substantial stories, furnished by Earle E. Griggs, publicity director, and his assistant, Ernest Geyer.

A six cylinder closed motor car, a Baby Grand piano, a Trip to Los Angeles and return for two, a Diamond studded wrist watch, a Combination radio Columbia phonograph, a Gold engraved pass to all theatres in city, and Personally autographed photograph of movie stars; those are the list of prizes which Kansas City exhibitors will offer in connection with the Greater Movie Season national essay. The Kansas City Star, with a daily circulation of 500,000, has agreed to “carry” the contest by reprinting the winning essays on “What The Movies Mean To Me.”

Plans for the three-week celebration in Kansas City in conjunction with the Greater Movie Season campaign practically are completed. Mayor Albert I. Beach, who is on a vacation, has been requested to issue a proclamation, while more than 200 billboards will be used in the city. There already having been 2,000 pennants purchased and hung about the city.

Greater Movie Season is starting off in a manner that is highly complimentary to the four theatres of Salt Lake city that are putting forth the utmost in effort and capital to make it an epochal event in motion picture circles of this section. The Kinema Parma mount Empress, Pantages and Victory theatres are the houses that are behind the movement.

Special productions, programs and prologues are being featured the opening week of the drive. Indications point to a splendid success locally for the season.

Greater Movie Season in Detroit and Michigan in general promises to be a huge success. Every theatre is presenting especially selected programs. The essay contest is being conducted by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan in conjunction with the motion picture department of the Detroit Times.

One of the longest and largest parades ever held in the history of Denver marked the opening of Greater Movie Season. Thousands of people lined the downtown streets and watched a pageant of cars and floats interspersed with bands and orchestras which extended for a length of three miles. At exactly eleven o’clock A. M. six bombs were exploded from the roof of the Denver Post and the giant procession began to march. The parade was led by the Denver City Officials, a squadron of mounted police, the United States Army band from Ft. Logan followed by a company of soldiers, and a representation from the Denver Fire Department. Then came scores of floats, bands, orchestras, and highly decorated private automobiles, followed by “Diamond” Jack Alterie and a half hundred yelling cowboys.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officially inaugurated the Greater Movie Season on the Pacific Coast Monday evening at Loew’s State Theatre in Los Angeles with a gala occasion marking the presentation of “The Unholy Three.”

Mayor Cryer represented the city and introduced Fred Niblo who spoke on behalf of the Meta-Goldwyn-Mayer organization, and acted as master of ceremonies, introducing Irving G. Thalberg, Harry Rapf and the M-G-M stars, including Lon Chaney, star of “The Unholy Three,” Marion Davies, John Gilbert, Lillian Gish, Ramon Novarro, Mae Murray, Norma Shearer, Buster Keaton and Jaekie Coogan as well as Eleanor Boardman, Allen Pringle and Pauline Starke.

“Greater Motion Picture Week” was launched in St. Louis, Mo., Saturday, August 1, under very favorable circumstances.

The weather was ideal for amusements; cool enough to make an indoor show desirable, but not too cold for the venturesome ones who preferred the alfresco style of entertainment.

The week’s offering of picture was in keeping with the spirit of the season.

St. Louis was given some splendid outside aid in putting over Greater Motion Picture Week when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer’s magnificent 650-foot special train breezed into the city via the McKinley Bridge on Friday, July 31, and participated in the opening of the festivities on the following day.

New Companies Are Granted New York Charters

Newly incorporated companies planning to enter the motion picture business in its various branches in New York state, and chartered during the second quarter of the secretary of state, included the following: Dependable Film Corporation, capitalization not specified, Charles S. Goetz, Betty Goetz, William Goetz, New York; The Village Follies Attractions, Inc., $100,000, William Kaufman, Israel Finkel, Ida Shumin, New York city; 45th and Broadway Corporation, David Blum, Irving M. Greenfield, Matie Hammenstein, New York.

Bomb Damages Detroit Picture House

The Imperial theatre at 7030 Michigan avenue in Detroit, is the latest to be damaged by a bomb explosion. The missile, which police said was planted in the box office of the house, wrecked the entire front of the structure as well as damaging windows in the neighborhood. No reason has been ascertained for the affair.

Rothacker Making Picture of Labor History

This history of the development of Labor will be the subject of a film which the American Federation of Labor has commissioned the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co, of Chicago to produce. The feature which has been in the course of production for over a month will be completed in six weeks.

U. S. Supreme Court to Review Eastman Case

THE United States Supreme Court will be asked to review the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals denying the right of the Federal Labor Commissioner to compel Eastman Kodak Company to dispose of certain laboratories which the commission has determined are used for the purpose of fighting efforts to bring about the use in this country of foreign motion picture film.

The Court upheld the commission’s order requiring the Eastman Kodak Company and the Allied Laboratories’ Association to abandon the agreement under which the latter would import no foreign film if the former refrained from operating its laboratories.

The Eastman Kodak case was bitterly fought by the respondents and has been before the commission for a long time. Establishment of the laboratories for producing positives came about, the commission was told, when the kodak company learned that certain Eastman laboratories were using imported film, and the company threatened to put its laboratories into operation and “cut under” independent laboratories. The respondents agreed to restrict themselves to the use of Eastman film.

Following the decision of the commission, the Eastman Kodak Company carried the case to the courts, where that part of the commission’s decision requiring the abandonment of the agreement was upheld. The court held, however, that the commission exercises administrative and not judicial power and is without authority to order that a citizen sell property acquired in the course of business.
Storey Wins Promotion With Pathe
Is Appointed to Newly-Created Office of Assistant General Manager, While Two Other Executives Also Advance

John E. Storey has been promoted to the newly created office of Assistant General Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and three others have won executive promotions as a result. Storey will assist Elmer Pearson, Vice-President and General Manager of the company.

Storey will succeed in the office of general sales manager by Harry Scott, who has been serving as feature sales manager. The post of feature sales manager will be filled by Pat Campbell, special feature representative. These promotions became effective Monday, August 3rd.

According to the Pathe announcement the past year has witnessed so overwhelming an increase in the duties and responsibilities of General Manager Pearson, that officials of the company decided to create the new post of Assistant General Manager.

Storey has been with Pathe for so long a period and has been so closely associated with the firm's personnel and administrative activities that he is admirably qualified to assist Mr. Pearson in the work of directing the sales and production affairs of the company.

Storey is a Canadian by birth and received his education in Northern New York. In his early business career, he spent a number of years in the executive office of Middle West Railway companies. In the fall of 1915, he decided that the motion picture business was a coming industry and made up his mind to break into it. He entered the employ of the Vitagraph and spent seven months as a salesman for that company in Kansas City under Mr. Pearson who was then Vitagraph Manager in that city. Then followed a year as Branch Manager for the George Kleine System in Kansas City.

About that time he joined Pathe and served for a year as Pathe Branch Manager in Kansas City. From this point he was promoted to the position of Pathe District Manager in charge of all Pacific Coast and Western Branches. Afterwards, he was called to the Home Office to act as Assistant Manager of Exchanges. When Pathe took over Associated Exhibitors, Inc., Storey was the man selected for the responsible post of Sales Manager of that organization, and later, when Arthur S. Kane and his associates took control of Associated, Mr. Storey returned to Pathe as General Representative with field supervision over Branches, from which position he was promoted to be General Sales Manager.

The new Pathe General Sales Manager, Harry Scott, was appointed feature Sales Manager in October, 1923, after a long and varied career in amusement enterprises. For a number of years he was actively identified with theatrical interests and for five years was press representative for Ringling Brothers' Circus. Leaving the circus business for motion picture work, he made his first film affiliation with George Kleine for whom he managed Branch Offices in Columbus, Dallas, and Philadelphia. He was later promoted to the post of Eastern Division Sales Manager for the Kleine organization which he held for some time. At the termination of his connection with Kleine, Mr. Scott joined the Goldwyn organization for which he served as Special Representative.

Chicago Musicians Ask Big Increase

Chicago union musicians already probably the highest paid in the country have presented demands for a new wage and working agreement to start September seventh, when the present agreement expires, that are regarded exorbitant and unreasonable and will be bitterly resisted by the Chicago Exhibitors Association, headed by Business Manager Jack Miller. The demands include a twenty-five per cent wage increase, a guarantee of fifty-two weeks work a year, fifty per cent of scale added for musicians playing more than one instrument, the use of seven men in orchestras where four are now employed, and that any musician proving satisfactory after a two weeks tryout shall be retained for the full year. The minimum scale now paid is $52.50 for a thirty-two hour week with forty four weeks employment guaranteed.

Later he joined First National and for four years managed its Detroit office, resigning to become Detroit Branch Manager for Pathe. After nearly a year in this capacity, he came to New York where he was appointed New York Branch Manager for Educational, and later was made Manager of Distribution for Ritz-Carlton Pictures from which post he rejoined Pathe as Feature Sales Manager.

The new Feature Sales Manager, "Pat" Campbell, signs his name P. W. Campbell, but is known to newspaper men, exhibitors, exchange men, critics and reviewers the country over as "Pat" Campbell. In 1914, Campbell served as General Manager for his aunt, Mrs. Pat Campbell, the famous English actress, on her American tour, and later as Manager for George Tyler Productions in association with A. J. Erlanger. Then he entered the motion picture business and became affiliated with D. W. Griffith for whom he was General Sales Representative, handling the sale of all Griffith super-features of recent years.

From the Griffith organization, he went to Pathe as one of the Special Feature Representatives appointed by Mr. Scott in June to promote the new Harold Lloyd feature, "The Freshman."

Three Personnel Changes in Paramount Branches

George W. Weeks, Paramount distribution head, announces three changes in exchange personnel during the past week. M. C. Hughes, branch manager at Pittsburgh is succeeded by J. E. Fontaine, Cleveland branch manager, who in turn is succeeded by E. H. Brauer, branch manager at Columbus. Carl Weeks, salesman in the Columbus exchange, has been promoted to branch manager at Columbus.

Mr. Hughes has been in poor health for nearly a year, and returned to his duties at Pittsburgh this spring after a leave of absence of several months. On his return to work he found his condition had not improved sufficiently to enable him to carry on, and on his doctor's orders he asked to be relieved.

Cecil B. De Mille Denies All Affiliation With Famous Players or Others

Cecile B. de Mille in a letter to Miss Ray Lewis, editor of The Spotlight, declares that his production activities are absolutely independent, and that Producers Distributing Corporation is not connected with Famous Players, directly or indirectly.

In your issue of July 4th, you published an editorial headed, 'Cecile De Mille Is Your Distributing Company Independent? Please answer'.

"My answer is definite, without evasion or subterfuge. The producers Distributing Corporation is not connected with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, either directly or indirectly. My production and releasing activities are absolutely independent, without connection or alliance of any sort with the three firms mentioned in your editorial. It has been stated by some that I myself might be unaware of such an affiliation. This is untrue and impossible. "I have become an independent producer because I sincerely believe that independent production and exhibition must be maintained if this great business of ours is to continue to progress and prosper."

Censor Violation Fines Drop

Pennsylvania Statistics Show Only $240 Collected During Last Year

EVERY year since motion picture censorship was established in Pennsylvania, with the single exception of 1918, the amount of money collected in fines for violation of the Act under which the Board of Censors operates, has shown an annual decrease, until in the last year it was reduced to a mere $240. This is a drop from $2,635 collected in 1917. The only year since then in which this amount of fines was exceeded was 1918 when the total was $4,075.

These facts were disclosed by a statistical report of the board's work for the last fiscal year which has just been issued from the Capitol at Harrisburg. In the last year 22 subjects involving 116 reels of films were disapproved by the board, and within the year the censors approved 10,608 subjects embracing 16,720 reels.

July Capital Decreases

Month Shows Slight Increase in Number of Charters Filed

One hundred and forty-two new charters were issued to corporations during the month of July, according to a survey published by The Film Daily this week. This is an increase of but seven over the previous month. The amount of capital involved during June, however, is overwhelmingly greater than that of last month.

July is listed with $27,591,000 while the June group showed a total of $80,649,900 in active capital.

New York State leads in the month's charters with 60. California comes next with 21, and Delaware third with 17.

Nine corporations were granted charters in England and one in China. Delaware with $16,616,000 leads the field in listed capital.

Exhibition proved itself again the most active branch of the industry inasmuch as 62 theatre units were chartered. Production followed with 39, and distribution with 16.

The remaining 38 were claimed by exporting companies, laboratories, realty concerns, libraries, importers, and holding companies for studios.

Below is a resume of corporate activity since the first of the year:

Whitman Bennett Studios Moved to Brooklyn

The Whitman Bennett moving picture studios and the Bennett Book and Binding Company announce the removal of their quarters from 537 Riverdale Avenue, Yonkers, to 3921 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn.

Canada Statistics Show Per Capita Tax

Statistics recently issued in Canada serve to indicate how the amusement taxes in the respective Provinces of the Dominion fall upon the individual person, figures being given which show the per capita average for the tax year.

British Columbia, which has comparatively few theatres, leads in this respect according to the figures for 1924 just designated. The amusement tax there for the year was 46 cents per capita. The people of Manitoba came next with 46 cents per capita for the year and it is interesting to note that the Manitoba average is less than half of the amusement tax per head paid by the residents of British Columbia.

The Province of Ontario, with its numerous theatres and large population, had an amusement tax total which figured out at 43 cents per capita. Alberta, in fourth place in terms of revenue, collected 25 cents per capita in the amusement tax for 1924. Nova Scotia was fifth with an average of 26 cents per person while New Brunswick was sixth with 16 cents per head.

Would Ban Film on Cars and Busses

A ban upon the transportation of moving picture films on street cars and busses has been asked of the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia by the Washington Film Board of Trade. This action has been asked as a means of preventing any disaster such as occurred upon a Boston street car some time ago.

In making its request to the commission, the film board of trade points out that moving picture films are a potential fire danger, and that accidents might occur through no fault of the person carrying them.

Commission Refuses Plea of West Coast Theatres

Following a hearing on the question of its jurisdiction, the Federal Trade Commission at Washington has denied a motion by attorneys for the West Coast Theatres, Inc., to quash the complaint against the organization, and will probably hold hearings for the taking of testimony early in October. The West Coast Theatres have been given an extension of time to September 15 in which to file answer to the commission's formal charges.

New Roxy Corporation Files Charter

The charter of the new Roxy Theatre Corporation was filed in the offices of the Secretary of State at Albany, New York, during the week, and reveals S. L. Rothafel as president of the corporation and W. E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager.

The corporation was formed for the purpose of building and operating the recently announced chain of motion picture theatres in the New York City. The first of these to be erected will be "The Roxy" at Seventh Avenue and Fifteenth Street. It will have a seating capacity of 2,500 and will be opened to the public in the fall of 1926.
Building of Big Theatres Continues Baltimore, San Francisco, Chicago and Omaha Figure in Important News of the Week

IMPORTANT theatre news of the week centers in Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, and Omaha.

Three large houses are to be built in Baltimore, according to well founded reports. The companies involved in the planned building operations are the Stanley Company of Philadelphia, the Marcus Loew Interests of New York and an unnamed company which is represented by Thomas D. Soriero, formerly general manager of the Combined Whitehurst Interests in Baltimore.

According to H. C. McGuirk, a director of the Stanley organization, that company is planning not only to build another playhouse, but is contemplating the purchase of another theatre.

Mr. Soriero is keeping very silent concerning his plans and the company he represents but it is understood that he plans a large theatre and office building on North Howard Street.

The Loew Interests formerly had the Hippodrome theatre there, which is now operated by the Keith Interests of New York, through F. C. Schanberger. But the present report is that he will build another playhouse and office building in the same part of the city.

In Chicago, Balaban & Katz will build a $4,000,000 theatre on Washington boulevard, Crawford and West End Aves. It will be the first for the newly-organized company owned by B. & K. and Lubliner & Trinz. Novel features will be a miniature theatre for children, a kindergarten, nursery and playground. A jeweled tower will rise seven stories above the street. The new house will be in Spanish Renaissance style.

Orchestra pits and organ consoles on elevators, a big freezing plant and a new kind of indirect lighting will be used. Construction begins in the Fall. Rapp & Rapp are the architects.

Another big house for Chicago is announced by Harry Reckas, who will build a 2,200 seat theatre, to cost $1,000,000 at Thirty-Fifth and South Halstead streets. With the return to San Francisco of Sam Harris and Irving Ackerman of Ackerman & Harris a $4,000,000 theatre program was announced. The latest program calls for a $1,000,000, 2,400 seat theatre in Portland, Oregon, and structures at Los Angeles, Oakland, Fresno, San Leandro and Hayward. The Fresno house will be completed within three months.

Announcement has just been made by Herbert L. Rothchild, who recently sold the Granada, California, Imperial and New St. Francis theatres to the Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation, that he has purchased the Coliseum and Alexandria theatres from the Levins. These two houses are among the largest residential motion picture palaces on the Pacific Coast.

Sid Grauman, Hollywood theatre owner, while in San Francisco stated that he had under consideration there a site on which to build a monster new motion picture house. San Francisco's boom in theatre building reached a new high mark with the announcement of Samuel Hices Levin, of plans for the new theatre in the neighborhood sections of the city. Ground was broken this week for the new theatre at Balboa street and Thirty-eighth avenue; ground is about to be broken for a second at Divisadero and Hayes streets; the third at Polk and Broadway and the fourth at Fillmore and California streets, will be started as soon as leases on existing buildings expire. The house will sit between 1,200 to 2,000 persons.

Omaha is promised another imposing downtown motion picture theatre. Sam H. Goldberg and W. R. McFarland, representing the World Realty company, signed a 99-year lease for the northeast corner of Sixteenth and Douglas street, 132 x 132 feet, and in the heart of Omaha's "white way."

The corner of this site is now occupied by an old two-story building and part by the Empire theatre which is operated by the World Realty company. The announced plan is to erect a 12-story theatre and hotel building or theatre and office building. The new building will necessitate wrecking the Empire theatre.

Terms of the lease provide for payment of $55,000 a year for first five years; $61,000 a year for 25 years thereafter and $65,000 a year for the succeeding years. The value of the lease is placed at $46,000,000. The World Realty company now owns the 99-year lease on properties occupied by their downtown theatres: World, Moon, Sun and Empire. They also operate the Muse, located just outside of the downtown district.

This is the second large motion picture theatre deal in Omaha during the last few weeks. Recently A. H. Blank of Des Moines, head of A. H. Blank Enterprises, Inc., signed a lease for a tract at Twentieth and Farnam streets, where a large movie theatre will be erected without delay, according to announcement.

Harmony Move in New York M. P. T. O.
At O'Reilly's Suggestion, Leaders of Three Zones Will Meet to Form Plans for Co-Operation

CHARLES L. O'REILLY, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, and a former head of the New York State M. P. T. O., is taking the first step toward bringing back harmony within the ranks of the state association and a complete cooperation to all three zones. The other two zones met recently in Syracuse, and elected William Dillon, of Ithaca, a president of the New York State M. P. T. O. New York city and the metropolitan area had no part in the election of Mr. Dillon, the zone being without representation at the meeting.

In his letter to President Dillon, Mr. O'Reilly has taken the first step in closing a breach that has existed for several months, suggesting that a conference be held in the near future as a means of bringing reconciliation among the exhibitors. Mr. O'Reilly suggests that the conference include Jules Michaels, chairman of the Buffalo Zone; Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, chairman of the Albany Zone; Charles Hayman, of Niagara Falls, as well as himself. Mr. O'Reilly to represent the exhibitors from the metropolis.

No decision has yet been reached as to the time or place for such conference, although President Dillon as well as Mr. Michaels and Mr. Buettner are heartily in accord with the idea. Owing to the fact that August is more or less given over to vacation, the meeting probably will not be held until the last of the month or the first part of September.

In his letter to President Dillon Mr. O'Reilly congratulated Mr. Dillon upon his appointment by the office and likewise assured him of his support. Mr. O'Reilly continues by saying that it was at his suggestion that the state headquarters be moved to Albany, and then goes on to say that he is in hopes that something will be done to the end that the present duplication of duties from exhibitors in New York state will become a thing of the past. Mr. O'Reilly repeats that in order to be a 100 per cent organization, the exhibitors in New York state at the present time, duties must be paid to three separate and distinct organizations and that the method is being condemned by exhibitors on the grounds that it is costly and absolutely uncalled for.

The idea of doing away with the necessity of exhibitors paying duties to three organizations, appears to have appealed strongly to President Dillon, for in his reply to Mr. O'Reilly, he places particular emphasis on this point, stating that he is favorable to a conference such as Mr. O'Reilly suggested. President Dillon suggests that delegates from the zones in New York state meet with delegates from the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce on matters of statewide importance, a scheme that would do away with the necessity of exhibitors paying dues to two organizations in this state, allowing them to belong to the national organization if they saw fit.

President Dillon is emphatic, however, that the exhibitors must still run and control their own organization under the zone idea. Mr. Dillon concludes by stating that everyone of the upstate exhibitors can be banked upon to get behind any movement that would further protect the theatre owner's existence.
Additional Representation is Provided By Change in New Jersey M. P. T. O.

THE board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, at a meeting held in New York last week, created an associate directorate to take care of the additional representation necessitated by the growth of the organization.

The following members were elected to fill the new post: Lew Newbury, Bellevue; E. Thornton Kelly, Palisades; J. J. Unger, Newark; A. W. Hill, Paulsboro; L. Morton Lewis, Atlantic City; and Lew Audobon.

The following resolutions were also passed:

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, in meeting assembled in New York on Tuesday, August 4th, 1925, that we commend the courageous stand of these directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who stood steadfast in their support of the Play Date Bureau and so preserved the cause of the independent theatre owner, producer and distributor.

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, in meeting assembled in New York on Tuesday, August 4th, 1925, that the work of Sydney S. Cohen as a theatre owner leader, be commended and that we offer Mr. Cohen our hearty congratulations and appreciation for his efforts to protect and advance the cause of the independent theatre owner of this country.

Schwartz is Extending Chain

Plans Eight Additional Houses for Long Island With Three Starting This Summer

H. SCHWARTZ is making elaborate plans to add materially to his theatre chain in Brooklyn and Long Island with the addition of eight houses, three of which will be under way before the Summer is over.

The first of the Schwartz houses will be under construction at Flushing in the near future. In fact the work of demolishing the old buildings on the theatre site is now under way. This house will have a seating capacity of 2500 and in addition to the theatre the building will contain stores and offices.

The plans call for a large stage, and while the exact policy of the house has not yet been determined, it will be possible to present vaudeville, picture or legitimate attractions.

At Avenue U and Coney Island Avenue, Schwartz’s organization is now building the foundation for a 2000 seat vaudeville and picture house. This theatre, scheduled to open early in the spring of 1926, will provide a high class playhouse for a section of Brooklyn that up to the present time is without any form of amusement.

The plans for another Schwartz house, at Kings Highway and Flatbush Avenue, have been filed in the Building Department, and the excavations will be started in August. These two theatres in conjunction with the Kingsway, Farragut, Albenardle, Rialto, Linden and Century will give Schwartz eight houses in Flatbush.

Following closely upon the 3 houses above mentioned will be theatres in Freeport, Huntington, Baldwin, Conova and Port Washington, with others to be added in the near future.

In addition to these Long Island houses, Schwartz is now operating the Merrick and Rialto Theatres in Jamaica.

Weinberger Quits Schulberg

Resigns Post as Sales Manager to Broaden His Field of Operations

MACK D. WEINBERGER, one of the best known figures in the sales end of the motion picture industry, it became known this week, has resigned as Sales Manager of B. P. Schulberg Productions. No announcement of Mr. Weinberger’s future plans has yet been made though it is known that his action of this week comes as a result of a desire to broaden his field of operations and is in perfect harmony with the Schulberg organization.

J. G. Buchman, in charge of distribution for the latter concern, is enthusiastic regarding the results obtained by Mack Weinberger in securing nation-wide representation for the Schulberg product during the past year.

Previous to his connection with the Schulberg organization Mack Weinberger held many responsible positions in the sales field, principally with national sales organizations and including a number of years as Sales Director of the D. W. Griffith enterprises. He is known from coast to coast, both by exhibitors and territorial buyers, and in particular has a specialized knowledge of the Eastern field.

In and Out of Town

FRED F. SULLY, Philadelphia correspondent of Motion Picture News, sailed on the De Grasse, August 5, for a five weeks’ trip to Europe.

H. J. Lorch, special representative for Paramount, sailed for Paris en route to Stockholm.

JACK Cohen of Columbia Pictures is in Maine on vacation.

SAM Sax arrived in New York this week after a two months’ stay in Los Angeles.

NAT G. ROTHSTEIN, director of publicity, advertising and exploitation for F. B. O., left July 31 for a four weeks’ holiday at Cobossee Colony, Maine.

COLVIN W. BROWN, vice-president in charge of distribution for F. B. O., returned this week from a trip to Minneapolis, Detroit and Cleveland. The News last week erroneously referred to Mr. Brown as vice-president in charge of production.

E. BRUCE JOHNSON, foreign manager for First National, is back from an extended trip abroad.

H. Goetz, rare stock manufacturer, is in New York from Germany via Mexico City.

BEN BLUMENTHAL, of Export and Import is returning to New York from Europe on the Paris, due August 12. Gilbert Miller is on the same boat.

Artclass Opens Office in Indianapolis

Lonis Weiss announces that the Artclass-Renown Pictures Exchange in Indianapolis will be open for business this week at 432-434 North Illinois St. This Artclass Exchange will be under the active direction of Renown and will be temporarily controlled by the Chicago office.
Lord's Day Alliance Will Ask Sunday Ban

The Lord's Day Alliance, a reform organization in New York State, has already served notice on the New York State Legislature, that it may expect to have for its consideration next winter, a bill that will prohibit practically all forms of amusement and recreation on the Sabbath. In many respects the bill will be similar to the Jenks measure which was introduced during the last session of the Legislature, and which was referred to a committee with a subsequent hearing that was plainly disappointing to its supporters. When the bill is introduced next winter, however, its advocates declare that it will have the support of the churches generally throughout the state and will be in a much stronger position to demand consideration than the one of last winter. Around the Capitol, it is not expected that the bill will receive much consideration, owing to its drastic features.

George E. Guise Resigns Miles Management

The resignation of George E. Guise, general manager of the Charles H. Miles theatres in Detroit, was received with regret by his numerous local friends during the past week.

Coming to Detroit in 1919 as publicity director for the Majestic theatre, a former motion picture house, he was made manager of that house within four weeks. Later he was transferred to the Orpheum theatre and it was from this post that he was appointed general manager by Miles in April, 1921. Guise before coming to Detroit spent ten years as a newspaper man in Minneapolis.

Censors Fail to Close Los Angeles Night Shows

Censorship which has been bitter in its fight to close the all-night shows of Los Angeles theatres suffered another set-back when the local City Council tabled the motion of the censor board for four weeks on the ground that no action could be taken at present because of the lack of evidence to prove the contentions of the prosecution.

Prominent club women and ministers testified that the all-night theatres were guarded by policemen, that nothing offensive or immoral was found and that the houses should be permitted to run under the same right that night restaurants and taxicabs operated.

Reichenbach Will Open Own Offices

Harry L. Reichenbach, exhibitor, has organized his own company to represent and exploit stars and attractions of the independent stage and screen world. The organization has taken offices in the Strass Building in New York and will launch their activities about August 10th.

Mark Lachmann will be associated with Reichenbach in the new venture. Both have had wide experience in this field. They will personally exploit and publicize each of their clients in campaigns that will cover the world.

Comerford Goes Abroad for Six Weeks' Tour

E. Comerford, head of the big Comerford Circuit in Pennsylvania, sailed for Europe this week on the Berengaria on a six weeks' tour. He was accompanied by Mrs. Comerford, their daughter, Miss Muriel, and Mr. and Mrs. Cadore.

Mr. Comerford recently returned from the meeting of the M. P. T. O. A. District which he played a prominent part and was elected a member of the new Administrative Committee.

Luxury Taxes Harmful to Austrian Production

According to a recent report to the Department of Commerce from its Vienna office, the decision of the Saseko Film A. G. to suspend its production in Austria, transferring it to Germany, is symptomatic of the difficulties under which Austrian film products are at present laboring.

Viennese motion pictures are harming to a great extent by the burden of high luxury taxes and the unprofitable situation has not been undertaken. According to recent reports the possibilities of exploitation of a film in Austria are even less than in the Balkan States.

In Austria, according to the film associations, the production of films and moving pictures meets with extreme indifference on the part of the authorities as contrasted with the interest shown in other lands and as a result the profit from such productions is extremely small.

Famous Players Canada Head Urges Use of Organ

W. F. Davis, former proprietor of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, and now attached to the Toronto headquarters staff of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has adopted the policy of urging upon theatre managers to make more use of the organ exclusively in playing with the feature picture of a programme. He believes that a big orchestra playing wonderful orchestral music, detracts from a feature film, and that a softly-played organ can play with a feature photoplay better than anything else. His advice, which he himself followed at the Winnipeg Met., is to use the orchestra for musical specialties and also to play with the short film subjects, such as the news weeklies and the comedies, when considerable jazz can be injected into the proceedings.

“Schufenster-Theatern” are Objective in Europe

Pathe: Being the outgrowth of what was once the subsidiary of a European firm, this company, too, has access to strong connections in certain parts of Europe. The short subject situation, which will have to be dealt with in a later article, is slowly improving in Europe, a fact which will boost Pathe’s importance abroad as the revenue from short subjects increases.

Educational: As in the case of Pathe, this company will be in a position to profit as the market for short subjects improves in Europe. At the moment, short subjects are largely exploitation vehicles like such, as was true five years ago in America.

This will give some sketchy notion of what the leading American firms are doing abroad, without considering the European firms that will also play an important part in the coming struggle.

The next consideration is the nature of the market and what, methods must be adopted in dealing with it. This will be taken up in succeeding issues, according to the natural political, racial and economic complexion of Europe, as follows:

Paris and the French Market, including France, Spain, Italy, Belgium, the French colonies, portions of Turkey, and the so-called Latin peoples generally.

Berlin and the Central European Market, including Germany, Austria, Holland, Scandinavia, Hungary, Russia, the Balkans, and the Germanic group of peoples.

London and the British Empire Market, including Great Britain, Australia, India, and the British possessions generally.

The nature of these widely different markets, their business methods, domestic production, public taste and economic condition will be taken up in my next three articles.

Pathe Cameraman Killed in Crossing Street

Charles C. Pritchard, a studio cameraman was killed last week when hit by an automobile while crossing the street in front of his home in Chicago. He was resting up following his last assignment, the Scopes trial in Dayton, Tenn.

Pritchard had been on the staff of Pathe News for seven years and in that time covered some of the biggest stories and most dangerous assignments. He came through them all without mishap.

Ben Verschleiser Buys Los Angeles Site

Ben Verschleiser announces the purchase of a site in Los Angeles, at the corner of Ninth and Hill streets, for the erection of a modern motion picture theatre for the exclusive run of independent productions. Construction will begin immediately.

Associated with Mr. Verschleiser in the project are Melvin Briskin of Banner Productions, Henry Ginsberg of the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation, and Sam Verschleiser, supervisor of production for Banner.
Lawrence Gray Cast for Next Swanson Production

Lawrence Gray has departed for Hollywood where he will play the male lead in Gloria Swanson's next Paramount starring vehicle, "Stage Struck."

Gray is a native Californian, having been born and educated in San Francisco. His first film work was in the production department at the Famous Players-Lasky Studio in Hollywood.

Universal to Film Story by Svend Gade

Universal announces it will produce an original story written by Svend Gade, the director, in collaboration with Charles Whittaker, the scenarist. Gade, a well-known Danish stage designer, producer and director, recently signed a long-term contract with Universal, for which company he has directed "Fifth Avenue Models," "Siege" and "Peacock Feathers."

Macfadden Has Signed Faire Binney and Owen Moore

R. R. Riskin, general manager of production for the Bernarr Macfadden True Story Film Company has signed Owen Moore and Faire Binney to play the leading roles in the second Macfadden production to be released by Astor Distributing Corporation. The story is "False Pride" and it will be published simultaneously in the Macfadden True Story magazine with the release of the picture.

Warner Bros. Complete Cast for "Compromise"

The cast of "Compromise" which is in the course of production at the Warner Bros. studios has been completed. Alan Crosland is directing and Irene Rich, Louise Fazenda, Clive Brook, Pauline Garon, Helen Dunbar, Winter Hall, Raymond McKee, Muriel Frances Dana, and Lynn Cowan comprise the list of leading actors.

Jane Jennings Added to Cast of "Danger Line"

Jane Jennings has been added to the cast of "The Danger Line," which Hugh Greer is directing for Macfadden at the Pathé Studio. Miss Jennings was last seen in "The Little French Girl" for Famous.

Evelyn Francisco Cast With Julian Eltinge

Evelyn Francisco, former Christie Comedy star, has been cast in an important role in "Madame Lucy," the Producers-Distributing Corporation production featuring Ann Pennington and Julian Eltinge.

Scenes from the Sunset Production, "With Kit Carson Over the Great Divide."

Marion Nixon to Appear With Reginald Denny

"What Happened Jones," the next Universal feature for Reginald Denny will find Marion Nixon in the leading feminine role. William A. Seiter will direct. Otis Harlan will also appear in the production.

Mal St. Clair Given Long Term Contract

Jesse Lasky announces that Mal St. Clair has been signed to a long term contract as a Paramount director in reward for his work with "Are Parents People?" and "The Trouble With Wives," two recent releases. Mr. St. Clair began his career as a newspaper cartoonist in Los Angeles and worked his way into prominence via the two-reel comedy route.

Five Added to "Memory Lane" Cast

Sinclair Lewis Signs With Paramount

J ESSE L. LASKY announces the signing of Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," "Babbitt" and "Arrowsmith" to a contract calling for the story of New York City for the Paramount production, "New York," which is to be produced in connection with the 300th anniversary of the eastern metropolises next spring. Allan Dwan, who will direct the picture which will be a pictorial history of New York City from the time when Peter Minuit bought Manhattan Island from the Indians for $24 up to the present day.

"I feel that, in signing Mr. Lewis for this gigantic task," said Mr. Lasky, "we have secured the writer who, above all others, is qualified to do it as it should be done. He is a New Yorker, a student of everything that pertains to the city, tireless at research, and, as shown by his writings, a master of detail. I am convinced that in his story he will do for New York and its people what 'The Covered Wagon' did for the pioneers, "The Covered Wagon," a film in which Mr. Lasky is doing for the heroes of the West in those days, and what 'The Vanishing American' will do for the Indian. "In my opinion the combination of Sinclair Lewis as writer and Allan Dwan as director cannot be equalled for this picture. Mr. Dwan knows his New York and it's history as perhaps no other director does, and he has an interest in and a love for the city that will spur him on to efforts which even he, with the many great pictures he has made to his credit, has never surpassed."
Independents Report Sales
Many Contracts Are Closed for Both Local and Foreign Territories

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" For "U"
Picturization of Famous Story Has Long Been a Laemmle Ambition

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" will finally make its appearance on the screen under the supervision of Carl Laemmle, it was announced at the New York offices of Universal this week.

The filming of the popular story has long been a cherished desire on the part of the producer who delayed this long only because of the belief that the southern states might protest such a production. After a survey of several months, centering below the Mason-Dixon line and sounding out the feeling towards Harry Beecher Stone's novel, it has been found that resentment against the theme is now a matter of the past and that such a picture would be welcomed.

No indications as to the time of release of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" are yet to be had. Word has gone from Mr. Laemmle to Raymond L. Schroek, general manager of Universal City, to assign the best scenario men on the lot to the preparation of the script for the new super production, without delay.

As soon as the continuity is completed the Universal City staff expects to start camera work, as it is intended to have construction work on the initial sets under way as soon as the outline of the production has been drawn up. The picture will have an all-star cast.

Six Comedy Units for F. B. O.
Demand for Two-Reel Fun Films Warrants Increased Production Plans

SPURRED on by unusual success with its program of two-reel comedies, F. B. O. production forces announce its intention to remain actively in the short subject field and has already formulated plans for an increased schedule during the 1925-26 season.

Headed by “The Adventures of Mazie,” a series of twelve episodes based on the stories by Neil Martin which appeared in Top Notch magazine, and which will again star Alberta Vaughn with Larry Kent, Kit Guard and Al Cooke in support, F. B. O. announces that another series will soon be started on its lot, called “Fighting Hearts,” which is being produced expressly for the company by Sam Hellman, well known humorist.

“Fighting Hearts,” like “The Adventures of Mazie” will be distributed as twelve two-reel episodes...”Amazing Mazie,” No. 1 of the “Mazie” series was concluded this week. Ralph Cedar is directing from the original stories by Doris Anderson. Joe Rock is making two new series of twenty-six comedies for the company.

The first series of 13 will be known as “Standard Fat Men” comedies and will feature fat men on the screen...Mr. Rock plans to use almost a ton of heavies in each picture, and the catch-line “A Ton of Fun” will be used extensively in the advertising and exploitation of the productions. Work on the first comedy of this series, as yet untitled, was completed today, and featured in the production are “Tiny” Alexander, “Kewpie” Ross, and “Fatty” Karr. Billie Rhodes, famous comedienne, also appears in this comedy. The production is now in the cutting room and as soon as it is titled will be shipped to the F. B. O. branches for release on September 6th.

The second series of thirteen two-reel comedies will be known as “Blue Ribbon” comedies, and will feature Chester Conklin, Hank Mann and Vic Poteal. Joe Rock’s latest star discovery, a young woman from Paris who was recently “christened” Alice Ardell, will play opposite the stars. She is a fetching female who doesn’t speak a word of English but whose sense of humor is easily discernible on the screen.

The Bray Studios will contribute 26 short subjects to the F. B. O. program. These twenty-six novelties will consist of thirteen Dinky Doodle Cartoons and thirteen comedies which will be known as “Cumulative History” comedies. The Dinky Doodle Cartoons will be burlesques of fairy tales and the burlesques of the best known feature productions of the current year. “Don Q” will be the first.

“Ving” Fuller, popular sports cartoonist formerly with the New York Graphic, will act as one of the animators associated with Waltz Lantz in the production of these two series.

Lois Wilson to Play Opposite Meighan

Lois Wilson has been selected by Jesse Lasky to play opposite Thomas Meighan in his next Paramount picture and will sail next week to join the star in Ireland. For fully a mouth Meighan, Miss Wilson and the Paramount Company will work among the picturesque hills of Kerry County. The picture will have for its background the famous Lakes of Killarney, Muckross Abbey, Ross Castle and Blarney Castle. Some of the scenes will be made on a celebrated race course near Dublin.

Miss Wilson has just finished work in “The Vanishing American,” Zane Grey’s epic of the American Indian and has spent many weeks on the Navajo Reservation in Arizona for scenes of the picture. Thomas Meighan has already sailed, accompanied by Director Victor Heerman, who has two recent Meighan successes, “The Confidence Man” and “Old Home Week,” to his credit, and Tom Geraghty, supervising director of Meighan’s productions.

“Girl Who Wouldn’t Work” Release Set

“The Girl Who Wouldn’t Work,” second of the Preferred Pictures for the new season, is scheduled for release August 15th. The picture is an adaptation of the English novel by Gertie D. Wentworth-Jones and will be the first directorial work of Marcel De Sano. Featured in the cast are Lionel Barrymore, Marguerite De La Motte, Henry B. Walthall, Lilyan Tashman, Forrest Stanley, Tom Ricketts and Winter Hall.
Complete Cast for Lloyd's First Paramount Feature

With the signing of two of the screen's "strong" men, Production Manager John L. Murphy announces the completion of the cast for Harold Lloyd's first Paramount release.

Noah Young, for six years associated with Lloyd in "heavy" characterizations returns to the comedian's fold, after an absence of two years. Young has been engaged for the principal "heavy" part of the new Lloyd yarn, which is to be laid largely in the slums of any big American city.

Constantine Romanoff, the noted wrestler, has also been engaged for a "strong man" part.

Jobyna Ralston, recently signed again as a leading lady for Mr. Lloyd has been cast in a part that will afford her the same scope as "Girl Shy" or "The Freshman." Sam Taylor is directing, the scenario work being handled by Ted Wilde, Tim Whelan, John Grey and Clyde Bruckman.

Lloyd hopes to have two pictures completed by next May so that he can take a long delayed European trip with Mrs. Lloyd and perhaps Mildred Gloria.

John Wenger's Life and Works Published

The life and works of John Wenger, art director for the Rialto and Rivoli Theatres, New York, who was commissioned to design the settings for the largest open air stage in the world at the musical opera at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, has just been published. It was written by Edwardo Formaro, the celebrated poster artist, and tells of the designers rise from obscurity to his present position in the realm of his art. Wenger is known for his settings not only in motion picture theatres throughout the country but also for his scenic creations for the Ziegfeld Follies, the George White Sendaks and numerous other Broadway productions. The volume contains reproductions of many of the sets he has designed.

"Just Suppose" Purchased for Barthelmess

Inspiration Pictures has purchased screen rights to the A. E. Thomas stage play, "Just Suppose," as a vehicle for Richard Barthelmess for release through First National. It will be screened as the next Barthelmess picture to follow "The Beautiful City," now in production. "Just Suppose" was produced on the New York stage in 1920 with Patricia Coolinge in the featured role. It is to be re-produced on the Broadway stage again this Fall as a musical comedy.

Phantom Challenge Accepted

Thurston, Magician, Agrees to Produce Phantom at Astor New York Opening

UNIVERSAL'S challenge to scientists, mediums and conjurers throughout the world to produce a phantom during the prologue of "The Phantom of the Opera" which opens at the Astor Theatre in New York, September 6th, has been accepted by Thurston, the magician. The challenge carries with it a thousand dollar offer to anyone who can successfully conclude the test.

Thurston has made several stipulations regarding conditions under which he will endeavor to produce the phantom. Among them are: he will be required to give no advance public demonstration; that his presence will not be required at the theatre; that he be allowed to produce any kind of phantom that lies within his power; that the orchestra be discontinued at a certain specified time, which he will advise the day before the opening, and that the stage and theatre be thrown into absolute darkness during that period.

The Universal challenge was broadcast throughout the country six months ago. Famous scientists were approached to assist in the quest it is claimed. Among these were Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir Oliver Lodge, Camille Flammarion, before his recent death, and Dr. Walter F. Prince, president of the American Society for Psychic Research. They did not suggest anyone who would accept the challenge.

Many prominent and obscure mediums and conjurers have exhibited their talents for Universal's "phantom committee," but with no success. Thurston's acceptance arrived just as the committee was about to abandon the idea.

Chadwick Will Release Three

Theda Bara, Charles Ray and George Walsh Pictures Due in September

THREE of the seventeen Chadwick pictures for the coming season have been set for release in September. They are "The Unchastened Woman," "Some Pun'kins," and "The Prince of Broadway." "American Pluck" and "The Wizard of Oz" are August releases.

Douglas MacLean Adds to Production Staff

Douglas MacLean has added Frank Griffin and Jack MacKenzie to his production staff for "Seven Keys to Baldpate," which he will make as his first Paramount release. Griffin, scenarist and gag man is collaborating with George J. Crone and Wade Boteler in adapting the Cohan stage play to the screen. MacKenzie will be in charge of photography.

"Sally of the Sawdust" Held Second Week

D. W. Griffith's "Sally of the Sawdust" is to be held over a second week at the Mark Strand Theatre in New York. This is the film version of "Poppy" in which W. C. Fields was starred. Fields is also starred in the picture with Carol Dempster.

Sunset Will Release Twelve
First of Two Series of Six Features to Be Distributed September 1st

SUNSET. Productions of Hollywood are to release twelve features during the coming season. They are to be in two series of six each and will be distributed on a six weeks' schedule starting September 1st.

The first series will be known as "Six Epics of Frontier Days," with the pictures titled as follows: "With Buffalo Bill on the U. P. Trail," "With Kit Carson Over the Great Divide," "With Davy Crockett at the Fall of the Alamo," "With Daniel Boone Through the Wilderness," "With Sitting Bull at the Spirit Lake Massacre," and "With General Custer at Little Big Horn."

The first two of these productions have already been completed and have in their casts such players as Roy Stewart, Cullen Landis, Henry B. Walthall, Marguerite Snow, Kathryn McGuire, Sheldon Lewis, Earle Metcalfe, Fred De Silva, Billy Franey, Milburn Moranti, Eddie Harris, Hazel Howell, Charlotte Stevens and Nelson Malden.

The second series to be offered by Sunset feature Dick Grace, the stunt aviator. Two of this series have also been completed under the titles of "Wide Open" and "The Flying Fool." In support of Grace are Wanda Hawley, Gaston Glass, Grace Darmond, Harry Behmore and Eddie Barry.

Anthony J. Xydias, president of Sunset Productions has started on a sales trip of some of the important distributing centers with prints of the completed pictures of both series. Among the exchanges that have already contracted for the series are Aywon in New York, Specialty Film Exchange in Dallas and Greater Feature Exchanges in the Northwest.

You will have available from Associated Exhibitors next season a minimum of twenty-four productions and a maximum of thirty.

Picture for picture, value for value, individually or as a group, we challenge the industry to match them—to rival the smashing action of "Manhattan Madness"—to equal the heart appeal of "Under the Rouge"—to surpass the gripping drama of "Headlines"—to produce better entertainment than "Camille of the Barbary Coast"—to eclipse "Fifty-Fifty"—to approximate the known value of "Never Weaken"—to outdo "His Buddy's Wife"—even to approach the comedy, thrills and drama of "Keep Smiling."

We're out in the open. We invite comparisons—not of our productions with others, but of all others with ours.

We have the greatest aggregation of big money stars ever offered by an independent, supported by as big production value as money can buy.

Boasting, you say?

But don't forget that we back up our boast, not with promises, but with a guarantee—a real guarantee—a guarantee that's clad in iron.

Who else gives you as much? Who else guarantees your box office? Who else has any interest in you except as a source of rentals?

Line up this year with the concern that has confidence enough in its pictures to guarantee them—that pledges you a square deal—that uses your money to underwrite bigger and better product, not to build opposition houses.

Play the game so you can't lose.

Sign up now for the twenty-four best pictures your audiences have ever seen.

One of the greatest feature comedies ever made.
Bigger heart interest—more thrilling—funnier—than even "Racing Luck."
And in addition a better production.
After you run this one you’ll be apologizing to your customers for not having an Associated Exhibitors picture every day.
We’re not afraid to screen it for you, either. Ask us!
A challenge to every producer.

They like newspaper pictures.
And here's one they'll doubly like—for its theme and its fine entertainment qualities.
It's a big picture—one that we can conscientiously call extra special.
Chockfull of novel ideas and twists—sumptuously mounted—a feature that makes almost any picture you've ever seen look ordinary.

Crooks aren’t lovable, usually. These two are. And your liking for them is justified when you see them both go straight, at the end.

This picture steps right along. It is jam full of drama, excitement, suspense and heart interest. It takes you from the underworld to the upperworld and every minute of it is a pip.

Woody Discusses Assoc. Exhls. Guarantee

JOHN S. WOODY, president of Associated Exhibitors, in a detailed statement issued this week discusses the various aspects of the new guarantee offered exhibitors by his organization. He expands on the added advantages it holds for the exhibitor who books on a minimum basis of twenty-four pictures without previewing.

The statement follows:

"Annual statements are usually written in superlatives. Mine is written in negatives.

"We are making a guarantee of next season's product and it has been interpreted in some quarters as applying unreservedly to any and all conditions. This, of course, is wrong. We're trying to make the guarantee mean something, which it could not possibly do if it was without limitation of any sort.

"What is desired is to give the exhibitor who buys without screening definite assurance against being oversold and to provide him with specific means of obtaining redress. If the buyer is too sanguine about values, if the product is misrepresented, or if for any other reason the pictures do not measure up to box office standards which are established by competing product, he can apply for an adjustment. And if he doesn't get it promptly he can take us before his local Film Board of Trade and bring us to time.

"Many persons told me during the Milwaukee Convention that they did not understand how we could afford to make any sort of guarantee of results from motion pictures. A few persons have even asked where the joker is. There seem to be so many tricks practised that such a simple thing as a guarantee doesn't always get credence for being even an evidence of good faith.

"The peculiar thing about our warranty is that in order for it to serve us advantageously we must release pictures of such high average quality that a guarantee is unnecessary. In other words, what leads us to say to exhibitors that they can obtain adjustments, if adjustments are justified, is our confidence that nobody who runs our pictures will ever find it necessary to apply for redress. Frankly, we don't expect the guarantee to cost us one cent.

"But don't forget that if we should unfortunately find it necessary to make price concessions after pictures were played, we would be doing nothing more than is done by merchants, distributors and manufacturers in other lines of business. If we can't deliver product which will stand the market test we have no reason to expect success. And if we sell Class C pictures for Class A rentals, the exhibitor is entitled to redress.

"We are not only willing but anxious to have our productions compared with other pictures, yet we are not in a position to say that rentals, days of the week, and other important factors in determining box office results need not be fully into consideration in determining whether value has been given.

"And the point I want to emphasize above all others is that Associated Exhibitors does not guarantee individual pictures. I've seen all of our first ten releases for the 1925-1926 season and personally I consider them good, trustworthy pictures. But I'm not guaranteeing what the box-office results would be from playing them individually.

"If there were any individual in the world who could say with definiteness, in advance, that a certain story, made in a certain way, under certain direction and with a designated cast would be generally successful at the box office, then the issuing of guarantees would be simple. But the known fact of the matter is that every production is to a certain extent an experiment. Hence, so far as relationships of the exhibitor and the distributor are concerned, the only fair method is to figure results on a basis of averages.

"I think it also should be clear that a theatre which insists upon previewing before buying does not need, and is not entitled to, a guarantee. It has happened in my personal dealings that an exhibitor and I have differed in opinion about the value of a picture. He may concede it is a pretty good production, but may have doubts about whether it will appeal to his special patronage. Knowing what the picture is doing nationally, and feeling that the exhibitor is mistaken in his contention, I have not infrequently given individual picture guarantees. But cases of this sort are very different. Guarantees such as these are given to effect sales in the face of honest belief that the pictures ought not to be used. I certainly would not give a guarantee to an exhibitor who had seen a picture and bargained for it on a basis of what he considered it to be worth. Nor do I imagine for a moment that any reasonable buyer would expect such a concession.
The new feature of the 1925-1926 sales policy of Associated Exhibitors is the guarantee that its productions will compare favorably in box office value with any other program of pictures used by the same theatre.

This guarantee, which is given to all purchasers of a minimum of twenty-four productions, specifies that the buyer will be entitled to an adjustment of rentals if the box office returns from any group of eight or more Associated Exhibitors’ pictures are not as large as the returns from any other brand of productions used in the theatre during the same months and on the same days of the week.

It is especially provided in the guarantee, a copy of which appears on this page, that it may be used by the exhibitor in Film Boards of Trade actions and will be binding against the distributor.

Associated Exhibitors’ sales policy, according to an official statement, has been designed to provide for buying either with or without previewing and in individual units, small blocks or large groups.

The exhibitor who desires to preview can see at least eight pictures at a time, all several weeks prior to release date, and may use this product over a four-month period.

The exhibitor who does not care to preview may purchase the entire season’s output, and because of the fact that he buys upon the distributor’s representation of quality, in advance of box office testing of values, he will be covered by the distributor’s guarantee.

It is stipulated that the guarantee is not given if pictures are previewed or if less than twenty-four are purchased. The explanation for this is that the buyer who looks at the pictures before purchasing is banking on his own judgment and should know what he is doing. The reason given for not applying the guarantee to sales of fewer than twenty-four pictures is that the guarantee is not intended to cover individual releases, but is based upon averages—upon general expectations from a season’s product.

To make honest guarantees possible, it was necessary to provide more than ordinary production safeguards. And these were established, it is asserted, through the cooperation of producers and the distributor. The production contracts are said all to make definite provisions for meeting market requirements.

It is the belief, both of Associated Exhibitors and of the producers whom it represents, that every reasonable precaution has been taken to insure high grade productions of uniform quality. But it is conceded by the distributor that even the most extraordinary safeguards will not prevent errors and that the greatest care which it is possible to exercise will not invariably produce big box office successes.

Hence, the arrangement for advance deliveries which make previewing possible. Hence, also, the decision to give a guarantee and thereby force the pictures to measure up to reasonable requirements or pay the penalty in revenue losses.

The first eight pictures, and part of the second group, have already been delivered and all of the first eight have been shipped to the exchanges. They have been passed upon, in completed form, by a reviewing committee comprising fifteen persons and have been accepted unanimously. Some of them have had as many as four or five theatre previews before audiences and it is declared that in all instances, they have been well received.

Of the second group of pictures there probably will be ten. All of these are either completed or nearly so. They are to be available for screening in September or October and will be scheduled for release during December, January, February and March.

The third group is contracted and has reached the stage where final discussion of production plans are being conducted.

It will be released during April, May, June and July.

Detailed statements of costs are required from producers, this being the basis upon which valuations are fixed. Auditors, representing the distributor are in the studios from the moment production starts until it is completed. According to Associated Exhibitors, it appears that the first eight productions have cost between $850,000 and $900,000, or an average of around $109,000.

The least expensive one has involved an outlay of close to $60,000 and the biggest one about $300,000. The cost of selling, physical distribution and advertising, added to the production cost, with a percentage for profit, will place the average exhibition value at between $200,000 and $300,000.
24 Features and 4 Specials for Assoc. Exhibs.

Associated Exhibitors has announced for the 1925-1926 season a formidable array of productions to assure exhibitors a substantial box-office success.

Heading the Associated Exhibitors’ first group of eight is “Never Weaken,” starring Harold Lloyd, which will be released the first part of August. “Never Weaken” is one of the “Popular Demand” series of Harold Lloyd successes. It is directed by Hal Roach and Fred Newmeyer and presents Mildred Davis, the present Mrs. Harold Lloyd, in the leading feminine role with Roy Brooks, Mark Jones and Charles Stevenson in the supporting cast.

Also scheduled for August release is “Manhattan Madness” with Jack Dempsey, World’s Heavyweight Champion, and his wife, Estelle Taylor in the co-starring roles.

George Siegman, Frank Campeau, Nelson McDowell, Bill Frane, Dean Markham, Theodore Lorch, Tom Wilson, Glenn Cavender, Jane Starr, Robert Graves, Christian Frank and Harry Teabrock are also in this cast.

“Camille of the Barbary Coast” will appear on the program for August as a Hugh Dierker production with Mae Busch and Owen Moore headed the cast. This feature is adapted from Forest Halsey’s published story of underworld life in the old Barbary coast section of San Francisco. Besides the featured players the cast comprises Burt McIntosh, Fritz Brunette, Harry T. Moore, Dorothy King and Tammany Young.

Monty Banks, star of Associated Exhibitors’ box-office success, “Racing Luck,” makes his debut on the 1925-1926 program in “Keep Smiling.” This is a motor-boat story by Monty Banks, Herman Raymaker and Clyde Bruckman. The feature comedy was produced under the direction of Albert Austin and Gilbert W. Pratt. Anne Cornewall will appear opposite Monty Banks, and the supporting cast will comprise Robert Edeon, Stanhope Wheateroff, Martha Franklin, Syd Crossley, Glen Cavender, Ruth Holly and Mrs. Tom Forman.

Hope Hampton is starred in “Fifty-Fifty,” a colorful society drama with scenes laid in both France and America. The story is an original by Allan Dunn. In the support are such box-office names as Lionel Barrymore and Louise Glamm. The feature was produced by Henri Diamant Berger. Arthur Donaldson, J. Moy Bennett, Jean Deval and Gaby France also appear.

Lewis H. Moonan’s initial contribution to the Associated Exhibitors’ 1925-1926 program will be “Under the Roofs,” an underworld drama. Much of the action transpires amid the rugged settings of Oregon where the picture was made. Tom Moore and Eileen Perri head an all-star cast which includes Mary Alden, William V. Mong, James Mason, Claire De Lazlo, Chester Conklin, Eddie Phillips, Tom Gallery, Bruce Geron, Aileen Manning, Peggy Prevoost, William Dills, Stanley Blystones and Carmelita Geraghty.

“Headlines” is a dramatic chapter from the experiences of a woman reporter on a metropolitan newspaper. The cast will include Alice Joyce as the star, and in the support are Harry T. Morey, Elliott Nugent, Ruby Blaine and Virginia Lee Corbin.

“His Buddy’s Wife” is a story by T. Howard Kelly, which the Smart Set Magazine published serially. Glenn Hunter has the featured role and is supported by Edna Murphy, Douglas Gilmore, Flore Finch and Marvia Harris. Tom Terriss directed. “I Do” is a Harold Lloyd revival. “Lover’s Island” is another Howard Kelly story from the Smart Set. The cast is headed by Hope Hampton, James Kirkwood and Louis Wolheim. It was directed by Henri Diamant Berger.

“Among Those Present” is a three-reel Harold Lloyd production; one of the Popular Demand Series.

“Two Can Play” is a Saturday Evening Post serial from the pen of Gerald Mygatt. Clara Bow plays the girl and Allan Forrest the boy. Nat Ross is the director. “Who Said So?” is another Monty Banks feature comedy.

“The Miracle of Life” is a high-class, well-mounted, problem society drama. Olga Printzlow wrote the story. In the cast are Mae Busch, Percy Marmont and Nita Naldi. The director is S. E. V. Taylor.

“The Pickle Hitter” is a big production of a well known and highly successful subject. Glenn Hunter plays the lead. Oscar Price is the producer. “The Lady from Hell” was made by Stuart Paton and the cast includes Blanche Sweet, Roy Stewart, Frank Elliott and Ralph Lewis. It is a part-Western story.

A Strongheart Production is to be produced by Howard Estabrooke and Jane Muriun. “A Million Dollar Doll” is from the novel by Mrs. W. X. Williamson. It is a St. Regis production for Winter delivery.

“Hearts and Fists” is a most exceptional Northwoods drama with thrills enough for a serial. It is based upon a novel by Clarence Baddington Kelland and was first published serially in the American Magazine.

“The Clod Hopper” stars Glenn Hunter and exhibitors can well imagine what he will do to a role of this sort.

“Blue Beard” is from the novel by Owen Johnson and is to be made by St. Regis following “A Million Dollar Doll.”

“Shine Inside” is another laugh film in which Monty Banks will have the support of a big cast of fun makers.

“A Woman Scorned” was made in England with an American cast and under an American director. Cosmopolitan Productions, Ltd., is the producer. “Her Husband’s Wife” is a society drama for delivery early in the Spring of 1926.
In casting their pictures for release through Associated Exhibitors the coming season, the producers have lined-up an imposing array of stars and featured players, all of whom have large screen followings. In addition, many of them are equally known for their notable successes upon the speaking stage.

Stars who will be seen in Associated Exhibitors’ pictures include such favorites as Alice Joyce, Harold Lloyd, Hope Hampton, Jack Dempsey, Estelle Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Mae Busch, Monty Banks, Wallace Beery, Clara Bow, Blanche Sweet, Edna Murphy, Eileen Percy, Milton Sills, Nita Naldi, Glenn Hunter, Mfred Davis, Tom Moore, Owen Moore, Anne Cornwall, Louis Wolheim, James Kirkwood, Marjorie Daw, Claire Windsor, Theodore Roberts and Strongheart.

Harold Lloyd will make his stellar appearance in three comedies of the “Popular Demand Series,” entitled “Never Weaken,” “I Do” and “Among Those Present.”

Mae Busch is a star in “Camille of the Barbary Coast” and “The Miracle of Life.” Her rapid rise as a screen favorite is proof of her popularity. She has appeared largely in Metro-Goldwyn releases previous to her engagement for Associated Exhibitors’ productions. Owen Moore is her associate star in “Camille of the Barbary Coast” and Burr McIntosh, Harry T. Morey, Tannany Young, Dorothy King and Fritzie Barnett assist; while “The Miracle of Life” offers Percy Marmont and Nita Naldi in support. Glenn Hunter has star roles in “His Buddy’s Wife” and “The Pinch Hitter” and “The Cock Hopper.” Edna Murphy shares honors with him in the first named and Flora Finch, Douglas Gilmore and Marcia Harris are in support. In the other features Hunter will be surrounded with similar strong casts. Hunter has attained fame as “Merton” on the stage and screen and also in several big feature films.

Hope Hampton stars in “Fifty-Fifty” and “Lovers’ Island” with probably several others to follow. Miss Hampton’s screen popularity has been in the ascendancy with each succeeding film appearance. In “Fifty-Fifty” she is associated with Lionel Barrymore, Louise Glann, Arthur Donaldson, J. Moy Bennett, Jean Delval and Gaby France; while in “Lovers’ Island” are numbered such famous names as James Kirkwood, Louis Wolheim, Douglas Gilmore, Flora Finch, Flora le Breton, Gaby France and Jack Raymond.

Monty Banks stars in “Keep Smiling” and two other features “Who Said So?” and “Shine Inside.” This star’s work in “Racing Luck” established him in a high place with audiences. In “Keep Smiling” Banks has in his support Anne Cornwall, Robert Edeon, Stanhope Wheeteloit, Mrs. Tom Forman, Glenn Cavender, Syd Crossley, Ruth Holly and Martha Franklin.

Tom Moore appears to advantage as a star in “Under the Rouge.” Eileen Percy appears opposite him and the cast also has Mary Alden, Claire de Lopez, Chester Conklin, Bruce Guerin, Carmelita Gerughty, Eddie Phillips, Peggy Prevost, James Mason, William V. Mong, Tom Gallery, Aileen Manning, William Dills and Stanley Blystone.

Jack Dempsey, world’s heavyweight champion, holds a star role in “Manhattan Madness” with Estelle Taylor as his leading woman. Dempsey is not new to the screen but appears as a feature star for the first time in this production. The Dempsey cast is large: George Siegman, Frank Capra, Nelson McDowell, Jane Starr, Bull Montana, Christian Frank, Glenn Cavender, Tom Wilson, Robert Graves, Bill Franey, Dean Markham, Harry Tenbrook and Theodore Lorch.

Alice Joyce, one of the early favorites of the cinema, who is at the height of her popularity, stars in “Headlines,” a newspaper story. Miss Joyce’s screen successes date from the Kalem days, and her name is sure to attract the real movie fans to the theatre. Harry T. Morey, Malcolm McGregor, Elliott Nugent, Ruby Blaine, Virginia Lee Corbin, Johnny Huggins and his revue and Miss Nobody from Nowhere are prominently cast.

Clara Bow one of the brightest of the newer constellation of stars will be seen in “Two Can Play” and “Two Gates.” Miss Bow will be remembered for her work in “The Adventurous Sex” for Associated Exhibitors. In “Two Can Play,” Allan Forrest heads the supporting cast and in “Two Gates,” Ralph Lewis, John Sanipolis, William V. Mong, Eddie Lyons, George Cooper, Helen Dumar, Arthur Rankin and Forrest Stanley are listed prominently.

Blanche Sweet and Roy Stewart will have the leading roles in “The Lady From Hell,” which is based upon a story entitled, “The Lord of Double B.” They are supported by Frank Elliot, Ralph Lewis, Margaret Campbell, Templar Saxe, Edgar Norton, Hardee Kirkland, Ruth King, Allan Sears, Mark Hamilton, Hilliard Karr, Ine Gomez, Fred Walton, Fred Pyann, Lee Bates and Miekey Moore.

Strongheart, noted canine star will be seen in an outdoor picture full of opportunity for him to exhibit his almost-human ability to carry the action at high speed.
Popular Authors Write Assoc. Exhibs. Stories

POPULAR authors, a number of them responsible for "best-sellers" have supplied the stories for the group of feature screen attractions which will be distributed by Associated Exhibitors the coming season.

Mrs. W. N. Williamson, Owen Johnson, Gerald Mygatt, Olga Prinzlow, T. Howard Kelly, Charles T. and Frank Daze, Forrest Halsey, Alan Dwan, Henry Chapman Ford, C. Gardner Sullivan, Clarence Buddington Kelland and Dorian Neve are some of the authors represented on the Associated Exhibitors' program.

Mrs. W. N. Williamson wrote the novel upon which "A Million Dollar Doll" will be based. Owen Johnson's novel provided the story of "Blue Blood," another St. Regis production.

T. Howard Kelly wrote the two Smart Set Magazine stories, "His Buddy's Wife" and "Lovers Island."

Forrest Halsey wrote the underworld novel of the Barbary coast which provided the story basis of "Camille of the Barbary Coast" in the first group. This was directed by Hugh Dicker with Mae Busch and Owen Moore starred.

Charles T. and Frank Daze, originally wrote the story of "Manhattan Madness" for Douglas Fairbanks. This action story has been adapted as a vehicle for Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor and was directed by John McDermott. This feature is in the first group.

Alan Dwan, noted director as well as a screen author of repute, wrote the original story of "Fifty-Fifty" which has been produced with Hope Hampton, Lionel Barrymore and Louise Glahn in leading roles, under the direction of Henri Diamant Berger.

Olga Prinzlow is the author of the published story which was adapted by Marion Leonard as "The Miracle of Life" and is being produced and directed by S. E. V. Taylor, with Mae Busch and Nita Naldi as stars. Miss Prinzlow is well known as a screen author.

Dorian Neve wrote an original newspaper romance entitled "Headlines" which St. Regis Pictures is producing with Alice Joyce and Malcolm McGregor heading the cast. E. H. Griffith is the director. "Headlines" is in the first group of Associated Exhibitors' features.

C. Gardner Sullivan, one of the veteran screen editors, is the author of "The Pinch Hitter" in which Oscar Price will star Glenn Hunter. Originally written as a chid for Charles Ray, this story reveals the experiences of a bush-leaguer who made a big-time team.

Gerald Mygatt's Saturday Evening Post story of romantic adventure, "Two Can Play" will be produced by Nat Ross with Clara Bow and Allan Forrest leading the cast. Mygatt is known for his popular magazine stories.

Henry Chapman Ford is the author of the original crook melodrama "Two Gates" which Arthur F. Beck will both produce and direct. Clara Bow and Ralph Lewis head the cast of players.

Sam Taylor wrote the original stories of the Harold Lloyd Popular Demand Series, "Never Weaken," "I Do" and "Among Those Present." This author has established a reputation for his ability to devise fiendish plots of feature caliber. Hal Roach and Fred Newmeyer directed the pictures named and Mildred Davis appears opposite Lloyd in all three.

Clarence Buddington Kelland wrote the American Magazine story which will be produced as an outdoor drama under the virile title of "Hearts and Fists." This American serial will provide the basis of a feature in the third group.

Herman Raymaker and Clyde Bumpus are the authors of the Monty Banks starring vehicle "Keep Smiling" which is being sponsored by Howard Estabrook, Albert Austin and Gilbert W. Pratt co-directed. Anne Cornwall appears opposite Banks, in this first group feature.

Monty Banks, himself, wrote the stories for his three starring vehicles.

Highlights from the first group of eight features to be released by Associated Exhibitors. Upper row: Harold Lloyd in "Never Weaken"; Monty Banks and Anne Cornwall in "Keep Smiling"; Mae Busch and Tom Moore in "Camille of the Barbary Coast." Center row: Glenn Hunter and Edna Murphy in "His Buddy's Wife"; Eileen Percy and Tom Moore in "Under the Rouge." Lower row: Alice Joyce in "Headlines"; Hope Hampton in "Fifty-Fifty"; and Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor in "Manhattan Madness."
Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"The Iron Nag" (Pathé—Two Reels) (Reviewed by Harold Flaxin)

THIS Sennett comedy is of the slapstick variety with the story just incidentally connected therewith. There is an abundance. It is a race track story with the locale in Kentucky and features Billie Bevan and Ruth Taylor, the former as the jockey and the latter as the bride. Through possession of a slimy story the numerous bits of hokum interspersed throughout the reels should be laughable.

The story opens with an animated description of a horse race by the Colonel which raises his audience to fever heat and his colored servant, holding a "bottle," shakes it so that it finally pops causing the inevitable wet results and a scolding from the Colonel's wife. Then, through a piece of hokum a telegram announcing the arrival of his race horse accompanied by its jockey so the party reforms for the race to the stables. There is considerable hokum injected at this point revealing the desertion of the real jockey and Bevan's involuntary substitution; also the part played by the horse who succeeds in breaking his way out of his railroad berth much to the discomfiture of the bystanders. The climax of the story is the case where the Colonel's wife, drawn in an invalid chair by a dog is pursued by the rest of the party in the usual "liver" and the horse race in which the Colonel triumphs although beset by various handicaps.

Bevan gives a humorous performance and Ruth Taylor, in her role that isn't giving her much to do. Andy Clyde as the Colonel and Sunshine Hart as his wife turn in excellent performances as do the rest of the cast consisting of John J. Richardson and Leo Sulky. It was directed by Del Lord.

The Cast
Billy Bevan, Ruth Taylor, Andy Clyde, Sunshine Hart, John J. Richardson, Leo Sulky. A Mack Sennett production directed by Del Lord.

The Story—A Kentucky Colonel, in the midst of describing a horse race to the guests, is apprised of the arrival of his race horse accompanied by its jockey who, however, has deserted it but his place is taken by a tramp who was riding the horse for the real rider the Colonel asks him to ride the horse in the coming meet which the jockey, upon receiving a sheriff, agrees to do. After many mishaps both jockey and horse are thrown into jail but escape in time to enter the race which they win after much trouble.

Classification—Comedy of the slapstick variety.

Summary—A fast moving comedy of the slapstick type with a poor story, manages to entertain due to the numerous gags injected. It is well directed and has a good cast.

"Crying for Love" (Century—Universal—Two Reels) (Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is one of those comedies whose humor lies principally in some one plunging out of a three story window or a fast moving car. The elongation of slapstick and gag stuff with Eddie Gordon as the featured comedian. Eddie is funny, at times, but his humor consists in a vehicle which did not so continuously clamor for laughs.

Small of stature himself, the story makes Eddie the hubby of an Amazon twice his size, who uses him much as a handball player would a wallball. She batteries him from one side of the room to the other, tosses him out of three story windows, lovingly banishes him from a fast moving auto and can carry off capers which would be funny to a man with a good bone. But, this film has got the day following a bad night before.

Just to make it a fifty-fifty break Eddie is tipped off that is the result in making him the real master of the house, after which wife is subjected to some remarkable shocks of the wall-mouth variety in the picture. Among these she takes her dive out of the same three story window, after which she is the subdued clinging vine one sometimes reads of in fiction.

The Cast
The Husband .................... Eddie Gordon

The Story—After many turn-downs Eddie finally succeeds in winning this Amazon for his bride when she discovers her former fiancé Illinois Conlon has married the Amazon's home for the wedding. After the bride has flattened everyone in the place for no reason at all the pair depart on their honeymoon in a livver, from which she playfully or otherwise tosses hubby. Later at a house warming this design continues to humiliate hubby until he is tipped off to some strength-giving pills, which she swallows and then assumes command of the situation. He becomes the real boss of the house and then takes a three-story dive through the window.

Classification—Slapstick comedy.

Summary—A good comedy of the slapstick variety rather too coarse in its efforts to get laughs. The situations are hardly as funny as they were intended to be and the comedy of a type that might interest children too young to attend picture houses.

"The Best Man" (Universal—Mustang—Two Reels) (Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

JOSIE SEDGWICK is again the star of this western which abounds with romance, intrigue, suspense and a dash of comedy. It is the usual type of story that Miss Sedgwick has been doing such good work in. It deals with the adventures of the cattle rancher who turns rustler and is eventually turned up by Miss Sedgwick. The story came home to the heart of some that have gone before, but at that, can hardly be considered too critically.

Then there is the not unusual story of the girl and the rancher and the romance visiting the ranch from the east for the first time; the dislike of the girl for the roughness of the west and the liking for the same country by her fiance, who becomes enamoured of the western girl and decides to remain on the ranch when the girl returns to her eastern home.

There is plenty of action to the story and it always finds Miss Sedgwick in just the right place at the right time. With the assistance of the visitor from the east she rounding up the rustlers after the pair have gone through some amusing exploits.

The Cast
Jacqueline Canby ................. Josie Sedgwick
Nina Williams ....................... Lola Todd
Gerald Merton .................... John Bowers
Ernest Gillen ...

The Mustang picture directed by Ernst Lachmire, and photographed by Ben Kline.

The Story—Jacqueline Canby, known as Jack, daughter of the owner of the MC ranch discovers marks of the hands when he shows the white feather in his cap. He organizes a band of cattle rustlers. Jack, with the assistance of Gerald Merton, a visitor from the east with his fiancee, Nina Wilson, turns up the rustlers after some wild adventures. Gerald becomes enamoured of her and decided to remain on the ranch as her former snobbish fiance returns to her eastern home.

Classification—A two-reel western with plenty of fast action, romance and intrigue.

Summary—A well acted picture that is somewhat better than the usual run. It holds the interest throughout as it is well acted and well directed. It gives the audience some thrilling adventures and should prove a good attraction wherever the western flourish.

"Tame Men and Wild Women" (Hal Roach—Pathe—Two Reels) (Reviewed by Paul A. Yant)

AT THIRTY-ONE, the hero was still under the impression that the ladies roamed the streets at night and that there was a Santa Claus. But one day his kindly old mother took him on her knee and imparted the truth to his virgin ears. "No, my son," she said, looking him in the eye, "there isn't no Santa Claus no matter what you look." The poor lad burst into a flood of tears; the child's imagination was too much for his soul. And from that day forth he became the gay young blade of his neighborhood. His spirit was fired from the childish traditions of family and Santa Claus.

Such is the opening sequence of this hilarious two-reeler which features a new, but stately, and in places strained, but the whole for his soul. And from that day forth he became the gay young blade of his neighborhood. His spirit was fired from the childish traditions of family and Santa Claus.

This mimic has all the tricks of comedy in his sleeve even when he is only wearing a suit, and he displays them to a lusome advantage.

Cut-backs to the days of his father and grandfather, both of whom (poor wights!) were killed in the war and sent into the army with a fair vampire, are about as funny as anything you will show in your theatre this season. And in places strained, but the general effect is one of intense humor and mimicry.

"Lucky Stars" (Mack Sennett—Pathe—Two Reels) (Reviewed by Paul A. Yant)

A curb astronomer advises the naive Harry Langdon to go in search of his fortune under the guidance of a star that the telescope has picked out for him. Harry gathers his few earthly belongings and sets forth on his way in life only to meander into the arms of the female type of the vaudeville salesman. With this much for a beginning much might have been expected of the story but to whom his nose ancestors and meaningless hokum held together by nothing other than the two reels of raw stock.
A Tuxedo comedy written and directed by William Goodrich and photographed by Byron Hocke.

The Story.—Johnny Arthur the tourist, picks up the girl walking back from an auto ride. She invites him to dine with her folks. The pair of crooks are also dining there and discover the value of a well on the premises. Helen's parents are warned that unless the taxes are paid that day the property will be forfeited. Johnny overhears the crooks plotting and with Helen in the flivver for the tax office at the same time they set off for the tour in their touring car. Both machines meet with difficulties, with the flivver the eventual winner.

Classification.—A fast-moving comedy with a logical story, replete with humorous incidents and plenty of suspense.

Summary.—This is a comedy with an exceptionally good story that holds an even pace while the gags and situations are splendidly worked out. It is a well directed picture with a good cast and should prove a good attraction for almost any type of house.

The Season's "Outstanding Novelty" says M. P. World

The Editor's Views

We have just enjoyed a real treat. And with it, come upon what strikes us as the outstanding novelty for presentation as part of Greater Movie Season.

With the cooperation of those pioneers, Thomas A. Edison and E. S. Porter, "The Great Train Robbery* and a number of still earlier releases have been combined in a single reel novelty that is certain to arouse no end of discussion during the industry's jubilee celebration.

Here is ready-made ad. copy, "The first word—and the last word in motion pictures"—a linking up of the short reel novelty to the current feature. Here is certain copy for photoplay editors.

And, aside from business thoughts, for picture men here is a treat that you will want to see. It will bring back many happy memories, give you many a chuckle.

Christie Studios Finish Four

Educational Ready for the Greater Movie Season With First of Product

The Christie Studios completed the first subject in each of four series of two-reel comedies for Educational, in time for first run showings during the intensive August campaign on Greater Movie Season.

The first of these Christie comedies to be completed was "Soup to Nuts," featuring Neal Burns. Shipment of the prints has practically been completed. Supporting Burns in this picture are Vera Steadman as leading lady, Bill Irving and Gale Henry. This is the first comedy directed at the Christie studios by William Watson.

Walter Hiers' first comedy in the new series is titled "Off His Beat." Hiers is supported by Evelyn Francoise, Jack Duffy, Bill Blaisdell and Baby Brown. Archie Mayo directed.

Bobby Vernon makes his first appearance in the new season in a comedy, titled "Watch Out." Frances Lee, working in her first picture at the Christie Studio, is seen in Bobby's support as leading lady. Walter Graham directed this picture from a story by Robert Hall.

Jimmie Adams begins his first starring series in "Be Careful." Adams has been playing featured parts in Christie Comedies for more than two years and before that was seen on the Educational program in Orpheo Comedies and Mermaid Comedies, but this is his first release under his own name.

Harold Beaudine directed "Be Careful." Molly Malone, recently signed as leading lady in the Adams Comedy series, has the chief supporting role and Eddie Baker, Christie "heavy," and Lincoln Plumer have other important parts in the cast.

Pathe Short Subject Schedule

Harry Langdon's Latest Two-Reeler Heads the Program for the Week of August 16th

Pathe has the usual complete schedule of short subject releases for the week of August 16th. It is headed by Harry Langdon's latest two-reeler and includes a chapter of the Patheserial, "Play Ball," a Pathe Review, an "Aesop Film Fable," "Topes of the Day" and two issues of Pathé News.

The Langdon comedy is titled "Lucky Stars." It was produced by Mack Sennett and directed by Harry Edwards. Langdon is supported by Natalie Kingston and Vern Dent.

Arthur Stone heads the cast of "Tame Men and Wild Women," a Hal Roach two-reeler comedy. He is supported by Marie Mosquini, Helen Gilmore, Martha Sleeper, Louise Carver, Marvin Loebach and Sammy Brooks, Marcel de Sano directed.

"Face to Face" is the title of the fifth chapter of the Pathe serial "Play Ball," written by manager McGraw of the Giants and adapted to the screen by Frank Leon Smith. In this episode, Allene Ray and Walter Miller, the stars are supported by Harry Seules, J. Barney Sherry, Mary Millnor, Wally Oetel and Franklin Hanna. Spencer Beament is directing.

Louise Hutton to Play Opposite Al St. John

Educational announces the signing of Louise Hutton to appear opposite Al St. John, the comedy star, in a series of Educational-Mermaid Comedies.
The campaign on the part of short subject producers and distributors to convince exhibitors of the value of proper exploitation for these short reel subjects is bringing splendid results. In many different sections of the country the short product is being given additional display in all advertising matter and the reaction at the box office is reported most satisfactory.

This is shown convincingly through a canvass of the advertisements of most of the leading theatres in about twenty-five cities in the Central Pennsylvania territory.

In those same cities, however, the canvass discloses, practically none of the theatres has introduced exclusively “short subject” programs. All of them are clinging to the idea that one long feature is essential to the success of every program.

“This,” as one progressive Harrisburg exhibitor said, “may be due to ultra-conservatism and timidity about breaking away from established custom. Perhaps all the Central Pennsylvania exhibitors need is a pioneer in their territory to try the experiment of introducing programs made up entirely of ‘short subjects’ to show that such a policy can be adopted with profit.”

Despite this conservatism, however, the canvass of the 25 cities shows unmistakably that exhibitors are waking up for the first time to the value of vigorously exploiting the “short subjects” which they are running in connection with long features, and which heretofore had been practically neglected in the advertising.

As voicing the attitude of many other exhibitors, Samuel A. Kuebler, manager of the Colonial theatre, one of the leading Wilmer & Vincent houses in Harrisburg, said:

“The campaign for ‘short subjects’ is pointing the way to state exhibitors as to how they can take advantage of an opportunity they have long neglected. It is educating them to a realization that the ‘short subject,’ even when incidental to the five or six-reel feature film, is worth bringing to the attention of the public through the medium of advertising.

“The exhibitor is beginning to understand that often the incidental ‘short subject’ has just as much drawing power with the public as the main film, if only the public is kept informed what the titles of the short subject are.

“It is now becoming recognized that too often in advertising a picture program the ‘shorts’ were not mentioned at all. The exhibitors regarded them as mere ‘fillers’ to stretch out the program to the required length, and nothing more. They failed to see in them the potential pulling power for increasing box office revenue which they actually possess. Now that their value in that respect is actually being recognized the exhibitor is wondering why he never thought of it before.

“This is true particularly when he pauses to realize that vaudeville houses for years have been advertising their complete programs, including every number, and not merely the headliners.

“Among other theatres the Wilmer & Vincent motion picture theatres of Harrisburg are now exploiting their comedy attractions and other ‘short subjects’ in addition to the main features films, not only in their newspaper advertisements but in their lobby poster displays and on the billboards.”

The canvass of central Pennsylvania cities shows the following detailed results affecting most of the leading theatres:

Among those that during the week of July 27 to August 1, inclusive, mentioned in their newspaper advertisements their “short subject” comedies or other “short subjects” by name, in addition to the main features, were: In Allentown—Lotus, Pergola-Nelson, Rialto, Orpheum, Hamilton and Victor; in Harrisburg—State, Regent, Wilker-Barre—Shawnee; in Greensburg—Strand, Rialto; in Milton—Ligoniaire, Bijou; in Philadelphia—Alto; in Mahanoy City—Elks Theatre, Victoria; in Hazelton—Grand; in Pittston—American; in Altoona—Strand; in Shamokin—Majestic, Victoria; in Hagerstown, Md.—Palace; in Harrisburg—Loew’s Regent, Colonial; in York—Hippodrome, Wizard, Scenic; in Carlisle—Orpheum, Strand.

Among theatres that mentioned “short subjects,” without naming them, while naming the main feature, were: In Scranton—Strand; in Mt. Carmel—Arcade; in Chambersburg—Rosedale; in Altoona—Olympic, Capitol; in Lebanon—Capital.

Among theatres which mentioned only the feature film were: In Sunbury—Victoria, Strand; in Greensburg—Grand; in Columbia—Opera House; in Hazelton—Feeler; in Johnstown—Nemo, New Park, Majestic; in Pittsburg—Romantic, Shamrock—Lyric; in Hagerstown, Md.—Colonial, Nixon’s Academy; in Harrisburg—Victoria; in Williamsport—Keeney’s.

In the advertisement of the Alto theatre, Columbia, one-third of a ten-inch newspaper advertisement was devoted to exploiting the ‘short subject’ portion of the program, and the Victoria, Shamokin, devoted much space to the advertisement of an added attraction in the form of a musical entertainment featuring Miss Mary Shaw, “a clever young Winter Garden star.” The Elks Theatre, Mahanoy City, gave as much space in a big display advertisement to the “short subject” features of the program as to the exploitation of the main feature film.

The short subject program made its initial bow to Cleveland Thursday, July 30th at the Lincoln theatre to a tremendous and enthusiastic audience composed of many adults as well as children. The management of the Lincoln theatre played the program three consecutive days.

The Cozy theatre will be the second Cleveland motion picture house to give the short subject program a try-out. Manager Bob Wilkinson has booked ten reels of short novelty and comedy subjects to play the Cozy theatre September 13 and 14. The program consists of the following: “Boobs in the Woods” with Harry Langdon; “Good Morning Nurse,” a Sennett comedy; “The Love Bug,” an Our Gang comedy; “Royal Four Flush,” Spat Family; “Sure Mike,” a Martha Sleeper; and “The Window Washer,” an Aesop Fable.

Wilkinson has ordered a big bunch of Carnival one-sheets for display in the neighborhood. He has also ordered a lot of special window cards and heralds for neighborhood distribution. Wilkinson has not just booked a novelty program and then waited for business to roll in. He’s going after the business.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors’ Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as “Poor.” The second column gives the number who considered it “Fair”; the third, the number who considered it “Good”; and the fourth column, those who considered it “Big.” The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of “Poor” is rated at 20%; one of “Fair,” 40%; “Good,” 70%; and “Big,” 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Minister in Sermon Gives “Chickie” Publicity

The management of Col. Fred Levy’s Kentucky theatre in Lexington, Ky., got much valuable publicity for “Chickie” by arranging with Dr. J. Archer Gray, minister of the Maxwell Presbyterian church of that city to preach a sermon on “Modern Girls” in which reference was made to “Chickie,” coming to a local theatre. The Lexington Herald, on Monday morning, carried a column report on the sermon with the clergyman’s mention of “Chickie” embodied in it.

The sermon was advertised in advance by large display advertisements in the Lexington Daily newspapers.

Contest Provides Display for “The Rag Man”

A Jackie Coogan rag patch contest, conducted by C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, in connection with the showing of “The Rag Man” at the Schade theatre in Sandusky, O., recently attracted widespread attention to the run. A large amount of Jackie was printed on heralds and distributed among the school children, prizes for the best colorings being offered. The best colorings were mounted on a 3-sheet board and exhibited before the Schade theatre, where they aroused much interest.

The town was well posted in advance, and there was a vigorous campaign.

Heavy Herald Campaign is Given “The Fool”

The St. Louis engagement of “The Fool,” at the King’s Garden theatre, that city, received a splendid campaign at the hands of Al J. Marks and the Fox exploitation forces.

Among the stunts employed was a unique method of distributing special circulars about town, by a systematic house-to-house campaign. Fifty boys were used to distribute the heralds. Each boy wore a large printed card on his cap reading: “The Fool,” starts Saturday, King’s theatre.”

Seven big cars were used to transport the boys to different sections of the city. The cars carried banners advertising: “The Fool—Not the Owner of A Star Car. The Fool will be at the King’s theatre—next week.” The cars constituted—in themselves—a good exploitation parade.

To make doubly certain that no section of St. Louis was overlooked in the “flyer” campaign, the city was divided into districts. On one day the West Side and part of the North side was worked, while the following day was devoted to cleaning up the South side and balance of the North side. The East side of the city was handled by boys on foot and on bicycles.

The effectiveness of this stunt lay in the fact that the exploitation instead of being worked on the downtown streets of the city, or in the vicinity of the theatre—as is generally the case, was in reality brought to the very doorsteps of every home in the city. The banded cars, the boys bearing signs, and the heralds themselves comprising three separate and distinct exploitation mediums that could not fail to attract attention.

“Ten Commandments” is Given Strong Support

“The Ten Commandments,” playing the Sterling, Greeley, S. C., recently, gained many new friends for the theatre.

Manager C. T. Perrin held an advance screening for about thirty ministers with result that the picture was recommended from the pulpit of the various churches. In addition, a front page write-up appeared in the daily paper regarding the photoplay.

Greeley’s leading department store had a very attractive display in their large double window on the main street. The windows of an empty store, also, in the business section, were completely covered with paper on the attraction. Being located in conspicuous places, both windows proved excellent publicity agents for the photoplay at the Sterling.

Newspaper space was increased considerably and the usual billing augmented by the use of 27 extra one’s 9 three’s, 3 six’s, 5 twenty-four’s and one set of 11 x 14 photos.

An advance lobby was put in which played up strongly the coming of “The Ten Commandments,” followed up by an appropriate di-play during photoplay’s run.

Beauty Shop Display Given “The Manicure Girl”

For his showing of “The Manicure Girl,” Manager F. J. Miller of the Modjeska, Augusta, had a miniature beauty shop, complete in every detail. In the center of display was a table at which a young lady sat giving a young man a manicure. Cut-outs of other men and women, as well as of furniture used in a manicure parlor, completed the display which was mounted in a shadow box extending across lobby. Illuminated by colored glass, it was most effective.

The regular newspaper and billing campaign was augmented by six prominent drug store window displays put in three days prior to opening and remaining up during picture’s run. Cut-outs and 8 x 10 stills were used.

Artistic lobby display used at Dolan and Ripley’s new D. & R. theatre, Alberdeen, Wash., on “A Thief in Paradise” (First National).
“Up the Ladder” Contest Stirs Up St. Louis

There are several homes in St. Louis where Maurice Davis doesn't dare poke his head these days. That is if the owners know that this zealous Universal exploitation man was responsible for a recent contest in the St. Louis Times.

The contest tied up with “Up the Ladder.” In the picture the husband climbs the ladder of success but gets rather dizzy as he nears the top. To bring him to his senses his wife knocks the support—a mere matter of cash—out from under him.

Maurice's contest asked this intriguing question and offered passes for the best answers: “Should a wife climb the ladder of success with her husband, or should she content to stay at the foot?”

When the various wives and husbands started writing essays on the subject, the excitement began, but although many homes are reported to have come near to breaking up over the question, William Goldman’s Kings and Rivoli, playing the feature, gained the benefit of much publicity.

Theatre Front Masked for “Heart of a Siren”

Manager Grace Pedley of the Strand Amusement company's interests gave “The Heart of a Siren” a mask theatre front for its showing at the Empress theatre in Owensboro, Ky.

Half a week in advance of the showing the mask was put in place; also a billboard above the marquee. Both remained up until the final curtain on the showing.

The mask consisted of two large painted peacock fans on either side of the entrance with a large spread fan carrying the title of the picture above the entrance.

Manager Pedley finds this theatre front mask a valuable and effective method of exploiting pictures. Beaver board is used for this purpose and it can be used again and again it makes a very economical method of exploitation. A local artist is employed to paint the mask.

Men Roll Huge Dice as Ad for “Seven Chances”

In advertising “Seven Chances,” Manager Guy O. Kenimer of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, followed a suggestion broadcast from the theatre advertising department, with the exception that instead of using one man to roll a large dice about the streets of Jacksonville, he had two men roll two dice, each about a foot square.

One man was dressed in a red and white check suit and the other was dressed in a black suit. They were to roll the dice, and after a crowd had collected, offer a pass to the Arcade to anyone rolling a ‘seven.’ The stunt was a tremendous success, the free tickets doing the trick.

The lobby display was a direct tie-up with the ballyhoo. A huge motor driven revolving dice was placed in the center of the lobby where it proved a fitting climax to the publicity getting street stunt.

The Harmony Duo, who are fast becoming popular in Jacksonville as Arcade entertainers, appeared in a special prologue. The offering was preceded by the two artists singing a duet, after which the curtains were drawn back on a setting consisting of a large picture frame against a background of metallic drapes. In this oval the entertainers did their act, which went over to big applause.

“Spirit of U. S. A.” Helped by Runaway Horses Stunt

H. L. “Shake” Davidson of the Burbard theatre, Arkansas City, Ks., exceeded even his own expectations the other day in attempting to exploit “The Spirit of the U. S. A.” The “plot” was to have several army jeeps drawn through town, heavily p'aced, but an hour before mounting the signs the horse ran away and scattered signs for eight blocks.

“As far as attracting attention is concerned, I probably would have been arrested if there been any more attracted,” said “Shake”.

Display sign on the side of the Capitol theatre in Little Rock, Ark., advertising “Lady of the Night” (Metro-Goldwyn), as planned by Manager R. T. Newton.

Sennett Productions in all that the name implies. Sizzling with humor like hot fat in a pan. Fast stepping. Not a dull moment. Pretty girls—and Graves himself. Seen him? Big and handsome. Clever. Funny because he makes himself John J. Dumbell himself. When Sennett takes a comedian out of a crowd and makes him a star it means something. How can you make every dollar possible if you don't advertise him to your public?
Once in a dog’s age there flashes upon the horizon a girl who is a real comedian, funny in her own right.

Think over the women stars of stage and screen, and try to count up the genuine mirth-makers.

Alice Day is not only beautiful; she’s funny.

That’s why Sennett, champion picker of comedians, has promoted her from the ranks of the featured players to stardom.

Look at these new Alice Day comedies at the nearest Pathé exchange. When you get through laughing you’ll sign ’em up.

W. P. Walker has sold the Palace theatre, Creal Springs, Ill., to M. Whitehead and has taken over the theatre at Vienna, Ill.

Harry Weiss, manager of the First National, and newly elected president of the Film Board of Trade, was host at a dinner-dance given for the employees of the exchange on July 25th at the rathskeller of the Bevo Mill. A handsome silver loving cup was awarded to Lester Bona, city salesman, for winning a sales contest. Weiss was given a beautiful glass vase.

Miss Miriam Less, secretary to Harry Weiss, manager for First National, is vacationing in Arkansas.

The Graysville, Ill., Premier is showing on Saturday nights only until further notice due to the heavy scene of the robbery. The diamonds were insured. He furnished the authorities a description of the robbers. Mr. GOLDBAUM was held up and robbed of cash and jewelry at Springfield, Ill., several years ago.

Patrolman Patrick McGrath found the doors of the Lafayette theatre, 1063 South Jefferson avenue, owned by the St. Louis Amusement Company, open at 4 a.m. July 27. On the floor in the office beside the safe was a sledge hammer and a steel punch. The officer had interrupted an attempt to rob the strong box. About $300 in receipts was saved.

It is reported that a new picture house will be erected in the vicinity of Fifteenth and Montgomery streets, St. Louis.

Jack Underwood, manager for Enterprise, went to Chicago to meet his brother-in-law. He also visited several of the Northern Illinois city's new theatres.

G. E. McKeen, manager of the focal Fox office is back from a visit to Memphis, Tenn., where Fox will open a branch office next month.

Ferris Brothers have again taken over the house at Lovington, Ill.

John Collins is operating the Dixie, Atmore, Ark. He also runs the Majestic at Paragould, Ark.

J. R. Grainger, general sales director for Fox Pictures is due to visit St. Louis this week. He will spend a day or two here.

T. Y. Henry, district manager for United Artists will be among us this week.

Tom McKeen says he doesn't mind Milt Goldbaum being held up, but he does hate to get out of bed at 2 a.m. to help organize a search for robbers. Highwaymen should do their stuff at more convenient hours.

Joe Desberger is installing a Typhoon cooling system in the Walnut Street Theatre, Quincy, Ill.

Bill Barron, manager for United Artists made several key citys the 1st week.

S. E. Pertle plans to open his house at Bushnell, Ill., within the next few weeks.

Dominic Fresena plans to open his new Capitol Theatre, Taylorville, Ill., within a week or so.

Floyd Lewis, district manager for Associated Exhibitors was in town August 1.

Out-of-town exhibitors seen along the row were: Chester Selby and Lee; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley, Gillespie, Ill.; C. W. Mourning, Colonial theatre, Jerseyville, Ill.; Sam Taylor, O'Fallon, Ill.

GLADYS SIEBERT, chief usherette at the New theatre for a number of years, is now at her home recovering from an operation.

Patronage at the two moving pictures houses in Harrisburg, Mo., a suburb of Baltimore, has fallen off considerably since several of the cotton mills of Woodberry closed down. Both the Ideal and the Hampden have felt the exodus of mill workers very much. At the present time there is only one cotton mill in operation and it is on part time. Formerly there were about 1,500 workers at the mill during the war in operation for special parts of machines.

J. E. Hendricks, manager of the Boulevard theatre, is now recovering from a very serious operation which were performed upon him at the Church Home and Infirmary, several weeks ago. It was thought at one time that Mr. Hendricks would not survive.

Julius Goodman, manager of the Ideal theatre, Hampden, Md., drove up to Camp Perry, near Thurtown, D. C., to get several films and carried a portable projection machine to give the 108 children of the camp a great outdoor show. He says most of the boys at the camp threatened to leave unless they could see a movie. Camp Perry is run by the Bolton street synagogue. Mr. Goodman's wife is now in the Catskills with her uncle and has their youngest child with her.

William E. Stumpf, manager of the Garden theatre, is now enjoying a two weeks vacation and his work is being done by George List, of the Whitehurst organization during Mr. Stumpf's absence.

Walter L. Hanrahan, house manager of the Parkway theatre, one of the Combined Whitehurst enterprises, a group of playhouses, is spending his vacation during the week of August 7, in New York, visiting some famous studios. He will go to the Fox, Famous Players and Trios studios to see how pictures are made.

The New Lyceum theatre, which was practically destroyed by fire last April, will be taken over by William Cook, undertaker, and turned into an establishment for his own use if the plans which are now under way, go through.

An option has been taken by Mr. Cook on the property from the James L. Kernan Company, the owners, who formerly conducted the playhouse for legitimate attractions and occasionally for feature moving pictures. Lowell Sherman and George Fawwett were members of a stock company that was popular there years ago. The option under consideration is said to be about $90,000. The lot measures 60 by 180 feet and is located on North Charles street, near Preston.
MONDAY, September 14, is to be observed as a legal holiday day along Film Row in Albany, as the annual outing of the Albany Film Board of Trade is scheduled for that day. It is expected that all the exchanges will be closed the entire day although some may be open for a few hours during the morning. Tickets for the out of town shows will be handled by the exchange managers, salesmen, as well as the secretaries of the Film Board of Trade and the Zone Committee. Exchanges throughout the entire territory are reported to be buying tickets and as the outing is open to everyone in the business, there should be a crowd of several hundred, including many from other places.

Mrs. Alfred Guariche, of James- town, who was formerly Marie Wheeler, and who for several years was prominent along Film Row, or rather Wyoming, will attend the Merit exchange, was a pleasant visitor in town during the week, on her way to Waterloo to spend her vacation with relatives.

R. G. Weyckoff, a traveling auditor for Fox, after spending two weeks at the local exchange, has returned to New York.

Louis Bueettner, of Cohoes, and J. L. Shearer, of the same city, constituting the Cohoes Amusement Company, opened a 'big' stage theatre in that city last week, a 1,000-seat house which the company, after closing it last year, has reopened for the last ten years. As a rule the theatre has been closed each summer, but the first pictures recently shown on one of the Saturday nights, brought such crowds that the company has decided to open the house year round. The theatre is well filled with pictures until the fore part of September, when the regular seven day a week program will get under way. As a matter of fact it has a public spiritedness last Wednesday night, when it donated the entire proceeds of the two latest pictures, given by the theatre at the benefit of a tenant family whose homes were destroyed by fire a week ago.

Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, one of the heads of the Schine circuit, is reported on Film Row to be about to forsake the ranks of bachelordom. Some of the film exchange managers in Gloversville last week, were notified by Mr. Schine of his coming marriage, and Mr. Schine opening a box of cigars as he made the announcement.

Uly S. Hill, managing-director of the theatre in Troy and Albany, accompanied by his son, Norman, figured in an automobile accident last week. According to Mr. Hill, he was forced out of the road by a drunken driver, his car overturning and shattering the windows, but without seriously injuring the occupants. Mr. Hill's hand was bruised by the glass, but otherwise he was not hurt.

Abe Stone has surrendered the lease of the Delaware theatre in Albany, and has been busy making his entire time to the Arbor Hill theatre.

The Delaware will be operated by the owner of the property.

George Cohen, a well known exhibitor in Newburgh and Poughkeepsie, made his first trip last week. While he was here Mr. Cohen bought all of his pictures from the New York city exchanges. With his old friend, Charles Walder, now head of the Fox exchange here, Mr. Cohen decided to drive up to Albany and place some of his business here.

There is one thing absolutely certain and that is that Charles Walder, local manager for Fox, does not believe in the hoodoo of 13 nor Friday. Mr. Walder moved into a house last week and purchased some little time ago, and which contains thirteen rooms, the moving being done on Friday. When asked by who he was in the house, Mr. Walder replied that he would now be in a position to bunk in thirty rooms, as all the salesmen who arrived in town and found the local hotels already filled.

John Garry, who was married a few weeks ago, and who manages the Empire theatre in Glens Falls, has just been forced to undergo an operation for appendicitis at the hospital in that city. Mr. Garry was stricken shortly after the evening show, and was taken to the hospital a couple of hours later.

Oscar Perrin is as pleased as a child with a new toy with the improvements that have lately been made at the Leland theatre in Albany. With handsome red carpets, with new lighting fixtures and sets, and there are others that add to the attractiveness of the house, the theatre, despite the fact that it observed its 100th anniversary last May, ranks as one of the most popular in the territory. Mr. Perrin will take no vacation this year and begin his fall program of big pictures the latter part of August.

Julius Boxhorn, who conducts the theatre at the Springs in Albany, was heard to declare last week that he will never return to Europe except on an occasional trip. Mr. Boxhorn likes the United States and likes Albany, but when it comes to rainy Sundays, that's a different story. Since coming to Albany, Mr. Boxhorn has bought himself a car and spends pleasant Sundays in touring over the country.

Ormond Roberts, Louis Bueettner and Uly S. Hill, acting with Alec Herman, Jack Krause and Ted Ruhle, were appointed consti- tutional Board at a special meeting last week to clean up outstanding matters that had been dragging for some time.

William Benton's new house in Mechanicville, is progressing satisfactorily with the roof well along and the exterior well along. It will seat 1,200 persons. Mr. Benton is looking forward to big business when the opera house opens on October 1st.

Omany Brownell, who has been associated with the Hippodrome and Strand theatres in Carthage, has been selected as a student in the Paramount Theatre Managers Training School, and will leave for New York city about August 14.

Ed Hochstum, a well known salesman for Pathe out of Albany, luckily escaped serious injury one night a short time ago when he fell asleep at the driving wheel as he was on his way back from Saratoga Springs. The car left the road and struck a telegraph pole being so badly damaged that the repair bill set Mr. Hochstum back about $130.

Leon Medem, manager for Pathe in Albany, was in New York the latter part of the week, con- ferring with the Peerless booking agency relative to pictures for its houses in Glenns Falls and Amsterdam.

Little or nothing is being heard of the propositions which has to have been built in Mechanicville by public subscription, and which, according to first reports, was to be leased to the Schine brothers. Ground has not been broken for the house and no one seems to know exactly what the status of the venture is. Film salesmen returning from Utica, declare that Nate Robbins of that city, wears a broad smile these days since his selection as head of the New York State Theatrical Enterprises, and the absorption of his houses in Watertown, Syracuse and Utica, by the Famous Players.

Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, was shown in Film Row during the past week. W. W. Farley, who has just disposed of his theatres in Catskill and Schenectady, to Famous Players, returned to Albany the other day from a short trip to Florida, but left almost immediately on a ten days' vaca- tion, not disclosing his where-abouts. It is reported that Mr. Farley has become interested in Florida real estate.

Clever work on the part of Fred Hathaway of Utica, connected with the Robbins houses in that city, brought him a check for $25 from the Universal Film company. It is said that Mr. Hathaway did over some very clever work in connection with a run of a serial.

C. R. Halligan, of the local Universal, returned from his New York desk, following a two week's va-cation, one of which was spent on an automobile trip through north- ern New York and Vermont, a salesman. Mr. Halligan was much impressed with the hospitality of many country exhibitors.

After three or four days in New York city, Tony Veiller, manager of the Lincoln in Troy, returned to Albany on Thursday and with Mrs. Veiller motored on to Lake George to spend the remainder of his vacation. In Mr. Veiller's ab- sence, the theatre has been hand- led by Ben Stern, the assistant manager of the Troy.

Jake Golden will participate in the Greater Mohawk Union, having arranged a most attractive pro- gram for the Griswold in Troy. Following the closing of the Strand representatives in that city it has been decided not to start the season until August 8. The Griswold is being re-seated as well as recarpeted and improved in other ways.

Carbon copies of by-laws recently drafted by the Buffalo Zone, have recently been sent to the nine exhibitors constituting the officers and board of directors of the Albany Zone. In each in- stance, the exhibitor has been asked to either approve or reject the by-laws, or offer any sugges- tions which might serve as amend- ments. The draft received from Buffalo covered about two type- written pages, suggesting the large suggestions of value that have been received from exhibitors in the Albany Zone, it is quite possible that when the final by-laws that will comprise the Zone and Buffalo zones and bring about greater coordination, are adopted that they will be much longer. It is expected that there will be a meeting of the Albany Zone sometime the latter part of August or September, when exhibitors will be back from their vacations and at this meeting the by-laws will be discussed and action taken.

THE co-operative arrangement between First National and F. B. O. in Canada whereby the two operated jointly in the same offices in various exchange cities of the Dominion has ceased to exist and the future of the Exchange in Canada is once more identified with Canadian Educational Films, Limited, and the former two arrangements in the various key cities. In other words, Film Booking Offices of Canada and Canadian Educational Films, Limited, are again united in jointly occupied exchange offices for co-operative releasing.

P. C. Taylor continues as general manager of F. B. O. in Canada while O. R. Hanson is general manager of Canadian Educational as before, both of these officers being under the same roof in their offices on Victoria Street, Toronto.

Mr. Taylor announced, in commenting on the new arrangement, that F. B. O. had intended opening up its own exclusive exchanges in Canada within a few weeks because of the growth of the exchange offices occupied with First National had become congested through the great quantity of films in circulation, a congestion remedied by both organizations. The opportunity arose, however, whereby F. B. O. could re-effect its joint occupation of offices in the Canadian cities with Canadian Educational and this was agreed upon, thus obviating the necessity of opening new offices.

When Manager H. E. Wilton of the Canadian Theatre, Hillcrest Avenue, Ontario, heard from one or two patrons that there were folks at home who could not come to the theatre or imbibe infirmity but yet who would enjoy attendance at a moving picture theatre, he approached the managers of the city with the view to adopting a plan which would facilitate matters for the physically incapacitated. He hit upon the idea of, using a door exit on a side street as a special entrance for the old folks, this door giving access quickly to rows of seats near the front of the house where the old folks could also see without difficulty. Then he made it known by word of mouth to a great number of regular patrons and the side door is now being used frequently for those who cannot walk.

The last remaining space on the 12th floor of the Royal Bank Building at the corner of King and Bay Streets has been taken over by Famous Players Canadian Corp., to provide further room for its Canadian headquarters. The house now covers 6,250 square feet of floor area, it is pointed out, and it is asserted that the offices are located on the most valuable corner of Yonge Street. The Royal Bank Building at Toronto is the highest office skyscraper in the British Empire.

The second half of the season's schedule at the Toronto Motion Picture Baseball League opened August 4 with four strong and popular teams engaging in competitive pitting in the series, these being Regal Films, Limited; Associated First National; Famous Ashley Pictures and the Famous Players Canadian Corp. The first-half series was won by Regal Films.

When the City of St. John, N. B., recently staged the unveiling of its war memorial as a public function, Manager W. H. Golding of the Imperial Theatre decided to conduct a ceremony in the theatre itself which would co-ordinate with the ceremony in the park, thus offsetting the counter effect of the feature. At a signal from the park, the performance in the Imperial Theatre stopped and the orchestra rose to its feet. A bugler sounded the "Last Post" calmly and thoroughly co-operating with this part of the public function and this was followed by the reading of the names by them and other incidental details, the audience joining in with the singing. Manager Golding was presented with a large silver trophy, the incident served to hold the theatre up to a good light.

H. M. Thomas, Western Division manager for Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, with headquarters in Winnipeg, Manitoba, has returned to Winnipeg after spending several weeks in New York City and Toronto for the purpose of gathering ideas for the presentation of many new releases in the famous house throughout the Circuit. He returned to the Manitoba Capital in time to assist in the reopening of the Imperial Theatre, which opened on August 3 as a combined moving picture and vaudeville house.

Announcement is made that a brand new moving picture theatre is to be built in Toronto, Ontario, by the Bloor-Runnymeade Theatre Company. The new house, according to plans, will seat 1,500 persons and will be located on Bloor Street in the heart of the new Runnymede residential section. The proposed theatre will be known as the Runnymede Theatre.

The Globe theatre, Toronto, reopened Monday, July 21, after a lay-off during which the house was renovated. This theatre, which is one of the oldest of the downtown theatres, is being operated by Arthur Cohen, an official of Famous Players Canadian Corp.

The headquarters of the Motion Picture Baseball League members of Canada at Toronto, Ontario, have been moved from the Lamson Building, to the 9th floor of the new Metropolitan Building, one of the latest skyscrapers of the Ontario. The headquarters of the organization is Col. John A. Cooper.
Salt Lake City

The Hotel Utah is the scene of an important sales conference the latter part of this week of representatives and executives of Pathé. Those in attendance are: William Frazier, manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation; Ben Fish and Frank Harris, special representatives of Ben Fish; W. S. Wasing, Western division manager; William Jenner, manager of the Eastern Home Office; Walter Koefel, branch manager at San Francisco; C. M. Van Horn, Denver branch manager; W. C. Epperson, head of the office.

L. L. Savage, traveling booking manager for Pathé, is at the local office checking up on the bookings. While he here will relieve Charles Epperson in the West, the latter goes on his vacation. Chich is making to go see the scenic belt of Southern Utah.

Walter B. Wash, branch manager in this city for Associated Exhibitors, is making a swing over the Cache Valley section of Utah, and southern Idaho.

Max Roth, representative for the home offices of Fox at New York, is doing a lot of work locally at this branch since his arrival here two weeks ago.

Art A. Schayer, Fox resident manager, will be back at desk the latter part of this week after making a thorough trip through the Northwestern territory. L. Walker has been doing duty as office manager while Art has been away.

H. Bradley Fish, doing special work in this territory for Universal, is out in the territory with Milt Cohn, special selling representative for Universal. They are working at present in Idaho.

Gibert E. Rosenwald, special representative for Universal in covering the Southern Utah section with Joe McElhinney, salesman in that part of the country.

R. S. Stackhouse, local manager of the Warner Brothers branch, left for a trip to Montana. G. C. Jones, booker, has charge of the office during his absence.

Alan Barke, who has charge of the local DeLux Feature exchange, is back after a trip in the southern part of the state.

L. C. Skelley, who has been connected with the local DeLux Feature exchange since it opened several months ago, is returning to Denver next week.

C. F. Parr, resident manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, is making the key centers of Idaho and Montana. C. C. McDermott is selling in southern Utah.

Manager Parr announces that he has added a new saloon to his force in the person of Dave Schayer, assigning him to the Idaho territory. He succeeds Dave Frazier, who was promoted last week to special representative for Prod. Dist. Corp. Mr. Schayer left yesterday on this trip.

Paul F. Berger, home office representative for Metro-Goldwyn arrived in this city Wednesday from Denver, in connection with Dave Bershon, newly appointed manager of the Western Division, succeeding Harry Lustig. They are conferring with George L. Crowder, manager of the local branch, on policies governing distribution of the new product.

Manager Crowder has returned from a long tour of Idaho and Montana.

Out of town exhibitors who were seen on the local film mart this week included: S. M. Dug- gin, Exhibitors' representative at Gunnison, Utah; Harmon and Lou Peery, owners of the new Egyptian theatre, Ogden, Utah; John Rugar, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Park City, Utah; S. B. Beck, owner of the Lyceum theatre, Rapid City, Black Hills, and Ash- ton, operating the Columbia theatre, Provo, Utah; C. M. Pace, who recently opened the New Pace theatre, Delta, Utah; George Lindsay, owner of the Star theatre, Eureka, Utah; Steve Deal, proprietor of the Star Theatre, Spring- ville, Utah; F. T. Duval, manager of the Gem theatre, Murray, Utah and John W. Johnson, running the Iris theatre, Midvale, Utah.

W. K. Bloom, selling out of the local F.B.O. exchange, is traveling the Montana territory. Bloom will work for the next few weeks in the Utah section, while Joe Solomon will be transferred to the Idaho country.

L. A. Davis, manager of the F. B.O. office here, leaves next week for a swing over the Nevada territory.

Carl Stein, resident manager for United Artists, returned from a trip through the key centers of Idaho and Montana.

C. G. Eyeperson, working the Idaho section out of the local Famous Players-Lasky exchange returned from his territory. He has been in the Western Utah country for a few days before returning to his own stamping ground.

Louis Marcus, Western division manager, for Famous Players-Lasky, left yesterday for New York City, where he will devote the next two weeks to special business.

Buffalo

Rain or shine, the members of the Rochester Theatrical association are always available for an outing. This was evident when 25 members of the organization gathered one day last week at Point Peleeant for the annual outing. Headed by Jack Farren, manager of the Victoria, the party arrived at the Point early in the afternoon. Chicken dinner was the first item on the program and by the time the last course was served, the sun shone once again, drying up the field adjacent to the inn so that the sports could be conducted. The program began with a baseball game between the Burnupsiskis and the Putnemoutskis, and ended with the former winning. The rest of the program was varied, prizes being given in each event. E. M. Fay was awarded a prize for being judged the best nucleated. Jack Farren was given the spacious, and handsome. Howard Shannon, after throwing contest, Julius Greenstone; 100- yard dash, A. B. McCallum. The picnic was arranged and directed by Jack Farren and Howard Shannon. Just before the pro- gram began, Mr. Farren was presented with a purse of silver. The association is going to institute a purse of gold for the Lyceum, Eastman, Victoria, Regent, Piccadilly, Strand, Corin- thian, Gayety, Fay's and Empire theatres.

While a crowded house in the Piccadilly theatre, Clinton avenue, north, Rochester, sat through a showing of the feature picture the other night, fire of undetermined origin swept through the shop next door, resulting in $5,000 loss. Guards were placed at the theatre doors, in case of emergency, and no one was allowed to enter, although at no time was the theatre endangered. The patrons were informed of the proximity of the blaze and not until they left the theatre at the conclusion of the show did they realize there had been a fire so close.

Shea Hippodrome fans were enthusiastic in praise of the music program that closed last week with the Russian National Orchestra which gave several numbers but also starred the orchestra with several more at each appearance. It was one of the classiest numbers ever offered on the music end of the bill. The orchestra played the Eastman in Rochester and Charlie Hayman grabbed it for the Strand forors to Falls, following the Buffalo "Hipp" run.

Henry Murtagh, organist at the Lafayette Square theatre, Buffalo, is scheduled for a big Cadillaci Jordan. If Henry ever returns to dear old California whence he came a year or so ago to accept an engagement at the Lafayette, he'll probably be able to drive back in a few hours. But it looks as though Henry likes Buffalo very much. He has made many friends here.

Buffalo and western New York theatres are not worrying about cooling systems in their houses just now. The weather has been cool enough for many weeks and business has been better than average for this time of the year.

William A. Dillon of Ithaca, N. Y., president of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y. Inc., is planning with B. R. MacMillan of the staff of the Cornell Medical College to make a pioneering picture of Congressman Clarence MacGregor, chairman of the Committee on Accounts of the 66th congress, who is now at Cor- nell studying taxation and economics. Mac- Gregor is a real friend of the ex- hibitor, having been in Buffalo in aiding the elimination of the admission tax. Mr. MacGregor's home is in Buffalo.

Fred M. Zimmerman, manager of the Buffalo office of Producers Distributing corporation, and president of Western New York Theatrical Enterprises Inc., has re- turned from a vacation up in the Perry Sound district of Canada, where his party brought down a 253 pound bear and hooked 200 pounds of yellow pike. Fred is having the bear skin made into a coat for this winter.

Keith's theatre in Syracuse has definitely embarked upon a new combination. The management is assumed that the Temple, the Keith house in Rochester, may follow suit.

O. E. Hollander has been ap- pointed manager of the Buffalo branch of Warner Brothers, suc- ceeding C. W. Anthony. The change came as a distinct shock to Buffalo exhibitors and exchange men. Mr. Anthony had been with the Vitagraph company for eight years, four of which were spent in Buffalo as branch manager. During this time, Mr. Anthony earned an enviable reputation as a square shooter, good fellow and live wire among the Buffalo theatre men, as well as with Warner Brothers in Omaha.

Norman L. Spier, former manager of the Buffalo dependable office, has started out with Jerry Hill as sales manager, a car for Florida where both expect to clean up millions in the real estate market.

Maurice Chase, president of Chase Pictures corporation, expects to announce the location of his Buffalo office next week. Several sites are being considered.
A DOLPH OSTERMAN, of the City and Grand theatres, Newark, who has recently returned from a pleasure tour of Europe, was a caller among the exchanges on Tuesday. Also, A. Weissman, who operates the Summer theatre at Berkeley Heights; and Fred Faulkner, of the Oridge and Strand.

The New House at New Brunswick has been closed for the balance of the summer months and will be reopened September the 1st.

Alexander Okin of the Cranford theatre, Cranford, N. J., has gone up to Sullivan County for a two weeks' rest mainly on the recommendation of Ed Carroll of Associated Exhibitors. Ed thinks that too many shows have caused Mr. Okin's slight indisposition and that both Alec and the Montstache need the tonic quality of the country.

W. C. "Bill" Herman, of the Big U. Exchange, has been reported along Exchange Row, as being a very apt player of the well-known game of "bridge," evidence of this taking place on the Jersey Central between North Asbury Park and New York. Herman, and has any doubts about it they are invited to get aboard the 5:08 out of Asbury Park or the 8:18 out of North Asbury.

Dave Snapper and Sam Ferry, both prominent North Jersey exhibitors, are planning on doing some booking this last Tuesday.

Pathe salesmen have received word from Frank Lovejoy who recently left with a trailer outfit for a trip to New England and Canada. He has reached Quebec and is going along in fine shape.

The real estate boom at Rockaway Beach has been given a new and so far a last fillip. The city has been given so much front page space in New York newspapers, has not missed the film trade. Several years ago, Hy Gainsboro, local exhibitor, had a picture of Rockaway property painted on his hands in lieu of a debt to the tune of a few thousand dollars. The other day, he sold the land for $90,000, as the reports have it. This represents a considerable profit. It is also said that Joe Weinstock, while rummaging over the newspaper reports, decided to investigate the report and conditions and hied himself to the real estate curb at Rockaway where he made a handsome coup.

Almighty of men who operate the Cozy and Bijou at New Brunswick, has taken a cottage at Bradley Beach where he will spend the balance of the summer.

Miss Lotte Cortis, secretary to Pete Carroll, Eastern representative for Mack Sennett, was a recent visitor at the Pathe Exchange.

In Milwaukee, a branch of Famous Players Exchange, the following change has taken place on the staff. John Thurlow, who has been managing the smaller Jersey towns, will take over Joe Lee's old duties, it being probably that he has resigned and gone over to Fox. Al Davis is coming down from the Albany branch to fill the position left open by the promotion given to John Thurlow.

John A. Hammell, manager of the Famous-Player Exchange, is expected to leave next week for a swing over his district.

There is another familiar face around Harry Buxbaum's office in the Capitol Theatre building. Miss Sadie Robinson, who was with Mr. Buxbaum at First National, has recently joined the Fox Exchange staff and she has certain new old duties as secretary. Miss Robinson's old position at First National is being filled by her sister, Rosmary. Missou Ballin, Dave Gross' secretary, has also followed over to Fox, and Al Melendy, former head of Famous-Players, has recently become a member of "Bux's" rapid fire staff.

Annual construction on Jack Ungerfield's new theatre at Port Chester will start next week.

William Waldholz, booker for Pathe for the past six years, has left on a two weeks' vacation. Miss Gussie Koffler will take care of his duties while he is away. The latter is the line writer in the August first issue of the Commercial News Record relating to the launching of Harry C. Harnois, New York Exchange manager for Wm. Fox. The article harks back to the days when the film business was in its infancy and it is to doubt that Mr. Buxbaum has a world of valuable experience. Things are humming around the Fox Exchange offices these days and since "Bux" has been there, he has closed seventy per cent of his business.

Airtight inching by Jackie Miller plus heavy artillery work with the lot on the part of Tom Ryan and Frank W. Nunn, has made the activity of the Pathe office at Bay Point, for more than six years, has taken over the interests of Sid Darling of the Majestic Theatre, Willets and all are wishing Bill all kinds of success.

Jack Purvis, manager of the Newest Theatre at Universal, has returned from his vacation, all tanned up.

Dave Solomon, with Joe Hemstem of Howell's C. E. Co., recently won a double prize. Two of them at $10 apiece for bringing in the most business for the month of July.

Warner Bros. Baseball Club defeated the Newark nine on Saturday afternoon August 1st, by a score of 9 to 4, at Bennett Field, Washington Heights. The surprising feature of this "game" was the excellent twirling of Southpaw "Buddy" Morris of the Dodgers, who, as a member of the "Roosters." Good work was also accomplished by Catcher Burke and in fact every member of the Varsity team held their respective positions which aided in winning the game. The Pathe ballplayers were led by pitcher; Quinn and Gray, catchers.

Last Sunday night there was an attempted burglary at Harry Harris Theatre, 15 West 125th Street. They jumped their way through the back door and progressed as far as to break the combination of the safes and then evidently due to inexperience in the art of cracking safes, gave up the job and went their way.

The baseball bug has bitten into the moving pictures. They are to have a league of their own which will include the principal producing companies in the metropolitan district.

Preliminary arrangements for the formation of the league will be discussed at a conference of the film businessmen and one additional representative of eight months. The first meeting will be held at Fox Film Corporation studio, 850 Tenth Avenue. The new amateur league will be formed by the following teams: Fox Film Corporation, Famous Players-Lasky Corp., Metro-Goldwyn Corp., First National Pictures, Warner Brothers, Pathe and United Artists.

The baseball fans who will attend the conference are Fred Bullock, Jr., and Frank Kitz, of Fox Film Corporation; H. I. Hoben, Wm. Ace, and Josephine Dewey, of Warner Brothers; Joe Rumsey, of Universal Pictures; Martin J. Hogan and Joe Kelly, of First National Pictures; and Joe Hamill of Warner Brothers; George Roman and J. E. Cashman, of Pathe; Charles E. Moyer and Harry Du Boise, of United Artists.
W O R K was begun last week on a new motion picture theatre at the southeast corner of Twelfth street and College avenue, Kansas City, for George A. Maloney and H. H. Barrett, who have leased the building for five years from Carl Miller. Mr. Barrett also operates the Colonial theatre at Thirty-ninth and Wood streets. The new theatre will be of Spanish design with exterior finish of two-toned brick and tile roof. A lower floor will be added, making the theatre 60 x 115 feet. The opening is expected to be about August 15, 1925, and will be yet to be selected for the house. Interior features will include a lobby, 44 x 10 feet, a balcony capable of seating 30 persons, a blower fan, over 100 feet of pipe, and a bedroom to be used as a manager's office. A pay annual rental of $3,900 for the theatre.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the six Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg, spent three days in the latter part of July in New York City, discussing business with the Wilmer & Vincent executives at the home office.

Floyd M. Gibble, manager of the Majestic theatre, Harrisburg, has been appointed chairman of the entertainment committee of the Lions Club of Harrisburg, for the ensuing year.

The current issue of the Bulletin published by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor & Industry, contains an article in which valuations of equipment of managers of theatres and amusement halls regarding precautionary measures to minimize the danger of panic in fires or fire scares. Pointing out that in fire panic the loss of life is more often due to panic than to fire itself, he emphasizes the necessity of having "adequate exits and aisles of sufficient width for persons to pass quickly out of a building, and exists with bar-type panes bolts which open instantaneously."

He urges the inspection of buildings by competent engineers, and frequent tests of electric wiring and other equipment.

Elmer H. Lew, of the executive force of the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company in Harrisburg, has been made manager of a series of concerts to be given by American artists, that will be sponsored by the Penn-Harris Hotel, in the hotel ball room during the coming musical season.

The children from all the Harrisburg orphanages were the guests of Manager Sydneys J. Gates, at Lowell's Regent theatre, on the afternoon of July 30. The theatre management provided a souvenir for each child and they also received surprise packages from a local confectionery store.

Maxwell T. Hitte, at one time a motion picture machine operator in various Harrisburg theatres, and in recent years conducting his own business as a real estate auctioneer, has opened branch offices in this line at Ann Arbor, Mich., and in an Ohio city.

H A R R Y L U S T I O, recently appointed Western division manager for the Warner Brothers Vitagraph exchanges, paid his first visit to this district to study the possibilities of his new capacity. During his several days here, he conferred with H. A. Black, manager of Warners in St. Louis, and also spent some time with the exhibitors of this territory.

Seattle was favored last week with a visit from none other than Hal Dalgler, known by a majority of the theatre and film men of this territory through his former association with various theatrical enterprises in the Pacific North-west. A number of seasons ago he was general manager of the Blue Mouse Theatre in this city, and from there went to St. Paul, where he assumed the management of one of the large Finklestein and Ruben theatres. It is from that city that he has come to his new position as a vacancy from his position with the large Middle West theatre organization. He spent the number of his visit to Seattle and other Northwest cities before returning to the Twin Cities.

The week of July 22 to August 1 was Knight Templar week in Seattle, being the celebration of triennial conclaves of that fraternal organization. More than 50,000 Knights from every part of the nation were present in this city, and theatres each did their share to make the event a success, naturally reaping additional business because of the great number of visitors that were present.

Salvatore Santella, well known on the Pacific Coast as a pianist-director and ability, returned to the Strand Theatre last week as director of the Strand's Brilliant Concert Orchestra. Mr. Santella formerly was associated with that house, having terminated a contract there the latter part of May.

The resignation of Charles E. Feldman as manager of the Producers Distributing Corporation exchange was announced by the city last week, and his post at the exchange at present is being filled by Mr. J. Norman, office manager, pending the announcement of further details. Negotiations for the building of a motion picture theatre which were reported to have been going on between the Cinema Corporation of America and the Metropolitan Building Company of this city were said last week to have been definitely abandoned.
Of interest to exhibitors and film men throughout the Southern territory is the announcement of the formation of the Eastern Carolina Amusement company, with offices in Greenville, William N. C., with H. J. Paradis, well known exhibitor in North Carolina, president, and Jack Marcus, as vice-president.

The newly organized company owns and operates the following theaters: the Palace in Greenville, William N. C.; the Oasis, Kinston, N. C.; the Oasis theatre in La Grange, N. C.; the Colonial theatre, and the White theatre in Greenville, N. C.; and the Colonial theatre in Tarboro, N. C. In addition, the company holds options on many other houses and plans are now being drawn up for two new houses.

The Colonial in Tarboro, is a road show house, with a seating capacity of about 750, and a policy which is for first run pictures and an orchestra as mainstay. All the theaters operated by the company are to run first run pictures, and are equipped to take care of road shows and vaudeville acts.

F. Worsley, formerly connected with the Associated Exhibitors circuit in this territory, and brothers Groat and Dunlap, publishers, with headquarters in Atlanta, has joined the real estate throng in Florida. Mr. Worsley went to Florida to take over the management of the Arcade theatre in Fort Myers. He has left the publishing and film business, to devote his time to selling real estate for the Harris Realty company. Mr. Worsley is very popular in this territory, having worked out of Atlanta for many years and has a wide circle of friends throughout the south.

Mr. Worsley's position as manager of the Arcade theatre in Fort Myers was recently taken over by Herbert C. Wales, formerly with Progress and more recently with Universal in Washington. This appointment has been made in the past few days, and takes effect almost immediately.

F. Haygood managing Grand Theatre, Waynesboro, Ga., for R. W. Tyson.

R. W. Tyson, who owns the Grand theatre in Waynesboro, Ga., has secured the services of a capable and experienced showman for this house, and is now in the process of devoting his time to numerous other interests. The Grand is now managed by F. Haygood, leaving Mr. Tyson to attend to the interests of the western exhibitors, and possessing the advantages of ten years experience in the theatre business. Mr. Tyson has contemplated selling his theatre, but since he has made arrangements with Mr. Haygood for this position, the management, the Grand has remained in his possession.

Without any loss of business and with great smoothness and dispatch the local force of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation moved last Saturday night from the old offices on Luckie street to the new quarters, 110-112 Walton street.

The new headquarters are located in an absolutely fireproof two story brick building occupying 4,000 square feet of ground space. On the ground floor are the ad sales department, shipping and inspection rooms, while the second floor is devoted to the general offices including that of H. G. Ballantine, manager of the Liberty theatre in Tarboro. Prince, branch manager and Ernest Geyer, exploitation manager. The exchange contains five fire proof vaults, to a maximum capacity for 5,000,000 feet of film or 5,000 reels. This capacity is required for the exchange serves over three hundred and fifty-eight theaters in the states of Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and South Carolina.

One of the special features of the exchange is the beautifully equipped projection room, which will seat 250 people.

Added facilities for taking care of long distance phone calls at various points in the territory is the installation of three trunk lines coming into the exchange.

"Marty," the resident of the Forsyth theatre, who is vacationing with his family at Ocean Grove, dropped a line to William C. Patterson, of the Metropolitan, this week, to the effect that he was spending "the week-end and everything else" at the attractive summer resort.

Miss Lois Davis, of the local Metro-Goldwyn force, is on her vacation. She drove to Asheville last week, and will return Monday of next week.

Miss Ruth Brown, connected with the Metro-Goldwyn's Atlanta office went to Davis-Fischer sanctuary last Saturday for a tonsil operation. She is taking her vacation this month, and will return next week.

Ernest Geyer, Paramount's live wire exploitation man in this territory, is now on his tour from Cornelia and Toccoa, Saturday of last week, and expects to spend the entire month of August in Atlanta conducting the grand prize road show of the company.

George H. Dumond, general manager of Warner Brothers theatres is in Charlotte, N. C. this week. He is making a tour of the North Carolina circuit and will spend several days in Charlotte.

E. C. Pearce, formerly owner of the Amuse-you theatre in Winterville, N. C., has been appointed manager of the New Broadway theatre in Columbia, S. C.

S. W. Wiliamson, formerly of the New Broadway theatre in Columbia, S. C., has been transferred to the Lexington theatre in Lexington, S. C., as resident manager.

H. R. Kistler, of Pathe, was in Florida last week, and put over a large deal that F. Worsley, with the Harris Realty company.

H. B. Butner, of Educational Exchange, is back in Atlanta after a successful trip to the west "Coast." Mr. Butner returned the latter part of last week with the news that big theatre activities are under way on the coast, and that business looks big for this season.

D. O. Stewart, who opened the Airdrome theatre in Tampa, Fla., recently closed it after several days of running, and will reopen again until after September 1st, when the rainy season is expected to be at an end.

John Euell, formerly connected with Creole Enterprises, before the merger with Southern States corporation, has now joined the representatives of the T. C. Fortune hunting for Florida, and is entering the real estate field on his own hook.

Oscar Oldknow, manager of Liberty Film Distributing corporation, is in New Orleans this week, visiting that branch of his company. He will return in a few days.

C. L. Hackworth, who operates three houses in Huntsville, Alabama, came into Atlanta this week for a few days, and visited his long list of friends on film row and in the Atlanta theatres during his stay.

Mr. Quimby, short subject salesmanager for Fox Film corporation, came into New Orleans last Saturday and spent two days there with George R. Allison, of the local exchange, and visiting many friends in town. Mr. Quimby, who is a frequent visitor in this territory, is one of the most popular men in the industry, and is recognized everywhere as a thoroughly capable film man. Mr. Quimby remained in Atlanta over Sunday, leaving that evening for New York.

Mrs. Henrietta Walker Roberts, who is temporarily handling the editorial end of the Weekly Film Review, in the absence of the editor, Mrs. Anna Aiken Patterson, has been busy ever since the office this week on account of the sudden death of her mother, Mrs. Henrietta Walker. Mrs. Walker had been ill for some time, but had apparently recovered somewhat. Her death which occurred Sunday, will cast a shadow over the direct order of the orchestra of the Palace theatre.

Mr. T. Hildebrand, manager of the Odeon theatre, Birmingham, Alabama, has just collected his third cash prize in the Carl Laemmle serial series. Mr. Hildebrand cashed in about six weeks ago, on the first prize of $100, and two weeks ago, he cashed in on a follow-up campaign on a serial. Last week he was voted a $25 prize on another exploitation stunt on another serial.

Everett S. Haynes, manager of the Central Park theatre, Pratt City, Ala., opened that new house last week, and the heavy downpour he played to capacity all day, according to Roy S. Campbell, Universal sales manager from Alabama, who was in Atlanta over the week-end.

Vacation days are here, and most all of the show folks of Tampa are prepared to take a whirl at the annual rest period. This week J. H. McLaughlin, manager of the Franklin, accompanied by his wife and child, at the Victory, left for a two weeks' stay at Asheville. Charles A. Sappal, president of the Maceo Amusement Co., of Tampa, and his wife left for a motor trip of two weeks over an attractive route.

The Circle at Sebring had a fire, caused by the explosion of film. William Johnson, the operator, and S. Reynolds, the manager, both managed to get cued in keeping it confined to the booth until the fire department arrived. There was no panic, the audience leaving in an orderly manner, and it is stated that the house was emptied in less than three minutes after the alarm.

The Crystalite, at Crystal River, also had a fire, which was caused by defective wiring. A piece of covered wire, directly over the furnace, caught on fire, and dropped onto the machine, ignited the film, and burned up an entire eight reel feature, besides quite a little damage to the machines and booth, before the fire was extinguished.

Sebring is to have another theatre. The old Graham residence, which is located at the corner of Pine street and Ridge wood drive, is now being razed, and the new building is to occupy this lot. The building is to be of the Spanish type, which is the prevailing style in Florida, made of tile and stucco, and space is provided for fifteen stores besides the theatre. A. C. Price, of Bradenton, is the architect.
Milwaukee

Paul Schultz, formerly working out of the Minneapolis branch of the Fox Film Corporation, has been transferred to the newly created Milwaukee branch, from where he will travel the Upper Michigan Peninsula in a sales capacity. This territory is a portion of that incorporated in the field of the new Milwaukee branch office. All departments of the new branch are working under one roof, removal into the neat new quarters having been completed during the past week among the very most attractive and most efficiently equipped distributing branch offices in the Badger metropolis.

The Alhambra Theatre at Milwaukee is rounding out its career as an independently owned house with flying colors. On August 1, the big theatre will be taken over by its new owners, who will operate for two weeks under the present policy before closing down for elaborate remodeling, to re-open August 29. E. J. Begger, operator of the Gem Theatre at Crystal Falls, Mich., made his appearance at Milwaukee's film row during the past week, doing business and swapping yarns with his many friends among the distributors.

Stanley Brown, five-wire manager of the Alhambra Theatre at Milwaukee, has left for a two-weeks' vacation in the northland. His first stop was at Grand Forks, N. D., where he visited with his mother, going from there to Calgary, Can., where he will spend the two weeks in a house in which he began his theatrical career as a stage hand.

Considerable interest was manifested in the opening last week of the new theatre in the west end of Milwaukee, at the former position of the B. F. O. Famous visitor cash Saxe's house, Mr. B. A. Saxe having resigned that position to join the new Warner Brothers sales force. A successor is soon to be appointed for him at the B. F. O. office.

Cecil E. Malbery, district manager for the Producers Distributing Corporation, visited at the Milwaukee office last week, where he conferred with Branch Manager Charles L. Langevin in reference to the establishment of a larger office here. The new headquarters are soon to be started, and when completed will be among the best in the city.

Workmen will soon start taking out the old organ from the Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, to make room for the splendid new instrument recently purchased by the Saxe Enterprises for the house. Joe Lichter's Record Makers have been re-engaged for the Strand orchestra pit, where they have reigned supreme for the past three years.

Dale Larrisch, assistant manager of Saxe's Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, is shuttling around with an expanded chest these days. He is said to have won the whole Grand Park Golf Course last week. And why shouldn't he? He's been holing out about the links since he's eight years old.

E. A. Dodge has opened his new Theatre called the Sharon, at Sharon, O. Mr. Dodge also controls the Opera House at New Richmond, and the Temple at Whittemsville, O.

T. M. Elliott of the Sunset Theatre, Charleston, W. Va., was in the city this week making arrangements for his fall program.

Paul Krieger representing First National in Louisville, Ky., spent several days in the city last week in company with Ralph Kinshel of F. B. O. Ralph welcomed the guest and has a very long time since his buddy L. B. Wilson manager of the Liberty, Covington, Ky., went on his vacation.

The local Paramount office is one hard to enter these days. The reason for it all is that Ruth Greenfield, an inspector for the exchange, won the beauty prize at Conely Island during the Sixth Street Business Men's Outing last week. The honor was not empty for it carried a cash prize also amounting to fifty dollars. Now all the exchanges in the Broadway Film Building as well as the others in the city are contemplating of holding a beauty contest.

George Ray, has disposed of his Coliseum Theatre in Chattanooga, T. N., and has assumed a position as manager in the South controlled by Famous Players.

Catherine Flavin has resigned from the Famous Players office force and will move to Chicago to assume some other field. Laura Lock, maintenance clerk for the same firm has also resigned to enter into printing business in Covington, Ky.

Gladsy Roanes the pretty operator for Universal is spending her vacation in the Kentucky Mountains.

E. W. Footman, manager of the Burns Theatre, Colorado Springs, Colo., and W. E. Renzelman, former manager of the Wray Theatre, Wray, Colo., were visiting exhibitors in the city last week. Mr. Footman was here buying service while Mr. Renzelman was spending the week looking for a good theatre to buy.

Al Johnson, until recently the assistant manager at the theatre, Denver, has accepted a position as salesman for Famous Players. Al will cover the New Mexico territory.

George Wygant, assistant manager of Metro-Goldwyn, is in Seattle, Wash., attending the convention of the Knight Templars. E. L. Anderson of the Colonial Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., and Bill Delay, operating the theatre in Long Beach, Calif., visited the film row during the past week.

C. M. Van Horn, manager of Pathe, returned Monday from Salt Lake City, where he attended a convention held for all western managers of Pathe.

The Palace Theatre, Denver, suffered considerable damage by fire a few days ago when film became ignited. The fire was confined to the projection booth and was soon extinguished by the fire department. Eight reels of film were all most completely destroyed by fire and water.

Colorado Springs and Ft. Collins, were favored by visits from a number of managers during the past week. Those visiting Colorado Springs were J. H. Ashby, First National; Eugene Gerbace, Universal; S. D. Weisbaum, Film Booking Offices. Those visiting Ft. Collins were R. J. Garland of Metro-Goldwyn, and Chas. Gilmore of Warner Bros.

Harley Metz, Metro-Goldwyn, H. E. Brooker, Fox, and C. E. Pace of Metro-Goldwyn, are salesmen just returned to Denver for a few days stay after successful trips into the territory.

Lou Marcus was a visitor in Denver during the past week. After spending a few days with the local Famous Players-Lasky he returned to Salt Lake City. Mr. Marcus is district manager for Paramount.

Chas. O'Donnell, owner and manager of the Capitol Theatre, Yuma, Colorado is seriously ill. He is preparing to leave for Rochester, Minn., where he will submit to another operation. His many friends in the Denver territory wish him a speedy recovery.
Her Sister From Paris
(First National—Seven Reels)
(Reviewed by Oscar Cooper)

THIS highly risqué story is the best vehicle Constance Talmadge has had in many a moon. A comedy drama of the lighter type, at times bordering on farce, it is told with the touches of sophistication belonging to the new school of picture-making. Hans Kraley's script gives Mrs. Talmadge every opportunity to shine as the comedienne in breezy fashion.

There can be no doubt that the action sizzles at times on very thin ice. How to win back a husband's love, through vamping him when he does not know he is being vamped, might very well be put down as the thread running through the plot.

Reactions of a theatre audience should be the reviewer's unfailing guide to accuracy in reporting what a picture is and how much it means at the box-office. The audience is, of course, the test. It means far more than the reviewer's personal opinion, favorable or unfavorable as that may be. In the case of "Her Sister from Paris," there could be no question about the verdict of the audience; whom the picture was shown. Shown at the Playhouse, Rye, N. Y., the other night, the film brought a decided yes.

The Rye audience responded to all the dramatic situations and burst into laughter at the pointed comic situations of character and plot. They, in fact, left the pictures with the customary sophistication that seems to be prevalent in this day and age. One of the critical film men present observed that a good many of the spectators were likely finding in the picture reflections of their own experiences, distilled, of course, into dramatic action, but reflections nevertheless of what had happened or might have happened to them at one time or another.

It is all very well done. The continuity is remarkably fine. Miss Talmadge demonstrates that she ranks very high both as a comedienne and pantomimist, if any new proof of that were needed.

THEME. Light comedy drama in which a wife "vamps" her own husband to win back his love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent staging and smooth running story. The scenes backstage and in the theatre. The surprise climax. Excellent supporting cast, with particular credit due to Ronald Colman.

DIRECTION. Handles players and material so as to get all possible value out of situations. On the whole, a remarkably fine piece of direction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Opportunity for dance prologues, style shows and window displays. Miss Talmadge wears some beautiful gowns and this gives the chance for hook-ups with department stores, etc. Stress the fact that this is a picture which will appeal especially to women.

DRAWING POWER. A first-run picture for high-class audiences. As for the family trade, that is another question.

SUMMARY. A remarkably well-constructed light comedy-drama. An admirable vehicle for Constance Talmadge, with this point always to be borne in mind: it will please the sophisticated but it may offend others.

THE CAST

Helen Weyeringer .................................................. Constance Talmadge
"La Perry" ...................................................... Constance Talmadge
Joseph Weyeringer ......................................... Ronald Colman
Robert Well .................................................. George K. Arthur
Bertha .............................................................. Margaret Mann

Story by Hans Kraley. Directed by Sidney Franklin.

SYNOPSIS. When Joseph becomes indifferent to her, Helen leaves, and, meeting her sister, decides to win back her husband's love. Joseph and his friend, Robert, both invite the supposed "La Perry" to supper and both make amusing confessions to her. A triangular flirtation develops. Believing his own wife is far away, Joseph makes love to her. She visits his house, and finally promises him her favor if he will admit that he has treated his wife shamefully. The farce is kept going by the fact that she flirts with Robert and thus arouses Joseph's interest still more. In the end, she reveals herself as Joseph's own wife.

Evolution
(Urban-Kineto—Red Seal—4200 Feet)
(Reviewed by Edwin G. Johnston)

HERE'S a picture that every up-to-date exhibitor ought to book—and show—just as soon as possible. Not that it won't be just as interesting several months from now, but with the tremendous nation wide publicity that the newspapers have given the subject of evolution thru the Scopes trial at Dayton, this five reel feature with the proper exploitation, should pack them in, and now is the time to cash in on it.

The story has to deal with the origin of man and it is presented in a remarkably clear manner, simple enough for anyone to understand. Each step of the development of this planet is shown, going back to the swirling star dust, the formation of the earthly mass and the gradual cooling of it by the waters. Then the earliest forms of single cell life are pictured, step by step, taking a more life like form. There has been remarkable cooperation from the Museum of Natural History and the development of the prehistoric animals is presented in a fine way. Next in line are apes, baboons and monkeys and so it goes, right down to the first male specimen, the "Java Man." This is followed by specimens of man on thru the different periods, and in reality the productions result off like a well arranged synopsis of Well's Outline of History, a huge book that so many would like to read but are loath to tackle on account of its length.

The photography is excellent, though the camera man is not named and Max Fleischer has handled a difficult subject in a way that should earn him lots of credit. The entire film has been edited in a way that practically any audience cannot fail to grasp the entire theme.

As a whole, the picture is not only interesting but highly instructive. One of the last sub-titles is, "Some call it Evolution, others call it God's Work," so those in the audience can think the matter over and decide for themselves whether Man was a creation, or whether he reached his present state of development by such a process as is shown in this picture.

THEME. The development of the earth, plants, animal life, and man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fitting prologue, the formation of the earth, and capable arrangement.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Everyone in the entire country has either been reading or has had someone tell them about the Scopes trial that was held at Dayton, Tenn. The newspapers have been full of it—use them. Also, tell your public to see the picture and draw their own conclusions as to what it was all about. This picture fits right in with the whole question and you can't fail to stir up lots of interest if the proper effort is used.

DRAWING POWER. A well edited, excellently photographed film that should do well in the average house with the right amount of exploitation. Could be used as a feature of a program but should go better in conjunction.

SUMMARY. This is a timely subject that has been nationally discussed on account of the Scopes trial at Dayton, Tenn., and while there is'nt any cast, unless the cell life, fish and animals can be called such, there doesn't seem to be need of any. The continuity is excellent and everything follows along easily and naturally. These points combined with photography that is exceptionally good will go a long way toward filling the bill.

SYNOPSIS. There is a fitting prologue showing the present day proclivities of man and the modern achievements that have been wrought by his hand. Then the battle of the elements, the formation of the earth and it's cooling off. The early cell life and the transformation from marine life to mammal. Next, the prehistoric animals and then the apes, baboons and orang-outangs follow in order and right along to the cave dwellings and the first specimen of man.
Lorraine of the Lions
( Universal-Jewel—6700 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A FANTASTIC and improbable yarn, but none the less, shot through as it is with melodramatic punch, big thrill stuff and a generous measure of comedy, the changes are all in favor of the life registrar. A is a box office attraction. There is quite a run on pictures in which animals, both of the tame and wild variety figure largely, and in this case a gorilla of mighty thwes and muscle is an impressive, if not alarming personality.

Yet despite his fearsome appearance this beast, who by the way, is really Fred Humes, disguised in hairy skin and a set of gnashing tusks, gets a liberal amount of sympathy from the spectators, after he has saved the little heroine’s life on several occasions and generally comported himself as a regular guardian. But he is shot at the finish and dies, a victim of untoward circumstances. Patsy Ruth Miller plays the heroine who is washed ashore on a deserted island with her gorilla friend and later found by her grandfather, through the instrumentality of Don Mackay, a crystal-gazer, who wins Patsy at the finish. The jungle stuff is uncommonly well handled, the tropical scenery strikingly colorful and Miss Miller gives a performance which is remarkable for restraint and wistful appeal. A bunch of lions are also introduced, but have little to do with the action, the good, old gorilla being principally in evidence. Norman Kerry plays the handsome lover creditably and an excellent supporting cast is in evidence.

THEME. Jungle melodrama, with gorilla as one of central figures and romantic love interest.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Shipwreck scene and landing of circus survivors on island. The beautiful photography, including impressive jungle scenes. Surprisingly lifelike illusion of gorilla as portrayed by Fred Humes. The comedy numbers. Love affair of heroine Lorraine and Don. Storm effects when gorilla is killed.

DIRECTIONS. Has obtained splendid atmospheric shades, piled up the thrills sky-high, interpolated comedy gags in tinsely fashion and worked up to a tremendously exciting finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. There’s an occult turn to the tale which you might use in billing, building on the crystal-gazing incident whereby heroine is found. For the rest, lay special emphasis on the wonderful jungle scenes, the old story of the little girl who was reared to maturity by a friendly gorilla, the sweeping melodramatic thrills and romance which develops when the girl meets the man who was responsible for her rescue and safe return to civilization. Feature Patsy Ruth Miller and Norman Kerry, not forgetting to mention Fred Hume’s marvelous characterization of the huge ape.

DRAWING POWER. Has a general appeal, will entertain even the highbrow fans, and score a hit with the general public. Works well in all the trade.

SUMMARY: Despite its wildly imaginative plot, this ranks as an exceptionally good melodrama and a credit to all concerned in its production. The camera technique is perfect and the views of the island wilderness are particularly impressive.

THE CAST

Don Mackay...Norman Kerry
Lorraine...Patsy Ruth Miller
Bimi...Doreen Turner
Colby...Harry Todd
Hartley...Philo McCullough
Livingston, Sr...Joseph Dowling

SYNOPSIS. John Livingston’s father disowned his son when latter was but seven years old, but agrees to care for their seven-year old girl, Lorraine. Ship with circus aboard is wrecked, Lorraine saved by Bimi, a gorilla, and landed on deserted island with elephant and cage of lions. John’s father, through agency of crystal-gazer Don on the islands, saves the life of Bimi, who takes the care of Bimi. They take her to San Francisco. Don falls in love with her. During a storm Bimi gets panic-stricken, breaks out of cage in which he is confined, saves Lorraine and runs off with her. Don, fearing for Lorraine’s life, pursues, and rescues her. Bimi is shot and killed, much to the regret of his mistress. Don is about to go away, but is restrained by Lorraine and they are united.

The Unholy Three
(Metro-Goldwyn—6848 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A CROOK melodrama of the finest! Freak characters, oddly fascinating, riot and ramp through a perfectly terrifying atmosphere of mystery, violence and intrigue. What hitherto swirled into regeneration sunshine, so far as two of the arch-conspirators are concerned. We get the unique combination of a giant, a dwarf who later masquerades as a baby, a ventriloquist and girl pickpocket, with a cheap museum background to begin with, later merged in a criminal confederation operating from a bird-store headquarters, Matt Moore is their chief, and the only innocent person in the bunch.

The ventriloquist wants to make a financial killing, so that he can wed Rosie, the light-fingered expert, his companions are simply “out for the stuff”, but Rosie complacently mutes by facting in love with a clerk Hector. Throughout, the suspense tension never slackens, even in the comedy situations where parrots for sale converse socially with possible purchasers, the ventriloquist being responsible for their chattering powers. Removed to private homes the birds naturally turn dummies, and Lou Chaney, disguised as an aged woman, goes to the residences of the aggrieved customers to demonstrate the talkative ability of the Polly’s. She, or he, wheels the dwarf along in a baby carrier and later spits out the location. These sequences, including a murder committed by the giant, are finely worked out, and have the feeling of a climax in the end which a gigantic gorilla’s figure. Lou Chaney carries off chief dramatic honors by his portrayal of the ventriloquist, but the acting as a whole is on an extraordinarily high plane of artistic efficiency.

THEME. Crook melodrama, enlivened by comedy values, bizarre settings and quaint characters.

DIRECTION. Suspense well developed and maintained. Has the treatment, characterizes and registers thrills with tremendous “kick” to them. Kept continuity intact and action moving at smooth, uniform pace.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can bill this as an underworld romance of immense melodramatic strength, altogether different from the usual thing and offering some of the strongest characters that ever fitted across a screen. Stress Lou Chaney’s performance as a woman, play up the gorilla episode, and feature Mac Bush, Matt Moore, Victor MacDonald, Harry Ealres and Matthew Betz.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any theatre, big or little.

SUMMARY. Originality of plot, weird atmosphere and oddity of characters combine to make this an unique and welcome screen contribution. It possesses mass appeal in the highest degree, gripping and holding attention of spectators from beginning to end.

THE CAST

Ventriloquist...Lou Chaney
Rosie O’Grady...Mac Bush
Hector McDonald...Matt Moore
Hercules...Victor McLaglen
Regan...Matthew Betz
Jeweler...John Merkyl
Echo...Harry Ealres

SYNOPSIS. Three dim museum freaks, giant Hercules, ventriloquist and dwarf Tweedledee are performing while their confederate Rosie picks pockets in the crowd. The midget’s bad temper leads to a disturbance ending in a free-for-all fight and a general confusion, but agrees to help the somnolent徨 of a man to make a fortune and wed Rosie. They rent a bird store, where the ventriloquist makes the parrots talk to customers. Later, disguises as a woman and wheeling the dwarf in a baby carriage, Echo visits homes of victims, who show her how to demonstrate the birds’ talking ability, and the dwarf marks down places where later the trio enter and rob. Meanwhile, Rosie and Hector, the store clerk, fall in love. The giant and dwarf commit a murder and fly to the mountains accompanied by a gorilla. They quarrel, the dwarf lets loose the gorilla, which kills them both. The reformed Rosie and Hector wed, Echo resumes museum career.
Sally of the Sawdust
(United Artists—9500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BIG commercial and artistic success, this latest D. W. Griffith production shines forth on the film horizon as does a planet in a constellation of average stars. There is no better proof of a feature's quality, especially from the straight box office angle, than when it stirs an audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. And during its initial presentation at the Strand Theatre, New York, "Sally Of The Sawdust" exerted such magnetic sway over the spectators' emotions that they alternated, laughed, wept and cheered with absolute abandon as the story unfolded its varied moods of sentimental lirue, mirth, pathos and dramatic intensity.

Undoubtedly Mr. Griffith has added yet another notable achievement to his long list of seven- leaguers, which he has sponsored and directed. Taking a simple tale, he has invested it with such wealth of heart interest, mingled with merry comedy, such breathless suspense, and mounted it so ingeniously that the most hardened critic can scarcely fail to give generous credit to his superb craftsmanship. As to the acting—the characterizations by W. C. Fields, as the good-natured, rascally, lovable old circus flier, Professor McGargle; and Peyton Lennox, as the vivacious, but pathetically little Sally—are marvels of mirthful and poignant appeal, and the support is well worthy of the talented principals.

THEME. Comedy drama, with realistic circus atmosphere and romantic interest.

DIRECTION. Intelligent at all points. Has manipulated his characters with such understanding, skill, handled dramatic situations and comedy with perfect understanding, and scored heavily in cleverly contrived climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can safely praise this as one of the season's really great pictures, tell your patrons about its heart-touching pathos, its bright, crisp comedy and list it as a guaranteed Griffith film masterpiece.

DRAWING POWER. There can be no argument as to the ability of this attraction to please. In any kind of house, large or small, in any community, it will prove a box office magnet of irresistible pulling strength. In a sense, it is bound to advertise itself, for those who see it will not rest content until they have induced their friends to do likewise.

SUMMARY. Once in a blue moon a picture makes its appearance which registers so vividly in the imagination that thereafter, for a considerable period, the reviewer unconsciously turns to it for purposes of comparison. This is a case in point!

SYNOPSIS. Professor Eustace McGargle is a side-show entertainer with a traveling circus. A young widow, trapeze performer, before dying, confided to a little girl that she, the mother, is the daughter of a good family, disowned because she wed a circus man. Sally grows up with the circus. McGargle, her father, and her mother have broken. They alternated, laughed, wept and cheered with absolute abandon as the story unfolded its varied moods of sentimental lirue, mirth, pathos and dramatic intensity. Sally and McGargle beat their way on a train to a town where they get work at a carnival. Peyton Lennox, son of wealthy parents sees and falls in love with Sally. Judge Foster warns society folk regarding the sad fate that befell Sally and McGargle. Sally discovers his son's infatuation, appears and denounces the girl. Young Lennox dresses Sally up and has her attend a masked social function. She makes a hit, but when unmasked is ordered out. The professor is arrested for cheating in a gambling game and Sally taken as an accomplice. He is freed, rushes to where Sally is being tried before Judge Foster and proves her identity as the Judge's granddaughter. A general reunion follows.

A Fighting Romeo
(Davis Distributing Division, Inc.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE usual type of standard Westerner, with a ruggedly honest hero, bad men and heroine sorely in need of a strong arm to protect her, evoking around the "wide open spaces, bucolic, blazing red-clad desperados of plain and mountain scenery" for background. Also, the ex-loner Dave goes big on brag and short of courage, who finally "finds himself" and redeems previous cowardice by rescuing said hero and heroine at the point of an unloaded Colt, when they are captive in the hands of the villain ringleader.

All rather conventional as regards plot, but so far as gunplay, stress of physical combat and fast action go, there's enough and to spare, and fans who care more for this sort of thing than mere story values will no doubt find it sufficiently entertaining. They will be less interested in the love interest. A sentimental factor if a few jokes of comedy had been thrown in to relieve the melodramatic strain. Five straight reels of scrapping and general heroes, without a single moment of joviality are apt to sit hard on the toughest mental digestion. Even the situation where the ancient stunt of having the tenderfoot dance to the accompanying rattle of a six-shooter is utilized, hasn't a shadow of humour about it, for even the sardonic laughs of the victim's persecutors, suggest malice, rather than reckless fun. But Al. Ferguson works hard in the lead and deserves a credit for his energy, if nothing else, and the support, and the supporting cast.

THEME. Western melodrama of usual brand, with hero foiling cattle-rustlers and winning girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Pleasing scenic shots. Episode where Dave Matthews goes East, rescues Jim Warner, son of wealthy friend, from evil associates and takes him West. Jim's introduction to heroine, his braggling propensities and exposure of cowardice before girl. Dave's adventures with rustlers, kidnapping of heroine, and Dave's arrival at cabin where she is held. Trapping, of pair by rustlers, and incident where Jim holds up captive by empty gun and releases himself—Paul Endicott.

DIRECTION. Has done very well with non original plot, avoided padding and accentuated thrills with good effect.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Advertise as fast-moving Westerner, with plenty of hard riding and fighting angles, as well as interesting love affair. Feature Al. Ferguson, who is fast becoming popular as hero in this particular sort of picture.

DRAWING POWER. Is best suited to the needs of the smaller houses where patrons are strong for rough-and-ready melodrama. Or could be utilized to good advantage as half of double bill.

SUMMARY. Picture one of a numerous class, each of which is but faithful remake of one to its period. There is nothing new in either plot or development, but the five reels slip along so briskly and players work with such vigor that the net result is fairly interesting.

THE CAST

Dave Matthews .......... Al Ferguson
Helen Mcmasters ...... Elaine Eastman
Buck Connors .......... Paul Endicott

Jimmie Warner ........ F. Schumann-Heink
Gerald Mertagh ........ William Dills
Author, J. J. Fleming. Directed by Al Ferguson.

SYNOPSIS. Helen Mcmasters, owner of Paradise ranch, is constantly losing cattle through rustler depredations. Her foremost, Dave Matthews, suspects Buck Connors of being thieves' leader, and Dave goes East with shipment of cattle and calls on Helen Warner, ex-ranch owner, now a wealthy man. Warner is worried over the dissipated habits of his son, Jim. Jim will go, but intervenes by accident between Jim and a couple of crooks who are fleecing him and takes him West. Jim brags considerably to Helen regarding his courage, but shows the white feather when confronted by Connors. Helen finds one of the rustlers looking suspiciously like her son, and captured and held prisoner in a deserted cabin. Jim accidentally overhears a conversation which reveals Helen's whereabouts, overcomes his timidity and goes to aid her. Dave reaches the cabin first, but is surprised by Connors and three of his men. Connors is about to dispose of Dave for good, when Jim gets the drop on the outlaws and forces their surrender. It transpires that his gun was unloaded. Jim becomes foreman and Dave weds Helen.
A WESTERN of a rather different kind from its contemporaries, this film offers thrills and excitement with enough to ensure it a hearty reception wherever the red blood stuff holds the fans. That the plot isn't in the least bit probable doesn't matter, for what admirers of this species of entertainment want is action plus—and they get it with a vengeance while the hero is whipping redskins, aiding a lady in distress, bull-dogging a bull and in general carrying himself as a two-fisted, hard-riding, fast-shooting star of movie open-air melodrama should.

Also, there's the celebrated horse Silver King, as great an attraction as ever, who seems to grow wiser with each successive appearance on the screen. The juveniles will surely enjoy this film, as will Harbison's redheads. Director Del Andrews has managed to introduce several comedy scenes into the melodramatic trend of the tale which brighten up a whole lot. These humor episodes bring to the fore a tenderfoot Easterer, whose fashionable clothing makes him a thing of wonderment to the untutored native sons, pretty ancient jests, some of them, but they'll get the laughs anyhow. Among other intelligent feats performed by Silver King, that in which he brings his master out of Slumberland by seizing a towel, soaking it in water and laying it on Fred's countenance deserves especial mention.

THEME. Western melodrama, with college-bred Indian reverting to type and training wild bull, as well as leading redskins in warfare against whites.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Silver King's exploits. Comedy in which Eastern tenderfoot participates and scene where hero mistakes a cow for the wild bull. Incident where hero finds his girl's father at mercy of bull, attacks and wrestles animal down. The fights with Indians and impressive face-to-face attemperation.

DIRECTION. Has done very well with lightly-con-structed plot, bringing out thrills sharply, providing good comedy relief and keeping action going at brisk pace.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Fred Thomson has a big following among the fans who patronize Westerns and you can boost him and his wonder-horse Silver King to the limit. Feature the scene where Fred sets a trap for Indians by having horse pull on string attached to gun-trigger, so that whenever a redskin shows up against the skyline he topples over with a bullet in him. Stress the Indian battles and Thomson's redskins, who live on Skull Mountain, and kill settlers whenever they get a chance. James Harbison, cowboy, has a wild bull from which he breeds a cross-strain of ferocious cattle. The bull escapes and Red Fang keeps him in his lair. The Government sends Del Andrews to investigate and he falls in love with Harbison's daughter, Eleanor. Red Fang informs Harbison that he has found his missing bull, persuades him to come to the stockade and demands Eleanor in marriage. Harbison refuses and is tied to a tree. Eleanor comes in response to a message sent by her father and is also made prisoner. Dan arrives just in time to subdue the bull single-handed, as the animal is about to gouge the girl and her father.

SYNOPSIS. Red Fang, Indian college graduate, goes back to his people and incites them to warfare against the white men. He leads his band of redskins as far as Tall Mountain, where he is met by the Mounted Police. Del Andrews, a two-fisted cowboy, arrives on the scene and joins the battle. A wild bull is trapped by Del and his posse, and the renegade redskins are driven from their encampment.

THE DANGER SIGNAL (Columbia Production—5502 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE elements of human interest and sympathy are widely developed in this Western, which isn't by any means so melodramatic as the title would suggest. The big thrill centers in the scene where a runaway locomotive threatens destruction to an express train headed in an opposite direction, when the hero, riding a motor-cycle races against the thundering engine, beats it to a switch, and throws the lever just in time to avert a collision. Down a sidetrack the runaway dashes and smashes into an empty car, while the passenger train whizzes by unharmed.

But apart from this well filmed and breath-taking situation the picture dwells chiefly on the domestic troubles of the hero's mother, a widow, whose husband left her the will of his millionaire father, and was accordingly disinherited. The grandfather takes charge of one of her twin boys, Ralph, who grows up an utter rascal, while Robert, the remaining son, is his mother's only stay and comfort. Complications are brought about by having both lads employed on the railroad of which the old man is president, with Ralph, the bad egg, an assistant superintendent. Also, they both fall in love with the same girl. It is, of course, sufficiently obvious that something will happen to square Robert with the stern grandfather, but the film holds its grip well, just the same, with Wagner giving a generally hilarious appeal. Then there is the portrayal of the mother, and Robert Gordon, scoring as the hero.

THEME. Domestic drama, interspersed with melodramatic punches which include a near-collision scene on railroad.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene in opening reel showing young mother surrendering one of her twin boys to hostile grandfather. Events depicting her love for remaining son, and hero's gallant fight against poverty. Rivalry of brothers for heroine Laura. Scene where escaping convict runs away with engine, and is shot dead. Hero's pursuit on motorcycle and winning of race to switch, which he throws in time to avert collision with express.

DIRECTION. Has turned out a very appealing drama in which the characters seem real and built up the action by stressing the story's sympathetic values and avoiding excess melodramatic pressure. Thus, the narrative is put forward more convincingly than is usual with railroad pictures, and the big punch scene of the runaway engine comes out all the stronger by contrast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title should draw railroad men and you can promise patrons in general a very satisfactory hour's entertainment. Dwell upon the love of the mother for her children and self-sacrifice in their behalf, as well as the romantic side of the story. Above all play up the near-collision scene. Jane Novak, Dorothy Revier, Robert Edeson and Gaston Glass should be featured.

DRAWING POWER. Is classy enough to meet re-requirements of first-run houses and should meet with well-deserved success in neighborhood and smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. Registers far above average feature, is well produced in every respect, an excellent attraction.

SYNOPSIS. Mary Browning, widow, surrenders one of her twin boys to the police. Robert Browning, her son, and his marriage with his son. Ralph grows up a wastrel. Robert works hard and finally gets employment on railroad where Ralph is Superintendent. Both fall in love with Laura Whitman. The ensuing conflict results in Robert losing his job. But Robert's chance comes when an escaping convict runs away with an engine and is shot dead at the throttle. The engine dashed down the track where the express is almost due. Robert pursues on a motorcycle, cuts in ahead of the flying engine and throws a switch which shunts the runaway on to a side-track and the express thunders safely by. Robert and mother are reconciled to the wealthy grandfather and Robert wins Laura.
The Trouble With Wives

(Paramount—6374 Feet)

Private Affairs
(Producers Distributing Corp.—6132 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Parry)

The small-town atmosphere and characteristics of this film are its chief stock-in-trade, with the sleepy life of a quiet burg suddenly stirred into temporary animation by the belated arrival of a pianist and his partner. The chief trouble with a tale of this kind is that it wanders into so many by-paths that it is impossible to concentrate its interest and the spectator gets somewhat bewildered trying to follow the different threads. There isn’t any real drama worth speaking of, the comedy bits making the best showing; and as might be expected, vigorous action is altogether absent. The acting saves the feature from being relegated to the list of mediocre attractions, and in this connection it may be noted that Hardee Kirkland’s portrayal of the town drunkard stands out in bold relief as the hit of the picture. Arthur Hoyt contributes a clever sketch of a stammering druggist, and the support, as a whole, is adequate.

THEME. Comedy-drama with small-town atmosphere and lives of characters turned topsy-turvy by delivery of bunch of letters lost five years in local post office.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scenes showing effect on different recipients of long-delayed mail, when delivered. Return of Lee Cross, loudly clad, in swell auto to home-town, and disillusion of young married woman to whom he proposed by letter, when she meets him. Renovation of town drunk. Satisfactory climax.

DIRECTION. Considering the scattered nature of his plot material Renaud Hoffman didn’t do badly. The pathetic angles are nicely worked in and touches of humor whimsically administered. The continuity wobbles, but that can’t be helped under such conditions.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Teaser ads, dwelling on probable consequences of letters delivered five years late are in order. You can treat the idea from both comic and serious side. Every name in the cast is known to fans and should be played up. Where a mailing list is available a circular letter of ancient date could be utilized.

DRAWING POWER. Should do fair business in average house, if rightly exploited. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. Principal thing in picture’s favor is the very human flavor of its characterizations. This factor makes up to a large extent for the shifting of the interest spot-light from one group to another, as the village folks seem refreshingly real and natural.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. After the death of the old postmaster of village of Two Forks, a package of letters are found undelivered. Their distribution causes a sensation. The town drunkard, Gillespie, learns that he is heir to a fortune. Amy Lukin, now wed, gets a proposal from her former sweetheart. Cross Lee, who went to the oilfields; the druggist’s wife, Irma Stacy, opens a letter from a former flame to her hubby, while he stares aghast at a missive to him from a girl to whom he is engaged. Alma Wormald finds out the letter is for Lee Cross, but he suddenly arrives, overdressed, in an ornate car, and one look at him cures Amy. Lee swaggers to the post office where Agnes Boram, to whom he used to pay attention, works, but as he becomes obnoxious, Agnes’ lover Fred enters and thrashes him. The newly-rich Gillespie makes Fred the superintendent of his factory properties and all ends well.

My Lady’s Lips
(B. P. Schulberg Prod.—6609 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Parry)

This crook melodrama is designed to appeal to audiences with a keenly developed liking for the sensational, and indications are that it will be successful along that line. Incidentally, the film shows a gallant fight against the third degree method of making criminal suspects confess, as popularly supposed to be practiced by callous police executives in every Big American city. Details filmed in this connection are decidedly unpleasant and not convincing.

However far police may go in administering torture, about the last victim in the world they would select would be a well-known reporter, even if he compromised himself by aiding a female crook.

True, in this instance the hero gets in bad with his newspaper boss, but there never existed a star reporter so utterly friendless that the cops would dare to man-handle him like a tramp or branded convict. But the convincing public will probably accept it as genuine, so when the unholy news-chronicler and his feminine associate go to jail, no doubt on-lookers will accord them full measure of sympathy. Early sequences show how the heroine first went wrong, romance begins when she meets the reporter. There are some thrilling moments registered, but one can’t help feeling that the hero’s unavailing sacrifice for the lady is rather unnecessary and theatrically unreal.

THEME. Crook Melodrama, third degree angle and love affair between reporter and underworld girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Suspense developed in crook den scene where hero is put to severe tests to uncover his identity. Police raid, arrest of thugs, escape of heroine. Her surrender. Third degree incident. Wounding of girl and reconciliation with lover in finale.

DRAWING POWER. It’s up to exhibitor’s individual judgment. If patrons want highly colored underworld melodrama, this is O.K. Otherwise, third degree scenes, gruesome, apt to shock sensitive over-seers, especially in houses catering strictly to select family trade.

SUMMARY. Picture crudely exciting, develops some savagely forcible punch in this respect but wrecks artistic and convincing qualities in order to stress sensational appeal. Footage excessive, should have been kept within six reel limit at most.

SYNOPSIS. Discovering that his daughter Lola frequents gambling joint run by Dora Blake and Eddie Gault, newspaper editor, Bill Seddon assigns reporter Scott Seddon to round up notorious Blake gang. Scott gains access in guise of exconvict to crooks’ underground den, is put to severe tests, but conceals identity until exposed. It leads to arrangement with police to capture and arrest of thugs. Having fallen in love with Dora, he shields her, she escapes, but surrenders when Seddon is pinched. Police give both third degree, force confessions of guilt from each. They receive penitentiary sentences. When released, Scott finds Dora operating high-class gambling house. A losing player shoots her in arm, but she and Scott are united.
A Woman's Faith
(Reviewed by George T. Parly)

A STORY of the Canadian woods, melodramatic, yet sombre of mood throughout and with a religious background on which is etched the profitable results to be obtained by faith and prayer, seems at first sight pretty tough material for a director to turn into good screen entertainment. Yet exactly that has been done in this case. Sombre undoubtedly the general tone of the film is, also it points a strong moral, but the amazing thing to be noted boils up in the fact that it holds together nevertheless, and scores hard on the box office target.

Judicious direction is, of course responsible for the all-around excellence of the picture, as well as sincere and virile acting by principals. Worst supposes the Percy Marmont plays superbly as the chap who turns atheist when a woman turns him down, loses his sight in a scrap with a bully in the wilds of Canada, forges a marriage with a girl falsely accused of murder, whose prayer at the shrine in the Cathedral of Restoration cures his blindness. Alma Rubens deserves unqualified praise for her delicate, appealing rendition of the part of the Art investigator, Neree, for she should the fine perform ance of ZaSu Pitts and Cesare Gravina be forgotten. There isn't a dull moment in the entire production, but it is devoutly to be wished that the subtitle-writer hadn't indulged in such unneces sarily lengthy and prosey scenes during the opening reels.

THEME. Melodrama of Canadian backwoods with religious twist and strong emotional sequences.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where hero discovers fiancee is false. His flight to Canadian wilds and fight in which he is blinded. Shots showing pilgrims journeying to shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, with priests bearing host through kneeling penitents. Neree climbing, saying prayer at each step. Return of hero's sight. Final episode, with pair approaching chapel to be wed.

DIRECTION. Has all situations closely together, kept action moving smoothly and maintained absorbing interest all through film.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The church folks, clergy and women's clubs should prove invaluable factors in helping to exploit this one. There are fans who always fight shy of films in which religious characters play a prominent part. For the benefit of these, you should enlarge on the story's romantic interest and melodramatic strength, making it clear that it isn't to be considered mere propaganda. Feature Alma Rubens, Percy Marmont, Jean Hersholt, ZaSu Pitts and Cesare Gravina.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to bring good financial returns in any type of house, excepting in localities where exhibitor knows that religious atmosphere in a feature is banned by his patrons.

SUMMARY. A notable achievement both from directorial and acting standpoints. Subject a difficult one to handle competently, but the warmly sympathetic urge of the picture is beyond dispute.

THE CAST

Neree Caron...Alma Rubens
Donovan Steele...Percy Marmont
Cluny...Jean Hersholt
Blanche...ZaSu Pitts
Francois...Hughie Mark
Odillon Turcott...Cesare Gravina

Adapted from Charles Buddington Kelland's story, "Miracle." Directed by Edward Lachman and produced by John Neree, wins fight with Cluny but loses his sight. Neree persuades him to accompany her to the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre. There, her prayers are instrumental in curing Steele's blindness. Neree's uncle confesses guilt of murder which Neree is accused. Steele marries her.

Fine Clothes
(John M. Stahl Production-First National—Eight Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

O NCE again John M. Stahl comes forward with a picture which has all the ear-marks of a ready-made box office winner. This one is an adaptation of Franz Molnar's stage play, "Fashions for Men," which, however, has had its plot moved bodily from Austria, the original locale, to London, the producers believing, and perhaps rightly, that the fans preferred such a setting. Molnar deals with life in a satirical way and this story of Peter Hungerford, a London merchant with a big heart, who trusts everybody and consequently is in turn beaten by everyone, until he loses his little store, his wife, his all—but rises above adversity so that in the end he finds happiness once more, is one of his best.

First of all the screen version is notable for the excellence of its characterization. Percy Marmont gives to the role of Peter, an interpretation that takes rank with the other famous parts this star has given the screen. In the hands of this actor, Peter is made to "live" and we are sure that everyone is going to find cause for praise in this fine character portrayal. Then Lewis Stone shares honors with Marmont in the role of the Earl of Denham. Stone is immense, while Alma Rubens really acts as "Paula," and Raymond Griffith supplies a few moments of his inimitable comedy in a minor part. The remainder of the cast is excellent in every way.

THEME. A domestic drama in which a London shopkeeper made bankrupt through his kindness, fights back to success and saves his fair bookkeeper, with a desire for fine clothes, from a wealthy nobleman.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening sequence in which Peter loses his wife, his savings and his little store. The scenes at the earl's estate where the former shopkeeper interrupts many tete-a-tetes. The characterization contributed by Lewis Stone, Percy Marmont and other members of the cast. The climax in which all wrongs are adjusted.

DIRECTION. John M. Stahl has turned out a very creditable feature possessing close to 100 per cent in entertainment value and has inspired his players to put over some exceptionally fine acting. He has, as usual, given the feature an artistic background.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A tie-up with your local department store on a fall fashion show would be a great selling point. Have models display the new styles on your stage. Interest local literary and dramatic clubs on the first picturization of a Molnar play. Offer prizes for the best looking home-made gowns. Play up the names of the cast.

DRAWING POWER. Should go over in the best houses in the land and, with a little exploitation, do business. Stone and Marmont are prime favorites.

SUMMARY. One of the worthwhile contributions of the silent drama to the new season. An entertaining transplantation of a Molnar play in which superb characterization stands out. Holds the interest all the way, is beautifully mounted and understandably directed.

THE CAST

Earl of Denham...Lewis Stone

Theatre Design, Plans and Specifications

Ways and Means of Construction: Methods of Awarding Contracts

By H. Robins Burroughs, Theatre Engineer

After any given theatre proposition has been studied and analyzed from an investment point of view and a decision has been reached as to its construction, the next thing to be carefully considered is the ways and means of construction. The usual procedure is to engage an architect or engineer to prepare complete plans and specifications from which estimates from general contractors are obtained and the contract awarded to probably the lowest bidder. In analyzing this procedure there are several angles to be fully considered, all of which are of considerable importance and two or three of vital importance.

The first question to be considered is that of deciding in what manner and by whom the preliminary plans are to be drawn. It will usually be found that, in the study from an investment point of view, it has been found necessary to make certain preliminary sketches in connection with the analysis of study and in the determination of the size and capacity of the theatre. These sketches will undoubtedly form the basis of development for the architect or engineer who is engaged to develop the problem from a building point of view. Very frequently it will be found that the preliminary sketches alone have been under-studied and that in their development a complete change is found to be desirable. This should not be the case. If proper studies are made in the beginning, the sketches will be accurate data for further lines of action and there will be no need for revision. This will also mean that the analysis from the investment point of view is correct and that the statement of investment, based thereon, will show true results. On the other hand, if sketches are hurriedly prepared, inaccurately drawn and the study formed by false premises, the results are likely to be unsatisfactory and misleading.

Necessary to Keep to Original Plans

It, therefore, becomes necessary, to develop the plans along the original lines contemplated by the sketches in order that the final cost may be kept precisely in line with that which was estimated. Herein lies the great weakness, for the usual tendency in the development of the plans is to get away from the original idea and over design the building to such an extent that its final cost materially exceeds the original estimate. To accomplish these results, it becomes necessary to have clearly in mind in the beginning the actual type of construction and the amount of elaboration and decoration which the project will stand. Plans and specifications, of course, will be definite and complete only in so far as those who prepare them have a definite, complete conception of the materials to be used and the amount of money to be spent. It should be kept in mind that the bulk of construction of a theatre lies in the engineering or construction features for the problem of decoration is one that is almost unlimited and has an extremely wide range of variation. In other words, the interior and exterior may be highly ornamented or it may be left entirely plain depending upon the amount of money that should be spent in this connection on any particular job.

Economy of Construction of Primary Importance

It, therefore, becomes evident that economy in the design of the construction is of primary importance. This feature is frequently lost sight of for the reason that the working drawings are drawn by those inexperienced in the economies of construction, which resolves itself into a problem in engineering economics, and unless the design is approached from this point of view, it is certain to be more expensively designed than need be and the aesthetic considerations are likely to overrun and control the cost of construction. This point cannot be too heavily emphasized and, in order to get the desired results, only persons experienced and trained in this line of work should be commissioned to represent the financial interests; for, after all, the usual theatre is built as an investment or from an investment point of view and should be considered as such throughout the entire operation, including the preparation of plans and specifications.

The usual tendency for the past has been to produce a theatre building which is considered by the general public as being attractive and beautiful. This has very little bearing on the box-office receipts within certain limits, of course, desirable to have a theatre, which is attractive and pleasing to the eye but it need not be too highly ornamental or expensively decorated. The interior decorations of a theatre is an entirely different problem from that of a house. Theatrical productions in any sense, including the theatre, are undertaken with the idea of creating an appeal to the public largely from a psychological point of view and this point contains one of the secrets of successful theatre production. In other words, the construction of a theatre and the preparation of plans and specifications for such involves a number of elements which are not usually considered in the usual course of procedure. The objective of the engineer or architect who prepares plans and specifications should be to produce for the owner a complete instrument with which he can obtain, with the proper management and the usual course of business, a satisfactory return on his investment.

This brings the subject to the point of consideration of size, type and kind of theatre to build in any given locality. Here again is an opportunity for a wide range of variations and a wise decision can only be made by those who are capable of studying the situation from a local point of view and whose judgment is in keeping with needed results. One of the greatest errors which maintain in this connection is that certain types of owners are inclined to rely on their judgment rather than to take the advice of others who make a specialty of this line of work. There is just as much demand for technical, business and economic advice in theatre construction as there is in legal or other professional lines of work.

Three Usual Methods of Construction Followed

Assuming that the design, plans and specifications have been thoroughly studied from both an aesthetic and economic point of view and have been completed, ready for estimates, three usual methods of construction are used. One is to obtain estimates from four or five selected bidders; the second method is to allow any contractor who may desire to submit a bid; the third is for the architect, engineer or owner to obtain separate bids on the various trades. The first method involves the least trouble on the part of the owner or his agent. The second method is likely to lead to complications, due to the fact that irresponsible contractors are likely to underbid and mislead as to the probable ultimate cost. The third method involves considerably more work on the part of the engineer or architect, but usually is the most economical in the final analysis. The writer has had considerable experience with all three methods of handling construction work and, as a result, for the average job he is strongly of the opinion that the best results can be obtained by the third method, for the reason that the owner or his agent is then in control of the situation and is not subject to the continual bother of extras, which he is sure to be subjected to if the contract is awarded to a general contractor. He not only has this advantage but he is in a position to make any changes at any time without involving any other trade than that directly concerned. In the first method, in the event that it is possible to make a change, there is always involved the question of an extra and the general contractor is in the position to charge just about as he pleases. There is no means of controlling this situation.

Advisable to Secure Rigid Opening Date

Another disadvantage is that the owner has practically no control over the progress of the work. The general contractor will frequently estimate the time of construction to be less than one-half of what his actual time may be and there is no way of controlling this situation unless there is a penalty or bond clause in his contract. In order to obtain this clause it is usually necessary to place the time of completion at such a length that the contractor is usually on the safe side. On the other hand, if the construction work is handled by the third method, the owner's agent, engineer or architect, who is handling the work, is in a position to deal directly with each trade and each subcontract and it is a well-known fact that small units can be handled to a greater advantage than large units. One man can control a certain number of men and this principle is exemplified particularly in construction work. Consequently, the time of completion is under better control by the third method than by any of the others and the time of completion is usually a very important item, for the reason that each day's delay is actual loss of return on investment.

Source of Finance Influences Construction Methods

Another point which may have some bearing on the method of construction to be used or may even determine it is that of the source of finance. If the owner is not in a position to entirely finance the job, it will usually be found that he will not be able to control it, but, on the other hand, if he is independent financially and is able to furnish the necessary funds as they may be required, he is in a position to dictate and should take advantage of it. The best way to secure this advantage would be to have a competent engineer or architect supervise the construction and handle the sub-contracts direct, in which case the engineer or architect becomes the controlling factor in behalf of the owner and is unbiased in his position, whereas if it is left to the general contractor, who in his position also represents the owner but who is primarily in a biased position due to the fact that he is largely concerned in the profits which he can make from the job and very frequently the amount of extras that he can secure, this advantage will be lost.

One of the determining factors which has a direct bearing on the awarding of the work to a general contractor is that of knowing in advance the cost of the work. This is actually misleading for the reason that the average job is susceptible to so many extras that the final cost is not definitely decided by giving the work out on the lump sum basis. The average owner, however, unfortunately does not realize this phase of the situation and the main fact that he pays lump sum price for the work, he concludes that he is now safe and that he will not be obliged to spend any more than his contract calls for. The contractor's point of view is quite the opposite. He does the contract on a lump sum basis with the idea that the amount of his contract is only a beginning and he expects and makes every effort to involves as much additional cost by means of extras as it is possible to do. Consequently, the point that the writer wishes to emphasize is that, even though the construction work is awarded on the basis of the general contract, it is by no means a guarantee that this will be the ultimate cost of the work. If the plans and specifications are not thoroughly comprehensive of the work to be done and the supervision is lax, then the owner is largely at the mercy of the contractor, who is in a position to control the situation in any way which might be most satisfactory to him. On the other hand, if the work is handled by the owner's agent, (engineer or architect) and sublet direct, he is actually more certain of completing the work at the estimated price than otherwise, for the reason that the work by this method is under better control and should be done in less time and at a less cost.

In conclusion the following points may be noted: namely, plans and specifications prepared from both the aesthetic point of view and that method of construction adopted which will permit the owner to get the desired results at a proper cost and within a reasonable length of time. The latter the writer desires to emphasize because of the fact that, from his personal experience, he has found that the average construction job lacks control and the owner is more or less at the mercy of the contractor doing the work.

Small Modern House to Be Erected in Cleveland

H. Petti of 306 Williamson Building, Cleveland is drawing plans for $90,000 motion picture theatre, to be a one story brick structure and erected at 1609 Lake Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. The owner of this theatre is Paul Guadianove, Film Exchange Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

Eastman Announces New Pocket Size Motion Picture Camera

HOME movies would seem to have been born again with the announcement just made by the Eastman Kodak Company of their development of a new model Cine-Kodak. Practically pocket size, as simple to load, hold and operate, it is claimed, as an ordinary Kodak this camera is to sell at $70.

The popularity of home movies according to the announcement has been proved and while the more serious worker may still prefer the present electrically driven Cine-Kodak, the new more compact model, will appeal to the world of amateurs at large.

This latest achievement is a thoroughly practical motion picture camera reduced to the same compactness and simplicity of operation that have made the Kodak famous. With its genuine leather covering it has the appearance and is about the size of a 3A Kodak closed.

It takes ordinary Cine-Kodak film (16 mm wide) in 50 or 100 ft. lengths, is daylight loading and spring driven. The film is made reversible, that is, through a special process the negative is reversed to a positive and the film actually exposed is used for projection. This eliminates cost of additional film and printing and is an emphatic economy of operation.

The price of the film it is announced also covers the cost of finishing at any one of the Eastman laboratories. No tripod is necessary.

This new model is held at waist level, the subject found in the view finder and by simply pressing a spring twenty feet of film may be exposed without rewinding. Steady spring tension provides for evenness of exposure.

The lens is an f/6.5 especially designed for this camera. It has a focal length of only 20 mm (less than 1 inch) which gives a broad angle and permits the photographing of large objects at relatively close range. "Close ups" can be made at 4 ft. and distant views can follow with no focusing adjustment.

Further description is contained in the announcement. The weight is given at 5 pounds when loaded, size 8-13/16 inches long by 3-9/16 inches high and 3-1/2 inches wide. It is therefore easily carried. It can be brought into action as quickly as any Kodak and a tripod is not necessary as the illustrations show.

Indicators on the outside of the camera are convenient helps to the operator. An exposure guide on the diaphragm tells the length of the exposure. The view finder shows which of the four stops to use under various conditions. A foot gauge automatically tells how many feet of unexposed film are left in the camera.

The film reels are opposite each other and can easily be loaded in daylight. Threading can be done very quickly. Pull-down claws in the gate automatically adjust themselves to the perforations in the film. The guide bar is at an angle, allowing the film to be wound on the reel without danger of jamming or of loose-winding. Studs in the door prevent closing the camera if the loading of the film has not been correctly done.

The curved gate holds the film accurately in the film plane without danger of abrasion or scratching and also eliminates the necessity of frequently cleaning the gate.

The exposure lever may be locked in operating position so that the operator may place the camera on a firm support and include himself in the action of the picture.

As this new model uses the same film as the original Cine-Kodak no duplication of stock on the dealers' shelves is necessary. It is 16 mm wide, of safety stock, and instead of the usual printing operation, the negative, through a special process, is reversed to a positive so that the identical strip of film that was used for exposure is used for projection as well.

The company announces that while it is not in position to fill immediate orders, plans are well under way to begin deliveries toward the end of the current month and to produce in quantities by mid-autumn.

Southern Development Corp. Building House in Atlanta

The Southern Development Corp. is beginning work on the erection of a handsome new suburban theatre in Atlanta to be located in West End, at 201 Lee street. This same company operated the Palace theatre, in Inman Park, of which Alpha Fowler is manager. Upon the completion of the new house, which will be bigger and more elaborately equipped than the Palace, however, Mr. Fowler will transfer his services to the West End house. Announcement as to who will fill Mr. Fowler's place at the Palace will be made at an early date.

The new theatre will occupy a space of 50 by 200 feet and will accommodate one thousand people. The chairs are special air-cushioned upholstered, and the enormous typhoon ventilating system has been ordered, and everything in the way of the latest and most improved projection equipment is to be installed. The theatre will be one of the finest suburban houses in the south, and exclusive of ground value about $50,000 will be spent in building and equipment. This is only one of a number of theatres planned by the Southern Development corporation, and announcements will be made regarding the others at an early date.

Kansas City Explosion Quiz Under Way

A 3-day inquest, in which sixty-seven persons were summoned, was begun in Kansas City this week in connection with the explosion and destruction recently of the Gillis theatre, combination motion picture and burlesque house. Last week a fourth body was found in the ruins, but thus far has not been identified. No cause of the explosion has yet been discovered.

Atlanta House, Rebuilt After Fire, Again Operating

In Atlanta, the Bellwood theatre, 600 Marietta street, recently destroyed by fire, was reopened Monday, June 29th, with new equipment. Roger B. Toy and his associate, Mr. Cauthorn, are very well pleased with the remodeled theater, which will now seat about 500.

The Almo Theatre, Raleigh, N. C., was destroyed by fire on Wednesday, July 15. The loss amounted to about $45,000 and the cause of the fire was unknown.

Motion Picture Cameras Gain in Exports

One hundred and twenty-three motion picture cameras were exported from the United States during the month of June in comparison with 59 for June, 1924. This was shown in preliminary Department of Commerce figures, which further gave the value of these as $29,271 as compared with $12,192 last year.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1925, exports of motion picture cameras totalled 1,110 valued at $280,657, while for the fiscal year 1923-24, 1,039 cameras were shipped abroad at a total value of $342,062.

Inquiries and Comments

Some kind correspondent in Atlanta, Ga., recently sent us a couple of photographs of a projection room interior with the comment that the Peerless Reflector Arcs, which are much in evidence in the pictures, represent the one and only installation of the kind in Atlanta.

Other than the photographs which accompanied the sparsely worded description of this neat installation we have but little information concerning the details, probably due to the exuberance of the correspondent who overlooked this unimportant point.

A general view of the projection room is shown in Fig. 1. Even the name of the good-looking chap midway between the projectors is unknown, but from his proprietary attitude and the fact that he is garbed in the accepted costume of a projectionist, white shirt, striped trousers and "hanky" deftly tied to his neck pocket, we deduce that he must hold the chief executive position with respect to the projectors shown in our photographs (which are not really ours, but merely loaned).

That pensive expression he wears, reminiscent of Conway Tearle, we are unable to account for. We really do not know whether it indicates disgust at the presence of the new reflector arcs or whether he is brooding over the loss of the two relics which they replaced.

As we said before, we have no inkling as to his name, but if, perchance, he should read this and get peeved, we swear that we will retaliate by finding it out and publishing it.

Up-to-Date

However, to get back to business, we ask you to inspect a few of the details shown in this picture which, we believe, help to make a first-class projection room. The scent chamber. For instance, above each projector, which permits of sliding the lamp houses over without the grinding and scraping usually present in the telescoping-stovepipe arrangement sometimes recommended. The sliding gravity door and the metal film cabinet in the left foreground indicate a desire on the part of the management to make conditions as safe as possible. The resistances, one at the base of each projector, appear to be firmly fastened, by means of strap iron, to the safety switch, thus insuring that they will stay put and not be kicked all over the floor of the projection room. Not a bad idea at all. No loose vessels, wastepaper baskets, newspapers, carbon stub poles, and the are in evidence, which is one reason for the neat, orderly appearance of the entire room.

Peerless Arc

The Peerless Arc, by the way, which is made and marketed by the McAvoy Mfg. Co., has a number of unique features which distinguished it from other arcs of the same type.

In the first place, it follows the first type of reflector arc, designed in Germany, in that it uses a true parabolic reflector with the positive crater placed at the focal point instead of ahead of it as in the case with the other types. When so placed, the light beam is reflected approximately parallel to the film, and there is no place in the system is a true image of the light source formed, since the condenser lens is placed at a distance from the aperture equal to its own focal length. This means maximum screen evenness in addition that the beam does not spread out over the aperture plane where the spot is smallest.

This system was described once before in this department about five or six months ago, at which time the theory of it was explained.

A side view of the Peerless Arc as installed in the Cameo Theatre is shown in Fig. 7. The current capacity of the arc is 25 amperes, at which current it is claimed to be as effective in the way of screen illumination as a 100 ampere ordinary arc.

Flushing, N. Y., to Have Modern Picture Theatre

Plans have been completed for the erection of a motion picture theatre which is to be modernly equipped.

The new theatre will be erected on Flushing Avenue about 100 feet from Broadway and will run through to Hopkins Street. The site upon which the theatre will be built has a 20 foot frontage on Flushing Avenue and is 100 ft. deep and on Hopkins Avenue is 120 ft. wide and 100 ft. deep.

The approximate cost of the new theatre will be $500,000. The architect who has completed the plans is George W. Rappold, consulting architect of Famous Players Corporation. The seating capacity of the theatre will be 2000.

Carolina Theatre Supply Co. Moves to New Offices

The Carolina Theatre Supply Company, of Charlotte, of which J. C. McCormick is manager, will move very shortly into new and improved quarters. The new offices are located in the United Film building, and are more convenient and in a more advantageous position than the present location at 13 South Church street. Mr. McCormick is well known throughout this territory, and is one of the most popular men in the theatre business.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Lockport, N. Y. Boasts New $300,000 House Elaborately Appointed

The city of Lockport, N. Y., now, after a long wait, boasts of one of the finest theatres in the western part of the state, for the Palace theatre, built at a cost of $300,000 and seating 1,800 persons, has just been opened. The house was built by Lock Cities Theatres, Inc., and has been leased for a long period by the Paramount theatre department. Largely to the efforts of Charles E. Dickinson, who promoted the house, and A. Edmund Lee, President of Lock City Theatres, is Lockport indebted for its new theatre de luxe.

One enters the Palace through four double oak and glass doors which lead into a spacious tiled lobby, with panels of leaded glass and blue plush lined attraction frame on each side. At the left is the box office with its elaborately decorated windows in leaded and stained glass. The lobby is lighted by several attractive chandeliers in gold and bronze. From the lobby four more oak and glass doors lead into the auditorium, which is a mass of gold, bronze and old rose. There are 1,100 seats in the auditorium floor, which is made of heavy concrete, painted with several coats of paint and covered with heavy Wilton carpets. The seats were installed by the American Seating Company.

The ladies’ room is beautifully furnished with every convenience and well ventilated. There is a large chaise lounge in it for use in case of sickness. At the right going into the house is the door leading into the base ment where there is a large smoking room for the men and where one gains entrance to the novel concrete air duct which leads around the entire house and through which cool air, drawn in by a “Sirocco” blower, is circulated to ducts placed in the floor sides of the auditorium. A man can walk through this concrete tunnel which is 6 feet high and lined with two and one-half inch thick concrete.

The balcony is reached by three stairways from the rear of the auditorium which ascend to a mezzanine floor, attractively furnished by the Haywood-Wakefield company. Hallways lead from the mezzanine to the balcony which has 500 seats and 125 loges, each row of loges, being separated by brass rails furnished by the Zero Valve and Brass corporation of Buffalo. At the top of the balcony is a fully and modernly equipped projection booth wherein is installed two Simplex machines. Brekent photo, a two-reel, stereopticon and recording machines. Martin Heiberger is in charge of projection.

At each side of the stage are 14 boxes. The prosenium is 40 ft. by 25 ft. and the entire height of the stage is 65 ft. A beautiful mural painting, done by the Lusk studios of Rochester, surmounts the prosenium. At the top of the ceiling is a beautiful dome inlaid with heavy gold leaf and illuminated by an indirect system with every color of the spectrum. At the top of the boxes at each side is the gold grillwork hiding the pipes of the $25,000 Wurlitzer Hope-Jones organ, the console of which is placed at the left in the orchestra pit and which can be raised to concert position by its platform.

The stage is fully equipped for the presentation of the largest road shows. In the fall, by the way, the house will add Keith vaudeville. There are 42 set-back stage.

There are additional rest rooms for ladies and gentlemen on the mezzanine floor, as well as enclosed phone booths, ice water and other conveniences such as writing desks. A Raven screen is used in a beautiful stage setting.

Leon H. Lempert & Son of Lockport were the architects. John Moon & Co., of Lockport had the general contract.

George T. Cruzen is resident manager of the Palace. Joseph Pomeranz, of Buffalo, is orchestra conductor and Bobby Demming, organist. Prices are 10 to 75 cents.

A large ornamental marquise extends out to the walk over the entrance. Attraction signs are placed at the top of the marquise, at each side, and there is a row of lights around the under sides, shaded by ornamental glass. There are three stores on the ground floor and six offices on the second floor. Manager Cruzen’s office opens off the mezzanine.

The Palace is perfection throughout and a theatre that any city should be proud of. It is a credit to its builders and is sure to provide entertainment de luxe for the citizens of the historic and famous Lock City.

New Theatre for Plainfield, New Jersey

Plainfield, N. J., is to have a new motion picture theatre to be erected at 434-436 West Front Street at a cost of $85,000. The owner of the building is The Bern Realty Company. The plans are being drawn.
Remarkable Effects Produced by New Use of Slow Motion Camera

A DISTINCT novelty in news reel subjects is contained in Educational's news reel, Kinograms, No. 5105, in a picture showing slow motion and regular motion on the screen at the same time.

This remarkable effect is shown, it is claimed, for the first time in film history, and was accomplished with the aid of a specially designed camera. The picture was taken by John J. Blythe, Kinograms cameraman for the southeastern district, and concerns a series of views of cadets from the Citizens' Military Training Camp of Atlanta, Georgia, in cavalry practice at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., Colonel Meyer, of the Signal Corps, U. S. A., in command at the Fort, staged the scenes for Blythe, which consisted of expert riders in daring equine stunts, and a series of hurdle jumps.

Blythe, who has been working on his special camera for some time, took it with him as well as a regulation camera. In the exhibition over the hurdles he first exposed the film on the upper half of the screen showing regular motion. Then he wound back the film and this time exposed the lower half in slow motion, using a special device that allows him to obtain any speed desired.

The effect on the screen is truly startling, it is claimed, and gives more than ever before a real chance for analysis. Here you can see simultaneously a horse jumping naturally and also eight times slower than normal. The picture is easy on the eye and the spectator is given plenty of time to take in the whole effect. Of course the horse in the top half of the picture in regular motion disappears from the screen before the slow motion horse has departed, but in order not to leave a blank space on the top half of the screen the cameraman had other horses follow the first one.

The only manner by which this effect could have been accomplished before the appearance of Blythe's invention would have been by double printing. In this case, however, no trickery or juggling with the film has been done.

The scope of this invention is enormous in providing all kinds of screen entertainment, and Kinograms is planning to produce many surprises along these lines in the near future.

$100,000 House for West Allis, Wisc.

Plans have been announced for the erection of a $100,000 motion picture theatre to replace the present Allis Theatre at Sixty-Fourth and Greenfield Avenues, West Allis, Wisc. The new structure will be of brick and tile and will be constructed on a site 60x120.

Renovated San Francisco Strand Becomes First-Run House

THE "farthest East," of San Francisco's theatres will be the new St. Francis, as the Strand is to be known henceforth. Being remodeled and redecorated at large expense, it takes its place among August 1st, among the large first-run movie palaces, along Market Street, with a capacity exceeding that of the Imperial by more than 500 seats. It is announced by Howard Kingsmore, the manager, that it should find great favor among mothers for it will have a "creche" or day nursery in which the young hopefuls will be amused by a nurse and toys while the parents find more sophisticated entertainment downstairs.

The largest electric sign in town, larger than any on New York's Rialto, will grace the exterior of the St. Francis. A new system of lights will illuminate the maria's and sculptured arches within, for the interior will be done over in the Persian style of architecture and ornament. Three crews of workmen and artists going at the task in three shifts, are engaged in changing the exterior and installing the stage and electric equipment ready for the opening timed in Greater Movie Season Week. The organ, now being set up, is unique in that it has a marimba accompaniment, an echo effect and tubes that will simulate the sound of harps and orchestral strings. The St. Francis will screen feature pictures of importance, and will indeterminate runs.

Speculation has arisen concerning the new orchestra leader, but no name has yet been given, though it is believed he will be a well-known San Francisco musician.

$75,000 House for Coal Mining Town

A NEW $75,000 motion picture and vaudeville theatre and apartment building is to be erected in Lykens, the leading hard coal mining town of Dauphin county, Pa., according to announcement made on July 21 by John Loe, a Lykens confectioner, who heads a group of ten men who are to finance the proposition.

He is about to close an option to purchase from Dr. George W. Myers, for $12,000 a business property on East Main street, which will be razed to make room for the new structure. The site is almost directly opposite that of the new $150,000 Community Hotel that Lykens citizens are building. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,000, and there will be five apartments and ten individual lodging rooms in the three-story brick building that is planned.

Mr. Loe declined to state the names of the men associated with him in the enterprise, but said four of them are Lykens business men and the rest are capitalists of Harrisburg and New York City.
"Eve's Lover"—Warner's, Piccadilly

Times: "Exceedingly good. Add one more to the exhibitions which prove that if a photoplay is put on well the audience are sure to take it. "Eve's Lover" has a cast and decor to make its fortune. In addition to the script, the picture has a cast of very popular title actors."" - Daily News.

"There is some splendid acting and a very good acting by all of them. In the production, Anita Stewart is the star and she fills her part as lady with great ease. She is the most appealing couple imaginable and the little queen of her South Sea Island, who turns out to be a most courteous and charming woman. The costume of Leila's is a dashing and humorous count." - American.

What Simplex Service Means

Every Simplex Distributor maintains a service organization consisting of a group of experienced men. These men make it their business to assist theatre owners in all matters pertaining to better projection so necessary to the successful operation of any theatre large or small.

The benefit of their experience is available to you without obligation. If your projection is not satisfactory, call in a Simplex Service Man. There is one in your district now.

Service — Plus — CooperationBuilt the Simplex Reputation

It makes no difference what kind of machine you are using. Simplex Service is broader and goes farther than the selling of projectors. The good will we have won is not based on our products alone. For service plus cooperation built the Simplex Reputation.

Seymour Ansley.

Well, that's not unexpected.

It does that everywhere!
"The pictures that will be successful in 1925-1926 are those that have ready-made audiences waiting for them."

—Introduction to Paramount announcement book, May 1925

These of the Greater Forty have had their first presentations:

1 NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK
2 THE LUCKY DEVIL
3 THE STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN
4 BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK
5 WILD WILD SUSAN
6 NOT SO LONG AGO
7 WILD HORSE MESA
8 THE TROUBLE WITH WIVES
9 THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

let's check 'em up:

1 NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK - A proven draw in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Boston. A clean-up wherever played. And a bigger clean-up assured for the smaller towns.

WHY?

WHY?

Broke all records in complete capacity for a week at MERVickers, Chicago. It cleaned up in New York. It'll go big anywhere.

WHY?
It's different. It's got meat and drama in it. Brenon did a masterful job. Percy Marmont excels all previous work. The story was widely read in Liberty. It's a great title. A ready-made-audience picture.
In Newport, R. I., it did more in 4 days than the gross for any entire week since May. Because it was advertised right. Where the right appeal is made, this high-class show can clean-up.

WHY?

No better picture was ever made. A credit to the movies. Too imaginative for the low-brows, but a clean-up, if played right, for the millions. Comedy. Crash. Stage hit. Laughs. Imagination. Wealth of exploitation ideas. A ready-made-audience picture.

Clean-up at Rialto, New York, with no side attractions on program. Audiences love it.

WHY?

Fulsome praise from critics. Big business wherever shown. The kind of picture that brings both money and prestige to a theater.

WHY?

A clean-up in San Francisco pre-release. Loudly praised by critics. Sure fire anywhere.

WHY?

Try this on your projector. It speaks for itself. No more pleasant, humor-warming, audience-pleasing comedy was ever devised. Pre-released in New York in Greater Movie Season competition proves its great drawing power.

WHY?

Everywhere breaking the stupendous records of “The Covered Wagon.” Playing to extra time to accommodate the crowds. An admitted knockout everywhere.

WHY?

Best known picture in minds of public today. A ready-made-audience picture.

-and that’s a REAL beginning of a GREATER MOVIE SEASON!

ENDOWED with every physical attribute that makes for popularity; possessing a magnetism and histrionic talent distinctive and thoroughly schooled under the greatest directors of stage and screen, Rod La Rocque has attained his present high position as the foremost romantic actor of the screen through sheer merit and proved box office drawing power.

"THE COMING OF AMOS," "RED DICE," "BRAVEHEART" and "THE UNTAMED GENTLEMAN" are the titles of the four pictures in which La Rocque will star for Cecil B. DeMille.

The stories around which these productions will be made were selected with a view to giving Mr. La Rocque the greatest opportunity for the exposition of his magnetic personality and the exploitation of that distinctive mimetic talent that has endeared him to the motion picture patrons throughout the world.

"THE TOURIST"

First of six new two-reel

Tuxedo Comedies

featuring

JOHNNY ARTHUR

Directed by WILLIAM GOODRICH, is the sort of reception that is given only with the advent of a great star

—a sure-fire money-maker for Showmen

The N. Y. Morning Telegraph
says:

Here is the best two-reel comedy that has been turned out this season. It is a charming trifle, and there is every indication that in its star, Johnny Arthur, Educational has a real find. He is a delightful personality—he creates a character rather than merely submitting his person to the thuds of the slapstick. There is very little rough stuff of any kind in "The Tourist," but there is actually human interest—a rare quality in the two-reelers. Arthur plays a worthy tourist who has considerable trouble keeping his ancient flivver intact.

One of the best bits of business ever concocted —one that will set any audience howling—is the scene in which Johnny converts his car into a stove and cooks his breakfast on its various parts. It must be seen to be appreciated.

As if a real star and entertaining tale and excellent direction were not enough, there is added the presence in the cast of the most promising girl we have noticed on the screen in a blue, or even a red moon. She is Helen Foster, and if some enterprising producer doesn’t sign her up for life, he will be missing the chance of his own lifetime. She is beautiful, she has poise—she is in plain language, a wow. She helps to make "The Tourist" a real knockout that any house should welcome with open arms.

And the M. P. News
says:

This is the first of the series of Tuxedo comeddies starring Johnny Arthur and if indicative of what is to follow, the series should be a prof-table one for all hands. By way of a change in these short comedies, here is one that tells a real story with some form of continuity and that does not sidetrack itself in interspersing an abundance of good comedy and gags. Both the gags and the comedy work into the story naturally.

William Goodrich has done a splendid job with the directing and the cast does the rest with the good story. Unfortunately there are not enough comedies of this type. There is a touch of melodrama to it, great quantities of comedy and enough suspense to keep the interest at a high pitch.
LOYALTY–

The watchword of the world
The spirit that binds great armies and navies
The heart of big business
The cement that holds together friendship and good-will
That breeds confidence
That spells success
The exhibitor who is loyal to his patrons never has need to worry
And the news reel that is loyal to the exhibitor never is without friends

DAVIS DISTRIBUTING DIVISION, Inc., in accordance with its established policy of a fair and square deal for the Independent Exhibitor and for its Independent Producing Units has, in every case, sought to secure the exchange man in each city with the best reputation for square dealing, fair play and ability to secure bookings.

It has placed much of its product with such men throughout the United States.

Now Davis Distributing Division, Inc., has closed contracts for its output for the next five years with Vital Exchanges, Inc. — composed of a group of men, most of whom, for years members of the sales force of Vitagraph, have bred confidence in their word and earned for themselves reputations as “square dealers.”

Thus at one stroke the Independent Exhibitors and the Independent Producers are alike reassured. The former that they will get the best pictures at “live and let live” prices – the latter, that their productions will bring back to them all that they are worth as box office attractions.

Davis Distributing Division, Inc. pledges its word to Exhibitor, Producer and Exchange alike that each unit will receive a square deal. All existing contracts will be faithfully performed.

VITAL EXCHANGES, Inc.

DAVID R. HOCHREICH, President

Announces the closing of a contract for the handling through its 29 independent branches in the United States and Canada of the entire product of

DAVIS DISTRIBUTING DIVISION, Inc.

J. CHARLES DAVIS, II, President for the next five years

All Davis Distributing Division contracts now in force will be faithfully carried through.

VITAL EXCHANGES, Inc. in each exchange city will be ready to take contracts on or before Labor Day.
VITAL EXCHANGES, Inc., enters the sales field of the industry to enable the men who toiled faithfully over a period of years to build for themselves and their former company a reputation for honesty and fair dealing, the opportunity to go into business for themselves.

The "Live and Let Live" principle that has been the guiding star of these men for so many years will be the backbone of Vital Exchanges, Inc. Each branch man will own and operate his own exchange, and thereby profit from the good will he has built up. He in turn will play square with the Independent Exhibitor, and they will both profit accordingly.

In my search for product to be distributed through our twenty-nine branches in the United States and Canada, I found none to equal that offered by Davis Distributing Division, Inc., so we signed a contract to take all of their product for the next five years.

As a further pledge, I personally make these statements for my company:

1st: Vital Exchanges, Inc. will never enter the exhibitors field of owning or operating theatres.

2nd: Vital Exchanges, Inc. will depend solely upon the Independent Theatre Owners for their support, and will never sell out to financial interests allied with producer-theatre owning interests.

Dear Mr. Matthews,

I have a very interesting fact before me which I have discovered after carefully checking my records of the business I have done in my theatre here in Caribaldi. I think you would be interested in having this fact laid before you.

I have used during the past year, a little service from practically all of the exchanges doing business in the Northwest. I do not believe my community is any different from any other community in the United States, unless it be the fact that my patrons are red-blooded people who desire the best there is to be had in entertainment values.

Now here is the point. I have paid no more or no less for your service than I have for that coming from any other exchange. And right here I want to say that the pictures supplied me by P.E.O. show me the only real profit of my entire service for the entire year.

Yours very truly,

A NYBODY can be an exhibitor, but to be a successful exhibitor is entirely another matter! The successful exhibitor doesn’t just buy pictures, put them on his screen and trust to luck that the people will keep coming. He figures out what kind of pictures his people will like, what kind of pictures will help to build his patronage.

He knows that human nature is very much alike—what the average man and woman in one town will like, the average man and woman in another town will like—and he bases his judgment on the business being done with pictures by his brother exhibitors. In this way he gets a line on the producing companies turning out the highest average of box-office pictures.

This is the reason that more successful exhibitors are becoming F. B. O. customers daily. They know that F. B. O. Pictures are box-office pictures—they know that stronger exploitation campaigns are put behind F. B. O. Pictures than any other brand—they know that the service is right and that the prices are right. They know that if they can’t make money with F. B. O. Pictures they can’t make money with any pictures!

The letter in this ad shows you what one exhibitor thinks about it! There are thousands of others who feel the same way, as the Exhibitors’ Reports in the Trade Papers are proving weekly.

Get on the F. B. O. band wagon today. We don’t care how much money you are making, until you become an F. B. O. exhibitor, you are not making as much money as you are able to!

Why Hundreds of Theatres Changed their Projection

In hundreds of theatres the use of the Incandescent Lamp has cut the cost of projection from 35% to 75%. When you can save hundreds of dollars a year on your current bills, and at the same time improve your projection, is it not a matter of good business to do so?

The following table shows the annual savings that a 900 Watt Edison MAZDA Incandescent Lamp makes over arc lights of various amperages. For instance, if you are operating a 50 amperage arc by rheostat control, ten hours a day, current rate 8c. a k.w. hour, you can save $1280.00 a year by replacing your arc with a 900 Watt Edison MAZDA Incandescent Lamp. If your arc control is by motor generator, compensator, or rectifier, your saving would be $623.00 per year. If you operate five hours a day, your annual saving would be half as much in each case.

In The Field

Motion Picture News holds this position in the motion picture industry today because it has become an essential part of the business life of its readers and advertisers—a necessity to both exhibitor and distributor.

The building up of this confidence over a long period of years has resulted in a wider circulation and a greater volume of advertising carried than any other journal in this field.

TINES

"Constance Talmadge is at her VERY BEST in this movie. It is wise cracking fun and she mounts from one ridiculously funny situation to another! We don't have to import our chief players for comedy and farce. Constance Talmadge today stands right at the top in this sort of work. Her vehicle is a gem as she not only impersonates the wild "baby" sister from Paris but the stay-at-home wife. Here is gorgeous fun."

NEWS

"Judging by the audiences that crowded the Circle to the limit of its capacity at the six presentations of this photoplay, the public does not need to be informed concerning the charms of this incomparable comedienne. 'Her Sister from Paris' is sure to be listed among the best productions of the greater movie season—a continuously exciting light comedy drama. If the laughter muscles of your face need exercise see this photoplav."

The Greater Movie

THERE were two highly informative articles in last week’s Motion Picture News. One, by L. C. Moen, of our staff, reviews the European situation and, among other deductions, points out that Europe wants only our best and not our ordinary product and even may see to it that only product of merit is admitted to her shores. The other article, by Edwin Schallert of the Los Angeles Times, says that Hollywood is tuned up at last to the making of truly “big” pictures.

The two articles dovetail, and to a degree, it seems to me, that casts a pretty clear search-light on what the future holds in store for this business.

That future, as we see it, as we have always seen it, will depend primarily upon product. Upon Pictures. Their future, their hold upon the amusement business, will be as broad as the broadness of our ability to create them. In other words, it is the producer who will count most heavily in this industry’s future.

The talk of the trade today is—theatres. Get the theatres, says the composite voice of the industry, and you’ve got everything. Theatres make the money. But, anyway, get them at any price and run them at any expense. Theatres are the keys to booking. Theatres control the game.

All of which is generally hysterical and but partly true, and considerably dangerous.

The producer yearns for theatres today as show-windows for his goods. That’s his urge—primarily. In other words, they advertise the goods. That is what it simmers down to—generally. All of which is fine. We’d be the last to deprecate advertising—that’s judicious and effective. But when you say that advertising is everything you’re going too far—by far; you’re swinging the horse by the tail. Advertising is predicated upon the goods. It follows good goods. That’s its place.

Another thing: running theatres is a business in itself. Aside from that important feature, the receipts rise and fall as the picture is good, bad or indifferent. That’s true of any theatre.

* * *

About eleven years ago we ran an editorial entitled: “Bigger Pictures, Better Pictures and Longer Runs.” It created some attention in those days of programs and daily changes. But it appears that we were premature. Evidently the wish was father to the thought; and we forgot, in our enthusiasm, that the industry was in its swaddling clothes; that it had to emerge by eras of growth into the necessary stature.

As we look back we find that the business went into successive eras of stars, of directors, of stories. Each, at the time, was extolled as all-important. But, of course, it simply meant the gradual development of production ability and organization. And then distribution loomed up as all-important, with its various schemes of getting the goods to market. And now it’s theatres or advertising.

But all this time, and as we all know, the picture has been the telling force. And today, as our horizon becomes international in scope, it is the greater movie and the ability to make it stand out, as they should, as the dominant forces of the industry.

* * *

As we read Mr. Schallert’s list of outstanding pictures and grow optimistic upon the subject, we are faced also with the fact that the new season promises something: a thousand feature pictures for a world’s market that wants considerably less and certainly not so many of the program type.

Which is not a good economic situation. The industry’s stomach is wonderfully elastic, but there are going to be a lot of indigestion pains this year; that’s certain. The wise man is the maker of the greater movie, the special attraction, the show that is a show and not merely a release.

Wal. A. Johnston.
Jimmie Walker—Friend of the Screen

SENATOR JAMES J. WALKER, known throughout the country as a stalwart friend of the motion picture industry, has been designated for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of New York City. His opponent in the Democratic primaries, which will be held September 15, is the present incumbent, John F. Hylan.

The Senator is the candidate of Manhattan and the Bronx, comprising a plurality of the Democratic voters at the last election, and his candidacy is sponsored by Governor Alfred E. Smith and George W. Olvany, leader of Tammany Hall.

The whole amusement world is intensely interested in the fight Jimmie Walker is making for the nomination. Marcus Loew once described him as the most remarkable personality he had ever known. His gift of eloquence, keen wit and searching analysis has often been turned to the aid of the motion picture.

For years the Democratic leader in the State Senate at Albany, Jimmie has been in the forefront of every movement for the liberty of the screen. In 1919, he had charge of the passage of the bill legalizing Sunday opening in the State. He championed the measure and fought relentlessly until it was placed on the statute books.

It was Senator Walker who led the battle against the adoption of censorship in the Empire State. Later, he worked just as earnestly for the repeal of the law. Throughout his legislative career he has stood unflinchingly for the best interests of the screen.

For several years, he was one of the leading spirits in the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, became its National Counsel and made speeches all the way across the country in behalf of the exhibitor cause. At many national and state conventions he was the conspicuous figure and won admirers wherever he went by his brilliance and his fighting qualities.

His work as counsel for the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York is also well known. No motion picture event of importance within recent years has been considered complete without the presence of Jimmie Walker.

No man in public life anywhere has demonstrated his friendship for the screen more emphatically than he has. His fight for the Mayoralty of New York is an event of national importance and to the motion picture industry particularly it is a matter of very great interest. A rare and delightful personality and a great friend of this industry is Jimmie Walker.

STIFF COMPETITION

OnlY two new pictures on Broadway this week, the same being "Wild Horse Mesa," which held forth at the Rialto Theatre; and Universal's "The Homemaker" at The Colony. The others were hold-overs, three of them—mentioned in this column when they made their respective debuts as super-films, the greatest trio seen at once on the street where the white lights shine, within the same period of time. At the Capitol, Metro-Goldwyn's "The Unholy Three," at the Strand, "Sally Of The Sawdust"; at the Piccadilly, "Kiss Me Again." And all three more than fulfilled the hopes of the publicity boosters. Crowded houses all the time, enthusiasm unlimited on the part of the spectators in each case, and great box office results. Which simply goes to prove that the fans know good stuff when they see it. "The play's the thing," was the box office slant voiced by Shakespeare in his day. And the Bard of Avon had his finger on the public pulse. He gave the people what they wanted. In modern times the Shakespeare showmanship angle still holds good. The film with the real punch, be it humorous, sensational, serious, pathetic, sentimental, will always hold an audience.

It was putting a pretty severe strain on "Wild Horse Mesa" to place the Paramount offering in competition with such a trio of unique features. Yet, this Westerner held its own, because it struck out along original lines and was altogether different from the "done to death" tales of the open air adventure formula. Here was a new angle! The round-up of steers and cattle stampedes, have been featured again and again, but thousands of wild horses galloping pell-mell to seeming destruction, until headed off by the hero, provide a thrill hitherto unknown on the screen. And the star, Jack Holt, has never appeared to better advantage than he did in this picture.

The "Home Maker," at the Colony, was a pleasing domestic drama, above the average in point of interest, well directed, cleverly acted and a good drawing card.

Marian Nixon, Universal player, has started the new fad of matching your pet to your fur coat, and carries Georgette on the leash to match her new leopard skin. But suppose the coat was sealskin, Marian?"

Aun Pennington, appearing in "The Lucky Horseshoe" (Fox), casts her silver dancing pumps into the canyon and threatens to remain in California, far, far from Broadway.

C. W. Ginger, winner of the First National, Ltd., sales contest in England, who has been given a trip to the home office in New York and return in recognition of this.

Lovely Lilyan Tashman has been forging steadily to the front, and now Metropolitan Pictures has signed her to appear in productions for release by Producers Dist. Corp.

Raymond Keane, new Universal "discovery" playing in "The Midnight Sun" poses on two powder kegs to illustrate his conception of the hazards in playing your first big role.

Barbara La Mar, after 18 months in the East, arrives once more in California to be co-featured with Lewis Stone in "Spanish Sunlight" (First National).
IBANEZ VISITS INGRAM

Blasco Ibanez, the celebrated Spanish author, and his bride of a few weeks, visited Rex Ingram's studio near Nice, recently. There is nothing singular about this occurrence, for the director and author have been close friends ever since Ingram produced "The Four Horsemen," except that it marks the breaking of Ibanez's stay-at-home policy, he having been living almost in exile at his villa near Mentone, France, ever since his differences with the King of Spain.

Ingram was guest of honor at the Ibanez residence several times since his arrival in France for the purpose of filming "Mare Nos-

One of the most elaborately constructed floats in the Los Angeles Movie Season parade was that representing the Douglas Fairbanks studio, with a complete miniature village at one end.

Paramount's "Flower of the Night" float was one of the beautiful highlights in the Los Angeles Greater Movie Season parade.

STAGE STARS' REUNION

The beginning of work on the production end of Maurice Campbell's "Wandering Fires," to be distributed by Arrow Pictures Corporation, brought together two famous American players who have made theatrical history, in the persons of Henrietta Crossman and Effie Shannon, at Whitman Bennett's Glendale studio. Back in the old days they were both members of companies organized by Augustin Daly and Charles Frohman, and scored such big hits in "The Charity Ball" and "The Idler," that their manager separated and placed them in productions featuring each individually. Constance Bennett, Wallace MacDonald and George Hackthorne also play important roles in "Wandering Fires."

FUN ON THE SIDE LINES

Igne Conley averds that unconscious humor often breaks even with the efforts of the laugh-creators engaged in screen production. In proof whereof he states that while shooting scenes for an Educational Mermaid comedy two dummies were utilized to double for the actors in a fall from a high building. These dummies, remarkably convincing in appearance, hurtled downward and were lying on the sidewalk where they fell, when an old lady-apparently from the rural districts, rushed forward, brought a small camera to bear on the prostrate figures, snapped one shot and then yelled loudly for someone to fetch an ambulance.

BACK TO HOLLYWOOD

James Cruze has returned to Hollywood from Cheyenne, Wyoming, with several hundred players, after filming locations for "The Pony Express," and is making interiors at the Paramount Studio. The first exteriors were shot on the big set Sacramento, California, reproducing that city as it was in 1860. Samuel Shortridge, United States Senator from California, was an interested visitor on that occasion, and so much impressed that he asked to have a special print made from the negative. The Senator plans to have a copy of the production filed in the historical department of the Congressional Library in Washington, D.C., first arranging for a special showing before President Coolidge.

UNDER EAGLE'S WING

At the Union station in Kansas City the other day, Charlie Chaplin was enthusiastically hailed as a compatriot by many members of a crowd which gathered to welcome the celebrated comedian. Cries of "I'm English, too, Charlie!" rent the air.

"They mean well, but shoot wide of the target," commented the actor. "If there was a band handy we might have it play "God save the King." But I guess they've mixed me up with the Prince of Wales, for I happen to be a naturalized American citizen."

The William Whalen family of Scranton, Pa., winners of the $500 first prize in Pathe's contest to select the Typical American Family, in connection with its serial, "Idaho."
Ann Pennington, dainty ex-dancing star of the Follies, has answered the call of the wild, will forsake the effete East and camp serenely in that section of the U. S. which we believe someone once referred to as the "wide open spaces of the West!" A little grey home, that's the idea, ranch stuff, horses, cattle and no more Broadway, except the exigencies of the picture-making game demand a trip to the White Lights. For Miss Pennington, who recently finished with Tom Mix in "The Lucky Horse-shoe," a Fox production scheduled for the Rialto Theatre, New York, next week, has decided to buy a small stock ranch near San Fernando, California, where she intends to spend most of her time when between pictures.

According to a cablegram received from Ireland, the natives of the green isle are immensely enthusiastic over the arrival in their midst of Tom Meighan, who is there for the purpose of filming the Paramount picture—"An Imperfect Impostor". It is asserted that ten thousand people flocked to see the star on the quay at Dun- lacchaire, seven miles from Dublin, and as the party motored to the Irish capital, the inhabitants of the little towns en route turned out in hundreds to get a glimpse of him.

Members of "Our Gang," the Hal Roach comedians for Pathé, leaving the Roach studios with their own unique contribution to take part in the Los Angeles Greater Movie Season parade.

At the Hotel Shelbourne, Dublin, representatives of President Cosgrave of the Free State Government, were waiting to extend him an official welcome, and Mr. Meighan replied, expressing his gratification at having realized one of his pet ambitions—the making of a picture with genuine Celtic atmosphere. As the weather conditions are favorable, there will be no delay in starting production and work will begin immediately.

B

P. Schulberg, producer of Preferred Pictures, is ever on the trail of new talent, and in support of his contention that the studios shouldn't be closed to fresh aspirants, points to the latest additions to his forces. There's Marcel de Sano, who recently finished "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," and was offered a chance to direct after Mr. Schulberg had observed his work as a script and title writer. Also, Lois Hutchinson, now in the scenario department, formerly on the staff of a Seattle newspaper and later script girl with John Stahl on the First National lot. And six new players, Alyce Mills, who has played leads in "Faint Per- fume," "My Lady's Lips" and "With This Ring"; Donald Keith, formerly playing little parts under the name of Francis Feeney, starred in "The Boomerang" and "Parisian Love;" Gilbert Roland, slated to appear in "The Plastic Age;" Riza Royce, of the New York stage, making her screen debut in "Lew Tyler's Wives" and two Russian artists from the Moscow Imperial Theatre, Laty Flores and Monna Gann. Flores is not only an actor of international reputation, but has directed for Ufa, and later may handle the megaphone for a series of Preferred Pictures.

Tony Mix Indignant

A recent interview with Tony, equine wonder of the Fox Film Corp., and Tom Mix's best pal, which took place at his Hollywood bungalow stall, resulted in a flurry denial by the talented steed of a story recently published to the effect that he was contemplating retirement. Incidentally Tony isn't satisfied with press-agentry in general. He says that on the whole the publicists are a decent lot of chaps, who can't be expected to have horse sense, but do tolerably well from the standpoint of mere humans. But when it comes to this retirement canard, well, if he could get a kick at the fellow who wrote it, there would be a vacancy in the press brigade. His statement follows.

"I've never even thought of retiring, no such thing. I look on myself as having just arrived. And what would Tom do without me? Am I or am I not his real, genuine, reliable support? Supposing I quit, with Tom teetering on the pinnacle of fame, what do you suppose would happen? Think for yourself, it's too horrible for me to put into words. You know what happened when Humpty Dumpty fell, and all the king's horses, I knew a bunch of 'em personally, couldn't put him back on his perch! Figure it out. Is there a hoss outside of your humble servant able to boost Tom as I have done? An understudy! Oh, stop raving, you're too internally absurd. Listen, fellow—if I ever get ready to give a farewell party, I'll tell the world about it in my own good time, which won't be for many a blue moon yet."
E. W. Hommons, president of Educational, hands Lupino Lane, English comedian, a contract for six Lupino Lane comedies, the first of which will be an early release.

We can't give you the names and telephone numbers, unfortunately, but here are six of the dancing girls who will appear in "I'll Tell the World" (Metro-Goldwyn), limbering up for the day's work.

RAPF'S NOVEL PARTY

HARRY RAPF gave a Sunday evening party to celebrate the completion and opening of a miniature theatre, built on the rear of his Los Angeles estate, with about a million dollars worth of screen talent attending, composed of Metro-Goldwyn stars, players, executives and writers. Following supper all the guests participated in a unique film production, showing scenes directed by M-G-M directors, as other directors would stage them, Jack Conway putting forth a scene as Von Sternberg would handle it, and so on. Estelle Clark and Antonio D'Algy played in this film, impersonating different M-G-M stars, and supported by Louis B. Mayer, Irving G. Thalberg, Harry Rapf, Eddie Mannix and other executives. It was a riot of laughter, aided by Joe Farnum's titles, and another original conception, presenting Hobart Henley as an actor ten years ago, scored a tremendous hit.

Harry Langdon continues his merry way in "Lucky Stars" (he's one himself, by the way), his latest Sennett for Pathé release.

Wanda Wiley, Century comedy star, pays a visit to Dallas, Texas, and is met by Mr. Smith of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, Wanda being a native daughter of the Panhandle state.

Two "Indians" who appear in "The Vanishing American" (Paramount). The little one is Masja, a Navajo, and the other, though you'd never guess it, is Richard Dix, himself.

Just to prove that authors aren't always the undying enemies of those who scenarios their stories, Neil Martin and Doria Anderson, author and adaptor of "The Adventures of Muzzy" (F. B. O.), pose together for the cameraman.

Mary Astor and Ben Lyon, co-starred in "The Pace That Thrills" (First National) trip it merrily o'er the lea, and all that, during an off-screen moment.
YOU cannot consider Europe as just "Europe" if you want to understand anything of its mercantilising problems in regard to films. It is an easy error to fall into, and a quite natural one, but the first step in arriving at any truth concerning Europe as a market must be to divide it up along the lines of its economic, racial and political boundaries. Then, taking each separately, you can set down certain facts that will be more than the usual half-baked suppositions and hazy generalizations about our foreign film trade.

These sub-divisions might be multiplied almost indefinitely, but for the sake of simplicity Europe may be considered as having three key points, each of which is the centre of a major market. These key points are Paris, Berlin and London, and they will be considered in the order named.

Taking Paris first, then, we find this the key to a market which includes France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Morocco, Algiers, Egypt, and the so-called (or mis-called) "Latin" peoples generally. Neither the richest market in the world, nor the poorest, but one capable of far greater development than it has yet reached. All told, including the 23 Spanish-speaking countries which must be considered in connection with Spain, this market probably embraces more than 10,000 theatres. France is practically the only country in the group which is producing any great number of pictures; therefore, the group is a splendid potential market which might be made to yield much larger revenue than at present. Germany will be a heavy competitor, however, in a considerable portion of this territory—a fact which demands recognition.

France, first of all, is usually taken rather lightly by film exporters, who rate it as a rather small market and one not worthy of great effort or serious consideration. And it is true that the revenue from France has not been as great as elsewhere.

Economic Conditions Vital

The basic factor of economic conditions must, however, be reckoned with. France, since the war, has been marking time. Unsettled conditions at home and on her frontiers have paralyzed many lines of endeavor. The reconstruction of the devastated areas has made taxation almost unbearable. The periodic decline of the franc has made it more and more difficult for her to buy from the outside world.

Shortly, however, unless all signs fail, we will be able to call the turn on French conditions. While I was in Paris, Cailau presented the first balanced budget since the war—the vital initial step toward settled conditions. From that budget it is only a step to the stabilization of the franc—and it is a safe guess to predict that that stabilization will be at 21 francs to the dollar, or near that figure.

That will mean, at one step, the repudiation of three-fourths of the internal debt, with a corresponding loss to those who have boarded francs against the day when they would return to live to the dollar, just as happened in Germany with the practical repudiation of the war-time currency. To attempt to return the franc to its original value would place France in the plight now harassing England—but more of that later.

With the problem of the internal debt simplified, the matter of war debts will follow, and steps are practically certain to be taken by the first of the year toward the payment of these. This, in all likelihood, will mean additional import duties in France. The factors which may influence the government in the consideration of a tariff on motion pictures brought into France might be summed up about as follows:

1. The revenue from exporting wines to the United States, which alone would have covered the debt payments, has been wiped out by prohibition.
2. The articles which France manufactures best, such as luxury articles, gloves, perfumes, fine machine parts, and the like, are taxed as much as 75 and 100 per cent. upon their entry into the United States.

Automobile Tariff

3. Through a high protective tariff, France's automobile industry has been made the second largest in the world, far smaller than the American manufacture, of course, but larger than any other country. This is being used as an argument for similar protection for the French film industry.

4. The steel industry of France has been pioke into one selling organization which receives government protection through a high tariff on imports of steel, the revenue from which is applied directly to reduce the price of French steel. This has strengthened the steel industry materially.

5. Germany, through the application of a contigent system, has kept her film industry alive during a trying period of reconstruction and stabilization.

These points are likely to influence the French government materially in its consideration of films when the new tariff plan is drawn up. If such a tariff were placed on films, or, less likely, a contingent applied, France would occupy much the same position as Italy in regard to the importing of American films.

However, there is another possibility in regard to all this. Moves such as that made by Universal, and announced in the News last week, for the joint production in Paris of "The Man Who Laughs" by Universal and the Societe Generale des Filmes, are going to have an important bearing on the future government attitude.

It is worthy of note, too, that the Societe Anonyme Francaise des Films Paramount, the French Paramount distributing organization, has taken on for release in France an independent French production, which is being advertised in conjunction with the other Paramount pictures.

Production Promised

During the debate in the Chambre Syndicale, to which I have referred previously, Adolphe Osso, Paramount's French manager, announced that his company intended to produce in France twelve or fourteen pictures on a plan similar to that under which "Madame Sans-Gene" was made. This would mean working in cooperation with a French producer, probably with Paramount stars and an American supervising editor.

It is worth noting, too, that Julian Johnston is abroad for Paramount at the present moment, studying European tastes and tendencies. He was the guest at a luncheon in London, where he was asked to explain such things as the introduction of the American flag into "Peter Pan," (and did), and created an excellent impression generally. From there he went to Paris, and an article in the current Cinematographique Francaise, written by him, explains the difference between French and American producing conditions.

Meanwhile, Metro-Goldwyn, has affiliated itself with Gaumont, a producing, distributing, and exhibiting concern. Whether this means that Metro-Goldwyn will distribute Gaumont pictures in America, or will produce in co-production with Paramount for both markets, has not been definitely announced. There have been several stories current in France, however, that the latter would be the case, and that the Gaumont plant at Belleville would be renovated and remodeled for joint production by Gaumont and Metro-Goldwyn, with American stars.

All of these things show a growing tendency toward definite reciprocity between the French and American film industries, (Continued on Next Page)
Paris, Reciprocity and the French Market

and certainly this is the most powerful weapon toward keeping the channels of trade free and clear of governmental red tape and burdensome taxation.

At any rate, there will be more American production in France. That much seems assured. Of that I shall have more to say when I come to a consideration of French production for the home market—a livelier and healthier industry by the way, than is sometimes supposed here.

Now then, just what is this French market, and what can be expected from it?

In recent years, France has not been one of the best European markets. That much can be set down safely, but it can also be taken as reasonably certain that it is going to be much better, for a number of reasons.

1. France improves economically, the film industry will automatically be lifted with it, as in any country.

2. The motion picture is slowly winning recognition as an art by the French people—an important factor, with their love of the arts and of things beautiful. In past years, the cinema has held a despised position among the better classes. Theatres in the small towns have been run largely by wine merchants, and the like. In many cases, respectable persons could not afford to be seen entering a cinema. The theatres, too, have not been overly inviting to particular people.

Now, however, a change is slowly coming. Such things as the showing of "The Miracle of the Wolves" at the Opera in Paris, attended by the President of the Republic, and the forthcoming showing of "Salamaou" at the Opera, are bringing the more intelligent French people to a recognition of the importance of the motion picture as an artistic and educational medium.

3. The gradual improvement in production, in America and abroad, is going to help business in France. The French public is the most pitilessly critical of story values in the world. With all the classics available in printed form at a penny or so, the poorest shopgirl knows her Hugo and Balzac better than the average well read person here. Naturally, such a public is hard to please, but highly appreciative of real merit. "Woman of Paris," for instance, released in France as "L'Opinion Publique," or "Public Opinion," was the outstanding picture of its season.

4. Better theatres are being built in France, not rapidly, but here and there. This will attract more and better patrons, too.

As regards the exhibiting end, conditions are not ideal. Taxes run as high as 40 or 45 per cent of the gross, and the tax collector comes to the box-office every night to collect it. This is largely offset, however, by the higher admission prices in vogue.

Rental, especially for French productions are high. Some American product has been sold at a much lower figure than should have prevailed, owing to the indiscriminate "dumping of all classes of product."

Distributing costs in France are low. The short shipping distances, small advertising expenditures, and small number of prints shipped, the cost down to a lower figure, and 25-75 contracts between producer and distributor, with the distributor bearing half the costs of prints and advertising, are not uncommon.

Conditions in Italy are fair, but two concerns hold more or less of a monopoly, which makes matters difficult for the outsider. Duties and taxes are extremely high.

Spain and Portugal are fair. The same is true of Holland. Belgium and Switzerland are somewhat better. The South American market, which we have mentioned in connection with Spain, deserves separate consideration.

There are in France some 3,000 theatres, probably 2,500 in Italy; 2,000 in Spain and Portugal; and a scattering number in the other small countries. The Spanish speaking market, embracing South America and Mexico, is said to include 6,500 theatres.

Schlesinger Sails for Warner Bros.
General Manager of Foreign Department Goes Abroad to Perfect Firm’s European Distribution

Gus G. SCHLESINGER, general manager of the Foreign department of Warner Bros., sails on Saturday of this week to join Albert Warner abroad, where he will carry out important developments in connection with the European distribution of Warner product.

Schlesinger’s departure has been seriously delayed by illness, from which he has but recently recovered.

He expects to remain abroad for a year, carrying out important plans now under consideration for Warner exchanges and probably first run houses in Paris, London and Berlin, if practicable.

His first duty will be to make a complete tour of inspection of the 20 European offices taken over from Vitagraph with the acquisition of that company. Ten of these are located in Great Britain, with the other ten on the Continent. Just how many of these will be continued has not been decided, and will depend upon Schlesinger’s findings in connection with them.

Warner Brothers pictures are at present distributed in Great Britain by Gaumont, which concern has already taken the next group of product. Schlesinger will tour all of the Gaumont exchanges to study this distribution at first hand. Just what will be done with the 10 Vitagraph exchanges is problematical. This exchange system has been regarded as one of the best in Great Britain, and has been an important factor in the past.

On the Continent, the selling agent for Warner Brothers has been Jacques Haik, who has disposed of France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Spain, Portugal and Italy. This is expected to be continued.

It is possible, however, that a Warner exchange will be opened in Rome, should that prove desirable.

Barcelona, too, may have a Warner Brothers exchange, following the visit there of Schlesinger.

Swedish distribution has been handled for some time by the Svenska-Filmindustri, which has also taken the product for next year. Germany and central Europe was handled last year by Ufa, but no definite arrangements have been closed as yet for this year.

When European affairs have been arranged satisfactorily, Schlesinger will continue on to Australia, where it is planned to open a branch in Sydney, in cooperation with Australasian.

Reports current this week that Warners had purchased the Petit Casino in Paris were denied by Harry M. Warner. It was admitted, however, that first run houses in Paris, London and Berlin were considered desirable, and that developments in that connection might be expected shortly.

Schlesinger has headed the Foreign department of Warner Bros. since 1922, prior to which he was for six years the sales manager of Inter-Ocean, where he gained a wide experience and varied knowledge of export conditions.

General export conditions are excellent, according to Schlesinger, who sees a bright year ahead. Conditions in the principal countries, with a few exceptions, he sees as exceptionally promising.
Seider and Pettijohn Continue Arbitration Controversy
Statement Issued by Hays Official Brings Reply

IMPORTANT statements bearing on the controversy over Arbitration and the exhibition contract were issued during the past week by Charles C. Pettijohn, General Counsel of the Film Boards of Trade and the Hays organization; and Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of the Arbitration and Contract Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Pettijohn takes the position that while the uniform contract is not a perfect instrument, it can be improved upon as the arbitration work develops. He declares: "The principle of Arbitration cannot be improved upon, but Arbitration procedure can be." He adds: "If Arbitration within the motion picture industry is made perfect or nearly perfect in less than three years, it will be, in my humble opinion, a pretty fair achievement within a reasonable time."

Mr. Seider's statement is a reply to the statement issued by Mr. Pettijohn. The exhibitor leader arraigns present Arbitration methods and the contract, and takes up the points made by Mr. Pettijohn. Mr. Seider sums up by saying:

"Mr. Pettijohn practically admits our contentions. We have no quarrel with Arbitration. It is with the Film Boards of Trade procedure and this procedure must be made fair to both sides. Mr. Pettijohn at last sees the 'light.' He concedes that the contract in 'his opinion' is not a perfect instrument and it can be improved upon. When does the improving start?"

The Pettijohn statement follows:

"Three years ago there was no Uniform Exhibition contract. Three years ago there were no Arbitration Boards. For a long time prior to three years ago exhibitors generally had been asking all distributors to adopt a contract that would be uniform as to the main and standard clauses. Exhibitors generally had been complaining against the actions of what few Film Boards of Trade were then in existence claiming that they did not have representation at the time decisions were made affecting the exhibitor, his business and his relations, as well as the distributor and his.

Boards Now Functioning

"Arbitration Boards are now passing upon all disputes growing out of the use of the standard exhibition contract. Exhibitors and distributors now have equal representation on these Arbitration Boards. More than 11,000 such disputes were disposed of in 1924.

"The Uniform Exhibition contract is not in my opinion a perfect instrument. It can be improved upon as the arbitration work develops and when the men serving on these Arbitration Boards become more familiar with the work, I believe that it will be possible for almost every reasonable dispute to be disposed of by the Arbitration Boards in their respective zones.

"The principle of Arbitration cannot be improved upon — but Arbitration procedure can be. Therefore, the whole situation can be summed up as follows:

"Considerable strides in the right direction have been made generally in the buying and selling of motion picture film. There is still room for improvement. These improvements and betterments can be brought about by sincere and patient conferences of fair minded men who represent something and somebody.

"There is no denying the fact that there has been a gradual improvement going on which is receiving more and more support. All such achievements in the history of human existence have come slowly. There is no such thing as a sudden leap to the perfect state. The mistake many agitators and reformers make is that of attempting to leap to perfection in one jump. There are people in this business who have not the patience or the philosophy to break ground slowly and build surely. Incidentally, this form of attack is usually shy along publicity lines.

"If Arbitration within the motion picture industry is made perfect or nearly perfect in less than three years, it will be, in my humble opinion, a pretty fair achievement within a reasonable time."

Seider's Statement

Following is the statement issued by Mr. Seider:

"Mr. Courtland Smith for the Hays organization issued a statement to the New York Times that my attack is on the principle of arbitration. Mr. Smith knew when he made this statement that such is not the case. We are FOR arbitration but not the arbitration practiced in the motion picture industry.

"Now comes Mr. Pettijohn with a statement which is purported to be an answer to our demands for a fair contract and system of arbitration and confidence and square dealing in the buying and selling of pictures.

"It is true that three years ago the majority of theatre owners pleaded for uniform exhibition contract. The contracts now used are not uniform. It is self-evident that we wanted a fair and patent uniform contract and not the oppressive instrument that we have received. We did not bargain for a contract that would deprive us of the right to trial by jury against our individual wishes. We did not ask for Film Boards of Trade and a Joint Arbitration Board that would deprive us of our property without due process of law; that would force us to sign contracts with clauses to which good business sense advises us to object and which acts as a collection agency for the distributors. We asked for a loaf of bread and received a brick.

"Upon the entry of Mr. Hays into this industry he quickly realized the danger of the continuance of a system consisting of only distributors and substituted the present system. I will accept Mr. Pettijohn's statement that to date in the year 1925 more than 11,000 disputes were disposed of. How many of these disputes actually were heard? How many were brought by the exchange and how many by the exhibitor? How many were decided in favor of the theatre owner? What were the average amounts involved? In how many cases were there principles involved? Were they not, with the exception of a few, really collection cases?

Not Exhibitor Choice

"There are an equal number of theatre owners and distributors upon the arbitration boards but the exhibitor members are not the choice of the theatre owner litigant and he has not the right to challenge any of the exhibitor members appointed for him.

"Mr. Pettijohn claims that considerable strides have been made in the buying and selling of pictures; that there cannot be a sudden leap into perfection; that improvements can be brought about by sincere and patient conferences of fair minded men who represented something and somebody and that if arbitration within the industry is made perfect or nearly perfect in less than three years, it will be a fair achievement within a reasonable time.

"Considerable strides have been made by the theatre owner. He now represents stability, Education, ability and progress. While he has grown, the opinion of the exhibitor for the arbitration boards has not kept pace. There is need for improvement in the buying and selling of pictures.

"Sincere and patient conferences. Daily for over two weeks a group of theatre owners met with Mr. Pettijohn and the other Hays lawyers. There was represented plenty of ability, sincerity and patience. But, we got nowhere. Every once in a while Mr. Hays in person grac ed us with his presence and gave us a benediction.

A Letter From Joseph M. Seider to William A. Johnston

J OSEPH M. SEIDER, President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey and Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, has sent the following letter to William A. Johnston, Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

"Dear Mr. Johnston:

I want to write you my thanks for your editorial in your August 15th issue on our meeting at Detroit. I believe that the way you have handled the entire situation will, with efforts of other worthy trade papers, tend to overcome an erroneous impression as to the real occurrences at the meeting. It will help the exhibitors with England from the standpoint of the M. P. T. O. A. the reaction therefrom should be most helpful.

The future existence of the independent theatre owner appears far from bright. Yet, never before have we had so many able leaders as we have at present. The fact that these leaders are working for a cause is the answer. The predicament the theatre owner finds himself in must and will be alleviated and finally overcome.

We theatre owners need the help of the industry and particularly that unbiased branch, the trade press, as we never have before. Therefore, your contribution stands out the more and merits our appreciation."

French "U" Film Plans Formed

Laemmle Hopes to Start Production of "Man WhoLaughs" Before Returning

An announcement last week in the NEWS, plans are proceeding rapidly abroad for the production in Paris of "The Man Who Laughs" by Universal Pictures corporation and the Societe Generale des Films, a French company, marking a new era in international film production.

Cables this week from Carl Laemmle to the Universal Home Office in New York and to Universal City indicate that immediate steps are to be taken in preparing for this picture. It is his intention that work shall begin in France, if possible, before he returns to the United States this fall.

The principal new development of the week was the first definite announcement of the personnel for the production, which will be composed of French and American players and technicians.

Svend Gade, it is announced, will direct the picture. The Danish director is felt to be well adapted to this task because of his familiarity with the conditions. He was an art director of some prominence abroad before coming to the United States to direct pictures for Universal.

British Activity Is Suggested

Government May Be Urged to Take Steps to Entirely Eliminate All Block Bookings

Variou's production plans for the advancement of picture product are in contemplation in England. It is even advocated in some quarters that the government take a hand in production activities with the establishment of several studios.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors’ Association, among other things, has suggested to the Board of Trade that the Government inaugurate steps to entirely eliminate the block booking system. Among these lines there are said to be plans afoot to start legislation that would prevent selling pictures until the last year of their term of trade shown. The majority of American distributors at present are selling in block from six to eight months ahead in England.

There have been numerous proposals for a national studio in London, as well as for the maintenance of a studio or studios by exhibitors. Among the ideas suggested by Ivor Graham at a recent meeting of the Sheffield branch of the C. E. A. was that members create the nucleus of a fund by contributing a sum ten times the amount of their annual dues in the C. E. A. He would make this $750,000 the basis of a $8,000,000 war chest.

Sir Sidney Low in the Daily Mail is of the opinion that a dozen or a score of studios will be necessary to turn out sufficient product. He expresses the opinion that one exchange will not be able to supply all of the needed films. He also suggests that a $8,000,000 fund be raised by financiers to secure talent and that a chain of theatres be purchased through which to guarantee an outlet.

Mrs. Sessions Signed by First National

AFTER four years of service as branch and district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, Mrs. Anna H. Sessions resigned from that organization August 15th and will sail September 5th to assume a position in the foreign department with First National. While in the States she will divide her time among Berlin, Paris and Vienna.

Mrs. Sessions has had an extensive career in the theatrical and motion picture fields. She started in 1915 as secretary to August Auger, district manager of World Film Company. In 1921 she was offered the management of the Goldwyn exchanges in New Orleans and Atlanta, in which position she remained until her affiliation with Hodkinson, which was shortly reorganized under the name of Producers Distributing Corporation.

Seider and Pettijohn Continue Controversy

Mr. Pettijohn gave us Corporation Counsel opinions—that is, after he was through we could take either side and be correct. Mr. Hess continually attempted to laugh us out of every constructive suggestion.

"Fair minded men who represented something. What does Mr. Pettijohn mean by this statement? Did not the Hay's office select the three theatre owners who officially attended the conference instead of their being chosen by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America?"

"Three years is a long time in the motion picture industry. Were it not for the activities of the M. P. T. O. A. would the individual theatre owner and organized monopoly, we would be out of business within three years."

"As the arbitration work develops and when the opinion is on these arbitration boards become more familiar with the work, I believe that it will be possible for almost every reasonable dispute to be disposed of by the arbitration boards in their respective zones."

"This argues Mr. Pettijohn if men have not become familiar with arbitration work in the three years gone by, then they will never become familiar. What do you mean, 'then it will be possible for every reasonable dispute to be disposed of by the arbitration boards in the respective zones'?

"What do you mean by a 'reasonable dispute'?

"Is not the theatre owner compelled now to submit to the arbitration board in this zone in spite of, as you claim, the men have not as yet 'become familiar with arbitration work'?

"Mr. Pettijohn practically admits our contentions. We have not quarrel with arbitration. It is with the Federal Courts of Trade and procedure and this procedure must be made fair to both sides. Mr. Pettijohn at last sees the light. He concedes that the contract in this opinion is on the perfect instrument and it can be improved upon. When does the improving start?"
Greater Movie Season Starts
Auspiciously Over U. S.
Hays Summary Reveals Success of Campaign

Will H. Hays has drawn up a national summary of Greater Movie Season based on reports following the openings of the campaign in many cities of the United States. This summary attests to the splendid success of the event, with the reports from many quarters urging its annual observance as a stimulus to increased box office activity during the heat of the Summer.

The Hays summary says:

"Since the season opened I have been in Los Angeles, Denver and Chicago, where excellent drives were conducted. With motion picture production centered so largely in Los Angeles and therefore with many players available to inspire popular interest in the celebrations, a successful start here was natural enough. But in Denver and Chicago some thousands of miles removed, with only the exhibitors' initiative to bring the season's message before the public, all factors of distribution and exhibition worked side by side so harmoniously that the public response was equally as huge.

"I am pleased to learn that Atlantic City had one hundred per cent representation in the drive, and the box-office told the result. Atlanta and Dallas exhibitors have telegraphed the hope that Greater Movie Season may be an annual affair. Atlanta reported gains of from ten to forty per cent over the business neighborhood and smaller houses showing the biggest increase.

"The movement contemplates especially the service to the small exhibitor working from month to month. He will only hope that July and August would be no worse than last year. We believed that this was a means to make those dead months better, that the summer depression could be overcome by inducing exhibitors who face the same problem to cooperate. The final analysis probably will show that Atlantic City's experience has been repeated in many other cities.

Will It Be Annual

"Will Greater Movie Season be an annual event? Yes, if the exhibitors wish it; and naturally our future plans in this respect depend largely upon their wish. There is apparently a nationwide satisfaction with the results this first demonstration has shown. But we are seeking still fuller information. In almost every instance the chairman or general manager at local activities is the head of a large theatre or circuit, or the principal executive of an exhibitor association. During the next few weeks we will ask their advice and suggestions based on their knowledge gained this month. If the consensus favors another season next year—as I believe it will—our campaign nationally will further embody their ideas. The splendid cooperation of the exhibitors is thoroughly appreciated.

"Apart altogether from the increased business engendered by Greater Movie Season, the film industry has won the active cooperation of every agency that influences public thought. United for this demonstration of its power and purpose to serve, it has earned the commendation and support of the nation's leaders, writers and educators. That support, thus gained, will not be withdrawn as long as every factor in the industry by contributing its utmost to the public good justifies the public confidence that the season has inspired."

"While it is yet impossible to supply accurate figures concerning the number of towns embraced in the drive, the total is likely to exceed that contained in previous announcements; for in many centers exhibitors, having realized the advantages of the season, are only now arranging the necessary organization to join in the drive. Letters and telegrams from important theatre executives throughout the country reveal the extent to which the box-office has gained by Greater Movie Season.

Riesenfeld's Boost

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director of the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres, New York: "I am pleased to report that the Greater Movie Season has been a stimulus to business at the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres. The ultimate result of the movement will undoubtedly be far-reaching and will encourage added attendance at the theatres for many weeks to come.

Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol, New York: "You may ask what, if anything, the Greater Movie Season has done for the Capitol Theatre. I can only say that the Capitol has been packed to capacity afternoon and night of every performance, but what is due to Greater Movie Season and what is due to the entertainment provided, I am unable to say. At least the business has been unprecedentedly large, especially for this time of the year.

David Barrist, editor of "The Exhibitor," in reviewing the Philadelphia drive states: "There has been a noticeable improvement in business the current week, which is most certainly due in a large measure to the activities of the campaign. In Atlantic City the business has been nothing short of phenomenal and exhibitors there do not hesitate to credit the Greater Movie Season Campaign for this increase."

Stanley Chambers of the Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kansas: "Greater Movie Season showed twenty per cent increase over the same period of last year. The campaign is a big success. We certainly want another next year."

Nice Increase Shown

Carl A. Porter, Victory Theatre, Salt Lake City: "All theatres show a nice increase and are well satisfied with the campaign. The public is very much interested in the movement. We want another season next year."

Maurice F. Barr, Saenger Amusement, New Orleans: "While we are unable to ascertain by a definite check of New Orleans exhibitors what Greater Movie Season results have been we believe the effort well worthy of repetition each year. Organizations should be kept intact to systematize details and exploitation and secure still better results."

Lloyd Dearth, Pantages Theatre, Memphis: "Greater Movie Season campaign showed a material increase in all houses and without a doubt will put the New York, August through a winner in spite of the fact that we have extreme hot weather here and an uptilt pull to get them in during the hot spell. Let's have a season every year."

Ralph Kettering, general manager Chi- cago campaign, believes the theatres will increase better than twenty per cent this week. The campaign is a huge success and exhibitors are happy to make it an annual affair."

Jay Means, vice-president of the M. P. T. O. of Missouri: "Greater Movie Season opened with a big smash in Kansas City. Business good all over city. Many streets are planned to keep up the publicity. Everybody seems pleased with the campaign and is enthusiastic over future prospects."

Details of many excellent campaigns continue to be reported to the Hays office.

Newark, Atlantic City, Camden, Ocean City, Asbury Park and Paterson key points in New Jersey—all put on pretentious drives. J. E. Firnkois, in charge of the Rivito theatre, controlled the Newark campaign which included a contest tie-in with the Newark Star-Eagle, special radio broadcasting and Hays Luncheon Guest at Denver

WILL H. HAYS, President of the Motion Picture Producers of America, has spent Monday, August 3rd in Denver. While there a luncheon was given in his honor by John C. Shaffer, nationally known newspaper owner. All the prominent exhibitors and local film exchange managers were invited.

Hays declined to address but freely discussed his plans and ideals with those present. He was very enthusiastic over the progress of the Greater Movie Season and hinted that there were plans in progress to make it an annual event.

Greater Movie Season was inaugurated in Salt Lake City this week with a whirlwind campaign of publicity. Highly colored and attractive 24 sheets are appearing on the billboards. Sunday newspapers carried full stories of the opening, each bearing the attention of the people to the fact that the eventful season has started.

A facsimile of the letter written by President Coolidge to Will H. Hayes was given prominence in the papers.

Greater Movie Season opened up in Baltimore with everything set for a big week on Monday, August 3. The majority of the playhouses are endeavoring to make it a huge success, but so far as can be learned it does not appear that the public is breaking its neck more than usual to clamber into the seats of the movie houses.

Pennants are waving on the marquees and in the lobbies of the various theatres; trailers are being run with their wordy announcements and fantastic scenes from old pictures and any number of 24-sheet stands have been taken and are being used to get the attention of the people.

The season was inaugurated in Philadelphia on August 3rd by a fleet of three airplanes hovering over all sections of the city and releasing 25,000 passes, admitting to any performance during the week except Saturday. All theatres in the vicinity are decorated for the occasion, the season being marked by the release of productions which ordinarily would not reach there until Fall.

The Stanley Company has a large pledge framed and suspended outside of the Stanley Theatre, bearing the signature of every employer and employee of the company to patrons. Great interest is being evidenced in the essay contest conducted by "The Daily News" in which prizes aggregating about $10,000 will be distributed to local movie patrons.

From Ray P. Allison, of the American Theatre, Colorado Springs, Colorado, comes the following report: "Greater Movie Season showed an increase of fifty-six per cent over last year and a balancing of the average of the four participating theatres. Individual percentages of increase are as follows: Americana Theatre, seventy-five per cent; Radio, fifty-two per cent; Liberty, fifty per cent; Burns, fifty per cent. This increase over the same period last year is bona-fide proof of the campaign's success."

Jack Rath, West Coast Theatres, Inc., Los Angeles, wires: "The campaign so far is a real success. Present reports show a decided business increase, but exact details are not yet available. We are preparing for a huge ball which we expect to be a big feature of the drive. We certainly recommend a similar next year."

William A. Clark, Palace Theatre, Cincinnati, sends the following: "On account of weather conditions it is too early to estimate the percentage of increase on Greater Movie Season. We are entirely satisfied with the campaign and will be willing to go along with another season next year."

Central Pennsylvania is taking very kindly to the "Greater Movie Season" idea and many of the leading theatres are cooperating in a way that indicates there will be a directly favorable reaction on summer box office receipts when accounts are checked up.

In Reading, as in other cities, much newspaper publicity is being given to the campaign and the larger theatres in that city—chiefly units of the Carr & Schad, Inc., and the Universal & Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, are featuring special programs. In Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Plymouth and other cities in the prosperous hard coal mining belt, special spots were placed in the newspapers advertising the opening of the campaign, starting August 3, in which period the theatres there seem to have their efforts especially. In Plymouth, the management of the Shamokin Theatre changed a "Greater Movie Week" parade, and put on special attractions in the theatre without any advance in prices of admittance.

In Scranton even the vaudeville houses which non-picture theatres and those with motion picture theatre chains, gave recognition to movie week both in the advertisements and in putting on extra attractions. For instance, the Capitol and Scranton, a vaudeville house, announced the "strongest bill that has been presented here in many months," in honor of the "Greater Movie Season." The headline for this theatre was "The Largest-Highest-Highest," and its 1925 big event was an extra edition, in six scenes, of "The Toy Shop."

The Strand, a leading Scranton movie house, featured the opening week of the campaign with the presentation of Cecil Moore's latest first national picture, "The Desert Flower."

The Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which controls perhaps the largest chain of picture theatres in the populous anthracite region, released the announcement of "Greater Movie Season" would be observed with intensified programs in all its theatres.

Among the prominent local residents who were present to the Greater Movie Season essay contest in Michigan are several state film officials, industrialists and merchants. The complete list of judges is as follows:

George W. Tredell, general manager and attorney for the John H. Kunskey theatrical enterprises; H. E. Whalen of the First State Bank of Detroit; George Clark, district manager of the Overland Motor company; Henderson M. Richley, manager of the Michigan Motion Picture Theatre Owners; David Palmy from the Detroit Film Board of Trade; J. Oliver Golden of Michigan and Claude E. Cady of Lansing.

The Michigan contest, which is being conducted by the M. P. T. O. of M., bids fair to be one of the outstanding events of the national season.
New National Distributing Organization Formed

Vital Exchanges Inc., To Function in 28 Key Cities

A new exchange system which will give the product of the Davis Distributing Division and its producers, national distribution through United States and Canada is announced this week by J. Charles Davis, president of the company.

The new concern has been formed under the title of Vital Exchanges, Inc., with home offices in New York City, branch offices in 25 key cities of the United States and four exchanges in Canada.

Vital Exchanges, Inc., will be under the leadership of David R. Hochreich, who has long been identified in the motion picture industry and for several years has been connected with the Vitagraph Company of America in the sales department.

The personnel of the Vital Exchange, Inc., under Mr. Hochreich will also include a considerable number of former Vitagraph sales representatives.

Mr. Hochreich points out in an interview given the trade press that the men associated with him in the new enterprise have long desired an opportunity of going into business for themselves and that the recent sale of Vitagraph gives them this opportunity.

According to Mr. Hochreich, the great problem confronting these men was the securing of the right kind and the necessary volume of product. In the pictures, which the Davis Distributing Division is sponsoring this year, Mr. Hochreich and his associates believe they have secured productions that will meet every requirement for success.

A contract recently signed between the Davis Distributing Division and Vital Exchanges, Inc., gives the latter organization, a five year franchise for the entire output of the Davis Division product and includes sales rights to all the pictures now being released by this concern during 1925 and 1926 as well as those to be produced for the next four years.

A difficulty to the consummation of this arrangement, that of prior sales of current and coming pictures to independent exchanges, was overcome by an arrangement whereby Vital Exchanges, Inc., is to obtain additional product in territories where this year's product is not available. Vital Exchanges is assured sufficient product until the existing contracts for Davis pictures have expired.

The territories in which product has already been sold are New York, New England, Northern Illinois, Indiana, California, Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

Mr. Hochreich, in commenting on this deal stated that he felt that in entering the exchange end of the business as the President of Vital Exchanges, he was bringing to the exhibitors of America an opportunity to deal with a real independent organization. He pointed out that under his plan every Exchange Manager was not an employee, but the owner of his own business with his own capital invested and in his own field where he has for so many years built up a tremendous following and reputation for honesty and fair dealing among the exhibitors.

He pointed out that these exchange men, while owning and managing their own business, nevertheless would be working in the closest cooperation with the Vital Exchanges Home Office. For example, much booking in many parts of the country is done in New York, necessitating periodical trips from distant points upon the part of exchange men. This, as pointed out, could all be handled by the Home Office of Vital Exchanges, and many other advantages would accrue under this arrangement, one of the greatest being the national release of pictures that was heretofore impossible to accomplish due to the fact that seldom, if ever, under the old plan of State Rights Release is a picture sold to the various exchanges throughout the country so that it can be released simultaneously. In the past each independent exchange has been permitted, and in fact forced, to release its product at different times according to contract with the distributing organization, many of them who were late thus losing the value of the trade papers advertising that particular product.

Davis, in commenting on this contract, said: "We are very proud and happy over the closing of the contract between Vital Exchanges, Inc., and our company, for we feel that this is a great forward step in the independent field of the Motion Picture business. Here for the first time is a national distributing organization so far as physical release is concerned, but which is heart and soul 100% independent, with every exchange owned and managed by a man whose qualifications are proven, and whose record is beyond reproach. ""Dave" Hochreich, as his friend—and the man who has discerning eyes, is the one who ideally suited to head the organization, and to him must go the credit for its formation. To my knowledge he has toiled noisily enough to form this company, and he has formed it and built it so solidly that we are glad to extend him our faith in a five year franchise for all of our product, with of course the exception of the pictures already sold in some of the territories. We have arranged to supply these territories with sufficient product to meet their requirements.

"While this gives us national distribution, we want to point out that it does not take us out of the independent field, for this, we believe, is the only true independent national releasing organization as each Manager in Vital Exchanges owns his own territory, has invested his own money and is not controlled by any money power or by any national distributing organization, and his product will be 100% independent—produced by independent producers of established reputation and released by ourselves, whose independence has never been questioned.

"We believe that we have been paid a very high compliment by this organization in selecting us as their producing medium, as we consider it a tribute not only to our company and its ability to deliver the goods, but to our producers and the quality of product which they have so consistently turned out for us."
Buckley Shows Summer Run Possible
Fairbanks Representative Demonstrates That Hot Weather is No Barrier to Properly Exploited Showing

W ITH the closing on Broadway of "Don Q" at the globe theatre last Sunday night, came the end of an interesting experiment which upsets many traditions regarding premiere showings and hot weather business, and which may materially alter future plans for Broadway runs.

It has been axiomatic in the past that the New York public would not go into a legitimate theatre in the summer to see a motion picture. During the hot weather, with large numbers of persons out of the city, at the beaches, and so on, it has been taken for granted that conditions were hopeless for a premiere, with the result that pictures completed in the spring have been held for fall showing.

It remained for Harry D. Buckley, personal business representative for Douglas-Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, to upset this time-worn contention.

When "Don Q" was finished, the star almost immediately began work on another picture to be ready by the first of the year. That meant that the current picture could not be held up for a late fall premiere, but must be gotten into general circulation.

Harry D. Buckley, eastern business representative of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, who handled the unusual summer run of "Don Q", described here.

So Buckley put the proposition up to Fairbanks, whose answer was conclusive.

"Why not?" he said. "People certainly need fun and relaxation more in summer than in cool weather. Let's get a cool, comfortable theatre and go ahead."

So Buckley arranged for the globe theatre for eight weeks. An orchestra was engaged, a colorful programme arranged, and the opening set for June 15th.

The advance campaign started about the middle of May along conservative lines. A half-showing of billboards, moderate newspapers, a street ballyhoo, the distribution of heralds at the beaches—these comprised virtually the entire campaign employed.

The important thing, as Buckley indicates, is that a precedent has now been established for summer premières, which will mean making pictures available to exhibitors generally earlier.

Buckley has been in the theatrical business most of his life. At 21 he was a legitimate theatre manager in St. Louis. After the war, he became United Artists exchange manager at Kansas City, later being sent to the coast. During the illness of Fairbanks' brother, he was temporary general manager, which led to his handling of the Broadway premières of "Robin Hood" and "The Thief of Bagdad."

Theatre Expansion Move Continues
Saxe, Stanley and Strand Companies Acquire Additional Houses; Many Large Theatre Buildings Are Planned

T HE expansion program which has marked the operations of many of the big organizations in the theatre field during recent months continues as indicated by reports from various parts of the country of new acquisitions, theatre properties and extensive building projects.

In Chicago, Ascher Bros., have undertaken construction four large houses with four more planned for building in the near future. Those now being built are the Terminal, a 3,000 seat house scheduled to open in November; the Sheridan, 3,000 seats at Sheridan Road and Irving Park Boulevard; the Colony, 2,000 seats, at Kedzie and 59th Sts., and the Drake, 2,000 seats at Montrose and Drake Aves. The second large theatre announced since the Balaban & Katz-Lubliner & Trinz combination of a few weeks ago is to be erected in the Jefferson Park district. It will be a 3,000 seat house located at Lawrence and Lippie Aves. Work is to start soon under the supervision of Fridstein & Co., the architects.

Omaha is to have many new theatres. Plans are being drawn up for two motion picture theatres, a million dollar-a piece in the downtown section, and a $750,000 house being erected in the suburbs. Incidentally, officials of the Orpheum circuit are looking for a site for a new $1,000,000 Orpheum house there.

The two big theatres will be erected by the World Realty Company and the Blank syndicate. The World company at the present time own the World, Sun, Muse, Moon and Empress motion picture or vaudeville houses. The A. H. Blank company owns the Rialto and Strand in Omaha, and houses in Des Moines and Sioux City.

While definite plans have not adopted for either house, tentative plans call for a seating capacity of 3,000 for each. The site for the new World company house is on "theatre row," at the corner of Douglas and Sixteenth streets, believed to be the busiest corner in the city. The new blank theatre will be further "uptown," as it will be on the corner of Twentieth and Farnam streets, further out than any of the present theatres.

A brand new rumor going the rounds in Kansas City has it that Marcus Loew, as well as Metro-Goldwyn, is connected with the new $3,000,000 theatre and office building project, which is being promoted on the site of Linwood boulevard and Troost avenue, Kansas City.

The Saxe-Amusement Co., will build a $750,000 theatre in Mobile, Ala., according to a recent report. The house will seat 2,700 and is to be located in the square bounded by Johnson, Cont and Jackson Sts.

The Saxe-Amusement Enterprise of Milwaukee continued its expansion program by acquiring the Apollo, Janesville. The Apollo gives the Saxe interests two theatres in Janesville.

At Fon du Lac, Wis., Saxe Enterprises have acquired a 15 year lease on the Rochow, which the Schroeder interests of Milwaukee are holding. This will bring Saxe and the Fischer-Paramount circuit into competition there, for the Fischer house now building in Fon du Lac is scheduled to open in the fall at about the same time as the Rochow.

A report from New Britain, Conn., states that negotiations are under way for purchase of the Masonic Temple property as a site for a $700,000 picture theatre. It was rumored that Famous is behind the project, this however was denied by an official of that company.

Saxe's leading motion picture theatres of Wilmington, Del., have been acquired by the Stanley Company of America, and beginning Monday, August 17th, will be under the direction of that organization. Jules E. Mast, of the Bellevue company, who sold several weeks ago for Europe, began preliminary negotiations with James N. Ginn and H. Topkis, just before leaving Philadelphia and it was necessary then only to complete the plans.

The four theatres are the Queen, the Arcadian, the Majestic and the Garrick. The deal represents several million dollars.

The Queen Theatre, at Fifth and Market Streets, has a seating capacity of 1,750.

The Arcadia Theatre at 510 Market Street, is a completely new building of steel and concrete, modern in every detail and of generally handsomely appearance. The house was opened in March 1921. There are 1,450 seats.

The Majestic, at 703 and 705 Market Street opened in 1911. It is an up-to-date house in every particular with a stage and with a seating capacity of 1,000, of which 550 is in the orchestra.

The Garrick Theatre, at 830 Market Street, has a seating capacity of 1,200.

In strengthening its position in Albany, N. Y., the Strand interests have just acquired the Albany and Regent theatres, which have been operated by Walter and (Continued on Page 924)
Lesser to Direct Warner Promotion

Experienced Commercial Agency Head to Handle Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation; Bonded Ads First Move

MYER LESSER, for sixteen years the head of the Blaine-Thompson Advertising agency of Cincinnati, and a well known national advertising figure, has taken full charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation for Warner Brothers.

This is believed to mark an important new development in the motion picture industry's "coming of age," since it brings with it the introduction of tested commercial advertising methods applied to pictures.

The step is not a sudden one, but has been formulating for some three years. As the head of the Blaine-Thompson agency, in which position he continues, Lesser has for three years been associated with Warner Brothers and studying film conditions.

The first result of the new step is the national campaign of "bonded" newspaper advertising in support of the forthcoming Warner releases. This calls for full-page space in 100 leading daily newspapers in 43 cities, and smaller space in 1,000 other daily papers.

This advertising will be written, not by motion picture advertising men but by men from the Blaine-Thompson agency who are experienced in the writing of national advertising on all types of commodities.

It is believed that in this way the advertising will be written not from the standpoint of what is interesting within the industry, but from the angle of actual public interest.

At the same time, the past work of the advertising and publicity department will in no way be disturbed. Trade advertising and accessories will be handled as before.

"I fully recognize," says Lesser, "that motion pictures are essential show business, and that you cannot advertise in the same way you would advertise filing cabinets or automobiles. At the same time, speaking nationally, I believe the time has come when you can advertise motion pictures more nearly along the lines of sound, commercial practice. You cannot eliminate adjectives, but you can keep the superlatives within bounds.

"Although you are advertising a different commodity, you are still advertising to human beings who are swayed by certain appeals. The purpose of advertising is to create a desire for your commodity, and it does not alter the case materially if you are advertising motion pictures instead of soap.

"At the same time, I have made sure before applying any idea that it fitted the motion picture industry. To that end, I have made several trips to the Coast to see production at first hand, I have visited all of the Warner Brothers exchanges, and I have talked with great numbers of exhibitors about their advertising problems. Now, in the bonded advertising, tying up directly with releases when they are shown, I believe Warner Brothers campaign will be of real service."

Theatre School To Open August 17

Paramount Training Course for Theatre Managers Begins With Class of Forty-Five Students

With a class of forty-five students, selected from five hundred applicants for registration, the Paramount Theatre Managers Training School, Inc., will open Monday morning, August 17th, on the fifth floor of the New York Theatre Building, 1320 Broadway, New York city. Harold B. Franklin, head of Paramount's theatre division, who conceived the idea of this school, announces that no ceremonies will mark the opening of the classes, the purposes of which he states will be along strictly practical lines and which are to be started in a thoroughly practical manner.

Students at the school will be given a six months' course in all phases of theatre management and operation, the curriculum of the institution embracing the following subjects:

History of the Motion Picture; The History of Paramount; The Development of the Motion Picture; The Interrelation of Production, Distribution and Exhibition; The Theatre Site; Types of Theatres; Theatre Insurance; The Theatre and the Community; Public Speaking; House Service; Music; Projection and Lighting; Presentations and Prologues; Exploitation; Advertising; Publicity; Goodwill Building, Children's Matinees, Holidays; Program Building; Theatre Accounting; Theatre Equipment.

The school is equipped with a miniature theatre with stage, complete lighting equipment and projection booth. Adjoining this miniature theatre is a reception room, library and offices.

Students will report in New York on August 14 in order to complete the details of registration and preparations for commencing their studies at the school. Each will pay a tuition fee of $300 for the course of six months. After they have made advances in the subjects at the school the students will be assigned to different department heads at local theatres where they will assist in the work of preparing ads, management of the house, directing the house staff, planning and executing exploitation tie-ups, and earning and timing productions with the musical director.

The students registered in the first class come from all over the country. The forty-five selected from about five hundred applicants were admitted after examination of their qualifications by the school authorities.

The successful applicants realized that they were expected to pay a tuition fee of Three Hundred ($300) Dollars for the six months course and that during the six months training, they would receive no remuneration and would be expected to pay their own living expenses while residing in New York. Moreover because the course requires intensive training it was explained that students must give their whole time to the school and that any outside employment during attendance at the school would not be permitted. In view of these exacting conditions and the very strict requisites for admission, it is evident that an exceptional grade of student has been lined up for the opening session.

The average age for the applicant selected for the first session is twenty-seven. Among these accepted students are represented two West Point graduates, twelve theatre managers, four hotel managers, one lawyer, one civil engineer, one mining engineer, two newspaper editors, two sales managers, two projectionists, two statisticians one member of the consular service and graduates from universities with varying periods of business experience. Besides the men who have had previous experience in theatre management, most of the accepted applicants have had experience in affiliated work such as advertising, publicity, decorating and salesmanship.

Experts have been selected to train the students in each particular subject. Repeated insistence will be placed on the fact that the purpose of the school is practical and that consequently the theory of theatre management will be subordinated to actual training and practice in these methods which the future managers will apply.
MAJOR EDWARD BOWES ON RADIO
Directs And Announces Capitol Concerts

SINCE assuming the duties of Managing Director of the Capitol Theatre, New York, Major Edward Bowes has established himself as one of the leading radio impresarios, Major Bowes has taken full charge of the arrangement and announcing of the Sunday night air concerts broadcast from the Capitol through station WEAP, and within a short time has gained a wide popular following as a radio personality.

Though Major Bowes in association with Messmore Kendall and others built the Capitol in 1918 and since that time has taken an active part in guiding its policy, it was only recently that he assumed the actual direction of the stage production, supervising all the details of picture presentation, stage number and orchestral features, as well as the regular Sunday evening radio concerts. In addition to his work as managing director of his theatre, Major Bowes serves as a vice-president and a member of the executive committee of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Labor Troubles are Growing
Kansas City Musicians Refuse Co-Operation With Greater Movie Season

LABOR troubles continue to grow apace in different parts of the United States with Atlanta banning orchestras from all theatres, Kansas City musicians refusing to cooperate in the Greater Movie Season celebration and Baltimore houses granting wage increases, but decreasing the size of orchestras.

Great strike threatens the industry in Kansas City. The musicians union refused to allow musicians to ride on a banner bedecked truck, which was to have toured the downtown districts in the interest of Greater Movie Season.

The members were from the Pantages theatre. Just prior to the starting of the truck the musicians were notified they would be fined $100 each if they made the trip, due to the fact that their contract with the Pantages theatre prohibited such engagements. Union officials were appealed to by exhibitors and exchange men alike, as it was too late to alter plans, but the union officials were firm and the tour was abandoned.

The musicians union, at a meeting of its board of directors, also refused to donate the services of a few musicians as a means of co-operating with the Greater Movie Season committees, according to a formal announcement made by A. C. Miller, treasurer of the union, to C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri.

"Such a narrow and radical attitude is intolerable," said Mr. Cook. "Following expressions on all sides of me by scores of theatre owners, there is every probability that this action will lead ultimately to nothing more or less than a majority of the theatres replacing their orchestras with non-union men.

Downtown and suburban houses of Kansas City are divided in the controversy between exhibitors and the operators, who seek an increase of approximately 10 per cent in the wage scale. Downtown first run exhibitors last week signed a contract calling for 7½ per cent increase to the operators, but the suburban houses are "standing pat," refusing an increase grant.

Contracts with the musicians beginning August 1 and giving them an increase over their old wage scale of 20 per cent, have been signed by managers of the moving picture theatres in Baltimore.

Several of the playhouses will decrease the size of their orchestras, it is understood, but the Century will increase the size to 35 men in September, it is reported.

The two vaudeville houses open now, the Garden and Keith's Hippodrome, which give five acts of family vaudeville with a program of pictures, have also given the musicians the increase but managers of the legitimate theatres including the Palace, Maryland, Ford's, Auditorium and Academy have not increased the present time because they are not open, it is said.

Atlanta theatres are reported without orchestras. This fact results from demands on the part of representatives of the Federation of Musicians for an increase for all musicians. The demand was brought by representatives of the Federation of musicians without the usual preliminary discussion with the managers of Atlanta theatres, and was characterized by that body as unreasonable. The increase was set for September 1, and the demand for same made following a period of depression in the picture show business which has been the worst it has known in five years.

Ragnar Oleson, president of the Omaha Musicians' Association, announced after a heated session of the musicians that the motion to increase the wage scale had passed a second reading and that a flat rate of $60 a week would go into effect when contracts were renewed with theatres on August 31.

The musicians have been receiving $45 a week for three months during the summer and $50 during the remaining nine months.

Theatre Expansion Goes On Throughout Country

Noma Suckno, since the death of her father, Samuel Suckno, about a year ago, the transfer will take place on August 31. The policy of the two houses will remain unchanged, the Albany continuing as a first-run theatre, while the Winter Garden will be given over to second-runs. Both houses are located in the downtown section, the Albany theatre being but a block from the Mark Strand. The price paid for the two houses was not announced.

Leasing of the new $1,000,000 Connell Theatre in Aberdeen, Wash., by L. K. Brin, formerly the Warner Brothers franchise holder in this territory, was announced in this city last week. R. E. Connell, the owner of the house, is expected to continue as resident manager. Mr. Brin's acquisition of this theatre was the second in two weeks, as he acquired the Ellenberg Theatre in Ellensburg the latter part of July. Reports circulated on former sale of Filmrow negotiations were also pending for the leasing of the Mack Theatre in Port Angeles and the Grand in Bellingham.

Joseph Stern's Theatrical Enterprises of New York, N. Y., announce the purchase of land for the building of a moving picture theatre in Cranford, N. J. The capacity will be 1500 and the estimated cost of building is $250,000. Plans are being drawn by William E. Lehman of Newark.

New Distribution Concern is Organized Here

"We pledge ourselves to the exhibitors in supplying Vital Exchanges, Inc., with the highest possible quality of productions, as we have in the past, and we will do all that is in our power to merit the confidence which the many messages that have come into this office show exists in Vital Exchanges and ourselves," Mr. Hochreich and his General Assistant, Milton Kemper, have taken temporary offices with the Davis Distributing Division until their new quarters are ready, and it is said that a full announcement with complete details of their plan will be given to the trade within the next week.

Lasky Elected President of M. P. Relief Fund

Jesse L. Lasky of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been elected president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund of America, succeeding Joseph M. Schenck, first president of the organization, which was formed a year ago to give assistance to needy members of the picture industry. Mr. Schenck becomes first vice-president.

Other officers chosen at the recent election are: Mary Pickford, second vice-president; William S. Hart, third vice-president; Harold Lloyd, fourth vice-president; Victor H. Clarke, treasurer; and Rev. Neal Dodd, secretary. Elected to the executive committee are: Francis X. Bushan, P. E.; John W. Beets, Donald Crisp, Joseph De Grasse, Mitchell Lewis, E. D. Moore, Arthur P. Statter and William P. Wyntt.

Perrin Resigns as Manager of Leland. Albany

Oscar Perrin, one of the best known and most successful managers of motion picture theatres in Albany and vicinity, resigned suddenly last Tuesday as the result of reported differences with Mr. H. Buckey, owner of the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in Albany, as well as the Empire in Glens Falls.

Announcement that Perrin was no longer connected with the Buckey houses came as a decided surprise to Film Row and was the chief topic of conversation among the exchanges as well as among the exhibitors. Before going with the Leland, Perrin was for eighteen years manager of the Empire in Albany. When it was decided to raze this theatre to make way for a business block, Perrin became associated with the Leland and under his able management the theatre became what is said to be the best paying house in Albany. Charging a 25 cent admission, first run pictures were presented in a way that attracted capacity audiences mouth after mouth, regardless of weather conditions.

From now on, Buckey, who is a real estate dealer, will do the buying for the three theatres. Alex Snydes, a former newspaper man who has been managing the Clinton Square theatre for some time past, has been promoted to the management of the Leland theatre and will be succeeded in the Clinton Square theatre by someone yet to be named. John Gurry, a relative of Buckey, will continue as manager of the Empire in Glens Falls. It is said that Perrin plans to associate himself with some concern in New York city.

Roberts Resigns Post With Berinstein

George Roberts and his son, Ormond have resigned their executive posts with the Berinstein interests, which include theatres in Albany, Troy, Schenectady and Elmiria. The elder Roberts has been associated with the Bersteinis for the past eight or nine years. For a time he was the partner of the late William Berinstein at the Hudson Theatre in Albany, and eventually became the managing-director of the chain.

Ormond Roberts has been handling the Hudson in Albany for several years past. Julius Berinstein, who has been managing the Palace in Troy will now handle the two houses in Albany, as well as the Troy theatre, while his two brothers will look after the Elmiria houses.

Schenck Will Build New Amusement Parks

Joseph M. Schenck and his brother, Nicholas M. Schenck, are at the head of a new corporation composed largely of New Yorkers who have pledged $4,000,000 for the building in Los Angeles and San Francisco of amusement parks modeled after Palisades Park, the popular New York and New Jersey resort.

These will be the first of a chain of parks the corporation will control. Complete details of the project will not be announced until after the close in September of Palisades Park, which is controlled by the Schencks. According to present plans the California parks are to be ready for operation next summer.

National Press Club Plans Big Theatre for Lease to Famous Players

A 3500-seat motion picture theater, to be the largest house in Washington, D. C., and to be leased to Famous Players-Lasky for a period of 25 years, is to be part of the $9,000,000 eleven-story building which is under consideration by the National Press Club as its permanent home.

The theatre building would be erected on the site of the Ebbitt Hotel, Fourteenth and F streets recently closed, and adjoining buildings. In addition to the theatre and club rooms, which would occupy the top floors, there would be several hundred offices and a number of stores.

The proposed theater, in addition to being the largest in Washington, would be second to none in appearance and equipment. It being anticipated that $300,000 would be expended in its decoration alone. It would be the “furtherest west” of all the downtown houses, Loew having been the first to move any distance from the “movie center”, c.-Ninth street when he built his house at Thirteenth and F. Last year Brylawski’s Earle Theatre was erected at Thirteenth and E streets.

For several years the National Press Club has felt the need of larger and permanent quarters, the present quarters in the Albee Building being under lease. The first actual step in this direction was taken some months ago, when “Samuel and his Capitol Theater gang” came to Washington for two days under the auspices of the Club. Their performances were sufficiently profitable to enable the Club to liquidate its long-outstanding debt.

The club has a running option on the properties under consideration.

Warners Buy Piccadilly, N. Y.

Take Over House From Lee Ochs and Associates for Broadway Show Window

WARNER BROS., announced the purchase of this week of the Piccadilly Theatre at Broadway and 52nd street, New York city, from the Piccadilly Playhouse Inc., of which Lee Ochs is president and managing director. Warner Bros. took possession of the house officially last Tuesday and will not make public the consideration involved in the deal.

George H. Dummond, head of the Warner theatre department will be the new managing director, succeeding Mr. Ochs, who will retire, it is understood, to accept an executive position with Warner Bros.

Mr. Dummond stated that the name of the house will hereafter be Warner Bros. Piccadilly Theatre, and there would be a number of changes made in the appearance of the interior. It is planned to revamp the stage and orchestra pit, and an effort will be made to rearrange the seating arrangements.

A 28 piece orchestra will be installed, just double the size of the present musical force, and the theatre will feature an eight unit program where it has only been running five and six units.

C. R. Marteneau, the present house manager, will be retained and Mr. Dummond said that he is negotiating for one of the biggest musical directors in the country to take charge of the enlarged orchestra.

It will be a presentation house, the show window of Warner Bros. on Broadway.

New Film Companies Given New York Charters

BLACKTON A WARNER PRODUCER
Will Make Four For Coming Year

STUART BLACKTON, pioneer of the film industry to produce four pictures for Warner Brothers distribution this year. The first of these productions will be "The Gilded Highway," adapted by Marian Constance from W. B. Maxwell's story, "A Little More."
The cast so far selected includes: Macklyn Arbuckle, John Harron, Dorothy Devore, Andre Tourner, Myrna Loy, Gardner James, Florence Turner, Tom Mills, Mathilda Comont and Sheldon Lewis.

Particular significance attaches to the appearance of Florence Turner in a Blackton production, for it was under Blackton's direction that Miss Turner developed into a long popular star in the early days of Vitagraph.

Blackton, a real pioneer of pictures remained as vice-president of Vitagraph until the purchase of that company by Warners a few months ago, and throughout the intervening years he has continued to direct some of the most notable of picture successes. Among his more recent productions which met with success are "The Clean Heart" and "The Happy Warrior," both adaptations of novels by A. S. M. Hutchinson.

Submit Postal Service Brief

Woodhull Urges Special Attention of Congress Committee to Film Shipments

R. F. WOODHULL, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has submitted a brief to Hon. George H. Moses, Chairman of the special joint subcommittee of Congress on postal rates, urging the consideration of that committee for expeditions and careful handling of film shipments and consignments by parcel post without the payment of any special service charge by exhibitors.

The brief in part reads:

"It might be of interest to note that the sales policy of the motion picture business is unique in business enterprise, in that the picture or commodity is not sold but rented; and through this system of operation, a picture is continually being transported, re-covering the same territories repeatedly, and being what might be termed in a continual state of transportation. This naturally proves a continual revenue to the postal or express service through which the 'picture' is transported.

"We feel sure that if prompt and careful handling is given to parcel post shipments of film and accessory as aforementioned without the payment by the theatre owner of any special service charge, that the same will result in many more theatre owners using the service than do at this time, because if the service equals, or excels the 'express' service, with the lower cost to the theatre owner, it is but natural that he will use the cheaper medium and thus add revenue to the Post Office Department.

"May we again ask you to consider the above recommendation in behalf of the smaller theatre owner who comprises about 90 per cent of our Industry and who are particularly interested in the matter."

Ben Davis Resigns From the Schine Company

Ben Davis, comptroller and one of the organizers of the Schine Theatrical Co., Inc., operating a large string of theatres in New York State, has resigned from that company.

Davis' retirement from the organization, which grew from a single theatre to a chain of sixty houses during his tenure of office, took effect August 5th.

Previous to his connection with the Schine company Davis was associated with the home office of Redhart as an advertising and exploitation expert and latter with the New York First National Exchange in charge of advertising, exploitation and theatre efficiency.

Davis has announced that he will remain in the theatre business in New York.

Two Lichtman Suits Are Dismissed

Two suits filed some time ago in the St. Louis Circuit Court by Al Lichtman of New York to collect commissions growing out of services alleged to have been given to Harry Koplar and the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation, were dismissed by the new St. Louis Theatre, now nearing completion at Grand boulevard and Morgan street, St. Louis, have been dismissed by counsel for Lichtman.

Although the suits were dismissed at Lichtman's cost his attorneys have stated that a substantial cash settlement had been made with him. They have stated, however, that they were not privileged to divulge the exact amount paid to Lichtman or other details of the alleged settlement.

One of Lichtman's suits was against Harry Koplar for $25,000 while the other was an amended petition and asked for $49,000 from Koplar and the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation. His original suit against Koplar and the theatres company was $50,000.

55 Montreal Theatres Pay City Tax of $45,492

The annual report of the city treasurer of Montreal gives interesting statistics regarding the theatres in Canada's largest city, for the fiscal year ending last April.

The financial statement mentions that the local theatres are one of the most profitable departments of the city, the gross licence revenue, the total tax derived for the past year being $45,492. This is collected in the form of a seat tax at an annual rate of 85 cents per seat. The total seating capacity of the city's theatres is given as 83,521. The number of theatres officially listed under the tax is 55, of which the largest is the St. Dennis Theatre.

Equity Appreciates the Service Bureau

FRANK GILMORRE, executive secretary of the Actors Equity Association has written Will Hays a letter of appreciation for the establishment by his association of a service bureau for the employment of extras on the coast.

The communication reads as follows:

"Permit me to congratulate you and the members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers on your splendid decision to institute a service bureau for extras and do away with all forms of commission.

"This genuine effort of yours to remedy the abuses which have in the past borne so heavily on the extras is greatly appreciated by the Actors' Equity Association."

And every word of it is the truth!
"NONE OF HIS PAST CONTRIBUTIONS CAN BE COMPARED TO THIS ONE. Mr. Lloyd is certainly entitled to feel proud. One is never allowed to stop laughing until the end."

HARRISON'S REPORTS

"A wow!... Chock-a-block with laughter, ... Crammed with gags. THE FINEST THING LLOYD HAS DONE."

TRADE REVIEW

"The biggest Lloyd has had. IT IS A CINCH AT THE PICTURE BOX OFFICE."

VARIETY

"A great box-office bet—a combination of laughs and thrills that will move any audience to cheer and cry with it. SURE-FIRE IF A PICTURE EVER WAS."

MORNING TELEGRAPH

"Even the most frozen-faced patron will find himself rocking with laughter. THIS IS HIS VERY BEST PRODUCTION."

M. P. WORLD

"Tops Lloyd's previous best for real laughs and pathos. Sets a new standard for well placed gags beautifully timed to collect 100% guffaws. A college comedy classic. BEAT YOUR COMPETITOR TO IT IF YOU CAN. You can bank on it to do capacity business."

FILM DAILY

"I THINK IT IS THE BEST PICTURE HE EVER MADE."

EXHIBITORS HERALD

"Lloyd's funniest picture. A sure-fire knockout. WILL MAKE A WOODEN INDIAN LAUGH."

M. P. NEWS
If one man calls a picture "greatest and best," you may or may not believe it.

But when TEN skilled critics tell you that, you've got to believe it.

A big audience of exhibitors and critics, at a private showing—which is the toughest possible test of a picture, shrieked, yelled, howled, roared, and mopped their eyes.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big.

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 75%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Orange and Black Front is Built for "Chickie"

"Chickie" received a most effective theatre front display when it was shown at the Strand theatre in Seattle. The front was done in orange and black. The banner above the entrance doors contained a special painted portrait of Dorothy Mackaill and John Bowers, flanked on the left with "Chickie," the story of the Seattle Girl," with the names of the members of the cast on the right hand side.

Cut-outs made of the one and three-sheet posters were set in as door panels while the title "Chickie!" was displayed both in and over the marquee in illuminated letters.

The tying up of "Chickie" as the story of the Seattle girl added to its attractiveness as an offering in that town.

Costume Carnival Exploits "Great Circus Mystery"

The schools were holding costume carnivals in Los Angeles when Joe Rubenstein had the last chapter of "The Great Circus Mystery" and the first episode of "The Fighting Ranger" booked into the Riviera theatre. That gave Joe an idea—and the idea turned into a great piece of exploitation which won him a prize in Lammle's serial competition.

He invited the children of the neighborhood on which he draws to participate in a "gigantic" parade which would celebrate the closing chapters of "The Great Circus Mystery." Those who came in costumes would be admitted free to the matinee show and if their costumes represented a Universal picture they would be eligible for a contest in which six cash prizes and two trips to Universal were the awards.

Long before 11 o'clock, the hour set for the parade, the lobby and the sidewalk in front of the Riviera were jammed with eager youngsters. Two hundred of them were in costume. The procession started off with a poster automobile in the lead and motorcycle police making generous use of their sirens following. Next came the bicycle section of 50 decorated bikes and behind them banner carriers and the 500 or more children who joined the procession.

When the parade returned to the theatre the doors were thrown open and the children in costume marched across the stage. The judges—representatives from the Universal exchanges in Los Angeles—picked eight winners. The audience by its applause designated who should receive the first, second, third, etc. prizes. After ten minutes intermission, the show was started.

Motion pictures taken of the parade were shown the following week and brought everyone and his cousin back again.

Novel revolving dice on display in the lobby of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonvillle, when Manager Guy O. Kenimer showed "Seven Chances" (Metro-Goldwyn).

Police Showing Advertises "Making of O'Malley"

Much valuable newspaper space on "The Making of O'Malley" was contained in the newspapers of Boston through a special showing of that film to Commissioner of Police Herbert A. Wilson, Supt. of Police Michael H. Crowley with 34 captains of the Boston police department, shortly in advance of the showing of that picture at Gordon's Olympia Theatre, Boston.

Manager Frank Hookle of the Olympia arranged with First National's Boston branch manager, Thomas Spry, for a private showing of that picture at the company's Boston branch.

Police officers were keenly interested in the picture, Commissioner, Superintendent and Captains commented upon the presentation of a policeman's activities and duties.

The Boston papers printed the commendation of the Commissioner and the Superintendent, while a number of them used three and four column cuts of the group of police officials watching the picture being screened.

English Exhibitor Builds Strong "Oh, Doctor" Ad

Through the cooperation of manufacturers of patent medicine, packaged drugs, and other drug store staples, E. W. Bassil, manager of the Cinema House, Sheffield, England transformed his lobby into a first class imitation of a chemist's shop when he played "Oh, Doctor!"

To carry out the medical idea, Mr. Bassil supplied his usherettes with pill-box hats and his cafe waitresses with aprons on which "Oh, Doctor!" had been painted. The commissionaires, page-boys, and attendants had the name of the picture on the back of their white aprons.

In addition to this there was an extensive outdoor campaign.

Artistic and summary lobby effect created for "Are Parents People?" (Paramount) by Manager J. B. Carroll at the Strand theatre, Tampa, Fla., during the recent showing.
Pearls Shown in Window as "White Monkey" Tie-Up

"The White Monkey," received heavy billing and excellent window display for this showing at the Fifth Avenue theatre, Nashville, Tenn.

In addition to the regular billboard locations, three and six-sheets were used in the Arcade through which several thousand persons pass daily.

A window tie-up was arranged with the Cau-Sloan Dry Goods Company by W. R. Arnold exploiter. Two large portraits of Miss La Marr were used in a window displaying Richelieu pearls. A large card called attention to the showing.

Free Manicures Advertise "The Manicure Girl"

In the lobby of the Colonial theatre, Portsmouth, two days before and on opening day of "The Manicure Girl," Manager J. M. Edgar Hart, in cooperation with local beauty parlors, had manicure tables with dainty pink shaded lamps and an expert girl at each. Here the ladies of Portsmouth were treated to a free manicure from 4 to 6 p.m. A neat card on an easel near box-office announced Free Manicure from Four to Six Friday, Saturday and on the first day of the showing of the picture—Monday. The stunt caused a lot of talk, with favorable comment from all.

A telegram from Bebe Daniels commenting on the splendid cooperation of Portsmouth beauty parlors was reproduced and posted in the lobby of the theatre where it created a world of local interest. A huge cutout of Bebe Daniels was also used over theatre entrance.

Valuable publicity was gained through the cooperation of a local agent for French face powder, who furnished 3,000 samples of face powder done up in neat packages printed with "Compliments of Bebe Daniels" in "The Manicure Girl," starting Monday at the Colonial theatre, etc." This firm in addition to defraying the expense of printing, provided a young lady, who handed out the samples to the patrons two days in advance of showing at the theatre. Some were given to men with a small card signed with initials of theatre manager, reading: "Gentlemen may use this after shaving—warranted Soft and Smooth."

In addition to the above, the standard exploitation methods were employed, with an attractive window display in the leading drug store of manicure and toilet articles with a special card announcing the attraction at the Colonial.

The force of boys which covered St. Louis in remarkably thorough fashion with heralds for the engagement of "The Fool" (Fox) at the Kings theatre.

Clever Co-Operative Page on "I'll Show You Town"

Ann McCurdy, the Universal exploiteress in Milwaukee worked out a co-operative half page in the Journal which brought much publicity to the Merrill when "I'll Show You the Town" was holding forth there.

At the top of the page, Mrs. McCurdy announced that there was a contest being run in connection with the ads below. You were to count the number of times the five words of the picture's title were used and if you were correct you received a pass for the show. You were advised, however, that if "I will" would not do for "I'll" nor "your" and "you're" for "you".

Mrs. McCurdy's ads, such as: "You have not seen the town until you have visited the Margold Gardens" or "While You're Seeing the Town, don't fail to visit Milwaukee's land of perfect joy, State Fair Amusement Park," etc., tied up well with the picture.

"Heart of a Siren" Given Showmanlike Front

In addition to his usual screen, newspaper and heavy billboard campaign for "The Heart of a Siren", Manager Jack Rowley of the Royal theatre, Laredo, Texas devised an attractive theatre front.

On the morning of the opening, this front was put in place. It consisted of a large red heart which occupied the central double door entrance to the theatre. Reaching from the heart to the sides of the door were four arms, each arm bearing one of the words "Conniving", "Intriguer", "Vanity," and "Deceit." From the two upper arms was suspended smaller red hearts. Above the heart was a poster cut-out and flanking it on either side were framed stills.

A large heart and a smaller heart were hung under each end of the marquee.
IN THE MAIL

LOUIS C. SHIMON, assistant manager of the Milwaukee theatre, Milwaukee, sends us some excellent program copy and a first rate organ stunt, all of which will be reproduced elsewhere in this department at the first opportunity. As Shimon remarks, good program copy is not so easy to write or obtain, and is well worth passing on to others when written, since it may save the other fellow that much work.

JOHN M. LYTLE, manager of the Palace theatre at Dixon, Calif., sent in some material a while back showing that all the live wires aren't in the big cities by a long ways. He received the official blessing of the Community Council for a Go-to-Movies week, and put it over in big style.

The McLaren Amusement Co., Inc., at Jackson, Mich., operating the Capitol theatre, of which W. S. MCLAREN is managing director, sends two recent issues of its highly creditable Capitol Theatre Weekly. This is an eight-page weekly program for which good support has been built up among local firms in an advertising way. Interesting film news and the programs for the week make up the editorial content.

JOHN B. BIGGIO of Biggio's Grand theatre, Steubenville, Ohio, sends an excellent photo of his lobby display for "Paths to Paradise," which we shall try to reproduce at the first opportunity.

C. D. MACGREGOR, the projectionist-exploiter of the Princess theatre, Chatham, Ontario, of which J. A. STEWART, is manager, sends us a photo of a corking display on "Gold Heels" made very inexpensively, and promises to send others from time to time. We'll be glad to get them, MacGregor, if they're on a par with this one.

SMALLEY'S SIDNEY THEATRE, Sidney, N. Y., forwards another batch of its excellent throwaways and heralds, some of which will be described elsewhere first chance we get.

John E. Galaham of the Paramount exchange in New Haven sends us a description of a great contest stunt worked by MANAGER JAMES F. POWERS of the Bijou theatre in that city on "Night Life of New York," which will be described here shortly.

E. S. HOLLAND, the advertising man of the Bijou theatre, Abingdon, Ill., of which CHARLES M. DAHLER is manager, writes us enclosing several splendid pieces of exploitation material. He also describes a Western week put over there which we'll pass on to other managers in this department.

ECONOMICAL PROLOGUE

The illustration here of the prologue on "The Lady," in two scenes, an excellent example of a striking prologue at small expense, was used by the new McDonald theatre in Eugene, Ore., recently. It was devised and executed by Donald McDonald and Russell F. Brown, the latter being the publicity director for the Greater Eugene Amusement company. The first part of the prologue was a night street scene in London with the figures and background being half concealed by fog.

Plush parts on London street, amber street lamp and one or two distant windows showing thru greenish fog. Figures moving in shadows. Policeman saunters in from left, whistling short strain over and over again, swinging club carelessly. Cop discovers man in high hat, with cane, draped around lamp post. Cop disengages man from post, and straightening up reeling unsteadily off at left.

Cop continues toward right, whistling again. Lady enters right. Cop salutes, lady smiles, nods. They pass, cop exiting right.

As Lady nears left, man, with cap, slinks from behind building, sneaks up behind Lady. Lady turns, screams. Man grabs at Lady's handbag. Police whistle heard off right. Cop runs in from right. Cop grabs man who has just started to run. Cop drags man back to Lady.

Cop: "What's the charge ma'am?"

Lady: "It's all right, officer, he didn't take anything."

Two scenes from the beautifully staged prologue to "The Lady" (First National) at the McDonald theatre, Eugene, Ore. None of the props involved were at all elaborate and the cost was moderate.

Exclusively recording for Vocalion Records

Color poster displayed in some 5,000 phonograph dealers windows as the result of a tie-up on the Ben Bernie engagement at the Rivoli theatre, New York City, made by Ed. Olmstead, publicity director, with the Vocalion company.

Cop: "You want to let 'im go, ma'am?"
Lady: "Please do—(to crook) and you'll try to straighten up, won't you?" (Crook hangs head, doesn't answer).
Cop: "Yea! They always do!" (Lady turns to leave.)
Cop: "Come on, lucky chap, out of sight before my mind changes on me!"
Crook: "I hanks,—and who's the lady?"
Cop: "You said it! She's THE Lady!"

End solo. lamp and spot dim off. Blue feet and borders come up on black scrim, then down as black lights come up and scrim parts revealing large frame painting of lady hanging against grey drape wall. When lighted from in front, painting is that of "Mother" by Whistler. As lights dim off in front and come up behind painting, girl comes to life in place of painted mother and sings. Reversing lights fades off girl and brings back the painting. Off stage, tenor sings "Wonderful Mother" entering, left at start of chorus, walking towards and singing to picture. Solo ends with tenor kneeling in front of and looking up at painting.

Lights come up behind scrim painting, revealing soprano seated in picture pose and turning and looking down at boy as lights come up. Soprano sings "Boy of Mine" while boy remains in same position. End solo. lights fade off behind and come up in front of painting. Boy arises, looking at painting, organ seguing into "Wonderful Mother" as plush closes and parts on title of picture.

T COURTESY AND CLEANLINESS

The Personal Talks by Harold B. Franklin appearing each week in The Close-Up, Paramount's publication for its own theatre employees, are always sane and informative. They are really little talks on theatre management, and as such should be of interest, it seems to us, to other theatre managers as well. At any rate, here is one of the recent talks, bearing on courtesy and cleanliness of house employees:

Until a comparatively short time ago it was the policy of some exhibitors to give the doorman complete charge of engaging ushers, cleaners, etc. It is possible that this state of affairs still exists in certain parts of the country, but it is an undeniable fact that it is no longer a practice in any really successful theatre. Managers who know how to realize that too much of the success of the theatre depends on the kind of staff they employ, that they personally select each person and make sure that they are qualified by experience, appearance and adaptability for each particular post. Once accepted as employees, they are fitted into that part of the theatre in which they can be of the most service not only to the theatre, but to themselves as well.

Experience has taught managers that inefficient or "fresh" employees are likely to mean the loss of thousands of dollars each year and the in calculable loss of good will, and such an item ultimately means the difference between success and failure.

One of the most interesting things about present-day personnel work is the real effort that is made by the best type of manager to help the new employee do the best work that he or she may be fitted for. There is a realization that the improperly placed employee becomes a drag—such a person has a detrimental effect on the morale of the whole organization. Breaking in new employees is an expensive proposition, and therefore it behooves each manager to be careful in the selection of each person employed. A manager's ability to surround himself with an efficient, courteous staff is in a measure indicative of his skill. Here is where true management shows itself.

There are many factors that contribute to the acceptability of a prospective employee of a theatre. Realizing that in coming in direct contact with the patron the employee is in effect the theatre's personal representative, the aim should be to try and get as high a type as possible.

Next to honesty, cleanliness is placed among the cardinal virtues. Improperly cared for hands, neglected neck, unshaven faces, collars not exactly white, uncared for shoes and clothing all have a detrimental effect. Anti-Volstead breaths are absolutely barred. Too much facial adornment of rouge and lipstick and the chewing gum habit are taboo. Managers who will bear these facts in mind will find themselves surrounded by a personnel that will pay rich rewards.

Without courtesy there can be no success in a theatre. The operation of a theatre is a business in which uniform courtesy is essential—service is part of the theatre's stock in trade. An usher can seat a patron in such a way as to affront him and the usher's manner may be merely the result of hurry. Therefore, a theatre's staff, from the cashier right to the manager, should ever be on the lookout to please patrons by word and deed. We must not forget that institutional courtesy starts at the top. The bigger the job, the greater the need for unfailing courtesy. No executive can inspire a courteous staff if he himself is cross or inconsiderate. Therefore, it is most important to have a splendid relationship exist between executives and employees.

The usher of today is the manager of tomorrow, and successful managers will encourage suggestions from ushers and others. In the final analysis, the usher, the cashier and the doorman, who are in constant touch with patrons, are able to make the most valuable suggestions.

Bathing Beauty Ballyhoos
"I'll Show You Town"

Ray Averill, who manages the Olympic in Buffalo, N. Y., worked a good stunt in connection with "I'll Show You the Town." Fortunately for Ray, Crystal Beach was running a beauty contest, as has become a habit with beaches in the summer. And so Ray entered his own beauty, called her Miss Olympic and had her do other things than parade before the judges.

He borrowed a nice shiny roadster from the Davis agency for her and put an "I'll Show You the Town" banner on the back and spare tire. To add class to his equipment, Ray hired a negro, dressed him like an "Arabian Nights" slave and sent him along with Miss Olympic, as her official escort. To say that Miss Olympic in her diving costume, the bedecked slave, and the gorgeous roadster caught the town's attention is putting it mildly.

Wherever Miss Olympic went she handed out cards with her picture and "I'll Show you the Town" copy on them, and small heralds printed in red and black.

Dye Tie-Up Provides Free
"Quo Vadis" Heralds

H. C. Farley manager of the empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., got out a special, attractive herald on the showing of "Quo Vadis" without expense to himself. This was done through a tie-up with Motes and Son with an ad for Chango, a new and scientific dye for cleaning rugs on the floor.

On the front of the four page folder was the following: "Two new and immensely interesting accomplishments!" The second page was devoted to a brief description of "Quo Vadis" and its showing at the Empire. The third page, equally brief, called attention to Chango. The back page was blank. The circular was distributed at the theatre and mailed out by the management and also by Motes and Son.

"Quo Vadis" Given Strong Campaign at Liberty

"Quo Vadis" was shown recently by the Sanger Amusemeat company at its Liberty theatre, New Orleans, La. A comprehensive campaign, planned by Maurice Barr and Elmore Ryan, brought into play, newspapers, billboards, Italian societies, radio, book clubs, libraries and every conceivable medium of audience appeal.

It was given a "road-show" presentation— but at popular prices. It was the sole attraction of the program—weeklies, comedies, novelties, being eliminated for this particular week. The result was that audience attention was concentrated throughout the two hour period required to project it.

Several thousand sheets of lithographs were used in the billboard campaign. Special hand-drawn ads, and First National's pressbook aids carried the newspaper message.

Six ways of advertising "Confessions of a Queen" (Metro-Goldwyn) are illustrated in the layout above. Selected from the newspaper advertising of six leading theatres throughout the country, as follows: Apollo theatre, Indianapolis; Metropolitan theatre, Baltimore; Walnut theatre, Cincinnati; Palace theatre, New Haven; Loew's Temple theatre, Birmingham; and the Capitol theatre in Houston. The Capitol and Walnut ads were two columns wide in the original.
Sennett Directors Busy With Productions

Directors Harry Edwards, Alfred Goulding, Del Lord, Lloyd Bacon and Eddie Cline are busy making Mack Sennett Comedies for Pathé release. Goulding is directing Alice Day in a department store comedy with Danny O'Shea, Eugenia Gilbert and Barney Helium in the cast.

Harry Edwards is finishing a crook story with Harry Langdon. Peggy Montgomery and Vernon Dent are in supporting roles. Del Lord is using fifty-seven bobs in his current thrill comedy with Billy Bevan and Madeleine Hurlock in the leading roles.

Lloyd Bacon is in the midst of a Ralph Graves comedy, with Thelma Parr, Vernon Dent and Irving Bacon in important parts.

Two Join Staff of the Bray Productions

Frank Leonard, cartoonist and gag man, and Ernest Cortis, photographer, were added to the production staff of Bray Studios last week. Leonard will assist Walter Lantz with the production of a new Dinky Doodle series and the Unnatural History series, and Cortis will assist with the Unnatural History cartoon series. The pictures are being produced for F. B. O. release.

"All Aboard," New Upton Story, is Completed

"All Aboard!" is the title of the latest "Helen and Warren" two-reel production to be filmed at the Upton studios. Kathrynn Perry and Hallam Cooley, the players of the title roles, are supported by Diana Miller, William Davidson, Duquille Ward and Pat Harmon. Albert Ray directed the story.

Reports Record Matinee on Program of Shorts

All short subjects programs have come into prominence in the Cleveland territory, Manager Burton of the Lincoln in Cleveland reporting highly satisfactory results with such a bill last week and Neil Schwarz, manager of the Grant at Massillon playing a "two-reel comedy festival" on August 13th.

At the Lincoln Mr. Burton played a short program for three days and reported that business on Thursday, the opening date, was fair with a noticeable increase Friday, and states that his Saturday matinee was the biggest in the history of the house. He announces that the program will be repeated as a regular monthly attraction at the Lincoln.

Schwartz used Carnival One sheets to advertise his "Comedy Festival" in Massillon. His program was made up of "The Mysterious Mystery," "Just a Good Guy" and "The Handsome Cabman."

Sees Renewed Interest in Short Films
Fred Quimby Finds Exhibitors Willing to Exploit Good Short Subjects on Tour of Fox Exchange Centres

That exhibitors are aware of the box office value of good short subjects and that progressive showmen all over the country are willing and ready to cooperate in the proper exploitation of short feature attractions are among the conclusions arrived at by Fred C. Quimby, short subject sales manager of the Fox organization, following a thorough investigation of existing conditions as revealed to him during a tour of the exchange centers of his company. Mr. Quimby is well acquainted with the short subject field, in which he has had a wide experience, and his observation.

Mr. Quimby has just returned to New York from a tour of the principal cities of the United States where he had heart-to-heart talks with any number of exhibitors, large and small. During the course of his trip he visited every Fox exchange inaugurating a new short subject sales policy.

Because of his reputation as a short subject expert, the findings of Mr. Quimby, although mostly about his own company's activities, are printed herewith, because they reflect the trend of things concerning all short subject producers, distributors and exhibitors.

Among the more important observations made by Mr. Quimby are:

Those exhibitors are more than willing to cooperate with producers in the proper exploitation of the short films.

Fred C. Quimby, Fox Short Subject Manager.

That a number of exhibitors have been ahead of the producers in appreciating the box-office value of the one and two-reelers, and have been giving them a just amount of attention in all advertising and publicity, and, when their importance and popularity merited it, subordinating the feature to play up the short subject.

That exhibitors generally have grown as discriminating about their short subject bookings as they are about their features and insist on full information regarding them before signing contracts.

That exhibitors have been passing up comedies for other presentations are realizing this is not in accord with their audiences wishes and are cutting down on prologues and other attractions to make room for one and two reel comedies.

That all the exhibitors talked with promise to be more than fair and equitable to their short subject bookings in advertising and other publicity.

And that the box-office results where short subjects were properly exploited were most gratifying and attested better than any words could the importance of the little features and the high regard in which they are held by the public.

Summing up, Mr. Quimby says the campaign inaugurated at the meetings of the short subject producers and distributors to convince the exhibitors of the value of properly exploiting short subjects is bringing the most satisfactory results. Exhibitors everywhere, he says, are waking up to the value of their one and two-reel attractions and many who never thought of advertising them before are doing so now with the ones who are increasing the space formerly allotted.

Mr. Quimby was more than pleased with the outlook for the Fox company's short subject product. He said that the Fox short subject sales to date are 200 per cent better than last season.

The plans of the Fox company to aid the exhibitors properly to exploit their short subject attractions, as explained by Mr. Quimby, are comprehensive.

In the first place complete press books will be issued each two-reel series. These books will be exactly alike, except that the number of pages, the books are issued with the starring features and supplementary attractions produced by the company. For lobby and outdoor advertising the Fox company will get up one sheets which will be the work of a recognized specialist. In addition to this there will be an ample supply of stills for newspapers and lobbies. In fact all accessories but the larger sized lithographs may be had by exhibitors booking the Fox two-reelers. For Fox News and Varieties attractive stock and current issue one sheets and slides will be available.

First Century Comedy Due This Month

"After a Reputation," a two-reeler starring Edna Marian will be the first release through Universal of the 1925-26 product of Century Film Corporation. It will be the first of a series of twelve Edna Marian comedies for the season and will be released in August. William Watson directed, while the principal supporting roles are in the hands of Matty Roubert and Rinto Colev.

"Three Wise Goofs" Goes Into Production

"Three Wise Goofs," has been placed in production by Joe Rock of Standard Comedies who is producing the series for F.B.O. release. The picture stars "Tiny" Alexander, "Fatty" Kerr and "Kewpie" Ross. It will be released in October.

"Be Careful"  (Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

This comedy featuring Jimmie Adams boasts nothing if not action. There is nothing that has hit town to put it into, including more than the usual quota of laughs. There is some good knockabout comedy of the usual order when a pair of eloping lovers present themselves to the local "constable." But there is also some other hokum a little aside from the usual order, but with a fair story and some good situations.

Jimmie Adams is supported by a good cast which includes Molly Malone as leading lady, William Irving, Lincoln Plumer and Eddie Baker. All add considerable to the general merriment.

Adams is a traveling salesman who lends his assistance to the eloping pair and thereby gets himself into unlimited difficulties. He conceals them in a bungalow and stands off the pursuing pair, only to learn that the would-be husband is an escaping thief. The pair proceed to the office of the Justice of the Peace where the now engaged couple do nothing possible to halt the ceremony and finally succeed by calling out the fire department, made up largely of Justice of the Peace and the witnesses to the wedding.

The Cast
- Stocking Salesman: Jimmie Adams
- Mary Malone: Molly Malone
- Her Sweetie: William Irving
- Mary's Father: Lincoln Plumer
- The Sheriff: Eddie Baker

Story by Sig Hersig; directed by Harold Beasler; produced by T. M. Condon; cartoons by Norman Z. McLeod; produced by Christie.

Summary—This is a comedy fairly bulging with humorous situations and some good slapstick and hokum. It is well acted by a competent cast and should go exceptionally well in the neighborhood houses.

"Pleasure Bound"  (Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

Here is an exceptionally good comedy with amusing situations galore and one that should register well almost anywhere. It features Lige Conley who is given a vehicle which allows him to surpass anything he has done before. There are motorboats and a fishing excursion make up the comedy elements. These combined with more than the usual quota of laughs make up two reels of real mirth and action.

A little slow in getting under way the picture definitely progresses until it is a veritable whirlwind of motor boats and lively comedy as it reaches its climax. While Lige Conley is the center of most of these whirrs and antics, he is most creditably, he is ably assisted by a cast made up of Stanley Blystene, Jack Lloyd, Estelle Bradley and Phil Dunham.

When the fishing party arrives at its destination the picture takes on a whirl that provides an abundance of laughs. Different members of the party take turns at falling off the wharf, with some amusing rescues being effected. The whole thing winds up in some hilarious situations in which speedy motor boats play an important part.

The Cast
- Stanley Strong: Lige Conley
- Myron's Bride: Stanley Blystene
- Daisy De Peyster: Estelle Bradley
- Mrs. De Peyster: Jack Lloyd
- Mrs. De Peyster: Mrs. De Peyster
- The Rival: Phil Dunham

Mermaid Comedy—Jack White production; written and directed by Norman Taurog; Photographed by Barney McGill and Leonard Shiff.

Summary—A delightful comedy with a very amusing and interesting phantasy in which a group of dolls "come to life." It should make a great general appeal for the subject has been treated with excellent taste by the director and the popular "gang" actors.

"Speak Easy"  (Universal-Bulls Eye—One Reel)

Charles Puffy is the featured comedian in this one-reeler with Mildred June as his leading lady and Billy Engle as the rival. Puffy buys forty cents worth of birthday gifts for the girl, but is knocked down by a flivver and the gifts picked up by the rival are presented to the girl. Included among them are a ten-cent diamond ring, which is discovered as bung by the girl's father. He offers the girl's hand to the one who is the first to snatch it up in dollars.

Rival steals the safe from police department headquarters and agrees to split the swag with Puffy if he will do the driving. The flivver, out of control runs directly into police headquarters where the rival is captured and Puffy given the thousand dollars reward which goes with the thief's capture.

Puffy then becomes a nervous wreck fearing the escape from jail of his rival, which has threatened to escape and "get" him. He does make his escape, and in disguise as a doctor recommends a sanitarium to Puffy. With a bomb concealed in the back of the car the rival threatens the demolition of Puffy, but inadvertently drops a lighted match in the garage, which goes over the prison wall and into the chain gang, while Puffy and the girl escape unjured. There is some fair comedy in this one.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Over the Plate"  (Pathe—One Reel)

The all-animal ball game is the "plot" of this Aesop's Film Fables cartoon produced by Paul Terry. The action is centered mostly with the ingenious methods of "crashing the gate" employed by the mice and cats, elephants and ostrich. It is fairly amusing reed, supplied with a quantity of incident and introducing several clever gags, the majority of which, however, have been used in the same connection in a previous cartoon in this series.—T. C. Kennedy.

"Seven Ages of Sport"  (Pathe—One Reel)

The sporting instinct which expresses itself in various forms from infancy to old age is the subject of this Grantland Rice "Spotlight" reel. It should make an appeal to all ages of film fans, for the games which all ages play are shown in a series of views taken in and out-of-doors, an additional attraction for the program during these Summer months.—T. C. Kennedy.

"A Good Program Must Have Nucleous"  (1600 Broadway—New York City)

EDWIN MILES FADMAN, Pres.
The Fearless Lover (Perfection Pictures-Commonwealth—4656 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

With a fighting cop for hero, pretty telephone girl for heroine and a bunch of tough gangsters making trouble for both, this melodrama of metropolitan activities in the crook strata, swinging along at a clippin’ gait, is just the sort of thing warranted to provide an hour of satisfactory entertainment for the average fan. Patrick Michael Casey, whose moniker enables one to make a close guess at his racial descent, is a new recruit. His stock is high, he has stood up a road in the force in past years, and Pat starts off with stern determination to live up to the old man’s reputation.

According to regulation movie schedule, he is planted in one of the city’s hard-boiled sectors and told to make good. And he does! Right at the start of his assignment we see him clench Mr. Dugan, the notorious thug-leader by the shoulder, shake him up and tell that gent what he may expect if he doesn’t behave while patrolman Casey is around. And when Casey begins cleaning-up, he goes about it in whirlwind fashion, makes a one-man raid on an evil resort, hunts Dugan to the house-top, dodges him Novak, when Dugan’s gun is empty,desired to use his gun, gives him a mauling and carries him off to the lockup. As a side issue, there’s a romance with telephone girl Enid Sexton, played by Eva Novak, a strike in the exchange and death of a little chap who is hit by a car. The good guys win through, the wired are out of order and they can’t get a doctor, this last scene injecting a touching bit of pathos into the story. William Fairbanks and Eva Novak are excellent in their respective roles and well supported.

THEME. Metropolitan melodrama, with policeman hero, telephone girl heroine, and underworld atmosphere.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The numerous gang fights. Hero’s final combat with leader. Phone girls’ strike. Death of boy killed by auto. The love interest.

DIRECTION. Has piled up sensational episodes in rapid succession, handled romantic angle well, preserved center of interest and brought out rattling climaxes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the big punch scene where Casey stacks up alone against the gang and hunts leader Dugan to the roof, finally subduing him with his fists. The strike of the phone operators is also worth advertising.

DRAWING POWER. This isn’t up to the mark for big theatre audiences, but looks like a sure money-getter so far as neighborhood and smaller houses are concerned.

SUMMARY. A lively melo with policeman and phone girl as hero and heroine. Packed with thrills, sentiment and romance. Offers realistic metropolitan atmosphere. No padding, plenty of action.

THE CAST

Patrick Michael Casey .................. William Fairbanks
Mrs. Casey ................................ Ruby LaFayette
Tom Dugan ................................ Tom Kennedy
Mrs. James Sexton ........................ Lydia Knott
Enid Sexton ................................. Eva Novak
Frankie ........................................ Frankie Darrow
Ted Sexton ................................. Arthur Rankin

Author, Scott Dunlap. Directed by Henry McRae.

SYNOPSIS. Patrick Casey, new police recruit, is assigned to a tough section of the city with orders to manhandle all the crooks. Dugan, leader of a gang, is stopped by Casey from annoy- ing phone operator Enid Sexton, with whom the cop falls in love. The telephone exchange girls strike. While the wires are idle a little boy struck by an auto, dies, because it is impossible to get a doctor quickly by phone. Enid’s young brother, Ted, gets mixed up with Dugan’s crew, who plan a silk robbery. Casey uses his influence with the sergeant to let Ted go, if he succeeds in rounding up Dugan’s gang. He goes into their headquarters alone, tackles them with club and gun and hunts Dugan to the roof. There the gangsters take at him, but misses. When Dugan’s gun is empty Casey goes at him with his fists, beats him up and hauls him to the station. Enid and Casey arrange for early wedding.

That Man Jack (F. B. O.—5032 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD program attraction of the straight Western brand, this film, besides offering the usual quota of battling and riding stunts, stresses the sentimental angle rather more than is customary with open air adventure tales. In other re- spect the plot is neither better nor worse than the average and speechless sentimentality is the tag of the picture. As a starring vehicle for Bob Custer it fulfills its purpose and will probably be well received by the numerous fans who prefer this type of picture to those equipped with literary material demanding analysis and concentation.

The feature jumps into strenuous action right away, with Cus- ter saving the girl in a runaway accident, old stuff, but remarkably well done in this instance, and giving the villain a dressing-down in a fight that is viciously realistic. Sentiment creeps into the story when the hero does the self-sacrifice act upon finding out that his pal loves the same girl he is fascinated by. The murder of his chum, Custer’s arrest on suspicion, his escape and attempts to trace the real criminal are smoothly woven events, with circumstantial evidence damning Bob and the murderer’s identity cleverly concealed until the very end. The star’s work is un- uniformly good and some of his horsemanship feats look like real riding miracles, as for instance when he is chased by the sheriff, wounded, slides over on one side of his saddle until he nearly touches the ground, regaining his former position with the steed galloping full blast.

THEME. Western melodrama, with sentimental urge more in evidence than usual.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fine scenic shots, The numerous fights, chases and Custer’s startling exhibition of riding prowess. The romantic angle and happy climax.

DIRECTION. Adequate. Has got all possible values out of familiar plot, creating considerable suspense, variety of thrills and making love interest prominent.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a speedy Western in which Custer distinguishes himself by his extraordinary riding feats and fighting ability.

DRAWING POWER. This film should make good wherever Westerners are popular. It is a suitable attraction for the average house, is O. K. for the family circle and the juveniles will certainly appreciate Custer’s riding stunts and all-around display of athletic energy.

SUMMARY. A Western alive with strenuous action, with hero Bob Custer doing a number of novel and breathtaking stunts in the riding line. Is well photographed and directed, will satisfy the average fan and make an especial appeal to the boys, on account of Custer’s wild horsemanship.

THE CAST

Jack ............................................ Bob Custer
Anita Leland ................................ Mary Beth Milford
Joe Leland ................................... Monte Collins
Sammy Sills ................................ Hayford Hobbs
Bill Stearns ................................. Buck Moulton

SYNOPSIS. When Anita Leland’s team runs away from her a muscular stranger intervenes, stops the horses and assists her to dismount. He gives his name as Jack, and when Sammy Sills pro- poses that he should become her partner in working a mine, he consents, as the proposal is the most generous he has ever heard. Jack engages in a fight with Bill Stearns, a husky loafer, and throws him soundly. It transpires that his partner Sammy is also in love with Anita, having known her since childhood, and is engaged to her. Jack makes up his mind to leave and rides away. Sammy is attacked by the Stearns gang and slain. Suspicion falls upon Jack, which is strengthened when his share of the gold is found on him. He escapes and gets help, and when it is discovered that he made a bet with a stranger for his wife’s dowry it is found a note written by the dying man naming Stearns as his assailant. Stearns appears and tries to seize the evidence, but Jack arrives and saves her. Stearns confesses and Jack is fully cleared. Falling heir to the rich mining claim he is in a position to wed Anita and she admits her love for him.
Lady Robinhood
(F. B. O.—5580 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

Thanks to its Spanish backgrounds, this melodrama goes over the top with ease, presenting a feminine imitator of Robin Hood in the person of an impetuous and delightful young senorita who roams throughout a fair countryside bearing the alias of La Ortega, supposed bandit, beloved by the poor peasantry, who are deeply and heartily cursed by a Spanish plutocrat, whom she makes matters highly unpleasant for. The story, at its best, is improbable, but nevertheless entertaining. It would be an impossible yarn if framed in an American or a British setting. But in this fictitious province of old Spain where the action takes place, the spectators feel that most anything of an extraordinary nature might occur, and accept it gracefully as it runs.

Evelyn Brent is the heroine, a gallant and daring damsel who rides like an avenging Fury, climbs and leaps with the skill of a "big time" acrobat. Her physical beauty is especially attractive to that degree that "it's no wonder Robert Ellis, in the guise of an American mineowner who comes to view his properties, yields to her fascinations when they first meet. However, as she is planning a revolution, although in reality niece of the oppressing Governor, and known in better circles as Senorita Catalina, that initial encounter results in the lady making Robert a prisoner, for all these capitalists look like a bad crew in her eyes. Of course, he escapes, they meet again under different circumstances, and in the finale she rides with her men and saves him, just as he is backed against a dole wall. Scourging the villain for every sin by ride fire.

Miss Brent scores splendidly in her double role, Robert Ellis gives a fair performance and the support is adequate.

THEME. Melodrama. Spanish atmosphere. Depicts adventures of senorita who poses as bandit, encourages revolution and marries American.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive scenery and foreign atmosphere. Decisive thrills, quick action and romantic interest.

DIRECTIONS. Satisfactory. "Shows considerable ingenuity in making situations interlock smoothly, keeps continuity straight and action buzzing rapidly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title needs a little explanation. Might refer back to the real Robin Hood, English outlaw of olden times, who helped the poor and robbed the rich. Feature Evelyn Brent big. She is fast becoming a great fan favorite and you can boost this as one of her best melodramatic roles up to-date. Play up her riding feats and scene in which she rescues hero from firing squad.

DRAWING POWER. Good attraction for average house, suitable for family trade.

SUMMARY. A gingery, fast melodrama, with Spanish atmosphere, presenting Evelyn Brent in unique role of senorita disguised as bandit, who aids the poor, promotes a revolution, rides, fights and vamps with equal spirit, and winds up by saving her American lover from being shot as a rebel. Interest never flags.

THE CAST

La Ortega: Evelyn Brent
Senorita Catalina: Hugh Winthrop
Cabaza: Robert Ellis
Governor: Boris Karloff
Padre: William Humphrey
Raimundo: Darcy Cortiello

Authors, Burke Jenkins and Clifford Howard. Scenario by Fred Myton. Directed by Ralph Inch.

SYNOPSIS. Disguised as a masked bandit and known as La Ortega, a Spanish province who oppresses the peasants, roams the countryside, aiding the poor, avenging injustices perpetrated by the rich and secretly planning a revolt. Hugh Winthrop, a young American, owns mines in the province and comes to inspect them. Looking upon him as an enemy to the people La Ortega makes him a prisoner. Hugh escapes, but not before he falls in love with his fair captor. They meet again at the governor's palace, where La Ortega steals important documents. She and Hugh are suspected and arrested. Hugh is sentenced to be shot. La Ortega manages to escape and dashes off to summon her followers. Just as Hugh faces the rifles of the firing squad, La Ortega and her men ride in and save him. The governor and his aids are convicted and the lovers united.

Wild Horse Mesa
(Paramount—7164 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

Due to its spectacular appeal and melodramatic strength, combined with skilled direction and good acting by the entire cast, this latest screen adaptation of a Zane Grey story registers as excellent entertainment, superior in every way to the regulation Westerner. The title is a trifle misleading, as at first sight it suggests a story of the wild and moaning desert, but "Mesa" is a tract of table-land in Utah, where wild horses abound. True, one particular steed is singled out for special attention, but he is merely on the side line, so to speak, and hasn't much to do with the plot development.

Plot revolves around the idea of rounding up the wild herd and selling its members to commission men, the means employed being a barbed wire corral trap. The hero objects to this as brutal, because he knows at least half the horses will be killed in the stampede. He wants to sell them to Spanish owners who love them, but to no avail. Czarbo, chief of the band of horse-thieves, refuses, and the hero, Jack Holt, turns them loose on the animals' mad rush at the risk of his life. Holt's romance with Sue Melberne provides the sentimental seasoning; there are a number of lively fights, including the revenge of an Indian chief, who kills off the horse-thieves, and saves the heroine. Jack Holt, as the hero, with Noah Beery playing one of his effective ruffian roles and Billie Dove, as heroine, carry off the dramatic honors.

THEME. Western melodrama, with herd of wild horses prominently featured, love interest and numerous thrills.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Artistic photography, scenic beauty of exteriors. Jack Holt's clever horsemanship, the rapid action, Indian chief's revenge on men who ruined his daughter, the fighting thrills, Holt's mad dash before stampeding horses to turn them aside from trap.

DIRECTION. Has packed the picture with suspense and exciting moments developed its romantic side dexterously and wound up with spectacular, smashing climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A Western ballyhoo, with men dressed as Indians and cowboys, and horse wearing blanket sign adorned by film's title, might be utilized in street parade. Lobby display should carry out story's atmosphere. Feature Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove.

DRAWING POWER. The production's general excellence guarantees it as an attraction worthy of the first-run houses, and its melodramatic sweep and spectacular scenes will surely please the masses, so the smaller theatres should also find it a good box office asset.

SUMMARY. This film lists several degrees above the usual kind of Westerner, but its astonishingly well produced and photographed, rich, in spectacular thrills, has strong romantic appeal and original plot. Also, cast includes several players whose names mean something at the box office.

THE CAST

Chane Weymer.
Bud McPherson.
Noah Beery.
Sue Melberne.
Billie Dove.
Chas Weymer.
Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.
Bent Manerube.
George Irving.
Lige Melberne.
Bob Nokin.
Toddy Nokin.
Bernard Seigle.
Margaret Morris.

Author, Zane Grey. Scenario by Lucien Hibbard. Directed by George B. Seitz.

SYNOPSIS. Lige Melberne and Bent Manerube, accompanied by the former's daughter, Sue, go to Utah to catch and sell a herd of wild horses. They meet Chane Weymer, who wants to capture Pemco, a wild stallion, and with whom he makes a bargain. McPherson, Slack and Horn, three horse-thieves, ambush Chane and the Indians. All escape, except Sue, Chief Nokin's daughter, who is carried off by the Indians as a result of the mistreatment she sustained. Chane reaches the Melberne camp and falls in love with Sue. He shows her father that the barb wire trap into which he proposes to drive the herd would kill half the horses and Melberne gives up the plan. McPherson joins the band and they plot to capture Sue. Pemco, the hero, successfully combats the Indians and is reunited with his father. Sue marries Chane and the picture ends with a grand parade of the wild horses.
The Demon Rider

(Davis Distributing Div.—5000 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

An ordinary Westerner which will pass as a program attraction in localities where pictures are in demand in generous quantity and are not disposed to criticize plot values severely. The story travels a familiar trail, with a ranch-foreman hero in pursuit of outlaws who have robbed a bank, rounding up the gang, securing the loot, losing it, getting under suspicion himself of being the arch-thief, but finally winning exoneration, applause and a pretty girl into the bargain. Nowadays few Westerners are considered complete if a horse of extraordinary intelligence isn’t in evidence, and “The Demon Rider” comes up to expectations in this respect by registering Tarzan, a snow-white steed, a sort of transplanted escapes when Maynard ropes him adroitly and turns him over to the sheriff.

THEME. Western melodrama, hero chasing and subduing bandits, romance and sunshine finish.

EXPLORATION ANGLES. Feature Ken Maynard and all the girls. Mention the Hollywood beauties. Boost as a Westerner full of action and pleasing romance. Stress the big thrills where auto driven by bandits goes over edge of cliff. Lobby displays with stills and exhibitions of cowboy regalia are also in order.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the neighborhood and smaller houses, in former case program should be strengthened by snappy short subjects, or picture would do very well as half of double feature bill. Should please juveniles particularly on account of Tarzan’s exploits and prove acceptable for family business.

SUMMARY. Just an average Westerner but moves crisply, mingle good melodramatic themes with comedy relief, shows hero pursuing and capturing bandits who have robbed bank, being suspected of complicity with outliers, but clearing himself satisfactorily and winning girl he loves.

THE CAST

Billy Dennis
Mary Bushman
Jim Lane
Black Hawk
Tom London
Tarzan
Inman Kane

Directed by Paul Hurst. Photographed by Frank Compton.

SYNOPSIS. Billy Dennis, B-Star ranch foreman, trails the Black Hawk gang of bandits after they have robbed a bank, surprises and ropes the entire outfit, recovers loot, a sack full of greenbacks. After Billy leaves, the sheriff and his men fain caged outlaws, who tell him Billy is Black Hawk. Billy is pursued, loses skin and must find negro ranch cook. Billy trails finder of money, meets his girl, Alma. While at ranch, Alma is captured by negro but sticks to him. Cornered by sheriff, Billy escapes on his horse, Tarzan. Meanwhile the prisoners make a getaway. A party of cowboys is called in to make a rushing in a mountain stream, the outlaws steal their machine. Billy follows, the auto plunges over a cliff, but he ropes their leader, Black Hawk, pulls him up and hands him over to the sheriff. Latter still suspects Billy, but negro turns up with money and clears him. Members of posse scatter back along negro’s trail, finding bills which the darky lost during headlong flight in terror, having overheard Billy tell Alma he intended to kill the chap who took away the sack. After a strenuous search they recover all the loot and Billy wins Alma.

Parisian Love

(B. P. Schulberg—6324 Feet)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

Getting off to a good start, this picture flops sadly after the first reel, the story from then on meandering about aimlessly and not arriving anywhere in particular. It is an Apache melodrama in American settings, offering some capital views of the resorts where the Parisian equivalents of our East Side gangsters are wont to congregate, but the narrative fails signally to live up to its excellent backgrounds. It looks as though the director began work in a spirit of fine enthusiasm, suddenly realized that he was up against a cold unfeeling prospect in the line of material, and thereupon went ahead despondently, to do the best he could under a heavy handicap.

Marie and Armand, the Parisian lovers, played by Clara Bow and Frank deBriac, are interested only in the commercial value of things, when mixing with their own kind in the underworld where they belong. Once transplanted to a higher grade of society they become merely absurd. Armand, patronized by the wealthy old scientist whom they tried to rob, and Marie, suddenly transformed into a model of etiquette, enamors Monsieur Pierre Marcel, the aforesaid scientist, are about as unreal and artificial creations as could well be imagined. Even making due allowance for melodramatic license, this film is too forced and unconvincing to register as even tolerable entertainment. Its cast includes several proficient players, and a few bits of mediocre business, as could be expected with shrewdly impossible roles, but the net result is, of course, disappointing. The plot is so trivial that it could easily have been confined to five reels, instead of stretching over seven, the pace being heavily padded with needless detail.

THEME. Apache melodrama with Parisian underworld atmosphere and triangle love affair.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Realistic settings and backgrounds. Opening scenes, showing phoney fight put on by Apaches for benefit of American visitors, as well as a genuine scrap. Attempted robbery of scientist’s apartments, killing of the Knifer and wounding of hero.

DIRECTION. Weak and wandering. Thrill stuff poorly executed, action draggy, footage wasted.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title has suggestive sound and will probably attract fans. But it won’t do to promise much as regards story, unless you want to risk disappointing your patrons. Play up the Parisian underworld atmosphere. Mention Clara Bow, Donald Keith, Lillian Leighton, James Russell, Hazel Keener, Lon Tylleger.

DRAWING POWER. May suit houses where program undergoes frequent change or be utilized as half of double feature bill.

SYNOPSIS. A crude production, Apache melo which begins promisingly, but falls down after first reel. Has good atmosphere and attractive list of players, but story fails at any time to strike sympathetic chords, or deliver decisive punch. Doesn’t develop interest and is heavily padded.

THE CAST

Marie...Clara Bow
Armand...Donald Keith
Fouchard...Lillian Leighton
D’Avril...James Russell
Margot...Hazel Keener
Knifer...Jean deBriac
Apache Chief...Otto Marleston.

Directed by Jasner.

SYNOPSIS. Marie and Armand, Apache lovers, with a pal called the Knifer, go to rob the home of Pierre Marcel, wealthy scientist. Marcel is there and Armand prevents the bloodthirsty Knifer from killing him. Police arrive, the Knifer is shot and slain, Armand wounded, but Marcel protects latter from the authorities. Knifer nursed to convalescence and gives him new start in life. Armand goes to London on business. Marie procures funds from her Apache associates, poses as a convent-bred girl and wins Marcel’s love. On the night of her wedding to him, she suddenly discards the mask and reveals her true identity. At the same time telling Marcel that her whole course has been actuated by revengeful desire and that she does not love him. At this juncture it is revealed that Marcel is also an Apache. Marie watching through the window believes that she has tricked them and a bullet hits her. She regains her health, Marcel disappears, leaving a note which states that he is obtaining a divorce, leaving her free to marry Armand.
The Circus Cyclone
(Universal—4397 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ENOUGH melodramatic, sentimental and comedy incidents have been crowded into this film to make it a fairly fair program attraction. The plot is a sketchy affair, obvious in its drift, and the spectators' attention is held more by the circus atmosphere and galloping action, than the actual story motif. Life under the "big top" always had a certain fascination for the movie public, and many a picture of otherwise ordinary caliber has managed to wrangle through and register as amusing entertainment by virtue of backgrounds showing the sawdust circle and folk who make a living therein. This is a case in point, for lacking the tinsel and glare of the circus stuff, the feature would fall as dead as the proverbial doornail.

However, director Alfred Rogell saw to it that clown, equestrienne and ringmaster, as well as other performers of the tent tribe, kept well to the fore and that there would be no complaint from patrons on the score of tardy action. Art Accord, as the hero, has a busy time, whipping the ex-pugilist and present owner of the show in a three round glove contest and thus avenging his opponent's insults to the fair heroine, heroine and her father, the clown, as well as ill-treatment of a horse beloved of the lady. The villain robs a bank and casts suspicion on the clown, but Accord runs down the thieves and everything is lovely.

THEME. Melodrama, with circus and small Western town atmosphere, interpolated prize fight and happy ending.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The doings in the circus ring, good atmosphere and speedy action. The knock-out which terminates glove contest. The ballyhoo episode. Pathos developed in clown characterization by Pepe's helplessness under villain's treatment. The love interest. Star's performance.

DIRECTION. Has maintained swift action throughout, but jumbled continuity in switching too hastily from one situation to another. Small town and circus atmosphere well developed and grouping neatly handled. Concentrates mostly on physical thrills, but fails to register much suspense.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell your patrons that this film gives them an inside view of circus life, with a rattling prize fight thrown in for good measure. Play it up as exciting melo, with romantic interest, and feature Art Accord.

DRAWING POWER. This cannot be classed as a high-grade production and wont pass muster with critical audiences. But where bill is changed frequently, or in small houses, whose clients aren't too particular about how a plot is worked out it should serve tolerably well.

SUMMARY. A melodrama with attractive circus backgrounds, action taking place in small Western town. Not much to the story, but film moves fast and provides plenty of physical thrills, some good comedy relief, pathos and love interest. On the whole, an average box office attraction.

STORYOPSIS. Steve Brant, ex-pugilist and circus owner, ill-treats horse beloved by equestrienne Doraldina, Jack Manning, intermediate, and whips Brant in prizefight. Brant, repulsed by Doraldina, makes life miserable for her father, the clown, Pepe, robs a bank and throws suspicion on the clown as criminal. Latter is nearly lynched by townspeople. Jack and Doraldina fall in love. Ecezea Jackson, a diminutive negro lad, furnishes Jack with evidence proving that Brant and his gang committed the robbery. The thieves make a quick getaway with their plunder. Jack pursues them, overcomes the fugitives in a wild chase over the Western plains and a desperate battle follows in a careening auto. Jack recovers the loot, Pepe is fully cleared and Jack wins the daughter.

Warrior Gap
(Davis Distributing Div.—4900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

REDSKINS versus white men, scalping knives and rifles, hairbreadth escapes from death, U. S. cavalry dashing furiously to rescue their renegades—all such are the basic plot factors in this adaptation of a story by the late General Charles King, U. S. A., whose narratives usually run along similar lines. Yet, both in fiction and on the screen, these stories never fail to thrill, we know that many such adventures really occurred in that past era, before the taming of the West was accomplished, and accordingly accept them as sufficiently convincing, even though the melodramatic coloring be laid on thickly.

When the hero, Captain Deane, on being released from arrest on charges of disorderly conduct, is called swiftly to the quarters of Major Burleigh, the cause of his troubles, and pummels him profusely, one gets the impression that the captain must want to go back to solitary confinement, or else, that discipline among the U. S. forces at that period must have been at a pretty lowebb. Assaulting a superior officer is a mighty serious offense, according to military ethics. But the Major's wounded honor and battered body are healed with financial balm administered by the father of the girl Deane loves, and the Captain's slugging fest is passed over unnoticed by the higher authorities. Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber, as hero and heroine, fill their roles adequately and are well supported.

THEME. Melodrama of U. S. military life at lonely post in West, during days when Indian attacks were common, with romantic flavoring.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Colorful atmosphere, fights with Indians, rescue of besieged women by cavalry, love interest, smart action.

DIRECTION. Puts over big punch scenes with vigor, but discreetly without straining the "heroics." Speeds up film to fast, even gait, keeps continuity straight.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost this as an exciting melo, dealing with pioneer times in the West, U. S. troops against hostile Indians, romantic trend, happy ending. Feature Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber. If you label this a Westerner be sure to explain that it isn't the familiar cowboy stuff, but deals with an earlier date, when our regulars had their hands full keeping down and controlling hostile Indians.

DRAWING POWER. Looks like a very good card for the neighborhood and smaller houses, clean wholesome and suited to family trade.

SUMMARY. Straight melodrama with appealing romantic angle. Gets a lot of thrills across in satisfactory style, is staged in colorful period, when Indians were continually on war-path; if your patrons want unlimited excitement this will surely please them.

The man and girl are obliged to fight for their lives, but troopers rescue them. Burleigh is shot. Before dying he confesses that he has the money Deane was supposed to carry. Elinor and the Captain are wedd.
The Goose Woman
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A most entertaining murder mystery drama in which the mother-love theme is developed with unusual force and sympathetic appeal. Louise Dresser plays the leading role, that of a grand opera singer, who becomes involved with a fisherman's wife when she gives birth to a son, whom she blames and hates as the cause of her misfortune, slides down hill socially, becoming a gin-crazed slattern. Many of Miss Dresser's admirers will be disposed to pronounce this performance the best of her career and one of the best examples of the art of acting. She is particularly effective in the scenes showing the erstwhile stage celebrity living in a rickety, filthy-encrusted cottage, raising geese and drinking like the proverbial fish; and the episode where she is asked to identify her boy as the murderer.

THEME. Murder mystery drama, mother's unnatural dislike of only son turning to anxious love, when he is accused of murder.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Uniformly good direction. The singularly effective acting of Louise Dresser. Clever fashion in which details leading up to and culminating in murder is worked out.

DIRECTION. Has maintained perfect continuity and smoothly-running action, created and preserved suspense skillfully, scored heavily in building up dramatic values and attained fine climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this up in the first place from the mother-love angle, affection suddenly displaced hate, dwell on the melodramatic strength of story, stress the scene in which mother is called upon to identify son as murderer, the comedy relief, feature the fine work of Louise Dresser in the lead, Jack Pickford's performance as the son, and mention the names of Constance Bennett, James Q. Barrows, George Cooper, Gustave Von Seyffertitz, George Nichols.

DRAWING POWER. Picture looks like a safe bet for all classes of audiences. It has mass appeal by virtue of its suspense and dramatic force, as well as the lure of the mother-love idea, which seldom fails to impress. Also, the critical element will respond favorably to the exceedingly fine characterizations.

SUMMARY. Good entertainment in every sense of the phrase. There's the sentimental side, the melodramatic interest evolved by the murder mystery, the contrast achieved by the unexpected transformation of the mother's dislike of her boy into unrestrained love, a three-plot thread plot woven into a compact, swiftly-moving picture.

SYNOPSIS. Mary Holmes, opera singer, loses her voice as a result of giving birth to a boy, and develops intense dislike of her offspring. She becomes a victim of drink, lives alone in a shabby cottage and raises geese; but her son wins the love of a young actress, who repulsed the vicious advances of a millionaire theatre-owner. The latter is murdered. To gain publicity Miss Holmes hires her son to murder the man who repulsed her advances. The district attorney furnishes her with fine clothes, reveals her identity as a former stage star and she is the sensation of the day. But the details she conveys cause her son's arrest. Confronted with him, she experiences a sudden awakening of mother-love and confesses that her story is false. It transpires that the theatre doorman is the guilty person. The son is cleared and faces a happy future with his reformed parent and Hazel.

The Woman Hater
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S general audience appeal in this picture, even if the plot is of somewhat light texture and a trifle artificial. It moves briskly, presents one of those triangle love affairs seasoned with sensational incident, which pleases the average fan because of its romantic hue, strengthened in this case by uniformly good acting and skillful direction. Helene Chadwick is the actress-heroine, who, having parted from her first lover through misunderstanding, envelops a young chump in a net of fascination, and has a trying time of it when number one turns up, determined to save the young guy from what he considers the wiles of an unworthy contestee.

Miss Chadwick handles the role with a keen appreciation of its dramatic values, looks enticing enough to excite both the elder and the younger male for losing their mental balance where she is concerned, and is especially alluring in the scene where she utilizes crafty strategy to prevent looming tragedy, when the youth finds that he is a type favored by the women folks. Clive Brook and John Harron are the opposing suitors and give commendable performances. A snappy climax is led up to by a series of uncommonly clever trick photography shots, showing Helene speeding her ear through a maze of New York traffic to elude Clive Brook before he makes an escape from getaway.

THEME. Romance, with dramatic sequences, involving the entanglements of actress with former lover and impetuous youth who wants to marry her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The attractive atmosphere. Theatrical settings. Star's adequate performance. The fast action. Scene where youth threatens to kill rival and woman he is infatuated with. Heroine's wild auto trip through crowded streets and interesting finale.

DIRECTION. Has achieved good results with rather scanty plot material, introducing a number of original twists and keeping characters well in restraint during emotional crises.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title offers likely foundation to build on, as it is pretty certain to arouse curiosity. Make a strong play for the feminine trade, as the story is of a type favored by the women folks. Stress the emotional conflicts which arise as a result of the heroine again meeting the lover who discarded her years before. Tell them how she matched her wits against a threat of death at the point of a gun, and won.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for both big first-run and smaller houses. Is particularly satisfactory entertainment for hot weather season, as the picture trips along at a lively pace and amuses, without making any undue strain on the thinking faculties.

SUMMARY. Picture is entertaining, hasn't any dull moments, quite exciting at times, offers unceasing love interest, thrills and plenty of suspense. Is well directed and acted, the star giving a sincere and appealing performance, with excellent support provided by other members of company.

SYNOPSIS. Marie Lamont and her lover, Miles, part because he believes her to have been untrue to him. Years later she attains fame on the stage and stage and young Philip Tranter becomes infatuated with her. The latter marries her, but in the end, it turns out that Marie is not to be trusted. Miles induces her to call off several engagements with the boy. Miles appears publicly escorting Marie. With his jealously fully aroused, Philip enters Marie's apartments, finds Miles embracing her and pulls a gun. To save Miles, the actress pretends that she was merely playing with him and he leaves. Tranter is convinced that she does not care for him. Marie pursues Miles in her auto, stops him from boarding a liner, explains everything and all ends well.

Mrs. D. A. Alexander, manager of the Orpheum theatre at Ionia, died during the past week, following a prolonged illness caused by severe intestinal troubles. Mrs. Alexander had been operated on at the Butterworth hospital in Grand Rapids and was considered on the road to recovery when the accident occurred. Mrs. and Mrs. G. D. Brady of the Exhibitors Supply company are receiving congratulations from far and near. Tom Moule, directing manager of the Capitol and Madison theatres is now enjoying an extended motor trip as an occupation for his annual vacation. Herb Ives, supervisor of bookings for Standard, is also on a motor trip through the east. He is expected back this week.

Funeral services were conducted during the past week for Mrs. Phil Gleichman, who was the widely known Detroit exhibitor. Besides the widow, two children, Philip and Stuart, and several other services took place at the Gleichman residence, 1951 Chicago Boulevard, Detroit. Gleichman, recently returned to the business through his breach of promise suit with Famous Players, which was lost to him and is now being appealed to a higher court.

Louis Foley, of the Fred Greenfield circuit, is now on his wedding trip, following his marriage last Monday to Miss Helen Agnew, aka Mammy of Wixom Park, Louise, whose advent in the local film business is a recent event, plans to be back at his desk later this week. He has been responsible for much of the publicity that has appeared in local papers in behalf of the Greater Movie season campaign. Miss McMannis is a former school teacher.

Exterior construction on the new Standard theatre and adjoining office building is practically complete. John H. Kunsky is already supervising the purchase of equipment and luxurious fittings which, by themselves will cost in the neighborhood of a quarter million of dollars. Steel work on the new Michigan theatre, has already begun and the mammoth house is quickly taking shape. A broadcasting station is being installed in W. S. McLain's new Capitol theatre at Jackson. It will soon be in operation and will broadcast daily programs under the call number, WHBM.

The Grand Riviera theatre, which has been under construction for almost a year, is finally nearing completion. This latest addition to Detroit's residential theatres has caused wide comment by its many novel features. The 24 seat theatre was recently inspected by Mr. Wm. Williams, general manager of the Munz theatres, as the positive date for opening.

Kimmel Brothers' new theatre at Nine Mile Road and John R. street, seating 1,000 persons, is also due to open before the first of September. It will be the first theatre of any magnitude in this district.

Lincoln Park, a rapidly growing real estate development in West Detroit, is soon to have a new theatre, located on West Fort street, Max Allen of Windsor, Ont., is the builder and backer of the project, which is scheduled to be entirely completed sometime in September. The screenings are taking place in the local offices of the Standard Film Service, in the Film Exchange building. It is estimated that more than 200 Standard products will have been screened before the experiment is completed.

F. E. Sipley has succeeded Fred Cassin as manager of the Regent theatre in Saginaw. The Regent is a W. S. Butterfield house.

The Greenwood theatre and adjoining property consisting of stores and flats has been purchased by Joe Portell of the Detroit Real estate firm. Sam Smith, president, will manage the Delray while Joe devotes himself to his new holdings. The former is reported as having paid $75,000.

Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Washington and Atlantic City are to have new Pickford theatres. Mr. Charles Sibb, manager of the Kleist theatres in Pontiac, during his annual motor tour through the East, August 10, was the date set for his departure.

George F. Koppin, who in addition to managing a very successful group of local theatres, also indulges in outlying real estate, was to have given a huge corn roast for the local film men, August 15 on his Halfway subdivision property. Athletic sports, band music and fancy decorations were to be features of the day.

The Franklin, a new house on Gratiot avenue near Seven Mile road, is to open its doors within the next few weeks. John Golden, the proprietor, is also planning a second house, which will be located in Brightmoor, a section of Greater Detroit.

J., accompanied by Mrs. November of New Jersey Terminal Supervision, will leave for a four day fishing trip along the Jersey coast, possibly stopping over at Atlantic City. We've been hearing some great fish stories of late and now it looks as though there might be some more.

It looked like brisk trading around the exchanges on Tuesday of this week. C. Fabian was seen here and there, also Leon Rosenblatt, Sam Perry and Bill Brandt. A. Talmueller who operates the Strand at Jersey City also appeared on the scene with a beautiful new striped silk shirt that was very much admired by a corps of film salesmen.

F. C. Bullwinkle, of the First National company, was recently returned from a combination business and pleasure trip spent at St. Johns. N. F. In connection with this trip was the writing of a brief and interesting story. It seems that some time ago the theatre at St. Johns, N. F. was opened and during the winter of that year, its film shipped from St. Johns, New Brunswick. On account of the traffic delay in mid-winter, due to the heavy snows and ice, vaults were constructed in the theatre so as to hold enough film to secure entertainment during the long winter. Of recent years, A. M. Weinberger of the New Valley circuit, made a special trip to St. Johns and worked out a plan whereby all shipments are now made direct from New York City. There is no more delay in film shipments to St. Johns and the vaults are empty of film. Here is evidence of the long arm of service stretching out for several hundred miles.

George Dillon, New York exchange manager for Producers Distributing Corp., is spending his week ends with his family at Bradley Beach, N. J.

Reports have it that Bill Raynor, manager of the Pathe branch, has greatly improved his game of golf, while Al Santelle has reduced his score to 130 for 18 holes. Al is certainly coming along in fine shape.

They are still going and coming at the Pathe offices. John Davis, who is now working on Raynor has gone away for a three weeks' rest with his family at Fire Island, Frank Lovejoy who has returned from his motor tour thru Canada and Floyd Vogt has also finished his vacation.

There are at least three theatre openings scheduled for the early part of August. Some of the theatre openings openings scheduled for the early part of August. Some of the theatre openings include the opening of the Pathe offices. John Davis, who is working on Raynor has gone away for a three weeks' rest with his family at Fire Island, Frank Lovejoy who has returned from his motor tour thru Canada and Floyd Vogt has also finished his vacation.

New York and New Jersey

Gold theatre, a strictly modern 600 seat house recently completed over in Brooklyn, opened its doors last Saturday. William Appel, who is formerly manager of Somer's Highway will be in charge. show would continue in five minutes and for the patrons to keep their seats. This gave the operat or time to change to another reel and continue the show. The orchestra continued playing during the intermission. The operator's hands were blistered.

The Orpheum Theatre, at Joplin, Mo, has been redecorated in the interior, and the owners have installed a reproducing organ.

The Hippodrome Theatre, at Joplin, Mo, according to the report of Ben Levy, theatre manger, will be closed until the middle of August, for improvements. The entire interior of the playhouse will be redecorated.

The front lobby also will be gone over by decorators.

In addition new carpets will be laid, sales and operated. The cost of the improvements will approximate $5,000, Levy said. The theatre will be reopened on Sunday, August 16th.

At the "Round-Up" which was held at Miami, Okla., day and night shows were again at the theatres to accommodate the crowds which were in the town.

The doors of the theatres were opened for the accommodation of the afternoon crowds at 1 o'clock, and in the evening at 7 o'clock.

The "Round-Up" was held at the Fair grounds.

and his many friends will be glad to hear of his improvement.

Jacob Eppler, who for several years past has been the manager and bookholder in the Ogden Theatre, Denver's largest suburban house, has retired from the theatre business and will leave shortly for his old home in San Francisco, driving a new sedan which he has just purchased. Mr.
Eppler was a member of the Denver Joint Board of Arbitration and very active in the M. P.
T. O. of Colorado. He was very popular with both exhibitors and exchangers and made a wonderful success of the Ogden The-bere.

He will be succeeded as manager by Harvey A. Goodridge.

H. E. Huffman, President of
M. P. T. O. of Colorado, has just installed a new ventilating system in his Bluebird theatre on East Colfax Avenue in Denver.
Mr. Huffman announced that this system will keep the building at all times plentifully supplied with fresh air and with an entire absence of drafts.

M. S. Wilson, manager of the Denver branch of Fox Film Corporation, and Charles R. Gil-mour, manager of the local Warner Brothers Exchange, have left on sales trips this week. Both of them announced that they were busy for the Black Hills district in South Dakota, and we would not be surprised if they brought back some fish.

S. D. Weisbaum, manager of Film Booking Offices, has also left for a sales trip through Western Colorado. Sid took his car and if he goes by any trout streams, we wouldn't be surprised if he had something under the back seat with which to tempt the trout.

The Palace Theatre at Trinidad, Colorado, for which many years was owned and operated by
L. L. Stonebraker, has changed hands, the new owner being W. H.
Reno of that city.

W. T. Sterling, who for many years owned the Crystal Theatre at Carrizozo, New Mexico, announced that he has sold it to George Dowdle, owner of the Ale-mente Theatre, Alamogordo, New Mexico. Huffman.

Fred Muller, owner of the Mon-teari Theatre at Taos, New Mexico, has closed it for repairs and remodeling. He will reopen about September 1st.

The Movie Hall at Mack, Colorado, has also been closed for remodeling and repairs, and F. A.
Kennedy, the manager, states that it will reopen about September 1st with entire new equipment.

J. A. Mitchell, for many years salesman for Universal and later part owner of the Seaman-Mitchell Supply Company in Denver, has entered the film business by ac-tepting a position as salesman for Pathé. He has been assigned to the Colorado territory.

C. M. Van Horn, local manager of Pathé, announces the appointment of Ben Fish as the Denver territory special representative on exploitation. Mr. Fish was formerly the manager of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation in Denver and is very well known in this territory.

Irving Ehretsoft, widely known and popular salesman both in the Denver and Los Angeles territories, is rapidly recovering from his recent breakdown. He is recuperating at the Jewish Relief Society Sanitarium near Denver.
JAMES JACKSON, manager of the Tudor theatre, returned last week from Greensboro, N. C., where he was called by the sudden death of his mother, Mrs. Lucy F. Jackson. Mrs. Jackson was with her daughter, Mrs. T. K. Payne, at the time of her death. She is survived by Mrs. Payne, Mrs. John Boone, another daughter also of Greensboro, and James Jackson, of Atlanta. She was seventy-one years of age at the time of her death.

Ernest Morrison, former manager of the Bijou theatre, which position he held for a number of years, has been transferred to Asheville, N. C., to take over the position of city manager for Famous Players-Lasky corporation. Mr. Morrison is well known in this territory, and has had wide experience in the film game. His assumption of the duties of city manager is of interest to his exhibitor friends throughout the South.

W. L. Parker, advertising manager of Warner Bros., is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. U. McCormick this week, in Charlotte, N. C. Mr. McCormick, well known to exhibitors and distributors throughout this territory, is manager of the Carolina Theatre Supply company.

Chas. E. Kessnich, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn, has returned from a six weeks trip over his territory. Included in the larger cities visited were Dallas, Oklahoma City, and New Orleans.

Ralph de Bruler, who is with Famous in the Florida office, came in town Friday a week ago to spend a few days.

Marty Semon, manager of the Forsyth Theatre in Atlanta, and one of the best known theatrical men in the south, is seriously ill in Richmond, Va. Mr. Semon's family is with him.

R. M. Savini, of Savini Films, Inc., has returned from a recent trip to New York.

E. A. Schiller, personal representative of Marcus Loew, who is in Germany at the present time, sent greetings recently to the local fraternity on a card to Willard C. Patterson mailed in Berlin.

Harriett Hammond, signed to a long-term contract by Huni Stromberg, with possible stardom, who will first appear in "The Man From Red Gulch" for Producers Distributing Corp.

C. R. Scott, special representative of Arrow Films corporation, came into Atlanta this week from New York, in the interests of distribution.

William Oldknow, who just returned to Atlanta a few days ago from Florida, has gone back to Florida again, and is in Tampa at present, where he will remain on business for some time.

Charles Murdock, cashier for Liberty Film Distributing Corporation, has returned from Florida, where he has been spending his two weeks' vacation, with a nice coat of tan and a fund of experiences to relate.

THE Sunset Theatre, 1110 South Charles St., Baltimore, Md., has been sold by Mr. Wasolowski, to the Provident Savings Bank for a reported price of $25,000. This theatre has a seating capacity of 400 and was built in 1913. It was operated under a lease by the Associated Theatres Company, J. Louis Rome, general manager. The company sold the lease back to the owner and the Provident Savings Bank will move its branch out of Pacy's Garden Theatre Building, near it, and use the Sunset building for a branch, after it is remodeled. It will be taken over about September 1.

Arthur B. Price, manager of the Aurora Theatre, and John Volz, manager of the Apollo Theatre were away on vacations during the week beginning August 3. On that day Samuel Back, manager of the Rialto Theatre came back from a vacation in Maine.

Leonard B. McLaughlin, manager of the Faye Auditorium, is now vacationing in Atlantic City and J. Lawrence Schanberger, manager of the Maryland, is away at the present time.

A slight fire in the Main Street Theatre, Clear Spring, Md., caused patrons to leave the playhouse hurriedly on Wednesday night, July 29. A short circuit caused the blaze. Very little damage resulted, many returned and the show was continued.

There has been an interchange of stars, with the exception of the cornet players, between the New and Parkway Theatres, Baltimore, Md.

V. Nessul and his aggregation of musicians formerly at the Parkway are now rendering selections for the pictures and overtures at the New Theatre, while Hendrik Essers, with his musicians, formerly at the New are now at the Parkway where they are holding forth.

The change was effected by Howard S. Jefferson, musical director for the combined Whitehurst Interests, controlling these playhouses.

Quick and efficient work on the part of the operator and assistant manager of the Cluster Theatre, 303 South Broadway, Baltimore, Md., kept the audience from becoming panic-stricken and damage being done by a fire in the projection room of that playhouse on Wednesday night. Conrad Backer, the operator, kept the machine running the comedy going when a film caught fire but closed all the other portholes. Loran C. Watts, assistant manager, asked the 500 or more patrons to leave by the back entrance. The blaze was soon extinguished. The house is owned by Benjamin Cluster.

Frank Price, Jr., assistant manager of the Rivoli Theatre, has been bitten by the golf bug and plays during his leisure on a practice course near his home.

Bernard Depkin, Jr., has gone to Atlantic City for a week to enjoy a rest from his strenuous activities managing the affairs of the Metropolitan Theatre.

Forgetting all about the fact that trains operate an hour later than are specified in the schedule, C. Bissell, manager of the Universal exchange in Albany, ran all the way to the station the other day, carrying a heavy load of books and records and finding that he was an hour too soon. Mr. Bissell made his way back to his office, walked away to do some work, and remaining so long that when he went to the station the second train was too late to catch the train.

There has been considerable trouble with the power supplied to the theatres, owing to electrical storms to the north of the city, where the power is generated and brought over transmission lines. On four occasions in one day, the power was off for short intervals, plunging the theatres into darkness.

Accompanied by William Rafferty, of Syracuse, former part owner of the Strand theatre in Schenectady, and later connected with the Farah Theatres, Inc. of that city, William Shirley, of Schenectady, passed through New York last week on a trip to investigate the real estate situation in Florida. Owing to the fact that the Adirondack stage has been closed these days, through having recently disposed of their interests in Schenectady, to W. W. Farley, it is thought unlikely that before they return they will be numbered among the investors.

R. J. Meigs, of New York city, who represents Pathe in Albany last winter, and then went to Philadelphia, is once more back in the Capital City, and, to tell the truth, Pathe's two-reel comedies to the exhibitors.

Instead of opening in the evening, as the 1923 theatre in Troy, is scheduled to reopen on Saturday afternoon, August 15 at 2 o'clock. The house has been closed for over a year and there will be no particular observance in connection with its reopening, although it is a decided surprise for the theatre-going public in the improvements and changes that have been made by the manager.

Jack Campbell, assistant manager of the Griswold, in Troy, is away on his vacation with the result that Jake Golden is putting in something like sixteen hours a day during the summer.

For the time being Al Botchner has a new job, although still connected with the Smalley chain. Instead of running up and down for the evenings that were devoted to this sort of entertainment, he is getting through the work which has been abandoned during the summer, Mr. Botchner is now looking after affairs at the three dance halls which Mr. Smalley owns.

Mrs. A. Seguin, who has the Liberty in Roses Point, is a pretty busy individual, for in addition to the theatre, the Seguins have been putting up the house and helping out generally in both places. William Smalley, was in town the other day from Southbridge, Massachusetts, where he had spent several days with his mother.

Jack Matthews, of Plattsburg, one of the most knowledgeable lumberjacks in the north country, and a firm advocate of yeast cake as a cure-all, took a couple of film men on a fishing trip a few days ago but unfortunately the river was high at the time, and of fish there was none. Mr. Matthews was all teamed up in a lumberjack coat for the occasion, and was much chagrined when he learned that his boat had landed any of the pike he has so often bragged about.

Charles Marshall, who runs the Bridge theatre in Albany, has a rather peculiar house in that it contains a stage that is at least 50 feet deep and on which basket ball games and dances are held. Mr. Marshall is running his house nightly and to good crowds. Just at the present time coins are being used in the theatre, because no change could be found to land on any of the pike he has so often bragged about.

Art Goldsmith and George Goldberg, of the Empire, also well known salesmen along Film Row, each appeared with a brand new automobile last Monday, and were heard to declare that they intend to bring in ten times the amount of business as in the past.

Now that Bob Yates, of Lake George, can run his new Dutch sedan, a hot faster than before the first 300 miles had been clipped off, he is as happy as can be. Mr. Yates is spending the summer at the well known resort, but he could come to Bigville this fall, as one of the team of Church and Yates. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Carpenter, owns the Arcadia theatre in Lake George.

It didn't take Harold Filkins long to get back on the road after the recent return of the Empire, during their week's vacation in Albany, where he had been operated on for appendicitis. Mr. Filkins, who is the B. O. product, left the hospital on Wednesday and was back on the job on the following Monday. Tobin and Quinlan run the Ideal theatre in Chateaugay, Mr. Quinlan doing the booking. Drop in on him at almost any time and the chances are that you will find him as happy as a lark, his feet perched on the desk, and if you are a stranger to the region, he will not forget to suggest that the finest scenery in the whole Adirondack region is around Chateaugay lake.

Matters are progressing in a satisfactory way in the arrangements being made for the annual outing of the Albany Film Board of Trade at Saratoga Lake, on Monday, September 14. It has been decided to hold a dance during the evening and this, together with the baseball game, swimming races and other forms of entertainment will complete a full day. Good news comes from Sara-William Benton's son is on the toga Springs these days in that road to recovery and will soon be running around with his playmates.

When A. T. Mallory, owner of the Star in Corinth, had a couple of friends from along Film Row as his guests the other day, he inquired if they would enjoy a glass of champagne. Naturally, the reply was in the affirmative. They were somewhat surprised when Mr. Mallory offered them a glass of water, saying that coming from the hills of that section it was the equal of the best champagne in the world. Mrs. Mallory made up for the disappointment, however, by passing around some of the most delicious pumpkin pie that the film men declared they had ever eaten. Mrs. Mallory hopes out her husband at the theatre and is generally found in the booth.

The Empire in Glens Falls, announced last week that a policy of four changes in program to the week would become immediately effective. John Garry, manager of the house, is back on the job following an operation for appendicitis.

When Oscar Perrin, of Albany, walks through town carrying his hat and wiping his brow, it's a safe bet that it is all put out for yourself what effect the hot weather had on theatre business in Albany and vicinity for a period. Incidentally, Mr. Perrin took a day off and according to his own statement, saw the world in based that was ever played in Albany.

Shapiro and Son, of New York city, has just been awarded the contract for the construction of the $500,000 motion picture theatre that is to be built in Albany soon by the Strand interests. This contract, given to them by the Strand, is the first known in this section, having built the Troy theatre, as well as the State in Schenectady, and remodeled the capital in Albany from an old church.

Sam Moross, secretary of the T. O. C. C. of New York city, and Charles Goetz, of Dependable Pictures, are the only men in short time during the week, and then journeyed on to Saratoga where they saw the ponies run. The benefit given by Louis Buettner of Cohoes, at the Majestic theatre a few nights ago for the fire sufferers of that city, netted a matter of $275. Mr. Buettner will not take any vacation this year as he has moved into his new house and says that each day makes him feel as though he was already on a vacation.

J. A. Fitzgerald, of Huntington, Falls, is back from a vacation spent along the coast of Maine. Dayton LaPoint of the Fischer circuit is about to take a vacation in September. And speaking of the Fischer circuit, he is out collecting the ice cream for all the girls in the Pathé office this week, and by way of introduction, Mr. Fischer entering the office, invited the girls out, and much to his surprise, everyone jumped up. Mr. Fischer announces that the Bradley theatre of Port Edward, on which he is spending about $8,000 in improvements, will be in shape to reopen about August 4th.

Several of the exhibitors in this section are spending their hours at their summer camps. Al Barton of the Playhouse in Tomato City, where the men spend two weeks' vacation in Atlantic City and New England, and looking as brown as a berry, is on their own job and traveling over northern New York.

August 22, 1923

Albany

POP LINTON, of Utica, who is as busy as the proverbial bee these days on a new theatre for Capital City, got into town during the past week. So was Walter Suckno, of the Albany and Regent theatres in Albany. Mr. Suckno put down for a day but remained a week. Tony Veil, manager of the Lincoln theatre, was also in New York, and returned with many new ideas picked up along Broadway.

During the past few days Mr. Veil has been busy looking into the possibility of installing a television arc lamps installed in the projection machine with considerable improvement to the projection at the theatre.

JACK LEVY, new sales manager for Commonwealth Pictures, on Monday from New York, and then went to Philadelphia, is once more back in the Capital City, and, to tell the truth, Pathe's two-reel comedies to the exhibitors.

Instead of opening in the evening, as the 1923 theatre in Troy, is scheduled to reopen on Sunday afternoon, August 15 at 2 o'clock. The house has been closed for over a year and there will be no particular observance in connection with its reopening, although it is a decided surprise for the theatre-going public in the improvements and changes that have been made by the manager.

Curran, is making San Francisco a stopping point of three weeks on an extensive tour that he is making, primarily in the interest of Rayart Pictures and upon the completion of which service he will make a trip to Australia to visit his mother, Mr. and Mrs. Curran will sail about August 6th for Sydney, Australia, where they will remain for some time visiting and vacationing.

Sam Gargano of the Golden Gate Theatre is leaving for Portland and will return soon.

When H. G. Rosebaum, Myke Lewis and Jimmie Clark made their official visit to the San Francisco Exchange, a number of individuals who were connected with the Exchange for a number of years were reminded of those days past when these three gentlemen were connected with the local Exchange. Myke Lewis was previously the local branch manager and was succeeded by H. G. Rosebaum, and Jimmie Clark was at one time the ad sales conjunction.

Edward Friar has become associated with the Hall Film Exchange as booker. Eddie was booker with the local Universal Exchange some time ago, when he transferred to the Portland branch and with F. B. O. for a short time before this present position. His wife, Mrs. Emma Friar, was associated with the P. C. I. E. in the advertising department before they left for the north.

One of the most welcome visitors from other shores to come to San Francisco is Mr. A. Wylie Mather, manager at Honolulu, who is associated with Mr. R. L. Greenfield.

Russel Hendrickson, who served for several years with the Jacobs circuit, who very recently came to California accompanied by his wife, with the idea of locating permanently, has been engaged by Beach & Krall as assistant to Mr. Beach in the Chimes Theatre, Oakland.

Mr. Wesp's position has been taken over by Mr. Kenworth, who has been associated with Mr. Hamrick for the last number of months as auditor of the Blue Moon circuit. Mr. Kenworth will remain in this city, Tacoma and Portland. Mr. Wesp has announced no definite plans for the future, other than that he will remain in this city for the coming few weeks at least.

After operating on a straight ten admission policy every day for more than two years, the Winter Garden Theatre last week raised its general admission prices to fifteen cents. During the past seasons this house has been the center of attraction among exhibitors and film men, having run strictly first run pictures with a complete program of subjects and musical features at the ten-cent charge. No public announcement of the raise was made, nor was any definite reason given by Manager Frank Edwards, other than increasing cost of operation.

T. Riley, traveling auditor of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchanges, arrived in this city last week from the New York head-quarters, and has been spending a number of days with Manager Seth D. Perkins here. After completing his work in this territory, Mr. Riley will move on down to the Coast to the California offices, and from there back East via the Southern states.

Speaking in regard to the Seattle Post-Intelligence, Manager Frank Steffy of the Coliseum Theatre has just finished conducting a contest in Seattle among local musicians to find the best unpublished musical work by a local writer. As a climax to the contest, the winning selection was featured last week by Sam K. The Rialto at Sioux City opened its doors under new management August 1 when Harry Wilkinson took charge of the theatre for the A. H. Blank Enterprises of Des Moines. The theatre has been redecorated and additions in equipment made at considerable expense. Mr. Wilkinson comes from Marshalltown where he was managing another of the Blank string of houses, the Strand. This change of managers brought about another transfer, that of Harry
Ward, manager of the Rialto at
Chi cago, to the Orlando in Denver.

The Rialto at Clinton will be managed by Mr. Alleman who is the resident manager and manager of the theatre.

Miss Clarabelle Allison, opera-iater of the Opera House at Garden Grove. Mr. Hoadley buried his wife this week. She had been ill for some time.

A change of ownership has been made at Seymour, Iowa. C. R. Coons sold his house there to Peter Madison. The Strand at Chariton, Iowa is now being operated by Harry Dawson, owner of the Lincoln Theatre there.

The house was bought from Mr. Ed
Smith. Mr. Edminster will take the place of Mr. Dawson.

Ernest Michaels of the Strand Theatre
here has moved there to his brother, G. M. Michaels, who has heretofore sought wealth from tilling the soil. Mr.
Ernest Michaels has become the Idle Hour Theatre at Tama, and also the Mills Theatre. The new Mills Theatre at Tama was sold to
John Waller of Osceola. Mr.
Clyde Jarnigan who previously owned these theatres is now looking about for a new location.

ment in Des Moines. R. A.

James H. Curran, manager of the Portland branch of the American Feature Film Company reports business as picking up down through the state. The summer season has been rainier than usual which has helped the theatre business.

Des Moines

C. A. PRATT, salesman for As-soiated First National, has been granted a sixty day leave of absence and leaves Monday, Aug.
3 for Florida, where he will engage in the real estate business.

John Waller of the Lyric theatre at Osceola visited the First National office last week.

Des Moines film exchange employee, Frank Kunst, is home in Iow-a on Aug. 15, this being the first affair of its kind here, Fred Young is chairman of the committee to select the park, arrange for the dance and choose the orchestra.

Miss Esther Burnham, cashier at the Des Moines Film Board of Trade has returned from her vacation in Chicago. She was the guest while there of Mr. and Mrs. J. Abrams. Mr. Abrams is district manager of the Renown Picture company of Chicago.

Miss Esther Burnham, cashier at the Educational Film exchange surprised her friends by getting married on her vacation. The date was July 25, the groom W. J. Davidson of Iowa City, and the place was Market House.

Mrs. Davidson is employed in the insurance department at the state house. Exchanges are expected to accompany the couple with an electric table stove.

Mr. Davidson will continue her work with Educational.

C. P. Chapman of Iowa City, manager of the Englert and Garden theatres was a visitor in Des Moines the past week.

O. H. Garland, Educational salesman, was confined to his home two days the past week with flu.

Marian Ackerson, contract clerk with the Goldwyn corporation, is vacationing in Wisconsin and Minnesota and before returning will visit Atlantic City.

Schwarz, manager of Premier and A. W. Kahn, manager of Educational, have returned from Arnold’s Park. They report the fish not biting while they were there.

Fred Young, manager of the Film Booking Office, was called to Chicago on a business trip.

Miss Grace Gannon, cashier of F. B. O. is leaving Aug. 3 for a vacation visit in Kansas City. Miss Jeanette Conkling is taking her place.

The Rialto at Sioux City opened its doors under new management August 1 when Harry Wilkinson took charge of the theatre for the A. H. Blank Enterprises of Des Moines. The theatre has been redecorated and additions in equipment made at considerable expense. Mr. Wilkinson comes from Marshalltown where he was managing another of the Blank string of houses, the Strand. This change of managers brought about another transfer, that of Harry
Ward, manager of the Rialto at
Chi cago, to the Orlando in Denver.

The Rialto at Clinton will be managed by Mr. Alleman who is the resident manager and manager of the theatre.

Sympathy is extended from the members of the motion picture trade to Miss Clarabelle Allison, opera-iater of the Opera House at Garden Grove. Mr. Hoadley buried his wife this week. She had been ill for some time.

A change of ownership has been made at Seymour, Iowa. C. R. Coons sold his house there to Peter Madison. The Strand at Chariton, Iowa is now being operated by Harry Dawson, owner of the Lincoln Theatre there.

The house was bought from Mr. Ed
Smith. Mr. Edminster will take the place of Mr. Dawson.

Ernest Michaels of the Strand Theatre
here has moved there to his brother, G. M. Michaels, who has heretofore sought wealth from tilling the soil. Mr.
Ernest Michaels has become the
Idle Hour Theatre at Tama, and also the Mills Theatre. The new Mills Theatre at Tama was sold to
John Waller of Osceola. Mr.
Clyde Jarnigan who previously owned these theatres is now looking about for a new location.

Alexander Frank, who is adding weekly to his string of theatres, has opened up offices at his headquarters at Waterloo. He recently became owner of the Grand Theatre at Oelwein, of the Orchum at Chariton, or the Theatre in Cedar Rapids. He is owner of the Plaza at Waterloo.

E. R. Smith of Garfield has bought the Newtonia at Newton.

This money-making theatre was previously owned by Joe Ireland.

Mr. Smith sold his hotel and restaurant to business men of Ha-ward.

Eddie Lipson, previously in charge of the interests of Associated Exhibitors in Des Moines territory, withdrew from the exchange staffs when he was put in charge of the office of Producers Distributing on its recent establishment in Des Moines. R. A.
Universal officially took over its latest acquisition, the Alhambra Theatre at Milwaukee on Saturday, Aug. 1, with Howard Mitchell, manager of Paramount houses at Minneapolis, Tenn., and Atlantic, Ga., as resident manager of the theatre. The theatre will be operated for the next two weeks, closing Aug. 16 for two weeks of extensive remodelling.

Dan Lederman, representing the real estate and construction forces of Universal, has been in the city for the past week working on plans for making the house one of the most beautiful in the state. A new canopied, new electric signs, marble decorations, additional seats, generally refurbishing, and a $50,000 organ are included in the program to be executed in the two weeks the house will be dark. Manager Waugh has created a fine impression among local exhibitors in the short time he has been here, and great things are expected of him by them.

J. S. Sturfield, production manager of Saxe's Wisconsin Theatre and creator of the excellent attractions that have helped make the success of Milwaukee's largest and most beautiful picture house, has left for a two-weeks' business trip to New York City. Upon his return he will settle down to working out even greater plans for the second biggest of the $2,000,000 theatre, with which he has been affiliated since its opening fifteen months ago.

Frank Zambreno, president of Progress Pictures, Inc., Chicago, paid a visit to the Milwaukee branch last week. J. G. Frankena, branch manager, drove his chief back to the Windy City in his motor, and after arriving at their destination had an expensive travelling bag stolen from the tunnel. The goods were found on Wabash Avenue. The latter circumstance in no way added to the enjoyment of the otherwise pleasant visit.

J. S. Grauman, president of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Wisconsin, and J. H. Siliman, head of the Siliman chain of neighborhood picture houses, accompanied by their families, are spending a three weeks' vacation at Eagle River, Wis.

Sam Abrams, manager of the Milwaukee office of 20th F. B. O., joined his salesmen, Dick Scheinbaum, in a trip through the Upper Michigan territory. For the past several months he has been affiliated with the Saxe interests, representing the Strand and Merrill theatres. Prior to that he was local publicity manager for the Orpheum Circuit.

E. E. Koch, in charge of the Orpheum management of the Garden Theatre, has resigned his position and will spend several weeks vacationing, before affiliating elsewhere. Mr. Koch's health has for some time required his taking a rest and the shift last week when O. J. Wood left the Alhambra Theatre, formerly operated in conjunction with the Garden, and personally assumed charge of the latter house, gave Mr. Koch a chance to leave his post. No successor has as yet been appointed by Mr. Wood, but indicates that a house manager will be employed.

Universal's "Seeing a Movie" Bus arrived in Milwaukee Wednesday with its crew of six under the direction of "Doc" Holah. Two reels of Milwaukee will be "shot" and are to be shown at the formal opening of the Alhambra Theatre as a Universal house, August 29. A print of the subject will be presented to the city of Milwaukee.

Sid Brown, manager of the Strand theatre, has returned to Milwaukee after a lively two weeks vacation spent largely in the Northland. While motoring out to Grand Forks, N. D., with Mrs. Brown and their young son, Stan stopped off to visit friends among the exhibitors along the way, including Pete Roemer at Rhineland, Harry Abam, Wisconsin manager, St. Cloud, Minn., Mike Cooper and Benny Berger at Grand Forks, and the Finkelstein & Ruben gang at Minneap-

Elmer Lund, a newcomer in the film business but nevertheless an advertising man of considerable repute, has been placed in charge of the advertising department of the Alhambra branch of the Fox Film Corporation. He succeeds Kenneth Coone, who has not as yet announced his plans for the future.

A temporary picture policy has been inaugurated at the Garrick Theatre, situated last on Grand Avenue. It is expected, however, that legitimate attractions of some kind, probably dramatic stock, will be booked into the theatre in another month.

Artie Cass, R. C. Gross, owner of the house, has no williness to sell or lease the theatre to any responsible exhibitor. Pictures and other films have been shown at the Garrick during lapses between legitimate shows. It is an $1,300 seat house.

The Gayety Theatre, which has been showing pictures at 10 cents during the past summer months, will continue its barrelhouse season, Aug. 15, according to managers Fox & Krause.

On Saturday the Merrill theatre will change its admission from 25 to 30 cents, and inaugurate a higher quality program policy. The subject will be presented together with elaborate stage presentations, excellent orchestral features and something usual to first class houses. This announcement definitely settles the fate of the house, which has been the subject of considerable discussion since it was purchased by Ascher Bros. by the Saxe Amuse-

E. R. Hoefer, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Union, Mo., was seen along Picture Row.

Howard L. Officer, manager for the local Producers Distributing Corporation office spent several days calling on the exhibitors of close in touch in Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

C. D. Hill, district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, will spend several days in territory during the week. He visited Kansas City, Omaha and Des Moines. He is very well acquainted with the territory and plans to spend considerable time in studying the exhibition problems of the theatres served by other exchanges in his district.

It is held to be far more likely that the Clinton & Meyers Enterprises would be approached by Universal for the use of this theater, now called the “Lyceum” by tourists, that a new theater would be built.

J. E. O’Toole, manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, is back in town after a tour of the territory on which he accompanied Cecil Mayberry, district chief.

Sam L. Warner, vice president of Warner Brothers, is off for the Pacific Coast studios after a visit in Minneapolis.

Looks like Fred Cubberly of the Finkelstein & Ruben string of theaters was out buying another or who knows the one he has bought into shape. He hasn’t been seen around F. & R. for a week.

Ralph Branton of Educational Films has his hands full now that Cubberly is giving him his principal attention. He’s been back in the Educational office, however.

E. T. Gomersall has returned from the Chicago conference of Fox Film men.

Winona papers announce with a great deal of black type that Beyerstedt Brothers have announced plans to build a $100,000 theater there with 1,500 seats. The brothers are orchestra men, having been members of Beyerstedt’s orchestra.

J. L. Johnston of the publicity department of Frank Lloyd productions and a former Minneapolis man stopped off here on the way back to the coast after a trip to New York to see some of the older associates in the publicity department of Finkelstein & Ruben.

Jack Segal of the Universal offices in Minneapolis has leased the Marine theater at Marine-on-the-St. Croix, Minn., signing his name Segal Amusement Company.

Bill Mick, recently made special theater manager for Finkelstein & Ruben who has been shaping things up at the Sherman theater, St. Cloud, has moved on to the Lyric at Duluth.

Phil Dunas, Universal manager in Minneapolis, is off for Chicago again on a business trip. It is his second outing of a business nature in a month.

Mark Rose of the Universal sales department is scouting northern Minnesota.

Jack Hellman, exploitation man for Famous Players-Lasky in the Twin Cities area and the northern district, returned from Fargo Saturday. Mr. Hellman is brother of Sam Hellman, Saturday Evening Post writer, who is now doing a series of stories for F. B. O. distribution.
THE most important Canadian personal news of the week is the announcement of the appointment of Pete Egan of Calgary, Alberta, as manager of the big Capitol Theatre at Winnipeg. Manager Egan, who is well-known in Winnipeg, Western supervisor of theatres for Famous Players Canada, was appointed last spring and will have direct charge of the main key area of the Famous Players chain. Until a few days ago he was manager of the Strand Theatre at Calgary but he is well-known in Winnipeg where he has done a big business for the Lyceum Theatre and the Lyceum and College Theatres during the previous five years. He made his theatrical start as assistant manager of the Lyceum Theatre in Winnipeg under Oral D. Cloakey when the latter was the manager of that house.

This makes the second important appointment to Winnipeg theatres within recent weeks, H. M. Thomas having selected Harold Bishoff, former assistant manager of the Capitol, to be the manager of the Metropolian, for Winnipeg's second cinema. This makes a third appointment of the past few weeks, W. F. Davis who was promoted to the Toronto head office of Famous Players to supervise the script book plan for the theatre's circuit.

The exchange managers and exhibitors of Calgary gathered to offer fond farewells to Pete Egan before he made his departure for Winnipeg. The theatre men presented him with a club bag and the exchange officials gave him a handsome traveling case.

The new Weston Theatre, which is to be the real show place of the town of Weston, Ontario, will be ready for occupancy about September 1, according to an announcement by President J. A. Morrison, who is in charge of the building. The Weston Theatre is being installed by H. J. Coleman of the Coleman Electric Co. of Toronto. It will be opened on October 21. The Strath Street, East, Toronto, and it includes two Movietone Delux projectors.

Archie Murray, formerly assistant manager of the Winnipeg Strand Theatre, has deserted the theatre business for a computing room, having been appointed sporting editor of the Post at Brandon, Manitoba, where he is now resident. Murray was a newspaperman in Winnipeg some years ago.

John Hazza of Calgary, Alberta, manager of the Capitol Theatre there, has adopted a unique plan of policy for that cinema, affording the customers variable seating according to the new policy, two shows only, matinee and evening performances only, for the lower twothirds of the house on evenings shows has been slightly lowered.

The Regent Theatre, Toronto, the exclusive big-time moving picture house of the Ontario Capital, re-opened August 15th.

Eight hundred children of the Daily Vacation Bible Schools of Montreal, Quebec, were guests of Manager Howard Conover of the Imperial Theatre Friday afternoon, August 7, this being the annual theatre treat for the scholars of this religious institution.

For years the York Theatre, Yonge and Bloor Streets, Toronto, was unique in that it carried a definite policy of changing programmes every day in the week, but it now has a new feature being shown every day week. This was when the house was owned by J. D. Boudreau, who died one year ago. This custom has been discontinued by Manager Clarence Trembley, however, with the result that the usual plan now is to have three programmes change every Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

John T. Fiddes, proprietor of the Playhouse Theatre of Winnipeg, has made a big-time side attraction to boost interest in the house. He has arranged a "Made in Winnipeg" exhibition which is to cover a period of 30 days, the various exhibitions being changed at intervals. This exhibition is being mounted in the spacious lobby of the theatre.

D. Leach has bought the Em- press Theatre, in Gary, Indiana, and is managing the house himself. The Empress is one of the brightest of local neighborhood cinemas.

Leonard Bishop, manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, a Famous Players' house, has been appointed manager of the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, which the corporation interests recently acquired to replace the Strand. Manager Bishop, who returned recently from a lengthy visit in California, will be assisted in the management by a gentleman and the Russell in Ottawa.

When a great many of the regular patrons of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, went to Burlington Beach, the nearby summer resort, for the hot weather, Manager H. E. Wilton of the Strand decided to keep in personal touch with his holidaygoers who are starting a series of weekly letters which will be sent by mail to their summer homes. These letters tell of current features and coming attractions; the weather also is also included. Many have told him of the receipt of these letters.

Irvine Sourkes, Canadian Eastern Manager for United Artists Corp., for the last five years, covering Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, has resigned to take charge of the Auditorium Theatre, Quebec City, which has been added to the Canadian outside of Montreal.

Mr. Sourkes is very well known in Canada having been with Fox Film Co. from the time they opened their offices in Canada for two years, then operating two theatres for Fox from 1922 to 1926 when he connected with United Artists, where he has been since.

Cleveland

J. J. Harwood has installed a new $20,000 Wurlitzer organ in the Lexington theatre, Cleveland. The organ was dedicated last Sunday with a special program with Walter F. Trimner at the console.

Carl H. Weeks, of Worthington, near Columbus, has been promoted from sales representative to manager of the Columbus exchange of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which distributes Paramount pictures. He succeeds E. H. Brauer, who became connected with the company's Cleveland Paramount office in his new position. Weeks will supervise the sale of exhibition rights and the district office will add another $20,000 theatre to the company's 50 theatres in Ohio and northern West Virginia.

Robert J. McLean, of Washington C. H., Ohio, has secured the control and direct management of the Belle opera house in Hillsboro, Ohio, a house with a seating capacity of approximately 450. Mr. McLean states that under the new conditions for motion pictures, the picture shows will be given together with some of the smaller ones and some vaudeville. Mr. McLean, son of R. J. McLean, will assume active management of the Bell theatre in Hillsboro, and the Belle, which is the business side of the Palace theatre in Hillsboro, with a seating capacity of about 250.

McLean will remain in Washington C. H., to personally manage the Palace theatre in that city. The Bell house at Hillsboro has been purchased and a new picture house to come under the management of Mr. McLean.

"Under the Rouge" — Associated Exhibitors, Colony, New York

"Under the Rouge" is one of the best crook pictures we ever saw and we were quite carried away from the downfall of the song "everybody is hungry and prosaic, as we watched the troubles and joys of the crook smartly and with a light touch, even a 'good girl,' Whitey, another crook, thoroughly noble and big, a woman, was a hero who tried the crooked path just once to help the mother and it was the right thing to do, but there was nothing melodramatic about them. They talked and acted and when they weren't breaking banks or picking somebody's pockets, and there was a totally unexpected twist at the end which is surely a big surprise to every one."

Mirror: "Under the Rouge," with Tom Moore and Eileen Percy enacting featured roles, tops a crackerjack bill at the Colony this week. This is a fast moving, well managed, romantic entertainment, directed by Lewis H. Moonan, with amus-ing dialogue and all. Tom Moore does the best work to the credit of the director and has an entire collection of people in the audience. The picture is a good crook."

American: "Under the Rouge," at the Colony, is one of the better plays of the underworld. Tom Moore, as Whitey, is a most likeable thing. The picture has a good cast.

World: "The new crook melodrama at the Colony offers a thrill to the customary crook lives, and is as satisfactory a Tom Moore performance as I ever saw. It is presented the typical crook movie is a first-rate form of entertainment. The Colony was well filled, and as I say the picture is one of the best things that something about the underworld. It's amply attested by 'Under the Rouge' and presented by the Associated Exhibitors at Mr. Moss' Colony."

Telegraph: "The best of the recent flood of crook melodramas. An unusual story with tremendous human appeal, an excellent cast and one big thrill scene makes it capital entertainment."
How to Secure Effective Theatre Lighting

Use of Illumination in Early Days: Recommendations for Modern Houses

By G. G. Thompson

About the beginning of the seventeenth century, plays began to be produced in buildings especially constructed for their presentation. Performances being given in the evening, it became necessary to provide artificial illumination of the stage and interior. For this purpose, cressets, lanterns and candles were employed, the cressets being receptacles of iron or other metal fastened to the wall and used to hold torches.

The use of footlights had been thought of half a century before this period but were not extensively used until about 1750 when David Garrick placed a row of candles below and in front of the stage of his Garrick Theatre, masking the candles from the view of the audience by metal screens. Garrick also used the side lights, now spoken of as borders.

The purpose of stage lighting in Garrick's time was merely to provide illumination of the players. Its value as a factor in the production of stage illusions had not then been thought of.

With the development of gas lighting, the possibilities of effective stage lighting began to be better appreciated, not only because the gas flame proved to be far steadier and more dependable than that of candles and lamps but because gas lighting could be so much more readily regulated.

By means of gas lighting a row of lights could be simultaneously turned on or extinguished from the wings of the back stage, whereas before gas was used it had been necessary for an attendant to separately turn down or blow out each lamp or candle. As may be imagined these proceedings interfered considerably with the illusion of the play.

With this larger command of lighting control, improvement in the utilization of light and shadow in stage productions rapidly evolved. In 1860 the calcium light came into general use for stage illumination, this light being produced by heating a block of lime to incandescence in an oxy-hydrogen flame. The use of a movable reflector in connection with calcium light constituted the first spot light by means of which the hero was given due prominence or stage effects produced—as light shining through a window, moonlight, sunrise, etc. The invention of mantle burners was soon followed by their use in footlights, proscenium lights, border lights and back lights.

Cross-section of electrically-lighted theatre constructed in Munich for the International Electro-Technical exposition in 1883.

About this time color lighting began to appear, its manipulation being provided for by a device for simultaneously drawing colored silk in front of, or away from the lights.

The suffocating odors arising from the use of gas, the disturbing appearance of a rubber tube trailing from a stage moon, and numerous other inconveniences associated with the use of open gas flames, and the oppressive effect of heat arising from the stage lighting, constituted serious drawbacks to the theatrical use of gas for illumination.

Accordingly, therefore, the introduction of the electric light inaugurated an era of unprecedented progress in the art of theatrical lighting. In 1882 tremendous interest among theatrical producers was aroused by the exhibition of a small theatre completely lighted by electricity at the electro-technical exposition at Munich. Diffused light seems to have been first used for theatre purposes at this theatre. This light was emitted from arc lamps, the diffusion being effected by passing it through ceiling panels of ground glass. The walls of the theatre were illuminated with incandescent lamps. The stage was lighted entirely with incandescent electric lamps and screens could be mechanically operated to change the color of the light from plain to red or blue. At this period much interest was created by a production of Faust in which a clever arrangement of electric circuits caused the clashing blades of Faust and Valentine to emit dazzling sparks of fire, tremendously increasing the excitement of the duel.

As was the case with gas lighting, the principal advantages of the use of electricity off the stage was the greater facility afforded for the control of lighting effects. This control is made possible by the case with which, through the employment of proper apparatus, the flow of electric energy may itself be regulated. This regulation is accomplished by the use of equipment embodying means for introducing a greater or lesser amount of resistance or reactance into or out of the circuit, and the apparatus required to be illuminated to full brilliancy or softened down to any desired point.

In large theatres, including some of the very large motion picture houses of the greater cities, as well as the theatre exhibiting burlesque, comedy, variety, vaudeville, or the drama, are very extensive installations of such apparatus.

To understand correctly the respective applications of theatre auditorium and stage lighting to the respective needs of theatres featuring each of these types of entertainment, the requirements of each case must be separately considered.

The musical comedy, the variety show and the burlesque performance are all alike in principle so far as lighting is concerned. Lighting is used to heighten the effect of magnificence or burlesque according to whether the effect of each given act depends upon sheer beauty or intentional absurdity. On the other hand, the whole aim of the lighting program in the production of a drama is to strengthen the illusion of the play. Realism is the constant effort of the producer. The lighting is made secondary to the actor instead of the players being merely a part of the scene in which the lighting is of equal or greater value, as is the case with a spectacular type of show. The vaudeville theatre must be equipped to meet a measure the needs of all of the foregoing types of performance in as much as the character of the different acts may range from tabloid musical comedies to one-act dramas with all sorts of miscellaneous acts in between, and a feature movie as a wind-up.

A theatre which is suitable for dramatic productions is not generally suitable for a moving picture on a competitive basis. This is particularly true of the lighting and control equipment needed for these different types of theatres. For efficient production of the drama a theatre should not seat over 1,500 people and the auditorium lighting may be of the simplest type. For this type of theatre a combination of indirect and crystal fixtures are entirely adequate and the theatre can be illuminated with this type of fixture at a much lower cost than with the cove and totally indirect system of lighting. For the stage the lighting system should be adequate to reproduce average interior lighting conditions and also colors and lighting to imitate natural conditions. This does not require the high intensity of illumination which should be provided for a musical review or vaudeville equipment where it is quite necessary to produce by means of lighting very beautiful and fantastic color settings. Adequate lighting should be provided for the dramatic equipment to produce general illumination in the modified colors and also to produce local lighting which will be required in many different places.

For musical reviews and burlesque a higher degree of illumination on the stage should be provided and if practical more attention should be given to the decorative features provided by the lighting of the house.

In the early days of the moving picture exhibitors paid little attention to the lighting of the theatre and very little if any illumination was provided. During the picture the lights were entirely eliminated and in many of the smaller theatres there was not sufficient light during the intermission. Under present competitive conditions in the moving picture field, this condition has entirely changed. People expect to find the moving picture theatre as beautiful as any other theatre and some of them are more beautiful than the usual dramatic theatre. It has also been found that it is possible to provide a comparatively high degree of illumination during the projection of the picture without impairing its clearness but to do this is necessary to have a properly designed lighting system. The essential feature is that the source of this illumination shall not be brighter than the light portions of the screen during the picture. This necessitates a totally indirect system of illumination for which the cove system is preferable.

It is also advisable to use color illumination as it is possible to provide a little more colored light than white light. Moreover, the use of colored illumination adds greatly to the beauty of the interior decorations if these colors are properly controlled. I am thoroughly convinced that there is a sound psychological basis for the success of the moving picture theatre which is beautifully decorated and equipped with a good lighting system afforded colored illumination. While the lighting of the moving picture theatre should not distract the patrons' attention from the picture by violent and radical changes in color, the illumination can greatly beautify the interior decoration. This illumination should be very gradually changed, always maintaining a harmonious color scheme, so that patrons seldom see the house in the same light.

A great deal of interest and some controversy attaches to this question of special lighting effects as a psychological aid to the motion picture theatre. We are all agreed that the brilliant illumination of the electrical sign on the outside of the theatre is an important factor in drawing the attention of the passing crowd to the theatre and some amusement within. There can be no question regarding the money-making psychology of electric light in that connection. But when it comes to the utilization of striking lighting effects within the theatre, that is another problem.

H. MacNary Again Enters Motion Picture Field

It is with a great deal of pleasure that we welcome the return of H. MacNary to the industry, after an absence of more than two years, in his new connection with the well known electrical contracting engineers, Fischbach and Moore, Inc., of New York City.

Mr. MacNary, it will be remembered, was with the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Company in charge of studio and theatre equipment. During his stay with the Westinghouse Company he developed and contributed many new ideas which are now considered as standard practice in theatres.

It was at Mr. MacNary's recommendation that the pushbutton remote control method of operation was installed at the Cosmopolitan Studios, New York City, and since introduced in practically every studio.

The industry is also indebted to Mr. MacNary for many projection room layouts.

As a member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Mr. MacNary contributed papers on theatre and studio lighting as well as projection room equipment.

His new position in charge of the theatrical division for Fischbach and Moore, Inc., Electrical Contracting Engineers, will allow him to render a broader service to his many friends and clients in the industry.

Palace, Lockport, Opens to Record Crowds

The beautiful new Palace theatre, erected in Lockport, N. Y., by Lock City Theatres, Inc., and leased by Paramount's theatre department, was recently opened to the public when two overflow audiences witnessed the splendid program premiere. Following an introductory talk by Manager George T. Cruzen, Congressman S. Wallace Dempsey spoke, complimenting those responsible for the new house. Charles E. Dickinson of Lockport, who promoted the project also talked briefly, as did A. Edmund Lee, president of Lock City Theatres.

Joseph Pomeranz of Buffalo is conductor of the Palace orchestra of eight pieces. C. Austin Taylor is stage manager, Martin Heiberger, chief projectionist; Harold Le Valley, floor superintendent and Corey Rohde is in charge of the poster department. Prices range from 35 to 75 cents and in the fall, Manager Cruzen announces the Keith vaudeville will be added to the picture program. Mr. Cruzen has been associated with the Hostetter Amusement company in Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska and for the past two years has been on the West Coast serving in various capacities at the studios. Fred W. Greene, Jr., district manager for New York state for Paramount's theatre department was in Lockport for a week in advance of the opening assisting in preparations for the premiere.

$250,000 Theatre at Clinton and Suffolk Sts., N. Y. C.

Plans are being drawn by Eugene DeRosa, 110 W. 40th Street, for the erection of a three story theatre building to be erected at Clinton & Suffolk Streets, N. Y. C. on a plot 100 x 120, the approximate cost of the new theatre to be $250,000. The owner of this new construction is Steiner & Blinderman, 574 Broadway, N. Y. C.

OLaD AGE AND YOUR THEATRE

Thousands of theatre chairs, through neglect, are suffering from the effects of "Old Age." Are your theatre chairs passing into this class? Under present day competition no theatre can afford to allow its theatre chairs to suffer from the effects of "Old Age."

Through our method of procedure, which is an innovation, we can recondition and transform, Like Magic Over Night, unsightly theatre chairs into ones of real beauty, comfort and distinction, automatically creating an entirely new auditorium atmosphere that has definite box-office value, at reasonable cost in any part of the U. Screen Deterioration

HE following was received from J. R. Osborne, who is connected with the GeneseeTheatrical Enterprises, Inc., capacity not sisted, operating the New Family and Grand theatres in Batavia, N. Y.

"Dear

"We have a mirror screen in one of our theatres and there are two or three places where the frosting is off the glass. Can you advise us what we can do to eliminate these dark spots?"

"Frosting?"

A mirror screen with a "frosted" surface is news to us. We were under the impression that the old Mirroroid Screens had either a sandblasted or an etched surface.
Either of these is permanent and cannot suff er deterioration, such as peeling, mentioned in Mr. Osborne's letter.
The sandblasting process, as the name implies, consists of "roughing" the surface of the glass by means of a stream of finely divided sand particles driven by air under high pressure. This method is generally employed for relatively small surfaces since it is difficult to "rough" a large surface even with the methods ordinarily employed.
The Acid Process consists of coating or washing the glass with a very thin paste which contains hydrofluoric acid as the corrodinating agent. This can be easily applied to large surfaces without danger of unevenly etching them. This process imparts a "satiny finish" to the surface which gives a higher degree of diffusion to the reflected light than the sandblast process. Both of these roughened surfaces, however, are permanent and cannot be removed.

Superficial "Frosting"

It is possible to imitate the acid process to a certain extent by applying a solution, having paraffin as a base, to the glass surface.
This surface frosting however, is by no means permanent since it can easily be scrapped or rubbed off and will, under a sufficiently high temperature, become soft.
This solution is frequently used in theaters to obtain "homemade frosted" incandescent lamps and the heat of the lamps will not cause it to soften.
These represent the three principal methods, in fact the only ones, which are used to secure frosted surfaces on glass. Therefore, Friend Osborne, if your screen has had the frosting removed in a number of places, a superficial coating must have been used.
It is possible, however, to apparently remove the frosted effect of a sandblasted, or etched surface, by applying oil to it. This destroyes the effect of the frosting, tempora-arily and it is possible that you may have some oil or grease on the screen. Ark this is so, first wash it with gasoline and then with soap and water after which rinse the spots with clear water. If, on the other hand a superficial wax frosting has been used on the screen and this has come off in spots, apparently the only thing to do is to secure some similar frosting solution from your supply dealer, or any large electrical supply house and "touch up" the spots so affected.
The Mirroroid Screen, by the way, is no longer made as the company originally making them went out of business several years ago.

It is also possible, in fact very likely, that the silverying on the rear of the screen has deteriorated. The remedy for this is, obviously, resilvering. In a New York City however, aluminum paint, or gilt, will remove to a certain extent these dark areas.

Reflector Arc Manufacturers

A prospective reflector arc customer has written us requesting a list of reflector arcs now on the market and the names of those who make them.

To the best of our knowledge there are at present five such arcs on the market and two more either in course of construction or awaiting commercial development.
The entire list is as follows:

Trade Name. Manufacturer

Peerless Arc .......... J. E. McAuley Mfg.
Co., 552 West
Adams St., Chiicago, Ill.

Power's Reflector Arc., Nicholas Power Co., 90 Gold St., New York City.

American Reflector Arc American Reflector Corp., 24
Milk St., Boston, Mass.

Preddy Reflector Arc., Walter G. Preddy,
187 Golden Gate
Ave., San Francisco, Calif.

Morelite Intensifier Morelite Intensifier
Corp., (Howell's
Cine Equip. Co.,) 40th St. & 7th
Ave., New York City.

265 Canal St.,
New York City.

Reflex Reflector Arc. Reflex Engineering
Co., Wright St.,
Newark, N. J.

The last named two arcs have not, as yet, been placed on the market, but will very shortly be ready for sale.
All of these arcs come equipped with automatic are feeding mechanisms and stereopticon attachments. The stereopticon attachment takes on a variety of forms in the various arcs ranging from the use of a separate lamp house containing a 1,000 watt 110 volt, incandescent stereopticon lamp adjacent to the lamp housing or a 45° angle mirror combination in which viewing the arc beam to one side of the projector and the seeing through the stereo lens. This element of stereopticon projection at first proved very troublesome to the reflector arc makers but appears now to have been satisfactorily overcome.

With the exception of the Redlex Arc,
Bausch & Lomb mirrors are used exclusively.
The Redlux outfit goes to Germany for its mirrors.

With the exception of the Peerless Arc the French adaptation of using horizon tal carbons without condenser lens is used.
The Peerless are, while modeled after the original German arc, differs in that it uses horizontal carbons instead of the right-angled set generally employed in Germany and England.

One of the principal sources of trouble in the early arcs was finding an efficient method for reducing from 110 volts to the approximate voltage of the arc. It was commonly the practice, then, to use straight resistances for securing this reduction in voltage but motor-generator sets have been developed since then which satisfactorily meet the low current requirements of this form of projection device.
The success which has already attended the marketing of these reflector arcs, due to their inherent greater efficiency and simplicity makes it very evident that the old type of arc is doomed to early extinction.

Europe's Greatest Movie
House Puts Boilers on Roof

Radical improvements in heating and venvilating design have been effected in the recent construction of the famous Capitol Theatre of London, generally regarded as the most luxurious and perfectly equipped motion picture house in Europe.
The entire system, which is fired by city gas, is put into operation simply by turning on and lighting the gas in the tunnel boiler, and starting the pumps and fans.
The engineer requires no additional man to assist him to run the plant, as the gas boiler need not further attention once it is lighted, and involves no stoking.
By using gas, the theatre has also aided the "brighter London" movement to eliminate the smoke nuisance.
Another interesting feature of the system is the fact that the gas boilers are placed on the roof where they are entirely out of the way. Instead of using the basement and part of the first floor for the housing of the boiler, these very valuable areas of the building are used for other and more remunerative purposes. The gas, of course, requires no mechanical device except piping,
to deliver it to the top of the building.
Psychology and Practicability of Theatre Ticket Booths
By William F. Libman, Pres., Libman-Spanjer Corp.

How many times has this question been asked, "What is the most important unit in the modern theatre?" Immediately the machine man answers, "The projector," the curtain man is quite sure that it is the screen, while the seating man believes that it the comfortable chairs and so it goes.

In the writer's opinion, one of the most important things in the operation of today's theatre is the box office or ticket booth. As has been pointed out in previous articles, the theatre front is the magnet which draws the attention of the theatre, but its the ticket booth which actually says "hello" to him.

The ticket booth is really the first human touch which the theatre extends to the patron. It is here that the psychology of movement, motion and line of ticket buyers and the sight of the ticket seller makes itself felt, and this contact and psychology you may be sure is a most important one and cannot be underestimated.

No matter who the patron is, it is necessary to establish a rapport with him or her to first approach and do business with the ticket seller at the ticket booth. The next human contact is with the ticket taker, then the usher, and finally the projectionist or operator through the medium of the screen. Any one of these human agencies can either help or discourage patronage as the most successful showman knows.

What do you suppose is the very first thing that a most successful circuit does immediately upon acquiring a new theatre? Has it to do with seats or screen or machine? No sir, not on your life. Its the ticket booth that receives the first official attention.

If the ticket booth happens to be located in the back part of the lobby, it is moved out to the front as close to the building or sidewalk line as it can go, or if its already in the front of the lobby but off to one side it is moved to the centre of the screen. In most cases of theatre acquisition a new ticket booth is erected altogether, as a means not only of attraction but as a most definite medium of impressing the patronage that a new management exists and the lobby particularly in the box office location is the most striking change that can be impressed upon the patron.

And why does the position of the ticket booth receive this flattering attention at the hands of the big business managers? It is only that the successful showman of today realizes the psychological value of the box office location, which brings us back to the perpetual "bally ho" spoken of in our first article.

If one should doubt that box office location means much in theatre prosperity, let him but take a look at the ticket booth locations of the most successful and most recently constructed theatres. Take Broadway, for example. Try and find a ticket booth in any theatre of this famous thoroughfare that is not in the centre of the lobby and as close to the sidewalk as the buildings can place it.

All of which means that the wise manager doesn't wait for his patron to walk through the lobby before paying the admission fee, but reaches out onto the sidewalk for the patron through the medium of the attractive ticket booth.

Loew's New York Theatre is a striking example as to what lengths the successful showman will go in order to have the box office where it belongs. In this case the construction of the theatre front itself long defied all efforts to locate the ticket booth on the sidewalk line, but it was finally accomplished and today the ticket sellers at this theatre, could, if they wanted, reach out and practically tap the passer by on Broadway right on the shoulder.

So much for the box office location. Now for construction. The building or constructing of a modern and attractive ticket booth calls for the inclusion of numerous elements each of them individually imposing upon the ticket selling machine. It is the attractive value in the lobby, the ticket booth must be highly practical as well. No matter how ornamental it may be on the outside, we know that it is the repository of the theatre which ticket selling is in process, and therefore it must be safe and secure. The cash drawers must be properly built and located. These are little requirements of which the average cabinet maker knows nothing.

The ticket selling machine is also located in the ticket booth and proper provisions for its uninterrupted operation must be made. In this case the close co-operation of the booth manufacturer with the ticket sending machine builder is an advantage that does not prevail where the local mechanics build the ticket booth.

The ticket booth must be properly ventilated, lighted, and constructed. Marble work, electricity, painting, carpentry, and glazing all enter into its make up, and expense. So much the more reason to realize the recognized builder's services are needed to insure the delivery of a satisfactory finished product.

Architects and exhibitors who in the past thought it cheaper and more expedient to have the local electrician, mason, cabinet maker and painter contribute his efforts in the construction of the ticket booth, now realize that it only seemed cheaper when each of these artisans submitted its bid for his particular part of the work. When the total was counted it invariably ran higher than the figures quoted by the professional builder of ticket booths and the results of combining such craftsman's efforts were invariably not to be compared with completed work delivered by the expert builder and designer of booth.

As we all know, the questions of durability and appearance play their part in the life of the ticket booth. Inclement weather shows its effect on the wrong woodwork and finish. Reels and marble resist weather and wears much longer and with better appearance than does its imitator called "seagloda." The tinkling of the coins against the surface of this substitute soon wears a shabby look in the most prominent part of the theatre. And chipped molding, peeling paint, or gaping seams in cornice have no place in the front of the theatre where the patron gets his first impression.

“Sally of Sawdust” — United Artists, Strand, New York

Times: “Judging by the mirth and applause at the opening night, it is an audience that packed the Strand to overflowing, ‘Sally of the Sawdust’ which probably will make more money than any picture on Broadway this week. There is no denying the entertainment values of the photoplay.”

World: “‘Sally of the Sawdust’ is among the finest of all motion picture stories, and I am not so sure but that it is the screen’s classic in mature character delineation. It has as lovely a story as the films have told, acted superbly, drawn in figures of living, breathing human beings, and all so exquisitely done that one feels as if he were present and joyous drama of persons and circumstances. I throw this word in as a mark down of the film and say that the audience, which at the Strand almost stopped the show several times, will be satisfied. The story of the film is full of such scenes as Mr. Griffith knows only too well how to make. You will love ‘Sally of the Sawdust,’ and if you say that there’s something the matter with you.”

Telegram: “‘Sally of the Sawdust’ is so excellent a film, thanks to the combination of D. W. Griffith and W. C. Fields, that a poor movie fan who sees it in the theater won’t be disappointed. The picture will be praised by many who have never seen a film before.”

Post: “‘Sally of the Sawdust’ is a good picture and it is an interesting picture as well. Sally and her ‘Pop’ are the most interesting characters in the film. The acting is superbly done. Every man in the audience was laughing long after the picture was finished.”

Daily News: “There’s a glorious experience waiting for you and that is the world of ‘Sally of the Sawdust.’ If you want to see a new movie, ‘Sally of the Sawdust’ is the one. It is a moving picture that you will not forget. It is a picture that will bring you to your feet.”

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

“Sally of Sawdust” — United Artists, Roosevelt, Chicago

Daily News: “‘Sally of the Sawdust’ is a sure winner. It is a picture that will bring you to your feet. It is a picture that will make you laugh. It is a picture that will make you cry.”

American: “‘Sally of the Sawdust’ is a picture of unparalleled merit. It is a picture that will make you laugh. It is a picture that will make you cry.”

The Evening Post: “Splendid entertainment is not lacking in this picture. It is a picture that will make you laugh. It is a picture that will make you cry.”

CLEVELAND, O.
A denial

Extravagant and ridiculous rumors have recently been broadcast to the effect that the

MILLIONAIRE BROWNING "Cinderella" story

recently heavily featured in the newspapers is a planted exploitation and publicity stunt effected in connection with the coming Paramount picture—

"A KISS FOR CINDERELLA"

Paramount here wishes to vehemently deny any such ridiculous charge

"A Kiss for Cinderella" is being made by Herbert Brenon from James M. Barrie's world famous play with script adapted by Willis Goldbeck in consultation with Sir James M. Barrie himself.

The picture will feature the star of "PETER PAN" supported by TOM MOORE and will be a super de luxe presentation of one of the most charming modern romances in literature.

BETTY BRONSON

EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES, Inc.
Member, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. Will H. Hays, President
The Showman Who Exploits His Short Subjects to Make ADDED PROFIT From Them Always Gets the Finest Backing on Educational

You are using Short Subjects as they should be used only when you are using them to build up Better Programs—and exploiting them to make Added Profit.

Fortunately for all concerned, more exhibitors are recognizing this than ever before—more Showmen are exploiting their one and two-reel pictures and making added dollars out of them than at any other time since the long feature came into vogue.

To all you Showmen who are having a part in the stimulus that is being given to Short Subjects, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., renews its pledge of cooperation with you—that its obligation to you only begins, and does not end, when you book Educational Pictures.

Educational Pictures are nationally advertised to your patrons—consistent advertising in The Saturday Evening Post increases their pulling power at your box-office.

Short subjects have had a great deal of stimulus this summer. The coming season should show how much they can mean. With the exhibitor. Who uses them as they should be used. DANNY in Film Daily.

A full line of accessories is available to help you advertise Educational Pictures—posters, lobby display cards, photographs, slides. Trailers on star comedies and specials can be had through the National Screen Service.

A press sheet on each two-reel comedy and each special contains information about the picture, newspaper stories and reviews, practical exploitation suggestions, one-column, two-column and three-column “ad” layouts and star and scene cuts. Mats for advertising and publicity cuts are FREE.

Educational backs up every Showman who backs up his Short Subjects. Your Educational Exchange will give you the fullest cooperation.
The first three comedies on Educational’s program for the new season have been reviewed by the trade press. Judge for yourself what Educational Pictures will mean to you in 1925-1926 after you read what the critics say about them.

"THE TOURIST"
TUXEDO COMEDY
With JOHNNY ARTHUR

Here is the best two-reel comedy that has been turned out this season. It is a charming trifle, and there is every indication that in its star, Johnny Arthur, Educational has a real find. He is a delightful personality.

One of the best bits of business ever concocted—one that will set any audience howling—is the scene in which Johnny converts his car into a stove and cooks his breakfast on its various parts. It must be seen to be appreciated.

As if a real star and entertaining tale and excellent direction were not enough, there is added the presence in the cast of the most promising girl we have noticed on the screen in a blue, or even a red moon. She is Helen Foster.... She is beautiful, she has poise—she is, in plain language, a wow. She helps to make “The Tourist” a real knockout that any house should welcome with open arms.—N.Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH.

This is the first of the series of Tuxedo comedies starring Johnny Arthur and if it is indicative of what is to follow, the series should be a profitable one for all hands. ....

William Goodrich has done a splendid job with the directing and the cast does the rest with the good story. .... There is a touch of melodrama to it, great quantities of comedy and enough suspense to keep the interest at a high pitch.—M. P. NEWS.

"PLEASURE BOUND"
MERMAID COMEDY
With LIGE CONLEY
A ROARING COMEDY

This Mermaid comes through big on waves of laughter. It is one of the cleverest and funniest ever produced in this series. ... the subtitles are as funny as the gags—which is a novelty in itself. At the fishing pier, the laughs come so fast you can’t count them. Probably the funniest fishing scene ever filmed. ... A scream—all the way.—FILM DAILY.

Here is an exceptionally good comedy with amusing situations galore.... a real comedy that will get laughs from any type of audience. ...—M. P. NEWS.

A corking good comedy. ... Lige Conley is featured and does a splendid piece of work. Clever tricks with the automobiles and in the fishing sequences prove to be hilarious.... This picture strikes a funny gait from the start and is maintained all the way. Book this one by all means.—EX. TRADE REVIEW.

Here is a real laugh-getter. Dealing with the misadventures of a family who set out on a fishing trip in a Ford, it is full of hilarious, highly original “gags.”

—N.Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH.

JIMMIE ADAMS
in “Be Careful”

This is a comedy fairly bulging with humorous situations and some good slapstick and hokum. It is well acted by a competent cast and should go exceptionally well in the neighborhood houses.—M. P. NEWS.

This a lively-moving number that has a good quota of laughs scattered all the way through.—FILM DAILY.

TAMAR LANE
In The Film Mercury
says

"'The Girl Who Wouldn't Work' is one of the most enjoyable and interesting photoplays I have witnessed in many days. It is a highly commendable contribution to the intelligent and sophisticated films of the year. Marked by an originality of technique and treatment, the play moves along smoothly and naturally, completely at variance with the well established formulas. It has a striking dramatic climax almost without parallel in the history of photoplays. Lionel Barrymore's portrayal of the rounder is one of the most amusing and compelling characterizations of the season. Nothing like it has ever been on the silver-sheet before.

'This is the first directorial effort of Marcel De Sano. The screen has a welcome addition to its school of megaphone wielders and one who is going to make a name for himself in the flicker world.'

Star, story, production, title—give you a four-ply box-office wallop in this one!

Exhibitors who are playing the Evelyn Brent pictures know that she has won her place among the really big favorites. This story is absolutely different to anything she has done and the fans are going to love her in the part. The production is the most pretentious she has made and the title is filled with the thought of romance and adventure. It's surefire box-office!

RICHARD BARTHELMESS in "Shore Leave"

Dick, as a member of the Navy, has as engrossing a character as he had as a West Pointer in "Classmates." It is another of those roles that the public loves to see him portray. This adaptation of Hugh Osborne's play, as produced by David Belasco, is a John S. Robertson Production. Josephine Lovett wrote the scenario. Presented by Inspiration Pictures, Inc. Dorothy Mackaill in leading feminine role.

"WHAT FOOLS MEN" with Lewis Stone

A wonderful picture. It was taken from the gripping novel by Henry Kitchell Webster, "Joseph Greer and His Daughter." It tells of a middle-aged man of violent emotions and primitive likes and dislikes, and his daughter, whose make-up is similar to her father's. A most intense society drama. In the cast are Shirley Mason, David Torrence and Barbara Bedford. Editorial direction June Mathis. Directed by George Archainbaud. Continuity by Eve Unsell.

It was directed by Al Santell and has Jack Mulhall and Charles Murray in the supporting cast. Editorial direction by June Mathis. Presented by Corinne Griffith Productions, Inc. Tells of the desire and search for wealth and fine things by the daughter of poor parents, only to find happiness in the life that has always surrounded her.

"THE DARK ANGEL"

This George Fitzmaurice Production, presented by Samuel Goldwyn, tells of a great love and a great sacrifice. It was taken from the play by H. B. Trevelyan, with the scenario by Frances Marion. It is a story that will have universal appeal, and in the hands of Mr. Fitzmaurice, and its leading roles in the hands of two such artists as mentioned above, it is sure to be a great box-office success.

The Independent

WITH respect to the cause of the Independent producer, distributor and exhibitor, we wish that more arguments of an economic nature might prevail. There could well be less of sentimental appeal—and the rest.

We agree thoroughly with Nathan Burkan that the independent business man—the man who is pulling his oar alone, outside of chains, mergers and organized power in general—should be given fair sailing. That is the spirit of America, the basis of our anti-trust laws. This man should not be hampered or destroyed by unfair trade combinations and practices; and it is pretty certain that the law and public opinion won’t permit him to be. Big business needs restraint, there’s no doubt about that. It is human to aspire, and sometimes thoughtlessly so.

But—and a big one—you can go just so far in the business world with the rule of fair play. Going beyond that you cease to be fair. If a man forges ahead you cannot fairly pull him back. You cannot, as an exhibitor well expressed it, “take the industry away from the industrious.”

The law of fair play is a man-made law—right and wonderful in its proper application. But business is business, and has its own laws. Business is governed by exact economic laws. They are utterly inviolable laws, however you may feel about their operation. They control business just as completely as physical laws control machinery. A machine doesn’t run by sentiment. No more does an industry. And when you try to tamper with the unchangeable laws of economics and physics you invite rack and ruin every time.

Business is a plain matter of supply and demand. And the ruling factors are—quality, price, advertising. All the sentiment in the world will never make a dent in the steady grind of these regulators of the commerce of the world. How do we buy our cigars, clothes, household supplies? Just exactly as people buy theatre tickets, and as the exhibitor rents pictures, and as the distributor makes producer contracts, and as the producer buys picture values—by quality, price, advertising.

Motion Picture News is opposed to monopoly in this business, because we believe it is bad in itself and bad for the box-office. We favor the independent producer because we believe the supply of pictures will be best if they come from many sources and not from too few. We do not believe in producer-owned theatres, either for the producer’s sake or for the theatre’s sake. We believe in well-run theatres. If chain ownership makes better theatres, then chains will and should prevail. But chains will go just as far as they are well run and no further; and certainly there’s a place in the sun today, and it is being proved right along, for any independent dealer or exhibitor in competition with chain stores and theatres.

What, in our humble opinion, the independent producer and distributor need today and all they need is a straight out-and-out business campaign to the exhibitor—first to acquaint him beyond question with the aggregate strength of this entire supply of pictures and, secondly, to deal with him in open competition on the triple bases of quality-price-advertising.

It’s the one and only way—the business way. Exhibitors are emotional at conventions. Naturally. They go for a good time. But business is another matter—a business matter. Naturally. The exhibitor is forced to buy the goods he wants, at a price, and with service—forced by competition in his own field. Why try to reach him in any other way?
The British Situation

Elsewhere in this issue we print a comprehensive article on the British situation written by a member of our staff. It is the fifth of a notable series on the whole European outlook. What he has to say may well be read carefully, for his information was gained first-hand and his viewpoint is unbiased.

This latest article is particularly timely, since it sketches the background for the present upheaval in Britain, and deals with the recommendations of the Federation of British Industries on ways and means to salvage the collapsed producing industry over there.

These suggestions, curiously enough, do not fall into a uniform plan, but are really several plans which will have to be reconciled in detail if results are to follow. One of them proposes a contingent—a soft word meaning a limited ban on pictures from other countries.

There are other recommendations no less revolutionary. All of them, no less than the whole situation itself, are vitally important to the American trade. When one remembers the overwhelming popularity of American pictures brought about the film convulsion in Britain, the point is plain.

The British trade papers may well be taken as reflecting the progressive British viewpoint. Without exception, these journals, while advocating determined efforts to revive production, keep their feet on the ground and talk sense. For instance, The Bioscope on the subject of a subsidized National Film Studio:

"The question is much deeper than the 'one-idea' National Studio. Production is a question of men, brains, money, salesmanship, and imitation. The word imitation is plain English—emulation could have been used, but it is imitation which is to save British Film Production.

"British pictures—the words used together should be separated. What is wanted is pictures—good pictures—made in Britain, and to get them this country has to start in where our competitors are to-day. When America found that Germany was years ahead of her in lighting, what happened? America hired German experts. The same applied to producers of every nationality, German, Swedish, French, British, and it also applied to artists, Russian, Germans, Poles, British, no matter what their nationality. America recognised they must have the best. Ameri-can pictures are not American in any other sense than that they are made with American money.

"With a sufficiency of money, invested by British exhibitors, and Britons who have a desire to see British ideals on the screens of the world, aided by a subsidy from the British Government as a guarantee that the country is solidly behind the project, there is nothing to prevent the trade mark 'Made in Britain' from being an open sesame to every market for pictures as well as other manufactures.

"But we would be false to our principles and the principles of the industry were we to abstain from pointing out the futility of merely providing a National Studio. The question is much deeper than that—and we look to the subject of British production being discussed on the broader basis we have indicated, for only on those lines we are convinced will success in British production ever be attained."

The Paramount School

SESSIONS of the Paramount Theatre Managers' School have begun, marking a development of real importance in the growth of the industry. It is the first specific recognition of the fact that exhibition is a profession—deservedly so, and may become in its technique at least something of an exact science.

Of course the personality and ability of the manager are the first essentials. But that is true in any line of business. Given these, there is much that can be learned and later put into practice in a successful business way.

PICTURES

CHARLIE'S ANTICS
LAST Saturday night at 12 p.m. saw the New York premiere of "The Gold Rush" at the Mark Strand theatre, and Moe Mark, Joe Plunkett and Fred Hamlin had their hands more than full trying to accommodate the crowd that stormed the doors and nearly wrecked the front of the theatre. Charlie was there in person, as well as a brilliant coterie of other stars, and as usual the crowd jammed in front of the theatre while the stars slipped in through the stage entrance around on 47th street.

We're not going to list the stars who were on hand, just to be different, but if you'll take the names from Who's Who in the Eastern Film World you'll just about have it.

Charlie made a brief speech from the stage at the close of the picture, after which the notables foregathered backstage in the ballet rehearsal room, where he held an informal reception. The reception given "The Gold Rush" was such as to gladden his heart and he was in high spirits.

Our reviewer has already appraised—and praised—the merits of the picture, but there are several things in addition that deserve to be said about the picture. It so happens, however, that they have already been said interestingly by Harry Carr in his page in the roto section of the Los Angeles Sunday Times, and we can do nothing better than to quote at length from his comment. He is describing a conversation between Chaplin and Herbert Howe, the film writer, and says:

"I remember that they fell to a discussion of Charlie's picture, "The Gold Rush." I don't happen to recall the part that Mr. Howe liked best: but I remember what Chaplin considers the best thing in the picture.

"This is the place where the girl in the music hall—disillusioned—and disgusted with life—sighs to find a real man.

"Charlie thinks she is looking at him and romance floods his soul—only to discover that she is looking over his head. The hope—and chagrin—that came into his face... Of that bit Charlie is modestly proud.

What is claimed to be her most remarkable performance is given by Gloria Swanson in "The Coast of Folly" (Paramount). Here are three phases of this unusual characterization, as "Pollyanna," as the daughter and as the mother.

A. A. Schmidt, whose promotion to the post of West Coast representative of F. B. O. was recently announced, and who will act as contact man between East and West.

Thomas Meighan, on his way to Ireland to film "The Imperfect Impostor" (Paramount), visits Paramount House in London on route.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce in one of the fashion creations which she wears in "The Skyscraper," her first film venture for Celebrity Pictures.

Just a "regular kid" is Junior Coghlan, the newest member of the Cecil B. De Mille stock company, now appearing in "The Road to Yesterday" (Producers Dist. Corp.).
"Some one asked Chaplin which of all his comedies he considers the best.

He picked an old one—'Easy Street.'

"Asked which he considered the best single scene he had ever acted, he seemed uneasy and dodged the answer. He vouchsafed, however, that it was probably one of the scenes of 'The Kid.'

"Before Charlie came in, Mr. Howe and I had been discussing with groans and agony the low condition of the movies—some of the gosh-awful pictures being shown.

"And so we asked Charlie what was the matter with the movies.

"He said that nothing much was really the matter; only that the present mildewed condition of some of the plays was due to the fact that all the situations in the world have been done a million times, and we are seeing the same thing over and over again.

"The obvious outlet for screen plays, he thinks, is in character studies—in narrative stories like his own 'Gold Rush,' where one interesting character is followed through a series of adventures.

"Some one commented on the fact that no new actors of real genius seem to have sprouted in recent years.

"Chaplin said he thought this was because the newer actors are too prone to imitate other actors.

"'One of these days,' he said, 'a new screen genius will burst out in some utterly unexpected quarter, and I don't know who or where he will be; but I predict he will be a roughneck—utterly unconscious of the meaning of art.'

THE WORLD'S SCREEN

HUNT STROMBERG paused between breaths in his preparations for filming 'The Last Frontier' the other day long enough to make some pertinent observations on the effect of constant movie attendance upon the American public. It is his idea that the seeing of many pictures is turning us into a nation of actors and actresses, through the reaction to screen drama. He says:

"Film fans are unconsciously developing unusually histrionic ability through constant attendance of motion pictures.

"It is the silent drama's medium of expression that has brought about this. When we witness a photoplay we actually become a part of the picture's cast. We help enact every role that is visualized for us on the screen. For it is visualization only that the screen presents. We have not the added assistance of the voice that the stage affords us.

"In attending a stage play we have only to sit back and let the players enact their roles. They interpret the various characters for us completely. We do nothing but sit and listen.

"But in attending a screen drama we go through an entirely different procedure. The players visualize the characters for us, but instead of their voices speaking the lines of these characters, we are forced to place our own mental intonations, our own emphasis on these lines as they are flashed before us on printed subtitles.

"This constant dramatization of sub-titles is developing screen and audiences histrionically to a truly amazing degree."

Fifth avenue and 69th street, New York City, as it appeared in the early seventies, has been re-created at Culver City for Monta Bell's "Lights of Old Broadway" (Metro-Goldwyn).

NAT TAKES PEN IN HAND

From the Cobbossee Colony at Monmouth, Maine, comes a vigorous epistle from Nat G. Rothstein, the F. B. O. publicity and ad chief, now vacationing in the wilds. Nat's letters are as full of punch as his ads, and we quote a few of the high spots:

"For once in my life I've had suf-fish-shent fishing. Doggone it! You've got to stand behind a tree to bait your hook up in this neck o' the woods. This afternoon I took Mrs. Rothstein out with me at 4:30 p.m. With the aid of my little Johnson kicker we made for a cove four miles down the lake that I discovered and in which I staked out a deep hole off a ledge. With frogs I started casting and on the first cast picked up a four pound pickerel that gave me a whale of a battle.

"I spent two days with the F. B. O. gang at Nathan Gordon's camp on Cape Cod; where we had a down East' clam bake that was a knockout. Film business is exactly 28,567 miles from my mind just now. Oh, by the way, I shot an 84 at Pine Brook Valley Country club at Boston a week ago."

Thus proving that you may be able to forget the film business on your vacation, but you can't leave your golf game behind.

The publicity men seldom get their picture in the paper except when they change jobs or die—so just for a change, here is the up-and-coming United Artists gang, including publicity and exploitation men for Chaplin, Pickford, Fairbanks and United Artists: Curtis Melnitz, Harry Brand, Charles E. Mayer, dir. of pub. and ad., Mark Larkin, Snowdon Summers; (front row) Nathan S. Dyches, Arthur Zellner and Edward Manson.
FATTED CALF—A LA SYRIA

In the absence of the Prodigal Son, the scribes of the trade, fan and daily press were entertained at a Feast of the Fatted Calf last Saturday evening by Famous Players, by way of gently calling attention to the fact that "The Wanderer" was to open on Wednesday of this week at the Criterion. The Feast was held at 15 Rector street, which, if you know your Bagdad-on-the-Subway, is the home of a Syrian restaurant where food is cooked and served just as it was in the days of the original Wandering Boy.

Covers were laid for some three score members of the typewriter fraternity. Since the Syrian alphabet is altogether foreign to our L. C. Smith keyboard, we cannot quote from the menu, but the majority of the dishes were apparently something or another boiled in oil and stuffed with rice. It was all very delightful as a novelty, but if it was a fair sample of the rich food the Prodigal Son had on his return, we're willing to wager that he had a polite tummyache after the feast was over.

OPENING THE DOORS

Engraved invitations of the week include those of the Balaban & Katz Uptown theatre in Chicago and Nathan Appell's New Strand theatre, York, Pa. The former opened last Monday night and the York house will receive its premiere on Thursday the 27th.

ACTING WITH HIS BOOTS ON

He only pair of genuine "trouper boots" in existence is claimed by Dan Mason, who is wearing them in "Thunder Mountain"—and has worn them for more than twenty years on stage and screen.

He bought them for "It Happened in Nordland," in which Alec Francis was the juvenile. The old boots are pretty well weather beaten and battle scarred now, but every now and then he brings them out for "just one more picture." To paraphrase Grant's famous remark about one of his generals and the barrel of whisky, "If we thought that kind of boots would make just as good actors of some of the others, we'd send them a pair."

TWENTY YEARS LATER

Cecil B. De Mille waited twenty years for the opportunity to produce "The Road to Yesterday," his first personally directed picture under his new alliance. That was disclosed this week in an interview in which he said:

"Just twenty years ago when the first rays of success were reflected upon my efforts in the theatrical field, and I became associated with Jesse Lasky, 'The Road to Yesterday' was presented by the Shuberts at the old Herald Square theatre in New York City where it remained for an extended engagement; and then on tour, played continuously for five years.

"I attended the performance the opening night and was so impressed with the play that I determined to secure it, if possible, at a later date and produce it on my own account. In fact I was so confident of its entertainment value that I confided to Mr. Lasky a plan to secure it at once, if by any chance it failed at the Herald Square theatre, and start it immediately on tour.

"But my private opinion was shared by the New York public and the newspaper critics who heaped laudatory praise on the piece and it scored such a big hit that the rights to produce it became prohibitive in price. Then it became involved in litigation that held it in legal bonds until now, twenty years later, I have been enabled, at last, to secure it for production on the screen."

POLA'S MOTHER ARRIVES

An emotional exhibition minus director, lights and camera was given by Pola Negri on Tuesday afternoon when the Southern Pacific train steamed into Los Angeles bearing her mother, Mme. Eleonora Chalupeze, newly arrived from Poland on her first visit to the United States.

Work was halted abruptly on "Flower of Night" as train time drew near, and Pola was as excited as a child. As soon as her mother arrived, she bundled her into the car and took her to see the beautiful Negri home at Beverly Hills.
Sometimes the newsreel shots attain a sudden and thrilling beauty seldom reached in features, as witness this night shot of a 12-inch coast defense gun at Fort Hancock, pictured in a recent issue of International News (Universal).

AS CINDERELLA SAW IT

The film editors were invited to the Famous Players-Lasky Long Island studio this week on the occasion of the shooting of ballroom scenes for "A Kiss for Cinderella," the Christmas picture now being filmed.

This ballroom set is perhaps the most remarkable ever built at the Eastern studio and is a distinct achievement in fantasy and beauty. It represents the throne room as Cinderella imagines it, based on her own starved existence. The thrones are enormous, jewel-studded rocking chairs, with straps for royalty to hang onto when they stand up. An immense stove and gas meter, also studded with gems, are at the opposite side of the room. The courtiers enter in the height of luxury—with sacks of candy and eating bananas. Court beauties, clowns, Italians with trained monkeys, coster boys, and such characters complete the ensemble. Everything is done in terms of the imagination of a waif.

Tall columns line both sides of the set, literally as far as the eye can see. It fills the entire upper stage of the studio, which is quite some space. This advance glimpse promises well for the Christmas release.

ASTERISKS FOR THE SHORTS

Three of the coveted asterisks were awarded this week by the National Board of Review, all to short subjects. The films to be so honored were "Barrier Busters," "Cuckoo Love" and Pathé Review No. 35.
Will Government Subsidy Help British Film Production?

No. 5: F.B.I. Submits Plans for Strengthening Industry

By L. C. Moen

ANNOUNCEMENT of the awaited memorandum of the Federation of British Industries in regard to the revitalizing of production in Great Britain, received here this week, makes it advisable to give immediate consideration to that situation, deferring my description of German conditions until a later article.

There is nothing startling or unexpected in the proposals made, but it is the only authoritative statement extant and as such provides an opportune moment for consideration of the British dilemma.

The memorandum is not so much a concrete plan as a summary of the varied methods which might be employed to stimulate British production. Outstanding proposals are:

1. A duty on the exhibition of non-British films, the revenue to be used in subsidising British production.
2. The formation of an Imperial Film Corporation to assist producers who meet a certain standard, acting in the capacity of a finance corporation.
3. Erection and equipment of a National Studio, to lower the overhead and increase the facilities of British producers.
4. A quota or contingent system requiring the exhibitor, by law, to show one British film in eight the first year, and three in eight during the three years following.

The F. B. I. makes no choice among them. It would seem to be implied that some combination of the four is considered advisable; that is, a tax on the showing of foreign films, a finance corporation to administer this revenue to the benefit of British producers, a National Studio for them to work in, and enforced showing of the resultant films.

Before proceeding further with any discussion of this memorandum, it is necessary to consider certain basic factors in England’s situation to understand why her film production has declined, or more important, why the British government is so deeply concerned with the situation of British production in her own studios.

Industrial Nation

To begin with, England is both an industrial and a colonial nation. With some 45,000,000 souls crammed into a space about the size of one of our states, she cannot possibly be self-maintaining.

For four or five decades prior to the World War Britain was becoming more and more a nation of factories—the workshop of the world. Germany was pushing close behind, to be sure, but England held her supremacy in most lines.

With every increase in industrial activity came lessening of agriculture and live-stock raising. England was becoming a nation of factory workers.

As such, she needed her colonies to furnish her with food and raw materials, and outside markets for manufactured goods, both in the colonies and in foreign nations generally.

With the coming of the war, all of this was swept away overnight. The full manpower of England was taken from export manufacture to fighting and the making of supplies for the fighters. Even the imports of raw materials from the colonies and dominions were hampered by submarine warfare.

Then came the peace, bringing with it conditions disastrous to Britain. Germany, spurred on by reparations payments, reached new high levels of manufacturing efficiency. German coal delivered to France under the treaty took away the market for just that much British coal.

The pound sterling was stabilized and brought back to its normal level, at a terrible price in financial stress. Her enormous government debt automatically grew larger as she raised the value of the pound.

To keep up her credit, payment on war debts was begun, though it could be ill afforded. Business credits were paralyzed seriously. All in all, the stabilization of currency at a high level, however beneficial in the long run, was done at grave cost to British industry and finance.

Labor troubles have been bitter and severe. Demand for high wages in shipbuilding have raised costs to a point where even British firms are awarding contracts to German builders.

Export Trade Slack

Britain’s supremacy in the export field has passed to Germany and America, and unsettled conditions have made it impossible for her to regain it. As a result, millions who once earned their living from doing the manufacturing of the world, are at the point of starvation.

To make matters worse, apparently, a paternalistic form of unemployment insurance was inaugurated—the “dole”—a matter, I believe, of some 15 shillings a week paid to workers out of employment by the government. If I may believe the many expressions of opinion which I heard in England, a great number of those workmen are none too anxious to resume, so long as they receive a dole on which they can struggle along.

And 1,250,000 persons are receiving this dole; it is estimated that, with their families, some five millions of persons are being supported by it. However valuable this system may have been at the outset, it is an unfortunate phase of the present situation.

Lloyd George has estimated that the population of the British Isles would have to be reduced by 15,000,000 persons to enable the remaining number to be self-supporting, as matters stand.

To add to the problems of the government, affairs in the colonies and dominions, vital to the Empire, have been none too smooth. Asia is in a state of seething discontent, and the nations with colonial possessions there have their hands more than full.

Government Interest

There are, then, two obvious reasons which explain the deep interest of the interest of the British government in the encouragement of domestic film production, entirely aside from the lesser object of providing employment for actors and other studio workers—and neither of these reasons is in any way concerned with the showing of British pictures within the boundaries of the British Isles.

1. The Government wants British films shown throughout the world to advertise British goods and aid in restoring her export trade.

2. The Government needs the screen badly as a medium of propaganda for the Empire in her colonies, as an antidote for the racial and religious problems causing disaffection today.

Perhaps neither of these reasons will ever appear on the surface of the discussions, but the pressure which they may exert on the government is evident. The latent danger is the possibility of government action which, in the long run, might harm the British film industry itself, disregarding the loss of American film revenue from that country.

It may be assumed as a starting point, then, that the British government desires to encourage film production in order to afford a supply of British pictures for showing throughout the world—through making it profitable for the producer to make pictures in England. The British market, in other words, is to support the making of pictures to carry the message of British manufacturers and Empire ideals to the far corners of the earth—just as American films are now doing for the United States, as regards the export phase of the matter.
Granting that all of this is quite justifiable, from the government point of view, it would be unfortunate if, in aiding the Empire, the British exhibitor were to be seriously crippled. There is more than a possibility of this, and it is strongly to be hoped that nothing is done without full consultation with the Cinematograph Exhibitors’ Association.

Exhibitors Heavily Taxed

The British exhibitor is already a heavily taxed individual who pays rather large film rentals—and any further addition to that burden would surely carry considerable compensation if it is to be justified.

There is every indication that exhibitors will be consulted with in every step, but that does not remove the possibility of some unfriendly move. Patronism and government subsidy are valuable in their place, but they are “dynamite”—and on more than one occasion have exploded prematurely with general havoc all around.

Returning now to the four leading points in the memorandum:

1. A duty on the exhibition of non-British films, the revenue to be used in subsidising British production.

This, obviously, will be paid by the exhibitor and indirectly by the public. It is doubtful if admission prices would stand a material increase, so it is reasonable to assume that the exhibitor showing American films, for instance, would be reaching his own pocket and furnishing money for the production of British pictures.

There are two references to such a duty in the memorandum, slightly different in their wording. The first reads: “A substantial duty per foot on foreign films exhibited— to be levied on the exhibitor and balanced by an equivalent refund of entertainment tax on respect of British films exhibited by him.” The second is: “The imposition of a small license duty on exhibitors for showing foreign films in their programs.”

Assisted Market

The object of the first is to force a market for British films through making others more costly, and that of the second is to provide capital for British production.

But since this interlocks in a measure with the other proposals, let us consider them a moment before summing up the matter.

2. The formation of an Imperial Film Corporation to assist producers who meet a certain standard, assisting in the capacity of a finance corporation.

There can be little argument on this point. If a subsidy of any sort is to be applied, there must be a suitable organization to administer it wisely.

3. Erection and equipment of a National Studio, to lower the overhead and increase the facilities of British producers.

Such a Utopia is needed badly in England, if production is to thrive, but elaborate studio facilities do not insure successful production. Far from it.

4. A quota or contingent system requiring the exhibitor, by law, to show one British film in eight the first year, and three in eight during the three years following.

And right here we may sum up the contingency upon which rests the whole effect of the plans of the British exhibitor. If the British films which he is thus required to show can be made equal in drawing power and entertainment value to American or other foreign pictures, well and good. He will simply have paid a little extra for the sake of keeping British production alive, which he is probably entirely willing to do.

It must be remembered that to the British exhibitor the fear of being swallowed up by American film interests is as real as to the independent exhibitor in America. Many British exhibitors feel, I believe, that they must either risk being kept alive as a competitor the American companies, lest the latter ultimately swallow them up, theatres and all.

In the other words, the British exhibitor wants to keep British production alive for the same profitable reason that the Milwaukee convention proposed the Play-date Bureau to encourage independent American production.

And no doubt the stories carried back from that convention by the British delegates have strengthened that conviction.

Must Meet Standard

Returning to the point in hand, however, if this subsidised British production does not come up to present standards, and does not gain an outside market, the British exhibitors will sooner or later lose much of the available production, owing to the smaller number of theatres in the British market.

This demands a separate article, however, in which we shall consider what might be done through voluntary action at far less hazard and at far less expense, which might determine the success or failure of the proposed production.

Greater Movie Season Booms Receipts and Prestige

Newspaper Comment Favorable To Industry

While reports of the sustained success of Greater Movie Season drives, now in full swing throughout the country, continue to materialize from all quarters, supporters and sponsors of the movement take occasion to point out the benefits deriving to the entire industry from the movement. Excerpts from editorials published by newspapers in cities and small towns are quoted to support the claim that Greater Movie Season is proving an important factor in the creation of more good will and increasing the prestige of the industry as well as bringing direct profits at the box offices of the theatres.

The movement has been widely exploited in the photoplay pages and news columns of newspapers over the country, but even greater importance is attached to the editorials which have been written and published about the industry since the inauguration of the campaign. Editors everywhere have given generous space to opinions tracing the advances that have been made in production and presentation of pictures. The editorial expressions have been so favorable as to bring lasting benefits to the industry as a whole. The attacks of some of the screen's most persistent critics have been answered in many of the editorials written in connection with Greater Movie Season.

Quotations from editorials published by some of the country's leading newspapers follow:

"The moving picture industry is a great and important factor in Atlanta's business life," said the Atlanta Georgian. "It is deserving of every consideration of a legitimate sort at the hands of our people. We bespeak for the moving picture theatres the cordial cooperation and patronage of the citizenship of this community."

"The better picture campaign emphasizes the screen's ceaseless reaching for new standards of excellence," according to the Indianapolis News. "The invitation of the public to share in the thought and inspiration of the anniversary celebration provides an opportunity for all patrons of the pictures to have a part in the development of the new art."

An editorial in the Hearst papers, after describing the screen as another and advanced part of the world's machinery for spreading news and information, declared that "it should be as free of stupid censorship or any censorship, apart from punishment when crime is committed, as is the press under the Constitutional guarantee of freedom."

Many editors contrasted today and yesterday in emphasizing the important part the motion picture holds in everyday life. Thus the New Orleans states:

"If the Fathers of the Country could come back to life for a little while, nothing would amaze them more than the film and the marvelous development of the moving picture industry. All over the country Greater Movie Season is being celebrated, and those who are celebrating constitute a very large proportion of the hundred and odd millions who live under the shelter of the American flag. The industry had its birth here. It is proper that Americans should make it the occasion of a celebration."

Additional Greater Movie Season Photos from here and there: above left to right, Will H. Hays with Doug and Mary in Los Angeles parade; elaborate float entered by the F. H. O. studios; Charlie Chaplin in Kansas City helping the cause along; below, the graceful United Studios float; Hal Roach bathing beauties in parade; and the Mary Pickford entry in Los Angeles Movie Season parade.
"The motion picture has developed so gradually along the paths of artistic and dramatic merit that most people fail to realize the greatness of its betterment," stated the San Francisco Examiner. "If we were to measure the average film of a half dozen years ago, the story of improvement would be very evident. The upshot of Greater Movie Season will be a greater public realization of the really remarkable excellence which film standards, little by little, have attained."

A similar thought is expressed by the Portland Oregonian. "Those who have scoffed at the art productions of film producers, who have carried the banner of some of the censorship agitators without knowing the real facts, will go from the theatres with a new idea of the place of motion picture entertainment in the realm of recreation."

The Denver Post: "In thinking of the spirit of Greater Movie Season, compare the shows of yesterday with the shows of today. Compare everything in connection with the theatre. The movie theatre today is surely a palace. One relaxes in comfortable seats to witness the perfected entertainment on the screen. Courteous treatment and the refined surroundings of the modern theatre make motion pictures a pleasure to be enjoyed by all classes and every member of the family."

Duty to Public

"As certainly as those at the head of this industry owe it to the people to keep up the standards and fit into the true education as well as entertainment of the people," the San Francisco Bulletin remarked, "that certain is it that on the public rests the corresponding responsibility of dealing fairly with the industry and showing appreciation for actual service rendered. Only through appreciation expressed does the producer get a dependable estimate of the public demand."

The New York Sun stressed the film as a means by which even the smallest towns are enabled to enjoy exactly the same entertainment as that enjoyed by the metropolises, while the New York Graphic declared that great is the present popularity of films. Greater Movie Season would certainly enhance the interest of the public in them. The Boston Post: "No one who looks upon the 'silver screen' with any degree of care can or wants to deny that enormous improvement in the quality of the product, both artistically and morally, has come within the past few years."

The San Francisco Bulletin, ridiculing those who believe that pictures are still only in their infancy, pointed out that just as the art of printing fostered literary genius, so film will undoubtedly foster genius in pictorial expression.

In commenting upon the pictures showing in Cincinnati during August, the Times-Star of that city remarked, "Whether or not the producers and directors know that these efforts were to be used in the Greater Movie Season campaign, it is apparent that these pictures reflect a conscientious endeavor to provide a high clean standard of service."

Baltimore business is approximately 10% better as a result of Greater Movie Season, according to Mr. Louis Schlechter, controlling the Edmonson and Bridge Theatres in that city, and general manager of local campaign. Baltimore wants the season again next year, he added in a communication to Mr. Hays.

Robert Bender of the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, telegraphed that exhibitors there were well satisfied. The increase over the average business was considered good and the results were as in every respect, as successful. While he has not yet taken a vote of exhibitors on next year's campaign, Mr. Bender believes that they will be favorable to another unified drive.

The San Francisco: "Greater Movie Season was inaugurated here with publicity parades and every other legitimate and dignified effort to attract attention. The theatres are showing the results of the campaign through increased attendance."

Stars Register a Hit

Hollywood's cinema stars came, and accompanied San Francisco August 5th in a colorful pageant on Market Street that ushered in Greater Movie Season for this city. The pageant was led by a mounted police detail headed by Chief Daniel J. O'Brien, Edward Barson, Gen. Chairman and Nat Holt his assistant. Movie fans crowded the line of march to get glimpses of their favorite stars as they passed in the parade. The procession became a screen popular pageant to the spectators by their applause eaving votes for their idols. Floats of the various film companies added a note of color to the procession. Bathing girls defying the cool breezes of a foggy morning brought sanctification to the spectators. As the parade passed the Civic Center it passed the reviewing stand from which Acting Mayor J. Emmett Hayden and other city officials witnessed the procession.

All traffic was suspended on Market street as the pageant wound its way between crowds of people and under the special decorations the city strung on the street for Movie Week. In the afternoon the visiting stars took part in the Movie Season parade in Oakland. Jack Partington was chairman of the San Francisco parade and outdoor activities. Baron Holt and Partington were praised by all for the way things turned out.

As far as the general public of Kansas City in Greater Movie Season can be gauged in accordance with the number of essays submitted by the Greater Movie Season editor of the Kansas City Star during the contest, it is clear there is a whale of concern about the screen in Kansas City.

All Houses Decorated

Down town and suburban houses are now decorated in observance of Greater Movie Season, while windows of department stores and other concerns have fallen in line. The committee of exhibitors and exchange officers of local councils of commerce are sending freely in newspaper and other forms of advertising. In selecting the essay judges, the committee saw to it that virtually every civic and industrial body was represented. The judges are:

W. M. Symon, manager of the convention bureau, Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Eleanor Walton, chairman of the Better Film Committee, Women's City Club; Mrs. Estelle McCallum, president of the Dietire Committee Parent-Teacher Association; Katherine S. Prosser, motion picture editor of the Kansas City Star; C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri.

After several weeks of preparation, Seattle's recent Greater Movie Season parade was almost a total wreck at the last minute as a result of differences between the Musicians Union and the parade authorities. Quick action and a sense of humor saved the day, however, and the parade continued with its scheduled—minus the fifty-piece band that was to provide the inspirational music for the marchers.

When the parade was first scheduled earlier in the week, Mayor John H. Denny of Seattle, with a local band to furnish the music. The day of the parade, August 7, when the columns was ready to move of, members of the band discovered floats in the parade entered by John Thiel, proprietor of several non-picture houses. The band hurriedly delivered an ultimatum that either they would march, or the Danz floats would remain—but not both. A consultation among theatre and marching bands resulted in the decision that the Danz floats would remain—so the band was disbanded.

Central Penn, Appreciative

Directly behind Mayor Edwin J. Brown, who headed the parade, there appeared a casket, bedecked with signs reading, "This is the Band—the Musicians Union has the key." The rest of the parade followed, minus the band, and in very much the same form as the parade held the year before. This parade will provide a key to the parade week, Mayor George A. Hoveyter, of Harrisburg, on August 13, issued a formal proclamation urging citizens and industrial bodies in Harrisburg to cooperate in the national screen celebration.

The mayor's message reads:

"To impress the importance and possibilities of motion pictures and to signalize the immense advances that the picture art has made, a national celebration to inaugurate the Great Movie Week will be held this month throughout the United States."

"It is desired to enlist the people of Harrisburg in this movement, which has the support of a great many civic, industrial and social bodies. Because of the prominent place picture picture holds in the public regard, their qualities of entertainment and their educational influence, I hereby urge the citizens and commercial bodies to participate in Greater Movie Season that screen art may continue to advance to our personal happiness and industrial good."

"Mayor George A. Hoveyter, dangerous to..."
Elmer B. Carpenter, of the Loew's Regent orchestra, struck up popular airs, including current jazz favorites. The theatre seats about 1,700 and the audience fell for the stunt with great enthusiasm. The entire audience at each performance of "The White Desert" was transformed into a jazz concert which made the theatre walls echo with the iciest sorts of noises.

This theatre put on an especially attractive bill for the week. The feature for the first three days was "The White Desert," produced by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company, while the last half of the week was featured by the Paramount picture, "Paths to Paradise." Another much advertised feature for the first three days of the week was a revival of the thirty-years-old film taken in the Edison Laboratories in 1925, "The Great Train Robbery," which was presented to illustrate the advance that the film art has taken since its first introduction. An added feature for the last half of the week was "Play Ball," written by John McGraw, and showing some of the New York Giant stars in action on the baseball diamond.

All the advertisements printed by the Capitol Theatre, Lebanon, in the newspapers of that city, contain during the Greater Movie Season, a picture of a revolving globe containing the inscription, "Greater Movie Season." This is a theatre of the Carr & Schad, Inc. chain which operates a dozen picture houses in Reading and Lebanon, and the same historical device is used in the advertisements of some of the company's other theatres.

The advertisements of most of the first-run theatres in important Central Pennsylvania cities continue to make conspicuous reference daily to the Greater Movie Season.

Theatre Chains Continue Expansion

North American Theatre Corp. Moves Into Denver and Iowa; Finkelstein & Rubin Buy Eight Houses

T he expansion movement of theatre circuits throughout the country continues at a rapid and unabated pace. The past week reports many additions to theatre chains to give further impetus to the activity.

The North American Theatre Corporation makes its first appearance in the Denver territory by the purchase of the Strand Theatre from the Melton Theatres, Inc. The Strand is probably the best located of the first-run houses in that city. Simultaneously the hand of the M. P. Capital Corp. of which the North American Company is a subsidiary is seen in the activities of the Frank Amusement Co., of Waterloo, Ia., which is out after ten theatres in that state. Frank R. Wilson president of the M. P. Capital is vice-president of the Iowa theatre unit which has just been re-capitalized at $250,000 with $200,000 of its stock subscribed. Theatres already purchased by the company include the Plaza and Rialto, Waterloo; Isis, Cedar Rapids; Orpheum, Clinton; and Grand, Oelwein. Options are held on several other theatrical properties which do not go in until Oct. 15.

In Minneapolis, the opinion prevails that completion of this program will make the Frank circuit the state's second largest, the A. H. Blank chain, which is affiliated with Balaban & Katz, ranking first. Interesting identified with the M. P. Capital Corp. are

Denies Report of Roxy Theatre for Berlin

L. Rothafel last week stated there was no truth in the rumor that he was building a theatre for the use of the Berlin, Germany, for the Ufa Enterprises. Mr. Rothafel's statement, issued upon his return to New York from Chicago last Saturday, follows: "There is absolutely no truth in this rumor. All of my energies and activities are still devoted to the building of the new Roxy Theatre on 50th Street and 7th Avenue, New York, to be followed by the construction of a circuit of Roxy houses in Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn. These houses will be built by the Roxy Theatres Corporation, the factors of which are Arthur H. Sawyer, Herbert Lubin, William E. Atkinson and myself. We have no intention of erecting a Roxy Theatre in other places outside of New York at the present moment."

Will Aid Local Movie Season Campaign

It is not too late for exhibitors to join Greater Movie Season. Several of the most prominent house owners in Rochester before September 15, and many centers hitherto unorganized are only just now preparing to hold the celebration.

Although the national movement requires no further impetus, the Hays office will maintain an organization to serve individual localities where the celebration is planned for later in the year.

Press-books, publicity material and full campaign data with be made available at any time upon application to Jerome Beatty, Director Greater Movie Season, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., 469 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

financing many of the units releasing through Producers Dist. Corp. The company is also ready to finance theatre operations throughout the country. It may be that the Frank move is the first definite step in this direction.

In Minneapolis Finkelstein and Ruben announce the purchase of half interest in the Rochester Amusement Company, Rochester; Owatonna Amusement Company, Owatonna; and the Colonial Amusement Company in Winona, Minn. This gives F. & R. fifty per cent interest in the eight following theatres: At Rochester, Lawler, Metropolitan and Empress, at Owatonna, Metropolitan and Garden; at Winona, Colonial, Opera House and West End, Matthew Christmas has four new projects under way in Winchester. N. H., to augment his chain of five in Yonkers and New York. One theatre in Westchester, a second in Bronxville and a third in Yonkers are building while a deal is under way for a second site in Yonkers upon which a 2,500 seat house will be erected. At present Christmas' Yonkers building is the Broadway, Orpheum, Model, Riverdale and American. In West New York, he operates the Rivoli, Rialto and Wilson.

Walter Reade, in association with Pat Casey have ground 100 x 150 on the corner of Mammont and Broad Streets, Red Bank, N. J., and will commence work immediately to erect a modern $500,000 motion picture and vaudeville theatre. Thomas W. Lamb, the builder of the Capitol Theatre and other theatres in New York City will be the architect. Work will commence immediately and will be completed in six months. The seating capacity is to be 2,100, and it is Mr. Reade's intention to install a modern cooking system in the theatre.

W. S. Butterfield, president of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise company, has consummated a deal with D. R. and C. H. Wilson, prominent Pontiac industrialists, whereby he will erect a new theatre in Pontiac at a cost to be in the neighborhood of $250,000. This house will be situated directly across the street from the Oakland theatre, which was recently purchased by Butterfield. Ground will be broken for the new theatre this week. It will seat thirteen hundred persons.

Butterfield also has announced plans for his new Capitol theatre in Bay City which will cost $350,000. Its seating capacity will be 1,600.

Several Changes Ordered in Batavia Picture Houses

Numerous changes have been ordered in the construction, arrangement and equipment of every theatre in Batavia, N. Y., following a recent visit to the city by a state building inspector. About 30 changes have been ordered in the new Lafayette and Family theatres and these will all be made. Additional fire extinguishers and fire exit signs must be provided in both houses. In the Lafayette, a change to be made in the stage ventilation is the largest item. All loose aisle chairs must be removed from both theatres. Two rows of seats in the rear of the balcony of the Family are to be removed so that their exit space will legally correspond with the balcony capacity.

The changes ordered in these houses and in the Grand theatre comprise numerous minor details and will in no way drastically affect the construction of the buildings.

Plans Being Completed for New Brooklyn House

Plans are being completed by M. Hirsch for a new $35,000 one story brick motion picture theatre to be erected at Washington Street, on a site 75 x 100. The owner of the new Theatre is the Malfein Construction Company.
A. A. Schmidt Promoted; Is West Coast Representative of F. B. O.

A. SCHMIDT, F. B. O. West Coast Division manager for past three years, has been promoted to the position of West Coast Representative of the company. Mr. Schmidt will act as contract man between the production department at the studio and the executive offices in New York in addition to his duties with relation to distribution and sales.

The Schmidt is one of the pioneers of the picture industry. He started his career in the film business fifteen years ago, when he organized the Victor Film Service of Buffalo, N. Y. Later he became Division Manager for Universal, a position he held for several years. He left Universal three years ago to become West Coast Division Manager for F. B. O.

Disputes Over Wage Demands

LABOR difficulties arising from demands by operators and musicians are approaching the critical stages in Denver, where theatre musicians are demanding increased wages and in Cleveland and Baltimore, where exhibitor organizations are conferring with Union representatives over the higher rates demanded by operators.

From all present indications, there will be a strike of union musicians in Denver about September 1st. The theatre managers' association composed of the managers of all leading amusement houses of Denver and the musicians' association in Baltimore are very far from reaching an agreement concerning the terms and provisions of a new contract to replace the present contract which expires August 31st. The musicians' association refused to accept any changes in the old contract and insist upon a complete renewal of the present agreement without any alteration whatsoever. Up to this time negotiations have failed to bring the parties together, and it is reported that complete arrangements have been made by all theatres for providing music in case a strike is called by the musicians union.

An increase in the wages of moving picture operators of between $2 and $5, according to a statement given out at the headquarters of Baltimore Local 181, has been asked to become effective when the new contracts are signed from September 1st.

This demand is for wages, benefits and better working conditions was taken up at a meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc. at the Hotel Emerson on Thursday, August 13, for consideration.

The exhibitors have requested the union to send representatives to meet them and discuss the demand, according to G. Kingston Howard, president of the Baltimore Local 181. Mr. Howard took this up with the Union at its meeting Monday, Aug. 17. "We know that if the parties do not come to an agreement, there will be no receiving the same remuneration and that they are not working under the same conditions as are the operators in other cities, particularly Washington and Phila-

Fred Newmeyer to Direct Gotham Feature Comedy

Fred Newmeyer, comedy director well known for his work with Harold Lloyd, has been signed by Saxe of Gotham Productions to direct the filming of "MacFadden's Row of Flats," which is to be produced as a feature comedy by Gotham.

Newmeyer will probably start the new production immediately after he has completed his present picture, "Going Up," in which Douglas McLean will star for Paramount.

Hart Starts Production of "Tumbleweeds"

William S. Hart has started camera work on "Tumbleweeds," his first release for United Artists. The work is being directed by King Baggot with Barbara Bedford, Lucien Littlefield, J. Gordon Russell, Richard H. Neill, James Murphy, Lillian Leighton, Gertrude Claire and Capt. T. E. Duncan in principal roles.

"Tumbleweeds" is an adaptation by C. Gardner Sullivan from the novel by Hal G. Evarts.

Bebe Daniels to Play Lead in Wm. De Mille Feature

Bebe Daniels will play the name role in "Polly of the Ballet," which, Paramount announces will be William de Mille's most pretentious 1925 production for that company. Work on the feature, for which preliminary plans have been known for some time, will begin where Miss Daniels completes her work in "Martinitique," which William K. Howard is directing, and Mr. de Mille finishes his current production, "New Brooms."

Mildred Davis to Play Lead in Paramount Production

Mildred Davis, who in private life is Mrs. Harold Lloyd, will return to the screen under the Paramount banner, it was announced this week. Miss Davis' first work after three years' absence from the studios, will be as the feminine lead in "Spells of War," an adaptation of Hugh Wiley's story to be directed by Victor Fleming.

Paramount Week Begins September 6

OFFICIALS of Famous Players estimate that from 700 to 8,000 theatres in approximately 2,000 cities in the United States will participate in the celebration of 8th Annual Paramount Week, which will begin Sunday, September 6. The event will be advertised in 3,500 newspapers and the key-note of the advertising will be "Continuing Greater Movie Season."

The campaign will be vigorous and extensive, according to the announcements. In addition to the newspaper advertising which Paramount will place directly, exploitation representatives will work in cities and towns to line-up single and double page co-operative ads, and the Ad-Sales department of the company has issued to exchanges a complete line of free items, such as banners, one sheets, slides, etc., for the use of theatres.
Court Holds Connecticut Film Tax Law Is Valid

Injunction Denied: Industry Will Appeal

The Connecticut tax law imposing a tax of $10 per reel and providing for censorship of films by the State Tax Commission was held to be constitutional and petitions for an injunction against the enforcement of the law were denied in the decision filed in New Haven last Monday by the Special Federal Court which heard the case on July 10th.

The decision holds that the law is a police regulation and that it is not a burden, nor is it directly or substantially a restraint on interstate commerce as is conducted by the complainants. The action for an injunction against the enforcement of the law was brought by Fox Film Corporation of New York and the American Feature Film Company, Inc., of Boston. The case was argued by George W. Wickersham, of New York, as general counsel representing the Hays organization.

An appeal from the decision will be taken to the United States Supreme Court. The papers to perfect the appeal are now in preparation, according to a statement issued by G. H. Hess, General Attorney for the Hays organization. Announcement that the industry would appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court was made by Benedict M. Holden, of Hartford, counsel for the complainants and the industry in the State, immediately after he received word of the court's decision.

In cases involving the constitutionality of a state statute, the United States Judiciary Code provides that an appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States, without intermediate appeal to the U. S. Circuit Court, as is done in Connecticut. It is understood that the industry's fight against the law may be continued in the Connecticut Courts as well. Such action if taken will be based on the points that no appeal or redress is provided for in the censorship clauses of the law; and that the law approaches a confiscatory action since its censorship clauses permit of a revocation of license without a hearing. The appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States will be based on the complaint that the Connecticut law interferes with interstate commerce and that the tax is confiscatory because in many cases it will total more than the tax paid.

It is reported that a certain member of the exchange group in Connecticut may submit to arrest in order to bring a test case based on the arguments against the ownership phases of the statute.

That the fifteen exchanges operating in New Haven may be removed to Port Chester, N. Y., has been reported as another possibility in the event that the law is upheld in these actions. Eleven of the fifteen exchanges are members of the Film Board.

The action before the Special Federal Court was represented by Arthur L. Shipment, of Hartford, as special counsel, instead of the Attorney General. The court consisted of Federal Judge Henry Wade Thacher. While the action was against William H. Blodgett, the State Tax Commissioner, who has the authority of special commissioner for the purpose of collecting the tax on films and censorship, the State was the respondent.

The action was taken to the Special Federal Court without any intervening court action. As the question of constitutionality of the law was the claim issue the special court functioned as a constitutional court. The law became effective July 1st, but the taxing of films was to be done only until July 8th. Pending action by the court no taxes were collected, though all exhibitors in the state were notified to keep records of the pictures shown after July 8th, in order that the tax might be made if the law was held valid by the court.

The law imposes a tax of $10 for one thousand feet of film, and fifty cents for each hundred feet over that amount on all films brought into the state, excepting news reels and films of educational or scientific value and those which are to be exhibited for the promotion of educational, charitable, religious or patriotic purposes.

It is estimated that the state will receive a revenue of nearly $100,000 on prints which are now in the vaults of the New Haven exchanges. There are eleven exchanges operated by national distributors there and four by state right concerns.

John L. Spahn of New Haven, a veteran theatrical man, has been appointed to administer the law.

Fannie Hurst Wins Liberty Prize

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY AWARD NOTED SHORT-STORY WRITER $50,000 FOR SCENARIO

Fannie Hurst, the well known short story writer, has been awarded the $50,000 prize offered by Famous Players-Lasky for the best original scenario in the Liberty Magazine contest, it was announced this week. The title of the piece is "The Moving Finger," and it will be directed by James Cruze.

Before the story is placed in production, however, it will first run serially in Liberty, thus affording the exhibitor the publicity that such publication entails.

From Los Angeles Miss Hurst expressed her enthusiasm for the possibilities of the picture in a telegram to Jesse Lasky. She said:

"Everything progressing splendidly in preparation of story for the screen. Feel deeply grateful to you for care you have taken in seeing to it that my story will reach screen exactly as I conceived it and wrote it for Liberty. Mr. Cruze, Mr. Woods and myself enthusiastic over possibilities which story presents daily as we work it out for screen requirements."

In the Liberty contest, the greatest of its kind ever held, Miss Hurst's entry triumphed over almost 100,000 other manuscripts and plot synopses which were sent to Liberty from every quarter of the globe. John N. Wheeler, executive editor of Liberty, Mr. Lasky and Rex Beach, the novelists, were the judges who selected Miss Hurst's story from among the vast array of submitted material, Mr. Beach having been chosen by the other two judges.

Miss Hurst's entry consisted of a synopsis of a plot. For the synopsis she received the first half of the $50,000 prize. The judges then commissioned her as an author of national reputation to write her plot synopsis in finished serial form. The remaining $25,000 will be paid her upon the serial's completion and the production of the scenario for film purposes.

Liberty's announcement continues: "The story gives every promise of being the greatest Miss Hurst has ever produced, surpassing even 'Humoresque,' which has been counted the most popular of her work. Like 'Humoresque' it will be distinguished by the broad human sympathy which characterizes all of Miss Hurst's writing, but it also will be replete with vivid charm and intense suspense."
MARSHALL NEILAN SIGNS
To Make Four Productions for P. D. C.

MARSHALL NEILAN has signed a new contract with John C. Flinn, of Producers Distributing Corporation, under the terms of which he will make four productions instead of two, as stipulated in the first contract, for release by that company. The new contract was signed this week in Los Angeles.

Neilan's first P. D. C. picture is yet to be determined though he has several stories in his possession. These include "Ladies of Leisure," "The Unwelcome Guest," "Ups and Downs," "The House with a Bad Name," by Perley Poore Sheehan, "Faith," by Olga Shell, Adela Rogers St. John's "The Consuming Fires," and "The Man With a Shady Past" by Arthur Somers Roche. Many of these stories have been published either in magazine or book form.

Plan National Truck Delivery
Manufacturer Offers Hays Proposal
Transportation of Films by Auto

ONE of the nation's most important truck manufacturers has announced the Hays organization with a detailed proposal for the establishment of truck delivery systems throughout the country.

The Hays office is in favor of the promotion of such a project because it would not only offer exhibitors greater economy but would also give prints a far greater measure of protection than is now experienced.

The proposal would completely cover protection against fire, theft and weather and the trucks used would be standardized throughout the entire chain of lines. The plan calls for the establishment of unit stations in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia at once and a gradual extension to the north, west and south.

The extent of the system however will depend—should it be adopted—totally on the reaction of the exhibitor. It is felt that the service will benefit shown in those sections where railway sources are not as satisfactory as might be.

"Hell's Highroad" to Open on Broadway at Colony

"Hell's Highroad," the first production from the Cecil B. De Mille studio to be released through Producers Distributing Corporation, will have its Broadway premiere at the R. S. Moss Colony on Sunday, August 23rd.

The feature was directed by Rupert Julian under De Mille's supervision and is the first starring vehicle for Leatrice Joy. The story is by Ernest Pascall and is unusual by virtue of the fact that in the strict definition of the term it has no hero, heroine or villain. Miss Joy is supported by Julia Faye, Edmund Burns, and Robert Edeson.

Pass Exams for New York
State Review Board

All told, 43 persons passed the recent civil service examination in Albany, for appointment as reviewers on the New York State Motion Picture Commission. The eligible list is headed by Mrs. Catherin Siegrist, of Buffalo. About 40 persons failed to pass. These included J. J. Call, newsman, and Percy Johnson, of New York.

De Lorenzo Elected Head of Omaha Film Board

The Omaha Film Board of Trade held its annual election of officers recently. F. M. De Lorenzo was elected president, F. W. Gehbauer, vice-president, George F. Monsky, second vice-president, Sherman Fitch, sergeant-at-arms. The Film Board has been functioning in Omaha for the past three years.

Gotham Announces Cast for
"The Shadow on the Wall"

The cast which will appear in "The Shadow on the Wall," a Gotham Production now in work on the west coast, has been announced by Lumas Film Corporation, distributors of the Gotham product. Those who have been engaged for the feature are Eileen Perry, who has the leading feminine role, Creighton Hale, Wm. V. Mong, Dale Fuller, Jack Curtis, Hardee Kirkland and Willis Marks.

The picture will be an adaptation by Elsie Werner from the novel "The Picture on the Wall," written by J. Breenridge Ellis. Reeves Eason is directing the work.

Affiliated With Artclass in New England Exchange

George M. A. Feeke and the Motion Pictures Corporation of Boston, are affiliated with Weis Brothers Artclass Pictures Corporation in the exchange recently opened in the New England territory by the latter organization. A separate sales force under Feeke's direction will handle only the Artclass product. The salesmen will work out of the Motion Pictures Corporation's offices, which will handle the physical distribution of the Artclass product.

Carre and Koenig Added to Warner Production Staff

Ben Carre, art director, and William Koenig, until recently general production manager at Universal City, have been added to the Warner Bros. production staff. Carre is credited with the art direction of several prominent productions. He began his career with Maurice Tourneur and was recently in Italy with Rex Ingram on the production of "Mare Nostrum." Koenig is a former Minneapolis exhibitor who entered production work with Universal about three years ago.

Frank Lloyd Casting for "The Splendid Road"

Frank Lloyd has started casting "The Splendid Road," an adaptation by J. G. Hawks from J. H. E. Roe's novel which he will produce for First National release.

Anna Q. Nilsson was Mr. Lloyd's first selection. She will play the leading feminine role opposite Robert Frazer who will appear as Captain Carey. Pauline Garon, Gladys Brookwell, Edward Earle, Russell Simpson, Roy Laidlaw and Edwards Davis are among the other players who have been signed for the picture.

Ralph Lewis Injured While Acting Before Camera

Ralph Lewis, featured in Emery John-son's "The Last Edition," which F. B. O. will distribute, suffered painful injuries to his hands while acting scenes for the picture in the presentroom of the San Francisco Chronicle last week. Though his hands were lacerated by the grinding machine Mr. Lewis quckly finished his scene, one of the dramatic climaxes of the story.
Seider To Draft Contract For Vital
Responds to Request of New Exchange Company to Draw Sales Agreement Acceptable to Exhibitors

VITAL EXCHANGES, INC., newly formed national distributing organization, this week announced that the uniform contract will not be employed by that company, in its dealings with exhibitors. In place of the uniform contract Vital will use an agreement which is to be drafted by Joseph Seider, president of the New Jersey M. P. T. O. and chairman of the Contract and Arbitration Committee of the National organization.

Mr. Seider has notified David R. Hochreich, head of Vital Exchanges, that he would accede to the latter's request and submit within a short time the draft of a contract that will be "short, clear and ample." The contract will propose a system of "arbitration with a view of eliminating the present collection agency that deprives the theatremen of their property rights," Mr. Seider declared in his letter.

Mr. Hochreich said that as outlined to him the contract will be printed on one side of the sheet, will have no fine type clauses or jokers and that the main points covered will be the name of the picture, the play date and the price and arbitration clause. "This latter clause," he said, "will have nothing to do with the Arbitration Board, but will cover the appointment of one man by each side and if these two cannot agree, a third man will be appointed by these two and both parties will be governed absolutely by the ruling of this committee."

In his letter asking Mr. Seider to draft a contract for the Vital company, Mr. Hochreich said in part: "I believe, with you, that fairness in the motion picture industry must begin with the buying and selling of pictures. The exchange-exhibitor contract must express, therefore, absolute fairness to both parties, and I feel that this is exactly what you have in mind, and it is also what my associates, J. Charles Davis 2nd and J. K. Adams, and I have in mind for our Vital contract with the exhibitor. I realize that a contract is the written evidence of the meeting of the minds of both parties at the time it is made, and we propose to meet our exhibitor friends squarely on the ground of the cleanest kind of fair."

Mr. Seider's reply to Mr. Hochreich stated in part: "We will make every effort to submit within the earliest possible time, the form of contract requested by you in your letter of August 10th. We will submit a short, clear and ample contract. We will propose a system of arbitration with a view of eliminating the present collection agency that deprives the theatre owner of his property rights. The contract is the foundation for square dealing in the buying, selling and booking of pictures. By your asking us to write "our own ticket" you manifest and give concrete evidence of the sincerity of your statement that it is your purpose to conduct the Vital Exchanges, Inc., on a "live and let live" basis. "Please accept my sincere wishes for your success in your new undertaking."

Aller Sees Valuable Field in Russia
Vice-President of Rothacker-Aller Laboratories Returns from Trip to Union of Socialist Soviet States

THERE is a remarkable opportunity in the Russian motion picture field, and pictures there are enjoying great prosperity, according to Joseph Aller, vice-president and general manager of the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories, Los Angeles, who recently returned from a visit to that country. In an interview in The Film Daily, Mr. Aller said: "The Gos Kino controls production and the Sov Kino distribution. Both are controlled by the Government and while conducted as private enterprises, finance come from Government banks. Three splendid studios are now functioning. One is at Leningrad, a second in Moscow and a third in Crimea, the Hollywood of Russia."

"It is now about two years since the real revival of the industry in Russia has been under way. Wonders have happened in that time. There is no better theater construction to speak of, but a great deal of work is under way in reconstructing existing theaters. At the moment, there are few towns where a picture show is not operating."

Aller dissipated the idea that duped prints are being smuggled into Russia. He explained that all businesses are controlled by the Soviet and that, insofar as motion pictures are concerned, the Sov Kino is the body to deal with. For that reason, he maintains it is silly to assume that pirated prints can ever reach Russian theaters. He is convinced that there is a great deal of business awaiting American exporters, once they abandon the idea of the instability of Russian credits. Aller said—he found in all instances that Russian paper was honored.

One of the deterrents to American trade is the fact there is no competition.

The exporter must therefore accept the Russian picture situation and remain out of that market. A number of Governmental agents have been stationed in various important cities, such as Berlin, Paris and New York. In this country, J. J. Hargin, of the Amtorg Trading Corp., 165 Broadway is the representative. Aller's trip abroad was for the purpose of interesting the Russian Government in a number of laboratory patents. There is a great deal involving them under way at the moment."

"There are five stars over there whose popularity transcends all others," he continued, "Mary Pickford, and the Talumade girls head the feminine stars and Doug Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin, the male stars. I attempted to see "The Thief of Bagdad" in three different theaters where they were day and date, but the attempt on my part proved unsuccessful."

"Studios are using 300,000 ft. of negative monthly. That in itself is sufficient to indicate the production is progressing. Sore Bell and Howell printing machines are being brought in. Cameras are, in the main, De Brie. In the theaters, the Pathé (French) and the Ermenney (German) projectors pretty well cover the field.

Contract Conference to Be Held August 24th

AUGUST 24th has been set as the date for the conference on the new equitable contract and arbitration system by Joseph M. Seider, chairman of the Contract and Arbitration Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Oscar Neufeld, chairman of a similar committee of the Independent Motion Picture Association.

The committee of the M. P. T. O. A., appointed at the recent Detroit meeting of the organization's directors, consists of Joseph M. Seider, chairman; Julian Blyawkski, Washington, D. C.; Harry Davis, Pittsburgh, R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Kans.; Nathan Yaminis, Fall River, Mass.; President R. F. Woodhull, of the M. P. T. O. A., is an ex-officio member.

The conferences will meet next Monday at 1 p. m. in the offices of the M. P. T. O. A., and the chairman are optimistic of an early agreement.

Cody Signs Contract With Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

NEW YORK has signed a long term contract to play leading roles in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions. The contract takes effect immediately. According to announcement of the agreement by the M.-G.-M. Company the actor will be featured in roles totally different from those in which he has been cast heretofore.

Among Lew Cody's more recent pictures are "So This Is Marriage," "Man and Maid," "The Sporting Venus," "A Slave of Fashion" and "Time The Comedian." His next pictures for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be "Exchange of Wives" in which he will appear with Eleanor Boardman and Rene Adore, and "Dance Madness," in which he will appear with Aileen Pringle.
Motion Picture Campaign Committee for Support of James J. Walker

Motion picture activity in behalf of Senator James J. Walker's fight for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of New York got under way with a rush this week. Headquarters of the motion picture division of the campaign were opened by Samuel I. Berman at 1600 Broadway and immediate steps were taken to mobilize the local industry to fight for the senator.

All branches of the business will be represented on the campaign committee now being formed. Exhibitors of all factions, producers and distributors, publicity and advertising men and trade paper representatives are to participate. Mr. Berman, secretary of the committee, announced that the help of everybody was welcomed and that all would be given opportunity to do their bit.

The motion picture division will be very active in the campaign. As Motion Picture News pointed out editorially last week, Senator Walker's candidacy found instant response in the amusement world, in which he is an outstanding favorite.

Further announcements of the committees and plans of the motion picture division of the Walker campaign will be made next week.

Perfect Plans For Convention

First National Sales Meeting in New York to Follow Elaborate Program

LABORATE plans for the First National sales convention to be held in New York, Sunday, Sept. 26th, have been perfected by E. A. Eschmann and his associates in the sales department of the company. Mr. Eschmann, who will be in charge of the convention, has worked out a program of sales sessions and as well a schedule of entertainment.

The meetings will take place at the Hotel Roosevelt, where the sales policies for the handling of the big First National release schedule for next season will be outlined and various details of the campaign worked out.

The Southern delegation will arrive in New York in a body. Among those who will attend the convention are:

A. J. Herman, Albany; C. R. Beacham, Atlanta; T. B. Spry, Boston; F. J. A. McCarthy, Buffalo; F. P. Bryan, Charlotte; C. E. Bondi, Chicago; R. H. Haines, Cincinnati; G. L. Nolan, Denver; C. J. Appel, Toronto.

Alec Francis Cast for Role in Tom Mix Vehicle

Alec Francis has been added to the cast of "The Yankee Senor," the next Tom Mix starring vehicle for Fox. The picture is now in production. It is an adaptation of Katharine Fullerton Gerdau's story of the same title. In addition to Mr. Francis the supporting cast will include Olive Borden, Francis MacDonald, Kathryn Hill, Margaret Livingston, Tom Kennedy, Martha Mattox and Raymond Wells. Emmett Flynn is directing.

Six Players Added to Cast of "The Lone Eagle"

Six more well-known screen players have been added to the cast of "The Lone Eagle," Rudolph Valentino's first United Artist's production now being filmed at the United Studios, Hollywood, under the direction of Clarence Brown.

The newcomers to the cast are Spottiswoode Aitken, George Nichols, Barbara Teanant, Mario Carillo, Gustav von Seyffertitz and Otto Hoffman.

Christie is Made Head of West Coast A. of M. P. P.

CHARLES H. CHRISTIE was elected president of the West Coast Association of Motion Picture Producers at the annual election of officers held by the organization in Los Angeles last week. Irving Thalberg was chosen first vice-president; M. C. Levec, second vice-president, and Fred W. Beetsan, secretary and treasurer.

The association passed a resolution commending the work of Joseph M. Schenck, the retiring president.

2,000 Seat Theatre for Hollywood, Calif.

A new motion picture theatre is to be erected on the east side of Alvarada Street, Hollywood, Calif.

In and Out of Town

JOE BRANDT of Columbia Productions has gone on a motor tour through New land and Canada. He took a fishing outfit and the golf sticks along.

COLONEL FRED LEVY, prominent First National franchise holder of Louisville, Kentucky, sailed Saturday, August 15th, on the Leviathan to enjoy a three weeks' pleasure trip abroad.

C. LALUMIERE, general manager of Film DeLuxe, Ltd., of Montreal, Canada, has returned to his home after conferring with Henry Ginsberg on matters relating to distribution.

COLONEL W. F. CLARKE, vice-president of Cranfield and Clarke, Inc., left last Sunday for Montreal, Canada, where he has gone in the interest of distribution.

THOMAS SPRY, manager of first National's Boston branch and A. J. Herman, manager of the Albany Exchange, were visitors at the Home Office last week.

HEVRY GINSBERG expects to sail for London late in September to develop plans for extending the activities of his corporation in Europe.

LOUIS WEISS is on a sales trip to the Pittsburgh and Cleveland territories.

Thomas Meighan as "The Man Who Found Himself," his latest starring vehicle for Paramount.
New Trade Showing Idea by “U”

Elaborate showing held in Willard Theatre, Creston, Ia., last week, Universal has inaugurated a new idea in the marketing of films in small cities which are distant from the exchange centers. The showing was attended by exhibitors within a radius of from 50 to 75 miles around Creston and proved sufficiently successful to make Universal officials determine upon a permanent plan for the continuation of the “theatre party” plan. The idea was originated by Carl Laemmle as a means of giving small town exhibitors an even break in the matter of booking pictures, according to a statement from the Universal home office. It will enable every exhibitor to “book before he books,” a slogan adopted by Carl Laemmle long ago, but which has but seldom been possible to the house owner living out of range of the exchange centers. Following closely on the heels of Laemmle’s Complete Service Plan, it is another step to help the small exhibitor select his pictures wisely and operate at a profit.

Carefully Arranged

The showing at Creston’s was arranged with great care. The use of the Willard Theatre was obtained from Elmer Metzger, its owner, for a morning and afternoon showing. W. C. Truog, Universal’s assistant sales director in that part of the country, M. Gottlieb, Universal exchange manager at Des Moines, and Dave Bader, representative from the Universal home office, cooperated to put the party over.

The Creston Chamber of Commerce, and other civic organizations in that town got behind the party, which rapidly developed into a sort of exhibitors’ convention drawing theatre owners from the entire countryside.

Upon arriving in Creston, the visiting exhibitors found that they were the guests of Carl Laemmle. Meals, entertainments and other incidentals were “on” Universal, and the transportation expenses of the visitors were refunded.

Among the Universal pictures shown during the morning and afternoon pre-views were “Smoldering Fires,” “I’ll Show You the Town,” “Oh, Doctor,” “The Goose Woman,” “Siege,” “The Home Maker,” “The Teaser,” “The White Outlaw,” and “The Circus Cyclone.”

Headquarters for the party were in the local hotel and the Universal representatives made sure that all visitors, the wives and youngsters as well as the theatre men themselves, were enjoying the stay in Creston. The party ended with dancing.

Idea Well Liked

The new system of small town trade showings made a hit with the exhibitors, judging from reports. A letter of appreciation was written and signed by all of them, and sent to Carl Laemmle. It follows in part:

“We feel that out of this first party may come a movement which will revolutionize the buying problems of the exhibitors of the small towns. It is our belief that a picture previewed by the exhibitor is better sold to the theatre patrons, and you, Mr. Laemmle are to be commended for leading the way.”

The next “Carl Laemmle Universal Theatre Party” will be held in the Temple Theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Ia. The Rotary and Exchange Clubs are cooperating with Universal and the officials of the Henry County (Ia.) Fair are also getting behind the party. The week following the party at Mt. Pleasant, a third showing will be held this time at Humboldt, Ia., and a fourth showing at New Hampton, Ia., early in September.

Harry Leftholtz, Universal manager in Omaha, is assisting in the initial showings under the new plan, and will stage several in his exchange territory later.

St. Louis Theatre Sued for Excluding Negros

Suit to compel the New Palace Theatre at Franklin avenue, St. Louis, to admit negroes as well as whites has been filed in the St. Louis Circuit Court against the present operators of the house. The plaintiffs to the action are Hyman, Sarah and Sam Komn and the Engram Amusement Company while the defendants are Edward P. Laurent and the Little Theater Corporation.

The petition sets forth that the plaintiffs on February 28, 1924, leased the theatre to Jesse S. Horwitz and that the lease contained a stipulation that the building was to be used only as a motion picture theatre for mixed audiences including colored and white persons, but provided further that it might be used exclusively for negroes. Later Horwitz subleased the house to Laurent.

The petition reveals that the Komns are interested in other theatres in that vicinity that cater to white persons and it is pointed out that the New Palace will draw patronage from such houses if it is operated in competition with them.

Moberly Ministers Fight Sunday Show Petition

A picture show war is on at Moberly, Mo. Two petitions are being circulated. One petitions the City Council requesting that the city ordinance be changed so as to allow Sunday movies, and the other asking the Council not to change the ordinance.

The trouble started when the manager of a local theatre started the petitions to open it Sunday and announcing that he would obtain between 5,000 and 10,000 signatures of voters.

Then the ministers of the city held a meeting and petitions were passed through the congregation requesting the Council to refrain from changing the city ordinance. Both petitions will be presented in the Council at an early meeting.

Fight for Sunday Shows on in Two Missouri Towns

Exhibitors of two Missouri towns are waging educational campaigns to bring back Sunday shows in their respective communities. But Ministers, and reformers in both towns are fighting the move.

J. W. Cotter, of Fourth Street Theatre Moberly, is conducting the fight in that town while Rex Barrett, of the Cozy Theatre, in Columbia, Mo., is campaigning there. It is probable that elections will be held in both towns as an effort will be made to secure city ordinances permitting Sunday shows.

H. G. Davis Appointed to D. D. D. Executiveship

HUGH G. DAVIS, for the past five years associated with Arrow, has resigned to assume the position of assistant treasurer and chief accountant of the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., it was announced this week.

Mr. Davis has been in the film business since 1912 when he joined the then Consolidated Film and Supply Company Exchange in New Orleans. Later he was identified with the Syndicate Film Corporation, the distribution and production of Charles Frohman plays, and the Mutual company. His latest appointment goes into effect on Labor Day.

The resignation of Mr. Davis from Arrow was announced with sincere regret by President W. E. Shallenberger. He congratulated the Davis Distributing Division on its acquisition, and stated he would announce Mr. Davis’ successor at Arrow in a few days.
Al Green Signed to Direct "Spanish Sunlight"

Al Green has been engaged to direct Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone in the First National production of "Spanish Sunlight," which will be produced on the west coast. Green's most recent production for First National was "The Talker," the Sam Hork production based on the Marion Fairfax stage play of that title.

Laidlow to Play Character Role in Curwood Story

Roy Laidlow will play the role of O'Flaherty in "When the Door Opened," the Fox production of James Oliver Curwood's story instead of J. Farrell MacDonald, originally assigned the role. The switch was made because another part suitable to his ability and of greater importance turned up in another picture for MacDonald.

Abrams District Manager for Tiffany and Truart

Jerry Abrams, Chicago branch manager for Renown Picture for several years, has been appointed District Manager for Tiffany and Truart Production by M. H. Hoffman, general manager of those companies. The territory over which Abrams will preside includes Chicago, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha, Minneapolis and Milwaukee. His headquarters will be in Chicago.

A. H. McLaughlin, assistant to Abrams at the Renown offices in Chicago, has been appointed to manage that office for the Renown company.

Metro-Goldwyn Quarterly Dividend Declared

THE Board of Directors of Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has declared a quarterly dividend of 1 3/4 on the Preferred Stock of the company, payable September 15th, 1925, to stockholders of record at the close of business on August 31st, 1925.

Lou Payne in Cast of "The Last Edition"

Lou Payne, actor and former theatrical manager whose wife is Mrs. Leslie Carter, has been added to the cast of Emory Johnson's "The Last Edition," now in production at the F. R. O. studios. Mr. Payne will be seen in the role of a newspaper publisher.

Howson Heads Warner Bros. Literary Department

Albert Sydney Howson, well known stage actor, has been appointed head of Warner Bros. literary department to succeed Mrs. Pearl Keating, resigned. Mr. Howson will be located at the New York office of the company.

Three New Pictures Started at Fox Studios

Three important Fox productions for the coming season's schedule have been started at the studios in Los Angeles. These are "The Yankee Senor," starring Tom Mix, and two short subject films "Transients in Arizoria," the second of the O. Henry series, and "All Aboard," one of the "Helen and Warren" series of comedies.

To Release Two-Reeler Free to Customers

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by the International Newsreel Corporation, of the forthcoming gratis release of a remarkable two-reel novelty picture, titled "Life's Greatest Thrills," to all regular patrons of the International Newsreel. The bookings will be arranged through the Universal Exchanges.

The production, which is made up of the greatest thrill shots which have occurred in the events reel during the past decade, was launched last week in Chicago where it was supplied to all International first-run accounts and released simultaneously with an extensive publicity and advertising campaign. More than 175 theatres in the Illinois city used the film during the week.

The purposes of "Life's Greatest Thrills" are explained by Edgar P. Hatrick, general manager of the International Newsreel Corporation.

"Practically no attempt has ever been made to exploit the newsreel," he declared, "and despite this fact, it has won an enviable position on the motion picture program, due to its entertainment merit.

"'Life's Greatest Thrills' is an attempt to show both the public and the exhibitor what the International Newsreel is and what it means as an entertainment factor. A small amount of footage in the first reel is devoted to showing how the reel is gathered and the enormous facilities at its disposal; but seventy-five per cent of the picture is made up of great 'thrills' that have appeared exclusively in the International Newsreel for the past twelve years."
Seven Chadwick Pictures Completed for 1925-26

SEVEN of the productions which will be offered on the independent market by Chadwick Pictures Corporation during the 1925-26 season have been completed, according to an announcement this week by I. E. Chadwick, head of the organization. The company now has one picture in production and two more will be started soon at the west coast studios.

The completed productions include: "The Wizard of Oz" and "The Perfect Clown," both Larry Semon starring vehicles; "The Unchastened Woman," in which Theda Bara will return to the screen; "Some Pur'kins" and "Sweet Adeline," the Charles Ray starring features; and George Walsh has completed "American Pluck" and "The Prince of Broadway." Walsh is now making "Blue Blood," which will be the third of a series of six features in which he will be starred by Chadwick.

Fill Supporting Cast for "The Unguarded Hour"

First National has completed the east which will be seen in support of Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon in "The Unguarded Hour," the new Sills starring vehicle in production in New York. Those who will appear prominently in the picture are Claude King, Jed Prouty, Cornelius Keefe, Lorna Duvan, Dolores Cassinelli, and Vivian Ogden. Lambert Hillyer is directing the work.

Macfadden Campaign for "False Pride" Started

THE exploitation campaign for "False Pride," the second of a series of Bernarr Macfadden True Story productions for Astor Distributing Corporation release, which is now being filmed in New York, is about to be launched. The story of the film will be published as a serial in four issues of "True Romances," one of the most widely circulated of the Macfadden publications. The company estimates that the title and details of the picture will be brought before the attention of 16,400,000 readers.

"El Pasado" Being Filmed by Sanford Productions

A screen adaptation of the stage play "El Pasado" is being produced by Sanford Productions at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood under the direction of Wilfred Lucas. Important roles in the play are being acted by Bryant Washburn, Gladys Brockwell, Herbert Rawlinson, Liga de Goulconda, Guston Glass, Gene Crosby, Wilfred Lucas, Hector Sarou, Marshall Ruth and Barbara Tennant. The unit will leave for Mexico City next week to film exteriors in the locations called for by the story.

Templar Saxe in Cast of "The Primrose Path"

Templar Saxe has been added to the cast of "The Primrose Path," an Arthur F. Beck production which will be released by Arrow Pictures Corporation. Before entering picture work, in which he has become well known, Saxe was a leading man on the stage. He appeared with Lilian Russell in "The American Beauty," "Her Wedding Day," and "La Belle Helene."

"Three Faces East" to Be Filmed by De Mille

Cecil B. De Mille has acquired the screen rights to "Three Faces East," the Anthony Paul Kelly play, from A. H. Sebastian, general manager of Belasco Productions. The work will be adapted by C. Gardner Sullivan, Producers Distributing Corporation, who will distribute the feature, announce that the transfer will not affect the release.

Sears Manager of Cleveland Branch of First National

Victor Schertzinger has completed the camera work on "Thunder Mountain," the Fox screen version of John Golden's "Howdy Folks." Among the leading players appearing in the film are Madge Bellamy, Paul Panzer, Alee B. Francis, Zasu Pitts, Otis Harlan and Leslie Fenton.

Gala Premiere for "Gold Rush"
Chaplin's New Production Cheered by Audience at a Midnight Showing in New York

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S "The Gold Rush" was "cheered to the echo" by a capacity audience at the special midnight performance at the Strand, New York City, on August 16th, when the comedian's latest work for United Artists release was given its premiere on Broadway.

The event, advertised as a gala midnight performance, with orchestra seats selling at $3.30, attracted a notable gathering of theatrical and screen celebrities, prominent officials and business men, and a large quota of the socially elect of Manhattan.

Chaplin attended the performance, his entrance being the signal for loud and prolonged applause, which broke out again when the final fadeout on "The Gold Rush" flickered from the screen. The comedian was forced to leave his seat in an orchestra chair and appear on the stage. In a brief speech he thanked the gathering for the approval they had given his new effort.

It was just one minute after midnight when Carl Edouard, leader of the Mark Strand orchestra, raised his baton for the first note that started the projection. First there came an overture—Dvorak's "Carnival"—and then Joseph Plunkett's special prologue to "The Gold Rush"—"The Monte Carlo Dance Hall." Then the picture.

At five minutes after two the showing was at an end.

After the performance Mr. Plunkett invited Mr. Chaplin and a number of friends to a reception to the star that had been arranged to take place in the Strand theatre studio. There were some 300 attended this, and it was here that Mr. Chaplin was presented with a gold "mother record" of the phonograph reproduction of his own composition, and in which he plays the violin—"With You, Dear, in Bombay." This presentation was made by a representative of the phonograph company.

Victor Fleming Signs New Paramount Contract

Victor Fleming, Paramount director, has signed a new long term contract with that organization, according to an announcement from Jesse L. Lasky, of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Though his current agreement has several months to run the new contract securing his services to Famous for several years was signed and sealed last week.

Paramount Production Speeded

Period of Greatest Activity Starts at Long Island Plant—9 Units at Work

A PERIOD of the greatest production activity in the history of the plant is to start at the Paramount Studios in Long Island. By September 1st there will be nine productions in work at the big studios there, with both the upper and lower stages occupied with sets and several large settings on the lot at the rear of the building in addition to a large one now in construction on a ball park near Astoria.

Two pictures are now under way at the Long Island plant. These are "A Kiss for Cinderella," which Herbert Brenon is producing from the Barrie play with Betty Bronson in the leading role, and D. W. Griffith's "That Royle Girl," in which Carol Dempster, Harrison Ford, James Kirkwood and W. C. Fields are featured.

On August 17 two productions will start. These are Gloria Swanson's "Stage Struck," an Allan Dwan production of Frank R. Adams' story which has been adapted by Forrest Halsey; and Richard Dix in "Womanhandled," an Arthur Stringer story adapted by Luther Reed. Gregory LaCava will make his bow as a director in this picture. He supervised the stunts in Dix's "The Shock Punch" and "The Lucky Devil."

On August 24 Adolphe Menjou will start in "The King on Main Street," from Ditrichstein's stage success. This will be directed by Monta Bell. On the same date Frank Tuttle will begin "The American Venus."

On September 1 Florence Ziegfeld's first picture production will get underway. Edgar Selwyn is writing the story. It is to be called "Glorifying the American Girl." "Follies" beauties will play an important part. Also on September 1 Gilda Gray will begin work in "Atoma of the South Seas," from the Broadway stage success. Thomas Meighan and the company of players now in Ireland making scenes for a picture adapted from "The Imperfect Imposter" are due to start back on August 25 and resume work on the interiors at the Long Island studio.

As soon as Mr. Brenon finishes "A Kiss for Cinderella" he is to start work on "The Song and Dance Man," George M. Cohan's stage success.

"Miss Robin Hood" Next Josie Sedgewick Film

The next picture for Josie Sedgewick, the lady cowboy star, will be "Miss Robin Hood," Universal announces this week. It will be directed by John B. O'Brien who has selected Jack Trent, Duke R. Lee, Sabel Johnson, Jack Padjan, and "Tex" Young to round out the supporting cast.

Florey, Technical Adviser on "La Boheme"

Robert Florey is to be technical adviser under Cedric Gibbons on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "La Boheme," starring Lillian Gish and being directed by King Vidor. Florey handled the technical work on "The Exquisite Sinmer" and "Time the Conquering," recent M-G-M productions.

Announce Cast for "U"  "Two Blocks Away"

Charles Murray and George Sidney are to be co-featured in the cast selected for the Universal-Jewel release, "Two Blocks Away," a comedy of Irish and Jewish family life. The picture goes into production under the joint supervision of Universal and E. M. Asher of Faultless Pictures Corporation.

Kate Price has the role of Murray's wife and Vera Gordon will play the Jewish spouse. Harry Pollard will direct.

Robert Frazer is Signed for Lead by Schulberg

B. P. Schulberg has engaged Robert Frazer to play the leading role in "The Other Woman's Story," which Gasnier will direct from the story by Peggy Gaddis. With the exception of a few roles for other national distributing organizations, Frazer has heretofore appeared exclusively in leads for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Reichenbach to Direct Chadwick Campaign

Harry Reichenbach has been engaged by Chadwick Pictures Corporation to handle special exploitation and publicity on the forthcoming campaign to exploit that company's productions for 1925-26.

Norman Dawn is Signed to Universal Contract

Universal announces the signing of Norman Dawn, director and cinematographic expert, to a long-term contract calling for his services as advisory expert on matters of production, story and photography.

Warners Start New Productions

Four Units Begin and Six More Are Preparing—Mary Astor to Support Barrymore

Four production units are now at work at the Warner Bros. studios in Hollywood and six more are making ready to begin filming features which will be offered on this season's program. The Warner schedule of forty pictures for the year is now thirty per cent completed. The company has already started equipping the Vitagraph studio for increased production. $50,000 already having been expended in the installation of equipment for faster production there.

The pictures now in work are "The Sea Beast," "Compromise," "Hogan's Alley" and "The Clash of the Wolves."

New casting assignments include the selection of several players for pictures to be put into production soon. Mary Astor has been chosen for the leading feminine role opposite John Barrymore in "Don Juan," his picture to follow "The Sea Beast." Miss Astor played with Barrymore in "Beau Brummel."

Additions to the cast of "Hogan's Alley" are Mary Carr, James J. Jeffries, Ad Wolgast, and Tommy Ryan. The three leading comedians will be Willard Louis, Max Davidson and Ben Turpin.

Edward Martindel has been signed for the role of the Commodore in "Compromiser," and this actor has also been selected for a prominent part in "Lady Windermere's Fan," an adaptation of the play to be produced by Ernst Lubitsch.

It has also been announced that Syd Chaplin's next picture for Warners will be "Nightie Night Nurse," from the story by Robert E. Sherwood and Bertram Bloch.

Fox Increases Exhibitor Aids

Accessories and Advertising Material Enlarged for New Season's Productions

The publicity and advertising departments of Fox Film are engaged in preparing material for the pictures which the company will offer this season, when it is announced, a more elaborate exhibitor service than the company has ever attempted in the past, will be issued in connection with the features and short subjects.

Particular effort is being directed to the designing of effective accessories, while press books will be more comprehensive. In past years the press books have been written and prepared at the New York office, but under a new system all this matter is written and made up by a staff of special writers at the company's West Coast Studios.

Among the artists who will design posters for the new Fox pictures is Luis Casab, noted Spanish painter. The Fox exploitation department will introduce a new lobby photo made especially for first-run houses. These are to be made in two different styles, one consisting of a set of four 14 by 17 enlargements made from retouched negatives and printed on high grade photographic paper, and the other a set of eight negatives, mounted on 11 by 14 stock with decorative backs. These are being prepared in addition to the regular sets of hand colored 11 by 14's and 22 by 28's. A greater number of still photographs will be issued in connection with Fox features this year. The material for the short subjects will include complete press books on the two reel series, with synopses, cuts and mats, publicity stories, reviews and exploitation suggestions.
Kerman Acquires "That Old Gang of Mine"

World distribution for "That Old Gang of Mine" has been acquired by Kerman Films, Inc., from Irving Berlin, Inc., producers of the picture. The cast is headed by Macklyn Arbuckle, famous stage star. A special exploitation, advertising and publicity department has been organized under the supervision of Alvert A. Karten for a nation wide campaign on the picture.

New Buck Jones Vehicle is Ready for Release

"A Man Four Square," the latest of the Buck Jones starring vehicles for the Fox company has been completed and is ready for screening. The scenario is by Charles Darnton and John Stone. The supporting company includes Florence Gilbert, Marion Harlan, Olive Trevor, Jay Hunt, William Lawrence and Harry Woods. The film was directed by R. William Neill.

Alyce Mills Loaned for Chadwick Picture

Alyce Mills has been loaned by B. P. Schulberg to Chadwick Pictures Corporation for whom she will appear in the feminine lead opposite George Walsh in "The Prince of Broadway." Miss Mills last week finished the principal role in Fred C. Windemere's production, "With This Ring," a Preferred Picture scheduled for September release.

P-D-C Production Increased

12 Pictures in Work at 4 Studios: New Stage for Hollywood Plant

ANNOUNCING the completion of five of the 1925-26 productions of the company and that twelve features are now being filmed at four studios of contributing producers. Producers Distributing Corporation states that production for this season's program has been increased 100 per cent.

The present facilities of the Hollywood studio were added by William Sistrom, general manager of the Hollywood studio, and work will be started immediately. The cost of building and equipping the stage will be approximately $125,000.

The plans call for many novel features, including a semi-dome ceiling to permit long shots giving effective outdoor atmosphere; a cinematographer's experimental room; overhead wiring; and a system of tracks suspended from the roof of the stage to support small electric cranes. The building will be constructed of concrete and steel.

At the Cecil B. De Mille studio in Culver City there are five units making features. The pictures are "The Road to Yesterday," which Mr. De Mille is personally directing; "The Wedding Song," a Leatrice Joy starring vehicle; "Bravheart," starring Rod La Roque; "Eva's Leaves," being directed by Paul Sloane; and "Three Faces East," an adaptation of Anthony Paul Kelly's stage success.

Well Known Actors in Cast of "The Winding Stair"

Five other productions for Producers Distributing are being filmed at the Hollywood Studios. These are "The People vs. Nancy Proctor," "Soimn the Jester," "The Man From Red Gulch," "Fifth Avenue" and "The Last Frontier." At the Christie studios "Madame Lacy," with Julian Elting's featured, is being made and Marshall Neilan is preparing to start the cameras on his first feature for this company at the producer's studios in Glendale.

Acts Screen Role He Played on Stage Twenty Years Ago

Charles West is interpreting the role of Sir Watt in Cecil B. De Mille's screen version of "The Road to Yesterday," a character he impersonated in the stage production of the play twenty years ago. Dick Sutherland is another recent addition to the cast of the play, which Mr. De Mille is personally directing from an adaptation by Jennie Macpherson and Beulah Marie Dix.

Sennett Bathing Beauty is Graduated to Stock
Mack Sennett has rewarded Marian Mac Donald, bathing beauty, with a contract to play parts in his comedies in recognition of the ability she has displayed in several pictures he has produced for Pathe. Miss MacDonald is the first of the new group of beauties assembled each year by the producer to win a place as a candidate for future feature honors. She is the winner of several beauty contests and went to Los Angeles from Boston about a year ago.

Monte Blue’s Next Will Be “White Chief”
Monte Blue’s next picture for Warner Brothers will be “The White Chief,” an historical epic of early-day America. Production work will start as soon as “Hogan’s Alley” is completed, which will be in the very near future. Erle Kenton is to direct “The White Chief” from the scenario by Will Lambert.

Mike Donlin in Cast of “The Primrose Path”
Mike Donlin, once a baseball player as a member of the New York Giants team, has been assigned an important role in “The Primrose Path,” an Arthur F. Beck production which will be released by Arrow. Since his baseball days Donlin has been seen frequently on the legitimate stage and in pictures.

M-G-M Production Units Busy
Eight Companies Working at Culver City; Many New Pictures About to Be Started

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio is to work at full capacity. With eight units now filming features in the Culver City plant, several recently completed pictures being edited, and a number of new productions about to start, the high peak of summer production is being reached by the organization.

Among the pictures now in work is “Lights of Old Broadway,” an adaptation of “Merry Wives of Gotham,” in which Marion Davies is to be starred. The work is being adapted from the stage play under the direction of Monta Bell. Conrad Nagel is playing opposite Miss Davies.

Mae Murray is appearing in “The Masked Bride,” Robert Z. Leonard is directing Charlie Ray and Pauline Starke in “A Little Bit of Broadway” and John M. Stahl is directing an all star cast in “Memory Lane,” adapted by Benjamin Glazer from Stahl’s original story. This picture is to be released by First National.

Construction work on the gigantic Cirkus of Antioch, set for “Ben-Hur,” is being rushed and Director Fred Niblo will film the chariot race sequence next month.

King Vidor’s “The Big Parade,” is almost ready for editing and titling as are William Wellman’s “I’ll Tell the World,” and Hobart Henley’s “An Exchange of Wives.” The following have been almost completely cut: Edmund Goulding’s “Sun-Up,” Tod Browning’s “The Mystic,” Christy Cabanne’s “The Midshipman,” starring Ramon Novarro, and Victor Seastrom’s “The Tower of Lies,” starring Lon Cheney and Norma Shearer.

Edmund Goulding is beginning to cast for “Sally, Irene and Mary” and King Vidor is preparing for rehearsal of Lillian Gish’s first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle, “La Boheme,” Christy Cabanne has been given his script of “Dance Madness” and the continuity of Director Benjamin Christenson’s “The Light Eternal” will be ready this week.

Director Al Raboch will receive his continuity of Rex Beach’s “The Auction Block” within the next few days and continuity is in preparation of “Paris,” the production which will feature ballets and costumes created by Erle. This picture probably will be directed by Robert Z. Leonard.

THE CHECK-UP
Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big." The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%, one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Cartwright’s Campaign on “Lost—A Wife” Run

A week prior to opening of “Lost A Wife” at the Rialto, Chattanooga, Manager J. L. Cartwright launched a teaser campaign in the newspapers, the ads attracting a world of attention.

Beautiful window displays played an important role in the campaign. One with a well-known department store featured colorful silks with two Japanese parasols. Stills and photos from the picture, with a cutout of Adolph Menjou and Greta Nissen, were artistically arranged about the display.

Another department store had an attractive window display of shoes with cutouts and stills from the photoplay and a large framed card announcing the title, east, theatre and play dates. Both stores being located in the heart of the business section, created a lot of favorable comment.

An attractive lobby display was arranged, composed of a six sheet cutout of the two stars and two specially worded one sheets. Running across back of lobby was a huge banner announcing the title, east and producers. A good selling lobby was the result.

In addition to the usual newspaper and bill posting, a huge street banner worded “Lost A Wife—She can be found at the Rialto Mon. Tues. Wed.” was placed in front of the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital. This building is located in a section of town where traffic is very heavy and the banner forced itself upon everyone’s attention.

“Smouldering Fires” Aided by Door-Knob Hanger

This message greeted the townspeople of Sandusky, Ohio, when they opened their front doors on a recent morning to bring in the morning paper. It was in the shape of a door-knob hanger printed on both sides in red and got across its message on the feature in no uncertain style.

When “The White Monkey” (First Nat’) played the Fifth Avenue theatre in Nashville, this window tie-up was arranged for.

“Zander” Theatre Party is Given for Orphans

A theatre party for orphans of the town, sponsored by the Sharon (Pa.) News Telegraph, and held at the instigation of Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn expoter, recently achieved front page space in connection with the showing of “Zander the Great,” at the local Columbia theatre. Pyle exploited the picture further by running a Marion Davies Title Writing contest which also achieved front page space.

The first prize was six free tickets to see any attraction at the Columbia, the second prize four tickets, the third prize two tickets and the next fifteen best received one ticket each. A cross word puzzle contest helped popularize the showing also, as did a slide and a triler. The town was well posted in addition.

Strong Civic Angle Given “Air Mail” Campaign

The campaign by G. H. Poster, manager of the Marion theatre, Marion, Ohio, and William H. Wright, Paramount exploiter for “The Air Mail” is a working good example of what can be accomplished by tying in with a civic campaign.

The Marion Star, with the local Kiwanis Club, was sponsoring the visit to Marion of Lieut. Jack Harding, one of the world flight aviators, who was to give a lecture illustrated with moving pictures at the auditorium of the paper’s new building. Stories began running daily about a month before his arrival.

About three weeks before the day set for his talk, the Star announced a plane building contest for boys. Wright happened to see the story and wrote the exhibitor suggesting that he tie it up with “The Air Mail,” which he was to play the week after the visit. He suggested free tickets for every boy who entered and a year’s pass for the winner and a six months’ pass for second prize, these to be in addition to the prizes the Star already had announced. In return for the exhibition was to be allowed to place ad sales material on the show in the final exhibit of the planes. When “The Air Mail” played the town, the planes were to be carried around town as a ballyhoo by their makers.

All this went through exactly as he suggested, and although there were not over twenty-five entrants in the contest, the publicity gained from the tie-up was well worth while.

The appearance of the aviator assumed civic proportions before it was over, with the paper and the Kiwanis plugging it hard, and city officials and the mayor designating the day of their arrival “World Flight Day.” Moreover, the speaker proved distant kin to the late Warren Harding, who is venerated there with something of a feeling akin to that accorded a saint, and that all helped the interest in aviation and “The Air Mail.”
Window Displays Feature “Proud Flesh” Drive

Six elaborate window displays were a feature of a campaign recently put over on “Proud Flesh” at the Cameraphone theatre in East Liberty, Pa. These displays featured clothing, hardware, musical instruments, shoes, ladies garments and flowers.

Free tickets were awarded by the town’s leading shoe store to all ladies purchasing shoes during the showing, while similar awards were offered by the best florist of the city to all brides purchasing their wedding flowers there during the week.

“Chickie” Given Valuable Tie-up in Cleveland

M. A. Malaney, manager of publicity for Loew’s Ohio Theatres, Inc., got much valuable newspaper publicity for the showing of “Chickie” at the Stillman theatre, through a tie-up with the Cleveland Press which had formerly published “Chickie” serially and is now serializing “The Sequel to Chickie.”

Malaney arranged for the Cleveland Press to print the opinions of ten Cleveland flappers of Chickie, the heroine of the picture “Chickie” which was screened at a private showing in the Stillman theatre in advance of its engagement there. The question asked was “Does Chickie come up to your idea of modern girl?” Six of the ten answered yes, and four, no. Their replies and their reasons for the same were published on the front page of the Cleveland Press in its issue of Saturday, June 3rd, under a three column top head. Portraits of three of the girls answering the question were printed with the story.

On the back page, where “The Sequel to Chickie” is running, was a box headed “Chickie in Movies Here.” The box called attention to the serialization of “Chickie” and its sequel in the Cleveland Press and to the fact that the motion picture made from “Chickie” was starting at the Stillman theatre the following day. The instalment of “The Sequel to Chickie” published that day contained a double-column still from the picture, “Chickie.” On an inner page of the same issue was a three column portrait of Dorothy Mackaill with the announcement of the showing of the film at the Stillman. A two inch streamer ad clear across the page was used in the same issue.

Window Teaser an Unexpected “Night Club” Boost

Without trying to get the professional interest of the local police authorities, Ed. Coreoran, Paramount exploiter, drew the attention of the entire city of Appleton, Wis., to “The Night Club.” Together with the manager of Fischer’s theatre he hired the window in an empty store and announced with a big sign that it would open as a “Night Club.” As soon as the sign had been up a few hours a policeman was posted in front of the store to prevent any furniture from being moved in. Several ministers spoke about Night Clubs, and the whole town was agitated. This was an unexpected turn of affairs, and Coreoran capitalized on it by leaving the sign up for several days before posting a new one which read:

“There is no prohibition against laughter.”

“Owing to the enormous crowds who wish to see ‘The Night Club’ with Raymond Griffith, King of Comedians, the show will open at Fischer’s theatre.”

This sign was posted several days before opening. On the day the picture opened, practically the same copy was used in a four column ad about six inches deep which was illustrated with press-sheet cuts. The copy was adapted from the press-sheet.

Star Identification Stunt Exploits “Zander” Run

An exceptional Movie Star Identity contest recently put over a showing of “Zander the Great,” at the Metropolitan theatre in Morgantown, W. Va. In this instance Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, ran a scene cut from the picture with several chereters on it, and offered tree tickets as prizes for subscribers of the Morgantown Post was correctly guessed the names of the players.

An energetic press campaign, lavish posting of sheets of various sizes, a special lobby display and the distribution of 3,500 heralds completed this campaign.

Effective comedy material displayed in connection with the engagement of “The Navigator” (Metro-Goldwyn) at the American theatre, Evansville, Ind., not long ago.
Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

Names of the theatre owners are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

pathe filming "green archer" new serial picture started at the long island studio. chester bennet directing a new serial production based on edgar wallace's novel "the green archer" has been started for the pathe organization at the long island studio, astoria, l. l. under the direction of chester bennet. allene ray and walter miller will be starred at the head of a cast which includes burr mcintosh, stephen grattan, frank lackteen and earl b. powell, a noted archery expert. the picture will be filmed in ten episodes of two reels each.

pathe announces that the new serial is being made on a preventative scale, the story calling for a large number of massive interior settings as well as a great many picturesque locations. "the green archer" is scheduled to follow "wild west" on pathe's serial program.

the stars of the picture play the leading roles in "play ball," the current pathe episode picture, and won a large following among the serial fans in previous productions offered by this company. chester bennet, selected to direct the film made his debut as a serial director with "play ball," a work which established his reputation in this field.

the initial exterior scenes are being made at storm king mountain and at the sound view golf and country club, where the new game of archery-golf will be played before the camera.

"the green archer," which has had a successful career as a novel, was adapted by a specialist who has written the scripts for several successful pathe serials.

the cast assembled to enact the characters of the story is regarded by pathe officials as the strongest in popular names and screen ability ever brought together in a serial. several of the players who will support miss ray and mr. miller have appeared prominently in features and serials—both. frank lackteen, polite villain of many serials, again joins the pathe ranks, and wally oettel, who scored as the comedy lead in "play ball" will continue his work along these lines in the new play. burr mcintosh and stephen grattan are veterans of stage and screen with many notable performances to their credit.

to insure the accuracy of the archery action in the new film earl b. powell has been engaged. he is known as an expert in the use of the bow and arrow and also as an instructor in the sport, having served in that capacity for douglas fairbanks during the filming of "robin hood," and supervised the bowman in Cecil B. DeMille's "the ten commandments."

marien andre a member of christie stock company
marien andre, a blonde beauty who deserted the stage for the screen recently, has been added to the stock company of the christie comedy organization. miss andre visited los angeles with "the passing show," and there left the footlights for the studio. she was born in st. petersburg, of russian-french parentage. her debut with christie will be in a bobby vernon comedy now being filmed for educational release.
Edith Roberts Leading Lady in "Heir-Loons"

Edith Roberts, who plays the leading feminine role in "Heir-Loons," the feature comedy which Spitzer-Jones is producing for Pathé release, will make her fourth appearance opposite Wallace MacDonald on the screen in that picture, for MacDonald has the heroic part in "Heir-Loons." The first association of these two popular players in pictures was in "Thy Name is Woman."

Others who will be seen in "Heir-Loons" are Ralph Lewis, Stuart Holmes, Suitz Edwards, Sam de Grasse, Theodore Loretz, Martha Maltox, Cecille Evans, Emily Gertie, Billy Eugene, Frank Capua, Max Asher and Harry McCoy.

Universal Begins New Series of "Sweet-Sixteen" Films

A new series of "Sweet Sixteen" Comedies has gone into production at Universal City under the direction of Zion Myers. They will feature Arthur Lake and Eddie Clayton. Scott Darling. Universal's new comedy supervisor will work with Myers on the series.

7 Educational Units Working

New Plant in Los Angeles the Scene of Great Activity in Comedy Making

The Educational Studio in Los Angeles now houses seven comedy units, producing pictures under the supervision of Jack White for the enlarged schedule of short subjects which Educational will offer this year.

The plant has been greatly enlarged since it was taken over several months ago by Educational and the added facilities for photeplay production are now being utilized to their full capacity by the Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Mermaid, Juvenile and other units at work there.

Lloyd Hamilton has started work on his first production under the direction of William Goodrich.

Lige Conly's Mermaid Company, under the direction of Norman Taurog, has also taken advantage of the new equipment and is working in a set which is a replica of one of the large roller skating rinks of Los Angeles. With him again this year is Estelle Bradley, his leading lady of last year, Stanley Blystone and Babe London are also in the cast.

Stephen Roberts is directing At St. John in a Mermaid Comedy with Virginia Vance as his leading lady. Lupino Lane is starting on his second picture of the series and will shortly go to a desert location where the exterior scenes of an African sequence will be filmed. Jess Robbins is directing.

The Juvenile Company is hard at work under the direction of Arvid Gillstrom. The cast is composed of youngsters picked from the applications which followed an advertising campaign for children, carried through the want ad columns of the daily newspapers and by radio broadcasting.

New Fox Short Films Launched

1925-26 Program of "Featurettes" Opened With Release of New "Van Biber" Story

The ambitious short subject program announced by Fox for this season has been launched, the opening being inaugurated with the release of a new "Van Biber" play and the initial production in the "Helen and Warren" series based on the Mabel Herbert Urner newspaper feature stories.

The first of the new "Van Biber" plays is titled "The Big Game Hunter." It was directed by Robert Kerr with Earle Foxe in the same role which he created on the screen last season in the Richard Harding Davis tales. Florence Gilbert is seen as the leading lady, and other important roles fall to Freeman Wood, Frank Beal and Lynn Cowan. The release date of "The Big Game Hunter" is August 16.

"A Business Engagement" is the title of the first of the "Helen and Warren" series. It is acted by Hallam Cooley as Warren, Kathryn pajur and Helen and Diana Miller, Bix Davidson, Hank Mann, Fred Kelsey and Babe Lawrence in other prominent roles.

Red Seal Enlarges Quarters

Announce Ninety-Five Subjects for 1925-26 Coincident With Removal to 729 Seventh Ave.

Red Seal Pictures Corporation announces, coincident with the list of ninety-five subjects for 1925-26, the removal of their headquarters and New York exchange. The removal to the new offices has been made necessary according to Edwin Miles Fadman, president of the company, by the fact that the offices at 1500 Broadway could no longer accommodate the additional sales and publicity staff which he has been compelled to employ.

Of the ninety-five subjects, only one, "Evolution," is a feature, being five reels in length. This film, a Kinet-o-Urban Production, edited by Max Fleischer, and made under the scientific supervision of Edward J. Foyle of the American Museum of Natural History, has already been put on the screen at the Rialto, Rivoli and Loew houses in New York, in Frank Newman's Rialto, Los Angeles, and other important towns where it was pre-released.

The other subjects, all featurettes, include thirteen "Out-of-the-Inkwell" Cartoon comedies with Ko-Ko, the famous clown created by Max Fleischer; thirteen "Marvels of Motion," in which Fleischer uses the famous "Novagraph" process to suspend animation and trace the movement of the figures on the screen; thirteen other creations of Fleischer, "Ko-Ko Song C-Tunes," in which the clown leads the audience to sing old favorites, are also on the program. An 18-piece orchestra goes with each of the "Car-Tunes."

The balance of the program thus far announced includes thirteen "Gems of the Screen," twenty-six "Animated Hair Cartoons," a series drawn by Marens, the famous cartoonist of the New York Times; "Thru Three Reigns," a two-reel historical film covering the reigns of Queen Victoria, King Edward and King George, in which special scenes are held on the screen by the Novagraph process; "Flirting with Death," a two-reel ice-thriller laid 15,000 ft. high in the Swiss mountains; and "The Silver Art," a two-reel skidding special.

"Help! Police!" First of Billy West Series

"Help! Police!" is the title selected for the first of a series of four five-reel feature comedies in which Billy West will be starred on the Rayart Program. The pictures will be produced by West Brothers Productions under the direction of Grover Jones. Those who will appear with the comedian in the first picture are Virginia Pearson, Lionel Belmore, Kathleen Myers and others.

The West company will also produce a series of two-reel comedies starring Gloria Joy.

"Cap," Clever Canine, to Be Featured by Sennett

"Cap," grandson of "Teddy" the famous dog actor seen in Sennett's comedies of several years ago, is following in his grand-dad's footsteps and will have a career on the screen. The producer has signed "Can" to appear in comedies he will make for Pathé, his first assignment being to an important part in the series of domestic comedies which Sennett is producing with Raymond McKee and Ruth Hiatt in the leading parts.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

“Sweet Marie” (Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

This Fox Imperial Comedy has much in its favor. In consequence of the presence in the cast of the winsome Judy King, the captivating screen beauty of Sid Smith, and several highly amusing incidents to fill out a good slapstick comedy plot, the picture is one that will provoke laughter and all sorts of slapstick comedy. There is little new stuff in it. It was designed for laughs and will probably get them, though not as many as some of the other Vernon pictures that have gone before.

Bobby is a victim of circumstances in this one. Hastily turning a corner he bumps into a stranger and both go down. When Bobby comes up he bears with him a real old-fashioned way of a watch, which is highly prized by the owner. A trio of Anarchists are very much desirous of possessing this watch and because of that this story develops.

Bobby encounters the girl whose face appears in the back of the watch. He tries to make a man out of her but fortune turns it to her and in one of the most outlandish efforts wrecks a department store into which he has followed her. He eventually succeeds in his mission, but only after a wildly hilarious chase in which many are involved and all suffer in the process of some of the wildest imaginable slapstick comedy.

“Watch Out” (Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

This is a typical Bobby Vernon vehicle, one that is little different from and all sorts of slapstick comedy. There is little new stuff in it. It was designed for laughs and will probably get them, though not as many as some of the other Vernon pictures that have gone before.

“The Story”—Buster and Mary Jane start to school on their scooters, accompanied by Tige. They are delayed enroute and as usual arrive late, for which they are taken exception to the hick given by Bobby and attack the school teacher. A boy in an adjacent seat releases some real limburger cheese, for which Bobby is blamed. The cheese is thrown out, but rescued by Tige amid the general furor of the schoolroom.

Classification—A kid comedy of action and an abundance of good comedy.

Summary—This is a real lively comedy, well directed and well acted. Buster cuts the same capers that for years have characterized the Our Gang cartoons. The series is an exceptionally popular one if the same standard is maintained throughout.

“The Cold Turkey” (Pathé—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

A her second starring vehicle Alice Day has “The Cold Turkey,” a Bennett comedy directed by Eddie Cline. It proves a greater handicap than the golf story which preceded it and the thought occurs that Alice will have little chance of getting anywhere if the stories continue so utterly dull, dumb and dolorous. Just what “Cold Turkey” is all about we cannot tell. Something on the order of the new fairy fable espoused in the opening scene when a melodramatic plot, implicating an intrigu between the brine of eight weeks and her husband’s employer, is planted. But soon the affair resolves itself into a series of episodes concerned mostly with some action, all in very much out of intoxicating soup, served by the bride to her mother and her two brothers-in-law.

“The Story”—A bride and her husband prepare to celebrate. The groom’s two roughneck brothers are on the scene and then the girl’s mother arrives, bringing a parrot. By accident some alcohol spills into the soup and later when the parrot gets inside the cooked turkey and makes it trot about there is much excitement. As the ladies and various sorts of tumbles and scrambles continue throughout the night. Events make the husband suspect his wife of a flirtation with his employer, but this is explained away when the husband finds that he is receiving an increase in salary and a new contract, a secret which the wife and the employer have been keeping up to now. As a surprise.

Summary—A jumble of episodes concerned mostly with the actions of some people who become involved through an accident in the part of the cook. It is slow-footed, lacks humor and much of it is in bad taste.

“A Good Program Must Have Novelties”
“Butter Fingers”  (Pathé—Two Reels)

The Cast—Billy Bevan, Andy Craig, Ruth Taylor, Kewpie Morgan, Madeline Hurlock. The Story—Billy is the star pitcher of the hometown team and, although he suffers a series of disappointing defeats throughout the season, he manages to develop a large following of devoted fans. However, Billy is convinced that he needs to improve his pitching technique, so he decides to seek advice from a professional pitcher. The professional pitcher offers Billy some valuable tips, and Billy applies them to his own game. Throughout the season, Billy continues to win games and become an even more popular pitcher. The film is a charming and enjoyable story that captures the spirit of small-town baseball and the determination it takes to succeed in the sport.

My Own Carolina  (Fox—One Reel)

The Fox Company is off on the right foot with the new series of “Van Bibber” stories, adaptations of the works of Richard Harding Davis. The series is a success, and even the most critical analyses will not discover flaws beneath the rippling surface of merit and humor. “Van Bibber” is a character that is distinctly worth while. There is that play of stirring human drama and bubbling humor which flavor the stories of Henry. His mastery of the short story technique has been preserved in this excellent screen adaptation. Beatrice Van must be complimented for her excellent treatment and scenario. The picture should have a wide appeal. It is interesting and it amuses the spectator, while the action holds the interest unfailingly and without a falter from the opening scene to the happy and snappy finish. These characters are true to life and the ones who win your sympathy finally triumph just as you would have them. In a word, Van Bibber is the kind of laughter that carries your money. Just how that sort of performance, particularly when it has been handed with such expert skill, can fail be- cause of rank and flavor of the picture fans, we cannot figure out.”

Sun Up
(Metro-Goldwyn—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

"SUN UP" translated into terms of celluloid is not so convincing as it was upon the stage, chiefly because there's only enough material to carry it through three reels. The result is it has been padded out with romantic episodes—and several patriotic flourishes which give it a different ending than what the play revealed. It revolves around a grim old woman, addicted to smoking a corn-cob pipe. She is vengeful toward the Turner breed for killing her "pap" and her husband. She is also "ain' the govt'ment, as she puts it.

THEME. Melodrama of Carolina feudists which tells of how a son changes his vengeful mother with his spirit of forgiveness and sacrifice.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Miss LaVerne's graphic study of the grim old woman of the hills. The scene when the boy bids goodbye to the girl. The scene when the deserter finds refuge in the old woman's cabin.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as adaptation of successful play which is faithfully adapted in its central plot and characters.

SUMMARY. This is made into a rather grim study of life among the "hill-billies." It isn't so convincing as the play because of its simple plot being elaborated with incident not written into the original.

THE CAST
The Widow Cagle………………………………………. Lucille La Verne
Emmy Todd……………………………………………….. Pauline Starke
Rufe Cagle…………………………………………………. Conrad Nagel
Sheriff Weeks……………………………………………. Sam De Grasse
Stranger…………………………………………………. George K. Arthur

Adapted by Edmund Goulding and Arthur Stutter from the play by Lula Vollmer. Directed by Edmund Goulding.

SYNOPSIS. The Widow Cagle is against law and government and holds a terrific hatred for the Zeb Turner clan—Zeb himself having killed her father and husband. When the United States enters the Great War her son, Rufe, enlists. He wanted to get away because he believed neighbor Todd's girl, Emmy, didn't love him. While he is absent the Widow shelters a young deserter—her reason being her hatred for the government. She doesn't know that he is a Turner until her boy returns. She commands Rufe, to kill him, but the son has changed his mountainer watchword—"a life for a life." But he does exact vengeance against the sheriff for insulting Emmy. In the end he makes over his mother to respect human life—and brings love into her heart in the bargain.

"Sun Up" PRESS NOTICE
Next — the — theatre will present "Sun Up," a rugged and picturesque melodrama of life among the Hill Billies of Carolina. It is a powerful picture of burning hatreds and strong love. You won't find vengeful, who is against any form of law and government. She commands his son to kill any member of the Turner clan. But the boy goes to war and returns with different ideas. How he changes his mother, wins the girl, meets out punishment to the man who would dishonor her—becomes an officer of the law provide the plot and the highlights of this picture, adapted from the successful play. It is finely acted by players who fit right into their characterizations.

CATCH LINES
When you see "Sun Up" at the —— theatre next —— you will be royally entertained. It is a graphic picture of mountainers and feudists in the Carolina hills. Don't miss it.

Fort Frayne
(Davis Distributing Division—5000 Feet)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

HERE'S a good bet for the small town exhibitor, both Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber having a good following among the patrons of these houses. This feature also possesses the added advantage of a story written by General Charles Young, a widely read author.

Some of the earlier scenes could be improved if they retard the action of the story, for example the scene showing Mrs. Farrar brooding over her son's picture. Outside of this and one or two other instances the action is kept at a fast pace. There are a number of good fight scenes and enough gun play to satisfy the most ardent devotees of this type of story.

THEME. Concerns efforts of band of soldiers to keep Indians in check; also mystery angle of missing son, supposedly dead, who turns up and causes all sorts of trouble until he is killed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The Indian uprising which calls the garrison away and the shooting of the Colonel. The mystery element concerning the "dead" son who crops up as the villain.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the featured players, Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber; also the author of the story whose works have been widely read.

DRAWING POWER. Should prove a good drawing card in small towns. Will please the followers of the form of feature.

SUMMARY. Has a good story and the production is up to standard.

THE CAST
Capt. Malcolm Teale…………………………………….. Ben Wilson
Helen Farrar…………………………………………………. Neva Gerber
Mrs. Daunton…………………………………………………. Ruth Royce
Col. John Farrar…………………………………………… Bill Milton
Lafe McKee

SYNOPSIS. Captain Teale, stationed at an outlawing army post is in love with Helen Farrar, daughter of the Colonel of the troop which is continually engaged in fighting the Indians. During a skirmish the Colonel is mortally wounded and confides in Teale that his son, thought dead by the Colonel's wife, is in reality a fugitive. After the Colonel's death, his wife engages a companion, who has married the son. Husband and wife meet at the post he having joined as a recruit. A series of unfortunate co-incidences involving Captain Teale, the Colonel's son and the son's wife, cause strained relations between Teale and the Colonel's daughter, but the trouble is straightened and all ends happily.

Fort Frayne (Davis Dist. Div.) PRESS NOTICE
There's a good bet on an unusually excellent story of early frontier life on the screen of the theatre, for when "Fort Frayne," starring the ever popular Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber is shown. The picture has been fashioned for the entertainment for the entire family and Ben Wilson fairly outdoes his previous efforts. It is a tale of the early days on the border when the Indians, as yet unaccustomed to the advance of the white man, were continually on the war path in an effort to stem the flow of white people to their favorite hunting grounds. In addition to the main plot of the story, a mystery element is introduced which concerns the son of the Colonel of the troop, who, though reported dead, is very much alive and causing trouble.

CATCH LINES
An extra thrill of the heart is felt in the scene where the heroine's heart breaks because of lover's supposed infidelity, bids him leave her forever.
The Lucky Horseshoe
(Fox—5000 Feet)
(Reviewed by Paul Yawitz)

SINCE the first day that Tom Mix found himself featured in pictures, reviewers have labelled each of his successive efforts as his best, and here is another reviewer who goes on record with the statement that "The Lucky Horseshoe" is the ultimate in Mixian entertainment. J. G. Blystone has directed the latest finished product of his long career of mixing himself at once a master of the technique of humorous detail and flashing action.

THEME. Comedy-drama running from the modern West to the Don Juan period in Spain.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The superb action. The excellent selection of locale. The massive settings in the period scenes. The beauty of the women. The dancing of Ann Pennington.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. This picture will please every type of audience and this fact should be announced to those whose mental classification of the star is that of a rough-riding western cowboy.

DRAWING POWER. There isn't a theatre in the world that will not show a profit on this production.

SUMMARY. "The Lucky Horseshoe is one of the most romantic and appealing motion pictures which have come from the Fox factories in many seasons.

THE CAST

Rand Foster................. Tom Mix
Elvira Hunt................. Billie Dove
Denman.................. Malcolm Waite
Mack.................. J. Farrell MacDonald
Aunt Ruth.......... Clarissa Selwynne
Dancer.............. Ann Pennington

SYNOPSIS. Despite her protestations based on love for Rand Foster, foreman of the ranch left her at the death of her father, Elvira Hunt is hustled off by Aunt Ruth on a tour of European capitals. Her absence is over a period of two years during which she is wooed by a foreigner of alleged distinction, Denman by name. At home Rand patiently awaits her return and has in the meantime placed the ranch on a paying basis. Much to his surprise he finds Denman accompanying Elvira on her return and the wedding announced for the following week. Rand is despondent but is urged by Mack, his chief assistant, to take the lady by force. Mack tells him the story of Don Juan and how that romantic lover took the woman he loved regardless of circumstance and conditions. Denman then orders his servants to kidnap Rand and hold him until the wedding ceremony is over. In the end the cowboy is clubbed and bound and during his unconscious moments dreams that he is Don Juan in the court days of Barcelona. The dream sequence is highly interesting, but soon he awakes to the realization he must act quickly or he will have lost Elvira. Freeing himself with a knife he rides to the ranch-house in time to expose Denman and claim the bride for his own.

"The Lucky Horseshoe" (Fox)
PRESS NOTICE
"The Lucky Horseshoe" which comes to the — Theatre next — presents the versatile Tom Mix in one of his most exhilarating roles of his screen career. The action of the story, which is by Robert Lord and first appeared in magazine form, carries the Fox star from the wilds of the Arizona ranchland to the romantic atmosphere of Barcelona.

An unusually excellent cast was selected by Director J. G. Blystone for the support of Mix. It includes such notables as Ann Pennington, whose dancing in the Ziegfeld Follies has motivated New York audiences for several seasons; Billie Dove also remembered for her Broadway appearances in the Follies; J. Farrell MacDonald, who came into his own with his comedy work in "The Iron Horse," Malcolm Waite, Clarissa Selwynne, and J. Gunnis Davis.

CATCH LINES
A brilliant comedy-drama in which Tom Mix scores another striking success.

Where Was I?
(Universal-Jewel—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHILE this farce-comedy does not measure up to the two previous pictures starring Reginald Denny—namely, "Oh, Doctor," and "I'll Show You the Town," it, nevertheless, carries a sufficient quota of laughs. For one thing it hasn't enough plot to keep it going, so the director is forced to repeat the gags, most of which can be catalogued as broad farce.

THEME. Farce-comedy revolving around effort of youth to disprove the declaration of adventurists that he is married to her. The complications get him into all kinds of trouble before he proves himself a bachelor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The moment that adventurists enters life of hero and proceeds to embarrass him. The ride in the taxi. The comedy which Chester Conklin pulls out. The scenes in youth's home. The subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Now that Denny is over you won't have any trouble stimulating patronage. Play him up as one of the best light comedians of the screen. Bill picture as a lively farce carrying as many laughs as "I'll Show You the Town."

DRAWING POWER. Denny's name is widely known and he has become immensely popular. So give him prominent display. The title also has magnetic qualities.

SUMMARY. This Denny picture is not up to the caliper of his two previous efforts, though it carries a large supply of laughs. It is broad farce, obviously developed—and it is "gagged up" considerably.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. Young bachelor is the "go-getter" of his business. He arranges his partners with his romantic proclivities. The youth has become engaged to the daughter of a business rival when a girl enters his office and declares herself as his wife. He tries to disprove her statement by trying to find out where he was the night he was supposed to have married her. So accompanied by his valet he goes on a wild goose chase to locate the man who could provide the necessary information. The young bachelor gets in deep trouble—and discovers that he has stolen a huge sum of money. The adventurists camps out in his home—and his fiancee calls on him. But when he is about to be arrested the truth reveals her true identity and saves him from being "framed." It was all a put-up job by the fiancee's father to break up his romance.

"Where Was I?" PRESS NOTICE
"Where Was I?" is the title of the new Reginald Denny picture which comes to the — theatre on next —. It is a hilarious farce-comedy which gives this splendid young comedian another opportunity to display his abundant talent. Here he is placed in one embarrassing situation after another. There doesn't seem to be any escape for him. Then comes a startling climax which clears away the complications. The picture contains some high-explosive laughs—is capital staged and played with precision by a company that includes Pauline Garon, Marlon Nixon and Chester Conklin.

CATCH LINES
See Reginald Denny, the star who made "I'll Show You the Town," such a delightful picture in his newest release "Where Was I?"—a picture of a bachelor who wants to be married, but is confronted with the fact that he is already a husband. The popular star of "Oh, Doctor," and "I'll Show You the Town," is back on the screen of the — theatre.
Peacock Feathers
(Universal—6747 Feet)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

n entertaining picture is this featuring Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis, which was directed by Svend Gade. It is a meritorious production both from the acting angle as well as the production given it; the introductory titles being shining examples of artistic efficiency and this is followed throughout the reels. While the story is somewhat after the setting of the principals more than redeems it from the commonplace and, due to a smooth continuity and the fast tempo, it will interest the spectator from start to finish.

The director has lost no time in plating his characters and in getting his story started with the result that the spectator's interest is captured from the beginning and held while the actors 'do their stuff.'

THEME. Comedy drama of luxury loving young girl who marries poor man and suffers the consequences for a time but trouble is straightened out and they live happily ever after.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The beautiful introductory art titles. The fireworks display. The acting of Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis. The scene in which the newly married couple view their 'castle' for the first time. The scenes at the dinner table in the cabin.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. There are any amount of fashion store tie-ups to be made with this title as the basis.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw well in any locality. Featured players are popular with the fans.

SUMMARY. Direction, acting and mounting leave nothing to be desired. It has a well told if somewhat familiar story and holds the interest.

THE CAST

Mimi Le Brun.............. Jacqueline Logan
Jerry Chandler........... Cullen Landis
Uncle George............. George Fawcett
Rev. Dr. Chandler........ Emmett King
Lionel Clark.............. Prince Youcha

SYNOPSIS. Mimi Le Brun is introduced to Jerry Chandler by her cousin while on a trip to her home town and invites him to visit her. He does so and falls in love with her but she tells him it is impossible that they marry as he is poor and she is a girl, also that she is engaged to a wealthy man whom she does not care for. Jerry's uncle dies and leaves him a ranch of which he has spoken of as a castle and Jerry, believing this to be the truth persuades Mimi to elope. They are disillusioned when they view the shack but after much discontent on the part of Mimi she finally accepts the situation. Mimi's rejected suitor turns up and she is about to run away with him but goes to Jerry, who has met with an accident, and they go into the final clinch.

Peacock Feathers (Universal)
PRESS NOTICE

Lovely Jacqueline Logan and the many Cullen Landis score a big hit in "Peacock Feathers" which graces the screen of the Universal theatre on August 29, 1925. It is a colorful, artistically mounted story of the luxury loving, but poor, girl who, although engaged to a wealthy man, elopes with a man she loves though his legacy turns out to be a myth. A picture with some wonderful artistic settings and a story that tugs at the heart strings from start to finish. Cullen Landis plays the role of the poor but honest young man who loves and almost loses the daughter of an aristocratic but impoverished family. Jacqueline Logan portrays the part of the girl.

CATCH LINES

She loved him but would have married the rich man for luxury—she discounted the results of a loveless marriage—could you? Though accustomed to wealthy surroundings she, nevertheless, done overals to help her husband—would you?

Winds of Chance
(Frank Lloyd-First Nat'l—10 Reels)
(Reviewed by L. C. Meen)

In "Winds of Chance," Frank Lloyd has evidently attempted to make a great epic of the gold rush, comparable in scope and handling to "The Sea Hawk," but he has largely been defeated by a story which fails, at least in screen form, to suggest any elements of greatness. The story is simply a plot of adventures interspersed by moments and melodrama, and the rush to the Klondike becomes a rather unimportant background to the development of the love affair.

Otherwise, there are many splendid moments in the picture, were they not swamped by the weight of nonessential sequences. Victor McLaglen and Viola Dana—and what trouble they both are!—contribute vivid and living portrayals, and easily walk away with the picture. Ben Lyon, a likeable and pleasing actor in suitable roles, is utterly unconvincing as the heavy. His Nick is more palpable and convincing as usual. Excellent work is done in smaller roles by Hobart Bosworth, Dorothy Sebastian, Claude Gillingwater, Charles Crockett, John T. Murray, Philo McCullough and others.

THEME. Melodrama of the gold rush to the Klondike, in which hero goes through stirring adventures and finds love amid the frozen wastes.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes of shooting the rapids with the barges. The scenes between McLaglen and Dana. The scene in which Rouletta is at the point of death.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up as a great Klondike epic by Rex Beach, directed by Frank Lloyd, the maker of "The Sea Hawk."

DRAWING POWER. The strong cast, plus the author and director, should make this draw well anywhere. Big enough for any house.

SUMMARY. Klondike melodrama, disappointing in certain respects but containing much fine material and some excellent acting. Well mounted and produced, on the whole.

THE CAST

Countess Courteau........ Anna Q. Nilsson
Pierrot de Rouletta........ Pierre Arthur
Ben Lyon.................. Ben Lyon
Rouletta Kirby............. Viola Dana
Sam Kirby.................. Hobart Bosworth
Poleon Doret.............. Victor McLaglen
Laure...................... Dorothy Sebastian

Adapted from Rex Beach's novel. Directed by Frank Lloyd.
SYNOPSIS. Hero comes to Klondike, finds gold rush 'Broke,' he carries packs for others. Becomes river pilot for Countess, and aided by French Canadian, takes boats over rapids safely. He and Countess are estranged. He becomes a refrigerator man. Framed up by men seeking revenge for earlier episode, and dance hall girl he has reneged, he is accused of theft and murder, but Countess and Frenchman save him. All ends happily.

Winds of Chance (1st Nat'l)
PRESS NOTICE

Bringing to the screen the thrilling events and human drama of the gold rush to the Klondike in '97, "Winds of Chance" will come to entertain patrons of the local theatre on August 29, 1925. It is the latest production by Frank Lloyd, who gave to the screen the unforgettable historic sea epic, "The Sea Hawk."

An orilliant cast of noted players will be seen in the melodrama of the Klondike, including Anna Q. Nilsson, Ben Lyon, Victor McLaglen, Viola Dana, Hobart Bosworth, Dorothy Sebastian, Claude Gillingwater, Philo McCullough, John T. Murray and others.

One of the outstanding thrills of the picture shows three barges being taken over by the treacherous rapids by the hero.

CATCH LINES

They come to the Klondike, this vast army of adventurers. They came to raid the bosoms of the lofty mountains, the beds of rushing streams, the deep hearts of the valleys. The thing that lured them was gold.
Havoc
(Rowland V. Lee Production-Fox—Nine Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

Here is a picture, which we honestly believe, will start a new vogue for features with a World War background. It has been predicted both here and abroad that such a series would be born soon. "Havoc" is the first to blaze the trial and it also sets a standard which will make others huddle to equal. The story has to do with social life in Merrie England during the war and with adventure and heroism along the lines in France. And both phases of the plot have been packed with incident, color, drama, human interest, pathos and heart appeal.

Theme. A drama of social life in London during the war with some fine sequences shot along the battle line in France. Depicting the havoc wrought in the lives of two men by an unscrupulous woman who played with love.

Production highlights. The characterizations contributed by O'Brien, McGrail and Miss Livingston. The sequence in which Dick returning with a love token from Dunton, is vamped by Violet.

Exploitation angles. Tie up with your local American Legion posts. Play up the names of O'Brien, Bellamy and others who have value.

Summary. Following the wave of plain, everyday pictures, it is a pleasure to see one that steps out of the rut and registers a wallop as does "Havoc."

Synopsis. Capt. Roddy Dunton and Lieut. Dick Chappell are both in love with Violet Deering, a society butterfly who trifles with men. Capt. Dunton becomes engaged to Violet. Dick takes his loss manfully. On leave from the front Dick delivers a letter from Dunton to Violet, who vamps Dick. Tessie, Dunton's sister, sees the two embrace. To save her face, Violet breaks her engagement to Dunton and gives Dick the job of announcing her to Dunton. The captain, angry, orders Dick to remain in a dangerous outpost. Dick, survives, but is blinded. Dunton, remorseful, shoots himself. Dick returns, denounces Violet for the havoc she has wrought and then weds Tessie.

Havoc (Fox)
Press Notice

Portraying the havoc wrought in the souls of men and women by the great war, "Havoc," a thrilling photoplay, comes to the little theatre on the 10th. It is not primarily a war picture, but a great drama of human hearts in their reaction to the brutal conflict. The plot deals with a woman and two men—the woman a beautiful young girl who cannot decide between the two. The war breaks out and when the two are about to leave she chooses one.

This results in a gripping and nearly tragic climax, but eventually the sun breaks through the clouds and the havoc of war is dispelled.

George O'Brien, Margaret Livingston, Madge Bellamy and Walter McGrail portray the principal roles.

Catch Lines

War wrought havoc in their souls—made beasts of men—and turned accepted standards upside down.

Dollar Down
(Reviewed by William Campbell)

Here is more propaganda than entertainment in this program picture. It is really a sermon on thrift and has to do with the adventures of a family who managed to save too much and are punished by too much luxury on the "dollar down" method of obtaining it. All looks dark when a child comes through with her savings at the bank and saves the day for the heroine, hero and a couple of families. The production smacks of film making of other days. The settings are "stagey" throughout and although there are a few good players in the cast their struggles to put over unconvincing roles fall flat.

Theme. A domestic drama in which the "dollar down" methods of one family almost bring on ruin when the thrifty methods of relatives prove a saving factor and keep the heroine from jail.

Production highlights. The scene in which the villain learns the tract on which the company has an option. The society reception to pay for which the girl is forced to pawn a ring not paid for.

Exploitation angles. Title offers chance to tie up with the many Dollar Days being held in the towns. Work with the schools on the thrift idea. Might offer prizes for the best essays on thrift.

Drawing power. Suitable for program houses that change their bills often, the small towns and the smaller community houses.

Summary. A program picture pure and simple which has little entertainment value, being more in the form of a lecture on the value of thrift and the dire consequences of the "dollar down" stuff.

Synopsis. Although Alec Craig has a good position as general manager of a manufacturing company, his wife and daughter have brought him close to ruin by their extravagance. Craig's daughter pawns a ring which is not paid for and Craig is on the edge of losing his job when the information on the company's options is leaked out and he is blamed. Ruth, the daughter, takes the blame and then takes Steele who framed the girl into divulging the information into the air so that he is unable to exercise his option. Craig gets his job back and a niece saves the day when she supplies her savings to satisfy the pawnbroker who has the ring.

Dollar Down (Truaut)
Press Notice

The dangers of extravagance and too much buying on credit, "a dollar down and a dollar when they catch you." provides the theme of the feature attraction at the little theatre on the 10th entitled "Dollar Down."

As suggested by the title, the story deals with a young married couple who proceed to buy all manner of expensive merchandise on the Dollar Down plan, until their financial resources are stretched to the breaking point.

An unusually strong cast portrays the principal roles, including Ruth Roland, John De Witt, favorite, Henry B. Walthall, the sterling character actor, Roscoe Karns and Claire MacDowell. Tod Browning directing.

Catch Lines

Do you buy everything on the Dollar Down plan? Are you safeguarding against "biting off more than you can chew?"

They bought everything on credit—and then the credit collapsed. Ruth faced them, when a little child—but see the picture.
The Wheel
(Victor Schertzinger Production-Fox—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

Victor Schertzinger has transplanted John Golden's stage play by Winchell Smith to the screen in an eminently satisfactory manner. Edfrid Bingham is to be commended on the scenario and its small part of the credit for the success of the picture should go to Montague Glass, who has written subtitles that are short, crisp and packed with humor when comedy situations give opportunity for its inimitable work.

THEME. A modern society drama of temptation and fast life in which “the wheel” comes close to ruining a scion of wealth, who is saved by his young wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fight between Ford and Hamilton in the cabaret. The scene in which the hero gambles the check given him for an auto he has sold for his employers.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES.—Play up the fact that this is a picturization of the big John Golden-Winchell Smith stage success. Boost the names of the stars.

DRAWING POWER. The best houses should do business with this one backed by such names as Golden, Winchell Smith, Montague Glass, Schertzinger and the stars.

SUMMARY. An entertaining screen version of one of the Broadway stage hits which has been made into a picture packed with pep, excellent character portrayals, good direction, an interest-holding plot, a powerful climax and through it all, a web of subtle humor.

Father objecting, he leaves home. Kate and Ted wed. Edward Baker, proprietor of gambling house, covets Kate, decides to get Ted. He buys costly car from Morton. Ted goes after check, but unable to keep away from wheel. Puts up company's check and loses entire amount. Returning to home Ted confesses to Kate. Both seek funds in vain. Kate also loses on horse race. Then Baker repents and makes out a new check. Ted has learned his lesson.

The Wheel (Fox)
PRESS NOTICE

The subtle menace and allure of gambling, and its power to wreck human lives, are vividly portrayed in “The Wheel,” a strong melodrama which will be the feature attraction at the — — theatre on “The Wheel,” originally written as a play by Winchell Smith, and produced by John Golden on the stage, was a tremendous success. It has been transferred to the screen under the personal supervision of Golden, retaining the strong dramatic values of the original. Harrison Ford is the hero, with Mahlon Hamilton playing the other man. Margaret Livingston and Claire Adams play the leading feminine roles.

CATCH LINES

He gambled all on a turn of The Wheel—and lost.

The Wheel had an irresistible fascination for him. On it he staked honor and fortune—and lost!

Does the gambler ever win? Does gambling ever pay? See the answer in “The Wheel.”

Shore Leave
(Insiration Pictures, Inc.—First National—6856 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HAVING "done his duty by the army," in producing "Classmates," Richard Barthelmess now goes to sea and gives us a striking portrait of a care-free, jolly gob whose home is "wherever he hangs his middle cap." And which there is no other drama and tenderness here that we had in "Classmates," there is a wealth of human interest, heart appeal and above all a constant flow of comedy that is going to put audiences everywhere in good humor and prove for all time that "Dick" is a comedian, especially if he is given suitable material.

THEME. Setting forth the efforts of Connie Martin, New England dressmaker, to grab a gob who appears miraculously it seems when Connie sees spinsterhood appearing in the offing.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The meeting between "Bilge" and Connie. The party for the Smiths aboard Connie's old sailing vessel. The fight between Bilge and his pal, "Bat." The return of Bilge and consent to wed when he learns Connie is not a rich woman and has put her ship in trust for their first child.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Richard Barthelmess. Put on a Navy Night. Tie-up with your local navy recruiting station.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the best houses in the land, city or town and should do business because of star's popularity and entertaining qualities of picture.

SUMMARY. Here's still another contribution to better pictures for the Greater Movie Season and no one is going to be disappointed.

THE CAST

"Bilge" Smith .................................... Richard Barthelmess
Connie Martin .................................... Dorothy Mackaill
"Bat" Smith ....................................... Ted McNamara
Cap’n Bimby Martin ............................... Nick Long
Mrs. Schuyler-Payne .............................. Marie Shotwell
Chief Petty Officer ............................... Samuel Hines

SYNOPSIS. While on shore leave in little New England town, "Bilge" Smith meets Connie Martin, an orphan Connie seeing spinsterhood in the offing takes advantage of her opportunity and "goes after" Bilge, seeing in him not only a husband but a skipper for an old sailing vessel, now in India, left her by father. Bilge kisses her and goes away, promising to return. He does, a few years later, but has forgotten Connie, who, however, gives a party for all the Smiths aboard. She knows Bilge by the name of Smith only. However, thinking Connie still rich, he carpentering "to live off'n a rich woman," goes away again. He returns, however, and weds Connie when she declares the ship has been put in trust for their first child.

PRESS NOTICE

To add to his laurels as a dramatic actor, Richard Barthelmess proves that he is a clever comedian as well in "Shore Leave," his latest picture, which will be shown at the — — theatre on

Just as "Classmates" showed him as a West Point cadet, "Shore Leave" features Barthelmess as a rollicking "gob," whose merry exploits make up an entertaining film story. It has been adapted from the Hubert Osborne play of the same name which was so popular in New York not long ago.

Barthelmess again has as his leading woman the talented and beautiful Dorothy Mackaill, who also provides many laughable scenes and is a splendid foil for his fun making.

CATCH LINES

He met his ideal while on "shore leave," but he forgot to come back.

She entertained all the Smiths in the Navy to find her hero—and what a time she had!

The new Harold Lloyd comedy, being released in this country by Pathe under the title of 'The Freshman,' has lengthened England as 'College Days.' The following excerpts are from newspaper reviews of the film published after a trade screening at the New Oxford Theatre, London.

The Herald: "'College Days': the latest Harold Lloyd film, must be numbered among the few finest comedies ever produced. There were few gentlemen who have not heard of Harold Lloyd, and those who have, will be spellbound at the head of the list of very capable directors.'

Evening World: "When weighty minds get together months hence to catalogue the year's best offerings they will be in duty bound to give this one a place very near the top. In fact, those classics which will succeed in gaining a higher rating will be extending their domain. Here is a picture which is the essence of artistry—a frothy thing, sparkling as champagne which is unctuous, with a piquancy that will startle at once startlingly daring and disarmingly ingenious.'

Evening Standard: "First of all, 'Kiss Me Again' ought to have a sub-title, 'See This Again.' It is an exceptional comedy- -sophisticated, cunning, clever—absolutely delightful, and with a-lifting loomotif, if that is the right word we think of it. It's just the kind of plot which Lubitsch, with his inimitable touches, can make a pianist pleasure. Marie's a great little actress, and Monte and Roche are perfectly cast.'

Sun: "A delightful photographic story.'

"Evolution"—Red Seal, Rialto, Los Angeles

"A clever combination of the artifices of movie magic to abstruse research. Intelligent hounds have been used to combine in it the charm of technical cinema achievement and the instruction of clear, terse titles within the grasp of all.'

Record: "Delightfully instructive without being pedantic.'

"Evolution"—Red Seal, New Theatre, Baltimore

Sun: "Rich in varied and weird features.'

American: "Seldom, if ever, have I come upon a more impressive motion picture than 'Evolution.'" The journalist who has been a member of the American Museum of Natural History, has fashioned such a device in history. The story of the evolution of the species may be made clear to you. Last night it held a typical movie audience spellbound for several hours by its conciseness, its innate simplicity. After an hour's duration the effect is overwhelming. Such applause was most certainly deserved.'

Our hirwgrows who always appreciate Chaplin, Lloyd, and Keaton, must not miss this one. Certainly one of the stars of the month, and its excellence is such that it is doubtful whether Lloyd can surpass it in any of his previous productions.'

New York American: "In the year of the newscaster, one of these is a comedy. Charles Chaplin is only a memory. 'The Gold Rush' will be the best thing which Mr. Chaplin has done. In it there are episodes as hilariously comic as have been placed on the screen, and there hovers it a strain of moving paths. If I were you, I certainly would not consider missing this one.'

New York Times: "'The Gold Rush' is a comedy with streaks of satirical pathos, tenderness, linked with briskness and boisterousness. It is the outstanding gem of all Chaplin's pictures, as it has more thought and originality than even such masterpieces as 'The Kid' and 'Shoulder Arms.' There is more than mere laughter in 'The Gold Rush.' Back of it, masked by ludicrous situations, is something of the very serious and hungry days in London, the times when he was depressed by disappointments, the loneliness and the adulation he felt for successful actors. Mr. Chaplin's particular sympathy is pathetic than in any of his previous productions.'

San Francisco

A two-story addition is to be made to the building which houses the Third Street Theatre in Easton, by the Pomfret Realty Company owners of the property. As an added attraction to the motion picture shows, the Victoria Theatre, Mahany City, has booked Professor George Schwartz, formerly of the Department of Music of Columbia University, New York City, for a limited number of weekly engagements to help attract the crowd during the warm weather months. Professor Schwartz plays operatic and other musical selections on the pipe organ. The Victoria is one of the theatres operated by the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises.

Another Chamberlain house, the Victoria in Shamokin, offered as a special attraction during the week of August 10, daily musical programs by Michael Stozwitz’s Orchestra, from Mahony City.

Summer business was stimulated by a profit taking sale and concert pavilion at Schuylkill Park, Pottsville, during the week of August 10, by the introduction of several novelty features.

The home office of the Comerford Amusement Company in Scranton, which conducts a big chain of theatres in the hard coal mining regions, has a new stenographer in the person of Miss Helen Walsh, who succeeds Miss Lilian Wicker, who recently was married.

A combined “double show” of motion, minstrels and vaudeville was offered during the week of August 10 in the Star Theatre, Carlisle.

It is reported that the recent negotiations for the sale of the Franklin theatre, Allentown, by John Bueck to Joseph Capkovic, failed of materialization and the theatre will continue to be operated by Mr. Bueck.

The Strand Theatre, Allentown, introduced for the week of August 10, in addition to the picture program, a special concert by Charles Feustelmercher and his orchestra of eight pieces.

H. L. Goldberg, general manager of the World Realty Company theatres, has recently returned from California, where he arranged for coming attractions for the World, Sun, Moon, Muse and Empress theatres.

F. A. Van Husan, president of the Western Theatre Supply Company, just returned from a buying tour in Chicago.

Miss G. E. Roberts, stenographer for the Metro-Goldwyn exchange, has returned from a two-weeks’ vacation motoring around Nebraska.

Charles Barringer, associate manager of the Ford-Grinke mogan exchange, has resigned to accept the position of manager for United Artists. He has been associated with the New York office for some time and just recently came to assume his new position here.

J. E. Flynn, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn exchange, is spending a couple of weeks’ vacation in Northern Minnesota.

William F. Wallace, exhibitor of North Platte, Nebraska, where he operates the Keith and Sun theatres, was here this week visiting the local exchanges.

Edgar E. Duncan, city commissioner of Lincoln, Nebraska, formerly owner of the Colonial theatre, was a visitor at the exchanges this week. Although he does not own a theatre at the present time he is still interested in theatrical affairs and his friends would not be surprised if he should enter the exhibition field again.

F. M. Baxter, formerly connected with the Fox Film exchange in Kansas City, has joined Warner Brothers here and will handle part of the Iowa territory.

Miss Hazel Anderson, secretary to Mr. Flynn, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn, is having a two-weeks’ outing at Lake Minnetonka, Minnesota.

A surprise on his own screen was the recent promotion of the Rialto theatre, when he returned after a few days’ visit to Chicago. August Terman, assistant manager, had built up a novelty organ number featuring the song, “Grow with Growing Omaha.” The words were written by Mr. Watts some time ago to music composed by Julius K. Johnson, formerly organist and manager at the Rialto.

The Western Theatre Supply company is opening a new branch store in Des Moines, Iowa, at 416 West Tenth street, for the benefit of the Eastern Iowa exhibitors.

Harry Goldberg, general manager of the World-Realty Company theatres and Mrs. Goldberg played the leading role in a “Midnight Show” last Thursday. Just as they were entering their garage after leaving the theatre a hit-and-run driver steered up, covered them with a pair of revolvers, and demanded their jewelry. When Mrs. Goldberg refused to yield, the driver then demanded Mr. Goldberg’s bulldog, “Lady,” to be handed over or the body would be found. He took a four-carat diamond ring, valued at $1500 from Mrs. Goldberg and $10 from Mr. Goldberg, overlooking a diamond on his finger.

Omaha

With the boom of the Goldbergs was the climax of the bandit’s career of the evening. He had held up three garages and stolen two automobiles earlier in the evening. At one place, he tore the telephone from the wall so the alarm could not be spread. The bandit made his escape.

Earl A. Bell has been appointed Omaha branch manager for Warner Brothers. He was formerly connected with the legitimate theatres here, including the American Med. Co., the Lincoln theatre, the Kring theatre and the Burwood theatre, now the Gayety. He entered the film game and was with the Fox Film company for five years. Leaving Fox he handled Warner Brothers pictures in St. Joseph and Kansas City for three years. Recently he was in Indianapolis for Warner Brothers and was transferred here as branch manager, taking effect August 3. He took the place of Ed F. Tarvel, who resigned to enter the real estate game in Florida.
POSTAL card from Sam M. Whitman, president of the Motion Theatre, marked Napoli, Italy, says he is feeling fine but wishes he could get Motion Picture News every week.

The Lyric Theatre at Polo, is now being operated by B. J. Vogt, former St. Charles theatre operator.

E. E. Saunders of Harvard, expects to open his new five hundred seat house in about sixty days. He is said he will continue to operate the Palace with westerns as his principal attraction, while the new house will be a first run feature theatre.

R. W. Williams of the Majestic Theatre, Streator, has returned from a vacation spent in the north woods and reports he is feeling fine for the winter's work. Another exhibitor who has been vacationing in Northern Wisconsin, is Frank Schueter, who is also on the job feeling fit.

Al Bachman, for the past two years, assistant manager of the Randolph, believes that the most popular theatre men in the city, has been promoted to manager. Bachman has the unique record of having been assistant to five different managers during his connection with the Randolph and every one of them left with a good word for Al's ability.

Elmer and Julius Herschberg, owners of the Grove Theatre, Morton Grove, have taken over the Beverly Theatre, Lyons, Ill., from their son.

Sales Director Ned Depinet of Universal Film Company, and R. V. Anderson, of the Chicago News, are making their headquarters at Universal's local exchange this week. Mr. Depinet was here for a conference with Manager Alexander.

E. A. Esch Trying of First National, has appointed Gradwell Sears as branch manager of Associated First National's Cleveland exchange. Leon O. Mumford, a pioneer motion picture theatre manager, is to be general director of the executive staff at the Capitol Theatre, Newark's new exclusive phonoplay house at Broad and Market Sts, which will open during the month of September. In this same locality, seventeen years ago, Mr. Mumford opened "The Arcade", a type of theatre that has entirely disappeared.

The policy of the Capitol will be to show the finest pictures obtainable, and at a reasonable admission, and will also feature the super-productions that have hitherto been shown in the legitimate houses at a large increase.

Recently, Mr. Mumford has been associated with the City and Ti voli theatres in the Roselle section, and as he first came to Newark from the old Manhattan theatre where Gimbel's store now stands, this is again a Broadway playhouse, the Gotham at 135th Street, which has a seating capacity of three thousand.

Members of the Fox New York Exchange sales staff, under the able direction of Harry Buxbaum are inauguring the new season by opening what is known as "A Million Dollar Dinner" which will be held during the month of September at the Ritz-Carleton Hotel. This will be a reward for the efforts of the New York and New Jersey staff at the culmination of a huge drive that is now being made to bring in a stipulated amount of business, and from all reports that are coming in, there doesn't seem to be any danger of the boys being disappointed.

Several changes have taken place on the Fox sales staff and it looks as though Harry Buxbaum's machine gun corps is about complete. Gus Solomon and Ed Schnitzer, two heavy hitters that were formerly with the Producers Distributing Corp. and who won first and second prizes during the latter's National sales drive, have recently signed up. Mr. Solomon will be located in New York City and Mr. Schnitzer will cover a portion of Brooklyn, Bernard Scholtz, known as the "Humorist" will cover South Brooklyn. Before joining the Fox organization, Mr. Scholtz was also connected with the banner of Producers Dist. Corp. for a period of three years and previous to that connection was with Warner Bros. for two years. He is an old Western Press Association man, and in addition to his sales duties, is publicity manager for "Fox Folks" and "Fox Featureable".

And then there is Frank Walsh who started in the theatrical business with a syndicate of Sam Harris and was at one time a special representative for Universal in Canada and later connected with D. W. Griffith. Mr. Walsh resigned from the Fox staff last spring, recently came back under the new regime and will cover Long Island and Up-State New York.

Lee Lanzdon, one time booker for First National, and who has been enigmatic in the past, has several exchanges and known to exhibitors far and wide, is once more back on Film Row after an absence of several months. Lanzdon will act as the local representative for the Freedom Film company of Buffalo, which may shortly open an exchange in Albany if the business warrants.

Ben Davis, who has been looking for the final campaign of the Schine circuit and who was formerly a Fox representative in Texas, resigned from the Schine organization just before it opened in Albany for a div or so, dropping in at several of the exchanges as well as the Albany Film Board of Trade. He made no announcement as to his future plans.

J. L. Carley, who has managed the Schine some months, has assumed his new duties as district manager for Schines, having jurisdiction over the cities of Little Falls, with headquarters in Little Falls. Mr. Carley has been succeeded by his brother, J. W. Carley, in Carkey.

John Garry, manager of the Empire in Glen Falls, who has been at his home recovering from an operation, has returned, came back on the job two weeks sooner than he expected. When Mr. Perrin resigned from the Buckley chain, Alex Sayles was suddenly shifted from the Empire where he was stationed while Mr. Garry was recuperating, to the Leland, in Albany, making it imperative for Mr. Garry to return at once.

R. C. Kimball, who has been journeying along Film Row for several months picking up film for part time jobs and the Goodman Hall in Westerlo, and opened it as a motion picture theatre last Saturday, Bob Grady, formerly of Vitagraph, has taken over the Waawanac theatre at Haines Falls, the lease reverting to Rusk and Andrews. H. C. Rawley, of Earlville, has sold his theatre there to Mr. Bricker.

There is nothing the matter with the present home which Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal in Albany, recently bought at Crooked Lake, but when it comes to his home in New York, Mr. Hellman has a long story and one filled with many a note of disappointment. Mr. Hellman had planned to do a great deal of fishing. He sought for himself much in the way of expensive tackle as he believed the stormy fields of full creels. And now the sad part of it is that the summer is almost over and Mr. Hellman's belief that Mr. Hellman has been able to catch are a few small sunfish and perch. The Hellmans will remain in their summer home until well into October.

E. H. Harriman, Jr., of Methuen, Mass., former owner of the Case Theatre in Portland, Me., was in town during the week, calling on J. H. MacIntyre, local manager for Famous Players, who was formerly stationed in Portland.

Adolph Kohn, the new owner of the Pastime theatre in Granville, is now improving the house in preparation for reopening the latter part of the month. Harry Rose, of Schenectady, is the manager of Jimmy Rose's chain of houses. Henry Windeucke, who is associated with him, and who has been stationed much of the time at the Bijou in Troy, has found it necessary to devote more time to his business as postmaster. Mr. Rose announces that he will close his house in New York on August 31, and will reopen in Kinderhook on September 1. with straight pictures. Mr. Rose appeared last week with a brand new Nash sedan.

J. Frankel, head of the Frankel interests returned from Miami, from Southern Utah. Since returning he has added a new salesman to the force in the person of Clifton Pearce, who was formerly located as an exhibitor in Brigham, Utah. Pearce is now out on the Greater Territories office on an extended trip through Western Wyoming and Eastern Idaho.

Dud Rand, famous as the local movie humorist, has been entertaining "Film Row" and affording them much enjoyment this week. Rand is the manager of the Isis Theatre of this city.

Cincinnati

A POCKET billiard match of no little importance will take place in Huntington, W. Va., the opposition being Cecil L. Tipton, manager for the Hyman Theatrical, and Ed Cook, Famous Players salesman. The contest is to be a 100-point affair. Abe Hyman, head of the Hyman interests, is to be the referee and his task will not be easy as both participants are out for blood, with Tipton slightly the favorite in the Blood-curdling affair.

Harry Dodge, Famous Players manager in Columbus O., and Carl Weeks, salesman for the same company, spent the week in the city, and ended in the city after attending a general conference held for the salesmen and managers of Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Columbus and Cincinnati exchanges at the Hotel Gibson on Saturday August 13. Chas. M. Koons, district manager for Paramount, presided.

Another devotee of golf in the Famous Players offices, Mr. Frank Block, who is reputed to be wielding a mean putter for one so greatly given to the game.

Fires of unknown origin broke out at 9.30 at night on August 14 in the Grand theatre building, 9-11 Adelaide Street West, Toronto, the loss being estimated at $1,000. The Grand, which is owned by the estate of Ambrose J. Small who disappeared from Toronto over six years ago, has been closed for some months past.

The fire is believed to have started in the rear of a confectionery store which occupies a portion of the building.

The date of the reopening of the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, which was recently acquired by Famous-Players interests, has not been announced. Leonard Bishop, manager of the Ottawa Regent, has been appointed manager of the Russell.

Metro-Goldwyn lost a salesman when Harry Herman, who represents them in the southern territory, took over the管理 of the Orpheum Theatre at Clinton for the A. H. Blank Enterprises. The theatre has been closed for a time and the opening planned by Mr. Herman is set for Sept. 1.

Van Dyke and Young have reopened their theatre at Pella, Iowa. The house has been closed while redecorating has been in progress.

Milton Overbrook, who used to be at Rock Island, managing a house there for A. H. Blank, is now the manager of the Capitol Theatre at Davenport. The Davenport house was run for several years by Reginald B. Phillips, who went into another line of business. Mr. Overbrook was in Des Moines as booking manager for Mr. Blank and was also manager of the Rialto Theatre in Des Moines for about a year. The Capitol is now owned by Mr. Phillips, who is the manager of the Exhibitors Supply Company, with two new Simplex machines equipped with Fireless lamps.

Mrs. B. R. Alexander is also known by her maiden name of Esther Frost, if leaving the office of the Pathe exchange. She will join her husband who is in Miami, Fla. Mrs. Alexander has been honored with a number of feature pictures. Her mother entertained the girls of the Pathe office who presented Mrs. Alexander with a farewell gift, a hat box. Miss Belle Miller, Thelma Washburn, Gretchon Kelleher, Rose Browder, Edna Vicker, and Ruby Crow were there. The same week Gretchon Kelleher also entertained the Pathe girls in Mrs. Alexander’s honor. Mrs. Alexander’s place as stenographer for Pathe will be taken by Belle Miller, while Gretchon Kelleher will take her place as sales control clerk. Ruth Burgum has been added to the staff as biller to fill the vacancy made by the transfer. Miss Burgum has at different times and in different capacities assisted her father, who is manager of the Garden Theatre, Des Moines, so the film business is not new to her.

Harold Davis, cashier, for Metro-Goldwyn, will visit Knoxville, Tenn., Russell City and New Orleans on his vacation.

C. M. McNall is the new assistant manager of the Capitol Theatre, Des Moines. He comes from Cedar Rapids. Mr. Shipley, who was formerly assistant manager of the Capitol, is now managing the Regent Theatre at Saginaw, Mich. Milwaukee

Following its preliminary two weeks run under Universal management, the Alhambra Theater has been closed for remodeling. It will reopen August 29 after many comprehensive alterations both inside and out, have been completed under the supervision of Dan Lederman, Universal's real estate and construction agent, who has been in the city for several months arranging for the "big turmoil" from which the Alhambra will emerge as one of the finest houses in this section.

Ed. J. Weisfeil, production manager of the Wisconsin Theatre, has returned from two weeks spent in New York on business for the mammoth picture house there. He is expected to be in Milwaukee on Friday which it spent in moving into and getting acclimated to its own branch of the Wisconsin in Washington Highlands.

The first day of the Grand Theatre at Washington, dropped in at the Milwaukee exchanges for a pass-week last week. His congenial smile was easy to understand after he explained how nice business is coming along up here.

Exhibitors dropping in at the Milwaukee offices of Progress during the past week were greeted by an unfamiliar scene, for the outer offices had been entirely rearranged for greater efficiency and space economy. Those who boast of exploring proclivities found that the spirit of the thing had been carried under the deep, comprehensive management, the Alhambra Theater has been closed for remodelling. How to Secure Effective Theatre Lighting

Use of Illumination in Early Days; Recommendations for Modern Houses*

SOME theatre managers have already experimented with color organs, consisting of electric switchboards manipulated like a console of an organ, by means of which a "score" composed of sequences of changing colors is "played," this arrangement of colors purporting to interpret in terms of color the musical score or motion picture which at the same time is being played or shown.

Another application of colored theatre lighting for psychological effect is the use of "cool" colors in summer, and "warm" colors in winter. For example, a theatre illuminated with blue or bluish-purple light will seem cooler and therefore more attractive and restful on a hot day or evening. Conversely, illumination with a warm color like rose or amber renders the theatre more attractive on the cold days and evenings of winter.

As outlined above, the character of the performances to be staged imposes certain requirements on the theatre and to obtain the best results the theatre must be especially built to accord with the purpose it is to serve. As there are only a few theatres in each of the largest cities in a country which limit their productions entirely to drama, practically all theatres, outside New York City and a few of the larger cities, should be built either for miscellaneous productions or for moving pictures, or for a combination of motion pictures and vaudeville.

Owners Should Retain Theatre Architect

We cannot emphasize too strongly the need that when a theatre project is first conceived the owner retain an architect who has specialized in the building of theatres. There are those in the United States who, because of their wide experience in this line of work, can give very valuable assistance, not only in the design of the architectural features but in the general arrangement of the theatre and the proper selection of its location. Also, I would strongly recommend retaining an engineer who specializes on theatre and stage illumination to supervise this portion of the work. Fortunately there are some engineers in this country special-picture and thus make it possible to use as high a degree of illumination as .25 ft. candles without distracting from the clearness of the picture. The advantages of having this comparatively high illumination in the theatre are first: That the patron may find his way about the theatre without stumbling or the use of aisle lights—2nd: To relieve the gloom in the theatre, and 3rd: Colored illumination should be arranged for all theatres of this type and is being provided in the better classes of such theatres, particularly in the Central and Western States. It is also highly advisable to provide a sufficient amount of white illumination for a reading light during intermission.

Advise Using Three-Color Lighting

It is quite customary to provide white and two colors, red and blue. This limits obtainable color effects to red, purple and blue. We believe much more beautiful results could be obtained if three primary colors were provided in addition to the white. The illumination during the picture should almost entirely be in color. This illumination is at a very low intensity so that it is not necessary to have as high a degree of illumination in the color as in the white. However, the absorbent factors of the present medium of color are so high that about the right results are obtained if the same wattage lamps are used in each color as in the white.

In order to attract attention and draw crowds it is highly advisable to illuminate the lobby very brilliantly. During the daytime the lobby should also be illuminated sufficiently so that it will not appear dull in comparison with the daylight outside. While very beautiful results can be obtained in the illumination of the lobby with coves, there is no real objection to the use of crystal fixtures and semi-indirect fixtures provided they harmonize properly with the decorative scheme. From the lobby in toward the auditorium the illumination should be gradually reduced so that one entering from the outside will not be blinded but will have sufficient illumination to see his way about even under the contrasts which are necessary during the projection of the picture. Good practice would seem to call for the illumination of the foyer near the lobby at about 5 ft. candles decreasing toward the theatre and the lounge, mezzanine and rest rooms at from 2 to 3 ft. candles.

Theatres have been very well illuminated with indirect fixtures, coves and soffit fixtures with from 10 to 20 watts per seat in each color.

The above factors may seem high to some but cover a totally indirect system. Using semi-direct and with some direct fixtures it is possible to provide good effective illumination with as low as 4 watts per seat per color.

It seems to the writer that there should be some cooperative effort made to raise the standard of the illumination of the small standard moving picture theatre. If sufficient attention is paid to the lighting during the construction of the theatre, just as good illumination can be provided in the smaller urban theatre as in the larger moving picture palaces built in the larger cities. This should not require a very excessive installation or maintenance expense.

In order to provide beautiful and harmonious lighting in the moving picture theatre, it is necessary to have an adequate system of control. It is not only essential to provide switches for the different sections of lighting, but suitable dimmers should be installed and arranged so that they can be operated either by the projectionist or by someone in close touch with him. It is very advisable to provide master levers to control the separate color groups and in the larger theatres a slow motion hand wheel should be furnished so that it is possible for the operator to gradually increase one color and at the same time reduce another. The switching and control equipment should be compact and convenient and, if possible, both the switching and dimming functions should be either combined in one piece of apparatus or arranged so the switches are adjacent to the dimmer control.

Lighting Control in Smaller Theatres

In smaller houses where the lighting is regulated from the picture booth, this control equipment is located as part of the wall between the projection room and the motor generator or machinery room. One of the largest circuits on the Pacific Coast regular-

Projection School
LITTLE while ago George McBride, of Trafford, Pa., wrote in requesting information on the conditions of a school for projection which would enable him to secure the necessary training to become a projectionist. His letter appears below.

Dear Sir,—

I am writing for a little information, which I hope you will be able to give me. I would like to know if there is any school in New York City that gives a complete course in Picture Projection, that is, a course that covers the new kinds of lamp and the other various improvements.

I live in a small town, so I do not have much opportunity to become acquainted with different kinds of apparatus. I am, therefore, writing in the hope that you may know and can tell me about such a school.

Thanking you for this information, I am

GEORGE McBRIDE

No Such Thing

We are sorry, Friend McBride, but there is no such school in existence, either in New York or elsewhere. By this we mean a school devoted to motion picture projection alone, or having on its curriculum a course covering all the subjects with which any projectionist worthy of the name should be familiar.

An attempt seems to have been made along these lines, however, as a year or two ago a New York college announced a course in general motion picture instruction which, however, leaned more to the producing end than it did to the exhibiting of pictures. Whether or not the three months that were given to the subject tend to form a disconnected, heterogeneous mass of facts which are so hard to digest and correlate as to well nigh discourage all further effort to learn the underlying principles governing this interesting subject.

The general lack of literature describing in a connected manner the laws governing motion picture projection is partly accounted for by the fact that it was only as recent as 1915-1916 that these laws were first formulated and expressed in plain understandable English.

These laws by the way are really understood by a comparatively very limited group of people since both the laws and their explanation have been circumscribed mostly by word of mouth instead of through the medium of publications.

Restricted Field

Probably the real reason why no projection school exists lies in the fact that, after all, the projection field is inherently quite restricted or limited. The attitude on the part of the union to charge relatively large initiation fees, has often been severely criticized for various reasons but right or wrong it accomplishes its object of protecting the members which is its principal purpose in life. A supposedly secondary purpose of the union is to promote education among its members so as to make the unionist stand above the non-union man and this really holds true in many instances since a number of local lodges regularly meet at which instructive lectures and demonstrations are given. But, as far as getting into the union is concerned here is where the rub comes in. In order to be eligible for union membership the applicant must already be a full-fledged projectionist and the only way in which he can learn the tricks of the trade and the more complicated things concerning projection is by being already a union man.

In other words, in order to get in you must know how and practically the only way you can learn how is by getting in.

Subjects Covered

To get back to the subject of a course in motion picture projection, however, even though such a thing is not available we would say that the following subjects would be included within the scope of such a course.

OUTLINE

1—Mathematics
   (a) Arithmetie
   (b) Geometry
   (c) Trigonometry
2—Physics
   (a) Mechanics
   (b) Optics
   (c) Electricity
3—Mechanics of the Projector
4—Experience in Handling Projectors

How to do it

The first subject, Mathematics, and the first and third items under Physics can be learned in any High School, Night School, or Correspondence School.

The third and fourth subjects should obviously be acquired by serving an apprenticeship in the projection room of a theatre under the tutelage of an experienced projectionist. This really constitutes the practical end of the course and ordinarily would come at the end of it.

The Stumbling Block

The second item under Physics, or the subject of Optics really forms the stumbling block of the course and is largely responsible for the main reason why students have not become proficient at the projection game. There is no place one can go to in order to obtain a concise, complete explanation of the phenomena contained under this branch of physics. Ordinary college physics does not treat of the special optical problems encountered in picture projection and there is no book available which satisfactorily explains, in simple English, the particular optical problems found in picture projection.

It is true that books have been written on this subject which endeavor to explain, in a crude manner, the principles underlying this specialized branch of physics but with one exception all these books fail in that they present merely a miscellaneous collection of facts (and many which are not facts) arranged without rhyme or reason which only serve to utterly confuse anyone endeavoring to correlate the various statements with one another.

The thing that is sorely needed, and which, so far, has been utterly lacking is a clear, concise, orderly presentation of the laws governing all picture projection starting with stereopticon lanterns and ending with motion picture projection.

The foundation for such a book is contained in a paper by Dr. J. A. Orange, which unfortunately was so general in its nature that it is practically impossible to get the full significance of his statements unless the reader had a good understanding of the subject.

Until such a book on motion picture optics appears the only hope for projectionists endeavoring to learn something of this subject lies in the gleanings of information here and there from trade and technical journals which obviously leaves much to be desired so far as the beginner is concerned.

Movie Comic Operas Staged on Picture Screen

Movie comic operas can easily be staged on the screen, declares Walter C. Simon, noted composer, and one of the leading organists in the country, who is at present playing at the Strand theatre.

"By throwing the verses on the screen, during the telling of a light play, and playing music which fits the words exactly, a movie comic opera can be produced," he explained. In that way the audience can carry the verse and the rhythm with the music, the tempo being set by the organist. "To be sure, effects of all kinds must be used in such a presentation. Every good organist should have any number of such changes ready, for I feel that any picture is made more realistic by their application."

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Motion Picture Outfit for Home Use Placed on Market by Pathex, Inc.

One of the most important developments in recent years in the field of motion-picture equipment has just been announced with the release on the market of a new camera and projector designed exclusively for non-theatrical purposes. The handling of each machine has been so simplified as to be almost automatic; and because of this facility of operation, the invention is expected to accomplish much in the popularizing of the motion-picture in such circles as have not already been won to the screen.

The American sponsors of the invention have been organized as the Pathex, Inc., which is a subsidiary of Pathé Exchange, Inc. Pathex, Inc., is promoting the new camera and projector in America under license from Pathé Cinema of Paris, the patentees. The invention has already been demonstrated to be a positive success in France and other European countries where many thousands of the Pathex sets are being sold monthly.

The invention comprises a motion-picture camera and projector so small as to be en-closable in a small-sized hand-bag, the combined weight of both machines being about five pounds. Both camera and projector are the result of scientific construction and engineering technique and represent the fruits of over several years of continuous study and experimentation, it is claimed. The specially manufactured film stock to be used in this apparatus is non-burning. The entire Pathex set, including motion-picture camera, projector and accessories, is procurable at less than $100 retail.

The Pathex camera is 3½ inches long, 4¼ inches high, and 1½ inches wide. The lens is a f3.5 non-adjustable fixed focus anastigmat. "Close-ups" of objects in motion can be made at five feet, and the camera can be used immediately thereafter to photograph distant views without any focus adjustment. A calibrated lens adjuster permits the operator to vary the diaphragm opening in accordance with light conditions. A chart, simplified for the use of the amateur, indicates at a glance the proper lens adjustment to be employed. A view finder is conveniently located on top of the camera. A footage indicator on the side of the camera shows automatically how many feet of film have been exposed and how much remains in the film-magazine to be used.

The film stock employed in the Pathex camera and projector is of the reversible variety; that is, the negative film exposed in the camera is reversed by a special process to a positive. Accordingly, the same film is used in the projector that has been previously exposed in the camera. The film magazine contains thirty feet of film, is light-proof, and can thus be inserted in the camera in full daylight. The individual frame as 2½ by 3½ inch, and there are 1100 such frames in the thirty-foot reel, making the Pathex reel equivalent to 69 feet of standard film. A special feature of the Pathex film is that the perforations are located in the center of the film strip between the individual frames instead of on the edges as in the case of the standard film. A pull-down claw, seated directly in front of the film track and below the lens, engages and disengages in these perforations as the crank is turned, thus drawing the successive frames of the film in line with the lens aperture. The film magazines can be procured at any Pathex agency at less than two dollars each. When the entire thirty-foot reel has been exposed, the film magazine is removed from the camera and forwarded to the Pathex laboratory where the film is developed and returned at no extra cost, to the owner in a ready-to-use reel for the projector.

The Pathex projector, like the camera, combines to a marvellous degree efficiency of operation with compactness of space. The projector is 12½ inches high and is fastened to a base 7 inches long and 3½ inches wide. It has all the essential mechanisms of the standard projector—lamp house, upper and lower magazines, adjustable lens, shutter, intermittent, and an ingenious arrangement of pegs and friction rollers to assure a steady pull on the film strip as it is drawn by the pull-down claw before the projecting lens. The projector is equipped with a 12-volt lamp, current for which is secured from the ordinary house circuit by merely plugging into a convenient outlet or lamp socket. Pictures can be projected on as small an area as the human hand with good visibility. A sheet or wall space up to 3 by 4 feet can be used with the same clarity of detail. An especially ingenious feature of the Pathex projector is an "automatic stop," which halts the movement of the film at such frames as contain sub-titles and holds the film in check until the spectator has had time to peruse the reading matter. In this way, a sub-title takes the space of only one frame or at the most two frames, thus effecting an immense saving in footage over the standard projection.

The Pathex Company has prepared a wide variety of interesting subjects in ready-made exhibition form for home projection. These subjects, which are procurable at a very moderate cost at the same stores handling the camera and projector, cover animal life, industry, art, science, drama, comedy, sports, travelogues, etc. These exhibition films are provided in two sizes—thirty or sixty feet long.

Closes Negotiations for Large San Francisco Theatre

Harry M. Seigler, who has recently purchased the southwest corner of California and Fillmore Streets, San Francisco, announces that he has closed negotiations for one of the largest residential theatres in San Francisco to be immediately erected on this and adjacent property owned by him. Negotiations for this theatre, which were closed by Clyde A. Griffin, call for the erection of a theatre building, which is said to cost the sum of $250,000 and seating 2,000 people. The theatre has been leased to Sampel H. Levin, one of the pioneers in the motion picture industry in this city at a rental in excess of $500,000 for a term of 20 years.

boards have been built 6½ feet high so that the dimmer operating handle would sometimes be 7½ to 8 feet above the floor. To operate such a board the stage electricians have had to first close the switches and then climb upon a bench two or three feet high to operate the dimmers. With an equipment of this character it is impossible to obtain good results. In many instances where the switchboard is particularly large, a balcony had to be built for the operation of the dimmers. This meant that either the dimmers were not used at all or an extra operator had to be employed on this balcony during the period of the show.

The most modern theatre dimming installations comprise the combined switchboard and interlocking dimmer bank in which the switches and dimmers are interconnected electrically and mechanically. Each dimmer plate and its switch are controlled from a single operating handle. The dimmer switches open automatically at the dimmed position. The interlocking control permits the grouping of dimmers so that movement of a master handle or master wheel controls one or more dimmers as a unit, without interfering with the independent control of any single dimmer. Where desired, cross interlocking control may be provided which by the movement of one handle or wheel, permits the dimming of any group of lamps while any other is simultaneously brightened. This cross-interlocking arrangement, it will be seen, is extremely convenient where it is desired to fade one color into another.

In the most modern dimmer installations, the switchboard and dimmer bank structure is finished with a dead front panel, protecting the operator from chance contact with live parts, the operating handles projecting from the panel being adequately insulated from current-conducting members. These newest installations also are designed with numbered indicators in connection with the operating handles so that each circuit handle can be previously set at any desired dimming point and at the appointed time a master handle operated to flash on the entire group of circuits with all lamps dimmed to the pre-arranged degree of intensity. The indicator on each control handle also enables the house electrician and theatre management to work out a lighting program where elaborate lighting effects are employed with assurance that the lighting score will be carried out exactly as previously found most effective in the light rehearsals.

A summary of the features to be sought in up-to-date theatre lighting control installation may be stated as follows:

The installation should comprise a complete switchboard and a complete dimmer bank in combination.

The dimmer and its switch should be controlled by one handle, an arrangement which makes it easy to operate without flashing the lights on or off, yet permitting the lights to be flashed if desired.

All dimmer-switch handles should be within easy reach.

All circuits should be subject to simultaneous control by moving a single handle or slow motion wheel. A slow motion wheel, it should be understood, is a hand wheel operated through gears to control interlocking master handles.

Any circuit or group of circuits should also be capable of operation independently or in unity with others.

Dimmer plates should be mounted directly in back of the control handles where they are readily accessible.

No dimmer plates should be in a parallel, thus reducing to a minimum the danger of burnouts of plates.

All fuses should be in one place, preferably at the rear of the control board.

Design of switch contact and arrangement of dimmer circuits should be such as to minimize arcing.

The dimmer control installation should be designed on an integral unit basis to facilitate any desired additions to or changes in circuits.

In planning the construction of a new theatre or reconstruction of an existing theatre, if dimming equipment is to be installed the dimmer manufacturer should be called into consultation at the earliest stage of the proceedings. When requesting proposals for dimmer equipment, effective cooperation can be most promptly secured from the maker of the dimmers if the following information is at once submitted:

1. Voltage of lamp circuits.
2. Where dimmers are to be connected to two or three-wire circuits.
3. List of circuits to be controlled, with the name of each indicated so that the dimmer handles may be furnished with proper name plates.
4. The number of watts per dimmer.
5. The type of dimmer control; independent hand interlocking; cross interlocking or remote control if interlocking or cross interlocking dimmers are to be used.

THE S. R. O. sign is up in front of the house again.

He hasn't got a first-run picture, either. Nor a big star, nor a box-office hit. But he seems to get the crowd—every night.

He knows that people like to look at clear, life-like pictures, where brilliant illumination and strong contrasts of black and white define the characters and the scenes and give them a sense of reality. He knows that audiences do know the difference between good and poor projection. So he uses a Bausch & Lomb Cinephor Projection Lens.

The difference shows in the box-office count.
New Steubenville, Ohio, Capitol to Open Labor Day

The new million dollar Capitol Theatre in Steubenville, Ohio which has been under construction for more than a year will be formally opened Labor Day with five acts of Keith Vandeville and Feature Pictures. J. K. Papulius, President and A. G. Consant, General Manager of the Tri-State Amusement Company are dedicating to their home city an amusement institution that is not only the pride of Steubenville, but it is claimed, the entire Ohio Valley as well. Few theatres it is said possesses the beauty, the appointments and luxurious appeal that have been incorporated into the New Capitol and it is conceded the last word in Theatre construction in which time and money have not been considered. The building covers an area of 27,000 square feet of space and includes a large number of stores, offices and a De Luxe Ball Room. Messrs. Papulius and Consant also operate and control the Strand and Olympic Theatres in Steubenville as well as Stanton Park and the Strand and Americana theatres in East Liverpool, O.

Forrest C. Tempnill, well known among the Vandeville and Legitmate profession has been chosen as House Manager of the Capitol and we bespeak for him new laurels to his successful past. Mr. Tempnill was formerly associated with the Remusch Chain in Indiana and the Gray interests of New England.

Forrest C. Tempnill, well known Manager has resigned from the Smith Amusement Co., Warren, O., to accept the position of Manager of the New Capitol Theatre, Steubenville, O., which will be formally opened Labor Day.

General Contract is Let for Class “A” Cal. House

General contract has been let in connection with the construction of a one-story class “A” Egyptian style theatre and store building to be erected at Fruitvale, Alameda County, Cal., to cost about $125,000. Plans for the structure were prepared by Architect A. A. Cantin, Flatiron Building, San Francisco.

Wilmer & Vincent Harrisburg House to Be Improved

Further details of the plan to extensively improve the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., as announced by C. Floyd Hopkins, general manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatre interests in that city, will involve a financial outlay of $85,000. The improvements, which will be practically all to the interior of the theatre, already have begun and are expected to be completed about the first of September. They include complete refurbishing and redecorating of the interior and lobbies; erection of a new stage way to the balcony; and beautification of the stage settings. and elaborate changes in the lighting effects of the whole house. A New York firm designed the stage settings and local contractors are doing most of the rest of the work. All visible lighting fixtures will be of crystal, under the new plan of illumination.

Herald Tribune: “If you think that Mr. Chaplin has run out of humor, then you should change your mind when you see ‘The Gold Rush.’ Did you ever see one of those pictures where there’s a hanger-crazed man chase his companion in misery with an axe under the delusion that he is a large, live chicken? Did you ever see Charlie boil one of his shoes and eat it? Did you ever see a log-cabin picture? Then you should see this. The story is of the gale and deposited on the edge of a cliff, so that it was balanced, like a rocking stone. No other man can do that but Charlie. Praiseworthy. One of Mr. Chaplin’s pictures is likely saying that Shukshars are not indescribable. Yet, we heard persuing say, ‘Do you know, I think Chaplin is a genius!’ Well, so we do, but never has it been written so clearly in letters of fire as now.”

Daily News: “The Gold Rush’ collars you, plays quickly upon your emotions and leaves you in a situation where you can’t laugh without a sob tearing through, or sob without a laugh bubbling up. Thus is the funniest and saddest of all comedies. There is one of the most pathetic, most poignant scenes in any picture. Charlie’s pantomime is superb. Go and have a cry. No one need be ashamed. The picture is divine. (So to this say I should say? Let the gravy congeal on the dinner dishes, put off writing to Aunt Lola, but make for the theater and delight to us forever.) ‘The Gold Rush,’ Charlie did it. You will admit it.”

A Sound Investment that pays a two-way profit

That is how one theatre owner expressed his opinion six months after he had installed a new Simplex Projector.

As this exhibitor pointed out, the manner in which pictures are presented on the screen is a feature of every program. Week in, and week out it is an ever-present factor that is working for or against the success of the theatre.

Successful exhibitors know that projection is of foremost importance because it effects the whole quality of the theatre's entertainment. While good projection will effectively overcome many possible shortages of quality in pictures, poor projection will just as surely ruin the very best of pictures.

There is no greater guarantee of perfect projection than to have a Simplex Projector.

The Simplex Projector

The Simplex Projector is built according to the designs and specifications of engineers whose many years of experience has given them a thorough knowledge of projection requirements.

The selection of material, the making of each part, and the construction of the whole machine is attended by the most diligent care and precise workmanship.

The good will the Simplex has created in all parts of the world is evidence of its consistently good performance and is tangible proof of the sincerity of our efforts to produce only the best.

A profitable Investment

To buy a Simplex Projector is to make a sound investment that will pay you a double profit.

By providing perfect projection it will attract more patronage to your theatre. Many exhibitors have in one year paid the entire cost of a new machine out of the increased earnings of their theatres. Buying a Simplex is simply reinvesting part of your earnings back into your business in order to draw a bigger dividend from your whole business investment.

Not only will a Simplex increase your earnings, but it will cut down your operating expenses. A poorly designed or worn-out projector is continually in need of repairs. The total annual repair bills for machine, films, etc., would go a long way toward the cost of a new machine. Saving your money on repairs is another way a Simplex will add to your profits.

THE BEST TIME TO BUY A SIMPLEX

Now is the time to equip your theatre with perfect projection. The fall season is near at hand. Get your theatre established early as a source of quality entertainment. You will find that patronage will continue to grow as the season progresses. There is a Simplex Service Man in your district who will gladly discuss your requirements with you. Or mail the attached coupon and full description, prices, terms, etc., will be sent you without obligation.
